Play concerns two unmarried couples living together in a three-roomed flat. They are milliners and have a hat-making business in common. One day Louis brings Zoe home to stay while his girl, Madeleine, is away for a few days. Zoe is a farm-bred girl who has no inhibitions about love, but who has a passion for telling the truth, especially at the wrong moment.

When Madeleine, the domineering member of the group, returns, no one dares tell her why Zoe is there, and she concludes that Zoe is the mistress of the other male partner, Arthur, and complications set in. Both men are now in love with Zoe, but her frankness makes life impossible for the foursome and almost wrecks their business enterprise. In the end, she learns that while four may be company, five is a crowd, and goes away to leave the amorous quartet much as she found it.

Nicole Courcel makes the fantastic, illusion-smashing Zoe delightful, giving her adolescent innocence and charm. Acting of others also works to the play's advantage, as "Zoe" is a field day for the young company. Pierre Trabaud as Arthur; Jean Marsan as the embarrassed philanderer Louis; Paule Emanuele as the easy-going Anne-Marie, Arthur's girl friend, and Micheleine Gary, auburn-haired looker, as the dominating Madeleine, give crisp performances.

There is a good bit, too, by Jacqueline Jehanneuf, as the wild daughter of a millionaire, a spoilt darling who wants to see low-life and thinks she is seeing it when she turns up during one of the many non-martial rows caused by Zoe.

Christian-Gerard, expert comedy director, has staged the play with care, giving it proper pace and making most of both lines and situations. Set and costumes are only so-so, but suffice for comedy that needs no elaborate production.

Interesting experiment is the theatre's use of ear-phones for members of audience who speak only English. Of the 200 Comedie-Wagram seats, 18 are wired for the sound device, similar to that employed by the UN for international conferences. Service costs 200 francs (50c) and is proving popular. English version is spoken over the ear-phone system by Mrs. R. Dalton Hess and Desmond Finnerty, while play is in action. Translation is a running commentary on what is happening on the stage, plus dialog of big scenes. As the novel device has caught public attention, other Paris theatres will probably soon follow suit. Curt.

An Evening with Beatrice Lillie

Edward Duryea Dowling production of revue in two acts (nine scenes). Stars Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner, features Eadie and Rack. Directed by Dowling; settings, Rolf Gerard. At Booth, N. Y., Oct. 2, '52; $6 top ($7.20 opening).

Having been put together as a strawhat touring package, "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie" turns out to be a natural for Broadway. With the comedienne as potent boxoffice draw, it's apparently set to continue indefinitely and certainly far beyond the originally announced six weeks. And on the basis of its obviously low operating nut it should prove a financial mopup.

The point of the show was evidently to give Miss Lillie a chance to do her repertoire of comic songs, mostly original material in satirical mood. That portion of the offering, comprising the entire second half, is what puts over the evening. The first half, including Reginald Gardiner, in his familiar imitations of inanimate objects and Miss Lillie in several sketches, is strong enough to provide a satisfactory leadup to the star's solo act.

For her song routine, Miss Lillie offers inimitable performance of "Rhythm," "Lesson with a Fan," "Not Wanted on the Voyage," "He Was a Gentleman," an infectiously demure treatment of a risque ballad called "The Zither," "Please Be Kind," "Maude," "Three Little Fishies," "Paree," "There Are Fairies at the Bottom of My Garden" and, as a begoff, "The Party's Over."

In the first half, the comedienne plays the gauche visitor backstage after a show, a deadpan boy hearing a pompous father's talk on the facts of life, and a sort of Dead End Kid maid driving her employer daffy, besides lampooning dramatic-blues singers in a number titled "Wind." Gardiner is m.c. and does his imitations of trains, ocean liners, lighthouses, buoys, etc., a bit about anesthesia, plus his familiar pantomimes of a symph conductor and a harmony vocal group.

Eadie and Rack (Eadie Howard and Howard "Rack" Godwin) supply listenable two-piano accompaniments, Xenia Bank and Florence Bray are competent supporting players in the sketches and John Philip sings "Come Into the Garden" as a comedy bit with Miss Lillie.

The show is in essence a kind of vaude or nitery presentation that happens to fit legit audience tastes and the peculiar economic of the contemporary Broadway stage. Its great asset is that in the second half it offers a great talent and personality in undiluted style, without chorus and production numbers, lesser performers or the usual stagewaits of the conventional revue form. It is, in a modified way, in the current pattern of solo shows and it has their merits of concentrating attention on the star and trimming production costs to a minimum. There are chances that the click of "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie" will cue somewhat similar efforts by other musical comedy or revue names. Hobe.

Detective Story (YIDDISH)

Jacob Jacobs presentation of drama in three acts by Sidney Kingsley; translated by Jacob Mestel. Stars Jacob Ben-Ami. Features Jacobs, Betty Jacobs, Leon Liebgold, Lily Liliana, Muni Serebroff and Charlotte Goldstein. Staged by William McFadden. At Parkway Theatre, Brooklyn, Oct. 5, '52; $2.40 top.

The Parkway Theatre, Brooklyn's Yiddish legit house, opened its fall season of repertory with a socko version of Sidney Kingsley's legit-film hit, "Detective Story." Production, sparked by Jacob Ben-Ami's standout performance in the lead role, should help win back some of the Yiddish theatre's waning audience.

The Kingsley drama loses little in the lingo switch. It remains a sharp, terse and exciting theatre piece, that grips from opening to the tense, emotional windup. Jacob Mestel, who translated, stuck close to the Kingsley pattern and the lines come across with the same impact as in the original. Mestel didn't over-extend himself in the translating chore so when words and/or lines defy a Yiddishism, he keeps it in the English dialog. It helps sustain pace.

In the role of Detective McLeod, created on Broadway by Ralph Bellamy and essayed on the screen by Kirk Douglas, Ben-Ami displays top thesping technique. His insight into the McLeod characterization reveals a strong sense of theatrics which projects for payoff effect. Scenes in which he is torn between his first compromise of principle or shutting his wife out of his life, are packed with emotion. In these sequences, the wife, played by Charlotte Goldstein, complements him excellently.

Robin Oliver lifts the show out of its sombre mood with a standout portrayal of the shoplifter. Part is a showpiece and Miss Oliver gets the most from it. The young lovers, Jacob Frankel and Lily Liliana, add a tender quality to the two-fisted drama, and Leon Liebgold stands out in his flashy portrayal of the 1st Cat-burglar. The squadroom detectives are all okay, as are other players in bit parts.

Director William McFadden keeps the show moving at a high-powered pace. The one-set squadroom relays the mood of the drama effectively. Gros.

G&S $9,700, New Haven

New Haven, Oct. 7.

Breakin of the Martyn Green Gilbert & Sullivan troupe at the Shubert last week (1-4) pulled only fair biz on top scale ($4.20) ducats, but sold substantially on the lesser tariff seats. Five performances grossed approximately $9,700.

Heavy advance this week on the Margaret Sullavan preem of "Deep Blue Sea" (8-11). Next week gets opening of Van Heflin in "The Shrike" (15-18) and a full week of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is set for Oct. 20-25. "Jane" (Edna Best) is due Oct. 30-Nov. 1.

Gilbert & Sullivan

New Haven, Oct. 2.

S. M. Chartock production of Gilbert & Sullivan repertory. Features Martyn Green, Robert Rounseville, Ella Halman, Joseph Macaulay, Lillian Murphy, Frank Rogier, Robert Eckles, Dorothy MacNeil, Earl William, Mary Roche, Radley Flynn, Glynn Hill. Staged by Chartock; musical director, Lehman Engel; settings, Ralph Alswang; costuming, Peggy Morrison; assistant conductor, Eugene Kusmiak; production consultant, Martyn Green. At Shubert, New Haven, Oct. 1, '52; $4.20 top.

THE MIKADO

One of these days they'll probably change the billing to read Gilbert & Sullivan & Martyn Green. This eminent Savoyard has been prominently identified with G & S repertory so long, that it comes as no surprise that he is adding another feather to his cap as he strikes out more or less on his own as head of this newest troupe of exponents of the celebrated operettas.

Offering only "Mikado" and "Pirates of Penzance" on its stand here, company will add "Trial By Jury" and "Iolanthe" in Boston prior to the Broadway opening Oct. 20. Assertedly an attempt to establish a competent American company of G & S artists, this venture hits a high mark of quality. On basis of its opening here, troupe gives every indication of meeting whatever exacting requirements may be demanded by fans of these classics. Productions as a whole merit the enthusiastic response they drew.

As the perennial Ko-Ko, probably the most popular role in his repertory, Green brings to the part the polish acquired from developing the characterization over a quarter of a century. His remarkable rendition of rapid-fire tongue-twisters continues to be a highlight in his performance.

Robert Rounseville is in good voice as Nanki-Poo and he teams well with Lillian Murphy, who offers charm and excellent singing as Yum-Yum. Ella Halman's contralto adds authority to the role of Katisha, and Robert Eckles does well in the comic Poo-Bah assignment. Joseph Macaulay offers a stirring impression of the Mikado histrionically, but has a tendency to thicken up on enunciation of lyrics. Frank Rogier, Mary Roche, Dorothy MacNeil, Radley Flynn are other principals who add competent support.

PIRATES OF PENZANCE

Usually preceded by the curtain-raiser "Trial By Jury," "Pirates" makes an entertaining, if not a full, evening of diversion.

As in "Mikado," performances again carry a stamp of high skill with emphasis, however, being reallocated among the troupers. Green approaches the relatively minor role of General Stanley with customary finesse, while others of the cast, notably Dorothy MacNeil, as Mabel, and Macaulay, as the Pirate King, take on sturdier assignments competently. Miss MacNeil is particularly good in coloratura. Rounseville again displays a fine tenor as Frederic; Ella Halman scores as the Pirate Maid, and Robert Eckles registers chuckles as the Police Sergeant. Frank Rogier again comes through with good support, and similar comment applies to Mary Roche, Lillian Murphy and Shirley Pringle.

In both presentations, ensemble singing is effective and the conducting of Lehman Engel adds considerable impetus to the proceedings. Productions are staged efficiently and, while not elaborate on sets and costumes, are nevertheless pleasing to the eye. Bone.

Paint Your Wagon (HARTMAN, COLUMBUS)

Columbus, O., Oct. 7.

"Paint Your Wagon," the Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical play, auspiciously began its national trek here last Thursday (2), with Burl Ives, the folk-singer, carrying the role created by James Barton in the Broadway production last season. The musical, originally produced in New York by Cheryl Crawford, is being presented on tour by Wolfe Kaufman and John Yorke, respective press-agent and company manager for the original edition.

Limited rehearsal time here made for a rocky first night, but by the second performance (the

SHIPLEY SUCCEEDS LATE G. GABRIEL'S PREZ POST

Joseph T. Shipley, of New Leader and radio station WEVD, New York, was elected president of the N. Y. Drama Critics' Circle at a special meeting yesterday (Tues.). He succeeds Gilbert Gabriel, of Cue mag, who died recently. Shipley was formerly vice-president of the group.

Walter F. Kerr was elected vice-president, while Thomas H. Wenning, of Newsweek, and George Freedley, curator of the theatre collection of the N. Y. Public Library, were reelected treasurer and secretary, respectively. Rosamund Gilder, U. S. representative on the International Theatre Organization of UNESCO and former editor of Theatre Arts mag, was voted an honorary member of the Circle.

Albany Playhouse Sold; Slows Atterbury Stock

Albany, Oct. 7.

The Playhouse Bldg., local landmark since 1815, and a theatre since 1920, and housing a stock operation by Malcolm Atterbury the last five years, was sold last week to Harry Bernstein for parking lot use. Bernstein, who operates a successful adjoining lot, almost closed for the Playhouse in July.

Atterbury is now dickering for a lease on the uptown Colonial, closed a year now. A 900-seater, it has been used for stock, vaude and films. If Atterbury gets it, he'll open his first production there about Nov. 12.

He and wife (Ellen Hardies) purchased the old Capitol Theatre from the late W. W. Farley in 1946 for $70,000. They remodeled the structure, originally designed as a Presbyterian church by Phillips Hooker, at a cost of $150,000.

Appeal last spring for $55,000 met with many small public donations, but only a fraction of the total was received.

The Shuberts operated the Capitol for a decade on lease. Variety and other policies, including burlesque, boxing, wrestling and roller skating, were tried before Atterbury relighted.

Slavenska-Franklin Co. Starts Tour in Quebec

The recently-formed Slavenska-Frederic Franklin Ballet Co., which had a successful season touring the strawhats last summer, opened its first regular fall season with a date at Quebec Monday (6). Because of heavy advance sale, the local management skedded an extra matinee to precede the original evening date.

Troupe, with Alexandra Danilova as guest ballerina in addition to Miss Slavenska and Franklin as stars, will play a fall season of nine or 10 weeks. In January, it will start a winter tour of 20 weeks.

Charles E. Green, prez of Consolidated Concerts Corp., is booking manager, and Dr. Kurt Neumann, Miss Slavenska's husband, is company director. Fred Schader is handling press.

Troupe comprises 21 dancers and carries an orch of 11. Repertoire includes "A Streetcar Named Desire," with choreography by Valerie Bettis to a score by Alex North.

Collin's Terp Tour

Janet Collins & Co. dance attraction is doing a month of concerts in October before the dancer rejoins the Met Opera for its season. About 20 dates have been set up by Humphrey Doulens, booking for the Coppicus, Schang & Brown division of Columbia Artists Mgt.

Miss Collins, chief ballerina at the Met, and first Negro ever to get a lead spot at the opera emporium, is assisted by three performers, drummer Ted Benedict, pianist Kenneth McGuire and vocalist Fred Thomas. They present Creole, Negro, Hebraic and ballet dance forms, with choreography staged by Miss Collins.

Tour opened last week in Westfield, N. J. Miss Collins plans another tour, on the Coast, in May, after the Met's spring tour.

Chicago B.O. Still on Healthy Side; 'Fourposter' $25,600, 'Dolls' $37,300

Chicago, Oct. 7.

Business slumped a bit the past week, but all entries are still on the healthy side. "Stalag 17," although down slightly from the previous week, is getting a heavy advance mail order. "Guys and Dolls" is hammering the "last five weeks" theme in ads, and biz is holding well.

"The Fig Leaf" opens at the Selwyn tomorrow (Wed.). "Gigi" is set for a Nov. 3 session at the Harris. Great Northern gets "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," starting Nov. 10.

Estimates for Last Week

"Fourposter," Blackstone (2d wk) ($4.20; 1,534). Continues to shine with $25,600.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (33d wk) ($6; 2,100). Still strong with $37,300.

"I Am a Camera," Harris (3d wk) ($4.40; 1,000). Lush $18,200.

"Stalag 17," Erlanger (5th wk) ($4.40; 1,334). A very healthy $17,500.

'Language' $10,700, 'Berny' 13½G, Hub

Boston, Oct. 7.

Hub legit season is moving along nicely, with three newcomers bowing in last night Monday (6). They are "Jane" at the Colonial, "Paris '90" at the Majestic and a Gilbert & Sullivan troupe at the Shubert. Two newcomers are slated for next week (13), "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" at the Opera House and "Deep Blue Sea" at Plymouth, each skedded for two weeks.

Estimates For Last Week

"Bernardine," Wilbur (2nd wk) ($3.60-1,200). Wound two-weeker with okay $13,500. House currently dark.

"In Any Language," (Plymouth) (2d wk) ($3.60; 1,200). Not too good at $10,700 for final week. House currently dark.

'MOON' HEFTY $21,500, 'BELL' $15,500, FRISCO

San Francisco, Oct. 7.

"Nina," with Edward Everett Horton, Martha Linden and Christopher Plummer, under the aegis of producer Randolph Hale, opens tonight (7) at the Alcazar. Show is scaled to $3.60.

Estimates for Last Week

"Moon Is Blue," Alcazar (2d wk) (C-$4.20; 1,157) (David Niven, Diana Lynn, Murray Hamilton). Hefty $21,500 (previous week, a fine $19,500).

"Bell, Book and Candle," Geary (1st wk) (D-$4.20; 1,550) (Joan Bennett, Zachary Scott). Fair $15,500.

"Don Juan in Hell," Curran (2d wk) (D-$4.20; 1,758) (Charles Boyer, Vincent Price, Cedric Hardwicke, Agnes Moorehead). Sock $39,000 (previous week, husky $33,500).

'Okla.' Slim $18,800 In Eighth Visit to Pitt

Pittsburgh, Oct. 7.

Legit season got off to a somewhat wavering start last week at the Nixon, when "Oklahoma" came back for the eighth time and did only $18,800, the slimmest gross in all the years it's been stopping off here. General feeling was that Theatre Guild made a mistake in charging the old price again, $4.55 ($3.50 base and 30% taxes) and could have done much better at a scale reduced over that of past engagements.

Another returnee current in "Mister Roberts," then "Gigi," "Constant Wife" and "Top Banana" in a row, which should really put the steam under the new season.

'BAGELS' 18G, TORONTO

Montreal, Oct. 7.

"Bagels & Yox" did a near $18,000 at Her Majesty's Theatre last week, with the 1,704-seater scaled to $3.94.

Biz was given an extra boost during the week by four theatre nights sponsored by local charities.

'PACIFIC' $56,000 IN SACRAMENTO STANZA

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 7.

Road company of "South Pacific," starring Janet Blair and Webb Tilton, grossed just over $56,000 last week at the 4,444-seat Memorial Auditorium here last week.

Musical is splitting the current week between Richmond and Berkeley, Cal., and plays all next week in Portland.

'Madam' Modest $31,900 For St. Paul Stanza

St. Paul, Oct. 7.

"Call Me Madam," with Elaine Stritch and Kent Smith top-featured leads, grossed a modest $31,900 last week at the 3,000-seat Auditorium here. That represented somewhere around an even break for the Leland Hayward production.

Musical, with songs by Irving Berlin and book by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, plays the Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, this week and the American, St. Louis, next week.

Skinner 13G, Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 7.

With top notices, plus an opening night sellout, Cornelia Otis Skinner in "Paris '90" grossed a good $13,000 last week, with Royal Alexandra, 1,525-seater scaled at $3.50 top with tax.

Piece is current at the Plymouth, Boston, for two weeks, then embarks on 24-week coast-to-coast tour.

'Leaf' 12G, St. Louis

St. Louis, Oct. 7.

"The Fig Leaf," starring Ernest Truex and Sylvia Field, wound up Sunday (5) with a fair b.o. score at the Empress Theatre after a mild teeoff. The scale has been upped 50c. to a $2.50 top and an estimated gross of $12,000 was hung up. "The First Lady," with Ilka Chase, is current.

The American Theatre tees off its 1952-53 season Monday (13) with a two-week stand of "Call Me Madam," with the house scaled to $5.50.

'NINA' 5,000, SEATTLE

Seattle, Oct. 7.

Showgoers like to mull it over and decide slowly, it would seem, for "Nina," a quickie-booked show, didn't jell at the Metropolitan (Becket Enterprises). House seats 1,500 and was scaled to $3.75.

Though Edward Everett Horton was in the lead, b.o. wasn't there, show doing around $5,000.

'ROBERTS' SO-SO 19G IN ONE-NIGHT STRING

Harrisburg, Oct. 7.

The touring "Mister Roberts" just about got by last week, with a total take of slightly over $19,000 for an eight-performance string of one-nighters. Thomas Heggen-Joshua Logan play opened the string Monday night (29) with $3,300 at the Broadway, Kingston, N. Y.; played Tuesday night (30) to $3,500 at the Majestic, Perth Amboy; had two performances Wednesday (1) for $6,300 at the Lincoln, Trenton; played Thursday night (2) to $2,900 at the St. James, Asbury Park, N. J.; had a lean Friday night (3) for $1,400 at the Rajah, Reading, Pa., and finaled with two sad showings Saturday (4) for $1,167 at the Shrine Mosque, Harrisburg.

Leland Hayward production, with Tod Andrews as star, is at the Nixon, Pittsburgh, all this week and plays a three-stand string next week between Bradford, Pa., Rochester and Buffalo.

'Cuckoo' OK 21½G For Philly Preem

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.

Theatre-starved Philly gave a hefty response to the season's initial straight play, "Time of the Cuckoo," which preemed at the Walnut under joint Theatre Guild and American Theatre Society auspices.

Discounting "Good Night, Ladies," which clocked up four profitable weeks at the Erlanger, season has had the slowest start here in over a decade, with only four productions listed for the month of October: "Top Banana," which returned last night (6), to the Shubert; "The Suspects," due at the Locust, Oct. 13; "Climate of Eden," Locust, Oct. 27, and return of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Shubert, Oct. 27.

Estimates for Last Week

"Time of the Cuckoo," Walnut (1st wk) ($4.55; 1,340). Nice notices plus Shirley Booth strength brought in a tasty $21,500.

"Good Night, Ladies," Erlanger (4th wk) ($3; 1,880) Town flooded with two-for-ones, plus steady ad campaign, kept this one alive. Plenty profit at $10,300.

IVES-'WAGON' 10G FOR 4 IN COLUMBUS GETAWAY

Columbus, O., Oct. 7.

Touring production of "Paint Your Wagon," with Burl Ives as star, opened here, doing nearly $10,000 in four performances at the Hartman last Thursday-Saturday (2-4) against terrific competition. Musical opened against Hildegarde at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel, plus a GOP rally. Friday night (3) Adlai Stevenson spoke at an evening rally and Saturday (4) there were 70,000 at Ohio State U. Stadium for a grid game. Top was $5, including tax.

Next backing at the Hartman is "Call Me Madam," due in week of Oct. 27.

'Jane' Fair $7,500 for 4 In Hartford Teeoff

Hartford, Oct. 7.

New Parsons garnered a fair $7,500 with "Jane" in four performances Thursday through Saturday (2-4). It was the first of a nine-week subscription series for the house, which was scaled at a $4.20 top.

"Dial 'M' For Murder," starring Maurice Evans, gets its first American showcasing at the house Thursday-Saturday (9-11) as second play of the subscription series.

B'way Off a Bit, Hurt by Holiday; Lillie Gets Raves, Sellout 11G (4), 'Wish' Sock $51,800, 'Pickwick' $12,800

Attendance generally eased a trifle on Broadway last week, although the average against potential capacity was slightly higher. Jewish holiday Sunday and Monday (28-29), coupled with the early curtain at most shows the latter night, apparently hurt business a bit, but trade picked up rapidly thereafter and reached bonanza proportions Friday night and Saturday (3-4).

The total gross for all 14 shows last week was $413,200, or 84% of capacity. Week before last the total for all 13 entries was $396,900, or 81%, compared with the previous week's $382,300, or 82%, for 13 shows.

A year ago last week the total for all 15 offerings was $438,800, or 85% of capacity, a rise of 5% over the week before.

Last week's sole opening, "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie," drew solidly enthusiastic notices and went clean at its first four performances. The engagement has already been extended indefinitely beyond the originally scheduled six weeks. "Mr. Pickwick" leveled off in its second full week and is a questionable run prospect unless it registers a sharp pickup.

This week brings two openings. "Sacred Flame," due last night (Tues.), and "In Any Language," slated for tonight (Wed.). At the moment, next week's scheduled openings include "Bernardine," "Buttrio Square," "Gambler," "Millionairess" and "Time of the Cuckoo."

Estimates for Last Week

*Other parenthetic designations refer, respectively, to top prices; (indicates using two-for-ones), number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Price includes 20% amusement tax, but grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of tax.

"Evening With Beatrice Lillie," Booth (1st wk) (R-$6; 900; $24,500) (Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner). Opened Thursday night (2) to unanimous raves; first four performances went clean, grossing about $11,000, and show is virtually sold out for the entire scheduled six weeks, but will continue indefinitely.

"Fourposter," Barrymore (50th wk) (C-$4.80; 1,060; $24.996) (Betty Field, Burgess Meredith). Nearly $16,000 (previous week, $18,400).

"Guys and Dolls," 46th St. (98th wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,319; $43,904). As usual, $44,000.

"King and I," St. James (80th wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717). Over $51,200 (previous week, $51,700).

"Male Animal," Music Box (23d wk) (C-$4.80; 1,012; $25.903) (Elliott Nugent, Martha Scott, Robert Preston). Nearly $18,800 (previous week, $19,300).

"Mr. Pickwick," Plymouth (3d wk) (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019). Over $12,800 (previous week, $12,200).

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (26th wk) (C-$4.80; 912; $23,400) (Helen Hayes). Over $20,100 (previous week, $19,600 for seven performances).

"New Faces," Royale (21st wk) (R-$6; 1,035; $30,600). Almost $28,900 (previous week, $29,800).

'Jollyanna' $46,200, 'Affairs' 12G, L.A.

Los Angeles, Oct. 7.

Civic Light Opera Assn. wound its best year Saturday, grabbing $46,200 on the fourth and final week of "Jollyanna" to give the CLO a gross of $2,115.000 for its 23-week season. Boosting the total was the $224.200 racked up by Judy Garland in a four-week vaudate that preceded the regular season of musicals.

As expected, "South Pacific" led the parade with $324.694 in six weeks, followed by "Call Me Madam" with $267,500 in five frames. "Song of Norway" registered $207.520 in four and "Jollyanna" brought up the rear with $191,000 in four frames.

Town's other offerings last week failed to generate the expected boxoffice enthusiasm.

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Carthay Circle (1st wk) (1,518; $2.40). Despite rave notices, Henry Duffy's new pop price legit policy got off to a slow start after its Tuesday (30) opening. The $12,000 on the first six performances is around break-even point.

"Country Girl," Biltmore (1st wk) (1,636; $4.20). Theatre Guild subscriptions provide the bulk of the gross and solid reviews failed to spur much interest for the initial frame; $15,750, which is below the break level.

"Jollyanna," Philharmonic Aud (4th wk) (2,670; $4.80). Finaled with $46.200 for $191,000 on four weeks, poorest of the Civic Light Opera offerings. No decision on the show's future, but it probably will be shelved rather than taken to N. Y. as originally anticipated.

'Blondes' Mild $24,100 For 7 in 2-City Stand

Buffalo, Oct. 7.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," with Iva Withers in the Carol Channing part, drew a mild $24,100 total last week in a seven-performance split between Hamilton, Ont., and here. The musical started with $9,000 for two performances Monday-Tuesday (29-30) at the Grand, Hamilton, and added $15,100 in five shows Wednesday-Saturday at the Erlanger here.

Show splits this week between Rochester and Hartford, and does a three-way split next week between Worcester and Springfield, Mass., and Providence.

CAB CALLOWAY
Sportin' Life in "PORGY and BESS"

"To see the transformation in Cab from a man who spent all of his theatrical life in front of a microphone to the acting job he does as Sportin' Life is really remarkable. Calloway plays the role with all the incredible body motion and energy that made him famous, but with a sly, malicious undertone of evil that is one of the best pieces of acting in the whole production."—Don Cook, N. Y. Herald Tribune.

Opening Oct. 9—Stoll Theatre, London, Eng.

De Graff Retiring

Robert F. de Graff, who founded Pocket Books, is retiring as chairman of the board, but will continue as a director of the company.

With Simon & Schuster, de Graff founded Pocket Books in 1939, after heading Garden City Publishing Co. and Blue Ribbon Books.

Financial-World Anni

Financial-World, marking its 50th year of publishing, had its biggest issue ever (148 pages) on Oct. 1. Weekly has been under continuous direction of Louis Guenther, publisher of the mag since its bow in October, 1902.

Golden anni issue includes features by stock exchange prexles, reviews of the financial record of the half-century, forecasts of investment trends, surveys of leading industries, charts, graphs, etc., as well as greetings from Gen. Eisenhower, Gov. Stevenson, President Truman, et al.

Give-&-Take On Tax

Politico give-and-take anent the Presidential candidates' incomes has focused attention on Gen. Eisenhower's take in 1948 from sale of rights to his memoirs, "Crusade in Europe," for a figure estimated at between $500,000 and $1,000,000. Ike had sought advice from the Treasury Dept., which said he was only liable for a 25% capital gains tax, since he was an amateur writer. A professional writer would have to pay roughtly 80% on a transaction of that size.

In 1950 Congress revised the revenue code to limit "capital assets" to exclude "a copyright; a literary, musical or artistic composition" created by a taxpayer. Kathleen Winsor, involved in a literary tax case, was not tripped up by the '50 amendment, because the latter had been made non-retroactive.

Professional writers are permitted to spread income over a period of time equal to the time they spent working on the opus, privided it took at least 18 months to do. Theory is that if it takes five years to do a book, it shouldn't be taxed like the income from a single year's work.

'Theatre Tonight'

"Theatre Tonight," by Luke Cosgrave (House-Warren; $5) is a story of Cosgrave's (you've seen him in many pictures) adventures with a midwest rep show. Hardly ever playing a big town, let alone a city, he played to the Mormons and farmer immigrants of Utah, Arizona, Kansas, Ohio, California, traveling by horseback, wagon and later with T-model Fords, one for scenery and the other for the troupe. Traveling over mountains, going through floods and deserts, always in the red, but he stuck to it because he was a real trouper.

In one small rep show, James Cruze was a member. He didn't stay long and when he became a big director in Hollywood, he didn't forget his old friend Cosgrave and sent for him to come to Hollywood. He never did become a star, or even a feature player, but just was a good actor playing anything he was asked to play. He typifies the "little guy" who has helped show biz more than it helped them; for without the Luke Cosgraves we wouldn't have any show biz. They kept the road open and even with the crude performances given by the rural rep shows, it planted a love for entertainment in the hearts of the people. Their offspring are now the theatre ticket buyers.

Oldtimers reading this book will recall their own pioneering days, while the youngsters will realize how much tougher it was in the old days. (And show biz is plenty tough today, brother.) "Theatre Tonight" belongs in your theatre library! Joe Laurie, Jr.

TV Scripters' Guide

"TV Writer's Guide," by Margaret R. Weiss (Pellegrini & Cudahy, $3.95), should be helpful for neophytes trying to break into the tele medium. It's an anthology of 19 telecast scripts in the various formats, which serve as models of successful TV scribbling. Tome includes: the one-hour adaptation (Joseph Cochran's version of Henry James' "The American" for "Philco TV Playhouse"); half-hour suspense original (Joseph Ruscoll's "The Creeper" for "The Web"); half-hour situation comedy (Barbara Booth's original for "The Laytons"); a Margaret Paige dramatic sketch for the Earl Wilson show; Jack Raymond's musical continuity for the Sammy Kaye series; Steve Carlin's script for "Rootie Kazootie"; Reuven Frank's news roundup for "Camel News Caravan"; Jack Weinstock - Willie Gilbert collaboration for the "Tom Corbett" Space show; commentary fora public service film by Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr., and 10 sample commercials (live, animated and film).

There are brief chapters on breaking into vidscripting, marketing, copyright laws, the kind of material producers want, tools of the craft, etc. Intros to sample scripts cover the special requirements of each type of program. Bril.

Religioso Hypo

Religious book publishers are taking a page from the pocket editions and adding color and inexpensive paperbacks to their lists. W. F. Moore, head of the Christian Booksellers Assn., said the publishers are putting out 35c sellers that convey a message set in modern times. Most of the new editions are being sold in religious bookstores.

In addition to the new trend in this field, editions of the Bible are being shown in bright red, navy and brown, as well as the traditional black.

top names in classical field. Hartford Symphony orchestra, under George Heck and Moshe Paranov, had a featured spot here. Andre Kostelanetz guest-conducted the symphony in a brace of four tunes with which he is associated. His programming here was excellent. Composer-conductor Leroy Anderson was also on hand to guest conduct and the piano team of Whittemore & Lowe and Jane Froman helped round out a firstrate program.

Heaviest draw and sloppiest arranged was the popular music night Friday (3). Two-and-a-half-hour show contained excellent talent but was laid out badly. As a gesture of cooperation with disk jockeys, Warren S. Freeman, RIAA liaison man for this show, arranged for individual turntable mikemen to intro each talent. An offstage voice introed each platter spinner. This combined with the self-commercial, each gave before bringing on the talent, added to the stage wait.

On the bill were Toni Arden, Eileen Barton, Tony Bavaar, Stan Freeman, Benny Goodman Quintet, Bill Hayes, Bill Kenny & the Ink Spots, and Cindy Lord. Mitch Miller gave a spiel on behalf of the record industry. Saturday was windup day for the festival. It was kiddies day and featured Bozo the Capitol Clown, Tom Glazer and Frank Luther.

Promotional work included the use of 40 spot transcriptions by that number of talent personnel bringing to the public attention the festival. These were aired over the local stations.

One incident that resulted because of the festival was the withdrawal of Patti Page from the bill of the State Theatre Saturday and Sunday (4-5) because of the fear that the week-long showing would milk the house of any audience. Bill Kenny and the Ink Spots were booked as replacements.

In lining up the program for the week, no one was booked who was skedded to appear in this area during or immediately after the festival. Patti Page wasn't asked for that reason to participate in the festival. She's been rebooked for the State for next week.

tain the 20% involved. So orchestra's tax gain for last season ran to about $65,000. This season, gain from the tax lifting will run to about $80,000.

Second windfall came last week when the symph got a commercial sponsor (Willys-Overland Motors) for its Sunday afternoon CBS broadcasts, for the first time since the '48-'49 season, when Esso was the sponsor. For the last three seasons, orch's Sunday airings have been sustaining.

Gain to the Philharmonic from the new sponsorship won't be nearly as large as supposed. Where the organization received about $90,000 annually from its sustaining setup, this season it will get about $125,000, or only $35,000 additional. The $125,000 from the current sponsor doesn't match the 200G the orch received in '49-'50 as its share from Esso.

The orchestra players, in addition to management, will gain, of course, with an extra $26.45 to each man for every broadcast, or about $750 extra for the 28-week season.

Orch hasn't raised its ticket prices, unlike some other N.Y. musical organizations, like the Met Opera, its top still being $4.25 for Thursday-Friday concerts and $3 for Sundays.

on widespread U. S. distributor hesitancy to give full support to the idea of dubbed films. IFE has been approached by several companies to make a joint distribution deal, but nothing has jelled, Gualino said. If and when IFE gets going in distribution, Lux Films will probably be closed down since "it wouldn't be commercially wise to have several Italian outlets." Separate outfit will be organized to handle IFE distribution.

De Pirro said the Italo government had been reluctant to re-invoke Article X of the Itailan film law which sets rental ceilings. Action had been taken only when it was found the U. S. distribs and Italian exhibs had found it impossible to get together on a voluntary agreement. He added that the moment an understanding is reached, the government would let the law lapse.

Gemini explained that talks with the U. S. distribs would be renewed on his return to Rome and that, when there is a voluntary pact, it will be much more liberal than the law as presently enforced.

Italo group will be here for another two weeks when details of the new distrib org will be worked out, including the question of exchanges to be used.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

Anybody in Hollywood ever hear of J. F. Powers? The head of St. Mary's Hopital, Minneapolis, on a visit to Scully's Bedside Manor told me all about him. He had been an orderly there for a while and was one of their pets. Seems he didn't like war in any form, and so had been heaved among the bedpans as a conscientious objector.

Later she sent me a copy of his short stories. It belonged to the nurses library at St. Mary's Hospital and indicated it must be returned in 14 days. Apparently the good nun had borrowed it for me, which was okay, I guess, since she's head of the hospital.

It was full of fine stories, and while everybody is trying to read great things into Hemingway's "Fisherman," I'd like to say a word about a story by Powers called "Jamesie." It's a baseball story. It needs Norman Taurog and a new Jackie Cooper to make the great baseball picture of all time.

While everybody who is anybody (and who isn't?) has been attending the World Series, or catching the games on TV, I urge serious-minded Hollywood characters who are fighting for the survival of pictures to read "Jamesie." It involved no big-leaguer, though it does involve hero-worship, the devotion of a kid in a hick town for a hick pitcher who might have been with the Yankees today if he had resisted tying his fast ball to a fast buck.

In its essentials this is the Joe Jackson story, and Jamesie is like the kid who said to Shoeless Joe after word got out that he threw the World Series, "Say it ain't true, Joe?", and Joe had to say it was. But it's a greater story because there is no name-dropping in here, no glamor-by-association, just a small-town wonderful boy and a pitcher who let him down.

But he didn't let the pitcher down. When they threw Lefty in the clink for losing that game, the kid went to see him with the only gifts he had. Among them was his breakfast orange. And he passed it across the bars to Lefty. He asked Lefty how he threw those curves and through the bars Lefty tossed that orange, telling him, "You throw them all the same—your fast one, your floater, your curve. Then they don't know where they're at."

The B.O. of Vice

He forgot all about why Lefty was in the can, except there was a funny sweet smell that came off Lefty's breath, like perfume, only sour, and there were burnt matches and cigaret butts on the floor in his cell.

Jamesie remembered that there was a character like this in "Baseball Bill in the World Series," one of his juvenile library books. He, too, had these unmistakable odors. They were the odors of Blackie Humphrey, and some dirty crooks who tried to make Bill throw a World Series game. And it was those odors that convinced Jamesie of Lefty's guilt.

It may be argued that all this is fine, fine, but how are you going to get distinguishing odors in pictures, which the hatchetmen of Hollywood insist smell up the joint right now?

I admit that's a toughie, but they do a lot of things with dialog, and they certainly could do tricks with it here. After all, Powers had nothing but the printed word and he conveyed these odors of corruption perfectly.

What I see in this picture is the raging conflict going on between good and evil on all levels, all over the world. And the hypocrisy of politicians screaming about how they will clean up corruption while they themselves are on swindle sheets that would stagger Nero. Some generation has to take it up and fight it as little Jamesie did, as J. F. Powers, in fact, himself, did.

The sad part of it is that this fight for integrity seems to be carried on mostly among little known authors who appear, in the main, in less known magazines.

That he should breathe some of these pure odors on whatever Jamesies he might meet along the way is being more romantic about the sustaining power of virtue than the record indicates. Nevertheless, his story upholds the tradition that, in the sticks at least, baseball is played for keeps and corruption is rooted out awfully fast.

Lefty got 15 bucks a game. His catcher was borrowed from the State Hospital, where he was either an inmate or an attendant, I couldn't quite make out which. Anyway, they called him Bugs Bidwell, and he obviously was constructed too simply to understand the nuances of "cheating a little here and there," as the cameramen say when trying to get an impressive effect without extra cost.

He knew when a pitcher took a windup with a runner on first, that wasn't amnesia. Then when he walked one without showing the slightest sign of wildness, that wasn't in the book either. It might have been too smart for the psychiatrists, but it wasn't too smart for Bugs. The manager wanted Bugs' honest opinion. Bugs didn't know what to say.

"Think I better jerk him?"

"You're the boss, I don't know nothing for sure," said Bugs.

Lefty Crosses His Catcher

Then Jamesie saw Bugs' two fingers appear below the mitt. Up came a medium-fast ball right down the middle. The batter poled a long ball, which was foul by a few feet. Jamesie saw Bugs shake his head in his mask. Then he gave Lefty the same signal. The ball hit the leftfield fence. There were weeds out there. It was that kind of baseball. And by the time the ball was recovered the score was 5-2 against Lefty.

The manager asked Bugs what he called for on that last pitch. He said he called for a curve.

"And the one before that?"

"Same," said Bugs.

"And what did Lefty give you?"

"It was no curve, it wasn't much of anything."

"No," said the manager, "it sure was no curve ball. It was right in there, not too fast, not too slow, just right—for batting practice."

Lefty explained that it slipped. It seemed on further explanation that the one before slipped, too.

"That ain't never happened before," explained Lefty.

"Well, it ain't never going to happen again, not to me," said the manager. "I just found out your old man was making bets under the grandstand, and it wasn't on us. I can put you in jail for this."

"Try it," Lefty said, starting to walk away.

The next thing Jamesie knew, all the players were in a fight.

Jamesie was in tears. He walked home. He had a stomachache and a headache. He went to his room. His Aunt Kate brought him a glass of lemonade. She was the person closest to him. Even if books had come between them—the books she liked like "King Arthur," "Oliver Twist," "Sir Lancelot" and "Gulliver" as opposed to the books Jamesie now liked, like "Baseball Bill," "Don Sturdy," "Horatio Alger, Jr.," and The Sporting News.

He wanted to know if his uncle was talking about Lefty. "I don't know," she said. "Is that the one who lost the game on purpose?"

He got up and walked the streets and he dreamed of Lefty being with the Yankees and saying to the owner, "Either you hire my friend Jamesie as bat boy or I quit." Then he found himself in front of the jail and the next morning he was bringing Lefty his breakfast orange and a copy of a magazine that he had bought to sell to his uncle. He gave that to Lefty, for free, and in return, through those prison bars, Lefty showed him how to pitch straight.

It was those odors, those strong odors, of liquor, tobacco and vice, that finally drove Jamesie out into the street.

So all Hollywood has to do is to find that kid, buy this story, hire Taurog and they will have the "Skippy" of 1953. And never again can they say I never gave them anything. I gave them J. F. Powers.

Tin Pan 'Valley'

the Coast, and extends up to the northwest into the Canadian provinces. This territory blankets the same farm belt which supported a paying country music business before the 1929 crash. A new prosperity, starting in the early 1940s, has once again lifted the country cleffers into the big coin.

Some Changes

Time has wrought some changes, however. That stereotyped figure of the bare-footed, gee-tar strumming mountaineers working over a simple hoedown is as anachronistic as a Stutz Bearcat. The modern hillbilly artist and writer are well-heeled, figuratively and literally, and they've learned every chord and beat in the book. That's one explanation why the transition from country to pop has become so easy and frequent in recent years.

And while folk music has moved closer to pop, the pop publishers have been trying to move closer to Nashville. Acuff-Rose and Hill & Range have been the unchallenged titans in the country field, but in recent months, Frank Kelton, vet New York music man, and Howie Richmond have opened their own offices in this city. Several major publishers, meantime, have been sending down reconnoitering forces to Nashville with similar ideas in mind.

Cracking into this field is not proving an easy job for the "city slickers." The country cleffers (most of whom, like Hank Williams, Carl Smith and Autry Inman, are also performers) are shrewd traders and have been demanding heavy advances before delivering their product. At the present time, in fact, the advance payoff to the backwoods tunesmiths are larger than that to most top New York writers. Acuff-Rose is unique in its no-guarantee policy in its writer deals but Hill & Range has set the general pattern with its offers of substantial advances, ranging up to $15,000 and $20,000, for exclusive longterm deals with promising hillbilly cleffing talents.

Link to Radio

Unlike the pop field where air plugs are subordinated to disks as the hit-making factor, the country music biz is still closely wedded to live performances on radio and personal appearance tours. Fountainhead of the whole operation is WSM's "Grand Ole Opry" four-hour Saturday night country clambake featuring the high-ranking folk names such as Red Foley, Carl Smith, the Carter Family, Lonzo & Oscar, Chet Atkins, Minnie Pearl, Martha Carson and Grandpa Jones, among others. Although these artists are paid only $6 per quarter-hour slot, they regularly sacrifice top-coin personals for the national showcasing this airer provides. As soon as the "Grand Ole Opry" can get video network commitments, it will be telecast over WSM-TV for even stronger impact on the hillbilly field.

Beyond "Grand Ole Opry," however, virtually every small indie station in the south features live hillbilly talent even if it's only a trio. Since the performers are also writers, these shows have become an important plugging medium for their songs. In addition, many of the hillbilly jockeys are also writers and are thus able to lay on their tunes to the limit.

Backing up the radio plugs are the hillbilly troupes which "concertize" around the country. WSM's artists bureau packages some 20 such troupes from the "Grand Ole Opry" personnel and has booked its folk artists into virtually every large auditorium and theatre in the U. S. The take for a top name, such as a Foley or an Eddy Arnold, can hit anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000 for a one-day stand. These troupes usually give three shows a day with one matinee and two p.m. performances.

These concentrated radio and live plugs have built the solid sheet music and disk-selling base for the hillbillies. Although the major disk companies have corralled most of the top vocalists, some 70 indie labels are making their releases pay off in this field with lesser-known artists. Copy sales are equally strong with the customers, few of whom can read music, buying the sheet music for the lyrics only. "Half as Much," a Hank Williams number, has already hit over 600,000, with the country market accounting for a substantial portion of the turnover.

All indications point to the hillbilly market growing even more powerful. The big payoff is attracting more cleffer-performers, while the inexorable urbanization of the hinterlands is bridging the gap betwen the folk and the pop tune stylings.

Actress

theatrically rewarding experience. She's an exciting, unusual performer with a bigtime legit and film potential. (Director Gregory Ratoff, who'd been filming the 20th-Fox pic, "Taxi," in Gotham, gave her a spot in the pic—her initial screen try).

Miss Page has a vivid dynamic style that overpowers the audience as well as the thesps on stage. Many of the players have picked up her tempo and mannerisms, dissipating overall impact. They seem to be playing follow-the-leader with Miss Page and should be brought back into line by director Jose Quintero. Miss Page, too, is in need of a strong director's hand. She unleashes her bag of theatrical tricks in the first few scenes without selectivity or restraint. She's probably loosened up in her half-year in the role and should be toned down.

The play, like most of Williams' works, is a mood piece about neurotics. In this case it's a sensitive, inhibited minister's daughter hopelessly fighting her desire for a lusty, irresponsible doctor's son. Story line is plotted sketchily and the many individual scenes fail to build dramatic intensity. It drags throughout and is often tedious. Lee Richard, as the doctor's son, heads the supporting cast. Gros.

Anna Russell

Broadway legit house next season. Probably a dance team, and another act, would be used for support. Management is inviting the Stock Mgrs. Assn. to the Dec. 12 Town Hall concert with this in mind.

Idea is feasible, because Miss Russell is a natural-born mimic with a world of talent. Present program is a longhair elaboration of a music hall or nitery song-satire act, and program would have to be slanted more to pop subjects for the new venture. But that would be easy; the femme definitely has it.

Sunday's program included imitations of opera and art-song singers, takeoffs on Gilbert & Sullivan and Wagner, a music appreciation monolog, paraphrases of folk and pop tunes, imitations of flamenco and bierstube songs, in a bewildering variety of styles, all top-grade and hilarious. Accompanying dialog and varied stage business were as surefire as the songs.

Femme is a first-class comedienne, with a good voice, fine wit and excellent stage presence. All special material is her own. What she did to "Night and Day," as a British choral society might sing it, was a libelous treat—and may Cole Porter forgive her, which he's probably done already between guffaws. "Whither the popular song;" her talk on Wagner's "Ring" cycle, and her death scene from the opera "Anaemia" were just a few other highspots in a program geared high for laughs. Bron.

Shuberts

three-sheets a few years ago, today come in with two or three three-sheets for lobby display.

The Shubert bill-posting truck, with ladders and glue-pots, has long been a familiar sight around this town. Servicing the Plymouth, Majestic, Wilbur, Shubert and Boston Opera House, the truck was kept fairly busy about 40 weeks a year, with new shows coming into town almost every week all season long.

The two bill-posters drew a basic $66 a week, and the upkeep on the truck, and its garaging, finally became too big an item for the theatres to share, according to Kavanaugh.

"Times have changed," the general manager said. "The whole snipe operation is doubtful today. Locations are poor, and the permanent stands require a lot of free tickets to keep. We couldn't make ends meet, and since the snipe-truck was a service to the shows, we had to cut it out."

Other reasons advanced by local managers for the declining use of paper in Boston concern the great change of public-buying habit today, the fact that during a political campaign, such as the present national and local election, all the good snipes are buried in a blizzard of grinning candidates pictures.

One other reason advanced here for bill-posting having lost favor in recent years was the tendency of many shows these days to over-bill the paper, and to clutter the three-sheets and cards with unnecessary copy and "art work."

The old-style type of show paper—largely just big block letters on bright colored stock—was so striking, it always seemed to earn its way.

A report in VARIETY last year indicated the trend to abandon expensive show paper, which is now crystallized in the Shubert action in Boston. At the recent convention of the bill-posters, this issue of declining use of paper was the main topic, and various plans for correcting the situation were advanced.

'Pay As You Go'

winter makes selling a package of shows difficult because of likely cancellations.

Moreover, Witkin feels, the reputation of the Shubert is such that they can now reasonably expect patrons to buy the season on past performance.

Witkin sees a comparison with the Leland Hayward priority list now effective in Boston and in New York. Hayward sells his own reputation to draw advance orders on each new production. The Shubert management here feels the house name will do the same thing.

And, like the Hayward plan, the "Pay As You Go" subscribers in New Haven all have their locations prior to the first advertisement appearing in the newspapers and before general public sale. Also, there is no cash discount—just location.

The Shubert has tried a modified form of this plan in the past, but this is the first year a thorough circularization is being attempted, and the first year the entire house is being offered to "Pay As You Go" customers.

Witkin estimates the cost of putting the "Pay As You Go" plan on trial for the first 5,000 mailing at $150.

'Merry Widow'

was finally lopped off to give exhibitors better turnover.

"Big Jim McLain" (WB), second John Wayne starring picture to reach the Golden Dozen in one month, finished sixth. "What Price Glory" (20th) landed seventh position by dint of winding up high in two weeks of September. "Affair in Trinidad" (Col), third in August, took eighth place.

"Just For You" (Par) could not get past ninth although a third-place winner one week. The new Bing Crosby opus did not prove the expected boxoffice smash in some localities. "One Minute To Zero" (RKO) wound up 10th by a narrow margin, nosing out "High Noon" (UA), August boxoffice champ. However, the Gary Cooper western continued to display sustained strength as shown by its ability to finish fifth one week.

"World in His Arms" (U), fourth in August, rounded out the Golden Dozen for the past month. "Dreamboat" (20th), seventh the previous month; "Jumping Jacks" (Par), second in August, and "Where's Charley" (WB), sixth in the month ahead, were runnerup pictures for September in that sequence.

"Ivanhoe" (M-G), not rated in the Top 12 list last month because it was in release virtually one week, when it copped first, shapes up as one of the big grossers for the current month. Pic finished eight amazingly big weeks at the N. Y. Music Hall as the month ended to amass the greatest first eight weeks in the history of the Hall. Just getting around, "Miracle of Fatima (WB) looms as a highly profitable film. The two weeks it was in release to any extent saw this production landing fourth place one week and eighth another.

"Crimson Pirate," another WB release, also looks likely to be heard from. It took fifth one week, the only one in distribution to any extent. "Full House" (20th), obviously best suited for small-seaters, was fourth one week and a runner-up another one.

'Snows' Looks Strong

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th), another new pic, shapes up as a potentially high grosser, predicated on the two smash weeks recorded in September at the N. Y. Rivoli. Opening round gave that house one of its biggest weeks in about a year.

"Assignment Paris" (Col), also new, started out well in several spots. "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), only released in a few locations, has done nicely largely through Betty Hutton's personality and performance. "Monkey Business" (20th), just getting around, did enough one week to cop seventh position for that week.

"Because You're Mine" (M-G) was launched with a big week at the N. Y. Music Hall, but did not fare as strongly as anticipated. "Carrie" (Par), which never quite measured up to its promise displayed in N. Y., managed to cop 12th place two weeks last month.

"Don't Bother to Knock" (20th), which was fifth in August, finished 10th one session and was a runnerup another. "Untamed Frontier" (U) managed to collect sizable money and was top runnerup one stanza.

"Greatest Show" (Par), out on popscale runs, showed up 10th one week. "Les Miserables" (20th) was 10th another session. "Caribbean (Par), took 12th spot another week. "Devil Makes Three' (M-G), okay in some spots, was, on the whole, a disappointing new entry.

"The Ring" (UA), also a newcomer, hung up a record week on its preem in a small Denver house. "Fearless Fagan" (M-G), which proved a toughie to sell, did fairly well in some locations.

"Yankee Buccaneer" (U) came up with some lively trade on some of its initial playdates. "Island of Desire" (UA), also fairly new, hit a fast together stride in scattered dates. "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th) shaped up nice to okay on its first playdates.

MPEA Protests

being turned over in lira to the Italian industry which must apply to its own government for dollar conversion. Portion of the coin is to be repaid out of Italian film earnings in the U. S.

Italo customs has suddenly taken the position that companies should not bring in more pix than were allotted to them under their voluntary split. U. S. protest points out that the American distribs are perfectly free to bring in all the product they want and that, in fact, they must exceed their quota under self-limitation in order to get pix dubbed and ready for release.

Feeling is that this problem, as well as the rental ceiling question, will be ironed out as a result of the personal contact between McCarthy and the Italian execs.

Extension of Article X, while only for nine months instead of the customary 12-months period, came as a shock to the Americans, who are continuing to pitch for a voluntary agreement on rental terms with the exhibs in Italy. Current section of the law, as re-invoked on Sept. 1 by Dr. Guilo Andreotti, Undersecretary of the President's Council, represents an even tighter squeeze on the American distribs.

The new law reduces rental ceilings from 42% to 40% for 75% of all Hollywood films. The rest can go as high as 50%. In preceding years, the law contained a clause under which certain productions, classed as "exceptional," were permited to go beyond the 50% limit. This provision has been eliminated for the nine-months period to June, 1953.

If the gross of a picture exceeds the house average by a certain margin, rental terms can still be adjusted as high as 57%. Feeling here is that Andreotti bowed to exhibitors in the current decree and that, should political pressures ease, the Italian government may amend the law in line with American proposals for a voluntary substitute.

Bob Sherwood

nothing new today to write about. Tabbing it "an incredible statement, when you consider that we are living, willingly or not, in the most fateful period in world's history," Sherwood went on to familiarize the guests with the attempts being made via the New Dramatists Committee, of which he's a member, to encourage youthful playwrights.

At the morning session, Lawrence Langner, co-director of the Theatre Guild and sponsor of the projected American Shakespeare Festival & Theatre Academy, placed the blame for shortage of new plays and limitation of experimental work in professional theatres on spiraling costs. As result, much of the important experimental work is carried on by community theatre groups, Langner disclosed.

Day-long confabs were held at Boston U. and the Hotel Statler, with Elliot Norton, Post drama critic, teeing off the morning session with the subject, "The Total Picture of the New England Theatre," winding the p.m. session with "Where Do We Go From Here?" Eldon Winkler, formerly of Wellesley College, now at Lake Erie College, was general chairman; Robert Porterfield, Boston U., was secretary-treasurer. J. Donald Batcheller, U. of New Hampshire, summarized the work of the various panel groups at close of the session.

Legit Follow-Ups

one caught) things had smoothed out and it looks like a good road bet. There has been a complete reorientation of the Ben Rumson role. The drunk scene has been excised and Ives' whole approach is one of good humor. Much of the profanity and coarseness have disappeared, replaced with a sunny, gentle interpretation. Only complaint about Ives is that his voice is rather thin, and he has trouble reaching the balconies and rear of the theatre.

The show is fresh and cast, chorus and dancers are eager and experienced. Ellen McCown, as Rumson's daughter, has charm and grace; her voice is true and clear. Edward Chappel is a handsome Julio and he knows how to deliver a song, being also handsomely equipped in the vocal department.

Secondary roles are excellently cast and include Josh Wheeler, Janet Brooke and Grace Olsen as the Mormon and his wives. Their trio is a sock performance.

The male chorus of miners is outstanding, offering a rich collection of voices which can boom its songs into every corner of the house. Agnes de Mille has re-created some of the lustiest, sexy dances seen in a long time. They are executed with vigor and great style, with outstanding jobs turned in by Peter Deign, Elizabeth Logue, Ilona Murai and Guy Stambaugh.

The fast-moving, many-scened production has been given pointed, meaningful direction by Daniel Mann. Dean.

Don Juan in Hell

(CURRAN, FRISCO)

San Francisco, Sept. 30.

There is more of the playwright and less of the actor in this Bernard Shaw epic since replacement of Charles Laughton by Vincent Price, and it's an even shake insofar as audience reaction is concerned. Laughton's interpretation of "The Devil" had a measure more entertainment value, with his special brand of verbal seasoning and mugging giving the performance a unique zest, but Price's handling of the chore permits Shaw's material to come through less impaired and embellished, with result that it carries a sharper impact.

Smoothly holding up his end of the quartet, consisting of Charles Boyer, Cedric Hardwicke, Agnes Moorehead and himself, Price dovetails with the others in pacing, voice and appearance.

OBITUARIES

ALFRED NEUMANN

Alfred Neumann, 56, novelist-playwright, died Oct. 3 in Lugano, Switzerland.

Neumann, who was born in Germany, had been working in Italy when Hitler came to power and seized all of his property in Germany because he was of Jewish origin. He remained in Italy until 1938 when the Mussolini government published its version of the race laws, whereupon Neumann moved to France. He later arrived in the U. S. and stayed to become an American citizen.

Among Neumann's works are "King Haber" and "The Devil" (novels) and a play, "The Patriot." "The Patriot" was produced in some 500 theatres in Europe and the U. S. It was adapted for the screen in 1928 under the title of "The Mad Czar" and starred Emil Jannings. It received another screen treatment in 1941, starring Harry Bauer as "The Mad Emperor." Neumann dramatized Leo Tolstoi's "War and Peace."

Neumann was married twice, first to a Swiss dancer whom he divorced and then to the adopted daughter of George Muller, head of the German publishing house which brought out his first book of verse.

BILLY (SCRATCH) WALLACE

William E. Wallace, 72, known professionally as Billy "Scratch" Wallace, died Sept. 30 in Philadelphia.

Throughout his 55-year career in show biz, Wallace played the role of a tramp comic, one of the generation of burlesque performers that produced Bobby Clark, Bert Lahr, Abbott & Costello, Rags Ragland, et al.

He acquired the nickname "Scratch" playing with George Carroll at Philly's old Gaiety Theatre, before the start of World War I, when the team went in as a substitute for Clark & McCullough.

A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Wallace played virtually every burley house in the country. His wife and a stepson survive.

GRACE GOLDBERG

Grace Goldberg (Mrs. Frank C. Barber), longtime assistant to Jacob Wilk, former Warner Bros. story editor, died Sept. 26 in New York. She had been associated with Wilk for 20 years.

Miss Goldberg began her career as a script girl at the Paramount Studios, Astoria, L. I. She subsequently became assistant to story editor Julian Johnson and went to Hollywood for Par in the same capacity. She later returned to New York and worked for Pathe until a fire destroyed the studios in December, 1929. She joined Wilk soon after.

Her husband, who survives, is in the copyright department of Music Publishers Holding Corp., Warners' music firms.

HARRY H. (HAM) BEALL

Harry Hammond (Ham) Beall, 63, publicist, died of a heart attack Oct. 2 at his Los Angeles home. A former newspaperman, he entered public relations 25 years ago and for a long time was associated with the late Sid Grauman's theatrical enterprises. He was credited with originating the practice of imprinting thespian footsteps in the forecourt of the Chinese Theatre.

Beall at one time handled publicity for Mickey Mouse cartoons and was one of the founders of the Wampas, defunct publicity men's organization.

LILY MORRIS

Lily Morris, 68, British vaude comedienne, died Oct. 3 in London. She was third British music-hall star to die in the last two months (Ella Shields, Aug. 5, and Vesta Tilley, Sept. 16).

Miss Morris toured the circuits in Britain and the U. S. She played the Palace Theatre, N. Y., in 1928. Retiring in 1940, she returned eight years later to join a company of oldtimers in a production tagged "Thanks For The Memories."

JESS WOLF

Jess Wolf, 50, technician for 20th-Fox, died in Tuscumbia, Mo., Sept. 26 from injuries suffered the day before when dynamite used in a scene in the filming of the Victor Mature starrer, "Baptism of Fire," exploded.

The accident occurred in the Osage River in the Ozarks while Wolf was laying mines from a rowboat. A soldier and a carpenter suffered slight injuries.

JACKIE TEETERS

Jacqueline (Jackie) Teeters, 40, high pole artist, fell 137 feet to her death Sept. 29 while preparing for her act at the Scioto Breeze Outdoor Theatre, Lucasville, O. She had been scheduled for a week of nightly shows at the drive-in and was making a final test of her apparatus when the accident occurred. Roy Lewis, manager of the ozoner, was the only witness.

Burial was in Martinsville, Ind.

Morals Charges Key To Chaplin Situation

Washington, Oct. 7.

Morals charges against Charles Chaplin are the reason he must prove his right to reenter this country as an alien, Attorney General James P. McGranery told newsmen last week. McGranery described the comic as an "unsavory character," the same category in which he grouped about 100 men, mostly mobsters, whom he said the Justice Department intends to deport.

"This country's newspapers," he said, "have said enough about Chaplin on the morals score." He added that if the actor makes out a good case for himself he will be permitted back to the U. S. He said Chaplin was "a menace to womanhood."

Command Film Show Not Inviting H'wood Stars On Long Trek to London

London, Sept. 30.

For the first time since the Royal Command film performances began in 1946, no special invitations are to be extended this year for stars to make the long journey from Hollywood. Instead, it is intended that the American contingent should be made up of artists currently working in London either in Anglo-American films or on the West End stage.

In previous years, there has always been a substantial contingent from the U.S. film capital, with an array of top names. It is felt on this occasion, however, that there are a sufficient number of prominent players currently available in Britain to represent adequately the American film industry.

In other ways, this year's gala, which is being held at the Empire, Leicester Square Oct. 27, will adhere to the standard formula, with the selected film being followed by a stage presentation featuring British and American stars. Metro's "Because You're Mine" already has copped the royal honor.

his medicos. Comedian has taped six shows in advance on his weekly radio show for NBC, however, so the web is not worried about filling in on his radio time.

Cantor collapsed from exhaustion several hours after completing his first show of the season for Colgate Sept. 28, and was forced to cancel a scheduled fund-raising tour for Israeli bonds and to promote Red Cross blood donations. NBC hasn't yet decided who will sub for him if he is not permitted to do his next Colgate TV show.

Get-Well Dinner For Cantor

Detroit, Oct. 7.

The Bonds for Israel dinner, which Eddie Cantor was to have sparked Monday (6), was held as a get-well party for the comedian, who is convalescing in a Los Angeles hospital after a mild heart attack.

Cantor spoke by telephone to the diners. Admission was an advance purchase of a $500 or larger bond. Pinch-hitting for Cantor were Edward G. Robinson and Sam Levenson. Dinner was held at the Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel.

British-produced "The Story of Robin Hood," in Burt Lancaster's starrer, "His Majesty O'Keefe." British actress merely passed through Hollywood en route from London to the Fijis, but already studios are observing her closely as a result of her work in "Robin Hood."

Irving Allen, indie producing "The Red Beret" for Columbia in England, will shortly select another British thesp to appear opposite Alan Ladd in this film. Understood that the producer is trying to find an unknown actress for part, with a possible view to bringing her back here under contract.

During the past 18 months, Metro came through with two winners, actresses recruited abroad during filming of pictures there. Leslie Caron, discovered in Paris, made her mark in "An American in Paris." Pier Angeli, the other discovery, stepped from studio's "Teresa," lensed mostly in Italy, into prominence.

Like Old Times

ma Talmadge, Mabel Normand, the young Chaplin. What they would have done to a party like this. They'd have given it life. Because this didn't have it. There was no sparkle, no spontaneity. Sure a girl fell into the fish pond—an unknown TV actress, Roweena McNamara—but it was all staged. Joan Diener, another TV performer, took off her shoes and lifted up her skirts to cool off in the pool. But that was a fake, too. There were no fights, no "incidents," just everyone having their pictures taken and screaming above the blare of the bands.

Crashers A-Plenty

Anyone could have crashed this party—and about 200 did. Some of the guests called their relatives and told them to come on over, when no one asked to see the invitation cards after driving into the huge tent covering the entrance to Miss Davies' 25-room mansion on Beverly Drive. Some of the crashers just walked in from the street. And when Charlie Morrison, Johnnie Ray's father-in-law and the organizer of the soiree, approached a suspicious dame and said, "Looking for anyone?," she snapped, "I sure am, my husband, haven't seen him since five this afternoon." The police hustled out a dozen, but they kept coming till 4 a.m. when the party wilted into a natural demise.

When I arrived at eight—the card said come at 7:30—the cars stretched half a mile, bumper to bumper, fore and aft, on the winding driveway from the street. The newlywed Rays were receiving at the near end of the 60-foot bar (there were two others—smaller). The host and hostess didn't appear for another hour, and instead of the black velvet and lace dress as advertised, Marion wore a white Don Loper gown. "Her weight varies from day to day and today she couldn't get into the black dress," Don, the designer, explained. The famous diamonds and rubies blazed on her neck and arms, and with her new short haircut, she really and truly "never looked lovelier." She stood in the main hall for an hour posing with everyone—the Rays, the Jack Bennys, Danny Kayes, Gary Coopers, Evie and Van Johnson, Joan Crawford with Nick Ray, Barbara Stanwyck with Bundy Solt, Kathryn Grayson with Dick Gully, Esther Williams, with Ben Gage, Lana, Fernando, Ava — Judy and Sid — you name the star—Marion had 'em.

Marion's Mate

Then she disappeared up the roped off stairs and we didn't see her for a couple of hours. But you couldn't miss her mate, Capt. Horace Brown. He knew maybe 10 people at the beginning of his party. But he circulates all evening introducing himself, "My name's Capt. Brown, what's yours?". The Captain has a sly sense of humor and he substituted glasses with phony bottoms on several of the rose bedecked tables.

The flowers, red roses, gardenia cakes with orchid icing, set Miss Davies back $2,400. The final accounting for the vittles will take a little time because Morrison, who owns the Mocambo, bought the meats and the chickens, the spaghetti, et al, and had cooked it up by an ex-chef from the Bel Air Hotel.

All the valuables in the mansion were locked away before the party and nothing was stolen except four small plaster statues that a guest walked off with under his coat. Some of the marble statues have burns on their derrieres where smokers stubbed out cigarets. And nothing was lost, except one little ermine jacket.

Louella was there, although a radio reporter told his audience the next day she couldn't attend "because of a cold."

There was supposed to be a show, but if there was I didn't see or hear it. But it was hard to hear anything in such a racket. Or to see everything in the five big rooms, the main hall, and the two tents where the clambake ran riot.

And at 10 the next morning, or rather the same day, a lone reporter went back to the party, to see what bodies, if any, were still celebrating. And in the debris of balloons, wilted flowers, paper napkins, stale food and cigaret butts, one candle was still alight, spluttering close to the end of its wick.

Sahara, Vegas' $5,500,000 Desert Song, Now Officially No. 6 on Rue de La Pay

By BILL WILLARD

Las Vegas, Oct. 8.

Newest of Las Vegas' plush resort hotels — the Sahara — flung open its glittering portals to pushing, elbowing revelers last Tuesday (7). Intent upon grabbing tables for initial view of the Congo Room, where the elastic-limbed Ray Bolger, and lilting chantoosie Lisa Kirk were toplined and extra-added, respectively, mobs tore down chains and rope to obtain their objective. No. 6 of the growing string of multi-million-dollar spas along the Strip (Sahara's approximate cost, $5,500,000), the spanking new establishment got off to a roaring start with the usual hoopla surrounding such occasions. The 600 seat theatre-restaurant was jampacked and hundreds turned away when both early and late shows were publicized as preems. Reservation board in maitre d' Ralph's office is completely filled for two frames and beyond. On the hotel side, not one room can be grabbed for several weeks—excepting by "special" guests in the upper moola bracket.

In spite of the surge, hullaballoo and intense excitement sparked by such an event; both Bolger and Miss Kirk had their troubles. A faulty sound system combined with peculiar acoustical qualities in the huge rectangular room made listening a chore. Miss Kirk came off second best; making a valiant stand against heart-breaking conditions. Bolger, not having to depend entirely upon projection of vocalistics, went about his terpsi-

Ike Tops Adlai In 1st AM-TV Nielsen Check For Early September

First returns in Nielsen ratings for the political candidates give the nod in audience draw to the GOP's Gen. Eisenhower over the Democrats' Gov. Stevenson. Ike's 5.7 rating over NBC radio on Sept. 4 put him in Nielsen's Top 10—in sixth place.

Ike got the bigger ratings during the first 10 days of September, according to Nielsen statisticians. Of course, opposition on competing stations may affect the candidates' pull, but the competition is figured at roughly equal for these specific political stanzas.

Rundown in tele follows: Eisenhower, Sept. 4, 60 NBC stations, 29.4 rating, 5,320,000 homes; Stevenson, Sept. 1, daytime, 53 CBS stations, 8.4, 1,382,000 homes; Stevenson, Sept. 5, 49 ABC stations, 18.2, 2,956,000 homes; and Stevenson, Sept. 9, 37 CBS stations, 19.9, 2,996,000 homes.

Radio returns were: Ike, Sept. 4, NBC, 5.7, 2,440,000 homes; Ike, Sept. 6, daytime, NBC-ABC, 3.0, 1,284,000 homes; Adlai, Sept. 5, ABC, 2.9, 1,241,000 homes; Adlai, Sept. 6, NBC, 3.1, 1,327,000 homes.

Kaye Tops Frisco Quake; Tremors? That's the B.O.

San Francisco, Oct. 14.

Danny Kaye quieted a capacity Sunday (12) matinee crowd at the Curran Theatre here after a sharp quake shook the house. He brought back a considerable number, who had started to rush out of the theatre, by sitting on the stage apron and gagging, "Don't be disturbed, it was just a cable-car passing." He then recounted his experiences in Japan during an earthquake.

Show went on without loss of a customer in this tremor-conscious town.

The Kaye show opened last week (6) to what amounted to a second first-night, with audience dressed as if they were attending a repeat Frisco Opera preem. The house was loaded with biggies.

TV's Exhausted Adaptable Stuff, Needs Originals

Although just entering its sixth or seventh year of network programming, television has probably already exhausted the number of properties suitable for adaptation into hour-long dramatic shows. That's the opinion of Thomas W. Phipps, one of the most active of TV's drama writers, who pointed out that he's been concentrating almost exclusively on original stories for the last year or so.

Phipps, who has had produced about 40 originals or adaptations during the last three years, finds the lack of adaptation assignments all to his liking. He said that it's always much easier to script an original story, since it's possible to remove the obstacles which usually crop up to confuse an adaptor. In some adaptations, he said, it's necessary in order to carry the story to have the same actor appear in different costumes in back-to-back scenes, whereas in an original the author can eliminate any such obstacle at the start.

In addition, Phipps said, the fact that every hour-long video show must have three curtains presents difficulties when adapting a property. In too many stories, he noted, the two big dramatic events might come in the middle of the second act and the adaptor is then forced to do almost a complete rewrite job to get his three curtains. But most important, according to Phipps, is the fact that a writer always retains ownership of an original play,

CONCERNED OVER DISK-WEB LINKS

By ABEL GREEN

"Songwriters' problems, like the proverbial death and taxes, are always with us," says one ASCAP name songsmith," but they've never been so grave as now. As a matter of fact, it's hurting the music publisher as much, and perhaps more."

This is the crux of a major industry problem facing the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers in its inability to achieve the pop song hits as has been its time-honored custom. The startling achievements of Broadcast Music, Inc. affiliates in gaining five of the seven on last week's Lucky Strike "Hit Parade," and the same ratio this past weekend, are discomforting to ASCAP.

Of the country's 10 top pop hits, three of the first five are BMI tunes and five among the 10 are from BMI publishers and writers.

Responsible ASCAP writers admit they are not sure whether any "conspiracy," or any combination of forces, accidental or realistic, exists or can be proved. All they know is that Columbia and RCA Victor are affiliated with the two major networks—CBS and NBC—and that BMI, by the very nature of its corporate name, is a radio and TV stations-controlled enterprise.

It is no secret that BMI was founded 12 years ago by the radio industry for the express purpose of offsetting ASCAP's then so-called "monopoly." on pop song

See $14,000,000 In '52 for ASCAP As Alltime High

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Revenues of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers are seen virtually certain to come near $14,000,000 this year for the Society's alltime high. ASCAP's take has hit about $9,000,000 for the first eight months of 1952 and revenues during the remaining four months of the year are expected to be between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

Exact financial status of ASCAP will be given today (Wed.) at its Coast semi-annual meeting, being held at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, Beverly Hills. ASCAP prexy Otto A. Harbach, comptroller George Hoffman and Irving Caesar, exec board member, will address the meeting.

Meet will precede the regular N. Y. membership parley by one month. Some 600 members of ASCAP, or about one-fifth of the total writers' roster, live in the Hollywood-Beverly Hills area.

Ask Eden to Intervene With U.S. for Chaplin

London, Oct. 14.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden will be asked by W. T. Proctor, Labor M. P., in the House of Commons tomorrow (Wed.) to make representations to the U. S. Government for Charlie Chaplin's readmission to America. Proctor is requesting Eden's intervention because of the actor's British citizenship.

U. S. Department of Justice has indicated that Chaplin may not be granted re-entry because of moral and political reasons. Accompanied by his family, he arrived here several weeks ago on what he described as a European vacation.

Dallas Fair Boffo; M&L's 250G B.O., 8 'Ice Cycles' SRO

Dallas, Oct. 14.

State Fair of Texas, midway in its 16-day run, Oct. 4-19, through Saturday (11) was headed for a record-breaking attendance. A king-sized crowd of 263,700 roamed the 187-acre fair-grounds Saturday to rack up a halftime attendance total of 1,176,590, topping last year's 1,149,070 for the first eight days.

Big weekend lure was the annual Texas U.-Oklahoma U. football game, with 75,500 jamming the fairgrounds' Cotton Bowl.

Overflow crowd swelled the b.o. at the expo shows, with the auditorium's "Martin & Lewis Revue" getting five sellout houses (4,283 capacity) Friday through Sunday (10-12). M&L attendance was 44,500 for the first 14 shows through Sunday night. No gross had been figured, but the M&L package was running even in attendance with the smash '51 legiter, "Guys and Dolls," which grossed $267,800.

Charles R. Meeker, Jr., auditorium manager, said the M&L show is grossing better than any of the fair's previous variety shows and he anticipates a $250,000 pull for the 24 performances through Sunday (19).

"Ice Cycles of 1953," in the Ice Arena for 23 shows, had drawn 70,000 customers for 14 performances through Sunday night, including eight sellouts in the 5,700-seat arena. Attendance already is ahead of last year's 100,000.

CBS and NBC Electric TV Robots To Spot Election Night Trends

Television is zooming into the realm of science fiction to predict election returns for viewers Nov. 4, via deals set this week for the use of all-electronic "brains" which will do virtually everything but make the acceptance speech for the winning candidate. Both CBS-TV and NBC-TV will have such a computing marvel in operation, and the feats that web execs are predicting for the "brains"—all of which have already been proved possible—rival some of the most imaginative scientifiction stories.

CBS-TV, for example, will utilize Remington-Rand's Univac machine, described as the biggest and fastest computer in the world. Unit, which is in the R-R plant in Philadelphia, can perform up to 2,000 addition or subtraction problems per second and make computations at the rate of 3,000 per second. With Univac capable of retaining 1,500,000 units of information (on specially-processed mercury tape), CBS has been feeding the brain statistics on every Presidential election since 1936, including an hour-by-hour report on returns covering each city, county and state in the country.

On the basis of this information, CBS will feed the brain new statistics hour by hour Nov. 4 on how each area in the country is voting, just as results come in. Then the brain instantaneously will be able to make comparisons and so spot possible trends as the evening progresses. According to CBS-TV news and special events chief Sig Mickelson, Univac will be able to

Legit Directors Now 60% Majority as Met Opera Preps Its 68th Season

With Rudolf Bing securely in the saddle in his third season as general manager of the Met Opera, new '52-'53 season roster issued last weekend showed fewer surprises, naturally, than the last two years. But Bing's streamlining motif still stands out as the Met preps bow of its 68th season Nov. 10.

Most interesting shift in emphasis has been the steady increase of stage directors brought in from outside fields, mainly legit. Where two "outsiders" were used in Bing's first season (Margaret Webster and Garson Kanin), and four last year (Alfred Lunt, Tyrone Guthrie, Miss Webster and Kanin), six of the 10 directors this season are from outside opera. In addition to the four "outsiders" from last season, Bing has borrowed Joseph Mankiewicz from films to stage the new Howard Dietz English version of Puccini's "Boheme," and George Balanchine from ballet to direct the U. S. premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress."

Nine new singers are joining the Met, in Sigurd Bjoerling, Hilde

Josy Baker's 'Racial Discrimination' Pitch in B.A. Where It Doesn't Exist

Buenos Aires, Oct. 7.

Josephine Baker is in Buenos Aires once again, to open at the Gran Opera film theatre (Lococo Circuit) Oct. 8. This is a repeat visit for the dusky chanteuse who is a local favorite.

The Opera performances will follow exhibition of the Universal film "Louisa," and a uniform price of $1 has been fixed for admission. This is well below the scale for this type of attraction over the past few years, such as when Maurice Chevalier was here two years ago, and seats were scaled at $8. However, the Opera management is out to attract a different type of audience, perhaps less select but more numerous. The current financial recession also has affected all show biz.

Miss Baker paid the customary courtesy visit on entertainment "czar" Raul Apold at his Press Ministry headquarters, and notified the Labour Federation (CGT) that she would visit its headquarters to deposit a wreath on the altar erected there to Eva Peron's memory, as well as touring the Eva Peron Foundation hospices and asylums. She has also asked to be allowed to visit President Peron.

(Since this mailed news dispatch, the U. S. press reacted unfavorably to Miss Baker's criticisms of this country; as detailed below.)

No 'Discrimination' Here

On arrival, Miss Baker announced that, apart from her personal appearances, she would campaign against "racial discrimination," but in this respect there is little she can do here, as this is one problem that is non-existent (as far as a color ban is concerned): in fact,

Only Six H'wood Names On 1st List of Stars For Royal Film Show

London, Oct. 14.

Only six Hollywood names appear on the first list of stars who are participating in the stageshow which follows the royal film gala Oct. 27. The American artists, all of whom will be in Britain at the time, are Yvonne de Carlo, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.; Yolande Donlan, Rock Hudson; Gene Kelly and Evelyn Keyes. Charles Chaplin is to attend the royal screening but it is unlikely that he will participate in the stage production.

The big British contingent includes Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Richard Todd, John Mills, Celia Johnson, Trevor Howard, Joan Greenwood and Anne Crawford.

For the first time since the inception of the command film performances in 1946 no Hollywood stars are being brought over especially for the occasion. The U. S. pix industry will be represented by stars either working or vacationing in London at the time.

Ken Murray's Cafe Bow

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Ken Murray makes his nitery debut Oct. 21 at the new Sahara, Las Vegas, following Ray Bolger who opened the hostelry last week.

Murray, heretofore in vaude, films, legit and television, is set for a fortnight in his cafe bow.

Martini Dept.

Apparently the agency boys are getting sensitive these days.

New restaurant, called the Huckster, is opening soon smack in the middle of the ad agency sector—47th St. and Madison Ave., N. Y. For weeks signs on the construction work have heralded the "due soon" opening.

Last week observers were surprised, to note black paint smeared across "Huckster," with the name changed to Ad Lib Restaurant.

Bolton's 'Love Letter To Red-Haired Actress'; Can't Cover Wife's Play

Whitney Bolton, drama critic of the Morning Telegraph and drama columnist for the McNaught Syndicate, devoted his "Looking Sideways" pillar last Wednesday (8) to a tribute to his wife, Nancy Coleman, who was opening that night in a revival of "The Sacred Flame," at the President, N. Y.

Subheaded, "Love letter to a red-haired actress," the piece read in part: "So your play is opening tonight. I know how you feel. If someone were to crack open a peanut shell within 10 yards of your hearing, you would jump right out of your shoes.

"I never realized in all the years of going to First Nights how genuinely wrenching and overwhelming are the last hours before curtain time. Other players used to tell me that it either was a small death all by itself or almost certainly something like what a condemned man must feel in the last hours before dawn.

"We have been together through nine plays now and I have been on the home grounds when you went through the time between noon and that moment when the stage manager called, 'Places, please,' and out of the corner of your eye you could see the glow of the footlights under the curtain's bottom edge. You could not run or cry or scream or tear at your clothes. You could only stand there and, suddenly and inevitably, see that bottom edge rise from the stage floor and reveal you to your task.

"There is nothing for you to worry about. You were ready a week ago. It may be that, again, 'The Sacred Flame' will not be a success. I don't know. No one knows. But I hope it is, because it deserves to be. It will now have had a loving, respecting performance twice. That much I can say for you.

"But I can't cover this play. There are no written rules about such things, but I don't believe a critic should review any play in which his wife is a principal. Someone else will write the review and I will have no word to say to him because that would also be wrong. But if devotion and admiration and a most tremendous confidence in you are of any value to you, you have them. They are given to you freely to keep and use in whatever ways they are of use.

"Good luck."

It Ain't Like Istanbul, But Ankara Still Has Its Share of Cafe Life

By COL. BARNEY OLDFIELD

Ankara, Sept. 25.

In this part of the world the last gasp of the Farouk drama is being played out.

Any femme who has become proficient in the muscular movement of the mid-section is billed in the niteries as the one who pried Farouk loose from his palace and is the biggest shake since the walls of Jericho rumbled and rubbled.

It is also traditional that any femme booked in a show comes on deck after numbers to dance with all comers, and it's a signal for champagne cork-popping wherever seated as shills for the house.

Ankara, Turkey's political capital, has not yet grown from Ataturk's nurturing in the early '20s to a point where it has overtaken the quantity and quality of nightlife available in much older, much more romantic, and much more cosmopolitan Istanbul. Ankara gets along, winter and summer, with two main after-dark spots, Bomonti's and Gar Gazinosunda. The shows are a tossup. It is usual to have a Viennese line, a German

U.S. Cites 'Unfriendly' Ship for Deportation

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.

Reuben Ship, radio writer and "unfriendly" witness before the House Un-American Activities Committee, was released in $5,000 bail in deportation proceedings under the McCarran Act. He came here from Canada in 1944 but never took out U. S. citizenship papers.

Ship refused to answer questions about possible connection with the Communist party. He wrote "The Life of Riley" for seven years and was recently nominated as a candidate for the western region council of the Radio Writers Guild.

Ed G. Robinson, Levenson Help Raise 200G for Israel

Cleveland, Oct. 14.

Edward G. Robinson and Sam Levenson as guest-stars, pinch-hitting for ill Eddie Cantor, helped the local State of Israel bond campaign-dinner raise about $200,000 in sales and pledges here last week.

More than 700 dinner guests and 200 gallery standees packed Hotel Statler's grand ballroom for the event in which Ben D. Zevin, prez of World Publishing Co., was chairman. By the time national chairman Sam Rothberg of Peoria, Ill., finished reading off names of guests and exhorting them to buy, nearly $180,000 had been pledged.

Both Zevin and Thomas A. Burke, mayor of Cleveland, paid tribute to Cantor in speeches. Bill Randle, chairman of Cleveland show biz committee, presented scrolls to Robinson and Levenson for their contributions to the Israel cause.

$90 Top for Coronation Ducats; Deadline Nov. 10

London, Oct. 14.

The British Travel and Holiday Assn. has set up a special department to handle ticket allocations for the Coronation. It will have dealings, however, only with bona fide travel agents and not with private firms or companies.

Seats which it will have for distribution will be in government stands and will range in price from $30 to $90. Applications for these must be made before Nov. 10. Individual ticket agencies will offer, in addition, seats on the Coronation route.

Richman's London Impact

London, Oct. 14.

Harry Richman, in his first London engagement in 15 years, made a powerful nostalgic impact at his Cafe de Paris preem last night (Mon.).

Singer was on for 50 minutes, with overlong gab between numbers.

Flu Floors Hutton 1 Day At Palladium; Pianist Banned by Tooter Union

London, Oct. 14.

Betty Hutton was out of the Palladium show last night (Mon.) with flu. She was replaced by Frankie Laine, who appeared there recently, and will resume tonight (Tues.).

Because of objections by the Musician's Union, Miss Hutton's accompanist, Dudley Brooks, had to bow out of her Palladium act after the first week. He was allowed, however, to sit in the orchestra pit alongside the theatre's regular pianist.

Although it is common practice for American artists at the Palladium to have their own accompanists, objection was taken on this occasion because Brooks was not on the stage with Miss Hutton but in the pit. When the accompanist is on stage, he is regarded as part of the act. Sitting with the orchestra, he becomes just another musician—and the bar goes up.

RKO REVAMP AHEAD OF SKED

Slim B'way Legit Crop for Filming But Prospects Better Than Last Year

Still concerned over the pressing shortage of story material, Hollywood is ogling the new Broadway season with great interest but without too much hope.

Legit stage has offered slim pickings for the filmeries over the past few years. Big complaint was that playwrights asked outlandish prices which economy-minded studios—with certain exceptions—were both unable and unwilling to meet. Quality of the legit material also hasn't been considered high.

Although prospects of the current season still are somewhat nebulous, homeoffice play departments in New York are taking a brighter view of it than last year and admit interest in a number of upcoming productions.

Prices also have shown a tendency to come down, with only the big hit musicals fetching the six-figure checks. Active film company participation in new plays is practically non-existent.

Nevertheless, individual film money is backing many of the new plays. It has no bearing on picture rights, however, and merely assures the investor of his normal cut if the production makes the boxoffice grade.

Thus 20th-Fox and Metro executives are known to be interested financially in the upcoming "The Seven-Year Itch," a romantic comedy. It so happens that the play is also considered a likely prospect for screen adaptation.

Other Plays Eyed

Other plays being eyed by Hollywood include "In Any Language," a comedy about a U. S. film actress in Rome; "Time of the Cuckoo," a comedy romance; "Bernardine," a comedy of adolescence; "Dial 'M' for Murder," for which Sir Alexander Korda holds the pic rights; Terence Rattigan's "The Deep Blue Sea," which was a hit in London; "The Gypsies Wore High Hats," set in New York at the turn of the century, and "Josephine," an

Dr. Goldsmith's RKO Survey on Big-Screen Theatre Television

RKO Theatres is undertaking a detailed study of television's effect on the boxoffice and how all phases of TV, including big-screen theatre video, can best aid exhibition. To that end, the circuit has signed with Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, films and TV engineer, to act as a consultant on the various problems involved.

According to circuit prexy Sol A. Schwartz, Dr. Goldsmith will study the overall situation to determine whether it would be wise at this time to install more theatre TV units in its houses, whether one big-screen unit is superior to another, etc. Goldsmith was formerly an RCA veepee and still serves as a consultant to that company.

PIC DIVIDENDS BEHIND $3,800,000 LAST YEAR

Washington, Oct. 14.

Film industry paid out $19,815,000 in dividends during the first nine months of this year. Figure ran about $3,800,000 behind the $23,619,000 for the same period of 1951.

September registered a big drop. This year, the stockholders received only $2,371,000 as against $4,545,000 for the same month last year. Two companies are responsible for the month's decline. Loew's September dividend totaled $1,029,000, $900,000 shy of last year's figure. 20th-Fox, which disbursed $1,384,000 to its stockholders in September, 1951, made no payment at all last month, holding up the seasonal dividend until October.

Publicly reported dividends in any industry come to about 60 or 65% of all dividends actually issued in the industry.

Distinction

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Nat Holt wants the world to know that his forthcoming Paramount picture, "Adobe Walls," is not a "western."

It will be filmed on location in Texas, not far from the Mexican border, he explains, and is therefore a "south-western."

U.S. Majors Play Waiting Game On French Pact Talks

Although Motion Picture Export Assn. prez Eric Johnston treks to Paris this week, the American film industry is standing pat in its attitude of refusing to seek out French government officials for renegotiation of a film and monetary agreement. U. S. companies, including members of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, are insisting that the French come to them with new proposals for a deal.

It's said that Johnston's trip mainly is for an on-the-spot investigation of the overall French situation as pertaining to the U. S. distribs, including day-to-day business affairs, new ceilings on admission prices, etc. However, it's regarded likely that since he will be in Paris, French government reps will call on him to discuss the possibilities of reopening negotiations. If actual negotiations are resumed Ellis Arnall, SIMPP prexy, will go to Paris to join in the huddles.

Arnall, incidentally, is insistent that the U. S. State Department assume a key role in the talks with the French. SIMPP head believes that since foreign government officers handle negotiations in behalf of their respective film industries, the U. S. side similarly should be represented on the governmental level.

Stalemate developed when the French reneged on an originally accepted proposal whereby the U. S. companies would agree to

Corwin Meeting With RKO Producers to Map Production Schedule

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

RKO's new studio chief, Sherrill Corwin, expected to initiate tentative production plans in talks with various RKO producers during the next week. He meets with Edmund Grainger early next week to lay out a program of pix.

Scheduled meeting with Jerry Wald was postponed to tomorrow (Wed.) because Wald's attorney, David Tannenbaum, was recently elected mayor of Beverly Hills and had to attend a conclave of the Ass'n of California Mayors in San Diego.

Anti-Red Documentary Shown to Govt. by Schary

Dore Schary, Metro production chief, returns to New York today (Wed.) after a two-day Washington visit during which he screened "The Hoaxters," 52-minute documentary exposing Communist activities, for Government and MPAA officials. Made up of newsreels shots and special clips obtained from the Government, it has top Metro stars doing the narration.

Also shown to industry and Government brass by Schary was "Battle Circus," Metro war film starring Humphrey Bogart, June Allyson and Keenan Wynn.

SOME EXECS WAIVE SALARIES

The job on hand for RKO is to remove the personnel deadwood and otherwise reduce operating costs, plus swinging into a fullscale production program — that's the way board chairman Arnold Grant sizes it up. And, he says, the new group in control "wants the business to pay for itself in two years."

"That we mean business on cutting overhead is attested, perhaps only in part, to the fact that the president, Ralph Stolkin, doesn't draw a salary," Grant adds. "Sherrill Corwin, board rep at the studio; A. L. Koolish and Bill Gorman (members of the Stolkin syndicate) do not either. Edward (Buzz) Burke also is not on salary now but when he works into the homeoffice operation, as he plans to do, he will be paid commensurate with his value. In Sidney Korshak, a very busy and very able Chicago attorney, we have a steal at $15,000 a year. He's not on the board. The other two board members are Tubby (Gordon E.) Youngman and William Clark, our studio attorney and treasurer respectively."

As for the corporate economics, Grant explained: "We have a $1,000,000 monthly nut between

COMPO Flirting Depinet As Prexy

Key reps of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations will huddle with Ned E. Depinet at a New York meeting tomorrow (Thurs.) to sound out the former RKO prez on his disposition to taking over the COMPO helm as its chief executive.

Depinet, as COMPO's first president, along with exec v.p. Arthur Mayer and special counsel Robert Coyne, is conceded on all sides to have been instrumental in keeping COMPO together during its tough early stages of development. As a consequence, there's considerable

Manner of RKO Reorg Eases Company Fears of Quick-Profit Liquidation

Clean sweep of the RKO management and installation of new execs, several of them from within the ranks, has done much in the way of bolstering the morale of lower echelon RKO-ites and convincing the trade that the new owners are bent only on building up the company. The reorganization had the immediate effect of dispelling fear that some form of quick stock deal or liquidation of assets was in the offing.

Thorough-going realignment of personnel, the fact that Arnold Picker exited an important profit-sharing deal at United Artists to take the exec v.p.'s spot at RKO, and Arnold Grant's departure from his active law practice to take the helm as board chairman, all reflect that the Grant-prexy Ralph Stolkin pards are out to make of RKO a going concern.

Assurances of an intended build-up relate only to the distribution end of the corporation, observers note. Awaited now is a specifically mapped course on production and studio operation, and decisions on possible disposal of residuals in released pix.

Charles Boasberg as the new general sales manager and Walter Branson, assistant general sales manager, both upped from division managerial posts, have been given

Depinet and RKO

RKO's new board chairman, Arnold Grant, has assured deposed RKO president Ned E. Depinet, who has an office and secretary on the 14th floor (executive) floor of the RKO homeoffice, that he would consult with him often and freely in the latter's new post as consultant with the company.

Depinet's drawing account brings him $18,000 a year, comparable to his compensation when he reaches the 65 retirement age in about three years.

Wald-RKO Talks Focusing on His Last Pic—So Far

With reference to Jerry Wald's future with RKO, as production topper or otherwise, Arnold Grant, RKO's new board chairman, states that there is an area for argument as to whether or not Wald is the "free agent" he expects to become Oct. 31 when his RKO contract expires. This was under the old Howard Hughes setup.

Grant thinks "Wald is obligated to complete 'Size 12'," which differs from Wald's proffer to "start" it and assist anybody else to complete it. Comes Nov. 1, Wald says he is supposed to go on a two-month paid vacation.

Wald has been huddling with Greg Bautzer, of the new management's law firm and also a board member. Another meeting is slated for today (Wed.) in Hollywood, when David Tannenbaum, attorney for Wald, returns from a San Diego mayors' convention. When Tannenbaum was in New York last week, he only casually talked with the RKO homeoffice, being concerned more with his wife's pos-

Holiday Weekend Tilts Trade; 'Ivanhoe' Champ 3d Wk. in Row; 'Quiet' 2d, 'Fatima,' 'Pirate' Next

Hefty boost from the Columbus Day holiday weekend, particularly along eastern seaboard, is helping biz in numerous key cities this stanza. Persistent strength of recent boxoffice winners also is contributing to upswing. Result is that the top five pix this session will exceed $1,000,000 in gross.

"Ivanhoe" (M-G), which was No. 1 for previous two weeks, again is leader, and by biggest total of any b.o. champ in many months. Pic is grossing $460,000 in key first-runs covered by VARIETY.

"Quiet Man" (Rep) again is second for third week in row after being in No. 1 slot four weeks ago. "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) will wind up third for second stanza in succession.

"Crimson Pirate," another WB release, is finishing fourth as a week ago. "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) is managing to take fifth as compared with seventh last week. "One Minute To Zero" (RKO) is sixth. "Monkey Business" (20th), inclined to be spotty, will take seventh money.

"Just For You" (Par) is slipping to eighth while "Sudden Fear" (RKO), long among the leaders, rounds out the Big Nine list. "Big Sky," also from RKO, and "Merry Widow" (M-G), previously a leader, are the runner-up pix in that sequence.

Lineup of new fare is one of biggest in weeks. Intense interest centers on initial playdate of "The Thief" (UA), socko on first week in Philly. Showing is rated unusually big since it reopened the Aldine there. "Because You're Mine" (M-G) also looms as strong newcomer although fairish in Providence and only okay in Cleveland. However, it is big in N. Y. and fine in L. A.

"Stranger in Between" (U) is doing excellent trade, mainly in small-seaters including Chi, Pittsburgh and N. Y. "Way of Gaucho" (20th), nice in Toronto, looks slow in Boston and mild in Frisco. "Horizons West" (U), also new, is good in Chi, Providence and Denver.

"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) shapes good in St. Louis, strong in Philly and fast in N. Y. "Hurricane Smith" (Par), also a newcomer, is okay in Cincy and lively in Buffalo. "Night Without Sleep" (20th) looms good in Cincy.

"Caribbean" (Par) looks very uneven this session, best showings being an okay Chi week and fair results in L. A. "World in Arms" (U) is sock in N. Y.

"Promoter" (U), due in N. Y. shortly, is fine in Toronto. "The Ring" (UA) is modest in Frisco. "Assignment Paris" (Col) shapes nice in Cincy.

"Hellgate" (Lip) looms trim in Chi. "Woman in North Country" (Rep) is okay in Denver. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th) is huge in Cleveland and continues smash in fourth N. Y. round.

Shades of Hughes! Condon Set by RKO At Early A.M. Meet

Howard Hughes' penchant for conducting business at unconventional hours was recalled in the sudden hiring of Richard Condon as RKO's new director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

Condon last Thursday night (9) had been at the Broadhurst Theatre, N. Y. ("Pal Joey"), when the message got to him that he was invited to a meeting with RKO board chairman Arnold Grant and other members of the controlling syndi-

Italo Export Co. Would Partner With Burstyn in U.S. Distrib

Italian Films Export is mulling various proposals to make Joseph Burstyn, indie distributor of foreign films in the U. S., a financial partner in its new U. S. distribution setup.

One of the suggestions calls for IFE to turn over to Burstyn the pre-release rights to its pictures. Another would install him as general sales head of the IFE distribution organization.

Move is designed in part to offset the considerable bad feeling caused by the IFE entry into distribution. U. S. indie distributors, already hard up for good product, are doing a slow burn over IFE expansionist policy. They also take an unkind view of the Motion Picture Assn. of America's hand in the act.

IFE is financed indirectly by the MPAA member companies, which have turned over 12½% of their frozen coin in Italy to the Italian industry. Latter is being allocated the $2,500,000 involved by the government to back IFE operations.

Feeling is that IFE is in a position to take the cream of Rome production for its own distribution and leave the rest to the indies. Latter take the frank position that, while the IFE experiment is worthwhile in view of the still unexplored potential of dubbed pix, it can't last very long.

It's understood that Dr. Eitel Monaco, prexy of the National Assn. of the Motion Picture and Allied Industries of Italy, as late as last July still was basically opposed to IFE expansion from the promotional to the distribution field, but that he has since bowed to the majority opinion.

Italo delegation to the "Salute to Italian Films Week" festival held powwow at the Plaza Hotel, N. Y., Saturday morning (11) to discuss Burstyn's status and iron out more details re the proposed distribution outfit. Present intentions are to set up system of four or five ex-

AT&T Would Provide Cost Data by Dec. 31 On Theatre TV Channels

Washington, Oct. 14.

Following their recent huddle here, spokesmen for American Telephone & Telegraph has notified attorneys for theatre television channel interests that the phone company will make efforts to provide some cost figures by the end of this year.

Letter from Ernest D. North, general counsel for the telephone company, which opposes the set-aside of channels for a theatre television web, also agreed that a wider band would be desirable for theatre video. North wrote in part:

"We recognize the need, for theatre television use, of transmission facilities having bandwidths greater than those for television broadcasting.

"Work is proceeding as rapidly as possible to develop cost information for broad-band service which we hope will meet or, at least, closely approach the transmission characteristics which you specify. We are making every effort to have information of this kind ready by the end of the year."

Hearings open next Monday (20) on the theatre TV channels. This phase will consist of a presentation by the theatre interests of their technical and cost (data). Then the hearings will be postponed until mid-January, when the remainder of the hearings will get under way and continue until the entire case is in. Full Federal Communications Commission is scheduled to sit en banc on the matter.

The case is stirring up tremendous interest throughout all branches of show biz, broadcasting, and among other industries also interested in special closed-circuit bands for their own use.

PCC Gets $59,755

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Higher income earners in the film industry have pledged $59,755 this far in the Permanent Charities Committee's 1953 drive.

These gifts wer donated, in advance of the regular campaign, by 130 high-bracketers, with about 500 more to be heard from.

Expect Dandi Dubbed Pic in N.Y. From Italy

Print of dubbed version of the Franco-Italian co-production, "The Little World of Don Camillo," is due in New York within the next few days, Roberto Dandi, the pic's producer, revealed. Dandi is part of the Italian film delegation in N. Y. for "Salute to Italian Films Week" at the Little Carnegie last week.

Pic was dubbed in Italy under the direction of Orson Welles, who also served as narrator.

Pic, directed by Julien Duvivier, stars Fernandel and Gino Cervi. It dramatizes the conflict between the priest and the Communist mayor of an Italian village. It has no distributor in the U. S. yet.

Next Dandi project is pic on the life of Puccini, in Technicolor. Marta Toren has already been signed for the film.

Co. Heads Huddle On Jap Stalemate

Fear of setting a precedent and Allied Artists' reluctance to play ball were responsible last week for yet another failure in the continuing attempt to break the U. S. deadlock on the Japanese permit situation.

Question is up for discussion again today (Wed.) in New York, where the company presidents and foreign managers are due to go into another huddle. Prexies will have before them several new propositions, including one to settle the problem on the basis of average grosses in Japan during the period Jan. 1 to Sept. 27, 1952, the latest date for which earning figures are available.

Crux of the dispute are the four permits the Japanese government cut from the major company total for the second half of the fiscal year. Distribs are permitted 59 permits against the 63 for the previous six months. So far no one has shown a willingness to part with all or some of the quartet of licenses, and the Tokyo government is showing no indication whatever that it might be willing to restore the four permits.

Proposal turned down last week was that the Motion Picture Assn. of America member companies buy up Allied Artists' four Japanese permits on the basis of their potential gross. The four are worth in the neighborhood of around $35,000 to $40,000, while one Metro permit alone is good for around $100,000.

Oct. 31 Deadline On Release for 'Androcles'

Although a campaign has yet to be set for the film, RKO is called upon to get "Androcles and the Lion," Gabriel Pascal production, before the public by Oct. 31. That's the dealine stipulated in the distrib's film rights deal with the G. B. Shaw estate.

Indication is that the company could meet its obligation by opening the pic in only one house. This probably will be a spot in Los Angeles. After this engagement "Androcles" likely will be withdrawn until full promotion gets rolling. Only a limited number of ads have been placed so far. Jean Simmons, Victor Mature, Robert Newton, Maurice Evans and Alan Young have the leads.

'Movietime' Anni

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

COMPO's "Movietime, U.S.A." completed its first year with a record of 38 tours by 360 Hollywood entertainers to a total of 1,300 cities and towns throughout the country.

R. J. O'Donnell, national chairman, announced five more tours scheduled for October and November, starting with a trip to Florida during the week of Oct. 19.

Mull 'Cleo' Reissue

Success of "Samson and Delilah" and other epics in the recent past has prompted Paramount to consider the reissue of Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra," which Par released in 1934. Tentative plan is to test the film in a few spots and subsequently swing it into national release if the initial b.o. holds up.

"Cleo" has Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon in the top spots.

'Salute Week' Costs Italo Pic Industry 100G

"Salute to Italian Films Week," which wound its screening schedule yesterday (Tues.), cost the Italian industry close to $100,000. Cost includes Rome-New York round-trip tickets for 29 people along with their living expenses; importation of all 11 out-of-town critics and renting of the Little Carnegie Theatre, N. Y., for $8,000.

Italian execs expressed themselves as well satisfied with the results of "Salute Week," feeling that it has served to focus attention on the Italian industry and generate interest in Italian pix. Somewhat more skeptical attitude is taken by U. S. observers, who take the view that the festival films were wasted since most of them either don't have a distributor yet or will not be released for many months to come.

The exact position of the Italians in arranging "Salute" was stated by Comm. Nicola de Pirro, director general of the Italian government Entertainment Industries Bureau, last week. De Pirro warned that unless Americans could increase the flow of dollars to Italy, U. S. film exports to that country might have to be cut.

Italian film earnings in the U. S. in 1951-52 reportedly came to $300,000. At the same time, Italy's dollar deficit has risen from $250,000,000 to $400,000,000. Unless IFE can demonstrate its ability to produce revenue, internal pres-

COMPO-LIKE BALLY FOR SWEDEN IN U.S. TIEUP

Stockholm, Oct. 14.

An overall film ballyhoo, similar to the activity in the U. S. of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, will be launched throughout Sweden on Oct. 20, when all branches of the Swedish film industry will cooperate with American distribs in a film goodwill promotion. Drive will be financed by coin received from a special extra performance in all theatres, with the theatres and films being provided gratis.

Swedish film stars have been alerted for the campaign and will participate in events similar to the "Movietime, U.S.A." tours. In addition, posters plugging pix in general will be placed throughout the country. Additional bally events include radio talks, forums and lectures on films, stunts and special advertising in Swedish periodicals.

Filmites Disappointed at Inability To Get State-Wide Ohio Censor Verdict

Film industry finds itself in a paradoxical position as a result of the decision of the Ohio Attorney General not to appeal the ruling of a Toledo Municipal Court declaring the state censorship of newsreels as unconstitutional. Although apparently armed with a clear-cut victory, filmites expressed disappointment since they had hoped that the case would be brought to a higher court, where a decision embracing the entire state could be obtained. As it stands now, the Toledo court's ruling applies to that city only.

Motion Picture Assn. of America, which has been sparking the newsreel fight, received an unconfirmed report from Ohio on Friday (10) that the Attorney General had informed Dr. Clyde Hissong, state film censorship topper, that the state could not and would not appeal the decision. Attorney General had until Friday to file an appeal notice. Question of the state's right to enter an appeal has been enmeshed in a welter of confusion for several weeks, with attorneys for both the state and MPAA not clear as to whether an appeal was legal under Ohio law.

Stymied in its attempt to obtain an all-encompassing state-wide ruling, the industry is mapping other moves which so far have been kept under wraps in order not to tip off the approach. Under the present setup based on the Toledo decision, the industry has three alternatives. It can send uncensored newsreels into all of Ohio, it can force censorship tests in other cities, or it can sue to recover the censorship fees paid to the state.

First and second moves, it's

Jarrico Wins $23,400 Judgment From Proser

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.

Superior Court Judge Frank Swayne awarded a $23,400 verdict to Paul Jarrico, screenwriter, in his suit against Monte Proser over a script, "Shadow of a Hero," written three years ago. Scripter declared he was paid only $8,000 and had $13,000 more coming under the agreement. Award included the back pay, a penalty of $8,000 as provided by a California wage law, and $2,400 in expenses.

Meanwhile, Jarrico, one of the witnesses who declined to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee, is suing RKO for its failure to give him screen credit on "The Las Vegas Story."

'Gotta Lecture Public on H'wood'

More ya-ta-ta via the lecture circuit, to give the public a realistic view of the film industry is a "must," states Arthur L. Mayer, indie film importer and former exec v.p. of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations. It doesn't matter whether execs or Hollywood personalities talk before public groups under COMPO auspices or otherwise, he told VARIETY.

"The important thing," Mayer declared, "is that many people think we're morons. Also, they don't know the first thing about the business. They must become acquainted with us before they become friendly toward us."

As for subject material, Mayer relates that his favorite introduction is to read a clipping from a magazine, dated years back, which predicts an early demise for the industry. He thereupon goes into the growth of the trade, its worldwide influence and the scope of its structure.

One of COMPO's most important undertakings, Mayer believes, will be its speakers' bureau activity. COMPO plan is to have a constant flow of industryites in institutional talks before Kiwanis, Rotary, etc., groups across the country. Mayer has two dates lined up but these are on his own instead of being part of his COMPO program. He'll address the Film Council of Springfield, Mass., Friday (17) and the Women's Press Club, New York, Oct. 25.

Ezzell Exits Goldwyn, Newman as Successor

Marvin A. Ezzell is resigning as studio manager and v.p. of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, thus ending an association of over 20 years. Ezzell has been active in dealing with Goldwyn's banking matters in association with James Mulvey, president of the outfit, in addition to general operation of the studio and rentals of space to other indie producers.

Indicated as his successor is Robert V. Newman, who joined the Goldwyn exec staff at the Hollywood lot a year and a half ago. He served as production manager for the recently completed "Hans Christian Andersen."

Oct. 21 Show-Cause Deadline on Settling Claims Vs. Film Classics

Creditors of the defunct Film Classics have been directed by N. Y. Supreme Court Justice S. Samuel Di Falco to show cause by Oct. 21 why assignee Irving Kaufman should not be permitted to sell certain assets as well as settle and compromise a number of claims. Principal moves contemplated include sale of the assignee's interest in a film for $3,000 and settlement of five claims against FC for $10,992.

Bruce Roberts would buy Kaufman's interest in the German-made picture, "I Was a Criminal" (formerly titled "Captain of Koepenick") for $3,000. Long-pending claims of Hecuba Corp., Eliot Hyman, Flamingo Films Western Division Corp., and Discovery Pictures Corp. over three Sir Alexander Korda films would be adjusted by payment of $10,992.

Proposed settlement of the Hecuba, Hyman, et al, claims grows out of FC's distribution of Korda's "Unknown Island," "India Speaks" and "Discovery." Another settlement involving several claims of assignee Kaufman against Edward Alperson and vice versa would be compromised via Alperson turning over $1,500 to the assignee.

Kaufman, incidentally, comes into court from time to time seeking approval of certain FC liquidation moves. Last fall, for example, he sought a court greenlight to sell assignee's interest in some seven films at public auction. Pix included Selznick's "Made for Each Other" and "Nothing Sacred," among others.

TIGHTER FOREIGN CENSORSHIP

Actors Dubbing Voices in Italian Pix Guaranteed Extra Pay on TV Sales

Agreement between Italian Films Export and the Screen Actors Guild, covering IFE dubbing activities in New York, has a clause guaranteeing performers additional payments should a dubbed pic be sold to television.

Deal anticipates use of a considerable number of actors by IFE once its dubbing studio in New York opens at the end of November. IFE expects to dub a minimum of 10 pix a year and the understanding is that its facilities will be devoted to Italo product exclusively.

Basic SAG rates of $70 for an eight-hour day, or $250 for a six-day week, prevail for actors called in on synchronization jobs. Taking into account the peculiarities of dubbing, SAG modified its terms to permit use of actors for three and four-hour periods only at $35 and $45, respectively. SAG condition prescribes that no thesp can take more than three parts, and that these can run no longer than 30 seconds in toto. Should lines run longer, they have to be considered as one role.

Experimental nature of the agreement was stressed Monday (13) by Florence Marston, eastern SAG rep, who emphasized that only Italian pix are covered under the deal. In order to do dubbing work for IFE, actors have to be SAG members.

TV allowance for performers is figured on sliding scale, depending on the pic's TV income. Average added payment comes to 12% of the original salary.

According to Mauro Zambuto, IFE dubbing expert in New York and for seven years technical director of Scalera Films in Rome, the IFE dubbing outfit intends to establish a library of recorded voices. Casting will be done by experienced directors taken mostly from radio. Zambuto foresees the eventual establishment of a modified form of stock company, with certain performers always taking the voice parts of the same Italian stars.

Best actors for dubbing are those who've been on the stage and have switched to radio and TV, says Zambuto.

Supreme Ct. to Hear FTC Appeal on Limit Of Ad Pix-Theatre Pacts

Washington, Oct. 14.

The U. S. Supreme Court has agreed to hear an appeal by the Federal Trade Commission, whose order limiting contracts made by advertising film companies with theatres was reversed by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. Trade Commission charged that the "Big Four" of the advertising film companies had contracts sewing up exclusive screen time with 75% of all theatres which accept such advertising.

Commission directed the Motion Picture Advertising Service to restrict its contracts to one year, in the test case. The advertising service, with exclusive contracts running from three to five years, appealed to the 5th Circuit and won.

In another picture case, the Supreme Court agreed to hear complaints brought by the antitrust division of the Justice Dept. alleging violations in the way the Crescent Theatre anti-trust decree is being obeyed by the successor companies. Justice Dept. said the violations, in effect, constituted contempt of court. However, the Federal court in Tennessee threw the case out as weak.

Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal from a tax case involving the Plaza Theatre, N. Y., and involving 1943 taxes of the theatre and its co-owners. It also turned thumbs down on an appeal involving copyright infringement of the old Austrian-made film, "Ecstacy," which starred Hedy Lamarr.

Latta in N.Y. From London for Confabs

C. J. Latta, Warners' representative on the Associated British Picture Corp. board, arrived in New York Monday (13) on the Queen Elizabeth for a month's stay, conferring with top Warner and Monogram officials. ABPC has a joint production program with Mono and also distributes the latter's product in the United Kingdom.

Latta's current junket is in the nature of a periodic visit. He was last here about 18 months ago. The ABPC exec also will make a brief trek to the Coast before returning to his London headquarters. D. J. Goodlatte, assistant managing director of Associated British Cinemas, did not accompany Latta. Earlier reports were that he would make the trip.

Distribs Ready New Arbitration Plan for Exhibs

New round of meetings between distrib and exhib lawyers on an arbitration system appeared in prospect this week as a result of last Wednesday's (8) action by film company prexies and other top execs in New York. At that session a new plan was approved and is now being readied for presentation to Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Assn. officers.

Eric Johnston, prez of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, termed the plan as approved by the companies a major step ahead. But he clearly left the door open for exhibs to come back with their recommendations for changes, and these, he stated, will be considered by the distribs.

On the exhib side it's said that the company-endorsed draft could hardly be fully accepted by the theatre orgs even though contents of the plan are as yet unknown. Past experience has been that changes in a proposed arbitration setup as made by one group never are okayed by other parties without discussions, and this doubtless will apply to the new plan. Consequently, additional exhib-distrib powwows are anticipated.

Following last Wednesday's session, Johnston announced that the arbitration proposals passed by the company execs were "in line with exhibitor requests for such action." He emphasized that the final establishment of a system must be approved by the Federal Court, Department of Justice and the board of directors of each film company and exhib org.

WB Lends Studios To Ford Co. Dealers

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

In a revolutionary move of "mutual benefit," Warners is turning over three sound stages and other studio facilities to 1,500 Lincoln, Mercury dealers from 11 western states Saturday (18). Publicity director Alex Evelove declined to say whether Ford was paying for use of facilities, saying "it's good public relations for us; we'll get publicity in automotive and general press, and it justifies the problems and expense."

Group of Warner stars will put on a special show to be staged by Leroy Prinz.

M-G's Stratton Sequel

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Producer Jack Cummings planes to Texas next week for huddles with Monty Stratton on a sequel to "The Stratton Story," one of Metro's top grossers of 1949.

'MESSAGE' PIX GET BRUSHOFF

Caught between the firing lines of the "cold war" and forever concerned over the impact and influence of Hollywood films, foreign censors are sharpening their scissors once again. The situation has not reached the serious stage for the Yank distributors, but it's shifting from the nuisance into the problem category.

On the one hand, pressure is on for the American studios to pitch in and help the propaganda battle with anti-Communist pix. On the other, jittery governments abroad, anxious not to offend either East or West, like to strike the neutral pose and refuse entry to films with a political message.

Complicating the matter for Hollywood is the fact that the industry today leans more heavily than ever on foreign revenue and can't afford to have too many of its pix banned.

Political censorship is on the rise all over the world, not only in neutral areas, but also in countries with unstable governments, such as Indonesia, where they're afraid certain U. S. pix might put ideas into the heads of the populace. Here, as in other parts of the globe violence in Hollywood imports is the biggest censor gripe.

Latest example of political fence-sitting came when the Indian government banned three U. S. pix with anti-Communist overtones. Films were "Peking Express," "Red Danube" and "The Conspirator." "Peking Express," produced by Hal Wallis for Paramount and starring Joseph Cotten, had been approved by the Indian censor board,

Picker in Final Talks With Foreign Aides Prior To Leaving UA for RKO

Arnold Picker left New York over the weekend for Paris and London, with his agenda including huddles with United Artists reps relative to his bowing out as head of UA's foreign department Nov. 15. That's the date for his switch to RKO as exec v.p.

Picker will confer with UA's British sales chief, Montagu Morton, in London and French director Georges Rouvier and Continental manager Charles Smadja in Paris. Picker also is set to attend the Oct. 23 preem of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" in London, which UA is distributing.

MONO NET $589,259, FIRM'S 2D BEST YEAR

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Monogram Pictures netted a profit of $589,259 for the fiscal year ending June 28. Although this sum fell short of the $1,061,648 for the preceding year it was the second highest in the company's history, according to Steve Broidy, president. Gross income for 1952 was $9,223,700, compared with $9,311,900 in 1951.

Broidy explained that the decrease in profits from those of the preceding year was the result of a smaller number of pictures released for television. Domestic theatrical revenues remained about the same while foreign theatre returns were increased by $462,200.

Honor New RKO Execs

Trio of newly-appointed RKO execs will be honored at the luncheon meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners Assn., N. Y. exhib outfit Oct. 30 at the Hotel Astor.

Slated to attend are Arnold Picker, executive v.p.; Charles Boasberg, general sales manager, and Walter Branson, assistant sales topper. Top attendance of exhibs, both from the N. Y. metropolitan area and from outlying zones, is expected.

Manila Firm Sues Over U.S. 'Outrages' Release

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.

Movie Technical Services, Inc., of Manila, filed a $25,000 breach of contract suit against Lloyd Friedgen in Superior Court involving the U. S. distribution of the Filipino film, "Outrages of the Orient."

Charge is that Friedgen contracted to release the picture here under a 50-50 arrangement. Plaintiffs declare the profits have amounted to at least $60,000 thus far but that Friedgen has paid only $7,521.72. In addition to $25,000, they want an accounting, return of the negative and disclosure of the number of prints in circulation.

Stolkin Warned By Ind. Allied On RKO Sale to TV

RKO was given clear warning this week that any sale of its library of pix to television will cause severe exhib resentment.

"Mr. Stolkin (RKO prez Ralph Stolkin) might pick up a few fast bucks by selling his old pictures to free TV," Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana stated, "but he will find that such action will ruin his company's good exhibitor relationship and that the exhibitors will not want to buy RKO's current releases if they must compete with RKO's old product, which investment was amortized by exhibition, on free TV."

Statement, contained in a membership bulletin issued by Allied of Indiana, also goes into the economics involved. "If he (Stolkin)," it's said, will look over the $3,000,000 return on one picture, 'King Kong,' from motion picture exhibition and if he understands figures he will readily realize that the reissue route could be much more profitable for the company than to practically give the pictures away to TV.

"Then, too, he might look into the costs of preparing the old pictures for TV use. They must be cut, rescored, etc., and many producers who have sold to TV at what they thought a profit, then rescored and cut the pictures to fit into the peculiar TV time requirement, found the costs reduced their profits on the venture to nil. In fact, when these producers totaled up the loss of playoff on their current product plus the exhibitor ill-will created, the TV interlude was anything but a profitable venture."

No Special Allied Meet On Arbitration Draft

Washington, Oct. 14.

There can be no special meeting of the board of Allied States Assn. to consider the arbitration plan draft approved by the film producers, Abram F. Myers reveals. Instead, the matter will be considered when the board meets in Chicago the middle of next month, in connection with the association's annual convention.

Myers, general counsel of Allied and its board chairman, said that "there has been so much delay that a special session of the Allied board is out of the question. A call for the regular fall meeting, to be held in Chicago on Nov. 15-16, already has been issued. I hope Allied's arbitration committee will be prepared to make suitable recommendations to the board at that time."

Give 'Em Quality in Sticks Pix And They'll Buy; Strictly Corn NG

There's been a switch from the "sticks nix hick pix," as bannerlined by VARIETY July 17, 1935. The hinterlands now are shelling out nice coin for the down-on-the-farm films, but an important new factor has come into play. The strictly cornball stuff nosedives. There's gotta be quality.

"There have been constant developments in quality over the years," states Al Daff, Universal's exec v. p. "Now, the product which is bucolic in flavor is so advanced in technique and story handling that it's accepted in the grassroots areas. The public has become so well educated that you must have size, color or some other elements."

In other words, there has been no comeback of the type of film which gave birth to the "cornball tag," Daff opines. What is going over is the farmyard or similarly backgrounded film which has genuine human material, he adds.

Daff's big example is U's "Kettle" series. "These films," the exec continued, "deal with little people finding happiness or elevating themselves above their own level. Most recent in the series, 'Kettles at the Fair,' has the title characters owning a horse which develops into a champion trotter.

"The 'Francis' group is similar. Here is a browbeaten character who comes out on top as a hero after many adventures. He ingratiates himself with the audience all the way. In 'Sally and St. Anne' an impoverished Irish family happily outwits the landlord. This delights the audience."

Major point which Daff makes is that these are "hick pix" in a sense, particularly the "Kettle" starrers, but they're not outright cornballers. He feels they're akin to the Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton comedies in that the focal characters in the modern product, like Chaplin and Keaton, are "little people." "Chaplin and Keaton were not corny," Daff holds.

Brazilian Institute May Raise Cost Of U.S. Pic Operations

Proposed National Motion Picture Institute in Brazil, now under study by a committee of the Brazilian Congress, may substantially raise the cost of American operations in that country.

Particularly objectionable feature of the Institute, created to stimulate native motion picture activity, is Article 31 of the projected law, which would impose on the U. S. distribs an additional tax of $1,100. Levy would be charged for import licenses.

Under the last decree dating to January, 1946, the tax for censoring films was 2c. per linear meter. The new law would increase that amount to 8c. per linear meter for each imported print, and 5½c. for prints struck at national laboratories.

Article 36 of the Institute measure would retain prevailing quotas on playing time. Theatres are currently forced to play one native film for each eight imports. Native product must be on the screen for a minimum of 42 days out of the year. This includes an obligatory two Saturdays and two Sundays every four months.

American distribs have hopes that the Institute project will not pass Congress in its present form. They're confident that the Special Committee on Cinema, Radio and Theatre, which is now studying the bill, will make changes in the draft.

Ed Cohen's Arg. Prep

Edward D. Cohen, Latin American supervisor for 20th-Fox, returned to Argentina yesterday (Tues.) to make plans for the opening there of "The Way of a Gaucho." Pic was made on location in Argentina.

After the premiere, Cohen will go to his headquarters in Rio de Janeiro.

Entertaining remake of adventure story; good names, promising b.o.

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

MGM release of Pandro S. Berman production. Stars Stewart Granger, Deborah Kerr, Louis Calhern, Jane Greer, James Mason; features Lewis Stone, Robert Douglas, Robert Coote. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Screenplay, John L. Previewed Oct. 8, '52. Running time, 100 MINS.

| Michael, Duke of Strelsau | Robert Douglas |
| Fritz von Tarlenheim | Robert Coote |
| Johann | Peter Brocco |
| Josef | Francis Pierlot |
| Rupert of Hentzau | James Mason |

Fanciers of costumed swashbucklers will find this remake of the venerable "Prisoner of Zenda" a likeable version. The third time around for the yarn, this time it wears its first Technicolor dress, and has lavish physical appurtenances and other eye-treating values as a cloak for the mythical kingdom plot. The boxoffice outlook is promising.

Plot deals with an Englishman who goes on a holiday to the small kingdom of Ruritania and gets involved in a royal impersonation and a love affair with a beautiful princess. Stewart Granger is the hero, dualing as the Englishman and the king he impersonates, and gives the roles the proper amount of dashing heroics. Opposite him is Deborah Kerr, the lovely princess, and her looks and ability to wear period gowns are just what the part requires. James Mason scores as Rupert of Hentzau, making the character a rather likeable heavy, while Robert Douglas registers as the evil duke plotting against his brother, the king.

The Pandro S. Berman production has been well-directed by Richard Thorpe, who does best when the action is turned on in the latter half of the story. A rousing duel between Granger and Mason makes for a stirring climax, and the final renunciation scene between the commoner and the princess is effectively handled. The familiar plot, scripted by John L. Balderston and Noel Langley with some good dialog touches, finds Granger called upon by Louis Calhern and Robert Coote to impersonate the king at the coronation ceremonies after the villainous Douglas and Mason have doped the royal person.

The masquerade continues when Mason manages to kidnap the king and Granger doesn't mind too much because the princess to whom the king is betrothed is lovely and he's falling in love. Earlier portions of the film deal mostly in spectacle, plus a humorous flavor to the situation in which Granger finds himself.

Jane Greer has comparatively short footage, but makes it count. Calhern is a suave cohort of the king, and Coote is amusing as the other faithful servent. Lewis Stone, who played the dual role in the original, 1922 version of the story, appears briefly in this one as the cardinal. Peter Brocco and Francis Pierlot are the other credited cast members.

| A German Corporal | Gayle Kellogg |
| Etienne | Wayne Taylor |
| Monk | Tom Browne Henry |
| Zabreski | Philip Rush |
| Rene | Claude Dunkin |
| Lt. Otto Korst | William Slack |

A good title, names and exploitation values are assets that will have to be sold hard to attract attention for "Operation Secret." A cloak-and-dagger melodrama dealing with the French underground in World War II, the plot is told in an excessive 107 minutes and, because of constant use of flashbacks, the suspense element vital to this type story is dissipated.

The Henry Blanke production uses as a plot springboard some of the wartime exploits of Lt. Col. Peter Ortiz, Marine hero of World War II. In scripting from a story by Alvin Josephy and John Twist, writers James R. Webb and Harold Medford chose an episodic course. The war action sequences are good, but the other scenes are wordy and dull to the extreme. When not involved with the present-day phases of the story, Lew Seiler gives the film good direction, but much of the punch in the individual wartime scenes is lost in the flashbacks.

Cornel Wilde, Steve Cochran, Phyllis Thaxter and Karl Malden are capable in tackling the principal acting chores. Picture gets underway with a French secret police hearing into a murder committed during World War II. The principals each relate events as individually seen while with the underground in the last war. Recounting this activity are Cochran, now a foreign car dealer in the states; Lester Matthews, of the British Foreign Office; Jay Novello, former Gestapo officer; Malden, ex-Maqui, and Miss Thaxter, another underground worker. Questioning appears to point up Wilde as the killer of Paul Picerni, but as the involved testimony begins to sort itself out, the finger is being put on Cochran, who obstensibly had served France during the war but actually was a Communist agent. Spectators and Cochran are led to believe that Wilde is dead, but he appears at the hearing to cinch the final bit of evidence against Cochran.

Best of the flashback scenes are Wilde's escape from the Nazis with the aide of Miss Thaxter after he has been discovered behind the German lines, and the sequence in which he presumably goes to his death carrying captured Nazi films of a new jet plane. A good exploitation point in the picture is the actual German Signal Corps films of the V-1 pilotless bombs and the first Messerschmidt jet plane.

Showing up well among the supporting players are Picerni, Matthews, Dan O'Herlihy, Novello, Wilton Graff, Wayne Taylor, Philip Rush and Tom Browne Henry, most of whom are seen in the flashbacks. Picture is given actionful lensing in the war scenes by Ted McCord and an appropriate music score by Roy Webb. Brog.

This second Vaughn Monroe western shapes up as a solid entry, bearing a legitimate story backed by fine performances, sturdy action and pictorially beautiful. For exploitation purposes, its star sings three songs, all catchy and well done. Overall effect gives indication of strong returns in its particular market. Orch leader's first try on screen was in "Singing Guns," two years ago.

Range addicts will find story by John K. Butler right down their alley, with Monroe enacting a U. S. marshal in Arizona territory in 1881, when Indian attacks and badmen made life perilous for pioneers. Capturing an outlaw who has sold 200 rifles to warring Apaches, result of which causes a wagon train to be almost completely wiped out, Monroe takes his captive, Victor Jory, and three survivors of the disaster, including Joan Leslie and two young orphans, back to Tombstone, Jory to jail and others to his home where he may care for them. Escape of Jory leads to later developments of an exciting narrative.

Monroe displays an easy acting presence and is particularly good in the action sequences, including a couple of realistic fights and considerable gunplay. He warbles, "A Man's Best Friend is His Horse," "Hound Dog (Bay at the Moon)" and "The Man Don't Live Who Can Die Alone," latter sung as a marriage proposal to Miss Leslie, in his usual class style. Miss Leslie turns in a warm characterization, too. Outstanding impersonations also are contributed by Jory, Edgar Buchanan, as a sheriff; Jean Parker, Jory's girlfriend, and Ian MacDonald and Lee MacGregor, his two brothers, also outlaws.

Battle Zone

Salute to Marines' combat photographers participating in Korean action. Average b.o.

Hollywood, Oct. 9.

Allied Artists release of Walter Wanger production. Stars John Hodiak, Linda Christian, Stephen McNally; features Martin Milner, Dave Willock, Jack Larson, Richard Emory, Philip Ahn, Carleton Young. Directed by Lesley Selander. Written by Steve Fisher; camera, Ernest Miller; editor, Jack Ogilvie; music, Marlin Skiles. Previewed Oct. 7, '52. Running time, 81 MINS.

| Danny | John Hodiak |
| Jeanne | Linda Christian |
| Mitch | Stephen McNally |
| Andy | Martin Milner |
| Smitty | Dave Willock |
| O'Doole | Jask Larson |
| Lt. Orlin | Richard Emory |
| Korean | Philip Ahn |
| Colonel | Carleton Young |
| Lt. Pilot | John Fontaine |
| Officer | Todd Karnes |
| Runner | Gil Stratton, Jr. |

This is an average war film for general bookings, mixing actual combat footage with an acceptable, although standard, story line. Picture marks Allied Artists' new emphasis on casting stronger names in top roles and as a result its chances are okay in the regular market.

The Steve Fisher plot gives a salute to Marine combat photogs in the Korean fighting, tosses in a romantic triangle and generally works its way along to a logical conclusion. Some of the earlier scenes are stagey and talky, but Lesley Selander's direction is good on the combat footage, and there is enough of it to create a good overall pace.

Toplining are John Hodiak, Linda Christian and Stephen McNally. The two male stars are familiar names and give the film more marquee strength to help its ticket-selling chances. The principals acquit themselves excellently in answering the demands of script and direction.

Story opens with Hodiak's reenlistment in the combat photographic division of the Marine Corps. Sent to Camp Pendleton, he meets up with an old buddy, McNally, and discovers the latter is now engaged to Miss Christian, Red Cross nurse who was a former love of Hodiak's. The Marines and the Red Cross unit are shipped to Korea, with Hodiak continually trying to renew Miss Christian's interest. As friendly rivals, Hodiak and McNally crack wise at each other whenever not busy with photographic assignments. They settle down to the heroics when sent behind the North Korean lines to photograph enemy installations, and this part of the film plays excellently, having both suspense and action for the average filmgoer. The studio-staged war is well-handled, and the cut-ins of actual combat footage are a good match. Finale finds Hodiak convinced he hasn't another chance with Miss Christian.

Picture has a good lineup of featured and supporting players, all of whom do well by their assignments, including Martin Milner, Dave Willock and Jack Larson. In production values and casting, producer Walter Wanger and his associate, William A. Calihan, Jr., have shown good judgment and obtained smart results for budget expenditure. Ernest Miller's camera work is excellent, as is the Marlin Skiles music score and editing. Brog.

Adorables Creatures
(FRENCH)

Paris, Sept. 30.

Sirius release of Jacques Roitfeld production. Stars Daniel Gelin, Daniele Darrieux, Edwige Feuillere, Martine Carol, Renee Faure. Directed by Christian-Jaque. Screenplay, Charles Spaak, Jacques Companeez; camera, Christian Matras; editor, Jacques Desagneaux. Reviewed in Paris. Running time, 105 MINS.

| Andre | Daniel Gelin |
| Christine | Daniele Darrieux |
| Minouche | Martine Carol |
| Evelyne | Marilyn Buferd |
| Denise | Edwige Feuillere |
| Alice | Renee Faure |
| Catherine | Antonella Lualdi |

This is a mild comedy of female manners as told through the various loves of a young man about town prior to his marriage. Film is sketchy, and the novelty of obviously typed femmes soon wears off. Overlong, with angles telegraphed in spots, the film will do here on its cast. It may have some appeal at the U. S. boxoffice, but the sex antics in it (built along lines similar to "La Ronde") will run into censorship difficulties.

Film concerns a personable young man who has just married. He tells his wife he has loved only her, but a blase voice interrupts and shows his long and varied romantic life in flashback. It depicts his first affair with a married woman. He learns her husband is cheating, sets out on a reconquest.

A scheming blonde takes him for his roll. She finally bags a rich industrialist, leaving the young man in the arms of her best friend. He is then taken up by a rich divorcee who dabbles in charities and collects artistically inclined young men. This is broken when a bitter secretary spills her real age to the youth. He finally comes to his real love.

Christian-Jaque has directed adequately but has not injected enough to maintain interest throughout the romantic escapades. Lensing by Christian Matras is slick, making the most of the femmes pulchritude in this looksee at the female of the species. Editing could be tightened. Daniel Gelin is fine as the center of all this romantic interest. Martine Carol is properly svelte as the blonde schemer, but Edwige Feuillere overdoes her role of the gay divorcee. Daniele Darrieux injects the correct supercilious note into the role of the double standard wife. Others in the cast are adequate with Renee Faure as the embittered secretary, the one dramatic note of the pic. Mosk.

The Last Mission
(Teleften Apostoli)
(GREEK)

Pierre N. George (Grecian Film Centre) release of Finos Film Production (Filopioimin Finos). Stars Smaroula Yiouli, Miranda Myrat and Vasilios Diamantupoulos. Screenplay, Nikos Tsiferou, based on his own novel. Directed by Tsifrou. Camera, Joseph Hep; music, Costa Yiannide. At Squire Theatre, N. Y., Oct. 1, '52. Running time, 81 MINS.

Cast: Smaroula Yiouli, Miranda Myrat, Vasilios Diamantupoulos, Sophie Lila, Kimon Fletas, Demos Staenios, Nikes Tzioyias and Benos Koulmases.

(In Greek; No English Titles)

Since the Greek film, "The Last Mission," is sans English subtitles, its only appeal will be for those who understand the lingo. Addition of subtitles will not widen its market, for it is a standard melodrama concerning the life of the Greeks in Athens during the Nazi occupation.

Opening with the murder of a mother by her daughter, the film tells in flashback the reason for the killing. Mother, it appears, has a love affair with the Nazi commandant while her husband is absent on underground activities. In return for a promise to flee to Germany with the Nazi commandant, she betrays the whereabouts of her husband, who is executed as an enemy of the Third Reich.

Performances, on the whole, are competent. Lensing and other technical qualities are fair. Holl.

Les Belles De Nuit
(Beauties Of the Night)
(FRENCH)

Paris, Sept. 23.

Franco-London-Rizzoli production and release. Stars, Gerard Philipe, Gina Lollobrigida, Martine Carol. Written and directed by Rene Clair. Camera, Armand Thirard; editor, Louisette Hautecoeur. Running time, 90 MINS.

|---|---|
| Claude | Gerard Philipe |
| Edmee | Martine Carol |
| Leila | Gina Lollobrigida |
| Suzanne | Magali Vandel |
| Bonny | Marilyn Buferd |
| Father | Raymond Cordy |

Rene Clair has pulled out all stops in the use of special effects and film space in this fantasy of dream and reality. Although the premise is slight and at times repetitious, the delicate clowning and whimsy of the production come over in the 90-minute running time which could stand some pruning. The pic has Gerard Philipe, Martine Carol and Gina Lollobrigida as marquee appeal. Pic exploitation possibilities and general high comedy level should make this of interest to some arthouses and sureseaters in the U. S. Film won the International Critics Award at the recent Vienna Film Festival.

Plot concerns a dreamy young composer who cannot work in his noisy garret room. He loses his job of teaching music because of his daydreaming, and neglects the love offered by the daughter next door. He has a series of dreams in which women he has met casually figure prominently. He is a great composer beloved by the dream figure of a lovely mother. He is a brave soldier in Morocco fighting his way to the arms of a lovely, half dressed Arab girl; he is mixed up in the affairs of the Three Musketeers and the hero of the French Revolution who loves a noblewoman. The dreams mingle with his real problems as his friends begin to think he is mad. The dreams also begin to get mixed up, and finally in a madcap chase all the centuries come together and there is a jeep ride from prehistoric days to the present.

Rene Clair has done this complicated tale with consummate filmic skill. The blending of dream and light-hearted reality is done with finesse. When he is making love to an Arab girl in his dream, the door opens and a friend walks in with the hat he had left in the cafe. A pair of torn pants in reality turn up through the dreams for a good running gag. Lensing is excellent and editing keeps the complicated structure in coherent order. Philipe is fine as the man torn between dream and reality. Miss Lollobrigida shows to goods advantage as the Arab gal. Miss Carol is good as the dream girl. Remainder of the cast is fine, with Magali Vandel breezy as the gal next door. Mosk.

Bizyo to Tozoku
(Beauty and the Thieves)
(JAPANESE)

Tokyo, Sept. 23.

Daiei production and release. Stars Machiko Kyo. Directed by Keigo Kimura. Screenplay, Keigo Kimura from original story by Ryunosuke Akutagawa; camera, Yasuichiro Yamazaki; music, Fumio Hayasaka. Previewed in Tokyo. Running time, 120 MINS.

Capitalizing on the success of "Rashomon," Daiei Studios has produced a companion film utilizing the same talents which made "Rashomon" a winner at last year's Venice Film Festival. But this one likely will take no prizes anywhere. Despite direction by Keigo Kimura, photography by Yasuichiro Yamazaki and the lead taken by Machiko Kyo, all excepting Yamazaki associated with making "Rashomon," "Beauty of the Thieves" is merely a jazzed-up version of any of the many classical Kabuki dramas for which Japan is famous but which have very little appeal for other audiences. Spice is provided by the sexy dancing of Miss Kyo, in an 11th Century striptease which would never escape U. S. censors. There is prolonged sword play which reaches the ludicrous stage. If severe editing could be done on this and the slow explanatory discourses, this might have slight possibilities at U. S. art houses because of the "Rashomon" bally.

The 11th Century story shows a band of thieves led by Kyo, a voluptuous woman, which terrorizes the rich. She seduces a local detective, and he joins the bandits. His younger brother also joins the bandits in trying to persuade his brother to give up his life of crime. The inevitable happens, with the femme leader falling for the younger man and seducing him in one of the unintentionally funniest scenes ever lensed. The other brother hears of this and tips of the guards so that she can eliminate one of her lovers. When Jiro discovers this treachery, he goes to the rescue of his older brother and both slash their way to safety. Then the brothers slay the bandit leader.

Emoting is of the heaving chest and bulging eye school with director Kimura supplying much of the same sort of realism which he employed in "Rashomon." Camera work is stilted and follows the pattern set in "Rashomon" with overlong chases and posed tableaux shots. Dialog poses a problem for translation into English as it is in old-style Japanese. Lars.

sibly entry into a Boston clinic for major surgery.

"The Wald thing is typical of all trade rumors," says Grant, "which we are ignoring until we realistically come to grips with the studio manpower problem. Almost anybody named would qualify, give or take one or another because of personality clashes. Naturally, we want the best, but we just haven't gotten to it officially."

Wald appears to be leaning toward a producer's berth at Columbia under studio chief Harry Cohn.

Part of the appraisal for the Hollywood lot's top spot will be an examination of all employment contracts in competitive studios, says Grant, "to determine, when the deals expire, which of the executives can fall in with us."

RKO is not rushing into full-scale studio operations.

NT Pacts of C. P. Skouras, Rhoden, And Ricketson Explained to SEC

Apparently feeling that the Securities & Exchange Commission needed a better briefing on the devious ways the film industry conducts its business, National Theatres has amended its registration application with that government agency. These amendments explain NT's methods of compensating its various officers and executives as well as outline how the cost of settling antitrust suits is split between exhibitor and distributor defendants.

Contracts of three execs of NT subsidiaries are submitted as examples. Summaries of these pacts, which "don't purport to be complete," describe the setup in paying Charles P. Skouras, head of Wesco Theatres; Elmer C. Rhoden, prez of Fox Midwest Theatres, and F. H. Ricketson, Jr., Fox-Intermountain Theatres' topper. A new salary deal with H. C. Cox, a Wesco Theatres veepee, is also disclosed.

Under a July 10, 1944, agreement, it's stated, Skouras draws $2,500 weekly for a period ending Dec. 31, 1961. During this stretch he gets additional compensation of 5% of the first $4,000,000 and 6½% of any excess over $4,000,000 of Wesco's "contract profits". Bonus deal, however, has a ceiling of $360,000 per year. He drew the full $360,000 for 1951.

Pacts with Rhoden and Ricketson are similar. Former's arrangement with Fox-Midwest pays him $750 weekly, $150 weekly expenses and a bonus based upon 2½% of whatever net profits exceed $900,000. This additional compensation amounted to $33,891 during

High Costs, Rentals Blamed by Reade For Park Ave. Fold

High operating costs and rentals are being blamed for the Nov. 1 shuttering of Walter Reade's Park Ave. Theatre, N. Y. The house has been leased for two years to the National City Bank, which intends to establish a branch there.

Artie's closing is attributed by Walter Reade, Jr., prexy of Walter Reade Theatres, to conditions "which placed the Park Ave. in a continuing unfavorable condition wherein it has been unable to compete for outstanding foreign films on equal terms with similar theatres."

Reade specifically listed demands of the motion picture operators and stagehand unions, which required the theatre to hire six projectionists and a stagehand although the house seats only 580 and has no stage.

Terms of the lease include an annual rental "in excess of $100,000," according to Reade. Circuit now expects to channel its foreign product into the new Baronet Theatre nearby. The Park Ave. may become a theatre again after the two-year lease is up.

N.Y. PIX GROUP, NBC SPEED BALLYHOO TIES

Mutual promotion arrangement between the Organization of the Motion Picture Industry of the City of New York and the National Broadcasting Co. moved at a faster tempo last week. Speedup arises from start of one-minute spot announcements on NBC's "First Nighter" and "Howdy Doody" shows. Copy for the plugs recommends a list of films for children.

Similar puffs for the picture biz are being beamed on NBC radio and TV's Skitch Henderson, Conrad Nagel, Herb Sheldon and "Hollywood, U.S.A." shows. In return, most film theatres in the N. Y. metropolitan area are screening a 45-second trailer pointing out that "latest news of pictures coming to this theatre" can be had by tuning in to NBC. Posters are also used to spread the message.

Berman, Thorpe To London on 'Knights'

Metro producer Pandro Berman and director Richard Thorpe, after a three-day stay in N. Y., planed out Monday (13) for London.

Pair will begin preparatory work at M-G's Boreham Woods studio on "Knights of the Round Table."

$17,000,000 Bank Credit Revealed In U Report to SEC

New revolving credit agreement under which Universal Pictures can borrow a maximum of $17,000,000 over a four-year period from the First National Bank of Boston and the Guaranty Trust Co., N. Y., was reported by U last week to the Securities & Exchange Commission in Washington.

Starting date of the agreement is Sept. 22, and U told the Commission it has already borrowed $2,500,000 from the maximum $5,000,000 stipulated for the first loan year under the revolving fund, and an additional $1,300,000 under the United World Films section of the agreement. UWF is U's TV-film subsidiary.

Of the $2,500,000, a total of $1,500,000 has been used to settle outstanding amounts under the 1950 agreement with the banks and the $1,300,000 is being used to pay off the UWF section of the old loan. The remaining $1,000,000 is being used for working capital.

U's SEC report also covered a new five-year employment contract with Edward Muhl, general manager of operations at the U studios. Pact becomes effective Jan. 1, 1953, and stipulates a salary of $1,200 per week for the first year, $1,300 for the second year and additional $100 per week increases for the third and fourth years. Contract stipulates four-week vacation annually.

SEC was informed of amended U bylaws starting July 15, 1952. As of Jan. 1, 1953, annual stockholder meetings are changed from the second Tuesday in July to the sec-

Special Pix Directory In N.Y. Mirror Tieup

Starting today (Wed.) the N. Y. Daily Mirror is running a special motion picture paid theatre classified directory, with about 40 metropolitan area theatres participating. Deal was set following a series of conferences between the Independent Theatre Owners Assn. and Mirror advertising execs.

Directory, consisting of two columns with two lines for each theatre, is similar to the one launched in the N. Y. Post last April. Listings will appear under the heading "Neighborhood Movies."

Combined listing will enable nabe houses to advertise their attractions on a daily basis as a result of the special rate set with the Mirror. Discussions for similar deals with the other Gotham newspapers are currently underway.

Zanuck Mulls Pic Project in India

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

India will be the scene of a 20th-Fox production if Darryl F. Zanuck can find a story suitable for filming on location there. Studio topper has ordered his scripters to dig up a yarn for the first venture in that sector of the world.

Zanuck made his announcement while heading an industry committee to welcome a delegation of picture biggies from the other side of the Pacific.

AHEAD OF 1951 IN CLASS, MASS

While Hollywood's production pace continues relatively unchanged from last year's shooting, its backlog of films either editing or awaiting release has reached healthy proportions. Eight majors plus Allied Artists and Republic have a total of 185 pictures poised for the distribution hopper.

Homeoffice spokesmen for the most part feel that current completed product is well ahead of last year in both quantity and quality. With 22 pictures in editing stages or ready for release, Universal-International boasts its largest backlog in the last several years.

Tally of other lots shows that Allied Artists has 31 (including westerns); Columbia, 15; Metro, 29; Paramount, 20; Republic, 10; RKO, 15; 20th-Fox, 18; United Artists, 15, and Warners, 12. Color continues to be emphasized for more than a third of the studios' completed pix has been lensed in tint.

Ten companies along with the independent producers have 44 pictures before the cameras as of this week. A year ago 45 were rolling. Of the current slate, 23 are in color while the 1951 shooting saw only 17 filmed in hues. Perhaps the sharpest increase in lensing was racked up by 20th-Fox, which now has six underway as against two last year.

Contributing factor in building the backlog, industry observers point out, is a flock of holdovers,

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Green Light in Memphis For Theatre 'Bank Nites'

Memphis, Oct. 14.

Police City Commissioner Claude A. Armour has green lighted "bank nights" for Memphis downtown and nabe houses. The 32-year-old former FBI agent personally investigated the bank nights at several houses here and said "they could continue with their cash drawings."

Armour, who also doubles in brass here as vice-mayor, asked the theatre operators to put the clampers down on using outside loudspeakers to draw crowds to listen to the "bank night" drawing results. The bank nights were given the kibash here back in 1936 by former Police Commissioner Cliff Davis (now a congressman) on the grounds they were "common gaming."

City Attorney Frank Gianotti, along with Armour, said that the Memphis bank nights "were not a lottery and that theatre patrons got their full money's worth from the movie."

Metro's 14 Tinters

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Teeoff of "Give Girl a Break" Monday (13) gives Metro a record high of 14 Technicolor musicals either in production, active preparation or awaiting release.

Upcoming are "Kiss Me, Kate," "Huckleberry Finn," "Girl of the Golden West" and an untagged Esther Williams film studio is also readying "Brigadoon" for next year.

Herbert L. Smith has been appointed head of Columbia's purchasing department, replacing Max Seligman. Latter stays on in an exec advisory capacity.

Fred Izzo was upped to assistant director of purchases, which post Smith previously held.

Foreign-Pix Distribs Find It Tougher To Get Outlets in Shift to Yank Product

With the New York east side art houses, formerly the exclusive domain for foreign pix, shifting more and more to the showing of top first-run American films, foreign pic distribs are becoming concerned about finding outlets for their product.

Change, according to the artie ops, was not a premeditated move based on any chauvinistic reasons, but is based on dollar-and-cents considerations. They frankly state that the gradual shift was caused by the shortage of outstanding pictures from abroad which would draw patrons to the theatres. Artie-house entrepreneurs stress that they're continuing to eye foreign product and will book pix deemed b.o. attractions.

Meanwhile, U. S. filmeries are not only succeeding in booking specialized films into these houses, but are also day-and-dating dual-appeal pix on the east side circuit and Broadway. Latter policy is becoming more or less standard procedure since the successful launching of this policy several months ago with the English import, "Outcast of the Islands." Upcoming dual bookings include Columbia's "The Four Poster," at the Victoria, and the Sutton; United Artists' release of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight," at the Astor and the Trans Lux 60th St., and Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen," at the Criterion and Paris.

Realization that as much if not more coin could be withdrawn from an extended art house engagement than from a short Broadway run has the U. S. distribs seeking deals with the artie ops. Point was proved by the long-run of Metro's "Pandora and the Flying Dutchman" at the 57th St. Normandie, an

$803,000 Col '52 Net, Was $1,498,000 in '51

Columbia Pictures yesterday (Tues.) announced a net profit of $803,000 for the 52 weeks ended June 30, 1952. This compares with earnings of $1,498,000 for fiscal 1951.

Profit for 1952 was equal to 80c per share of common stock on the 670,669 shares outstanding at the end of the period. Earnings last year equalled $1.81 on each of the 654,311 shares then outstanding.

Operating profit, before taxes, was listed at $1,563,000 for 1952 and $2,668,000 for 1951.

Distribs Snippy At Snaper For Snipey Snappers

Rap at distrib trade practices last week by Wilbur Snaper, prexy of Allied States Assn. of Motion Picture Exhibitors, was termed ill-timed and uncalled for by major film company sales exec queried this week by VARIETY. Snaper's timing was especially condemned, for it was pointed out that all factions of the industry are currently deeply concerned and working hard in an attempt to set up an amicable solution to the problems confronting exhib-distrib relationships.

Snaper's views, according to one sales topper, do not represent the bulk of his constituents who, he declared, are anxious to work out fair trade arrangements on a friendly basis. Another sales chief brushed off Snaper's blast as merely an attempt to drum up ballyhoo for the forthcoming Allied convention in Chicago Nov. 17-19. "It's a gimmick to assure a large attendance of Allied members at the convention," the exec declared. "Snaper apparently feels that the recent TOA convention was too milquetoasty, and he wants to arm his members with some ammunition to sound off."

Snaper rapped every phase of exhib-distrib dealings, asserting that the time for drastic action had arrived since attempts to work out friendly solutions had failed. He charged that arbitration was farther from reality than generally believed.

Beznor Raps Snaper

Savage blast which National Allied prexy Wilbur Snaper recently leveled upon distributors' representatives in the field was characterized this week by a top exec of the salesmen's union as a "gratuitous outburst completely incompatible with the sane, responsible viewpoint of the great ma-

Reserve Rule on Suit Vs. Brandt for 'Henry'

New York Supreme Court Judge Morris Eder reserved decision yesterday (Tues.) on a motion for a preliminary injunction to bar exhibition of 20th-Fox's "O. Henry's Full House" at Brandt's Trans-Lux 52nd Street theatre. Pic is set to open at the house tomorrow (Thurs.)

Action was brought by Richard Davis, owner of the Fine Arts theatre, N. Y., who claims he has a contract with 20th for the pic and charges the distrib, by throwing the booking to Brandt, is violating it. Harry McIntyre, lawyer for 20th, told the court that Davis had orally repudiated the contract.

Monroe Stein, Davis' counsel, argued that, regardless of any conversations Davis might have had with 20th, there was no legal basis for oral abrogation of a contract. Abe Mopper represented Trans-Lux at the hearing.

Mpls.' Free Transit Plan for B.O. Hike Draws Greater Fire

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Loop theatres' promoted free streetcar and bus transportation into downtown Thursday nights continues to come under more fire and encounter opposition from uptown business sections and organizations as well as neighborhood exhibitor groups.

Tieup between the showhouses and the traction company has the latter providing the free transportation into the loop between 7 and 9 p.m., riders, however, being required to pay the regular 15c fare for the return trip. Theatres have been plugging the "Family Nights" in their newspapers, etc., in addition to giving away 1,000 free admissions to holders of lucky number certificates distributed on the cars and busses.

Groups of neighborhood and suburban exhibitors have been fighting for abandonment of the free transportation, and now the city council has before it a protest from the Central Ave. Commercial Assn., neighborhood business group, claiming the practice is dis-

MEX DUTY WOULD COST U.S. COS. 200G YEARLY

Mexican government's sudden action in imposing an import duty on American films stands to cost the U. S. distribs about $200,000 annually. The levy, which went into effect Oct. 11, amounts to a little more than $1 a pound.

The Mexican measure came on the heels of a government attempt to push a 50% playing time quota through Congress. Quota is now being fought by U. S. distribs and Mexican exhibs. John G. McCarthy, Motion Picture Export Assn. v.p., over the weekend phoned the American Embassy in Mexico City, urging Ambassador William O'Dwyer to use his influence in combatting the import duty.

Holiday, Weather Bolster B'way; 'World' Socko 31G, 'For You' Big 44G, 'Best Friend'-Vaude Nice 25G

Combination of Columbus Day holiday weekend, new product and good weather is giving Broadway first-runs a nice lift. With Canada's Thanksgiving being observed Monday (13), this meant an influx of Canadians into N.Y. over the weekend, further swelling biz.

Strong new entry is "World in His Arms," which is socko $31,000 or near at the Mayfair. "Just For You" is nearly as big with $44,000 at the much larger Capitol. New bill with eight acts of vaude and "Wife's Best Friend" at the Palace is reflecting the Street's upbeat with a fancy $25,000.

"Because You're Mine," with stageshow, is soaring ahead of initial week at the Music Hall with smash $145,000 for current (3d) session, insuring a fourth week. "This Is Cinerama," with 18 shows this round, wound up the second week with $38,500, virtually capacity at the 1,300-seat Broadway.

"Son of Paleface," with Louis Prima band and five De Marco Sisters heading stageshow, finished its second week at the Paramount with sock $70,000, not far from opening round. Third stanza of "Somebody Loves Me," plus Mary Small, Al Bernie and iceshow onstage, wound up with around $82,000, big, at the Roxy.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" continues socko at $48,000 or close in fourth session at the Rivoli. "Merry Widow" still is solid, finishing third frame with $24,000 at the State. It holds indef.

Two important new pictures are being launched today (Wed.). "The Thief," with Johnny Johnston, Jerry Colonna and iceshow onstage, tees off at the Roxy while "Four Poster" is being launched day-date at the Sutton and Victoria. "Affair in Trinidad" moves out of the Vic after a highly successful long run of 11 weeks, final round being okay $8,000. "Poster" supplants "Man in White Suit" at the Sutton, where it hung up a great 28 weeks.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 70-$1.50)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (8th wk). Current week ending today climbing to big $12,500 to top seventh week's $9,000. Holds a ninth week, with "Limelight" (UA) due in Oct. 23.

'NOT MARRIED' FAST 15G, K.C.; 'PIRATE' 5G

Kansas City, Oct. 14.

First-runs continue the moderate pace of he last few weeks, best newcomer being "We're Not Married" at the four Fox Midwest houses. "Caribbean" at the Missouri looms fair. "Ivanhoe" in third week is sock. Weather continues dry and warmish. Orpheum reopens tomorrow (Wed.) for road show policy on "Snows of Kilimanjaro."

Estimates for This Week

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 50-75)—"Les Miserables" (20th) (2d wk). Holding fast at $2,700. Last week, $3,000.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Fine $13,000. Holds a fourth. Last week, $17,000.

Missouri (RKO) (2,650; 50-75)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Tale of 5 Women" (Indie). Light $5,000. Last week, "Sudden Fear" (RKO) and "Captain Black Jack" (Indie), same.

Paramount (Tri-States) (1,900; 50-75) — "Caribbean" (Par). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Just for You" (Par) (2d wk), fine $8,000.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 50-85) — "Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue) (2d wk). Steady $1,600. Last week, sturdy $2,000.

'Quiet' Noisy $13,000, Indpls.

Indianapolis, Oct. 14.

Biz is moderately good at first-runs here despite the overload of competition from two rival iceshows in town. "Quiet Man" at Indiana is clicking nicely for socko top coin. "Lost in Alaska" at Circle and "Miracle of Fatima" at Keith's are okay.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,800; 50-76)—"Lost in Alaska" (U) and "Because of Sally" (U). Okay $9,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Army Bound" (Mono), nice $10,500.

Indiana (C-D) (3,200; 50-76)—"Quiet Man" (Rep). Sock $13,000 or near. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Breakdown" (Indie), $11,000.

'Ivanhoe' Great $22,000 In Balto; 'Sky' Big 10G

Baltimore, Oct. 14.

There's a general brightening all along the downtown sector here this week with "Ivanhoe" setting a strong pace at Loew's Century. Also in good shape is "The Big Sky" agressively sold at the Town. Remainder of list is in equally good shape.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 35-$1.20) — "Ivanhoe" (M-G). Smash $22,000. Last week, "Washington Story" (M-G), $5,200.

Chi Okay; 'Ivanhoe' Terrif $70,000, 'Caribbean' 10½G, 'Stranger' Big 7G, 'Hellgate' Neat 11G, '1 Minute' 17G, 2d

Chicago, Oct. 14.

"Ivanhoe" is far out in front of other Windy City entries currently with a tremendous $70,000 at the Oriental. Normally the Oriental has a straight 98c tap but for "Ivanhoe" the price has been upped to 98c on weekday mornings and $1.25 at all other times.

Only three other newcomers in the Loop. "Stranger in Between" should get a nifty $7,000 at the Surf. Roosevelt and United Artists are running neck and neck, with the former playing "Caribbean" and "Woman of North Country," for okay $10,500. "Hellgate" and "The Jungle" at United Artists shapes trim $11,000.

State-Lake is pacing the holdovers with a strong total for "One Minute to Zero" and "The Fighter." Chicago, with "Monkey Business" plus Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healey onstage, looks fair in second week.

Estimates for This Week

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 98-$1.25)—"Monkey Business" (20th) and stageshow (2d wk). Nsg $34,000. Last week, oke $40,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 55-98)—"Horizons West" (U) and "All Because of Sally" (U) (2d wk). Holding up well at $8,000. Last week, fine $9,300.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 98-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G). Looking for tremendous $70,000. Last week, "Sudden Fear" (RKO), $15,000 in fourth week.

Palace (Eitel) (2,500; 98)—"Just for You" (Par) (3d-final wk). Fairish $12,000. Last week, $15,800.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 55-98)—"One Minute to Zero" (RKO) and "The Fighter" (U) (2d wk). Nice $17,000 or near. Last week, excellent $25,200.

Surf (H&E Balaban) (685; 98)—"Stranger in Between" (U). Building to great $7,000. Last week, "High Treason" (Indie), okay $3,300.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 55-98)—"Hellgate" (Lip) and "The Jungle" (Lip). Trim $11,000. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col) and "California Conquest" (Col), $8,900.

Woods (Essaness) (1,073; 98)—"Jumping Jacks" (Par) (6th wk). Off to $11,000 in 9 days. Last week, big $12,000. "Lusty Men" (RKO) opens next.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i. e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Thief' Mighty $14,000, Philly

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.

New, strong product is booming biz here currently. Perhaps standout is the way "The Thief" reopened the small-seater Aldine, with a smash session assured. Solid exploitation with personals by Rita Gam is helping to launch "Thief." A new house record looms for "Ivanhoe" at the Fox with a huge total. Overflow is aiding the Stanton. "Big Sky," rated above normal, is a bit disappointing at Goldman. "Wife's Best Friend" shapes strong at Midtown. New stageshow headed by Thelma Carpenter with "Capt. Blackjack" looks fine, being best of three bills since Earle resumed stage bills.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-99)—"Thief" (UA). Socko $14,000. Last week, house was closed.

Arcadia (S&S) (625; 85-$1.20)—"Merry Widow" (M-G) (7th wk). Off to $5,500. Last week, okay $6,300.

Boyd (WB) (2,360; 80-$1.30)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (3d wk). Big $15,300. Last week, $15,000.

Earle (WB) (2,700; 50-$1.10)—"Captain Blackjack" (Indie) plus Ivory Joe Hunter orch, Thelma Carpenter, Larry Darnell onstage. Fine $20,000. Last week, "Jungle" (Lip) with Erskine Hawkins orch, Orioles onstage, $17,500.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 99-$1.50)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G). Terrific $60,000 or near. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) (3d wk) plus fight pix, $10,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Big Sky" (RKO). Oke $18,000. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col) (2d wk), $12,000.

Masthaum (WB) (4,360; 85-$1.20)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Big $22,000. Last week, $29,500.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,000; 50-99)—"Wife's Best Friend" (20th). Strong $8,000. Last week, "Beware My Lovely" (RKO), $5,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 50-99)—"Everything I Have Is Yours" (M-G) (2d wk). Down to $10,000. Last week, fast $18,000.

Stanley (WB) (2,900; 50-99) — "Crimson Pirate" (WB) (2d wk). Off to $9,500. Last week, trim $21,000.

Stanton (WB) (1,473; 50-99) — "Hideout" (UA) and "Strange World" (UA). Fine $9,500. Last week, "You're in Army Now" (U) and "Washington Slept Here" (U) (reissues), $6,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 85-$1.20)—"Magic Box" (Indie). Dull $3,500. Last week, "Dreamboat" (20th) (5th wk), $3,200.

'Fatima' Sockeroo 10G, L'ville; 'Ivanhoe' $16,000

Louisville, Oct. 14.

Pace is accelerated this week. "Miracle of Fatima" at Mary Anderson is smash as is "Ivanhoe" at State. "Big Sky" looks solid at Rialto.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 54-75)—"High Noon" (UA) (4th wk). Good $4,000, after last week, $4,500.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,200; 75-$1.10) — "Miracle of Fatima" (WB). Smash $10,000 or more. Sure h.o. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) (2d wk), $6,500.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 54-75) — "Big Sky" (RKO). Solid $14,000. Last week, "Just For You" (Par), $15,000.

State (Loew's (3,000; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G). Shapes socko $16,000, upped scale helping. Last week, "Son of Ali Baba" (U) and "You For Me" (M-G), nice $12,000.

Mpls. Perking; 'Ivanhoe' Terrif $18,000, 'Pirate' Hefty 10G, 'Somebody' 9G

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Minnesota football games continue to bring large weekend crowds to town and cold weather also should help, but neither seems to help most spots. However, "Ivanhoe" apparently needs no aid, being smash at Century. Two other important newcomers, "Crimson Pirate" hefty at Orpheum, and "Somebody Loves Me," fairish at Radio City, looms as best new pix. "Quiet Man" still is good in its fourth week at Lyric.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Par) (1,600; 76-$1) — "Ivanhoe" (M-G). No squawks about slightly tilted tariff. Smash $18,000. Last week, "Les Miserables" (20th) (2d wk), $3,000 at 76c scale.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 50-76)—"My Man and I" (M-G). Slow $3,700. Last week, "Devil Makes Three" (M-G), $3,400.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 50-76) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) (4th wk). Word-of-mouth raves have kept this one rolling. Boasting longest run of any recent Loop offering. Satisfactory $4,000. Last week, same.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-76)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par). Fairly good $9,000. Last week, "Just for You" (Par) (2d wk), $6,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 40-76) — "Crimson Pirate" (WB). Hefty $10,000 or near. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col), $7,500.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 40-76)—"Watusi" (Indie) and "Cajun" (Indie) (reissues). Slow $4,000. Last week, "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) (2d wk), $6,000.

State (Par) (2,300; 50-76) — "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th). Dull $5,000. Last week, "Way of Goucho" (20th), $6,000.

'Ivanhoe' Paces L.A., Smash $60,000; 'Caribbean' Dim 15G, 'Fear' Big 30G, 2d; 'Quiet' Loud 19G, 'Fatima' 15G for 2d

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.

Local boxoffice play is going to "Ivanhoe," with upped scale in two Paramount theatres, with a giant $60,000 possible, and record weekend trade at the Hollywood house. Other two new bills are doing modest trade. "Caribbean," in three spots, is getting $15,000 while combo of "Untamed Women" and "Lugosi Meets Brooklyn Gorilla" is thin $9,500 in four spots.

The eight holdover bills current are mainly rated good to okay but last week's openers, with the exception of "Sudden Fear," failed to hold as expected. Second frame of "Fear," in two situations, locks near $30,000 or better.

"Quiet Man" shapes nice $19,000 in second session in two houses. "Miracle of Fatima" looks oke $15,000 in second round, two locations. Second frame of "Because You're Mine" is rated fine $18,000 in initial holdover round, two sites.

Estimates for This Week

Los Angeles, Chinese, Loyola (FWC) (2,097; 2,048; 1,248; 70-$1.10)—"Caribbean" (Par) and "Arctic Flight" (Mono). Mild $15,000. Last week, plus Ritz, excluding Loyola, "Son Ali Baba" (U) and "Stranger in Between" (U), $16,000.

Los Angeles, Hollywood Paramounts (UPT-F&M) (3,200; 1,430; 90-$1.50)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G). Giant $60,000. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col) and "Oriental Evil" (Indie) (L. A. Par only) (2d wk), $13,400.

Uptown, Vogue, Globe, El Rey (FWC) (1,719; 885; 782; 861; 70-$1.10)—'Untamed Women" (UA) and "Lugosi Meets Brooklyn Gorilla" (Indie). Thin $10,000 or near. Last week, Loyola, Vogue, Globe, Uptown, "Black Swan" (20th) and "Shores Tripoli" (20th) (reissues), $12,400.

Hollywood, Wiltern, Orpheum (WB-Metropolitan) (2,756; 2,344; 2,213; 70-$1.10)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Midnight Melody" (Rep) (reissue) (Orpheum only) (3d wk). Off to $14,000. Last week, big $16,200.

Loew's State, Egyptian (UATC) (2,404; 1,538; 70-$1.10)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk). Fine $18,000. Last week, way below hopes at $23,000.

Hillstreet, Pantages, Fox Beverly (RKO-FWC) (2,752; 2,812; 1,352; 60-$1.20)—"Sudden Fear" (RKO) (2d wk). Neat $30,000. Last week, $43,600.

Beverly Hills, Downtown (WB) (1,612; 1,757; 80-$1.50)—"Miracle Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Solid $15,000. Last week, good $21,000 but under hopes.

United Artists, Wilshire (UATC-FWC) (2,100; 2,296; 80-$1.50)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Nice $19,000. Last week, $26,400.

Canon (ABC) (533; $1.20)—"Full House" (20th) (4th wk). Good $6,500. Last week, $7,000.

Rialto, Hawaii (Metropolitan-G&S) (840; 1,106; 70-$1.10)—"Monkey Business" (20th) (2d wk). Mild $11,000. Last week, $13,300.

Four Star (UATC) (900; 70-90)—"Cyrano" (UA) and "Kon-Tiki" (RKO) (reissues) (3d wk). Oke $1,000. Last week, $1,600.

'Snows' Wham 32G, Cleve; 'Pirate' 15G

Cleveland, Oct. 14.

The Hipp's "Snows of Kilimanjaro" is collecting plenty of the long-green stuff and heading for top honors with huge total this stanza. "Because You're Mine" at the State looks only okay. Allen having fast sailing with "Crimson Pirate" but "Caribbean" at Stillman looks only mild. "Quiet Man" on moveover to Ohio continues to be big.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (Warner) (3,000; 55-85)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB). Smart $15,000. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (3d wk), oke $9,000 in 5 days.

Hipp (Telemanagement) (3,700; 55-85)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Terrific pull over weekend and going to huge $32,000. Last week, "Les Miserables" (20th), $14,000.

Lower Mall (Community) (585; 55-85)—"Stranger in Between" (Indie). Average $4,200. Last week, "Cry, Beloved Country" (UA), $3,000.

Ohio (Loew's) (3,300; 55-85) —"Quiet Man" (Rep) (m.o.). Fine $6,000 on third downtown lap. Holds again. Last week, "Son of Paleface" (Par) (m.o.), $6,500.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-85) —"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Just okay $12,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk), nice $12,000.

Stillman (Loew's) (2,700; 55-85) —"Caribbean" (Par). Moderate $8,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G), excellent $9,000 in last 9 days of 10-week run at tilted prices.

'For You' Great $16,000, Toronto; 'Buccaneer' Big 11½G, 'Gaucho' Trim 11G

Toronto, Oct. 14.

Apart from extra Thanksgiving midnight shows plus top product, major first-runs are doing top biz, with "Ivanhoe" at upped prices in for continued smash returns on second stanza and "Quiet Man" in fourth frame holding as big as last week. Both are topping newcomers. Canada's Thanksgiving was observed Monday (13). "Just for You" is leading the field of newcomers with "Yankee Buccaneer" and "Miracle of Fatima," also hefty in the holiday mood.

Estimates for This Week

Crest, Downtown, Glendale, Mayfair, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (863; 1,059; 955; 470; 698; 694; 35-60)—"Young Man with Ideas" (M-G) and "High Sierra" (WB) (reissue). Nice $16,500. Last week, "California Conquest" (Col) and "Army Bound" (Mono), $15,000.

Eglinton (FP) (1,080; 40-80)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB). Good

H.O.s Help Pitt, 'Quiet' Loud $11,000 For 2d, 'Minute' Sock 11G, 'Gaucho' 6G

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.

It looks as if "Quiet Man" at Fulton will turn a trick that has never before been duplicated here, and do as smash in second week as on the first. Picture likely will stay at least four stanzas. "Ivanhoe" is staying well out front in third stanzas at the larger Penn. Among the new entries, "One Minute to Zero" at Warner way ahead of the pack. "Stranger In Between" is doing fine in Squirrel Hill h.o., but "Way of a Gaucho" at Harris and "Caribbean" at Stanley are both unbelievably dull.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 50-85)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Will get as much this week, smash $11,000, as it did on first round. May even do slightly better than opening week.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 50-85)—"Way of a Gaucho" (20th). Started slowly and figures to wind up same way at dull $6,000, if that. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col), $5,000.

Penn (Loew's) (3,300; 85-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). No sharp drop here yet. Shapes big $18,500 this week, and will hold. Last week, socko $20,500.

Squirrel Hill (WB) (900; 50-85)—"Stranger In Between" (U) (2d wk). Won't dip much below $2,000, plenty okay. Last week, nice 2,500.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 50-85)—"Caribbean" (Par). Reviews virtually wrapped this one up. Dismal $8,500. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), $11,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 50-85)—"One Minute to Zero" (RKO). Smash $11,000, best here in a long time for a regular-run pic. Holds, natch. Last week, "Lady of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk), okay $6,500 at advanced prices, or better than $45,000 on run.

'Pirate' Rousing $15,000, St. Loo; 'Best Friend' 13G

St. Louis, Oct. 14.

Return of warm weather is doing local film biz no good, with natives going outdoors in droves. "My Wife's Best Friend" looks good at Ambassador. "Ivanhoe" still is fine in third round at Loew's. One of best showings was made by "Crimson Pirate" which rounded out a solid week at the Fox Monday night.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (F&M) (3,000; 60-75)—"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Walla Walla" (Rep). Good $13,000. Last week, "Don't Bother To Knock" (20th) and "Navajo" (Realart), $11,000.

Fox (F&M) (5,000; 60-75) —"Son of Paleface" (Par) and "Bonzo To College" (U). Opened today (Tues.). Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Army Bound" (Mono), solid $15,000.

Loew's (Loew) (3,172; 50-75) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Fine $14,000 following robust $18,000, second frame.

Missouri (F&M) (3,500; 60-75) —"Monkey Business" (20th) and "Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Mild $8,000 after $9,500 initial stanza.

Pageant (St. L. Amus.) (1,000; 90) — "Les Miserables" (20th). Opens tomorrow (Wed.). Last week, "Lady Vanishes" (UA), oke $3.000.

Shady Oak (St. L. Amus.) (800; 90) — "Les Miserables" (20th). Opens tomorrow (Wed.). Last week, "Tales of Hoffmann" (UA) (3d wk), good $2,500.

'Ivanhoe' Terrif 22G, Det.; 'Quiet' $10,000, 3d

Detroit, Oct. 14.

Too many holdovers will make this a slow week. Only newcomer is "Ivanhoe" at the Adams, where great. "Assignment Paris" is dull in second week at Fox. "Miracle of Fatima" looks strong in third at Madison week. "Quiet Man" is big on third United Artists week.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox-Detroit) (5,000; 70-95) —"Assignment Paris" (Col) and "Rainbow Round Shoulder" (Col) (2d wk). Slow $17,000. Last week, $21,000.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 70-95)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Cripple Creek" (Col) (2d wk). Dull $12,000. Last week, $16,000.

Palms (UD) (2,961; 70-95) —"One Minute to Zero" (RKO) and "Feudin' Fools" (Mono) (2d wk). Unexciting $10,000. Last week, $17,000.

Madison (UD) (1,900; 70-95) —"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (3d wk). Good $12,000. Last week, $15,500.

United Artists (UA) (1,900; 70-95)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (3d wk). Big $10,000. Last week, $9,000.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 95-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G). Great $22,000. Last week, "Man and I" (M-G), $5,000.

D.C. Dull; 'Devil' Digs Hep 7G, 'Untamed'-Vaude Fair 17G; 'Quiet' 12G, 2d

Washington, Oct. 14.

This is one of dullest sessions the main stem has known in months. Even the World Series last week did not cut into biz to the extent that rains did this session. Few newcomers on scene, and not a winner in the lot. "Devil Makes Three" at Loew's Columbia, is rated pleasing while "Untamed Frontier" plus vaude at Capitol, shapes mild. Holdovers generally are steady, with "Quiet" still strong in second round at the Warner.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 55-95)—"Untamed Frontier'' (U) plus vaude. Mild $17,000. Last week, "Fearless Fagan" (M-G) plus vaude, so-so $18,000.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 50-80) —"Devil Makes Three" (M-G). Pleasant $7,000. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par) (2d wk), okay $5,000.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 50-85)—"Cry Beloved Country" (Indie) (3d wk). Steady $3,500 for second consecutive week, and moves on.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 50-85)—"One Minute to Zero" (RKO) (2d

Cincy Crisp, 'Smith' Lusty $10,000, 'Paris' Good 12G, 'Ivanhoe' 21G, 2d

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.

Another rosy round is on tap for downtown houses here this week. "Assignment Paris," in sturdy stride at the Palace, and "Hurricane Smith," a favorable looker at the Capitol, head the new bills. "Ivanhoe" retains top spot by a wide margin with a giant second stanza figure, and will stay on in the big Albee. "Night Without Sleep" has the Grand in moderate tempo.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Tall $21,000 trailing great $28,000 preem. Stays a third, something rare at this flagship.

Capitol—(RKO) (2,000; 55-75)—"Hurricane Smith" (Par). Good $10,000. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), $10,500.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 55-75) —"Night Without Sleep" (20th) and "Red Snow" (Col). Fairish $7,000. Last week, "Strange Fascination" (Col) and "Captain Black Jack" (Col), $6,500.

Lyric (RKO) 1,400; 44-75)—"Just For You" (Par) (m.o.). No complaint at $5,500. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) (m.o.), $4,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-75)—"Assignment Paris" (Col). Pleasing $12,000. Last week, "Just For You" (Par), $14,000.

'Quiet' Smash 16G, Buff.; 'Bonzo' 10G

Buffalo, Oct. 14.

Biz is shaping better all around at first-runs currently. Pacing newcomers is "Quiet Man," socko at the Century. "Son of Ali Baba" and "Bonzo Goes To College" is rated okay at Lafayette while "Hurricane Smith" looms spry at Paramount. "Ivanhoe" continues neat in third round at the Buffalo. Also in third stanza, "Miracle of Fatima" still is strong at Center.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Loews). (3,000; 74-$1.20) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Neat $12,000. Last week, big $15,500.

Paramount (Par) (3,000; 40-70)—"Hurricane Smith" (Par). Spry $12,000. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), $13,500.

Center (Par) (2,100; 70-$1) —"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (3d wk). Still strong at $10,000 or better. Last week, $13,000.

Lafayette (Basil) (3,000; 40-70)—"Son of Ali Baba" (U) and "Bonzo To College" (U). Okay $10,000. Last week, "Ladies of Chorus" (Col) and "Strange Fascination" (Col), $7,000.

Century (20th Cent.) (3,000; 40-70) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) and "Fuedin' Fools" (Mono). Socko $16,000 or over. Last week, "Big Sky" (RKO) and "Dolan Goes AWOL" (Indie), $10,200.

'FEAR' STOUT $18,000, FRISCO; 'MONKEY' 17G

San Francisco, Oct. 14.

Earthquake tremors here Sunday (13) are blamed by some exhibitors for slack weekend holiday biz. However, it is not preventing "Sudden Fear" from garnering a nice total on week. "Monkey Business" is only okay at the Fox while "Yankee Buccaneer" looms mild at Orpheum. "Merry Widow" is down considerably in its second Warfield session but "Miracle of Fatima" shapes nice in second St. Francis round. "Crimson Pirate" rates okay in first holdover at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 65-95)—"Sudden Fear" (RKO). Nice $18,000. Last week, "Fearless Fagan" (M-G) and "Holiday For Sinners" (M-G), only $9,000.

Fox (FWC) (4,651; 65-95)—"Monkey Business" (20th) and "Sea Tiger" (Mono). Okay $17,000 or near. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep) (3d wk), big $13,500.

Warfield (Loew's) (2,656; 65-95) —"Merry Widow" (M-G) (2d wk). Off to $12,000. Last week, socko $20,000.

Paramount (Par) (2,646; 65-95)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) (2d wk). Oke $13,000. Last week, good $18,500.

St. Francis (Par) (1,400; $1.20-$1.50)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Still nice at $11,500. Last week, great $17,000.

Orpheum (No. Coast) (2,448; 65-95)—"Yankee Buccaneer" (U) and "Pool Of London" (U). Mild $9,000. Last week, "Bonzo To College" (U) and "Lavender Hill Mob" (U), $8,500.

United Artists (No. Coast) (1,207; 65-95)—"The Ring" (UA). Nsg $7,500. Last week, "My Man And I" (M-G), thin $5,500.

Clay (Rosener) (400; 65-85)—"High Treason" (Indie) (5th wk). Good $1,900. Last week, $2,100.

Larkin (Rosener) (400; 65-85)—"La Ronde" (Indie) and "Secret of Mayerling" (Indie) (reissues). Okay $2,000. Last week, "Under Paris Sky" (Indie) and "Grand Illusion" (Indie) (2d wk), same.

Vogue (S. F. Theatres) (377; 85-$1)—"Young And Damned" (Indie) (2d wk). Off to $1,300. Last week, oke $2,000.

'Pirate' Sturdy $22,000, Denver; 'Horizons' 12G

Denver, Oct. 14.

"Crimson Pirate" shapes standout here this stanza for new pix, with solid takings in two houses. "Horizons West" with "Lavendar Hill Mob" is good at Paramount. "Miracle of Fatima" is doing well enough in second Broadway stanza to win third round at spot. "Ivanhoe" looks nice at Orpheum, and is staying a third also.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (1,400; 50-85)—"Woman of North Country" (Rep) and "WAC from Walla Walla" (Rep), day-date with Tabor, Webber. Okay $8,000. Last week, "Dream of Jeanie" (Rep) and "Tembo" (Rep), $6,000.

Broadway (Wolfberg) (1,200; 60-$1.20)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Good $9,000 or close. Stays again. Last week, fine $10,000.

Denham (Cockrill) (1,750; 50-85) —"Just for You" (Par) (3d wk). Fair $8,000. Last week, nice $11,500.

Denver (Fox) (2,525; 50-85)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "To Have, Have Not" (WB) (reissue), day-date with Esquire. Fancy $18,000. Last week, "Diplomatic Courier" (20th), $15,000.

Esquire (Fox) (742; 50-85)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "To Have, Have Not" (WB) (reissue). Fine $4,000. Last week, "Diplomatic Courier" (20th), $3,000.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 74-$1.20) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Nice $16,000. Holds over. Last week, smash $29,000.

Paramount (Wolfberg) (2,200; 50-85)—"Horizons West" (U) and "Lavendar Hill Mob" (Indie). Good $12,000. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th), $11,000.

Tabor (Fox) (1,967; 50-85)—"Woman of North Country" (Rep) and "WAC Walla Walla" (Rep). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Dream of Jeanie" (Rep) and "Tembo" (RKO), $6.500.

Vogue (Pike) (600; 60-90)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (reissue). Fair $1,700. Last week, "Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue), $2,000.

Webber (Fox) (750; 50-85)—"Woman of North Country" (Rep) and "WAC Walla Walla" (Rep). Fairish $3,000. Last week "Dream of Jeanie" (Rep) and "Tembo" (RKO), $2,700.

Mild Upsurge of Yank-Backed Prod. In Brit. Expected From Anglo-U.S. Pact

London, Oct. 7.

A modest upsurge of Yank sponsored production in Britain is anticipated by the government as a result of the settlement of the Anglo-American film negotiations in Washington last month. A Board of Trade spokesman said that greater film activity would be launched to absorb the extra coin frozen under the new pact.

It is estimated that nearly half of the British earnings of the Hollywood producers will be iced under the latest pact. The basic convertiblity agreement of $17,000,000, plus the extras for production and distribution bonuses, will absorb about $21,000,000 out of the total earnings of approximately $40,000,000.

A substantial slice of the balance will be used for payment of release prints, but it is reckoned that the bulk will be invested in British production. Since the first pact was signed in 1947, there has apparently been little inclination on the part of the majors to take advantage of the other "permitted uses."

Of the $5,900,000 additional earnings which the Anglo-American negotiators agreed should be frozen, approximately $4,500,000 are expected to accrue in the current financial year. Higher admission charges which were introduced to facilitate the Eady scheme yielded American distributors $1,400,000 in its first year. British films financed by Hollywood with their frozen assets still qualify for their share of the Eady fund.

Govt. Coin Into Prod. Of 28 British Films During Last 6 Months

London, Oct. 7.

Government coin has gone into the production of 28 British pix in the last six months. That is the total of loans made by the British Film Finance Corp. since the beginning of April.

The total includes three British Lion releases which are financed out of the umbrella loan of $8,400,000 made on the creation of the state films bank, and a further six sponsored by two of the three groups which were launched last year. Group 3 has had loans okayed for three features and British Film Makers (J. Arthur Rank Group) also had three passed for three subsidiaries.

Most of the loans were made to independent companies for single productions, but ACT Films, the co-operative unit launched by the Technicians Union, has had advances for three supporting features. Butchers and Faro Films had loans for two each. Other government coin was used for the Romulus film, "The Innocents in Paris" which has just finished rolling, Mayflower's "An Appointment in London" and Major Productions' "Palace Pier" which stars Ron Randell.

MAJORS' 10-MO. NET $9,300,000 IN JAPAN

Toyko, Oct. 7.

Net receipts for the 10 U. S. major film distributors in Japan since they began their own distribution last January totalled $9,300,000 at the end of last August. Also reported that U. S. indies and European companies netted $2,152,000 during the first six months of year.

Breakdown of major company receipts is as follows: Metro, $1,510,000; WB, $1,375,000; Paramount, $1,360,000; 20th-Fox, $1,300,000; RKO, $870,000; Columbia, $870,000; Universal, $830,000; Republic, $780,000; United Artists, $300,000; Allied Artists (joined majors in April), $154,000.

'Seagulls' In New Zealand

Melbourne, Oct. 7.

At end of the Melbourne season of "Seagulls Over Sorrento," at the Comedy, third week in October, company will sail for New Zealand, opening in Christchurch Oct. 25.

The New Zealand itinerary includes 13 cities, through January. J. C. Williamson Theatres is sponsoring the tour.

Strike of Italo Govt. Radio Technicians Set

Rome, Oct. 7

The technical workers of the Italian National Broadcasting System (RAI) announced here this week that they will strike in the next few weeks, but no date has been announced. Technicians are demanding a basic 5% raise in a new national contract to be signed by the workers with RAI. RAI has offered a raise of 3%.

RAI holds a monopoly on Italian broadcasts. In the event of a walkout, heads of the broadcasting system, together with non-striking members would carry on despite a strike.

New Fall Season For Paris Niteries Opens But Few Show Changes

Paris, Oct. 7.

Paris niteries have reopened for fall biz, and in most cases with the same shows except for slight revisions. The big niteries remained open for tourist loot all summer, but the smaller, offbeat ones shuttered for their annual vacations.

The St. Germain-Des-Pres cabarets, The Rose Rouge and Fontaine Des Quatres Saisons, are open again with the same solid, offbeat shows. The Rose Rouge has the Yves Joly troupe with its white-gloved hands cavorting on a black background. The sad ballading of Juliette Greco and the funny takeoff on film plots by the Yves Robert group round out the show. Quatres Saisons has a good puppet number and a fine song trio in Les Garcons De La Rue. The expert shenanigans of the Grenier-Hussenot group also are good.

Rene Bell has her audience-participation club open again with patrons competing for the best gams, etc. Le Carrolls is open with Mouloudji giving out with his sad songs of strife and love. This is a change in this usual all-femme club. The Lido still goes on with its top cabaret show and the Nouvelle Eve is still giving with the lush parading and solid staging for those willing to shell out for top prices and a hefty cover for some old-fashioned Gallic atmosphere.

1,261,000 See 'Fox' In W. Germany in 3 Weeks

Berlin, Oct. 7.

20th-Fox reports that its "Desert Fox" has played to 1,261,000 patrons during the first three weeks in 53 cinemas, located in 33 West German cities. "Fox" is the most talked-about film current in this sector of Germany. Berlin preem of pic has not been set yet.

During the first half of 1952, 164 pix have been tradeshown here. U. S. product leads the list with 96 films, or 58.7%, followed by 27 German films, 16.4%; 16 French, 9.7%, and eight Italian pictures, 4.9%.

Greta Garbo's 1932 pic, "Mata Hari," opened at usual French preem house, Cinema Paris.

Other U. S. films currently running at preem houses include "His Kind of Woman" (RKO), "Diplomatic Courier" (20th), "Detective Story" (Par), and "Casbah" (WB).

London Variety Tent's $112,000 for Charity

London, Oct. 7.

In the three years since the launching of the London Tent of the Variety Club more than $112,000 has been raised for charity. A Boys' Club has been endowed in East London and a playing field opened in South London.

The achievements of the London organization were listed by Chief Barker David E. Griffiths, at the first annual dinner of the London tent. That affair alone netted upwards of $8,000.

Presentations were made to former Chief Barkers Robert S. Woolf, the first to hold the office, who was presented with a pair of antique silver candlesticks, and C. J. Latta, who received a canteen of Georgian silver.

WB's Mex City Office Wins Distribs' Tax Row

Mexico City, Oct. 7.

The local WB office is receiving praise from other U. S. and Mexican film distributors because victor in spearheading an appeal to the national supreme court against the Ministry of Finance. It had classified distributors with those effected by the mercantile income tax law.

WB argued for the other distribs that the ministry was wrong in classifying them as industrialists whereas they are recognized by the general laws of Mexico as merchants. The court agreed. Decision saves the distributors $369,000 in taxes.

'Porgy' Smash Hit in London

London, Oct. 14.

After days of uncertainty arising from union opposition to the employment of an American conductor, "Porgy and Bess" opened on schedule last Thursday (9) in triumphant fashion. It clicked immediately and spontaneously, with the opening ovation ranked with the best.

Most of the morning crix shared the audience enthusiasm, and there is little doubt that this George Gershwin colored opera, with William Warfield, Cab Calloway and Leontyne Price in the leads, will give the Stoll Theatre its biggest hit in a long time. Show was presented by Blevins Davis and Robert Breen. Its London opening followed its successful Continental tour.

Dispute with the Musicians Union was resolved by an accommodation arrangement under which the company, in addition to Alexander Smallens, has employed a British batoner. Once he has mastered the score, the latter will alternate with Smallens.

For its first four performances "Porgy" grossed $10,867 (excluding $1,128 tax) against a weekly capacity of $26,600. There is already a large and growing demand for tickets and the musical looks set for a major click engagement.

"Letter From Paris," by Dodie Smith, opened at the Aldwych last Friday (10). Play, which is presented by Tennent Productions, is adapted from Henry James' novel "The Reverberator." Directed by Peter Glenville, with settings and costumes by Oliver Messel, the piece features Scott McKay, Nicholas Phipps, Eliot Makeham, Brenda Bruce and Nicholas Hannen.

Comedy, though long drawn out, was cordially received, with Miss Bruce winning chief honors. Chances for success are even.

BERLIN COPS SHUTTER ALL GAMBLING CASINOS

Berlin, Oct. 7.

All 29 West Berlin gambling (Ecarte) casinos were suddenly closed by police order last week. For several days the Berlin police have claimed that casino owners did not stick to the police-approved gambling rules. Finally the local cops handed the casino owners written police orders to stop gambling at once.

The crackdown resulted from probes carried out by plainclothesmen which revealed gambling in all spots was not following official regulations. Berlin's District Administration Court, U. S. Sector, licensed gambling in November, 1950, since Ecarte was not considered a game of chance. Investigations revealed that many persons playing at the casinos had no idea of the rules. They just placed their cards, and waited to win or lose. The casinos have threatened to file suit if the ban wasn't lifted immediately.

70,000,000 See U.S. Army's 16m Film Shows in Korea During Past 18 Mos.

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 7.

About 70,000,000 "admissions" have been recorded by the U. S. Army operators of 16m "houses" in Korea during the 18 months that the Far East Command Special Services Section has been showing the latest U. S. films to United Nations troops.

Nearly 22,000 prints have toured the Kimchi circuit in the period. Four new features arrive at the Seoul office each week, 12 prints for each feature. The films are shown in various kinds of theatres ranging from modern houses in Pusan and Seoul to ozoners, situated in some cases near enemy positions.

Recognizing the entertainment value of screen productions, and in anticipation of comparative inactivity if a truce is reached at Panmunjom, Special Services plans to erect about 100 pre-fab theatres throughout South Korea, each having a seating capacity of 180. A model house is already undergoing tests in Japan.

Biggest headache of Maurice E. Barr, civilian head of the Seoul office, is the upkeep of over 400 projectors owned by Special Services plus others borrowed from the Army Signal Corps. To keep the machines working, Barr has four Korean technicians busy overhauling an average of 50 projectors a week. Although most machines have been in service 18 months, Barr's policy of a complete overhaul for each machine that arrives in his shop, no matter how minor the ailment, keeps them running smoothly most of the time.

He also conducts short courses in projector operation and maintainance for soldiers sent from units throughout Korea.

Despite his problems, Barr enjoys complete freedom from the biggest one bothering his U. S. counterparts. Unlike distributors and exhibitors at home, Barr never worries about boxoffice—it is always SRO and he employs no cashiers since admission is free.

Mary Martin Pulls Out Of 'So. Pacific' Nov. 8

London, Oct. 7.

The day after she pulls out of the cast of "South Pacific," Mary Martin is scheduled to appear at a charity gala with Noel Coward at the Cafe de Paris. She quits the cast of the musical on Nov. 8.

The following week, Miss Martin leaves for Jamaica before proceeding to New York, but is due to return here in mid-December and will remain in London until early April. It is unlikely she will accept any engagements during this period since the time will be spent mainly with her singing coach.

Julie Wilson takes over the Nellie Forbush role from Miss Martin.

Producers-Distribs Row With Exhibs Over New Industry Rules in Mex

Mexico City, Oct. 14.

Pic producers-distributors and exhibitors lambasted each other anent the film industry law which congress recently approved, by using full-page ads in local dailies. Ads were signed by the Mexico Producers-Distributors Assn. and the National Cinema Exhibitors Assn, as well as the Mexican exhibs union. However, both camps told the press they were gratified by long hearings which the senatorial cinematographic committee accorded their reps. Committee heard the producer-distributor group for four hours and the exhibitors for a little over four hours.

The producers-distributors' ad claimed that "exhibition is ruled by three trusts, two of which control about 80% of Mexico's cinemas. The other is composed of indies who are coerced into the chain. These trusts are unconstitutional since they are monopolies. The two biggies choose pix by drawings and decide which chain plays the film, thus depriving producers-distributors of the right to exhibit advantageously. Exhibitors here jockey Mexican pix so much they are not played long enough to repay the producers even a small part of what they cost. The trusts force exhibition at a fixed price in many parts of Mexico. Producers are also short-ended by a sub-distributor setup that exhibs maintain in the provinces."

Exhibitors forbid screening by competitors. Trusts have cut producers' take that used to be 60% to a maximum of 40% for first-run and 35% for second-run. Exhibitors think only of themselves by forcing double and even triple-feature programs. Most provincial exhibs gyp producers on tax deductions, soaking producers 18%-25% when levies are only 5%-10%. The trusts prevent producers from making an adequate checkup on the boxoffice.

Exhibitors, denying a monopoly, claimed that exhibition is handled by 1,703 different units throughout Mexico. The three big chains, they said, are a big help to the trade since they have provided better cinemas here and in the provinces. Limited exhibition is decided by the public, not the exhibitors, they contended. Producers' percentage was never 60%, and it now runs from 45%-50%, with a 42% average. Branding false the charge of gypping on tax deductions was denied, exhibitors telling producers-distributors that if they catch an exhibitor doing that they should call in the law. Chains never coerce indies to join them because indies do that of their own volition. Charge that exhibitors force producers-distributors to pay all advertising publicity costs was branded untrue.

Pan Bridie's Last Play

Glasgow, Oct. 7.

James Bridie's last play, "The Baikie Charivari," given a preem by Glasgow Citizens' Theatre two years after the playwright's death, was severely panned by crix as being a wordy, argumentative play with little entertainment value.

Piece was originally aimed at TV production, but was never televised. It stars Ursula Jeans, English actress.

J. Arthur Rank Seen As Top Missionary for Brit. Pix in Colorful Biography

By HAROLD MYERS

London, Oct. 7.

Instinctively, J. Arthur Rank must always have had a flair for showmanship. Long before he became Britain's No. 1 film tycoon, when he was content to roll along placidly on the millions that came his way from the family flour milling business, he felt the urge to brighten the Sunday evening services in the schoolroom of his local Methodist church. He introduced a band and films.

That, according to his biographer, Alan Wood, in "Mr. Rank" (Hodder & Stoughton; $2.80), was his humble entry into the intricate world of motion pictures. Yet within 10 years he was in control of a film empire valued at more than $150,000,000, owning two large studios, two major theatre circuits, and having a grip on every branch of the industry.

Rank's first active contact with the industry came through his interest in the Religious Films Society. He was angeling the production of films suitable for showing to church audiences, when he began talking a deal with John Corfield of British National, and eventually was talked into taking a seat on the board, with multi-millionairess Lady Yule as a co-director. Never had an independent outfit had such a potential bankroll. It was in this setup that Rank was first to learn the complex economics of the trade the hard way. It was when British National failed to get a circuit release for its "Turn of the Tide," a film which had been praised by the critics and was a Venice prizewinner, that he first realized that producers were not the men with the whip-hand. Before his anger was finally spent, says the author, he had bought the whole Gaumont-British circuit and much else besides.

Rank came into motion pictures not from a desire to make money—he already had far more than any one man could possibly need—but because it was his duty. The

Arg. Producers Huddle With Govt. On Pix-Making for World Market

Buenos Aires, Oct. 7.

Argentine film producers huddled here in a long confab with Raul A. Apold, government entertainment czar, to seek a formula for turning out films strong enough to compete in the world market. Apold, who holds the title of Press and Information Minister, was highly critical of the producers again. However, the praise for Argentine pictures at the Venice Film Festival has convinced some producers that it is only a matter of doing a good selling job on the product. Producer Hugo del Carril, who attended the Venice Fete, particularly believes better marketing of films is needed.

Real hope is centered on the special screenings for "Deshonra" which have been arranged by Clemente Lococo on his present junket to the U. S.

Since the official state banks here are forced to restrict credits to industry, film producers must make their 1953 production plans with a minimum of government financial aid. They also will have to work sparingly with raw stock, always in short supply here. Producers are wrinkling their brows over the constantly increasing production costs. The biggest proportion of the hike is attributable to higher wages to directors, technical staffs and stagehands. Electric power supply costs have been upped here by nearly 90% over the last couple of months.

The studio which presents a big contrast with others in the industry, is Argentina Sono Film, which has done well turning out good commercial films, like "She of Eyes the Color of Time." This just completed a seven-week run at the Gran Rex. By dint of careful planning and real organization, this outfit has got itself fairly well out of the red. However, it is the only major producer able to reimburse the Industrial Credit Bank for the heavy production loans. Sono has a couple of pictures already finished which likely will enhance its good financial position, notably "Naked Passion" which stars Mexican Maria Felix with Carlos Thompson. "Camille," now in production, looks a likely good pic, teaming Zully Moreno with Thompson with Mona Maris in the cast.

Guaranteed Details Losses

Data on the losses suffered by local studios were revealed by Dave Cabouli, president of Guaranteed Pictures, as part of a statement he issued as to authentic credit for direction of his latest picture, "Facundo." Official credit was given to Miguel P. Tato ("Nestor") a real Yank-hater and Hollywood detractor. Cabouli declared that his company was $70,000 in the red on its first production, "Immigrant" (which Aldo Fabbrizzi wrote, directed and acted in). The company's second opus, "The Bridge," lost $20,000.

TV SALON, AUTO SHOW CROWD PARIS HOTELS

Paris, Oct. 14.

The Second Television Salon opened at the Museum of Public Works here with Wladimir Porche, Director of Radiodiffusion-Television, attending. Salon will run two weeks and 30 firms will display new sets. Besides the regular TV picked up from the local transmitters, live shows will be put on at the salon and picked up by various sets in the hall. Accent is being put on advancement of TV sets and their absolute necessity and safety.

Other events such as the Automobile Show and the Nautical Salon are filling hotels here to bursting. Many American tourists are also staying on longer and this makes hotel rooms scarce. Hotel managers here feel that 1952 has been their best year since the war.

Abbey Breaks Long Run

Dublin, Oct. 7.

Abbey Theatre broke its run of Walter Macken's "Home is the Hero," in 11th week, one night last week to present a new production of J. M. Synge's "Playboy of the Western World." Management explained that because of the long-run of Macken's play, patrons asked for an opportunity to see "Playboy," long in rehearsal.

Finds More Top British Pix in N.Y. Than London

London, Oct. 7.

If you want to have a good choice of British pix, go to New York. That's the opinion of Sidney I. Golt, the Board of Trade film expert, who recently returned from the U. S. after participating in the Anglo-U. S. film talks in Washington.

Golt asserted there was far greater variety of British films playing in New York than in London.

'52-'53 Scot Legit Season Looms Big

Glasgow, Oct. 7.

Show biz here is lively, with brisk ticket sales for a big lineup of Christmas revues and pantomimes. Theatre managers anticipate bigger-than-usual drop in attendance in the pre-Christmas season, with coin being scarcer than in many years past. Stop-gap shows will be staged at many houses in the six weeks before the yearend holidays. Estimated that several thousand special bus trips will be made from smaller towns and villages to the big Christmas productions in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, Dundee and Aberdeen.

Coming season's big shows include Tom Arnold's "Jack and the Beanstalk" at Alhambra here, featuring Harry Gordon, Alec Finlay, Robert Wilson and Duncan Macrae; "Cinderella" at Theatre Royal, also here, with new comedian Stanley Baxter as Buttons; "Robinson Crusoe on Ice" at the Empire Theatre, Glasgow; and "Robinson Crusoe," with Jimmy Logan and Douglas Byng, at King's Theatre, Edinburgh.

In addition, the new Tom Arnold Coronation Year musical, "The Glorious Days," is slated for the Empire Theatre, Edinburgh, starring Anna Neagle, and "Call Me Madam," the Irving Berlin musical, with Noel Gordon, for the King's Theatre here. Latter is presented by Jack Hylton.

Austro Exhib Says Govt. Bilked Him on Rental

Vienna, Oct. 7.

That the Austrian government gave the owners of the Lintz Colloseum, Upper Austria film house, only a third of the $600 total paid by the American forces monthly for occupation rent has been revealed in a law suit here. Chancellor Leopold Figl promised that parliament will be asked to settle this and thousands of similar cases.

Recently revealed that the U. S. forces pay considerable amounts for rental of rooms and houses while the finance administration reimburses owners with mere fractions of the total amounts.

Yank Pix Popular In Guatemala, Ethiopia

Washington, Oct. 14.

U. S. film companies took $387,000 out of Guatemala last year on the basis of $861,000 net receipts on Hollywood films, reports Nathan D. Golden, director of the film and photographic products division of the Commerce Department. Gross receipts on all theatres in that country last year came to $1,940,964, of which $1,448,687 was chalked up in Guatemala City. Of the 517 features okayed by censors last year, 343 were from Hollywood. In second place was Mexico with 138 approved.

In Ethiopia, Golden reports, American pix are the most popular shown, some of this appeal being credited to the fact that they carry French and Arabic subtitles. Our pictures have been grossing an average of $128,000 annually there, bringing the American distributors a net of approximately $75,000 in royalties. Tastes there are similar to this country's, but censor cracks down on cowboy and gangster pix, and any others which may reflect against established law and order.

ARNOLD MAY REVIVE 'BAR' FOR CORONATION

London, Oct. 7.

A revival of "Wonder Bar," starring Carl Brisson, is now being considered by Tom Arnold as a Coronation attraction. Brisson played in the original London production at the Savoy in 1930.

If the project materializes, it would probably coincide with Brisson's return date at the Cafe de Paris, where he is currently closing a seven-week stint which has included two extensions.

350 Films on Program Of U.S., Brit. Distribs For Aussie in '52-'53

Sydney, Oct. 7.

Lineup of product set for playdates in Aussie covering the balance of this year and 1953 indicates a total of 350 pictures will be offered by the eight U. S. major distributors and British distribs operating in this zone. Latter include a lineup by the J. Arthur Rank Organization releasing through British Empire Films in which Rank holds a 50% interest.

Metro will have around 51 pix, some of which have hit key spots already via Metro's own circuit outlets. Columbia is listing the same number several of which already have played certain keys. 20th-Fox, with product also from Republic and British indie sources, will hit a high of nearly 75.

Reports from Universal, RKO and Warners indicate a total of 35 each. Paramount has listed 30 films and United Artists a similar total. British Empire will have a selling schedule of about 20 Rank films, plus five independent Britishers and six Eagle Lion. In the foreign field, there will be 17 films on tap for the arty houses.

London Films, allied to Universal, will have around 12 toppers on the new release schedule. With dual bills the general rule here, the prediction is that there will be few pix left in the cans at the end of 1953.

Robbins Set for TV Show in Glasgow Nov. 15

Glasgow, Oct. 7.

Archie Robbins, U. S. comic, who clicked on a recent vaude bill at Empire here, is scheduled to appear on the TV Music Hall, to be telecast from the historic Metropole in Glasgow, Nov. 15. It will be the first TV vaude show from Scotland. Metropole is the house where late Sir Harry Lauder made his first professional appearance. It was then known as the Scotia Music-Hall.

Robbins started an eight-week stint entertaining U. S. forces in Germany and Casablanca Oct. 1. He will fly to Glasgow for the TV show.

French Prods. Swing to Femme, Kid Stories as Film Boxoffice Lures

Paris, Oct. 7.

Lineup of new film productions here shows a large number of femme and moppet pix being skedded for future production or already on the floors. This has been sparked by the recent boxoffice successes by films exploring the female psychology and vehicles either delving into the child world or using a heavy dose of moppet appeal.

Cleaning up here currently is the Christian-Jaque film, "Adorables Creatures" which is a looksee into the frantic love habits and chicaneries of the average femme. The Rene Clement pic, "Forbidden Games," which copped the top laurel at the Venice Film Festival, did fair biz at first-runs, and will now be reissued to cash in on the Venice award. This concerns the lives of two children drawn to each other during the war in contrast to the bumblings of their elders.

Past femme productions also in the money are the controversial Max Ophul's sex roundelay "La Ronde;" the trio of gal pix by Jacqueline Audry, "Gigi," "Minne" and "Olivia;" the Henri Decoin pic, "The Truth About Bebe Donge," a clinical study of how a marriage led to murder; "Caroline Cherie," featuring the lush Martine Carol, and the new Rene Clair pic, "Beauties of the Night" which took the crix award at Venice. This lastnamed covers the romantic gal dreams of an easygoing, young composer.

The juveniles have been before the public eye in "Face to the Wind," "The Last Vacation," "Alone in the World" (about rehabilitation of war orphans), "Carrot Top," a weak remake of the Julien Duvivier masterpiece of 1934, and the stirring Geza Radvanyi pic of kids lost in the destruction of war "Somewhere in Europe."

On the coming agenda are such femme films as "A Woman's Treasure," with Francois Perier trying to fathom the high jinks of his various gals; the new Henri Decoin pic, "18 Phantoms," which concerns a murder in a fashionable girls' school, and Martine Carol again displaying her wares in "Caprices of Caroline," the first Technicolor Gallic pic.

Leonide Moguy is planning a followup to his "Tomorrow Is Too Late," with a picture on child mothers, "The Forbidden Knowledge." Martine Carol is also up for the poisonous role of "Lucrecia Borgia," and Zina Rachewsky will play a female musketeer in a Franco-Italo coproduction, "The Bridge of Sighs," to be made in Venice. Other titles in this series are "Women of Paris," with Michel Simon; "The Island of Nude Women" and "Manina, the Girl Without a Veil." Awaiting release are "He and She," about the troubles of a young married couple, and the Sacha Guitry tirade against perfidious femmes, "I Was Married Three Times."

Moppet pix up for production are two, "Sparrows of Paris" and "His Last Christmas."

Col Signs Film Pact With Moodabe in N. Z.

Sydney, Oct. 7.

Leroy Brauer, Columbia's Aussie chief, has pacted a new film contract with Mike Moodabe, prexy of the major Amalgamated pic loop of New Zealand. Deal is a 12-month one (longer term is not permissible under New Zealand law) and gives Columbia a key outlet throughout the Amalgamated territory, covering Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch, Dunedin and the top provincial centers.

Columbia and Amalgamated had not been seeing eye-to-eye for some time on product terms.

'Wind' a Breeze At Tokyo B.O.

Tokyo, Oct. 7.

"Gone With the Wind," finishing the first month of its Japan preem, continued to lead foreign films at the Tokyo boxoffices for the last fortnight of September. "Third Man" (UA) and "High Noon" (UA), both opening roadshow runs during the same period were close behind.

"Wind" did $16,000 in the fourth week. "Noon" hit $9,200 at one house in its third week, and then went into eight houses on general release, grossing $23,600. "Third Man," playing one house, did $9,000 on its second stanza.

"Place in the Sun" (Par), also roadshowing in one house for two weeks, hit $7,800 in first round and $7,400 on second.

Other foreign films playing seven days late in September were "David and Bathsheba" (20th), using "Love at Crossroads" title here, $17,900 at eight theatres, and "Inspector General" (WB), $16,000, also eight houses.

Rank Biog

author quotes him as saying: "It's a damned dangerous thing to ask for guidance of the Holy Spirit. It may tell you to do things you don't want to do. You never know where it may lead you. I am in films because of the Holy Spirit."

Once he got the taste of films in his blood, there was no holding Rank. His organization grew at an astounding pace, and he became the leading missionary for British films. He admits frankly, that he was a novice and felt more at ease in a flour mill than in a film studio. So he relied on the advice of other people, mainly producers, who were given a free hand. That expensive episode in the career of Rank is now a sad chapter in the history of British films.

Always, however, he retained his faith in human beings and his convictions for British films. He wanted to break the Hollywood domination of British screens (as his father before him had fought against American flour), and to get a fair crack of the whip for British product in American theatres. He imported American experts, adopted American methods.

When the inevitable crash came a few years ago after mounting production losses, there followed a wholesale pruning of activities.

In so vast an organization, it was essential to launch a ruthless economy drive. Rank himself, far from ruthless, was obviously unfitted for the job, and he looked to his No. 2 man, John Davis, to put into operation a major reorganization which, in a couple of years or so, stopped the drift and re-established the Rank empire on a firmer footing.

While the emphasis, as the title demands, is always on Rank, Wood's story is also a history of the British motion picture industry during the last two decades. It is crammed with factual material, the fruits of prolonged research, and is related in a vivid, pungent style, with colorful anecdotes to revive memories of bygone personalities.

SKOURAS IN HAWAII ON TRIP DOWN UNDER

Honolulu, Oct. 7.

Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, told Hawaii Leaders of World Brotherhood that Hawaii is "the present springboard for world brotherhood in the Pacific." Chairman of a committee for extending world brotherhood, an international organization to fight intolerance and prejudice, Skouras stopped here briefly today (Tues.) on his way to Australia, the Far East and Europe.

A founder of the international movement, Skouras hopes to establish chapters in Asia.

'Hawaii Calls' Producer Seeks Job in House

Honolulu, Oct. 14.

The producer-director-narrator of "Hawaii Calls" program is a Republican nominee for Hawaii's Territorial House of Representatives.

Webley Edwards, making his debut in politics, ran third among field of 16 House candidates from both parties. The 12,300 votes piled up in primary make it almost certain for him to be elected representative.

Will you share this dream with us?

Not many weeks ago there passed away from the motion picture industry a man who had devoted half his adult life to the victims of modern plagues; cancer, heart disease and tuberculosis. During the war he dedicated himself to the blind veterans. In peace-time he spent most of himself for the people in the amusement industries who were stricken with tuberculosis and whom he helped back to health at the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital in Saranac Lake.

HIS NAME WAS HAROLD RODNER

He had a dream about the Hospital. He wanted to see it equipped with a Research Section where scientists could develop speedier methods for returning to normal life; those suffering from tuberculosis. We have undertaken to convert this dream into reality.

In the beginning this was a modest venture by a small group of Harold's friends. But as the word of what they were planning spread out, many men and women to whom he had given hope and life, insisted upon the opportunity to share in converting Harold's idea into a real Laboratory. Therefore, we are extending an invitation to everyone in the amusement industries to participate.

If you have been helped by Harold Rodner, or if he opened the doors of the hospital to one of your employees or friends, or even if you didn't know Harold and the selfless work he did, and would like to perpetuate the spirit of such a man, then join this project with us to keep alive and warm the kindly, sympathetic help he gave to the needy and the suffering.

changes in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Cleveland and possibly Atlanta. This is considered adequate for a starter, the Italians believing that 1,500 contracts for a pic represent approximately 80% of their market in the U. S.

Italian execs are also seriously discussing strengthening their product by offering their release channels to French, German and possibly even British producers. Various indie distribs have been approached with the idea of making a distribution deal with IFE.

Current Lineup

Current IFE lineup is still in formative stage. Pix definitely in the IFE fold include "Anna," Rossellini's "Europe '51," "The Men Are Not Looking at the Sky," a film based on the life of Pope Pius X, and, reportedly, "The Golden Coach," latest Jean Renoir film, starring Anna Magnani. Discussions are also going on for "Altri Tempi" (Times Gone By), a film octet of turn-of-the-century stories.

IFE got the rights to "Europe '51" by virtue of a $150,000 combination advance and guarantee to Rossellini. It was understood at the weekend that, even though he got the money, Rossellini still hasn't approved the IFE deal. However, IFE execs are confident it'll go through.

IFE toppers, gaining quickie impression of the U. S. market, continue to put all their eggs in the dubbing basket. Present indications are that an IFE board will be established in Rome to screen pix suitable both for U. S. showing and dubbing. IFE dubbing studios will open in New York in another two months with the latest in dubbing equipment.

Sudden concentration on Burstyn came after a week of indecision, with IFE execs virtually ignoring the presence of the indie distribs, including Burstyn, who hadn't even received invitations to the various functions arranged for the Italian visitors. It's understood that the approach to Burstyn was made at the insistence of the latter's friends on the IFE board.

They feel that Burstyn not only has pioneered Italo pix in this market, but also has the experience which could prove invaluable to budding IFE operations here. The possibility has been mentioned that Burstyn may be offered the branch managership in New York along with a stake in the first-run earnings from original versions.

IFE idea is to let good pix go out in original subtitled versions, following up with the dubbed punch. One of the problems, according to U. S. execs, is that the number of pix that lend themselves to synchronization is strictly limited.

Indie distribs are generally offish on dubbing but concede it may boost earnings on certain types of pix. "They've come along with this dubbing idea just 15 years too late," one American said. "The public today picks and chooses. They don't even go to Hollywood films. Why should anyone expect them to take to dubbed versions?" Impression is that Italian dubbing enthusiasm is based to a large extent on European acceptance of dubbed pix and that the parallel is misleading.

Shades of Hughes!

cate. Session was set for 1 a.m. Friday (10) at the homeoffice.

With the strange time factor lending a dramatic touch, the deal for Condon's taking the job was discussed and closed on the spot.

Max Youngstein, United Artists v.p., played an important role in the selection. Arnold Picker, newly elected exec v.p. at RKO, in scouting the field for a candidate for the post, asked Youngstein for a suggestion, and Condon was it. Latter and Youngstein have been in close touch since the early 1940s, when Condon, then general manager of the Hal Horne Organization, lured Youngstein away from law practice. Youngstein's post with Horne was his introduction to the film business.

Meanwhile, strong likelihood is that Perry Lieber, studio publicity boss; S. Barret McCormick, ad director, and exploitation head Terry Turner will continue in their present posts, if certain arrangements can be worked out. Condon has been given free rein in reorganizing the department. Newcomer to a key promotion spot will be the as-yet unnamed replacement for Don Prince, who ankled the publicity manager's job last week.

Original understanding was for Condon to take over in a couple of weeks but he moved into the h.o. yesterday (Tues.).

New ad-pub topper, a former film and theatrical publicist, was associate producer of two legiters, "20th Century" and "Stalag 17," with Jose Ferrer as producer. He's the author of two plays—"How to Fly with One Feather," a farce, and "Mile High," melodrama—which Chandler Cowles and Ben Segal are slated to produce this year.

free rein in reorganizing domestic sales. Personnel changes down the line are anticipated of course. But heartening to the sales force in general is that Boasberg and Branson are immediately acquainted with the present setup and it's a cinch that the non-deadwood will stay on.

Boasberg Succeeds Mochrie

Boasberg, who headed the north-south division, succeeds Robert Mochrie. Latter had been with the company since 1939 and was given v.p. chevrons in 1946. Branson had been western division chief.

William Zimmerman, sales and legal exec, was promoted to head of the legal department. He replaced v.p. J. Miller Walker.

Richard Condon, theatrical publicist and associated in legit production, has been named director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, a post which has been non-existent for the past five years. Don Prince, publicity director since 1946, and earlier in charge of foreign promotion, has exited.

Arthur Willi, head of the talent department; Leda Bauer, head of the story division, and Harold Hendee, in charge of research, are also out. The three departments will be shifted from the homeoffice to the Coast.

Harry Pimstein, member of the legal staff, has been named assistant to the board chairman.

Axe 6 at Studio

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Six persons at the RKO studio were pink-slipped over the weekend, five of them from the publicity staff. They are unit man Lincoln Quarberg, Valie Douglas, Mabel Hill (fan mags) and Adale Palmer of the international department and her secretary, Gladys Bonita. Sixth dismissed employee is William Feeder, who has been in the research and censorship department.

In addition to those announced last week as leaving RKO to return to the Howard Hughes organization are Charles Guest, Hughes' business rep at the studio, and Henry Di Roma, who was another Hughes rep at the lot.

sures may force the Italian government to tighten up on dollar remittances.

At a luncheon last week, the Italian delegation listened in silence as Dore Schary, Metro production head, told them that neorealism hadn't brought anything new to Hollywood production, and reminded them of need to give Italian pix a more international flavor.

"By all means continue your stimulating work in your terms, but seek out the talents of people from other countries to work in Italy," Schary advised. "And while you continue in the good pattern of realism, don't be afraid or ashamed of the escapist film. I, for one, would love to see a good Italian musical in Technicolor, and I think a large group of world audience would like to see one, too."

Members of the Rome group pointed out later that the Italian industry is unique, in that it does employ many foreign artists, and that it produces many escapist films which are, however, not sent abroad. The Italians confined so far largely to artie outlets in the U. S., feel that only the "different" approach pays off and that the accent should continue on the offbeat.

Filmites

pointed out, would entail a long and costly fight. MPAA can't afford to indemnify every theatreowner in Ohio who might get involved in a court battle for the showing of unauthorized reels. Another test, it's noted, might conceivably bring about a ruling that would apply to the entire state or it might end up in a stalemate similar to the present one. The suit to recover fees, it's explained, does not meet the censorship question directly.

Meanwhile, MPAA is withholding further action until the Ohio State Supreme Court reaches a decision on the film, "Native Son," which Ephraim London, the attorney who successfully argued the "Miracle" case before the U. S. Supreme Court, is handling for Classic Pictures. MPAA feels that the state's highest court will have to take judicial notice of the Toledo decision when it hands down a ruling on the state's censor board's right to ban "Son." London indicated this week that he is revising his brief in order to include the comments made by Toledo Municipal Court Judge Frank W. Wiley in his newsreel censorship decision.

Actual arguments on the "Son" case are being delayed, according to London, by the state's efforts in entering "technical objections." The State Attorney General filed on Oct. 2 a preliminary motion to dismiss the case on the grounds that the papers were filed too late. The court, London said, would have to rule on this motion first before a hearing date can be set. London declared that he plans to go to Ohio to argue the case personally when it is placed on the docket.

U Report to SEC

ond Wednesday in March. Also, the office of the chairman of the board was created and the executive v.p. has been assigned powers and duties vested also in the president.

Under the new loan agreement, U pays 3½% interest per annum, with a possible increase up to 3¾% under special conditions. U agrees to take out at least 50% of the maximum annual loan amounts stated. Maximum for the first year is $5,000,000; the second year, starting Sept. 15, 1953, $4,500,000; third year, starting Sept. 15, 1954, $4,000,000, and the fourth year, ending Sept. 15, 1956, $3,500,000.

Last Universal earnings report showed a net of $1,752,472 for the 39-week period ended Aug. 2, 1952, after provision of $2,650,000 in estimated Federal income and excess profits taxes and an additional $250,000 for contingencies. This compared to a $1,127,182 net for the corresponding period in the previous fiscal year, after provision of $1,675,000 for taxes and $400,000 for contingencies.

This year's 39-week net is equivalent to $1.63 per share on the 961,698 shares of common outstanding. This compares to 98c per share on the 960,489 shares of common outstanding at the end of the same 39-week period in 1951.

NT Pacts

1951. Likewise, Ricketson collects $1,000 weekly, gleans $100 in weekly expenses plus extra compensation based upon 5% of the amount by which "contract profits" each fiscal year exceed $375,000. His 1951 bonus came to $45,209. Salary deals with both execs extend from 1940 through 1954.

New Wesco agreement with Cox, inked as of Sept. 4, 1952, modifies and extends a Nov. 26, 1945, pact to December, 1957. For this extension term the Wesco veepee draws $1,000 weekly plus $100 weekly expenses. Among other minor provisions, the arrangement provides that in event of his death during the five-year period, his wife is to be paid $300 weekly over the term cited.

Taking up the antitrust suit problem, the amendment points out that it's been a general practice to allocate liability on a negotiated basis between exhibitor defendants on one hand and distributor defendants on another. "In the majority of current cases," the SEC is told, "50% of total liability has been allocated to exhibitor defendants."

But, the amendment notes, the percentage has been lower where theatres of other exhibitors were also involved. This is also true insofar as the distributors are concerned for the "percentage varies from case to case . . .". Citing a specific example, it's disclosed that when Federal Judge John P. Barnes awarded triple damages of $1,295,878 to the Towne Theatre, Milwaukee, in 1950, Wesco paid 26% of the judgment and 20th-Fox paid 13.35%.

which has held product back in some situations. In the forefront of the h.o.'s is such stout b.o. fare as "Ivanhoe" (M-G), "Son of Paleface" (Par), "Sudden Fear" (RKO) and "The Quiet Man" (Rep), among others.

Paramount, in particular, has had some top product on the shelf for months. Martin & Lewis' "The Stooge" was completed almost a year ago while "Thunder in the East," "Shane," "Stalag 17" and "Botany Bay" still haven't been set for release. Likewise, United Artists claims its "biggest product lineup" in years with 15 on hand and six more due for delivery in the near future.

U.S. Majors Play

cut import license to 90 films annually, down from last year's 121, in turn for which the French would free $5,000,000 of frozen funds. Of that sum, $1,200,000 was to be unfrozen at the official rate and the balance at a slightly less favorable capital accounts rate. French subsequently said this would place too much of a strain on the country's dollar balance, okayed the remittance of $1,200,000, but demanded the balance to be spread over a 13-month period. MPEA and SIMPP nixed this.

Meanwhile, the U. S. distribs have been refusing to apply for any import licenses at all, consequently no new pix are being shipped to France. But an embargo over any long period is hardly likely, it's felt. There was a firm nix on shipments to England in 1948 when that country tried an overly burdensome deal but a different set of factors were involved. It's pointed up that, unlike their British counterparts, French exhibs would not be under great immediate pressure without American product because films from other countries, such as Italy, can be played successfully.

jority of the Allied membership."

David Beznor, general counsel for the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen, asserted that it's a "hoary political maneuver to lash out and malign another's reputation to cover up personal shortcomings." His hot reply came in the wake of Snaper's charges made in New York Oct. 6 that both salesmen and branch managers have been guilty of "arbitrary action" against exhibitors.

"What a melancholy commentary upon Mr. Snaper's sense of decency and fair play," declared Beznor, "that he should stoop to hurling invectives upon the hard-working salesmen who have done more than any other group to cement relationships between exhibitor and distributor, and whose very livelihood depends upon their success in this undertaking."

Tomorrow's session will be for preliminary talks, it's understood, since employment of a top exec would require approval by the board of directors. Exec committee comprising Trueman Rembusch, Al Lichtman and Sam Pinanski expectedly will meet shortly to set a date and agenda for a conclave of the 31-man board.

U-I Ups Curtis' Pay

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Tony Curtis signed a new contract with Universal-International calling for a substantial salary boost and the right to make outside pictures at the end of three years.

First assignment under the new pact will be "Drifting," to be produced by Ted Richmond.

Foreign Censorship

but was yanked from its New Delhi date at the request of the Chinese Embassy.

Similar incident occurred in Holland, where the government banned several anti-Red films, including "Diplomatic Courier." Censor caution here as well as in several of the Scandinavian countries works both ways, with Russian pix having anti-U. S. slant also given the red light. Israeli authorities refused a license to "Red Danube" with the explanation that it might offend Moscow, but at the same time banned a Russian musical.

Pattern of world-wide censorship hasn't changed much since the war, but there's been an intensification of it, with the scissor-wielders scrutinizing imports more closely than ever.

The U. S. distribs are making every effort to save time, expense and irritation by making careful selection of films sent to sensitive areas. Studio foreign departments are kept up to date on latest regulations, but they can't always satisfy censor whims.

Mexico's Interior Minister, Ernesto Uruchurto, recently called a powwow of all censors to remind them that it was against the law to show films of religious processions, festivities or services. Minister's pressure resulted in the scissoring of a Fox Movietone newsreel scene showing a religious service in England.

Sensitivities vary from country to country. 20th had a good deal of trouble with "Viva Zapata" in Mexico. The regime there thought the pic took the wrong slant on President Madeiro, who's shown as a coward. Pic was admitted, with cuts, after personal intervention by Spyros P. Skouras, 20th prexy.

"David" Has Troubles

"David and Bathsheba" caused a storm in Moslem countries, where the Biblical David is considered a saint. Film shows him as a human being with very human traits. Egyptian censor found heated exchange between David and the Egyptian Ambassador objectionable. Same pic ran into trouble in Spain, where the censor didn't like the idea of a film based on the Old Testament.

"Quo Vadis" (M-G), which ended up with an "X" (not for children) certificate in Britain because of violence, was banned in Egypt while King Farouk was around, but has been released since the new regime took over. Metro's "Ivanhoe" was in hot water in some Arab countries where the censors objected to the favorable characterization of the Jews.

Violence and riots as well as scenes of sabotage and organized acts against authority, regardless of how fictionalized, are a thorn in censor eyes in many places. 20th had trouble with "The Desert Fox," still not released in many areas and redubbed for German showing to give a slight twist to the original Rommel portrayal, and the Germans didn't care for "Decision Before Dawn" (20th), which showed the U. S. Army using Germans to spy on their countrymen.

act, a Britisher or two, an occasional, deep-eyed Arab girl who moves in some places a foot and a half without taking a foot out of place.

When caught, Bomonti's had the six-girl Ballet Szoble, doing three numbers; a Hungarian, a Hawaiian, and a somewhat less than fevered boogie-woogie. Marga Rita, a British contortionist, performed well, and while spread here to there, got about nimbly on an intricate system of stairs.

Audrey Gray, a willowy blonde from Old Blighty, was passable with deliberately old tunes where the melody would be recognized by the Turks, even if her English words weren't. She cut sharply to a xylophone, and wound up with a pair of numbers creditably nailed down. Sitha & Tork, a German adagio team in Oriental rig, were a well-figured pair, the femme member having a few moments of wriggle and writhe to herself on the opening, which warmed the coffee at ringside.

Jack Kelly, a Polish refugee, now a British subject, topped the bill in all ways with some excellent juggling, climaxed by excellent cigaret tricks.

Ankara is not expensive, even in the niteries. Most common drink around seems to be raki, also "screwdrivers," a combo of vodka and something which comes near to being either orange or lemon juice. Most people see two of everything on three glasses.

Everybody eats at "Papa" Karpages, who lays out a square meal to hard-ridden Viennese fiddle music. He has the biggest and best filet in town, and all the girls from the candle-moth circuit come in to tweak old "Papa" on his jowls and look over the prospects otherwise while eating.

Ankara is loaded with Americans, what with all the missions abounding in the town and the Embassy crowd attracting some hotrocks as a turnaround point. Military uniforms of all nations are plentiful, and ladies out for an evening make incongruous the camel and donkey trail-riders who also turn in regularly to color the streets with costumes like a Technicolor treatment.

Joe Mankiewicz and James Mason are still conversational subjects, and all the drivers point out places where scenes from "Five Fingers" (20th) were shot, the pic made from the book, "Operation Cicero," which was actually played out here during World War II. The British Embassy toppers pointedly refer to the fact that they gave the film company no facilities, and no help, not being proud of their role in it. "Five Fingers" may or may not have been a good trailer for it, but the Turkish press is currently serializing Franz Von Papen's "Memoirs," which cover some of the same period.

Foreign Distribs

engagement that launched and hypoed the trend toward the booking available American product.

Distribs maintain that the dual policy is only applicable to pictures which have a wide range of audience appeal. They point out that there is a group of filmgoers who rarely, if ever, venture into the Broadway houses, preferring the comfort and more leisurely pace of seeing a picture at an art house. These pictures, they note, could lose a large segment of this audience if presented only at a Broadway house. Similarly, the Broadway patrons and the passerby crowds would be lost if the film were booked only in an east sider.

Double engagement also gives distribs a longer run. When initial flash Broadway biz is dissipated, pic can run from eight to 13 weeks or more on the art house circuit. Prime example of this was the run of "Outcast of the Islands," which drew more biz at the small Fine Arts than at the larger Broadway Astor.

Dual engagement also gives the film added prestige. Opening bally is not lost when Stem run concludes, and pic's value for circuit bookings is enhanced as a result of the long art house run. It also enables exhibs to play a picture at advanced prices for a longer time. A single Broadway engagement puts the picture into the nabes at a faster clip and at circuit prices. Continuation of the run at an off-Broadway theatre following the conclusion of the Stem engagement also cuts down on operating costs.

Another factor influencing dual bookings is occasional indecision by distribs on the exact appeal of a particular picture. Opening the picture at two theatres, each appealing to a different type of audience, allows the filmery to test the pic's value. If it flops at one of the houses, it can be easily yanked from that theatre and continued at the one drawing the customers.

Mpls' Free Transit

criminatory to outlying districts. Opposing exhibitors charge it's illegal.

Also, last week the East Hennepin Commercial Assn., another neighborhood businessmen's group, called upon the traction company to give their district "the same consideration" as the loop. In reply, F. A. Ossanna, transit company president, points out the East Hennepin stores are not open Thursday nights, so there is no discrimination against them. He also stated "it is the company's duty to carry out a policy which will benefit the greatest majority of the community's citizens, as well as increase the system's patronage."

Loop merchants have tied in with the plan by keeping open Thursday as well as Monday nights and offering special bargains. However, last week one of the largest stores withdrew, explaining in full-page newspaper ads that it was unfair to their employees to require them to work Thursday nights and they prefer Mondays.

While the plan has increased Thursday night traffic into the loop considerably and augmented the traction company's week-night revenues, downtown theatre managers assert little or no boxoffice improvement has been in evidence, despite the much larger crowds on the streets. A similar plan also is being tried out in St. Paul.

RKO Revamp Ahead of Sked

the homeoffice and the studio. We need $1,000,000 in weekly billings to pay off. We are losing a pile of money. Our job is to cut the losses first, in the homeoffice and exchanges, via that stripping of the fat, and then get an assembly line of new product to keep the machinery working. Right now, with the new product we have on hand our sales force can keep going."

Studio Setup Next

Grant and Burke, in reviewing the new management's operations since the Stolkin group took over, believe the studio situation will be tackled by Nov. 10. While ahead of the timetable—30 days for homeoffice, 60 days for exchanges and 90 days for studio revamp—Grant and Burke feel they "are considerably behind, but we feel satisfied that we have been moving with dispatch to clear the decks for the new RKO operations."

With accent on younger manpower and a specific plan to encourage virile incumbent personnel, or to bring in the best fresh manpower available, Grant has been performing a "hatchetman" job—something not to his liking—to strip the company of the "excess fat."

No vast shakeup is planned despite the dramatic letouts of former prexy Ned E. Depinet, who is now a consultant (see separate story), and the probable exit of Phil Reisman, foreign chief.

"But you can't blame us," says Grant, "if we feel that manpower should be encouraged to know that there is room on the top; that every consideration will be given to the field execs who make sales trips, domestic and around the globe, and who do it in all sorts of weather—not just in the comfortable spring and summer to Paris, or the winter junkets to South America, when its balmier below the Equator."

Arnold Picker, as foreign sales exec for United Artists, takes over as worldwide sales topper for the new RKO on Nov. 15. Now in Europe, with UA veepee Max E. Youngstein, ostensibly for the opening in London of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight," Picker will screen the foreign RKO personnel coincidentally. He has thus notified RKO distribution executives abroad, even while Reisman was en route back to the U. S. on the SS Liberte, arriving in New York yesterday (Tues.). Reisman was to have huddled with Grant yesterday (Tues.) afternoon on his future status.

Re Television

"This business about TV—well, I'd like to hear any of the other seven companies say they have no television in their futures," says Grant. "We all have. But, naturally, we have been thinking of lots of things. Firstly, what rights have we in this accrued product. If it's worth $5,000,000 or $15,000,000 to others, why isn't it worth it to us? Comes a gadget like Telemeter, where do we stand on the reissue values there? Or if there is a reissue value, why not in the theatres, where pictures first started and belong? If 'King Kong' or 'Snow White' can go out and do such heavy repeat trade in theatres, wouldn't we be foolish to unload to TV? And above all, where would we stand with the exhibitors? Sure, some say that 'give 'em a picture they'll want and they'll stop pouting at you,' but our new sales force, under Charlie Boasberg and Walter Branson, is keyed to exhibitor goodwill and strong theatre relations."

That is where the exchange area comes in. This will be tackled next week, which puts the homeoffice situation about 50% ahead of that particular timetable. The fact that Grant, Stolkin, et al. plan to o.o. the Hollywood production end by Nov. 10 would indicate that they expect to be ahead of schedule in the "field" setup too.

Obviously the production end is basic. Grant avers he has talked to nobody, nor can he, "unofficially," because that would be specious.

He has no illusions about personnel. It must be topflight. It must have the same esprit and verve as in the new homeoffice setup. The top man will be one who wants to meet the challenge.

"Corwin may not even want to stay at the studio entirely," Grant reveals. "Until we find the right man, we won't know what the setups at the studio will be. Maybe the so-called 'right' man will want somebody else in Corwin's spot. Maybe Corwin won't want to continue if we do get that 'right' man."

"I think I have established we are a going business," Grant continues. "We intend to stay in business. We wouldn't otherwise unhinge a Picker, for example, from a participation interest in a good operation like UA to come with us. Because he is my cousin is all the more reason why I wouldn't want to give him any bum steers, nor for that matter anyone else."

Josy Baker

Argentines have always thought of Josephine Baker as a Frenchwoman and rarely dwelt on her color.

Another attraction in B.A. at the moment is Teddy Remo, Anglo-Italian warbler, who is singing over the Splendid radio web and at the Embassy (nitery) for a second consecutive year. Singer is being sought for film work by several studios. Miss Baker also may make a film here.

The Casino has signed Spanish flamenco dancer and singer Lola Flores for a musical revue to open Nov. 7. She is currently working in Brazil. The Casino will revert to revues when "A Street Car Named Desire" closes there the first week of November.

Enter: Josephine Baker

The Walter Winchell-N. Y. Post slugfest was extended last week after the surprise blast from Josephine Baker, in Buenos Aires, indicting the U. S. for alleged neo-fascism. Robert C. Ruark (Scripps-Howard) and Victor Riesel (Hearst), among others, reviewed the Negro songstress' hassle at the Stork Club and the attendant Sherman Billingsley - Winchell - Ed Sullivan-Barry Gray harangue.

Ruark's syndicated column was titled "From Jo to Juan," referring to the singer's plug for Juan Peron, and concluded, "One Baker, screeching for a foreign press, can undo a decade of sober progress as demonstrated by Jackie Robinson, Joe Louis and Lena Horne—Americans all."

Both Gray and the Post expressed shocked surprise at Miss Baker's remarks, but left a door open for the expatriate chanteuse on the possibility that she was "misquoted." Gray commented over his WMCA (N. Y.) mike that he had airmailed her all the clippings with a request for her side of the controversy. A few days earlier she reportedly telephoned Gray, during his post-midnight broadcast, but the one-way conversation evidenced a poor connection.

Meanwhile, the Winchell-Gray fracas is becoming more intense, rather than abating. Winchell has told friends he "has enough" on James A. Wechsler, Post editor, "to keep it running until Thanksgiving, and I intend so doing. This is a case for the FBI." Both the Post editor and publisher Dorothy Schiff are returning the New York Mirror-Winchell fire. Gray's Post column Saturday (11) also leveled a blast at WW.

Newspapermen feel it's obvious that WW has a Hearst management greenlight for his continued blasts at the afternoon tabloid and speculate that among other scores being settled is the morning tab's anger at the Post's series on Mirror editor Jack Lait and columnist Lee Mortimer, which followed the Post's 24-part "expose" on Winchell this spring.

BURNS & ALLEN SHOW

With George Burns, Gracie Allen, Bea Benadaret, Fred Clark, Harry Von Zell, Hal March, Elvia Allman
Producer-director: Ralph Levy
Writers: Paul Henning, Sid Dorfman, Harvey Helm, William Burns
30 Mins.; Thurs., 8 p.m.
CARNATION MILK
CBS-TV, from N. Y.
(Erwin, Wasey)

After two years on live TV, Burns and Allen have switched to film and, for once, there's no noticeable difference in the quality of the show. Film quality, of course, may not be quite as sharp and brightly-defined as the live pictures previously aired, but the entertainment aspects of the show suffer not at all in the switch. And that's what counts most, for the audience, for CBS and for the sponsor.

With the changeover to film, B&A are also starting off on a new once-weekly route instead of the skip-a-week schedule they were on previously. Goodyear Tire has come in to pick up the tab on the rotating week, alternating with Carnation, which has bankrolled B&A since they first went TV.

CBS-TV, producer-director Ralph Levy and the comedy team have wisely kept the format and unique setting for the show entirely status quo. Only apparent reason for the shift to film, consequently, is the ability of B&A now to do a number of shows in a short span of time so as to have more vacation time for themselves—or perhaps, the investment in residual rights to the vidpix. But so long as the show remains as good, it's all to the good.

Script for the first film show last Thursday night (9) was as zany as ever. Gracie's Wardrobe mistress (Elvia Allman) had won a pair of tickets to Honolulu on a quiz show and remarked about what a wonderful place it would be for a honeymoon. Gracie, naturally, didn't know she was married so immediately set out to find her a husband. Situations built from there, with Burns adding to the fun from his stance at the side of the set and Gracie, of course, tossing in her usual off-the-track gags. Fred Clark, Bea Benadaret and Harry Von Zell, cast regulars, were good as always, and Hal March turned in a fine job as the head of a marriage bureau.

Von Zell sold Carnation as potently as ever, and there was a good hitchhike plug for Goodyear. Stal.

UNCLE MISTLETOE

With Corny Peeples, Elmira Roessler, Adrienne Falcon; Pat Percy, Helen York, puppeteers; Bill Bennett, organist
Producer: Kling Studios (Fred Niles)
Director: Edwin Morgan
Writer: Arthur Lewis
15 Mins.; Tues. and Thurs., 5:15 p.m.
MARSHALL FIELD
WGN-TV, Chicago
(Calkins & Holden)

Long a moppet favorite in live form, this puppet show has been successfully converted to celluloid and revived by the Marshall Field department store for its annual pre-Christmas promotion. If anything, "Uncle Mistletoe" takes on a smoother gloss in its film dress. There's more animation and a wider variety of sets for the puppet characters to romp around in. On the basis of the first edition (23), the twice-a-weeker should again snag big blocks of the tiny tot clientele.

Arthur Lewis keeps his story line simple, and with two able thesps — Corny Peeples and Elmira Roessler—doing the voice work, each member of the mythical Mistletoe kingdom has a distinct personality. Hand puppets, manipulated by Pat Percy and Helen York, go through their paces with chuckle-provoking abandon that has habit-forming appeal for the youngsters.

Blurbs are inserted live with Adrienne Falcon making an okay pitch for Field's toyland. Dave.

VENTURE IN IVORY

(Chevron Theatre)
With Ken Carlton, Eddie Whaley, Jr., Martin Benson, others
Producer: Revue Productions
Director: Adrian Brunel
Writers: H. E. Grey, A. Bartley
30 Mins., Fri., 9 p.m.
CHEVRON STATIONS
KTLA, Hollywood
(BBD&O)

Now that telefilm budgets are expanding, the cliche can travel all the way to Africa and back—which is just what has happened in "Venture in Ivory." It's the old story of the stalwart hunter who tracks down the bad, bad ivory poachers and the tradition of the film western from which this springs full-blown has even been maintained to the point of implying a fadeout love interest rather than showing anything definite.

There's nothing in either story line or performances to sustain interest and the dialog is sprinkled with such gems as "You mean...?" Even the native war dances and the jungle drum messages have no air of credibility although they were lensed in Africa and are presumably authentic.

Direction by Adrian Brunel is never noticeable and Ken Carlton, as the hero, strikes a series of noble poses in lieu of acting. Others in the cast (not properly identified in the credits) hew to the same formula. Camera work by Eric Cross is about par for a safari. Kap.

IRON WOMAN

(Chevron Theatre)
With Jorja Curtright, James Mitchell, Glenn Strange, I. Stanford Jolley, John Halloran
Director: Robert Finkel
Writer: Robert Ormond Case
30 Mins.: Fri., 10 p.m.
STANDARD STATIONS
KTLA, Hollywood
(BBD&O)

Despite that nearly all the action takes place in the rough-hewn cabin of sourdoughs in the wastes of Alaska, "Iron Woman" is primarily for the femmes and a gold-edged frame for the sensitive dramatics of Jorja Curtright, who is fast developing into a TV frontliner. Under Robert Finkel's firm direction it steers a taut course and holds interest all the way.

Close-knitted tale by Robert Case projects Miss Curtright as the deserted wife and mother, who is brought face to face with her errant husband, hunted down for stealing her grub, which calls for the rope. Her motherly instinct prevails over any thought of vengeance and she frames his escape so he can return to his child of the second marriage.

Finkel guarded well against any overplay of maudlin emotion and the restrained acting heightens the dramatic effect. Sets were well contrived and the photography impressive. Good support was contributed by James Mitchell, Glenn Strange, I. Stanford Jolley and John Halloran. Standard Stations got its message over without spreading too thick or heavy-handed selling. Helm.

Storm Battered

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Gale Storm, who made the leap from pix to TV, never found it so rough in films.

Star of "My Little Margie" was kayoed when assistant director Nate Watt, indicating to audience of extras count of the ref during a wrestling match scene, accidentally brought his fist down on her, scoring a knockout.

After a medico's exam and two hours rest, she returned to work at the Hal Roach lot.

TWA Bid for NLRB Election Among Vidpic Scripters Blasted by SWG

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Television Writers of America, new group opposing the Screen Writers Guild and Authors League of America, has filed for a National Labor Relations Board election in the vidpic scripting field.

Mary McCall, Jr., SWG prez, called the filing "ill-timed and ill-chosen" and said it may delay "as much as a year" the network pact which she called "the most forward-looking contract ever negotiated in the history of writers' organizations." She blamed the TWA move on a "little group of impatient finks whose loyalties belong not to writers but to a fanatical political party."

A TWA spokesman wouldn't disclose the number of writers who signed the NLRB petition or membership of the new guild. He announced that Robert Shutan was signed as legal counsel and that a meeting of all tele writers is slated for Oct. 30. The petition may hinder SWG's negotiations in the 10-week-old strike against the Alliance of TV Film Producers.

ALA, Webs to Sign Pact

In New York the TWA move was not expected to affect ratification of the ALA contract with the live tele networks. Pact is to become effective tomorrow (Thurs).

It's understood that the contract will be signed by the ALA for itself and on behalf of the SWG, although SWG will not be asked to sign itself.

The Radio Writers Guild, some of whose Coast members formed TWA, is said to be urging ratification of the ALA-web contract.

The TWA action, however, is expected to delay adherence by the agencies and packagers to the network-ALA pact. These two groups probably won't sign until after the NLRB election.

Still Stalemated On SWG Strike

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Ten-week-old strike of Screen Writers Guild against the Alliance of Television Film Producers continues stalemated as disputing groups meet against this week in another negotiation session. Alliance committee presented counter proposals at a session last week, but, as anticipated, stiffly resisted SWG's insistence on royalties plus minimums, and consequently virtually no progress has been made.

Royalties asked by the scribblers are crux of entire situation, and until this question is resolved there's little possibility of a settlement. Inasmuch as both disputants strongly claim they will not yield on issue, situation appears to be very close to that existing when the strike was called Aug. 11, difference being they're still talking.

Meanwhile, Alliance reached agreement with Script Supervisors Guild on pact, under which script supes will get $2.18 an hour, with minimum of 60-hour week.

JOAN CRAWFORD STARTS MCA'S 'FINEST' SERIES

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

MCA's vidpix subsid, Revue Productions, moved a new, high-geared production unit onto Motion Picture Center studios this week for production of "Those We Love," starring Joan Crawford in "America's Finest" series. Jay Dratler penned the yarn from an original by Les Crutchfield. Miss Crawford will star in another in the series in November.

Rod Amateau is directing the Crawford pic, Charles Lang is lenser, Frances Lyon supervising editor, and Bill Flannery art director. Jennings Lang, producing the series, has already canned one, starring Ray Milland.

Ziv Vidpix Expansion; Sales Staff Increased

Ziv TV is expanding its sales staff due to its increased production plans and broader sales activities on its present stable, according to M. J. Rifkin, sales v.p.

Walter Kingsley, former L. A. account exec, becomes western division manager, and Albert S. Coustin, former N. Y. account exec, becomes eastern division sales manager. E. J. Broman continues as central sales chief. Rifkin announced addition of Don Staley, L. A., C. E. McCurry, Virginia-North Carolina; and Charles Britt, Memphis, as account execs.

Ziv has already sold "Favorite Story," which will star Adolph Menjou, to several big regional sponsors, although its national release date has not yet been set. Olympia beer has bought the vidpic series for entire west coast and Blatz will sponsor "Favorite" in Milwaukee and several other outlets.

Wurtzel Backlog Of Feature Pix For TV Distrib

Indie Hollywood film producer Sol M. Wurtzel yesterday (Tues.) became the latest to open up his backlog of feature product to television, setting a deal with Major Attractions to lease his entire group of pix. Major, in turn, will turn them over to Unity TV for distribution to video stations.

Contract includes not only Wurtzel's backlog but also all that he will produce in the future. Some of the first group were released theatrically as late as 1949, and most of them were originally distributed by 20th-Fox, with which Wurtzel at one time had a distrib contract. Price of the original package was not disclosed, but Wurtzel said it's over the $500,000 mark.

Wurtzel intimated that he plans to set forth on a fullscale program of TV film production. He said he welcomes the question of costs as a "challenge," declaring he thought it could be best solved by setting up joint production and mutual participation deals with stars who will work in the pix.

FOLEY ABROAD TO SET UP PROD. UNITS

George F. Foley, packager of ABC-TV's "Tales of Tomorrow" and producer of the Herman Hickman show on NBC-TV, treks to Europe Saturday (18) to set up production units in Paris and Rome for 26 half-hour 13 hour-long vidpic dramas.

Most of the work will be done in Rome, with some location shooting in and around Paris. Films are being partly financed by European capital. Production on the half-hour show starts in December, with the hour vidpix rolling in mid-January. Casts will be mostly Americans.

Foley, who'll be gone two weeks, said that there is a big need for the 60-minute vidpix and while costs would be "prohibitive" in the U. S., "European economics make such a project desirable." He said that while the 30-minuters would cost $22,000 and 60-minuters about $50,000 here, they'll be brought in "for considerably less" on the Continent.

INDUSTRY SPLIT AS TO QUALITY

Is the increasing switch from live to film TV programming hurting the quality of shows? Question is probably the most bandied about in the industry today, with equal representation on pros and cons.

Despite constant critics' carping about the poor quality of most of the vidfilm shows now on the air, the producers and syndicators of such packages are of the opinion that film can do more to boost the quality of all TV programming than any factor yet to hit the medium. They claim it's all a question of simple arithmetic—the cost can be chopped up for amortization over a number of markets and yet the quality of the show does not get chopped up in the process.

On the other hand it's contended by the "live" proponents that many of the shows circuiting the vidpix channels are degrading the medium; that the lack of the all-important spontaneity and excitement that comes from watching a live performance makes all the difference. Further, they argue that too many of the vidpix are of a fly-by-night quality suggesting one day shooting with no rehearsal.

Vidpix proponents concede that the quality of TV films at this time may not be all that it should be. But, they point out, this new phase in video programming is still in its infancy—that it's four or five years younger than live TV, which is certainly not as good qualitywise as it should be. And, according to the vidpix spokesmen, the amortization possibilities in vidpix mean that more money can be spent on each property. And when money is available, the quality will improve as the medium grows more mature.

Detailing their theory, the vidpixites point out that a top-quality show can be produced on TV film for $40,000. Producers can sell it to one major client for 20 or so markets for $20,000, in what amounts to a regional network deal. Then, they claim, the producers have 45 other markets to sell their property to regain the remaining $20,000 of their budget and earn a small and just profit.

In most cases, the cost-per-market for these non-network stations is based on set circulation. Thus, the same show for which the big advertiser pays $20,000 in his 20-market lineup may go to a local sponsor in Albuquerque, N. M., or Binghamton, N. Y., for a $100 asking price. And, the clincher offered by the vidpixites is that the show selling for $100 in such cities is exactly the same, and therefore just as good qualitywise, as the one which the network sponsor buys for $20,000.

'Paisan' on TV Draws Chi's Heftiest Response

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Television feature pic fans are apparently ready to accept subtitled foreign language films. As an experiment, Hudson dealer Jim Moran aired a practically uncut version of "Paisan," Italian-localed pic, on his Sunday night WGN-TV "Courtesy Hour" recently and it resulted in the biggest mail response ever recorded by the station.

In answer to Moran's request for opinions on the film, 12,866 replies came in during the first five days after the showing. Letters ran 12 to 1 in favor of the pic, so Moran has scheduled such foreign product as "Open City," "Bicycle Thief" and "Battle of the Rails" for future beamings.

Pix are from the station's "library" buy from Motion Pictures for TV.

NCAA Grid Restrictions Boon To Vidfilm Producers; Major Deals Set

National Collegiate Athletic Assn's limitation of live football coverage to one game each Saturday has resulted in an unexpected windfall for TV producers and syndicators of filmed recaps of major college games. At least three major packages are now airing in a number of markets across the country, and a number of smaller football film shows, either of highlights or pre-game predictions, are making the rounds.

Syndicators of the football shows attribute the chief reason for their success to the fact that the single NCAA game televised Saturday afternoons via NBC does not constitute enough football to satisfy the nation's fans. In addition, they pointed out, a number of football fans must work Saturday afternoons and so have no chance to see even the NCAA game. Producers of the film shows realize that the scores are old-hat by the time their packages reach the stations, so they put the emphasis on giving fans as good pictures of the games as possible.

Two chief football film packages are produced by Sportsvision and distributed by Consolidated TV Sales. "All-American Game of the Week," a half-hour recap of a single game each week, is now airing in 20 markets, where it's bankrolled either by a single local sponsor or sold by the station on a participating basis. "Big 10 Conference," which spotlights the top game played each Saturday in the Big 10, is bankrolled in 18 midwestern markets by Phillips Petroleum, and sold locally in 10 other markets by Consolidated.

In addition to these two packages, a number of markets are now airing "Touchdown," a series featuring highlights of four or five games each week. This series is produced by Wallace Orr, under the banner of Tel-Ra Productions.

Consolidated TV Sales Gets a Personnel Hypo

Consolidated Television Sales, vidpic distrib, is expanding its sales force. New account execs are William Finkeldey, formerly with Capitol Records, and Morton Brandes, former assistant publisher of the Philly Daily News. Eastern sales manager Halsey Barrett is holding a sales meet in Gotham this week.

Recently Consolidated absorbed six men who had been with Jerry Fairbanks, Inc., when the two outlets merged. Among the properties CTS is handling are "All American Game of the Week," "Big 10 Game of the Week," "Pacific Coast Conference Game of the Week," "Steve Donovan-Texas Ranger," "Front Page Detective," Crusader Rabbit," "Public Prosecutor" and "Ringside with the Rasslers."

Residual-Happy WJZ-TV Buys 100G Vidpix Playbacks

ABC-TV has evolved a pattern of a "residual theatre," skedding subsequent runs of half-hour vidpic series in the 7 p.m. slot on its owned-and-operated outlets.

Web was wrapping up yesterday afternoon (Tues.) a deal with Music Corp. of America for the agency's "Regal Theatre," a group of 65 half-hour dramas. Included in the package, for which WJZ-TV (N.Y.) is paying $100,000, are pix previously run on "Campbell Playhouse," Armour's "Stars Over Hollywood" and "Chevron Theatre."

Pix will be screened on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in WJZ-TV's 7-7:30 p.m. niche, starting Monday (18). Eventually, it's expected, the Tommy Henrich sports show, sponsored on the outlet at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, will be shifted from that spot to permit a cross-the-board layout of the half-hour film drama. The old films now in the 6-7:15 p.m. strip will be cut back to 7 p.m. Half-hour dramas are expected to provide a good lead-in to the shows on the web at 7:30, such as "Lone Ranger," "Beulah" and "Name's the Same."

The half-hour drama at 7 p.m. is already clicking on ABC o-&-o's in Detroit, WXYZ-TV, and in Los Angeles, KECA-TV.

While the 65 pix could fill the 7 p.m. berth for three or four months, WJZ-TV toppers feel that after the period is built up it will attract bankrollers who have other film properties of their own. MCA pix, incidentally, could be moved to another period to accommodate a bankroller desiring a different slotting.

EDWARDS TO HEAD UP CBS-TV FILM SALES

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Wilbur Edwards, manager of KNXT, is being moved to N. Y. to head up TV film sales for CBS and takes over his new duties Nov. 1. Appointment was made by Merle Jones, v.p. in charge of CBS-TV stations, who said the shift of Edwards was in line with the planned expansion of the net's telefilm sales. Fred Mahlsted, whom he succeeds on sales, remains with the department in charge of operations.

Among the filmed shows to be handled by Edwards are a new group of vidpix from Bing Crosby Enterprises, Gene Autry, Range Riders, Jeffery Jones and others on the CBS future list.

No announcement of Edwards' successor was made.

$1,196,000 Lever 'Big Town' Budget

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Lever Bros. have pacted Jack J. Gross and Philip N. Krasne to produce 52 more "Big Town" telepix, in deal involving $1,196,000.

Handling deal for Ruthruff and Ryan was Marshall Grant. As a result of the inking, Gross-Krasne will have a continuous shooting sked next year.

Series stars Pat McVey and Jane Night, and is directed alternately by Charles Haas and E. A. DuPont.

'Bobo' Puppet Vidpix Series Rolls in N.Y.; Sold to Indie Bakers

New series of quarter-hour vidpix, each with an original musical score, swings into production this week in N. Y. under the aegis of Fantasy Features. A puppet show, titled "Bobo, the Hobo," the series is budgeted at $10,000 per stanza and is being made specifically for sponsorship by independent bakers across the country. Series has already been sold in Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Binghamton, Norfolk and Johnstown, Pa.

Puppet troupe is operated by Zuny Maud and Nat Norbert. Music for the show is being composed by George Lesner, with Alice Hammerstein (daughter of Oscar Hammerstein 2d) as lyricist. Lorraine Lester is producer and Bud Fishel is doing the book. Series, with 13 set for the original cycle, is being distributed by Mahlon-Mohr Associates.

N.J. B'casters Told H'wood, B'way, Not the Answer to Educational TV

Camden, N. J., Oct. 14.

TV was described as "the electronic blackboard of our era" by FCC Commissioner Frieda Hennock in a strong plea for commercial broadcasters to support educational TV in a speech before the fall meeting of the New Jersey Broadcasters Assn. here today (Tues.).

Broadcasters should work with educators, not against them, in the development of non-commercial educational TV stations, commissioner Hennock declared. At the same time she reaffirmed her faith in the future of radio, asserting that "AM will be with us for a long time."

All segments of the average American community, she said, must decide the types of programs to be offered on educational TV channels. Universities and colleges have a rich pool of talent and material to use in programming once the educational TV stations are constructed, she explained.

In some respects, she said, radio "is a blind business" because many station operators do not know the tastes or needs of their audience and the public doesn't always know how to makes its opinions about radio programs known to the broadcasters. Commissioner Hennock urged NJBA members to "get close to your audiences" to improve programming and also to find ways of a more successful operation.

Dr. Frederick W. Raubinger, New Jersey State Commissioner of Education, explained the state's plans for six educational TV stations, declaring that educational TV can provide "a high standard of values for commercial TV."

During the Rutgers Radio Institute portion of the NJBA meeting Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, Rutgers President, asserted that educational institutions can perform "the tremendous creative job" that has to be done in providing firm direction to the development of TV. Pointing out that the U. S. has "failed badly" in artistic and cultural development Dr. Jones said educational institutions would be better trusted with the creative tasks than sole reliance upon Hollywood and Broadway.

NJBA members heard a radio debate between Republican U.S. Sen. H. Alexander Smith and Archibald Alexander, rivals for a New Jersey Senate seat. The foreign policy debate was aired over several Jersey stations and will be rebroadcast over more stations within the next few days as a public service.

'No Problems,' NBC Cancels '52 Conv.

NBC has called off its Boca Raton, Fla., convention this year. It was scheduled for the first week in December.

Having only recently resolved its AM rate problem with the affiliates, and with TV moving in high gear, the web echelon decided over the weekend that there wasn't a really hot item left on the '52 agenda to warrant calling the affiliates into convention.

It'll be the first time that NBC has skipped a convention since the first one was inaugurated at Atlantic City six years ago.

WW 14.2; Murrow 9.9

Walter Winchell's first telecast on ABC-TV on Oct. 5 outpulled Ed Murrow's "See It Now" on CBS-TV. According to advance Trendex data WW scored a 14.2 (with a 32.7% share of audience, against "See's" 9.9.

Rating was taken in the 10 multi-station Trendex cities where the two news type shows collide head-on. ABC feels more complete ratings will show WW to even better advantage, since he gets live into several one-station markets like Hartford.

Olds Cancels Peggy Lee

Oldsmobile this week checked off the 15-minute Peggy Lee show on CBS Radio, which it has been bankrolling Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7:30. With no sponsor for the slot, CBS is replacing Miss Lee with Mindy Carson, who will bow in Nov. 6.

Olds had originally pacted to sponsor Miss Lee on a short-term deal only last spring, but kept renewing its option for what amounted to a total of almost six months on the show.

Nielsen 6-Minute Audience Delivers Higher TV Rating

Television producers will be happier this week—their Nielsen ratings will all be higher. However, the move reflects a change in the rating which A. C. Nielsen is featuring in his pocket piece, rather than increased audiences.

The nose-counter is now featuring the six-minute audience rather than the average audience. It's a change that has some time-buyers and program-sellers (already confused by a multiplicity of rating services) still further perplexed. Actually, however, it is a move by Nielsen to end a practice which to some degree shortchanged video.

Nielsen takes a minute-by-minute count of dialers. The average audience (AA) rating indicates the audience tuned in during the average minute. The six-minute audience includes all dialers who caught a program for at least six minutes. This figure is almost uniformly above the AA figure. For example, under the AA system, one specific web show gets a 22.4 on the latest report; but on the six-minute basis it gets a 26.8.

New system will tend to give a break to longer programs, since a set-owner would only have to view six minutes of a 60-minute program to be counted in the audience. Taking one Milton Berle show last spring, for example, the Texaco airer started with a 19.0 rating in the first minute and built to a 41.2 rating in the last minute, getting an average rating of 32.4 (with the average home viewing 43 minutes). However, its six-minute rating is 44.9 or 33% higher than the average audience. Another example: Red Skelton's half-hour this spring got a 43.3 average, but made a 49.0 on a six-minute basis. Six-minute rating of a Robert Montgomery

AFL OPPOSES RENEWAL OF KSTP LICENSE

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Minnesota's branch of the American Federation of Labor will seek to have the FCC refuse radio and TV KSTP renewal of the station's license because of involvement in a two-year dispute with AFL radio technicians.

At the organization's annual convention here it went on record as opposing such renewal and to notify the FCC of its action.

The KSTP technicians struck for higher wages. They claim now they're being locked out and they're picketing the station.

Gen. Mills Trims Brace Of ABC Radio Stanzas

"Lone Ranger" and "Silver Eagle" are being cut back from 30 minutes to 25 minutes by General Mills. Shows are now aired in the 7:30-8 p.m. strip on ABC radio, with "Ranger" taking three days and "Eagle" filling the alternate periods. Reason is budgetary. Effective date is Nov. 10.

Web meanwhile is on the prowl for a hot five-minute property to put in at 7:55 p.m.

Chalmers Exits Grey Agcy.

William A. Chalmers has resigned as veepee and radio-TV director of the Grey agency, effective Nov. 1. His future plans have not been announced.

Chalmers joined the agency 18 months ago. Prior to that he was radio-TV director at Kenyon & Eckhardt.

Scorecard On Dem, GOP Spots

Spot campaign on behalf of Gen. Eisenhower is being placed by local state committees supporting the Republican candidate, rather than by the Republican National Committee or National Citizens for Eisenhower. Total to be spent for Ike in AM and TV can't be estimated, although original target was around $600,000.

Citizens for Ike has made TV spots and AM transcriptions available to the local groups. These are 20-second and one-minute spots, including vidpic plugs made in the studio and an animated cartoon. Spots are being placed by the various agencies for the local committees, such as BBD&O for the N.Y. Republicans, Benjamin Eschleman for the Pennsylvania group, Frost agency for the Massachusetts group, Edward Graceman for the Connecticut group, etc.

Although backers of Gov. Stevenson lashed out at the use of spots, saying that the Democrat's supporters lacked the funds for a "spot blitz," a Citizens for Eisenhower spokesman answered that the general's forces "did not have the money which the Democrats have for half-hour programs. We feel that with the limited funds available, we can tell our story best through spots."

On Sept. 26, Linnea Nelson, of Kudner agency, and Tucker Scott, of BBD&O, attended a meeting called by the National Assn. of Radio & TV Station Representatives to promote use of spots by the politicos. Scott and Miss Nelson said they are not involved with any spot purchasing and plans for the Republican National Committee. They stress that no spot campaign by the GOP national body has been contemplated.

On Oct. 1 Volunteers for Stevenson announced that a "$2,000,000 spot blitz" for Ike was under consideration by the general's supporters. The plan became a political hot potato, with the FCC and NARTB asked to consider its implications. However, the alleged plan didn't materialize and the Bates agency is not buying any spots for the National Citizens for Eisenhower body. BBD&O and Kudner are not buying spots for the GOP national committee.

ABC Tosses Plum To Affiliates Via Co-oping Of Strong Ayem Entry

ABC radio is developing a new pattern, simultaneously expanding its Pyramid spot-carrier plan and its co-op programming into the lucrative morning period. The project is now being unwrapped for affiliates at the web's regional meetings (on the Coast last week), in New York today (Wed.), in Chi on Friday and in New Orleans on Monday (13).

Plan involves tht Masterson-Reddy-Nelson package, "Live Like a Millionaire," whose preem on ABC has been postponed for three weeks in order to get the stations behind the new sales project. Under this setup ABC is making "Millionaire" a co-op, which is unusual since the program will take the 11-11:30 a.m. strip—a slot that is particularly valuable because before-noon AM time is less threatened by video inroads. However, one of the four one-minute plugs will be reserved by the net for a Pyramid spender.

According to web execs, the setup, combining co-op and Pyramid features, is designed as a plum for affiliates in a move to better relations with stations in an era when outlets have been edgy with their chains over rate cuts and other practices. Stations will pay a relatively small talent fee to get the co-op and are glad to get a strong program at a desirable time to peddle on a local or spot basis.

Response from stations so far has been enthusiastic, it's reported.

Radio's Respectability Restored

Since the readjustment downward of the major networks' radio rate structures, there is increasing evidence to support the belief that the day of the "deal" is over. The networks, having evolved their "realistic" formula, appear determined to stick to it, come what may.

The CBS Radio books are clean—not a single "deal" recorded. The NBC radio boys are inviting new business—and getting it—strictly on its downgraded rate pattern, the clients content to embrace the medium on its bargain prices without resort to under-the-table maneuvers.

It's all had a salutary effect on radio, which is regaining its one-time respectability in the eyes of the agencies and the all-important clients. It's the consensus today that network radio for the first time in years looks headed for brighter days, having moved in the right directions to put its economic house in order.

No Discrimination Exists on B'cast Time to Politicos, FCC Tells Demos

Washington, Oct. 14.

Federal Communications Commission formally notified the National Volunteers for Stevenson last week that no discrimination now exists in radio and TV time for the Presidential candidates upon which FCC can take action.

Democrats were told that if they believe violations of the Corrupt Practices Act exist, they should take the matter up with the Justice Department.

Wire was sent by FCC chairman Paul W. Walker in reply to one in which the Stevenson Volunteers alleged the GOP was buying $2,500,000 worth of radio and TV spot time for a three-weeks saturation campaign in 49 counties in 12 key states.

From two other sources, however, some mild comfort was held out to the Demmys.

1. Commissioner of Internal Revenue John B. Dunlap warned corporations that if they use part of their radio and TV commercial time to plug a candidate, the programs are not deductible for income tax purposes. "The rule applies," said Dunlap, "whether the payments are made directly to a political party or indirectly in the form of paid advertisements or contributed radio and television time, or in any other manner."

2. Senate Election Committee disclosed that it will ask all radio and television stations to fill out a questionnaire on the amounts spent on behalf of the various candidates during the campaign. If enough information is in hand, estimates of the figures will be released before Election Day.

Republicans here have hit back at the Democrats by pointing out that, not so long ago, the Demmys were boasting they had moved in early and contracted for all the best

WNBC's B'way Spectacular

WNBC and WNBT, key radio stations of the NBC web in N. Y., have bought a gigantic new spectacular sign on Times Square, N.Y., which it is claimed will have the largest electrical letters on Broadway. Sign will have a public service aspect in that under the two-station call letters will be a 90-foot long running sign, which will give weather and news, information on the stations' top shows and personalities and sponsor identification of the stations' various bankrollers.

Call letters for the sign, which is being built by the Douglas Leigh organization, are said to be 30 feet high. New display, which will utilize more than 8,000 bulbs, goes into operation about Nov. 15.

WGN 50% Radio Rate Slash Sets Day-Night Parity

Chicago, Oct. 14.

WGN, the Chicago Tribune station and Mutual affiliate, will slash its nighttime rates 50% when its new rate card goes into effect Nov. 1. WGN is the first major Chi AM operation to cut its evening time charges and the first to follow the much-discussed trend toward putting nighttime and daytime rates on a par.

The new evening reduction brings the charges down from $900 an hour to $450, which is the current daytime rate. The new formula does away with the C and D time classifications. Class A time will run from 7 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. at the $450 hourly figure. With the Class A time starting at 7 a.m. this represents an increase in the 7 to 8 a.m. period which under the old card went for $300 an hour.

The Class B rate of $300 will apply to the 6 a.m. hour, and the time after 10:30 p.m.

Station-break and spot blurbs will follow the same pattern.

WGN-TV, the sister tele operation, is also coming out with a new card. Basic rates remain the same at $1,200 for a Class A hour. However, the Sunday afternoon 2 to 5 period, currently classified as A time, will be cutback to a C classification of $600 hourly.

NBC-TV Despairs Of 'Goldbergs' Clearances

NBC-TV has virtually given up hopes of finding a sponsor and time slot to coincide for a resumption of "Goldbergs" this season. With the web unable to clear enough stations to satisfy sponsors in the 7 to 7:15 p.m. cross-the-board slot, both Rybutol and Procter & Gamble have bowed out of the picture, after showing interest originally.

NBC is currently mulling the possibility of trying to clear station time for its 5:30 to 6 p.m. Sunday slot, but isn't certain whether that would be a good time period for the show. Web has virtually given up, meanwhile, its attempts to clear that 7 to 7:15 strip.

Lennen & Newell's $30,000,000 Biz

Lennen & Newell, new agency succeeding Lennen & Mitchell, was formally launched yesterday (Tues.) with annual billings of $30,000,000, according to Philip Lennen, board chairman. He added that in the past four months the agency has picked up $10,000,000 in billings, from Carlton House, Chicopee Mills, Emerson Drug, Embassy cigarets, Schlitz beer and United Aircraft.

According to H. W. Newell, prez and chief officer, about 50% of the agency's take is in radio and TV. AM-TV veepee is Nick Keesely. AM-TV copy veepee is Peter Keveson. Among other L&N accounts are Colgate, Dorothy Gray, Lehn & Fink, P. Lorillard, Scripps-Howard newspapers and Tide Water Oil.

Toni Buys ABC Time, May Install 'Istanbul'

Toni, which has bought the 8 p.m. Friday slot on ABC radio, is interested in inserting the Marlene Dietrich "Cafe Istanbul" show in the period.

"Istanbul" started in the 8:30 p.m. Sunday segment over the weekend (12). If the bankroller takes the Dietrich stanza, it will probably be moved into the Friday niche in a couple of weeks, to warm it up in that period for Toni's sponsorship, which becomes effective on Nov. 17.

'TOO MANY TELEVISION DOCTORS'

The McConnell Saga

Joseph H. McConnell last week quietly marked his third anniversary as president of NBC, observing the milestone at his desk on the day that he returned from his Coast visit to the new Burbank studios.

It was on Oct. 8, 1949, that McConnell moved into the network prexy hot spot—six weeks before he was officially introduced to the affiliates at the White Sulphur Springs, Va., convention.

What has transpired since adds up to one of the more exciting chapters in broadcast annals. It was three years of confusion and transfusion which saw the web play footsie with the ill-starred Booz, Allen & Hamilton administrative overhaul. The three-year period saw the virtual demise of the "old order," with new faces and new techniques brought into the picture as the old guard, one by one, faded from the scene.

The three-year-period, too, witnessed the "split-down-the-middle" operational technique, its abandonment, and now the re-integration pattern. But out of the three-year McConnell regime, it's conceded, has come an NBC-TV ascendancy and the solidifying of the radio network structure, as opposed to those '49 days when, bereft of its top-star talent roster, NBC was being prematurely written off.

P&G, Gen. Foods Find Solution For Splitting Up Multi-Agency Commission

The attempt to find some formula in an equitable distribution of the 15% ad agency commission in cases where two or more agencies are involved in television programming accounts, appears to be headed for some semblance of solution. General Foods and Procter & Gamble, two of the top advertisers in broadcasting, have already undertaken to find the right answers, with Colgate also ready to translate the need into some concrete action.

The problem of splitting up agency commission was never so acute until TV came into the picture. By virtue of video's high cost, the client has found it necessary to divide the plugs among several of the company's products, with invariably two or three or even four agencies involved.

The major gripe, of course, has come from the producing agency, which justifiably has felt entitled to a major share of the 15% commission. It's the producing agency, whether it's an agency-built or an acquired package, that has to take the rap on the attendant expenses, including script people, contacts, promotion, etc. Yet the other agencies involved, by virtue of the fact that their account was getting a commercial ride on the show, have been divvying up the 15% on the same basis as the producing agency.

Under the General Foods and P & G formula, the producing agency is now getting the major slice of the commission, in many cases taking off anywhere from 15 to 25% of the overall 15% commission before the split is made.

Leave It Alone

The new Eddie Albert CBS-TV show preemed last night (Tues.) under the title "Leave It to Larry."

A month ago it was titled "Leave It to Dad." CBS figured it might conflict with the projected "Life With Father" series so changed it to "Leave It to Lester." Last week Albert nixed the title—didn't like the name of Lester. After considerable debate they hit on Larry.

Herbert's Sales Shuffle on Tap; O&O's Still Big?

Next on the NBC reorganization "agenda" is Jack Herbert's integrated AM-TV sales division, although the departmental revamp won't materialize until after the first of the year. Any action is being held in abeyance while Herbert familiarizes himself with his expanded setup (previously he headed up the radio division alone.)

While Herbert's sales department remains as the only major shuffle still to be resolved, there's a watchful waiting attitude in regards to the owned-and-operated division now headed up by former exec veepee Charles R. Denny and which now boasts a complement of five veepees. The o & o division in recent weeks also inherited a new addition in the person of Charles Bevis, who was brought back to New York when NBC disposed of its Denver KOA operation, of which Bevis was manager.

Colgate Returns To Soap Operas

After several years of "sitting it out" on sponsorship of daytime serials, Colgate has come back into the picture. Company last week negotiated a deal with NBC for sponsorship of "Lorenzo Jones" cross-the-board in the 5:30 to 5:45 segment under the web's new rate formula. On a 52-week basis, the show is costing Colgate about $650,000, time and talent.

With the pickup of "Jones," which starts carrying the Colgate banner in December, the client now has one of the biggest stakes in commercial radio. Other Colgate AM entries include "Mr. and Mrs. North," "Strike It Rich," the Bob and Ray Show, Louella Parsons and "Our Miss Brooks."

Both CBS and NBC are SRO in daytime radio with the soapers continuing to dominate the ratings, with the lone exception of Arthur Godfrey, who continues to hold down the No. 1 status in audeince pull.

MORE INVENTIVE COMML'S NEEDED

If television programming is in a rut, with the production impresarios playing the situation comedy and panel show trends to death, the TV commercial today is in an even more stagnant condition. It's the era of the "unimaginative blurb," when one client's plugs looks and sounds like everybody else's, with a resultant confusion that not only bewilders the viewer (the ultimate consumer), but strips the product of its identity.

These, in essence, are the major conclusions of a "retention test" undertaken by the George A. Gallup research organization in Princeton, which only recently has been exposed for the first time to key clients and agencies. It's a new approach to testing commercials, with the data uncovered anything but flattering to an industry that plays around with multi-million dollar sponsorship deals.

The tests bear out what has long been a major bone of contention in TV—that the commercials with any distinctiveness and originality to set them apart from all the others are few and far between.

One major conclusion is that here are too many television doctors. The "men in white" extolling the virtues of asserted cigaret

Overlong Comml's

NBC and CBS have passed the word along to major advertisers and agencies that they're going overboard on length of TV commercials. In letters to the clients and agencies, the webs point out that they're being put on the spot because of strict adherence to the NARTB Code.

This is the first instance since promulgation of the code of the networks censuring the plug-happy sponsors who have been abusing the time limitation on commercials. It's believed that viewer squawks have occasioned the "reminder."

Chi's Kleenex Cleanup

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Network radio activity continues on the upgrade with the Chi NBC sales office corraling one of its largest orders in several moons. The International Cellucotton Products Co., makers of Kleenex, has ordered the five-minute nighttime John Cameron Swayze news strip for Jan. 1 delivery on the full network.

New quickie occupies the 9:30 to 9:35 p.m. (CT) cross-the-board slot. Foote, Cone & Belding is the agency.

Automotives Roll Into Radio-TV Sponsor Bigtime; Flock of Deals

The automotive industry, which even in radio's best days never registered too much sponsorship enthusiasm, and which until now has been somewhat lukewarm to TV as well, appears now to be moving into high gear as bountiful bankrollers in radio and video. A few years back there was a sudden spurt of TV activity among the automotives but one by one they pulled out, with only two or three permanently latching on to established properties.

However, there's every indication now that the auto companies will siphon more and more coin into TV, with several new deals reported on tap for the near future.

General Motors, which hasn't been around since pulling out of the NBC Symphony Orchestra radio sponsorship about five years ago, has moved into TV to the tune of $3,000,000 with its Saturday afternoon pickups of the NCAA football series on NBC-TV. The GM Pontiac subsid is also going along for an adjacency ride with a sports show.

On top of the GM splurge, Willys-Overland is plunking down $1,000,000 for sponsorship of the CBS Sunday afternoon radio pickup of the New York Philharmonic concerts in the major "institutional" sale of the year. In addition it is sponsoring the Ford Foundation "omnibus" series on CBS-TV.

Another newcomer this season is Buick, with its elaborate NBC-TV spread in the Tuesday night at 8 period vacated once a month by "Texaco Star Theatre."

Ford, currently represented by the Thursday night "Ford Theatre" on NBC-TV, has been doing some juggling in an effort to find the coin for a permanent slotting of the Wally Cox "Mr. Peepers" show, which served as Ford's summer replacement vehicle. It's anticipated that "Peepers" will be back in the sponsorship columns as an added Ford entry before the first of the

Man to Watch

Frank White, now one of the top echelon at NBC, shifted his office space last week from the sixth to the fifth floor at Radio City, N. Y. hqs. Ordinarily such a move would go unheralded, but in the case of White there's a "more than meets the eye" undertone to his new surroundings, which now finds him flanked on either side by (1) Frank Crosswell, the NBC Comptroller, and (2) David Adams, who is credited with bringing order out of chaos as the behind-the-scenes operator in the web's recent reorganization.

General impression now is that White, with the Crosswell-Adams assist, will oversee the whole financial operation of NBC, with close control of the purse strings, etc.

Kellogg Exiting 'All Star'; Season's 1st Major Pullout

Network television suffered its first major casualty of the season this week, when Kellogg's served notice on NBC-TV that it is checking off the Saturday night "All Star Revue" when its present contract expires after the Dec. 27 program. Kellogg's is one of three participating bankrollers on the show, sharing the weekly tab with Pet Milk and Del Monte foods.

While no official reason was given for the cancellation, it's believed the move was dictated by the cereal firm's recent switch from Kenyon & Eckhardt to the Leo Burnett agency. Burnett had previously advised Kellogg against its intended plan of sponsoring "Space Cadet" cross-the-board on NBC, advising the client instead to shove that part of its budget into syndicated vidpix on a local level. It's believed, consequently, that the new agency again advised the client that the costs on the "All Star" were too high and that the budget might be used more judiciously in other types of advertising.

With NBC virtually SRO for all its cream evening time, the web is confident it will have little trouble in replacing Kellogg. "All Star" plays to a network of 58 live stations, so the web will run into no station clearance problems on the show.

WNBT, Princeton U. Kick Up Some Intellectual TV Excitement

On the premise that "once the educator leaves the classroom and starts broadcasting he no longer has a captive audience," WNBT, the New York TV flagship of the NBC network, in cooperation with Princeton University, is inaugurating one of the most ambitious ventures to date designed to explore and develop a variety of program formats and techniques in order to give educational programs the appeal and vitality that will win them large audiences. Huddles have already been held between Princeton U. prexy Dr. Harold W. Dodds and station execs, with the project already sanctioned.

The venture involves the setting up of a Fellowship at Princeton by WNBT, with the University assigning one of its faculty to work on the "curriculum" for a projected WNBT series, with WNBT in turn putting its staff and facilities at the disposal of Princeton's faculty members.

Specifically, the WNBT-Princeton joint project wants to know: How best can television service the modern university? How can an outstanding university make the most effective use of TV and extend the range of its teaching and research beyond the library, the laboratory and the classroom? What are the most effective video techniques and program formats for bringing these subjects to the TV screen? What should be the minimum and maximum objectives of a Princeton University TV series?

WNBT says it will approach the project with an open mind and an open camera, with no frozen concepts as to how the program should be presented or produced. If, after study, the University decides that it could best use an hour once a month then WNBT will assign an hour a month; or it may be a half-hour weekly, or a group of hour programs, 30-minute or 15-minute programs—whatever best fits the educational need. It may include setting up the cameras on the Princeton campus for an entire day, and through a dozen different telecasts picture for the first time a university, a faculty and its students at work, and to convey this intellectual excitement to the televiewers.

While steering clear of stunts or gimmicks, the projected pioneering series aims to avoid dullness or an overly-pedagogic treatment.

Willys 1st To Buy 'Omnibus'

CBS-TV tagged its first sponsor yesterday (Tues.) for its upcoming Sunday afternoon "Omnibus" series, with Willys-Overland Motors signing on as one of its five participating bankrollers the web is seeking for the hour-and-a-half show. Automotive firm, which only two weeks ago signed a $1,000,000 deal to bankroll the N.Y. Philharmonic-Symphony pickups this season on CBS Radio, is paying $25,000 per week for "Omnibus," including $13,000 for the show and $12,000 for time, on a 26-week deal.

Show is being produced by CBS in association with the Ford Foundation, and will hold down the 4:30 to 6 p.m. slot Sundays starting Nov. 9. Program will present a number of innovations, including pickups of Metropolitan Opera broadcasts, a series of five original plays scripted by William Saroyan specifically for the package, etc. William Spear is exec producer for "Omnibus."

MINIATURE 'BIG SHOW' FOR TALLU ON RADIO

Tallulah Bankhead may soon be going full circle, in the route from radio to TV to radio. Now that she has made her video debut as star of NBC's "All Star Revue" last Saturday night (11), the web is cooking up a new half-hour radio package for her, which will be in addition to the five more stints already lined up for her on "All Star."

AM program is to be a half-hour version of last season's "Big Show." Web has set a $10,000 price tag on it, and reports one major sponsor is showing considerable interest. If the sale is made.

BING CROSBY SHOW

With Ken Carpenter, John Scott Trotter orch, Red Nichols combo; Rhythmaires; Jane Wyman, Joe Venuti, guests
Producer-Directors: Bill Morrow, Murdo MacKenzie
Writer: Morrow
30 Mins., Thurs., 9:30 p.m.
GENERAL ELECTRIC
CBS, from Hollywood
(Young & Rubicam)

Bing Crosby's back for another semester in radio, this time flying the General Electric colors. Chesterfield gave him the go-by at the windup of last season, along with Bob Hope, considering the weekly tab too high. The Hollywood & Vine reports have it that, as with Jack Benny before him, the production accoutrements and bankroll on The Bing's showcase have been trimmed in keeping with the "radio reappraisal." If so, GE has grabbed itself a good deal. For there's no perceptible change—so far as the listener is concerned—either in Crosby or his entourage.

If the opening stanza lacked some of the sharpness and brittleness of the Crosby romps in the past, the track record is sufficient warranty that in another couple of weeks the Thursday night 9:30 to 10 slot on CBS will be rockin' to the customary Crosby mastery. Not that one needed too much reassurance on his first time out last week. His brief encounter with Joe Venuti (leading up to the fiddlin' virtuosity); his byplay with announcer Ken Carpenter; his soloing on "Auf Wiederseh'n" and his dueting with Jane Wyman on "Zing a Little Zong" (in a reprise from their Par film click "Just For You") were all grooved to the Crosby touch and manner, even though some of the dialog spark was lacking.

Significantly, the Groaner tipped on his GE preem that he'll be TV-bound (presumably under the same sponsorship auspices) when he winds up a film chore in Europe.

Only despondent note in the show were the heavy-handed and triphammered GE plugs, with both Crosby and Carpenter equally guilty. Rose.

WALK A MILE

With John Henry Faulk, emcee; Joe King, Joe Ripley, announcers
Director: James Harvey
Producer: Helen Phillips
30 Mins.; Wed., 8 p.m.
CAMEL
NBC, from N. Y.
(Esty)

"Walk A Mile" is a routine quiz show in all departments. Airer introduces John Henry Faulk, Texas humorist, as emcee but Faulk failed to live up to his billing on the preem show (8), except that he did have a Texas drawl. Faulk handled his interviews with the studio participants in strictly pedestrian fashion, bringing little humor to the session and repeatedly missing laugh cues handed to him by the remarkably hep group of contestants. The latter seemed to deliberately lay themselves open to devastating comebacks by the emcee but Faulk didn't appear to be listening and rapidly skipped over his trite introductory questionnaire.

Quiz format calls for each contestant to answer four questions with a pyramiding cash giveaway. If he answers all four posers, he gets $250 with a crack at a $500 jackpot question at the finale. The brainteasers were on an elementary level and most of the contestants had no trouble pocketing the $250 prize. The show even filed to generate much enthusiasm from the usual easy-to-please studio audience. Herm.

CLIFF JOHNSON FAMILY

With Cliff, Luella, Sandra, Pamela, Linda, Vicki Johnson
Producer-Director: Hooper White
45 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 8:15 a.m. (CST)
CO-OP
Mutual, from Chicago

After five years building up a local identity, the breakfast chatter of the Johnson clan is now getting spread around the land via the Mutual web. Definitely an offbeat offering, the free-wheeling gab session, sparked by the Johnson daughters, ranging in age from 5 to 11, may well get by as a novelty on Mutual's grassrooters.

With Mom and Pop (Cliff and Luella) keeping the conversational ball rolling, the four youngsters keep up a running line of patter that on the debut seg (13) had both bright and dull spots over the 45-minute span. Best sequence was a discussion of presidential balloting with the kids querying the parents about the workings of a free election. The gals demonstrated they're well trained in the niceties of radio's objectivity by refusing to tip their mitts as to which candidates they favor.

To round out the show, a couple of records were spun, including the windup hymn. Dave.

FIBBER McGEE & MOLLY

With Jim & Marian Jordan, Bill Thompson, Richard LeGrand, Arthur Q. Bryan, Gale Gordon, Billy Mills orch, King's Men; Harlow Wilcox, announcer
Producer-director: Max Hutto
Writers: Phil Leslie, Keith Fowler
30 Mins.; Tues., 9:30 p.m.
REYNOLDS METALS CO.
NBC, from Hollywood
(Buchanan)

Of all of radio's durable acts, "Fibber McGee & Molly" is the major TV holdout. According to the most recent dope, they'll continue to snub the sight-and-sound sweepstakes, preferring (undoubtedly) the comparative serenity of pictureless broadcasting. Teeing off their 21st season—18 of them on NBC—in the aural medium last Tuesday (7), Jim & Marian Jordan are fortified by a large national following as zealous in their behalf as Brooklynites are for their Dodgers, win or lose.

The twosome is timeless; there is a hot rumor around that the River Jordan was named after them, although some traditionally unimpeachable sources believe they derive from the Flying Jordans, who operated around circuses and vaude a couple of generations ago.

The Fibber and Molly approach is just as pat as a river or trapeze, with such variations as are dictated by climate, weather or personal mood. The scripters, Phil Leslie and Keith Fowler, give 'em the words and setups, Max Hutto gives 'em the blueprint, and the Jordans just keep rollin' along on their own momentum. It's one of the more agreeable situationers around the kilos—transcribed or otherwise.

Nothing has changed except the source of the salary, which this time out emanates from Reynolds Metals (vice Pet Milk), plugging its aluminum foil, etc. All the mainstay characters are parenthesized in the comedy vignettes: Bill Thompson as the Old Timer doubling on Wally Wimple; Richard LeGrand as Ole the janitor, Gale Gordon as Mayor LaTrivia, Arthur Q. Bryan as Doc Gamble, and Harlow Wilcox as the announcer who's often entwined in the narrative. For the interim or musical relief innings, the lineup is still the Billy Mills orch (real good) and the singing King's Men (real good). For the records, their respective efforts at segment caught were "Zing a Little Zong" and "Polly Put the Kettle On," for a pair of winning splicers.

For their fall coming-out, Fib and his mate drew their chuckles on their elaborate preparations to receive a presumably wealthy couple. No one in show biz can do a better "show off" pitch than Fibber. And his apron-mate is a lulu with a line. It turned out that the couple were merely a chauffeur and maid using their master's Rolls Royce on their night out. The red-faced revelation made everything hunky-dory for all down-to-earth hands.

It'll take more than television to drive "Fibber McGee & Molly" out of 79 Wistful Vista. The lease looks like a lifetimer. Trau.

JACK KIRKWOOD SHOW

With Lillian Lee, Lee Albert; Steve Dunne, announcer; Gaylord Carter, organ
30 Mins.; Mon.-Fri., 4 p.m.
Sustaining
Mutual, from Hollywood

Jack Kirkwood, a veteran Coast funnyman, has launched a cross-the-board comedy stanza for Mutual. Slotted in an afternoon niche, it should have a fairly good reception among femme dialers taking a breather from housework. He maintains a rapid-fire pace of gags, which run the gamut from yocks to eggs. Idea is to dish 'em out so quickly that the listener hardly has a chance to discriminate. He uses a number of regular features, such as "Madhouse News" and "Madhouse Little Theatre," which indicates the kind of insanity he's working for. On the initialer Monday (13) he enacted a screwball surgeon who's so busy he files his patients in the closet. It brought in just about every medico gag from Joe Miller's compendium, in original form or in a switch. Overall effect of sketch, however, was good.

Another segment is "Poets' Nook," which featured a verse argument between the dollar and the cent, which blended a touch of comedy with a moral. There are some quick musical interludes.

Kirkwood is assisted by Lillian Lee Albert, announcer Steve Dunne and actor-organist Gaylord Carter. Cast works hard. Chief weaknesses are the playing to the studio audience, the references to Kirkwood's bulk, the striving for laughs, comic's breaking up over his material, the tittering and giggling of the audience which makes it difficult to follow the lines, and the overemphasis on the zany brand of humor. Bril.

Radio Followups

"Charlie Chaplin, The Tramp Who Makes Music" was the subject of the WQXR (N.Y.) "Music Magazine" last Thursday (9) and it turned out to be a firstrate airer. Program included the air preem of the score for his new film, "Limelight," as well as segments from "City Lights" and "Modern Times." Although cinema music frequently fails to stand up on its own, divorced from the screen, most of the pieces that Chaplin cleffed (and in some cases also performed) came over with an impact that would have been strong even if they were not identified with the well-known Chaplin tag. Some of it is worthy of release in record form. One or two instrumental pieces could also be reworked, given lyrics and published as pop tunes; they've got a good melody line and emotional appeal.

Fred Grunfeld, editor of the "Magazine" offered the three music hall songs: "Sardine Song," "Animal Trainer" and "Spring Is Here," all sly and witty. Also the ballet, "Death of Columbine," which is flashy, schmaltzy and lyrical—it's listenable, but actually is a takeoff on the genre rather than a serious work on its own. A piano theme, in the Chopin manner, has a potent nostalgic effect. The concerto, which in the pic is the musical subject of a riotously funny act by Chaplin and Buster Keaton, stands up as a bright opus with its alternating virtuoso and sentimental passages.

From Chaplin's two earlier pix, Grunfeld selected the wonderful doubletalk cabaret song ("Titina"), the bullfight music which accompanied Chaplin's prizefighter ballet and the poignant "Who'll Buy My Violets" theme.

Grunfeld quoted Ray Rasch, who helped Chaplin arrange the music, on the comedian's approach. Latter noted that Chaplin deals more in phrases, themes and moods rather than in tunes and melodies, that he feels a few instruments can convey an effect, at times, better than a full orch. (One of the "Limelight" themes played was the music of a trio of down-at-heels street musicians.) Grunfeld commented that some of Chaplin's compositions are derivative, such as the shadow-boxing motif from "City Lights" being in the manner of Mendelssohn or the ballet "out-Delibes-ing Delibes." He called Chaplin a "gifted amateur."

Amateur or not, Chaplin is a film-maker who plans his pix on a musical blueprint and his output has a simple, popular quality, diversity and feeling, in addition to the inventive humor one would expect. Bril.

Mary Margaret McBride's interview (8) via ABC with Edna Kaehele, author of "Living With Cancer," probably marked a milestone in radio approach to the disease. Putting aside the usual forbidding statistics and technical commentary, Miss McBride talked directly though sympathetically with Mrs. Kaehele, a former newspaperwoman, whose personal experience with cancer forms the basis of the book.

Mrs. Kaehele told the story of her successful struggle with a courage, skill, frankness and warmth that stimulated the listener. Her handling of small incidents and significant details, bore the marks of the trained writer.

Miss McBride registered solidly as interviewer on the taped show. Jaco.

AUTUMN IN NEW YORK

With Jimmy Carroll, Frances Greer, Alfredo Antonini Orch
30 Mins.; Fri., 9:30 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS, from N. Y.

"Autumn in New York," a new series on the CBS net, is an okay interlude featuring two excellent vocalists in Frances Greer and Jimmy Carroll. It's a straight musical session with accent on the showtunes and standards with Carroll handling the brief chatter introes to each number in acceptable fashion. While a pleasing session, this is hardly the kind of high-powered programming which bespeaks of any radio challenge to video's grip on nighttime listening audiences.

Opening session featured Jimmy Carroll singing such tunes as "It's Spring Again" and "Hallelujah" while Frances Greer exercised her well-trained soprano pipes on "Some Day" and several Rodgers & Hammerstein showtunes. It was a good repertory with Alfredo Antonini's baton lending rich orchestral support. Herm.

KUKLA, FRAN & OLLIE

With Burr Tillstrom, Fran Allison; Jack Fascinato, musical director
Producer: Beulah Zachary
Director: Lewis Gomavitz
10 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 1:45 p.m. (CST)
Sustaining
NBC, from Chicago

Reversing the usual trend "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," Burr Tillstroms pioneer video fantasy, has switched to radio with this 10-minute daily NBC capsule. First edition (13) was introduced briefly by Tillstrom and showcased headliners Kukla, Oliver J. Dragon and Fran Allison, with other Kulapolitans to make their appearances on subsequent shows.

Without visual punch of the cavorting crew, particularly Ollie's famous neck bends, it'll probably take a little while for the characters to gain momentum via the sound-only route. Also with its midafternoon slotting the radio version bypasses a moppet audience. However, enough of the group's basic charm came through on the initial segment to indicate that Kukla and his colleagues will build an AM following.

Opening show was little more than a "hello" romp through, with Kukla and Miss Allison arguing Ollie out of producing his annual Columbus Day pageant. Trio polished off a fine vocal treatment of "It's Nice To Be Nice" as the session's single musical sparkler. Dave.

SPACE ADVENTURES OF SUPER NOODLE

With Charles Flynn, Tomi Thurston, Robert Englund, Everett Clarke
Producer: Al Bland
Director: Gene Eubanks
Writers: Budd Blume, Gene Dailey
15 Mins.; Sat., 9:45 a.m. (CST)
I. J. GRASS NOODLE CO.
CBS, from Chicago
(Gordon)

Despite its gay title, "Space Adventures of Super Noodle" shapes up as a routine entry in the science fiction field. It's targeted at the kids in the hopes they'll force Mom to buy the sponsor's noodles. Off the initial stanza (11), the vehicle seems hardly strong enough to get much action out of the roundabout selling technique.

Fanciful tale has hero Super Noodle and his young pal Rik projected 500 years into the future where, among other things, they find a supply of the bankroller's noodles as a peg for an integrated blurb. Real business, however, has Super forestalling an invasion from another planet by getting the earth's ray guns back in action through some unclear bit of scientific legerdemain.

Charles Flynn as Super and Robert Englund as Rik do a professionally competent job, as does Tomi Thurston as the femme foil and Everett Clarke as the leader of the invading forces.

Standard giveaway device this time pitched at the kiddies is flying saucers, complete with projectors. Here we go again. Dave.

CAFE ISTANBUL

With Marlene Dietrich, others; music, Ralph Norman
Producer: Leonard Blair
Director: Murray Burnett
Writer: Peter Barry
30 Mins.; Sun., 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining
ABC, from New York

By really listening intently, a dialer can get a fairly muddled idea of what goes on in "Cafe Istanbul." This is the second season for a series whose original locale was in the Middle East. If the preem of the new skein last Sunday (12) bears any relationship to past yarns, the chances are that there was a diplomatic exchange between (1) the foreign government in which the bistro was set and (2) the U. S., with the party of the first part suggesting that the location be changed on pain of an international incident involving the party of the second.

So now — presto chango! — the cafe has been moved way over to San Francisco, with Marlene Dietrich cast as the femme fatale, Mlle. Madou, "sultry song siren and owner of the nitery," who "weaves dramatic tales of adventure, love and intrigue."

As nearly as can be ascertained, the initialer revolved around a hotel deed with a 250G price tag, a ship in the harbor called Lucy-Something-Or-Other, a murder or two, a double-cross or three, Miss Dietrich's lost love or four, and, of course, "a star sapphire set in a green gold band."

"Cafe Istanbul" is transcribed in part. Other than Miss Dietrich, no acting credits were aired. The secret is safe at this end.

That there's a continuing market for these airers, however, is evidenced from Toni's desire to sponsor "Istanbul." Trau.

EDGAR BERGEN SHOW

With Ray Noble and orch; Dorothy Kirsten, guest; Bill Baldwin, announcer
Producer: Frank Gill, Jr.
Writers: Zeno Klinker, Artie Phillips, Norman Paul
30 Mins., Sun., 8 p.m.
RICHARD HUDNUT
CBS, from Hollywood
(Kenyon & Eckhardt)

This continues to be one of the topgrade comic shows on radio. Last Sunday's (12) segment, second since the fall return of the show to the air, was really in the groove, with a flock of funny lines, fresh and new. Edgar Bergen's joshing with Charlie McCarthy on the former's growing waistline and need of exercise, and Charlie's reluctance to lend his bike for the purpose; Ray Noble's verbal fencing with Charlie; guest Dorothy Kirsten's palaver with Charlie and Noble, and Mortimer Snerd's bit with Bergen—all tickled the risibilities. Especially Snerd's comments on the coming election and what he'd do if elected president. This part was tops.

In addition to the surefire patter, Miss Kirsten flattered the ears with choice renditions of "Poinciana" and "Stars In My Eyes," and Noble led his orch in a snappy rumba," "How Strange." The Richard Hudnut Quartet started the show off smoothly with a singing commercial, and then Bergen et al. went to town. Radio need take no back seat with this grade of entertainment. Bron.

TWIN CITIES COMMUNITY CHESTS

With John Salisbury, Cedric Adams, Bob De Haven, Arline Haberle, etc.
Producer: Charles Miller
Director: Fred Kaufman
Writer: John Salisbury
30 Mins., Thurs. (2), 7 p.m.
Sustaining
WCCO-TV, Minneapolis

In offering this half-hour show to boost the Minneapolis and St. Paul Community Chests, WCCO-TV performed one of its frequent public services by providing pleasant entertainment for viewers and, at the same time, lending a helping hand to a worthy cause. The Red Feather messages were neatly interwoven with song and dance performed by its staffers and other local talent. The combination of propaganda and diversion proved much more palatable, of course, than the fromer would have been on its own, and the appeal's effectiveness was enhanced. There is no question that the show got across the Red Feather's important place in the communities and the Chests' financial needs and enlisted support as it brought out the need for larger contributions and detailed the philanthropies that the donations finance.

For names the show had some of the Twin Cities top radio and TV personalities, notably Cedric Adams, Bob DeHaven and Arline Haberle, each of whom made a pitch for the Chests. John Salisbury capably emceed the proceedings. It was the first time Adams and DeHaven had been brought before the TV camera from a local station and they revealed assets which should assure them a future in this field.

There was first rate vocalizing by Tony Grise and Mary Davies, above par hoofing by Randy Norris and expert keyboard tickling by Jerry Mayheron. A mother and son team did a Polish folk dance in costume and a Negro femme trio contributed songs. The two latter acts haled from settlement houses. Rees.

BERNIE BIERMAN SHOW

With Bierman, Halsey Hall, Stu MacPherson, Willie Peterson
Producer-director: Robert McKinsey
Writer: Harold Sarjeant
30 Mins.; Sun. 5 p.m.
TWIN CITY FEDERAL SAVING & LOAN
WCCO, Minneapolis

Featuring former U. of Minnesota gridiron coach Bernie Bierman, this football season show is right down the alley for the army of Minnesota fans. It undoubtedly possesses added listener attraction because of interest in the ex-coach's views of the new tutoring regime.

Minus unobtrusive commercials, the show follows a set format calculated to give football fans valuable opinions and information, and to hold their interest closely. Halsey Hall, Morning Tribune sports writer, is an able emcee, and deep-voiced Bierman, queried by him and Stu MacPherson, WCCO sports director, handles himself professionally, being an able, clever talker whose well-chosen words are apparently delivered extemporaneously, instead of being read from a script.

Narrator Gordon Eaton leads the

TV SEES EMERGENCE OF 'NETLETS'

Variations On a Theme by 'Lucy'

That television is on an "Everybody Loves Lucy" kick is evidenced from the 1952-53 programming rosters. In contrast to the handful of situation comedies circuiting the video channels last season, they're now all over the spectrum. Significantly, even the TV dramatic shows with their weekly change of cast appear to be de-emphasizing the adventure motif this season in favor of the boy-meets-girl saga with situation comedy overtones. It was no accident that the NBC-TV premiere last week of "Hollywood Opening Night" (in opposition to "I Love Lucy") featured a Bill Bendix comedy designed to make a dent on the fabulous "Lucy" pull.

Following is the 1952 vs. 1951 scorecard on situation comedies already on or with imminent premieres:

ABC Adopts 'Voice of Distinction' Formula for Radio Announcers

ABC radio is calling for a switch in directions for its announcers. The friendly, light-hearted, personality-type announcer will give way to the voice of distinction with its precise pronunciation, pear-shaped tones and authoritative attitude.

In recent years, the Arthur Godfrey-Galen Drake school has held sway in the various network and station announceries. The individual station-break and plug pitcher has been given full scope to underline his individuality, even if the informality resulted in his talking with a wad of gum in his mouth.

Ray Diaz, ABC program topper, believes this approach has lost what impact it may have once had and, paradoxically, has served to make the announcer less important than in the early days of radio. Diaz feels that the announcers are extremely important to the personality a network or station presents to the listeners and for that

NBC to Salvage 50G on O'Connor

It looks like NBC-TV will salvage about $50,000 of the $125,000 rap inflicted on the network last week when the NABET union dispute blacked out the Colgate-sponsored Sunday night "Comedy Hour" on Oct. 5. That was the show starring Donald O'Connor. Because of the strike it was only given a West Coast airing, but the network made a kinescope of the hour stanza.

As result of medicos ordering Eddie Cantor to "sit out" his scheduled Oct. 26 "Comedy Hour" stint (which carries with it a $50,000 production nut), NBC-TV will substitute the kine of the O'Connor show.

Colgate execs looked over the kine last week to determine its quality. They found it okay.

ABC Soaps in Cleanup

ABC radio's soap opera block is now SRO. Seeman Bros. has taken the Tuesday and Thursday editions of "When a Girl Marries," daytime serial, and Durkee Foods has picked up the Monday, Wednesday and Friday segments.

Durkee has also bought the Monday, Wednesday and Friday editions of the noon news period on the web.

Fly Kines to Paris

Pierre Crenesse, North American director of Radiodiffusion Francais, has negotiated a deal whereby a newsreel kinescope will be flown direct from UN headquarters in New York to Paris for weekly TV presentation over the facilities of the French TV.

Radiodiffusion flew over its own commentator-analyst who is installed at UN hqs, where General Assembly sessions began yesterday (Tues.).

'World's Biggest Network' for UN Preems With Bldg.

Without fanfare or publicity, the United Nations Radio-TV Division has been quietly building up a communications system that's probably without parallel. On its U. S. and Canadian coverage alone, the asserted radio-TV shows "packaged" by the UN staff blanket the stations to the tune of 2,250 program impressions each week. This is exclusive of the radio-TV shows originated by the radio and TV networks, which have access to UN facilities. Nor does it include the manifold "extra services" accorded the TV networks, such as special newsreel clips, kinescopes, etc.

In addition to the domestic coverage, UN services practically the entire world, including the Armed Forces Radio Service. Programs off

Macdonald Carey Set For NBC Radio Series

"Jason and the Golden Fleece," new mystery-adventure series starring Macdonald Carey, takes over the Wednesday night at 10 slot on NBC radio, starting Oct. 29, to occupy the time until the new Bob Hope show for Jell-O moves into the time period in January. William Gargan's "Barrie Craig" show, now in that slot, moves over to Sunday nights at 10.

"Jason" will have Carey as operator of a boat, the Golden Fleece, wharped out of New Orleans

REGIONAL LINKS MAY BE ANSWER

Network, station and agency toppers are crystal-balling the potentialities of the "netlet"—tieup between two, three or a half-dozen outlets—which may well set a pattern for the video of the future.

Last week WOR-TV, N. Y., and WFIL-TV, Philadelphia, announced that they were available for advertisers who want to sponsor a show on both channels. Stations would be paid their regular rates, but would pick up the tab for cable charges. The advantages to the spender are: (1) With a single show he can tap one-quarter of the nation's tele sets; (2) production costs would be lower than producing separate shows in the two cities; (3) the stations' coverage areas touch each other, forming a solid WOR-WFIL zone which duplicates the distribution patterns of some big regional bankrollers.

This "tale of two cities" is being studied because similar netlets could be established in Baltimore-Washington (and even add that tie-up to a Philly-N. Y. axis) and other major markets. It's significant that Columbia has set up CBS Television Pacific Network as the first regional skein, comprising KNXT, L. A., KPIX, 'Frisco, KFMB-TV, San Diego; KSL-TV, Salt Lake City and KPHO-TV, Phoenix. CTPM, Columbia declares, can reach 75% of the population of California, Arizona and Utah. The five-station wheel will permit programming with a regional appeal and coordination of merchandising efforts in this $10,000,000,000 market.

It's pointed out that by banding together, stations can strengthen their bargaining power and independence vis-a-vis the chains. Some industry circles feel that in two or three years there may be as many as a dozen or two netlets, with neighboring stations helping each other and consequently less dependent on the webs. That the threat of this possibility is not lost on the webs is indicated by Columbia's move in setting up CTPN under its aegis, with CBS-TV Spot Sales representing the quintuplet hookup.

The webs, of course, are aware that film placed on a spot basis poses one threat to their financial health and see in the netlets another menace on the clearance front. An affiliate might prefer to take a show on a netlet basis, as more remunerative than a web-originated stanza. Such considerations might put one or more of the four existing chains under tight economic pressure. The counter-balancing force will be the local station operators' desire for the stronger program fare skeins can offer, particularly when competition at the local level intensifies.

The station representatives are likely to play a part in developing netlets, spurring these weddings where they have clients in nearby markets. A problem to be worked out is whether the reps will draw commission on business coming in to a two-station linkup. Reps get their 15% on billings coming in from out of town, but not on network biz or local biz placed from within the city.

NO SPONSOR, 'CONCERT' GETS WCBS-TV HEAVE

WCBS-TV, the CBS video web's key N. Y. station, lost its only all-music show Saturday (11) with the cancellation of "Concert in the Park." Half-hour show featuring Alfredo Antonini and a house orch, plus vocalist Carol Reed, had been airing Saturday afternoons since the start of the summer but had failed to come up with a sponsor.

Station hopes to revive the program eventually but on a smaller budget, which will probably entail the use of a much smaller orch. Miss Reed, meanwhile, is continuing on the WCBS-TV payroll as narrator of the five-minute weather report, aired cross-the-board at 7:25 p.m.

N.Y. Market's TV Saturation Isn't Inviting Radio Tuneout, Sez Nielsen

In the highly TV-saturated New York market, radio activity in video homes is up for almost every hour of the day. Figures compiled by A. C. Nielsen from N. Y. tele homes, comparing September, 1952, with September, '51, shows that from 6-9 a.m. radio listening is up and from 2 p.m. until midnight radio dialing is also up. Only in the 9 a.m.-2 p.m. period did radio listening fall off in the video homes.

Nielsen data shows that TV sets-in-use were appreciably below last year in the heart-of-the-evening hours, which may indicate that set-owners are doing less viewing as their sets become older. On the other hand, TV activity was up in the morning, probably reflecting the greater and more diversified programming by stations in that period, as well as the growing daytime viewing habit.

Afternoon hours significantly show an increase in combined radio-and-tele dialing.

Since New York has about 3,000,000 tele homes (roughly a 75% penetration), increased AM tuning in these video homes means a great deal to the radio outlets, Nielsen figures. For example, in the 11 p.m. hour there was an increase from 0.7 to 3.0 in radio activity in the video homes. This means that 690,000 more tele homes were available to radio this September over the same month last year.

Nielsen statisticians report that September was no flash-in-the-pan. The increase in radio listening in N. Y. TV homes has been noticeable in the evening hours for the past few months. It could be a reflection of dull summer programming, however, or that the '52 warm weather fare had less audience interest than the '51 summer schedule.

Stay of Judgment

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

The Ramsey county grand jury asked the judges for permission to adjourn its sessions so that it could watch the World's Series baseball games on television.

Permission was granted.

RTDG Pact Gives 20% Pay Hike To AM-TV Directors

Radio-Television Directors Guild's new contracts approved last week give average wage hikes of about 20%. Pacts signed with the nets, agencies and packagers cover staffers and freelancers.

New minimum scales are: net TV directors, $175 weekly; net AM directors, $165; TV local directors, $150; net TV floor managers and associate directors, $100, with increase to $120 after six months; net AM directors, $115; and local AM directors, $90. The same dollar increase over the old wage scale applies to all persons who received over-scale pay in the last contract.

Freelance AM scale was raised 15% for strip dramatic and musical shows. All other shows up to and including the half-hour show were given a 10% boost.

TV freelance scale for all TV network shows (with a few exceptions such as speeches, discussions, news, etc.) will be $300 for a half-hour, $400 for an hour and $350 for a cross-the-board quarter-hour.

Web staff pact recognizes the RTDG nationally and provides for a national guild shop, but terms were negotiated in each city covered. Other gains cover job definitions, an eight-hour day for TV floor managers and associate directors, elimination in TV of the "kickback" (reduction of staff salary when a staffer gets commercial fees) and other fringe benefits.

ND Raps NCAA Plan To 'Share the Wealth' In Divvying Grid Coin

Chicago, Oct. 14.

The National Collegiate Athletic Assn. continues on the receiving end of squawks from its member schools over its handling of football television. Latest beef has been registered by athletic director Ed Krause of Notre Dame over the NCAA TV committee's proposals that the tele fees earned under the controlled plan be pooled and distributed to all member institutions.

Under the setup prevailing this year, the schools repped on the NBC-TV gridiron telecasts split an average of $100,000 each game. The NCAA committee, which this season and last has "packaged" the college games under its controlled program, has announced it is working on a "share the wealth" formula whereby schools not included in the TV schedule will garner some of the coin. The committee plans to present the proposals at the next NCAA convention.

The plan has been dubbed "socialistic and communistic" by the Notre Dame athletic topper. Notre Dame, along with the U of Pennsylvania, has been bitterly opposed to the overall action by the NCAA to limit grid TV, and has contended that the individual schools should have the right to make their own tele arrangements.

'Peepers' Set To Replace Mayehoff

Reynolds Metals has decided to jettison "Doc Corkle," the Eddie Mayehoff vidfilm series it currently sponsors Sunday nights on NBC-TV, in favor of picking up "Mr. Peepers," the half-hour live situation comedy series which Ford bankrolled on the same web during the summer. Reynolds, repped by the Buchanan agency, is reportedly dissatisfied with early ratings on "Corkle," which debuted Oct. 5, and despite the fact that several succeeding stanzas are in the can is making the switch to "Peepers."

Latter show will continue on a live setup, moving into Reynolds' Sunday night at 7:30 slot in the near future. Show, created by producer Fred Coe and an NBC house package, was a marked success for Ford during the summer. Automotive firm had mulled the possibility of picking it up again this fall, in addition to sponsoring its "Ford Theatre" vidpix, but NBC could not clear time on enough stations for a period which would have been acceptable to Ford. Wally Cox will continue in the title role for Reynolds.

PEE WEE REESE SHOW TO PREEM IN L'VILLE

Louisville, Oct. 14.

Pee Wee Reese, local resident, who had the dubious distinction of being the last putout in the recent World Series, will indulge in an extra-curricular activity this winter in his home town, together with Don Hill, local sportscaster, in a weekly 30-minute air show, in which Reese will discuss all phases of baseball and answer questions. Reese will take on the radio assignment after his return from a barnstorming tour of Hawaii with a group of Dodgers and Yankees.

ALL STAR NEWS

With Bryson Rash, Pauline Frederick, Gordon Fraser, Leo Cherne, Gunnar Back, Bill Berns, others
Producers: Louis Ruppel, Bill Stapleton, John Denson
Directors: Robert Doyle, Marshall Diskin
4½ Hours Weekly
Participating
ABC-TV, from N.Y.

ABC is trying to carve a niche for itself as the top TV news web, with this program of 4½ hours weekly (Sunday, 8-9 p.m.; Monday, 9-10; Wednesday, 8-9; Thursday, 8-8:30, and Friday 8:30-9:30). Judging from the third time out (12), a lot of work is necessary to whip the stanza into shape.

The primary concept has validity. With the other skeins concentrating on drama, variety and panel shows, a number of set-owners who are sated with the fare on the competing channels may turn on their receivers to get the evening's news. And with a full hour to play with, ABC can offer a more complete coverage of current stories as well as presenting features which can't be squeezed into the quarter-hour news strips. But with the limited budget the web has available, "All Star" lacked the necessary impact to put in into the big time. The intention is to use TV as a "direct reporter" rather than a "mere transmitter" of the news; but on the edition caught no actual headline makers were brought before the cameras. Perhaps a third to one-half the show was visual—with film clips from Telenews and ABC's own film unit. The remainder was straight lensing of the gabbers, which is not necessarily untelegenic (as shown by Walter Winchell's TV-er), but this entry didn't cut to the heart of the news.

Man-in-the-slot assignment is rotated among the web's stable of reporters and commentators, with Bryson Rash doing an excellent job on Sunday. He kicked off with a summary of the hard news of the day. Bill Berns (WJZ, N.Y., program chief) then did a neat man-in-the-street film roundup on whether the Yanks should get out of Korea. Gordon Fraser followed with a reel report on the traffic jams in the N.Y. garment center, featuring some dramatic shots of the kingsized tieups. Little light was shed on the problem, however.

Leo Cherne, director of the Research Institute of America, did a good report on registration figures, showing that although the registration has passed the 1948 mark, it hasn't kept pace with the growth of population. In the second half, Cherne also clicked with data on the cost of living, throwing some coins on the desk and tossing away a cent to indicate the 1% decrease in purchasing power. He made some other attempts at visualization, which were steps in the right direction.

Marking Columbus Day, Gunnar Back in a Washington pickup chatted with a Library of Congress rep and the Spanish Ambassador on a letter Columbus had written. It was a so-so feature. Pauline Frederick's interviews with some doctors who won public health service awards opened weakly, but had a good final segment.

Winding the first half was a "deadline wrapup" of the news. Rash launched the second portion with a concise roundup of the political scene. A film survey on the bumper corn crop was good, but this was followed by some footage on a corn city that was chamber of commerce material. Final celluloid offering was a British documentary excerpt on fighting in Malaya, which naturally espoused the Empire point of view. Stanza wound with another batch of bulletins. There's little or no repetition, and thus no invitation to tune out on that score.

"Managing ed" behind the scenes is Louis Ruppel (ex-editor of Collier's and vet newspaperman), assisted by John Denson (former Collier's managing ed) and Bill Stapleton (quondam Collier's correspondent and production manager of the Miami Herald "TV Newsreel"). Trio has heavy newspaper and magazine experience, and presumably may be able to endow this series with more punch as it gets up a head of steam. Primarily, they'll have to dig more deeply to get the background and significance of the news. Airer, which will expand to five hours weekly after the elections (with the Thursday edition going into the 9-10 p.m. niche), is participating. It gets into five or six cities a night, with a one-minute spot on five outlets costing around $1,250; a quarter-hour goes for around $2,750, time, talent and agency commission. On a cost-per-thousand basis it may prove an economical buy when the ratings are in. Bril.

EVERYWHERE I GO

With Dan Seymour, interviewees, Sammy Spear orch
Producer: Irving Gitlin
Director: Lloyd Gross
Writers: Charles Romine, David Moore
30 Mins.; Tues., Thurs., 2 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from N. Y.

"Everywhere I Go" is "We The People" with tricks added. "People" having been jettisoned by Gulf Oil in favor of vidrama in its nighttime niche, its longtime interviewer-host, Dan Seymour, has been provided with a similar format for this two-a-week afternoon cruise. And quite a cruise it is as Seymour is spotted on a flying saucer with a commanding view of what goes on in the world, descending from his cloudy perch for studio gabbing. The difference is measured in the skillful employment of film for background and mood-setting, a good deal of this being rear projection. The live and celluloid mating is nursed along for generally good results in creating an illusion of a locationer a la Hollywood travelogs.

"Everywhere" was launched last Tuesday (7) and block caught was the second outing (9). Since this is the shakedown period, the program toppers will have discovered by now that they are trying to accomplish too much, and in electing quantity, have dissipated their punches over too broad an area. This was especially evident in the fourth and final 1951 true-story vignette, of a pretty little girl in Union City, N. J., who was "adopted" by the local police and her future assured. What was intended as a walloper in human interest came out a bit disjointed, lacking smooth continuity for peddling the objective. Nevertheless, it had distinguishing qualities and atmosphere which indicate that "Everywhere" itself has a decent future in tackling such subjects.

In the opening, Seymour dropped down on a Chinese junk on L. I. Sound in New Rochelle, N. Y., for a chat with a family who've lived on the seagoing boat exclusively for many years. The shimmering water in the background heightened the reality. In the next flight from the stratosphere, Seymour boarded a bus to have a back-seat talk with a driver from Holland and one from the N. Y. transit system, eliciting the differences in operation while the vehicle "moved" over its route. Rear view showed the city's streets.

A novelty entry displayed a royal couple from Uganda in Central Africa doing a ceremonial dance with bell and stick symbolic of tribal joy anent the king's accession to the throne. The tribesman's wife (he stressed fact she was his "consort") made a striking, barefooted figure in severe hairdo and stance. Not severe, however, was the duoterp with her master in what could well pass as an African-Cooch. Two notable features here were the Oxfordese of the chief and the authentic flora and fauna of the British protectorate blending with the studio accoutrements.

CBS-TV has tossed some of its top variety and documentary hands into this show. Producer Irving Gitlin won a Peabody Award for his scripting-production of "Nation's Nightmare." Writer-reporter is Charles Romine and reporter is David Moore, latter having teamed with Gitlin on the memorable "The People Act." Marlo Sullivan is exec producer and Lloyd Gross directs. Trau.

SECOND CUP OF COFFEE

With Erik Rhodes, Red Cramer
Producer: Richard Stark
Director: Paul Burggraf
Writers: Rhodes, Cramer
15 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 11 a.m.
Sustaining
WJZ-TV, from New York

WJZ-TV tees off its telecasting day at 11 a.m. with an amiable session tagged "Second Cup of Coffee." The 15-minute cross-the-board series is an easy to take potpourri of chatter and song pegged at the hausfrau viewer. Show does nothing more than give the gal-at-home an excuse to relax over an extra cup of java while Erik Rhodes and Red Cramer brief them on sundry items pertinent to New York, and they do well.

Rhodes and Cramer, who also pen the series, are likeable hosts and they pace the show with an ingratiating informality. On the kickoff stanza Monday (13), they covered the weather, Gotham's remaining nickel ride (Staten Island Ferry) and upcoming WJZ-TV shows. Rhodes broke up the patter pace nicely with an okay vocal of "Wish You Were Here," which he self-accomped on the keyboard.

Paul Burggraf, who's at the directorial helm Monday and Tuesday (Roger Shope takes over for the rest of the week), kept the quarter hour at a lively gait. Gros.

LITTLE LADY PARTY

With Ireene Wicker, others
Producer-director: Ray Nelson
30 Mins.; Sun., 12 noon
HELENE PESSL, INC.
WABD, Dumont, N. Y.
(Keystone Advertising)

Ireene Wicker, who lost her "Singing Lady" TV show two years ago after her name appeared in Red Channels (and despite the fact that she vehemently denied any pro-leftist leanings), is back with a new show on DuMont's WABD, N. Y., and one which should have little trouble in regaining her army of moppet adherents. Although the program has a new title, it's basically the same as "Lady," with Miss Wicker spinning fairy-tales in her unique thesping-singing style. Parents will probably appreciate it as much as their wide-eyed offspring.

Producer-director Ray Nelson has injected into the format a touch of smallfry singing and dancing. Even though the youngsters on the show caught (12) were not so preciously precocious as they usually are, their routine was just so much added fluff for Miss Wicker's talents. Format also has a guestar of the week (in absentia), which gives the star a chance to do a short biographical sketch on each and then reprise the personality's favorite fairy-tale. Last Sunday, it was Lily Pons, with Miss Wicker delineating how the soprano first turned to singing, and then reciting Miss Pons' favorite, "Cinderella."

Show is bankrolled by Helene Pessl, for its Little Lady Toiletries. Plugs come too often and are too long, but they're well-produced and should do a good selling job for the sponsor. Stal.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE

With Todd Russell, others: Hal Simms, announcer; Milton Kaye, organist
Producer: Peter Arnell
Director: Lloyd Gross
60 Mins.; Fri., 11 a.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from N. Y.

With Arthur Godfrey absent from CBS-TV Fridays because he does his radio show from his Virginia farm, the web is filling the 10 to 11 a.m. slot that day only with a new giveaway show, "Wheel of Fortune." It has a new gimmick in that contestants for the loot are persons who saved someone's life or otherwise distinguished themselves as "good neighbors." As such, the show has considerable human interest which should play well to the pre-lunchtime video audience.

On the show caught (10), Todd Russell did a nicely subdued job as emcee, handling his interviews well with the various guests and displaying the right amount of suspense as each spun the "wheel of fortune" (a carney-type "big six") to determine the value of the loot he had a chance to win. As part of the deal, the subject whose life was saved answers the questions for the hero, getting for himself a wristwatch. As customary in such cases, donors of the various prizes get full identification.

Wheel is set up in an interesting way, which helps build up suspense. Top numbers are spaced from $30 to $1,000, which determines the value of the loot. In addition, just below these are noted the number of questions which must be answered correctly, such as "1 of 1," "2 of 2," etc. Queries on the stanza caught were none too difficult, indicating that winning of the prizes is secondary to the human interest element in the program.

Peter Arnell's production and direction by Lloyd Gross are plenty adequate for the comparatively low-budgeter. Show, of course, is to be sold on a participating basis, but so far there are no takers. Stal.

WHAT'S THE STORY

With Ralph Renick, Bill Baggs, Dr. Don Larson, guests; Lee Taylor, announcer
Producer: Ralph Renick
Director: Bernard Rosen
30 Mins.; Thurs., 8:30 p.m.
PEOPLES MORTGAGE CO.
WTVJ, Miami

This series of half-hour public service telecasts has won wide attention among viewers locally, thanks to calibre of guests appearing for interrogation and answers through recent weeks. Added impact comes with use of figures in current political campaign with hassle among state Democratic leaders—the feature on program caught—a good illustration.

Moderator is Ralph Renick, who handles his chores in a quietly efficient manner to guide the questioning and cutoffs on the sometimes long drawn wrangles. He has himself two intelligent and up-

Tele Follow-Up Comment

"Toast of the Town" took off on a somewhat different tangent for its tribute to Sophie Tucker on Sunday (12). Set depicted her living room and a house party atmosphere gave a somewhat more informal tone to the proceedings. This is innately a good idea, but unfortunately the camera picked up extraneous movement in the background and detracted from several turns. It revealed that the acts not working at the moment at times seemed disinterested in the central action.

First half of the show couldn't get off the ground, but the second half was one of the best put on by "Toast." Ronny Graham and Harry Mimo warmed up the show and by the time La Tucker got on, the proceedings were sizzling. Miss Tucker, of course, hit a top reaction. Her oldies established a nostalgic mood and again affirmed the fact that she's a superior showwoman that can hit a rapport with viewers in any bracket. She provided a curtain that was a solid sendoff for the session.

Graham was the first to put the show in gear. He negotiated a dissertation of a hipster running for president. The material was timely, sharp and loaded with laughs. Graham, now in "New Faces" was brought on the N.Y. scene via intime cafes where he is a surefire laughgetter.

Mimo is likely to become a fad. This Italian pantomimist came on with a trademark burlesquing nervous mannerisms by straightening tie, coat and hanky and lining himself up with his clothes. Repetition of bit created an excellent sight gag. He went into dance satires which were expert and helped him off to a socko mitt.

Sandwiched in between this talent was Gloria Lesser, winner of the Cigar Festival (Hartford) Sophie Tucker contest. She's a good vocal carbon of Soph.

Early half comprised the Ink Spots, who seemed on their way to warming up the show, but background distractions didn't contribute to their cause. Rex Harrison & Lilli Palmer were interviewed at length by host Ed Sullivan. It was an actionless precede to their recital of a bit from their current pic, "The Fourposter." Jose.

If Sen. Richard M. Nixon isn't elected Vice-President, he can always get a job as a TV actor—and should do a terrific job as a one-man yarn spinner. Republican party candidate appeared solo Monday night (13) on CBS-TV to delineate the first meeting between Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers, in which he played a major role as a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Aside from any sympathy for his politics, he turned in the kind of job that should have had GOP adherents gleeful at their sets and the Demos gnashing in frustration.

Nixon's entire half-hour pitch led up to the fact, which was previously known, that Gov. Adlai Stevenson had appeared as a character witness for Hiss. But it was his manner of delivery that made the show — and show it was, in every sense of the word. He started from behind a desk, leading viewers step-by-step through the original conflicting Hiss-Chambers testimony. Then, when he came to the part in the script where Hiss was first introduced to Chambers in a room at the Hotel Commodore, N. Y., Nixon arose and, with the best of theatrical gestures, acted out each role in the drama. He managed to generate considerable suspense and if the denouement hadn't been known at the outset, his job would have been worth a TV "Emmy."

Question remains, of course, whether the playacting will win any votes for the Republican candidates, since Stevenson has already answered the Nixon charges. But it was a solid piece of TV politicking and, if nothing else, points up the use to which TV is being put in this current Presidential campaign. Stal.

Jackie Gleason stanza continues to gather strength on the basis of some superior sketches. By now it's admitted that Gleason is one of the best sketch men in video. If he were as good on standup comedics, then it's conceivable that this CBS program would be one of the best on TV.

Gleason's bit at the beginning had some deadly stuff. There's little fault with his projection that good material couldn't cure. In the sketch department, Gleason, Audrey Meadows and Art Carney provided an appealing bit in which Gleason is trying to appropriate a foundling. The bartender piece which is similarly a good piece of material was also on the plus side.

Nat "King" Cole tore into "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" and "Faith Can Move Mountains" and exited to a powerful mitting. Doretta Morrow charmed her way through a tune from "King & I" in which she originated the Tuptim role, and "Because You're Mine" from the Mario Lanza pic in which she's appearing. Results were excellent. The June Taylor girls with violin dressing by Maria Neglia did well in the production department. Jose.

CBS-TV's "Studio One" furnished a fine example Monday night (13) of know-how integration of all facets of TV dramatic programming to come up with a solid click—in this case, W. R. Burnett's gangster story, "Little Men, Big World." Production, direction, casting (which led to solid thesping) and camera work were all top-drawer and the result was a valid argument for the superiority of live video over film when it comes to drama. It was one of the better jobs turned in by Donald Davis and Dorothy Mathews since they took over as producers on "Studio One" last spring from Worthington (Tony) Miner.

As adapted by Reginald Rose, the Burnett tale emerged as a starkly realistic portrayal of big-time gambling, complete to the sensitive and emotional gang leader and the respected public servant, who was in reality the gang chief. Cast, topped by Jack Palance and directed by Paul Nickell, was solid down to the last bit player. Palance gave a finely-shaded reading to his role of the Arkansas hillbilly who became the gang chief, and Shepperd Strudwick was solid as the senator who ruled the

MUSIC HALL

With George Robey, Winifred Atwell, Archie Robbins, Hollywood Marionettes, Joan Turner, Sirdani, Wandy Tworek, Jack Radcliffe, Eunice Metcalf, Bobbie Kimber, Twelve Toppers
Producer-director: Richard Afton
90 Mins., Sat., 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining
BBC-TV, from London

Light vaudeville programs have become a regular Saturday night feature of the British TV wavelength, and one of the more popular of the attractions is the "Music Hall" series. It's a simple presentation, usually from an outside theatre rather than the BBC's own studios, and is staged without most of the directorial touches and fancy camera shots that are a feature of other programs. In other words, the show is basically a string of vaudeville acts in which the artists come out on stage, do their stuff and bow off, with the cameras frequently perched at the same point recording a near-static picture.

In the bill caught, U.S. comic Archie Robbins was hired for the third consecutive "Music Hall" program to act as emcee. He's filled the spot with distinction on two previous occasions and was being used for the third time before checking out for a tour of camps in Germany. Robbins is a breezy, energetic comedian, a slick raconteur and a warm personality. All these qualities emerged in the deft way in which he introduced the artists and in the more elaborate spot in which he did his well-known parody on "Manhattan Towers," "My Basement In The Bronx."

Bill was distinguished by the inclusion of vet George Robey, who that day celebrated his 83rd birthday. He made a gallant but brief contribution which garnered sturdy mittings from the studio audience. Winifred Atwell made a sock impression with some fast, highly stylized pianistics, and Wandy Tworek scored a comedy hit with funny business with his fiddle.

Featured prominently in the program were the Hollywood Marionettes, with their slickly manipulated puppets and a rather gruesome skeleton dance. Magician Sirdani's act relied mainly on his gab, although he's an adroit pickpocket and demonstrated his skill on two members of the studio audience. Joan Turner's vocal impressions were of mixed quality, and she'd probably fare better with straighter material. Jack Radcliffe's comedy sketch had little to commend it, while Bobbie Kimber's ventrilo bit served to assist in introing some of the acts. Myro.

BOB HOPE SHOW

(Colgate Comedy Hour)
With Fred MacMurray, Connie Haines, Clark Bros., others; Les Brown orch
Director: Jim Jordan, Jr.
Writers: Norman Sullivan, Jack Douglas, Charles Lee
60 Mins.; Sun. (12), 8 p.m.
COLGATE
NBC-TV, from Hollywood
(Sherman & Marquette; Ted Bates)

Bob Hope teed off his series of stints on NBC-TV's "Comedy Hour" Sunday night (12) with what was probably his best video show to date. Web producers made a wise choice in not burdening the comic down with too many over-produced numbers and skits, so that the show came off as almost a throwback to Hope's better radio days. This gave him a chance to display the type of stand-up comedics which he does best, and he made the hour pay off in a solid string of yocks.

Hope devoted almost the entire opening quarter-hour to his rapid-fire monologging and, with good material (most of it based on the current Presidential campaigning), he parlayed the gags neatly. Fred MacMurray, as his top guestar, joined him in more stand-up gagging, and in a short skit about the first French discoverers of the Mississippi, which was funny more because the pair were evidently having such a good time playing it than because of its intrinsic worth.

Best of the hour was a sketch parodying TV's "Captain Video," titled "Captain Electron," in which Hope played the pilot of a spaceship on its maiden flight to a new planet. Sketch ultilized a number of sight gags and prop gadgets and all of them, for once, worked on the nose. MacMurray lent his talents to this capably as the ruler of the planet.

Vocalist Connie Haines and Hope scored solidly with their "Takes Two to Tango" song-and-dance, and the diminutive Miss Haines returned later in the proceedings for a sexy rendition of "Jambalaya," which also registered. Clark Bros. were socko with their jet-paced acrotapping. Les Brown and his orch, never on-camera, backed the show well.

Colgate commercials, both live and on film, were standard for this show. Stal.

COFFEE AND—

With Hugh Downs, Marilyn Lovell, Art Van Damme Quintet
Director: Dave Brown
Writer: Marv David
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 9 a.m.
Participating
WNBQ, Chicago

The search for economical morning TV formats continues. To take advantage of the flow-over from the parent web's "Today" eye-opener, the Chi NBC station has launched this daily music-chatter session. While certainly not a rouser, it's easy to take and won't scare off the "Today" fans.

Strip has Hugh Downs and singer Marilyn Lovell as co-hosts. Downs, with his relaxed, natural style, is a highly capable hand at this sort of informal goings-on and Miss Lovell adds some distaff pertness. Her warbling takes a little getting used to, off the samples revealed on show watched (9).

Besides the tune segments with the Art Van Damme Quintet coming through with neat instrumental specialties and the guest interview, there's a heretofore unexploited device. That's a daily roundup of the upcoming neighborhood club meetings and other events. It's a good gadget to build up good will with the femme coffee klatch set.

Show's furnishings are kept to a minimum but, not so much as to give the production a threadbare look. Dave.

PARADE OF STARS

With Maxine Sullivan
Steve Hall Trio, Ernie Tetrault
15 Mins.; Tues., 10:30 p.m.
BRESLAW FURNITURE CO.
WRGB, Schenectady
(George R. Nelson)

First telecast in a series featuring weekly changes of guest singers came through fairly well, with Maxine Sullivan spotlighted. A firming of the accompaniment, quickening of camera shifts and tightening of production would lift the program level.

Miss Sullivan used "The Lady Is a Tramp" and "Loch Lomond" for the big numbers. She sang surely, although the Scotch tune in swing seemed to lose some of the lift and bounce noticeable with orchestral support.

Steve Hall, WGY-WRGB staffer, pianoed and led trio which includes guitarist Bill Bender and bass Abe Rapp. Hall appeared stern and rigid of face, until finale. Threesome should be flexed easier and integrated better. Jaco.

BOB & RAY

With Bob Elliott, Ray Goulding, Audrey Meadows, Florian ZaBach; Julia Meade, hostess
Producer: George Zachary
Director: Herb Horton
Writer: Jack Roach
15 Mins.; Tues., 10:30 p.m.
EMBASSY CIGARETS
NBC-TV, from N. Y.
(Lennen & Newell)

Whoever lined up the format for this new Bob (Elliott) and Ray (Goulding) show did NBC's zany comedy team dirt. Duo, who have brought to both radio and TV a bright new comedy note by free-wheeling on their own, are almost straightjacketed in this little opus by a format tried and found wanting four or five years ago on TV. Comics distinguished themselves on the preem (7) despite the show, certainly not because of it.

Basically a vaudeo production, the show is set up under the guise of a nitery (the Embassy Club, of course, to spotlight the sponsor's brand name). Julia Meade, a buxom blonde, serves as hostess, introducing the various acts and also pitching the commercials. Guests sit around at tables, applauding the acts on cue. Whole thing had a slightly phony tinge and, while the Bob and Ray sketches were played to the cameras and not specifically to the "nitery" audience, their material nonetheless is something which should not be related to a nitery floor.

Despite their confinement, the comics managed to get in a surprising amount of their biting takeoffs on various things. First skit, in which they introduced their new raccoon coats for football games, was none too bright. They more than redeemed themselves, though, on a scathingly funny satire of Sen. Richard Nixon's now-famous TV fund speech (with Goulding, as a reporter, interviewing Elliott, as a scoutmaster, on his income status). Equally tops was the mimicry of CBS-TV's "Danger" show, complete with the guitar background music and full identification of the rival network's show title. Audrey Meadows lent them capable assistance in both sketches.

Violinist Florian ZaBach is apparently in only for window-dressing. On the preem, he played his customary "Hot Canary" in an overly-produced production number. Besides Miss Meade on the Embassy blurbs, an unidentified cutie dressed as a cigaret girl also tosses in a singing plug, reminiscent of the Goodyear commercial done on that bankroller's shows by Maureen Cannon. Stal.

ONE WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE— ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE

With Mildred Clinton, John Griggs
Producer-Director: Larry Menkin
Writers: Virginia Radcliffe, Chris Riland
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 11:30 a.m.
Sustaining
WABD, DuMont, N. Y.

WABD has probably reached the ultimate in inexpensive, live programming with this new daytime entry. Comprising two separate 15-minute soap operas, the show utilizes no sets and only a few basic props—and a single actor and a single actress in each of the two segments. Take away the props, black out the pictures and producer-director Larry Menkin would probably have come up with a new invention called radio.

It's an interesting experiment and, with sharper scripting to remove the oldhat soap opera overtones, might come up with a respectably-sized audience. Initial stanza (each story is to run serially for a week) had too much of the maudlin, tear-jerking aspects of radio soapers. Show definitely needs a script hypo.

First 15-minute segment is titled "One Man's Experience" and on the preem week has actor John Griggs essaying a story titled "Two Young Lovers," scripted by Chris Riland. Stanza caught (9) had Griggs recovering from a heart attack he had just suffered at his desk and then recalling to viewers how he had met his wife, their early family life, etc. Obviously it had to be a tour-de-force for the actor and, while Griggs gave a creditable performance in the solo spot, the story wasn't interesting enough to make up for the lack of action.

Same can be said for "One Woman's Experience," which had actress Mildred Clinton in "Two Young Lovers," scripted by Virginia Radcliffe. This one was even more soapy, dealing with a woman whose husband had gone off his rocker, recovered and then started to go mad again when she lost their baby during childbirth. Menkin helped things considerably with his fine camera direction, often even giving the "cast" a chance to change costume, even though each was on camera almost the entire 15 minutes.

Whether the show can lure any sponsors remains to be seen, since that will be dependent on the size of the audience drawn. Stal.

BUICK CIRCUS HOUR

With Joe E. Brown, Dolores Gray, John Raitt, Ben Blue, others
Producer-director: John C. Wilson
TV director: Frank Burns
Writers: Anita Loos, Jerry Seelen
60 Mins.; Tues., 8 p.m.
BUICK
NBC-TV, from New York
(Kudner)

Taking the every-fourth-week date in the Tuesday-at-8 Milton Berle slot is a lavish production, "Buick Circus Hour," which has promise of providing some top-flight entertainment. The initialer last week (7) showed that there is still lots of work to be done in whipping "Circus" into shape, but it was an exciting stanza that kept the viewer looking to see what would happen next.

Producer-director John C. Wilson's airer is a musical show with a book, latter provided by Anita ("Gentlemen Prefer Blondes") Loos and Jerry Seelen. The rub is that with vaude routines and production numbers, songs by Dolores Gray and John Raitt and comedy interludes with Joe E. Brown, the plot gets lost in the shuffle, with the drama telescoped into skeletonized, sketchy segments. The story also tended to relegate Brown into a featured rather than starring role.

Brown is a clown in a circus owned by Raitt, a cocky fellow who is being pursued by a debutante. Miss Gray is in love with Raitt and quit her job as nitery chanteuse to become the phrenologist for the tent show, with Brown's help and over the deb's objections. By end of the hour, as was to be expected, she had succeeded in getting Raitt to duet with her on "Isn't It a Lovely Day:" Next month, presumably, the course of the courtship will be followed.

On this relatively slight thread was strung some good singing by Raitt and Miss Gray. He did "Come See the Circus" and "Song of the Open Road" and she warbled "Fair Encounter" and "Little Girl Blue," and later, in her cafe spot, "We're Having a Heat Wave" and "How Much Do I Love You?"—all put over nicely. Raitt did well by his items, although projecting a bit too heavily for the video medium and occasionally seeming a little hesitant with his spoken lines. Both are likely to develop into strong video personalities.

Brown opened with a cute sight gag, involving a big dog and a tiny pooch. He had a sock number midway in the layout, as a tramp clown giving a marksmanship exhibition, revealing his mastery of pantomime and his early circus training. Another amusing turn found Brown togged out as a gal's guardian angel, protecting his ward from the amorous advances of a youth egged on by Ben Blue, playing a provocative devil. Sketch wound with angel Brown vamping the Mephistophelian Blue. It pleased, although not realizing its full potentialities. Besides, it seemed a pity that Blue's talents were utilized only in this bit.

Chief flaw, perhaps, was that too many diverse elements were tossed together. The Tokayer Troupe (six men and a gal), which does a surefire teeterboard act (currently at the Palace, N. Y.), have a standout turn culminating in four of the seesaw performers being catapulted into a basket chair held aloft by one of the team. Yet, in terms of a musical drama, spot seemed long—since it was not related to the plot.

Production had the earmarks of a big budget, with excellent costumes by Frank Thompson, sets by Stewart Cheney and deft music direction by Victor Young. TV direction was smoothly handled by Frank Burns. Use of "roustabouts" to change some of the set elements fitted in nicely with the Big Show atmosphere. Latter was built up with a parade of clowns, jugglers, "freaks" and animals (including a couple of elephants). Ballet corps, eight-strong, also showed to good advantage.

Frank Gallop played the ringmaster and also did the integrated commercial (on film) which had a covey of clowns put the Buick through a test, riding it over a succession of logs. Demonstration was effective, although the explanation which followed could have been presented with greater clarity via closeups. Bril.

SCOTT MUSIC HALL

With Patti Page, Frank Fontaine, Mary Ellen Terry, Peter Conlow, Carl Hoff Orch
Producer: Harry Herrmann
Director: Buzz Kulick
Writers: Bob Weiskopf, Jack Huston, Charles Spaulding
30 Mins., Wed., 8:30 p.m.
SCOTT TISSUES
NBC-TV, from New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

"Scott Music Hall" represents one of the larger tele outlays of the season, with a reported $35,000 weekly tab allotted for the Patti Page-Frank Fontaine stanza. Despite the cost, the show's projectors are attempting to play it safe. These two toppers have to get along on what they bring with them. The show designers expect that Miss Page's tunes and Fontaine's comedy should carry the session, with relief terping by a charming ballerina, Mary Ellen Terry, to fill the lulls.

Actually, it doesn't work out that way. The shallowness of the session is evident at the start when Miss Page, not a particularly gifted femcee, introduces the various turns. On the preem show Miss Page negotiated "Pennies From Heaven" before introducing Frank Fontaine, who did his Red Riding Hood bit. That's a truly funny piece of business. Miss Page gives a very triste countenance on this display. The nature of her sad ballads makes it difficult for anyone, except a top performer, to pull up the key of the show again.

The straight presentation of the first half of the show contrasts greatly with the latter half, where some imagination was used. Last half was essentially a ballet sequence, with a thin thread of plot, that went off charmingly. This segment had some depth and color, along with highly entertaining terps. Sequence started off with Miss Page's "I Went to Your Wedding" which set the theme of that portion. Frank Fontaine's sketch as a reception guest, was far below the level of his other bit on the show. Miss Terry combines looks with talent and has capable partnering by Peter Conlow. Herb Ross' choreography and B. G. Shevalove's staging helped considerably. Show alternates with "Cavalcade of America." Jose.

ROLL UP YOUR SLEEVES

With Arthur Godfrey, Marguerite Piazza, Ezio Pinza, Sam Levenson, Dinah Shore, Archie Bleyer orch, others
Producer: Franklin Heller
Director: David Rich
30 Mins.; Sun. (12), 3 p.m.
CBS and NBC-TV, from N. Y.

If talent meant anything, "Roll Up Your Sleeves" should have converted sufficient b.o. (blood owners) into b.d. (blood donors) to supply the nation's military and civilian needs for years to come. Columbus Day one-shot via CBS and NBC in tele plus the four radio nets (CBS, NBC, ABC, Mutual) lined up on the entertainment side with the smash contributions of Marguerite Piazza, Ezio Pinza, Dinah Shore and Sam Levenson, to the amiable emceeship of Arthur Godfrey.

It emerged as a superior half-hour session that spliced its surefires with interesting vignettes from the GI-civilian point of view. Program's blood pitch was presented in cooperation with the American Red Cross, the Defense Dept. and the Civil Defense Administration. Godfrey set the mood pronto with a general appeal, twice over lightly. Miss Piazza and Pinza paired in a sock operatic aria after a nurse, assistant director of supervision in several southern states, described the dire need for whole blood and plasma in a Godfrey vis-a-vis.

A charming Englishwoman married to an American officer explained the role of blood during the blitzing of England, and a corporal recently back from Korea gave quiet but vivid response to Godfrey on the circuitous route necessary to get 21 pints of blood delivered to him as he lay in an evacuation hospital.

Levenson played his monology along the lines of medicos and drugs of his Brooklyn youth, for a series of chuckles. Miss Shore was cut in from the Coast for her rich thrushing on "Getting to Know You" and "Auf Wiederseh'n." Latter tune was in the Vic Schoen arrangement with male chorus backing the singer. Franklin Heller's production and David Rich's direction of the stanza were first-rate.

Donating a pint would seem just about the biggest bargain, considering the top talent who came through for this greatest of all current-day causes. Trau.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD SHOW

(All Star Revue)
With Groucho Marx, Ethel Barrymore, Meredith Willson, Ben Grauer, others
Producer-director: Dee Engelbach
Executive Producer: Sam Fuller
TV Director: Hal Keith
Writers: Mort Green, George Foster
60 Mins., Sat., 8 p.m.
PET MILK, KELLOG, DEL MONTE
NBC-TV, from New York
(Gardner, Burnett, McC-Erickson)

By any law of averages, a Tallulah Bankhead-Groucho Marx-Ethel Barrymore entertainment parlay would appear to be supercharged with a voltage capable of generating an electric TV excitement comparable with, say, the Jimmy Durante video bow of a couple seasons back.

Yet in spite of all the advance bally and premiere anticipation, the "Tallulah Bankhead Show" on Saturday night's NBC-TV "All Star Revue" came as a disappointing letdown. True, there's no quibbling that Miss Bankhead emerged as a new and interesting TV personality; there were moments when the pacing was proper and the triumvirate had some worthy material to sink their teeth into. At such times the show fulfilled its promise. But these were isolated moments that stood apart from the otherwise erratic tempo and shoddy production that ushered the Tallu into TV.

The TV show was obviously patterned after the ill-fated NBC radio "Big Show" (with Dee Engelbach returning to the producer-director assignments), but the video counterpart missed sadly when it came to utilizing the technical knowledge of the new medium. In addition to being hampered by script material that was weary and kind of shopworn by too frequent use, camera miscues were glaring and the production as a whole fell short for a topflight showcase. The flub in one of the better skits (employing a synchronized recording for some subconscious expressions) was inexcusable.

To maintain the character that the sharp-tongued caustic, devil-may-care Tallu has created should, obviously, have been the aim of the show. But the too-slow pacing and the studied wise-cracking jarred the tempo. As projected on "All Star Revue," an hour was too much. Judicious editing, permitting the elimination of the Tallu intro in a song-and-dance turn, the overworked Pet Milk commercial with Miss Bankhead and Ben Grauer, and a couple of other needless items, could have brought in a slick and fast half-hour show.

Initial skit between Miss Barrymore and Miss Bankhead, with the inevitable sniping, somehow never got moving along. When Groucho joined them things hummed. This was the spot for the "subconscious" trick effect. Whatever laughs it generated got bogged down by the mechanical snafu.

This wa Groucho's first live TV appearance (his "You Bet Your Life" weekly quizzer is filmed) and for the occasion he tried to get back into the "Animal Crackers"-"Cocoanuts" stride of visual comicalities with a "Go West" number. That it lacked zest and spark was perhaps one of the evening's major disappointments.

A "Writer versus Critic" takeoff on "Author Meets the Critics," with its almost day-&-date promotional bally for Miss Bankhead's autobiography, had Meredith Willson as panel emcee; Groucho taking the book over the coals, and Miss Barrymore siding with the author. It had a good quota of laughs. But nothing boff.

Miss Bankhead hit her stride in a solo skit, which found her venturing into the subterranean for her first subway ride, only to find it didn't have a sleeper, drawing room or dining room. Here was the first really Tallu-slanted bit of writing and she translated it into a socko bit. (Her encounter with a Bette Davis posted in the subway was an inspirational gem.) Closing refrain by the cast, of "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You" was a visual pickup of the "Big Show" weekly finale.

A "Jericho" dance production number, conceived by Ron Fletcher, nitery-musicomedy choreographer, was above par for the TV course. There was some tasteful designing by Richard Day (who has a topdog status on the Coast film lots). Meredith Willson contributed his usual musical finesse. Rose.

- Reminding America of ASCAP's more than 38 years of service to the entertainment industry and the nation...
- Dramatizing ASCAP's struggle to provide a measure of security for composers and authors enabling them to add new works to ASCAP's varied and ever-growing repertoire...
- Delighting young and old with glimpses of a few among the thousands of creators who have made ASCAP music truly "the music of America."

Thanks Ed Sullivan for your fine shows and human understanding. They are deeply appreciated by the Composers, Authors and Publishers of America.

CBS Sees Over 50% of Shows From H'wood's TV City Within Two Years

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

That CBS' Television City will supply the network with more than half of its tele shows within the next two years is the optimistic outlook taken by Hubbell Robinson, Jr., the chain's teevee veepee, and Harry Ackerman, Coast v.p. It's not just a wild guess, they say, but the trend has that unmistakable look about it.

Looking ahead two years, they see more studios arising to complement the present four and that, they believe will cast the die that will stamp Hollywood as the oft-proclaimed world capital of television. CBS has other production bases in town to accommodate the flow of new programs but at the present only the Earl Carroll Theatre will be abandoned after first of the year.

There is also a clear indication that once the union jurisdictional disputes are ironed out, CBS will be impressing many of their programs on film. Its house shows now on film are let out on sub-contract to avoid controversies with the crafts. Alan Young may be added to the filmed shows but network has the right to telecast the show live.

Ackerman has several new shows in the hopper, and first out will be the televersion of "Millie" starring Elena Verdugo. Others on the planning board are an hour-long mystery series of unique pattern, and two daytime serials. Other futures includes Parke Levy's "December Bride," now on radio, and a tele concept of "My Favorite Husband," which served Lucille Ball as a starring vehicle. Diana Lynn is pencilled for the lead.

Robinson and Ackerman have okayed the format for the 90-minute program officially dedicating Television City Nov. 15.

With Jack Benny as emcee, the show will spotlight all the web's top talent. To date, Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, George Burns and Gracie Allen and Marie Wilson ("My Friend Irma") have been set.

Possibility exists that Arthur Godfrey will also take part in the program, which will take the air from 9 to 10:30 p.m. (opposite NBC-TV's "Show of Shows"). Web wants Godfrey to fly to the Coast, but if that isn't possible, may cut back to N. Y. to show him in action.

As detailed by Robinson the show will have a running premise throughout the 90 minutes.

UN Network

the UN beltiline are shipped to Latin American countries, Australia, New Zealand, Persia, Spain, Arabia, Greece, Israel, Korea, Tangier, Norway, France, South Africa, etc.

"UN Today," 15-minute series, is carried cross-the-board by 250 stations, including Mutual, UN's Network for Peace and Dominion Network of Canada, making 12,500 program impressions a week. Cross-the-board "UN On the Record" is carried by both CBS and Trans-Canada Network. "UN Story," transcribed dramatic series, is heard over 550 stations in the U. S. "UN News" is built specifically for WNYC, N. Y., and the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters Network.

New fall schedule officially preemed yesterday (Tues.) with the opening of the United Nations General Assembly at the new UN quarters in N. Y. The radio-TV facilities are high on the "must" attractions in the building.

Philadelphia — Maxwell House, through Benton & Bowles, just purchased a saturation advertising campaign in Philly using 158 spots among four network stations and several indies, with WIP snagging more than a third of the total business placed in the local market.

Inside Stuff—Radio

Louis Berg, film and tele editor of This Week mag, sharply criticizes Merle Miller's book, "The Judges and the Judged," in the October issue of Commentary. Berg said that Miller's report on "blacklisting" in radio and television "opposed guilt by association with innocence by association, refusing to admit evidence pointing to guilt as 'Red Channels' refuses to admit evidence pointing to innocence. Neither tells the whole story; Mr. Miller's book is no more a fair report on the blacklist in radio and TV than 'Red Channels' is a proper report on Communist influence in the industry."

Berg relates that "Judges" has been under attack within the board of the American Civil Liberties Union. Miller is a board member and wrote the study for the ACLU. Commentary article said that the fight against Communists has been conducted by "people too far to the right, by unscrupulous demagogues," and added, "we of the liberal faith have surrendered to them the fight against Communists."

Recommendation by Berg is that a "fair-minded board of inquiry, such as has been proposed by management and trade union officials alike, would first of all serve the function of getting the truly innocent and innocuous off the hook." He adds, "We will at least know whom we are defending and why. We will know who is being punished and why."

Commentary is a monthly sponsored by the American Jewish Committee.

In a unique new system of program promotion, WNBC and WNBT, key stations of the NBC radio and TV nets in N. Y., will launch a special newspaper for ad agency execs next week, designed to keep agency men abreast of the latest news events while they are at their offices. Titled the "Mid-Day Edition," the one-page handout will be delivered to a select group of agency toppers daily by uniformed NBC page boys.

Newssheet will spotlight the latest headlines direct from the NBC newsroom in N. Y. Final item on the sheet will be a capsule promotion pitch for the two stations, including a time availability, a new show starting, a line on one of the station's name personalities, etc.

Jeff Chandler can claim the record for long distance commuting for radio work. He'll pile up a total of 7,500 miles over a three-week period to appear on CBS' "Our Miss Brooks" opposite Eve Arden. Actor is locationing at Pendleton, Ore., on the film "Sioux Uprising." Deal was worked out between CBS and Universal-International to fly him back to Hollywood every Sunday for the broadcast and get him back to Oregon in time to continue his film work on Monday morning.

WQXR, N. Y., will conduct the first experiment in the east of "binaural sound reproduction," the ear counterpart of stereoptical pictures.

A three-dimensional sound effect is produced by picking up one side of an orch with a mike feeding WQXR-AM and the other side with a mike feeding WQXR-FM. When a listener places his FM set on one side of the room and his AM set on the other, the music sounds full and deep as though the orch was ranged around the listener. Demonstrations will be aired at 9:05 p.m. on Oct. 29 and 30, with cooperation of the Audio Engineering Society, the Audio Fair and Magnecord tape recorders.

Mutual has launched a novel "get out the vote" campaign. Homeowners are being urged to turn on their porchlights for one hour—between 8 and 9 p.m.—on Nov. 3, day before Election Day to remind citizens to vote.

Drive is being conducted by five newscasters, H. R. Baukhage, Cecil Brown, Holland Engle, Sam Hayes and Frank Singiser.

Increasing rate of production for radio and TV home sets is not interfering with the industry's defense output, National Production Authority was assured last week by the Radio and Television Manufacturers Industry Advisory Committee.

Since Korea the output of military electronic goods has been upped 1,000%. However, all of this is taking less than 10% of the manufacturers' capacity. However, manufacturers are now encountering some shortages in their civilian production. There have been spot shortages of 21-inch picture tubes and of certain other tubes and components.

NPA warned the manufacturers of possible cutbacks in copper and aluminum.

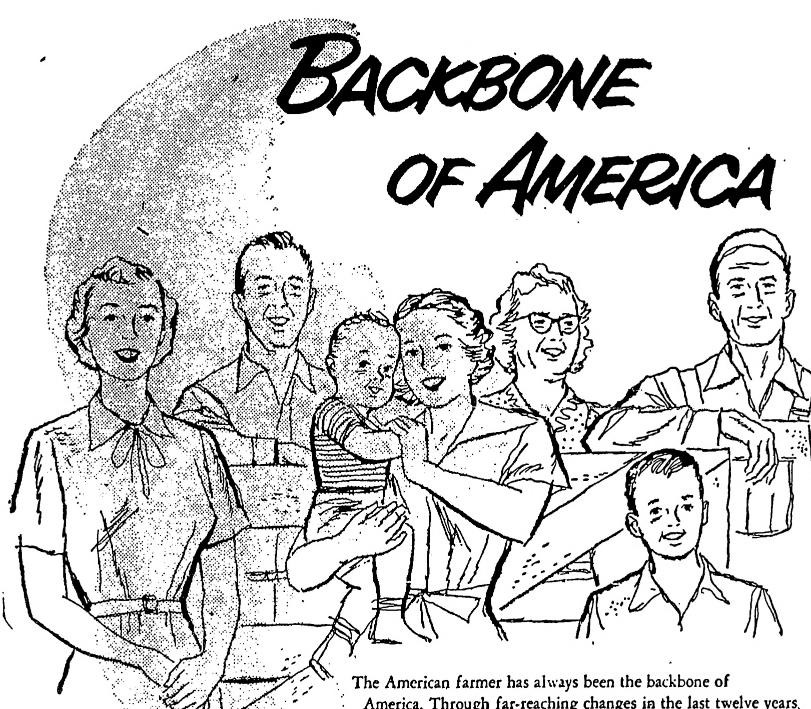
World Broadcasting System is giving its subscribers a Yuletide gift of "Christmas Lane," a half-hour open-end drama.

"Lane" stars Pat O'Brien as policeman in a crowded tenement district, with an anti-delinquency slant. It was produced on the Coast by Herbert Gordon, World production v.p., and directed by Henry Hayward with music conducted by David Rose. It's part of a 12-feature Yule package WBS is preparing.



The American farmer has always been the backbone of America. Through far-reaching changes in the last twelve years, the farmer has become one of America's most important consumers as well. Here are some of the factors that have made him "Your Best Customer:"

In 1940 income from farming was less than $11 billion; in 1951 it was $37.5 billion.

In 1950 the farmer's purchases of consumer merchandise were 2½ times what they were in 1940.

In 1940 total farm assets were $54 billion. By 1951 they were $153 billion. In this same period, mortgages, in relation to assets, were reduced 67%.

In 1940 the spendable cash held by farm families was $4 billion; in 1951 it was nearly $20 billion—$3,178 per family—many times the liquid assets of the average city dweller.

These are just a few of the statistics that illustrate how important it is to reach the rural market—your best customer. In WLW-Land, WLW radio reaches more of them more often for less than any other medium. Ask to see the WLW story of "Your Best Customer".

Cincy's Personnel Shifts

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.

Personnel traffic is stepping up at local radio and TV stations.

Latest departures from the Crosley staff are Lee Jones, femme personality on "Midwestern Hayride," who became dissatisfied with her programming, and Larry Vincent, pianist-singer, and Ken Lynn, announcer. Vincent spots are being filled by Al Morgan, a recent joiner.

Fred Thomas, veteran newsman, who was with WCKY and WLW some years back, has returned to Cincy as publicity director of WKRC-TV.

WLW has moved up Robert Yeager from producer to assistant program director, replacing Chet Herman, who switched to control operation.

Betty Matthews has been appointed a producer on WLW-T.

Little Rock — Arkansas' state capital was faced with a TV hassle here when the Little Rock Television Co. filed official articles with Secretary of State for a commercial VHF application. Company has applied for Channel 11, which is also the same channel filed by the Arkansas Broadcaster Co., owners of Little Rock's AM station KLRA, CBS outlet here.

Golf & Headaches On NARTB Agenda

Second District meeting of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters will be held tomorrow (Thurs.) and Friday at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., with a two-day agenda of meaty radio and TV problems. Paul Morency, of WTIC, Hartford, chairman of the All Industry Affiliates Committee, will preside at the radio sessions, with Robert D. Swezey of WDSU-TV, New Orleans, member of the Television Board of the NARTB, chairman of the video session.

AM panel discussion will feature Raymond Spector, the agency head; E. W. Ebel, director of advertising for General Foods (which has just plunked down $2,000,000 for the Bob Hope daytime-nighttime radio show); Kevin Sweeney, BAB veepee; Hans Zeisal of Tea Bureau, Inc., Hugh M. Beville, NBC research chief; and Horace Schwerin.

The TV delegates will hear Ray Guy, of NBC (who put the first UHF station on the air in Bridgeport); Irving Rosenhaus, of WATV, Newark, who will discuss "Non-Network Operation"; Bill Fay, of WHAM-TV, Rochester, who will talk on "Single Station Markets"; Paul Adanti, of WHEN, Syracuse, discussing "Multiple Station Markets," and Nat Fowler, film director of WJZ-TV, N. Y., who will kick around the intricacies of pix buying for TV.

Golf tourney is on the "relaxation" schedule.

WFIL (& TV) Into Fancy New West Philly Center In Shift From Midtown

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.

WFIL and WFIL-TV have left the midtown section to take over a new and self-contained plant in West Philadelphia. For the first time all divisions of the WFIL operation—radio, television, film and newsreel—are housed under one roof.

The Inquirer stations have shifted radio operation and managerial offices from the Widener Bldg., in the central city to a greatly expanded radio and TV center on the site of its previous television station. WFIL is the second of the town's three video outlets to move all activities from the midtown. The WCAU stations moved to the suburbs last Spring.

Combined studio and office space occupies 33,000 square feet, and the new construction is highlighted by such features as studios easily converted into radio or television use, simplified control room operation and enlarged newsreel and film facilities.

Four studios with individual control rooms, property and carpentry shops, and AM and TV master controls occupy the ground floor. Distinguishing feature of the studio layout is the fact that all are interconnected and can be served through one point of entry, a factor which permits flexibility in use of studios for programs requiring maximum space. Fully equipped kitchen sets have been installed in three studios, complete with water, gas and electric.

'Space Cadet' Back

"Tom Corbett, Space Cadet" returns to radio this month via a Saturday morning spot on the NBC network. Show, which has been absent from the air since Kellogg's bowed off as sponsor, will take over the Saturday 9:30 to 10 slot, replacing the Kathi Norris show.

NBC has not yet tagged a sponsor for the program.

EXITING OF STREIBERT NO INDUSTRY SURPRISE

With Tom O'Neil, Jr., prez and board chairman of Mutual, trimming the sales of WOR and WOR-TV, N. Y., the resignation of Theodore C. Streibert as prexy of the two outlets and veepee of General Teleradio, owner of the WOR stations, was "in the cards." Streibert, who has been with WOR almost 20 years and was one of the founders of Mutual, will remain on the MBS board. Effective date of Streibert's resignation hasn't been set.

Streibert's bowout follows the exit of R. C. Maddux, WOR sales veepee; J. R. Poppele, engineering veepee; Dave Driscoll, news-special events topper; and other department heads, as MBS and WOR operations were integrated.

Before joining WOR, Streibert was assistant dean of Harvard Business School and held exec posts with FBO (later RKO) Pictures, Cinema Credits Corp. and Pathe Exchange. After the O'Neil takeover of WOR this spring, Streibert was named prez of General Telecasting, which was to form basis of a tele web.

Charles Antell has bought "Live Like a Millionaire" on ABC-TV, starting Saturday (18) in the 7:30-8 p.m. slot.

WTIC Spans the Years

Hartford, Oct. 14.

A three-part broadcast of the voices of U. S. presidential candidates dating back to 1888, was presented over the weekend by WTIC. It's believed to be the first time in radio history that so many voices of presidential timber has been aired.

Programs were prepared by the station as part of its "Let's Get Out the Vote" drive. Programs consisted of brief vignettes describing the highlights of the political conventions and elections of the last 60 years, beginning with Benjamin Harrison's nomination and election. In addition to the actual voices of the candidates, campaign songs and other popular tunes identified with each election year were aired. The broadcasts were built around a collection of speeches by presidential candidates which WTIC has been assembling for many years, including the famous "Cross of Gold" and "Normalcy" speeches by William Jennings Bryan and Warren G. Harding.

$5,000,000 Educ'l TV System To Blanket Minn. on Univ. Agenda

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Dr. J. L. Morrill, University of Minnesota president, has outlined to the institution's regents a vast $5,000,000 educational television system to blanket the state and provide TV to an estimated 1,500,000 Minnesotans who don't see it now, at an annual operating cost of $544,590.

A statewide meeting of educators, civic leaders and interested citizens will be called by the university president next month to discuss the plan. At the meeting it's planned to appoint a committee to present the plan to the next legislature, which must provide the funds.

Drafted with a Washington engineering firm's help, the plan contemplates a key station and studios in the Twin Cities and nine satellite stations throughout the state.

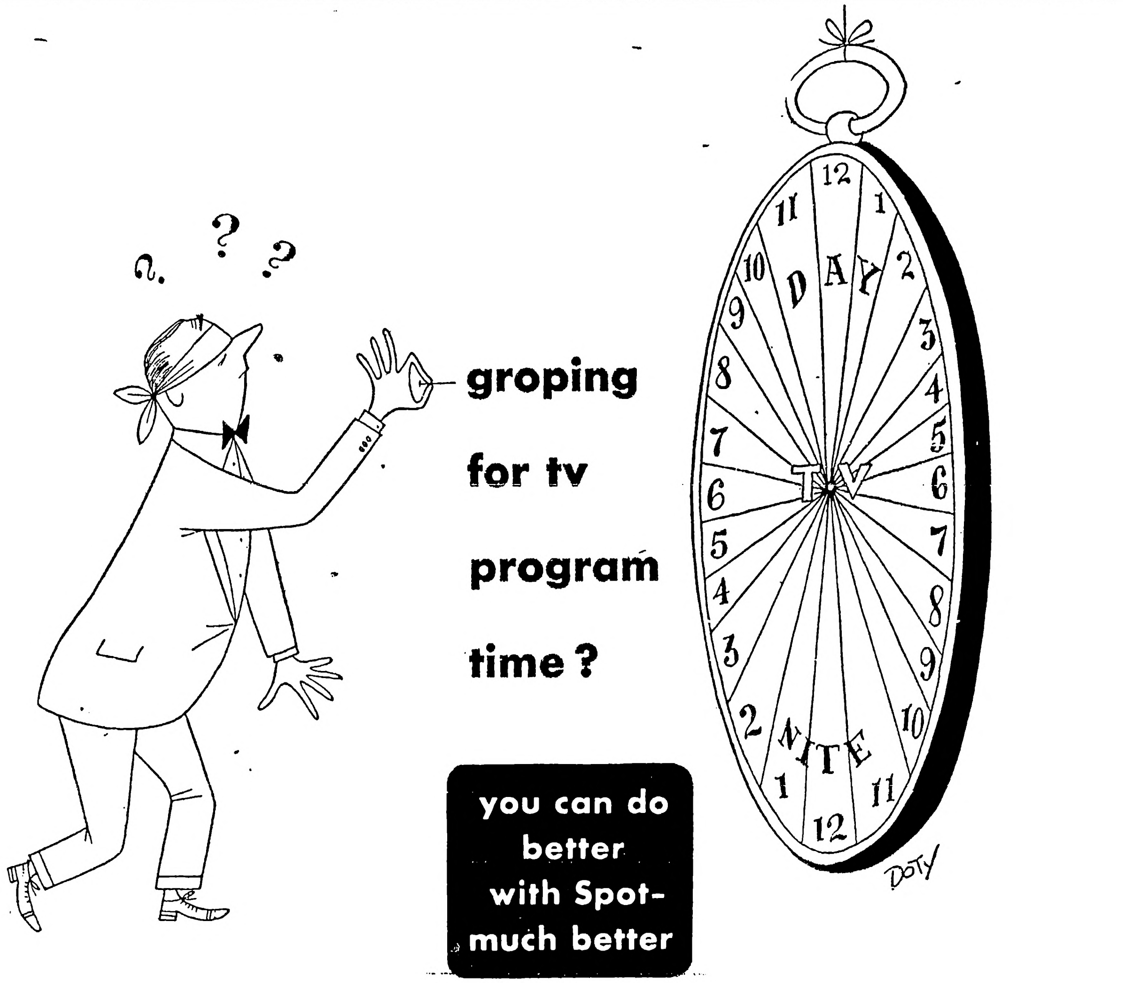
Representatives of several educational organizations already have agreed that the University of Minnesota should be the system's licensee, Morrill announced. The university has been summoned by school superintendents, other colleges and civic groups to give the project leadership, he said.

"But this is a state question," Morrill told the regents. "It is not a university question. The question is whether Minnesota people want educational television. It would be a tragedy of educational statesmanship not to lay the plan before the legislature."

Any appropriation for educational television should be in a separate legislative bill, with no connection whatsoever with the regents' university request to the legislature, Morrill asserted.

Applications for very high frequency channels 2 and 8, which have been set aside in Minnesota for educational TV, must be made to the FCC before next June, Morrill pointed out. They should not be claimed unless funds for the project are expected from this legislature, he said.

Under the proposed plan, as explained by Morrill, the key station in the Twin Cities could be built for $1,150,757, including a new building for studio facilities, as a starter, and the satellite stations could come later. Operating costs for the key station are set at $252,340 a year, according to the university president.



There's no groping when you buy national TV coverage on a Spot basis: Full choice of markets and time offerings . . . no minimum group requirements . . . wholehearted station cooperation . . . better picture quality than kinescopes . . . savings in time charges—enough to cover film prints, their distribution and other costs.

5-Min. Radio Strips to Ease Pinch Of TV Expenditures Seen Paying Off

Format of using radio in five-minute strips to complement TV expenditures is paying off for clients of Calkins & Holden, Carlock, McClinton & Smith.

Harold L. (Hay) McClinton, prez of the agency, told VARIETY last week that the five-minute pattern clicks because it's "in between national network and spot broadcasting." Until a couple of years ago, webs frowned on capsule shows because they figured they'd be stuck with the remaining 10 or 25 minutes. Today, however, the picture is different.

C&HCM&S recommended that Prudential Life, which backed Jack Berch in a quarter-hour stanza, trim it down to five minutes at 12:10 p.m. on ABC; and that Stokely-Van Camp's John Conte, who had been on three quarter-hours weekly on NBC-TV, get an 8:55 a.m. berth on ABC radio. Other Stokely coin went into a 15-minute participation in CBS-TV's Garry Moore show.

Using a five-minuter instead of a quarter-hour, in the case of Prudential, cut the AM expenditure by 50%, thus allowing Prudential to put more coin in "Your Show of Shows" on NBC-TV (where it is backing a half-hour segment on 16 dates). The five-minute format permits more commercial time, proportionately, than the 15-minute format. Cost-per-thousand is cut appreciably. Furthermore, the frequency of the message is increased.

Although a sponsor may lose some identification by buying a participating program such as Garry Moore or "Show of Shows," rather than backing his own stanza, McClinton feels that he is "buying circulation just like you buy a page in Life or the N. Y. Times." A key problem in building a series specifically for a spender is station clearances. "Even if we came up with another 'I Love Lucy,' we'd have trouble getting outlets," the agency topper said. "But with an established show the circulation is there."

Neil Hathaway, account exec, added that Prudential plugs should attract notice in the "Show of Shows" layout because it is the only firm of its type on the series. First three commercials were live, but remainder will be on film. Pix were pre-tested by Horace M. Schwerin.

Teleprompter Sets RCA Subsid Deal For Public Speaking

Teleprompter Corp., manufacturers of the cueing device widely used in TV shows, set a deal with the RCA Service Co. this week under which the prompter will be made available to public speakers throughout the country. Under terms of the pact, which can gross Teleprompter up to $1.000.000 in rental billings for the first year, the RCA subsidiary will serve as a rental and servicing agency for the prompting equipment, which is expected to be used at conventions, industrial sales meetings, merchandising presentations and other such gatherings.

RCA Service organization presently has a group of trained engineers operating out of key cities across the country, who service theatre equipment and other RCA products. Working with Teleprompter, they'll provide as many of the prompting units as are required by each speaker so that he can move about the podium, referring to charts and other displays without losing sight of his text. When more than one of the units is used, they are electronically synchronized to operate in unison at whatever speed the speaker desires.

Deal was set by E. C. Cahill, prez of RCA Service, and Irving B. Cahn, Teleprompter exec veepee. E. C. Buurma, assistant to Cahill, will serve as general sales chief for the Teleprompter service.

JAZZ AT THE PHILHARMONIC
With Norm Bobrow
40 Mins.; 11:20 p.m., Mon.-thru-Sat.
MERCURY RECORDS
KOMO, Seattle

This newest of late-night record programs in Seattle features more talk than most such current programs, but it is good talk, clever and informative.

Norm Bobrow, quondam jazz concert impresario, knows his bands, leaders and sidemen and weaves information and anecdote into a narrative pattern that showcases the records played.

In addition, use of Mercury Records exclusively calls attention to many bands and tunes that are not featured in the usual hit parade and request-type programs.

On night caught Bobrow featured two versions of "Carioca," by Tico O'Farrell orch and Buddy De Franco Trio; two renditions of "Just One of Those Things—Oscar Peterson and Trio, and Buddy De Franco Trio; along with "Deed I Do" by Lester Young and "Spring Is" and "Somewhere, Someday" by Ralph Burns.

It's a smart show and should build a good audience on the powerful NBC outlet here. Reed.

Transcription Review

VOICE OF ISRAEL
With Bill Meyers, narrator
Director-writer: Mendel Kohansky
15 Mins.

The National Committee for Labor Israel has put together a transcribed series of 13 quarter-hour stanzas which it currently is peddling around the country. Through narration and on-the-spot tapings, the series presents a vivid account of Israel's people and the problems confronting them in the development of the new country. It will, however, attract only those who have an emotional or educational interest in Israel. It's rewarding listening for this group.

Although series is limited to the living drama of only one country its scope is broad, encompassing peoples from all over the world who have come to build the new country. The melting pot quality of the country is expertly projected in the series' initial stanza tagged "Jerusalem." Tapings of Israelites who had come from such far apart countries as Persia and Yugoslavia spotlighted the varied nationalities involved in the building of this new country. The tapings of the sounds of the city were interspersed throughout and added dramatic intensity to the session.

Mendel Kohansky's direction keeps narration (which he penned) and tapings well intergrated. Bill Meyers handles the narration expertly. Gros.

television and radio time for their ticket. "Now," says one Republican, "they are griping about what we might do with the time they left over."

In his wire to George W. Ball, executive director of the National Volunteers for Stevenson, Chairman Walker said:

"The Commission has no specific information on the existence of the plan to which you refer . . . In the absence of such information, including the names of any stations which may be involved, and what steps, if any, have been taken on behalf of your candidate to secure a share of such time as may become available, we can make no determination as to whether any violation of Sec. 315 of the Communications Act will occur.

"That section generally requires that a broadcast licensee afford equal opportunities to legally qualified candidates. We will consider any specific information you are able to supply with respect to Communications Act requirements, but suggest that Corrupt Practices Act matters would more appropriately be pursued with the Department of Justice."

UN Camera Fuss Hits NBC Vidcast

United Nations and NABET remained locked in a stalemate yesterday (Tues.) over NBC-TV's projected coverage of the UN General Assembly sessions in N. Y. If no settlement of the dispute is reached it's believed probable that NBC will be unable during the current UN sessions to televise the proceedings.

Deadlock arose when NABET, which has a contract with NBC, insisted that the network install a camera of its own in the UN building, to join the three UN cameras, which are operated by members of IBEW, a rival union. UN, however, told the NABET committee and NBC that there is no room for a fourth camera. NABET at that point refused to permit the telecast of the opening day's session yesterday and NBC, caught between the two unions in what is actually a jurisdictional strife, is now trying to work out a compromise.

Afternoon sessions of the UN are being covered by CBS-TV. Since that web has a contract with IBEW, no such problem arose. NABET-IBEW battle did, however, cancel the scheduled "United or Not" show on ABC-TV Monday night (13), which spotlighted UN Secretary General Trygve Lie being interviewed by a panel of UN correspondents. Show was kinescoped off the IBEW-UN cameras for a delayed broadcast, but NABET, which also has a contract with ABC, refused to allow the show to take the air.

Too Much Comm'l Copy Masquerades as News, Broadcasters Warned

Ashland, Ky., Oct. 14.

Radio stations are losing "millions of dollars annually" by broadcasting publicity handouts from firms and trade associations which don't buy radio time, John F. Hardesty, director of local promotion for Broadcast Advertising Bureau told the Kentucky Broadcasters Assn. yesterday (Mon.). He said commercial copy is "masquerading" as news.

Hardesty said only cure is for station management to "personally police all incoming items of questionable news value for air use" and called for the wholehearted co-operation of staffers on news, sports, farm, women's and disk jockey shows. He cited examples of "free time grabs" by a chemical corporation, a petroleum association, a gasoline manufacturer, a cable corporation, a meat industry group, various fruit associations, many railroads and "a plethora of public utilities which buy newspaper space to promote the same products or services featured in publicity handouts to radio stations.

BAB exec said the "most deadly weapons of the free-time boys" are transcribed announcements and five-minute interviews. He also suggested that station managers check over organization in which they are members to make certain "your membership dues aren't helping to fatten up some newspapers' ad revenue kitty when that organization undertakes an advertising campaign of its own."

Merrill Sworn As FCC Commissioner

Washington, Oct. 14.

Eugene F. Merrill, new FCC commissioner, took the oath of office this afternoon (14). He was appointed last week by President Truman to fill the unexpired portion of the term of Robert F. Jones, who resigned to go into law practice here.

Merrill, a Utah Democrat, was director of the Materials Branch, Office of Program and Requirements of Defense Production Administration when President Truman announced his appointment while campaigning in Utah. Since Jones had been a Republican, the makeup of the commission is now four Democrats, two Republicans and one Independent.

Merrill continues until Congress reconvenes next January. Then, the next president may send his nomination to the Senate for confirmation or nominate someone else for Senate consideration.

Albany, Oct. 14.

Michael R. Hanna, general manager of WHCU, Ithaca, is one of seven public members appointed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to a temporary state commission authorized by the Legislature last spring to study the feasibility of a noncommercial television network for educational purposes. Bernard Duffy, of Rye, is another of the public members. Douglas M. Moffat, New York City attorney, was named chairman of the Commission, which will submit a report to the Legislature by Feb. 15, 1953.

Young B. Smith, dean of the Columbia U. Law School, is vice-chairman. Other public members are Prof. Paul J. Lazarsfeld, Columbia; Clarence U. Carruth, Jr., Scarsdale; Mrs. James W. Kideney, Buffalo.

Additional members, under the authorizing resolution, are the lieutenant governor, Senate minority leader, Speaker and minority leader of the Assembly, a member of the Board of Regents, a member of the board of trustees of the state university, the director of the budget and commissioner of commerce.

The Commissioner will work with an appropriation of $25,000.

Board of Regents, who proposed an 11-station web covering 94% of the state's population has been authorized by the FCC to build TV outlets in Binghamton, New York, Albany, Buffalo and Rochester. Before it can proceed, the Legislature must appropriate the necessary construction money — estimated at $3,400,000. The Commission will guide the lawmakers in their decision on this matter.

N.Y. Coke Dealers In TV Program Shuffle

In a reshuffling of its TV programming expenditures, the Local Coca-Cola Dealers Assn. of N. Y. has checked off both the "Rootie Kazootie" show on NBC's WNBT and Sheriff Bob Dixon's "Double C Canteen" on DuMont's WABD. In place of these, the Coke dealers have bought a new package, titled "Sense and Nonsense," which moves into the 6 to 6:15 p.m. strip on WNBT, vice "Kazootie."

"Sense" takes over Nov. 24. "Canteen" is also a cross-the-board production, airing in the 6:30 to 7 p.m. strip on WABD. Agency for the Coke dealers is William Esty.

St. Louis—The second plea of WTMV, East St. Louis, for a change in its wavelength and increase in power was nixed last week when FCC refused, temporarily, the application. The station, the only one in the town, asked to change from 1490 to 1260 kc. and an increase in power from 250 watts to 1 kw.

reason is working more closely with them to establish a uniform pattern of patter for the network's stable.

Skein exec says ABC has a solid nucleus in Milton Cross, George Ansbro, Gordon Fraser and Don Gardner, among others. He feels the return to the more cultured kind of diction and a mature, responsible approach will be welcomed by the announcing fraternity.

Godfrey, who led the revolt against the stilted Oxford-type spieler, has frequently stated that listeners feel such formality is cold and condescending. Diaz answers, "There's only one Godfrey. Fifteen men all trying to be individuals merely produce a pot-pourri of patter."

Falstaff's Mutual Show

Falstaff beer has bought "Hank Thompson and his Brazos Valley Boys" on Mutual for 10:15-10:30 p.m., Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. Program, featuring western music, will kick off Nov. 6. Network will be limited to areas in which Falstaff has distribution.

Agency is Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample.

UAW's Election Series

United Automobile Workers (CIO) has bought two series as pre-election stumping to get across "labor's views." Three half-hours will be aired on successive Sundays at 5:30 p.m., starting Sunday (19), via CBS-TV in the east and midwest and via ABC-TV on the Coast. Initialer will feature UAW prexy Walter Reuther being interviewed by a group of selected reporters.

Radio buy consists of two half-hours on Thursdays, Oct. 23 and 30, at 8:30 p.m. over CBS Radio. Program is tagged "Labor's Views on Key Issues."

Crum's 'Inside Israel' Set for WABD Preem

"Inside Israel," weekly tele series of news and features on Israel, will be launched by Bartley Crum, author-attorney, on WABD, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 19, at 1:30 p.m.

Airer is a tele version of show heard on WMCA, N. Y. It will be sponsored by the four scrip certificate companies approved by the Israel government. It will be produced by Sam Elfert, AM-TV director of the Israel Office of Information. Just returned from a three-month stay in Israel, where he set the filming deals, Elfert has developed a network of 70 stations in U. S. and Canada for the weekly transcribed show, "Vistas of Israel."

WCCO's Banquet for 600 Biggies, Party for Hoi Polloi as Election Stunt

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

As a unique feature of what it aims to be the most comprehensive election coverage in Northwest's political history, radio and TV WCCO (CBS) will stage an election banquet for 600 community leaders and an election party for the entire citizenry in the Hotel Nicollet grand ballroom on election night.

Announced as the first bigscale simulcast ever to be staged in the Twin Cities and designated as "Operation Combo," the promotion teams up both TV and radio, using the combined staffs to send out the returns, analyses and experting over the air from special headquarters to be set up in the hotel ballroom.

The banquet tables, where the station's guests will be seated, will spread around the WCCO radio and TV news headquarters. National and regional returns will flow into this model newsroom via telephone and teletype. The simultaneous broadcasts originating there will begin even before the guests have finished their repasts and will be heard by them.

After the tables have been cleared away, the doors will be thrown open to the public, with anyone interested in watching the special election coverage machinery in operation welcome to attend.

A crew of 70 newsmen, broadcasters, researchers, tabulators and technicians from WCCO radio and TV will handle the nightlong operation. A battery of teletypes, expected to be the most impressive lineup of wire services in Northwest radio and TV history, will channel national, regional, state and Twin Cities election returns into the Hotel Nicollet center, it's announced. In addition, WCCO will draw Twin Cities area returns by telephone from the election pools which will operate in the Minneapolis and St. Paul newspaper offices, it's announced.

During the course of the night, celebrities in the ballroom and other political personalities in the crowd will be interviewed for radio and TV audiences. In addition, WCCO's radio mobile unit will cruise the Twin Cities, from one campaign headquarters to another, picking up interviews with winning and losing candidates. These will be beamed by shortwave to the election news center and relayed to listeners and viewers.

NEW "FRONT PORCH" OF THE NATION

Television has brought campaigning a long way from 1920, when candidates campaigned from the front porch of their homes. Today, presidential candidates simply step before the television cameras and are seen and heard by many millions of people.

The first intercity network television broadcast using today's methods took place between New York and Philadelphia, only seven years ago. In the relatively short period since then, the Bell System has expanded its television network from coast to coast...so that 99% of the country's television sets can receive the same program at the same time.

Such development, at such a pace, requires great investments of effort, ingenuity and money. Radio-relay and coaxial cable routes have to be built. Special equipment has to be designed, and special personnel trained to install, maintain and operate it.

Yet the cost of the service is low. Bell System charges, for use of its intercity network facilities, average about 10 cents a mile for a half hour.

Name Churchill Advisor As New BBC Topper

London, Oct. 14.

Sir Ian Jacob, a close advisor to Prime Minister Churchill in the last war, has been named director general of the British Broadcasting Corp., succeeding Sir William Hale, now editor of the London Times. Jacob formerly was in the BBC overseas service. For the past seven months, he has been acting as chief staff officer to the Minister of Defense and deputy secretary of the cabinet for the military, holding the rank of lieutenant-general.

Sir Ian takes his new post Dec. 1. In his new assignment, he will be executive head of all radio and TV in Great Britain.

year. Ford may also sponsor "Peepers" on NBC radio.

Dodge, it's known, is looking for a suitable property for TV sponsorship.

Chevrolet's bankrolling of the Dinah Shore show; Plymouth-DeSoto's pickup of the radio-TV Groucho Marx quizzer, and Lincoln-Mercury's "Toast of the Town" are now solidly entrenched on the TV networks.

Dodge's Sports Buy

Dodge Motors, while still on the prowl for a network television show, is bowing into video this season as bankroller of the five-minute sports section of "6 O'Clock Report," aired cross-the-board on WCBS-TV, flagship station of the CBS-TV net in N. Y. Auto firm is also buying several spots weekly in the station's "Early Show," all to be used to spotlight its '53 models.

Dodge will bankroll the evening show on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, starting Monday (20). Sports segment of the show is narrated by Jim McKay.

hour was 28% higher than the AA figure.

Nielsen is featuring the six-minute data in TV, not to "inflate" the figures, but to get a more comparable measurement with AM. Since 1949 he has been using the six-minute yardstick in radio. He provided six-minute figures in tele to subscribers but did not include them in his pocket piece because it involves more complex statistical computation.

Research experts at the webs favor the move, feeling that it reflects a more complete picture of the audience. Most people who tune in for six minutes stay with most of the program and catch one or more commercials. They add that the printed media count a person as a reader, even if he just looks at the front page of the newspaper or reads one story in a magazine.

and toothpaste brands so inundate the commercial channels that the viewer can no longer remember the product. The AFRA card-holding "medicos" make practically the same claims, with but few variations. They all sound alike. The Gallup-inspired tests show that virtually all persons tested were in a complete state of confusion and bafflement when it came to remembering the sponsor.

Whether it's a live, film or cartoon commercial, the "retention test" bears out, above all else, that the medium, from the standpoint of plug techniques, has been standing still—that there is a desperate need for advanced and improved methods of selling products to the viewer-consumer. Chiefly, the need is cited for a "positive identification"—a distinctive trademark, symbol (like the Cadillac V) or an originality that will eliminate confusion and make the product stand out.

on-current-affairs aides in Miami Daily News columnist Bill Baggs and University of Miami prof. Dr. Don Lawson. Guests were National Demo committeeman Richard Barker and State Demo Finance director Al McFayden. Barker, recently repudiated by the National Committee after publicly stating that he could not go along with Stevenson's views on FEPC and other issues was the pinpoint around which the questioning and exchanges with McFayden revolved. All of it served to highlight the disturbed state of affairs in Florida Democratic party ranks, with Sen. George Smathers leader of those cool toward the party nominee. Both Baggs and Dr. Larson needed few questions, but the few posed led to fireworks between the guests, with excellent viewer appeal resulting.

Half-hour moved quickly, and the cracker-barrel atmosphere obtained added to aud attention. Questioners and guests face each other via a wide V table setup with Renick centered, to allow for easy camera followup. Lensing was topnotch. Blurbs for the sponsor were handled in dignified manner and kept to minimum for maximum effect. Lary.

(Marschalk & Pratt)

"Your Esso Reporter," a 52-week fixture in the 7 p.m. slot at WPIX, N. Y., continues to be a fresh roundup of hot news around the world. With Kevin Kennedy handling the commentary, the 15-minute airer relies extensively upon visual coverage such as film clips and stills.

On Monday's (13) edition, for example, films of Andrei Vinshinsky's arrival on the Queen Elizabeth were screened along with clips on the Korean War, the Columbus Day parade, etc. Emphasis upon the visual obviously permits the viewer's eye more freedom and gives the illusion that Kennedy isn't confined to his script.

"Your Esso Reporter," incidentally, is the TV equivalent of the Esso news show which was beamed on radio for years. WPIX edition is the New York production of an Esso TV "chain" which includes eight key cities on the eastern seaboard. All reportedly follow a strict news desk format. Sole plug on Monday's session was an institutional film insert on how an Esso refinery breaks down crude oil into marketable products. Gilb.

(Stiller-Rouse)

Jerry Fielding, better known as the conductor-arranger for the Groucho Marx show, debuts with his own program, a half-hour musical, and presents a well-balanced, professionally constructed format, moving along at a fast clip, punctuated by top vocalizing and terping. Only place the Ace Ochs production sags is in the patter department, with comedian Bob Sweeney's material just fair.

Fielding, who looks like a hungry Sinatra, penned some highly striking and original arrangements of "Peanut Vendor," and "Arkansas Traveler," which his crew socks across. Completing the roster in excellent fashion are singers Tony Fontane, Ruth Oley and the Morgan sisters, and terper Sondar Orans, the latter outstanding in a dance specialty.

Writing of David Greggory is just passable, filler for a show where the accent's on music. Allan Buckhantz' direction has a sharp tempo, halted only by Sweeney's interludes. Ace Ochs has turned in a fine production job, with three cameras hitting some fancy angles. Del Sharbutt's blurbs for Aldon Homes are smoothly delivered. Daku.

Radio Newscasters Prexy Assails Celler's Stand on Congress TV Nix

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

A statement by Rep. Emanuel Celler in a talk before the Federal Bar Assn. in Washington that he "would shudder to think what would happen if the Senate and House proceedings were televised" has brought a hot retort from Jim Bormann, president of the radio newscasters' association, who asks him to "reconsider" his views.

"I want to take this opportunity to inquire whether you would shudder as violently if a dictator were to deprive the American people of their right to know what their government is doing," Bormann wrote Celler. "In other words, I'd like to know if you are in favor of suppressing the news a little and would you strongly oppost going all the way.

"The cause for your shudders, judging from the newspaper coverage of your speech, is the belief that "some Congressmen" would become ham actors, thereby endangering witnesses' rights in televised proceedings. If this correctly represents the basis for your objections to full coverage of the news, and if you regard it as an adequate reason for denying full access to the television medium, then the remedy would seem to lie clearly in a different field. Would it not be the more direct and effective method to restrain the offending Congressmen, and to legislate against the week procedures which fail to defend the witness' rights, rather than to invade the right of freedom of information which is the people's right and not that of television alone?

"You also have been quoted as indicating that you regard television as an 'entertainment industry.' I believe you will find many educators in America who feel strongly that television is vastly more than that. The FCC, for instance, believes so strongly that television can be a great force for improving our way of life on the educational level that it is reserving many channels for educational use and encouraging institutions to make use of these channels.

"The fact is that television, like radio and the press, is extremely effective in the field of communicating information as well as entertainment, and arbitrary attempts by people in government to curtail this vital function necessarily represent invasions of the people's right to know."

Radio Station WOV
announces a vastly expanded service to the New York Italian community

TO more than two million Americans of Italian origin in the New York area, WOV has, for twenty-two years, been the radio voice they have always felt was pre-eminently theirs. Since the war, WOV has also been an intimate link between this vast audience and their relatives and acquaintances in Italy — America's best friends in Europe. Every rating, every study ever made, has placed WOV far and away first among media in its impact on the largest Italian-speaking community in the entire world.

Now, from 9:30 A.M. to 8:00 in the evening, WOV is the only radio station serving New York's great Italian audience. This unique dominance of the largest single economic grouping in the New York area goes hand in hand with a deep sense of responsibility to this audience, expressed in program service of the highest quality known in the field of specialized broadcasting. Now this is further enhanced through the cooperative sharing of news-gathering and promotional facilities between WOV and Il Progresso Italo-Americano, largest Italian-language daily newspaper in the United States.

Both in New York and in Italy, where WOV operates studios and mobile recording units, and where Il Progresso maintains a Rome bureau, WOV and Il Progresso will collaborate in the interests of comprehensive news coverage and enlarged public service. Reports from WOV's short-wave listening post will be shared. A powerful program of mutual exploitation between Il Progresso and WOV is already under way.

What's the importance for you?

This: There are far more Italians in the WOV market than there are in Rome itself. Overwhelmingly, they listen to WOV. Today they have more money to spend than ever before in history. And now WOV is a more powerful instrument than ever before to influence their buying in your direction.

WOV's exclusive and vastly expanded broadcasting service to the largest, most loyal, and most responsive audience in two decades of WOV Italian-language operation means sales — for you.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Les Paul-Mary Ford: "Lady of Spain"-"My Baby's Coming Home" (Capitol). "Lady of Spain," which has been kicked off on a revival by Eddie Fisher's slice for RCA Victor, gets another strong lift via this Les Paul instrumental. Once again, Paul blends his guitar dexterity and electronic wizardry for a richly textured side that's slated for plenty of jock and juke spins. On the flip, Mary Ford registers on a simple melody which could catch on solidly.

Toni Arden: "Take a Chance"-"Sweet Forgiveness" (Columbia). "Take a Chance," another adaptation in the "Kiss of Fire" groove, gets powerful projection by Toni Arden and the Percy Faith orch. Tune has an excellent lyric and a pounding beat which should make a dent. "Sweet Forgiveness" is a slow-tempoed ballad with a difficult melodic line which limits its chances to the better vocalists.

Billy Williams Quartet: "Mad About 'Cha"-"I Don't Know Why, I Just Do" (Mercury). "Mad" is one of those offbeat wax attempts that's bound to create some noise. This is a frenzied, more than slightly noisy number which gets an uninhibited workover by the Billy Williams combo. It could be another freak hit, like "Mule Train." Flip is a change-of-pace, quiet rendition of the fine oldie, Charles Sanford orch backing up nicely.

Roger Coleman: "Give Me the Right"-"Everything I Have Is Yours" (Decca). Roger Coleman, who's been around for some time as a freelance radio-TV and band vocalist, gets his first promising wax showcasing on these Decca sides. Coleman is a big-voiced stylist with enough layers of schmaltz to pass as a good commercial bet. "Right" is an appropriately large ballad which Coleman belts across in approved style. This has definite potential. On the flip, Coleman gives another all-out rendition of the standard. Norman Leyden orch backs up richly.

Josef Marais - Miranda - Mitch Miller: "Johnnie Goggabie"-"The Zulu Warrior" (Columbia). The Marais-Miranda tram, which has been specializing on South African veldt tunes to a relativey narrow audience, now gets a wider pop audience with these delightful sides. It's another example of Mitch Miller's imaginative handling of fresh material. "Johnnie Goggabie" tells a cute story while "Zulu Warrior" is an interesting blending of choral and instrumental effects in a primitive tribal chant dressed up for pop consumption. Both sides could step out.

Bing Crosby-Andrews Sisters: "South Rampart Street Parade"-"Cool Water" is a western-styled by and the Andrews Sisters team up on a snappy slice of a Dixieland number which should get juke spins. It's a mid-hit possibility. "Cool Water' 'is a western-styled number with a dramatic lyric handled in okay style by Crosby with the Andrews Sisters supplying background vocal effects. It's in the "Riders In the Sky" tradition but lacks the overall sock.

Gogi Grant: "Forget Me Not"-"Where There's Smoke There's Fire" (Victor). Gogi Grant, one of Victor's newest talent additions, is a promising femme vocalist. Miss Grant has a wide range with a good commercial style. "Forget Me Not" is an attractive ballad which will rate spins on a broad level. Flip is another good ballad which showcases Miss Grant's ability with a torch item.

Don Cornell: "Be Fair"-"I" (Decca). Ever since clicking with "I Walk Alone," Don Cornell has been pitching with the exaggerated stylistic attack that originally paid off. Its a mannerism that can grow a bit tedious. Cornell lets all the stops out on "Be Fair," a big ballad with a conventional lyric. "I" is a good takeoff on a classic melody and Cornell once again belts it with the same self-conscious striving for unique stylistic impact.

The Weavers: "Clementine"-"True Love" (Decca). "Clementine" is one of those community-sing folk tunes which could catch on big in the pop field via this etching by The Weavers. It's a good straight cut of the familiar number. "True Love" is a less familiar but more likely tune for jock and juke spins. The Weavers give it one of their typicial bright workovers.

Danny Sutton: "Midnight In Paris"-"I Promise You" (King). Sutton is a fine legitimate baritone who has good material in "Midnight in Paris." It's a flashy piece of material with a good lilt. Sutton and the Dewey Bergman orch team for a colorful etching. Reverse is a fair ballad.

Platter Pointers

Harry James has a firstrate instrumental in "Lovelight," and teams with Toni Harper on an okay rhythm item, "Fruit Cake" (Columbia) . . . also in the instrumental vein, Stan Kenton's orch scores on "Tabu" (Capitol) . . . with "Blues in the Night" getting a current revival, Decca has reissued the original two-sided Jimmy Lunceford slice which should be a click all over again . . . Ray Anthony's orch hits a nice pace on "Blow, Man, Blow," Tommy Mercer vocalling (Capitol) . . . Lester Young's tenor sax is in top form on the Mercury disk of "Up 'N Adam" . . . On the same label and in the same progressive jazz kick, Charlie Ventura orch digs hep sounds on "Avalon" . . . Lucky Millinder has a cute side in "Please Be Careful" (King) . . . Jack Richards and the Nightwinds vocal combo whip up an arresting side on "Northwind" for Coral . . . Gerry Mulligan Quartet projects some interesting jazz effects on "Lullaby of the Leaves" (Pacific).

Longhair Disk Review

Beethoven: Concerto No. 5 in E Flat ("Emperor"). Vladimir Horowitz, pianist; Fritz Reiner conducting RCA Victor Symphony Orchestra. (RCA Victor, LP, $5.45). This is a standout recording of Beethoven's most popular piano concerto, a powerful dramatic utterance as well as a fine display piece. Vladimir Horowitz shows off his technical brilliance with spirited playing, while keeping the piano well integrated with the orchestra under Fritz Reiner's expert baton, for excellent balance between soloist and group. Horowitz's singular clarity and beauty of tone are especially disclosed in the poetic slow movement. Overall result is a definitive disking, technically as well as artistically.

Berlioz: Harold In Italy. William Primrose, viola; Sir Thomas Beecham conducting Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (Columbia, LP, $5.45). Berlioz's lush symphonic poem (it's really a symphony with viola obligato, instead of a viola concerto) gets superior treatment here, in a dashing recording of a highly dramatic work. Rich, creamy tone of Primrose's solo viola stands out on its own, even though constantly interwoven with orchestra as added instrument. Wealth of orchestral harmonies throughout the work is authoritatively presented under Sir Thomas Beecham's baton, while Primrose's playing is a gem.

Band Reviews

LOU HARRIS ORCH (5)
Empress Club, London

Since shuttering of the Crystal Room (now used only for private functions), the Persian Room is the sole eatery in this Berkeley Square club. This is a supper room, without dancing or cabaret, and entertainment is provided entirely by a small orch led by Lou Harris. It's a compact five-piece unit, comprising a couple of fiddles (one of which is played by the maestro), an accordion, Russian guitar, piano and double bass.

Specialty of the combo is its wide repertoire of Continental melodies, and customer requests are usually confined to tunes of this calibre. Pops are not ruled out, being played often to balance the program.

Main function of the aggregation is to provide restrained background music for the diners; it's done skillfully and unobtrusively. Harris is not only an expert on the violin but a personable young man with savvy. He moves around the tables, occasionally serenading the customers in the classic European tradition, and is always in full command of his team. The combo is a fave with the regular clientele and also has large following among the regular commuters from the States.

BILL BARDO ORCH (4)
Hotel President, Kansas City

Leader of a bigger band for several years, Bill Bardo has lately eschewed the smaller combo and has had a comparable success in that field. Current stand here is second in about a year, and outfit is doing business for the plush Drum Room.

Lineup of leader's violin, trumpet, drums and piano is well tailored for the room, furnishing a variety of rhythms and music geared to both listening and dancing. Arrangements feature Bardo on the strings or Dick Shelby on trumpet, and both take a turn at warbling, Bardo doing the tenor ranges and Shelby the baritone ballads. Now and then they double up for a duet.

Bardo adds an extra fillip with a passel of gypsy music and continental stylings, but crew as well can furnish the standards, latins and Dixieland. Versatility draws the maximum in music from the foursome, showing it an able group all the way around. Lineup includes Bill Lang on drums and Johnny Baker at piano, later doing his bit with frequent solo interludes to point up the tempos.

Room continues its policy of continuous music through this month with Kay Kenna at the keyboard between combo sets, and the evening.

HARRY JAMES ORCH (16)
With Patti O'Connor, Gordon Polk
Rustic Cabin, Englewood, N. J.

Confining himself to the Coast and west-of-the-Mississippi states since a stand at the Hotel Astor Roof, N. Y., two years ago, Harry James is giving the east another whirl via a six-week string of one-nighters that winds up in Kansas City Nov. 15. That there may be something to the axiom—"absence makes the heart grow fonder"—is attested to by the stout business he drew at a three-day booking ending Sunday (5) at Bill Levine's Rustic Cabin, Englewood Cliffs, N. J.

Friday's (3) preem saw about 600 customers on hand at $3.50 per person minimum and the following night reportedly resulted in turnaway trade despite a capacity that's slightly over 1,000. Question is what got the public to drive out to this roadside spot near the George Washington Bridge. Was it the magic of the James name? Yet he's had nothing of hit proportions on the Columbia label, has made no pictures for several years and stirred few ripples publicitywise.

For the current tour which began at the St. Albans, N. Y., Naval Hospital Thursday (3), James is using a combo comprising four rhythm, seven brass and five reed. Denying trade reports his is a "pick-up" outfit, James says his boys are veterans who have played with him for years.

At any rate, the band handles its arrangements with precision and a good commercial beat. Accent is on the brass section, but the overall result is never discordant and adds up to listenable and danceable music. James, of course, frequently displays his own personal musicianship via "You Made Me Love You" and similar exercises for the trumpet.

James' fronting is another matter. On the night caught he had little to say from the rostrum and had a general air of "we're stuck here for the weekend and may as well make the best of it." His attitude was a decided contrast to that of the customers. A responsive group, they often massed around the stand merely to listen.

Rounding out the vocal portion of the James aggregation are brunette Patti O'Connor and Gordon Polk. The former starts out with only a fair delivery but when warmed up she can dish out "Lullaby of Broadway" and other pops with the best of 'em. Crew-cut Polk is a live-wire singer with a flair for showmanship. His novelty numbers score solidly.

Gilb.

WILD BILL DAVISON ORCH (6)
Savoy, Boston

Wild Bill Davison, making his first Hub appearance in several years, has surrounded himself with some slick jazz tooters and group, sparked by maestro's brand of corneting, turning out a brand of jazz that's keeping the turnstiles clicking at this popular dixieland rendezvous. Combo, consisting of Joe Barry, clarinet; Eph Resnick, trombone; Dean Dewberry, piano; Charlie Traeger, bass; and Eddie Phyfe, drums, fits into the groove set by uninhibited cornet of Davison with overall results stylish and exciting.

In addition to contributing the solid ensemble work required in Dixieland, each sideman is a top soloist with Davison straying from usual format (once a night) to spotlight each individual's style. Stint usually includes a tasty "Tenderly" by pianist Dewberry, some fancy sliphorning of "Love for Sale" by Resnick, a slick "World is Waiting for Sunrise" by clarinetist Barry, a frantic "Crazy Rhythm" by skinbeater Phyfe, nifty "C Jam Blues" plunked by bassist Traeger winding with neat melodic treatment of "When Your Lover has Gone" by Davison.

For the most part however, Davison sticks to standard Dixieland fare which the clientele expects and insists upon, any deviation from "High Society," "Eccentric," "Saints Go Marching In" and other well-knowns, apt to result in raised eyebrows by the jazz fans. Bypassing between-number chatter, Davison lets the music speak for itself and judging from the boff biz during his stint here, it has plenty to say.

BAND BIZ IS BIG BUSINESS

Cuffo Releases By Diskeries Burn Pubs Who Are Cut Out of Royalty Coin

Latest rift seen developing between publishers and some record companies over royalty statements is a direct outgrowth of the diskeries' special merchandising plan, which has been in force for the past couple of months. According to several pubs the merchandising plans, in which the disk companies are offering one cuffo platter for every two or more purchased, have been cutting into their royalties when one of their songs is on the giveaway platter.

The pubs pact with the diskers calls for royalty coin to be paid only on platters which are sold. If diskery chooses to cuffo platters in an effort to hypo sales, pubs are in no legal position to collect since they're not being paid on the number of records manufactured. Several pubs have attempted to swing deals with the companies to exclude their platters from the cuffo listing and in some instances the companies have been playing ball.

Strongest pub opposition to the cuffo platter plan has been coming from firms with hit tunes in the diskeries' lineup. These pubs are squawking that the companies have been jockeying the books so that hot platters, which are being sold, show up in the cuffo bracket.

MPCE Proposes Several Amendments to Charter At 'No-Quorum' Session

Several amendments to the Music Publishers Contact Employees' constitution were proposed at the pluggers' union meet last week despite opposition from some members that the meeting itself was in variance with the MPCE constitution. According to the opposition, MPCE constitution states that no official business can be conducted without the presence of at least 35 union members. Although last week's meet was short about 15 pluggers, constitutional amendments, which will be voted on at a later date, were put up for appraisal.

Proposed amendments include raising number of MPCE exec board from six to 10 members and allowing for a constitutional amendment to be submitted at any meeting during the year instead of the once-a-year special constitutional conclave now allowed for. Another amendment being drafted, although still in an incomplete form, is the fining of members who fail to show up at three consecutive union meets. Amount of fine has yet to be designated. Rider to latter amendment includes depriving member of all union benefits in event fine is not paid.

Col Bankrolls Deejay St. L. KMOX All-Niter

St. Louis, Oct. 14.

In a unique promotional venture for the midwest area, Columbia Records is bankrolling an all-night, across-the-board disk jockey program on KMOX, St. Louis, with a heavy accent on classical music. Jim Butler is jockeying the five-hour nightly session on the CBS affiliate and will spot some pop and folk material among the predominantly longhair selections. Program started last night (Mon.).

Columbia Records is picking up the tab for the show. The local distributor and retailers, however, will be able to come in on the show with special promotional deals.

Harpist Double-Stint

Harpist Suzanne Johnstone, daughter of G. W. (Johnny) Johnstone, radio-TV chief of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, has signed with the Erie (Pa.) Philharmonic for the 1952-53 season.

She'll double five nights a week at Angelotti's, Erie eatery.

From Taylor to Jordann To Decca by Way of Col

Blackie Jordann ankled Columbia Records last week to record for Decca. Singer, who had been with Col for two years, was known as Burt Taylor until a month ago when Col execs decided to change his monicker. He'll hang on to the Jordann tag for his Decca assignments.

Jordann will be co-billed with Gordon Jenkins on his initial Decca platter which will hit the market early in November.

Petrillo Nixes AFM Fight Vs. O'seas Air Cues

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Resolution by Musicians Local 47 at last summer's AFM convention asking Congress ban imports of themes, bridges, etc., and referred to prexy James C. Petrillo, was answered last week by the union chief who notified local execs he felt the move "highly desirable," but that this was not the time to present it.

Petrillo said it had always been difficult to get legislation against radio stations, saying many Congressmen own ozoners. He said the tariff commission held hearings last year on impost on such imports and considered lifting it in order to further better understanding countries, but AFM intervention stopped this.

Petrillo added many thousands of feet of such recordings are available in this country, and he didn't feel an import ban would solve the problem. Union execs are beefing over the canned music on grounds it creates unemployment for tunesters.

IKE'S THEME GIVES ROBBINS QUICK HIT

Jack Robbins, head of J. J. Robbins & Sons, has been given a ready-made hit by the Republican National Committee. The GOP has bought 100,000 copies of the Robbins tune, "Look Ahead, Neighbor," based on a phrase used by Republican presidential candidate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a campaign theme. Tune was written by Mann Holiner and his wife, Alberta Nichols.

Robbins has opened a new publishing firm, The Robbins Co., to handle the tune and all future show scores picked by the publisher. New company is wholly owned by Robbins and is not involved in the Robbins partnership deal with Ed Kassner in the J. J. Robbins & Sons enterprise.

Columbia Pix Sued For 'Tattletale' Usage

Columbia Pictures was named defendant in an infringement suit filed in N. Y. Federal Court yesterday (Tues.) by Republic Music. It's charged that Republic's tune, "Tattletale Eyes," was incorporated without consent in Col's Frances Langford starrer, "Purple Heart Diary."

Republic, according to the complaint, published "Eyes" prior to 1950. An injunction, damages and an accounting of profits derived from alleged unlawful use of the number is sought. "Diary," a Sam Katzman production, was released early this year.

MONROE, GUY TOP BAND TAKES

Band business is still big business. Although the current overall picture is running below the band biz's peak period in the 1930 heydays, the name bands have been racking up sock annual grosses well above the $350,000 mark while a number of the veteran leaders have been steady $1,000,000 or more earners.

Vaughn Monroe, for example, has been bouncing around the $1,200,000 and $1,400,000 gross mark for the past five years. Band's big revenue is due mainly to the lucrative radio and tele shows it's been able to nab. It's figured that Monroe has been able to pick up an additional $350,000 annually via these airers. Another leader aided by high priced radio series to pull him over the $1,000,000 mark is Guy Lombardo, currently heading "Your Hit Parade" radio series.

Both orchs have been high powered grossers on the road, too. Hefty guarantees plussed by standout drawing power has been keeping in the seven-figure bracket for years. Fact that Monroe sticks to the road for longer periods than Lombardo, who prefers his location assignment at the Hotel Roosevelt, N. Y., attributes to former's top standing. However, sock grosses racked up by Lombardo when he hits the road on his annual two-month one-niter stands attests to his solid pull. Record royalties also contribute to the bands' total yearly earnings. Lombardo continues as one of Decca Records' best selling artists while Monroe's pact with RCA Victor guarantees him a hefty yearly sum.

Sammy Kaye is another high bracket band which steadily pulls in big grosses via the three-way parlay of radio, one niters and records (Columbia). It's estimated that Kaye's grosses near the $750,000 mark. Of the other veteran leaders working the ballroom route, Tommy Dorsey averages more than $300,000 annually and probably could double the figure if he decided to work with the consistency of the Monroe, Lombardo and Kaye orchs. It's estimated in band biz circles, that Benny Goodman, who now works sporadically, also could top the $500,000 figure if he wanted to line up a steady one-niter route.

Of the new bands which have cropped up in the past couple of years, Ralph Flanagan and Ray Anthony are leading the pack. Flanagan gross last year was over $500,000 while Anthony topped the $400,000 mark. Both Flanagan and Anthony grosses were helped by disk royalties and tele guest shots.

In the experimental music field, Stan Kenton averages an annual gross of $300,000. Biggest Kenton revenue comes from his jazz concert dates which has been a solid drawing attraction for several years.

N.Y. Symph '51-'52 Season 804G Biz; 166G Loss

The N. Y. Philharmonic-Symphony, in its annual report issued yesterday (Tues.), showed a net deficit for '51-'52 of $166,534.87, as first disclosed in last week's VARIETY.

Receipts from concerts during the 28-week season were $534,186.81. Broadcast fees, record royalties and special concessions totaled $269,840.69, for a combined $804,027.60 total. Concert deficit of $296,053.18 and pension plans deficit of $6,430.10 resulted in total operating loss of $302,483.28. This was partially offset by endowment funds and other contributions, for a net deficit of $166,534.87.

Gross operations nick was $1,243,799.47, with $1,100,080.78 representing operating cost and $143,718.69 being cost of carrying out pension plans.

Polish pianist Witold Malcuzynski, away from N. Y. two years, will give a recital in Carnegie Hall Oct. 22.

Davis Appeals to Petrillo Against 802 Rule Barring Legit Backing

Meyer Davis, bandleader and legit investor, has applied to James C. Petrillo, prez of American Federation of Musicians, for a stay of judgment against a new ruling by N. Y. Local 802 which prohibits latter's members from working in a legit show in which an AFM member has made an investment.

Resolution was adopted Sept. 8, though not made official until publication last week in the union's magazine, Allegro. A member has 30 days to file an appeal, and Davis made request to Petrillo for stay of judgment while his appeal is being decided. Davis' request is based on the ground that the local's ruling "could do irreparable damage."

Resolution was adopted because of the claim that certain members, in order to get work, had been solicited or required to invest in shows. Futhermore, that such investment gave a member priority in getting work with the show as musician, leader or contractor.

Actually, insiders claim, resolution is aimed particularly at Davis, whose varied activities include furnishing of pit bands for musicals. Instigators are believed to be a couple of other Broadway show contractors, who furnish pit bands to musicals.

But other producers or backers, who are also 802 members, could be affected, including Richard Rodgers, Cy Feuer, Milton Berle and many others.

Prolific Investor

Davis, who went into the pit band biz angle a few seasons ago, is a prolific investor in Broadway shows. In the last four years, he has invested in 53 plays, 17 of them musicals. In those four years, he has handled the orchestras for eight musicals. As a top bandleader and contractor, resolution would keep him from investing in further Broadway shows.

Resolution, per se, doesn't forbid an 802 member from investing in a show (although it's believed to have that ultimate effect), but makes it a violation to play in a show in which an 802 member invests. This puts the burden on a musician to find out whether any show he plays in has such an investor or investors.

The upcoming "Two's Company" has Davis as an investor. So have

'Brigadoon' Album In Col 'Ice Capades' Tie

Latching onto the blade version of 'Brigadoon" in the current "Ice Capades" production, Columbia Records is issuing a new "Brigadoon Song Hits" set. Lee Sullivan and Sally Sweetland, who do the "Ice Capades" vocals, are featured in the disk set.

Album will be given a sustained push by the ice show in its tour of key cities, winding up at the end of May, 1953. The "Brigadoon" numbers will be retained as a production sequence in the projected "Ice Cycles of 1954." Latter will be presented next year by John H. Harris, producer of "Ice Capades."

Col Also Leans To Low-Pricers With New Label

Trend to cheaper long-play platters by the major disk companies gained additional momentum last week with the decision of Columbia Records to issue a new label in the low-priced field. New label, known as Entre, will specialize in more familiar classical compositions and will sell at $2.95 for a 12-inch platter. Price is one-half Columbia's regular Masterworks disks which go for $5.45.

Columbia's Entre label parallels the recent issuance by Victor of its Bluebird line, which sells for a similar price. Both Columbia and Decca also have been releasing low-priced 10-inch disks for the longhair market for the past year with marked success.

The major companies' move into the low-priced field has been dictated by an aim to bring new customers into the stores. It's believed that the classical market can be vastly expanded over the whole repertoire if record customers, who generally bypass the longhair releases for the pops, can be introduced to "good music" at low cost.

Another consideration has been the click operation of such established low-priced labels as Remington in the longhair field. The Remington line has been selling steadily in several chain stores and mail-order houses despite the absence of high-powered names. The major diskers hope to broaden this market via their established artists.

Columbia will issue 13 platters in its initial Entre release with such artists as Dimitri Mitropoulos, Frederick Stock, Howard Barlow, Egon Petri, Antal Dorati and others. Columbia will issue 25 disks in this series by Christmas.

BILLY MAY ORCH SET FOR 1ST EUROPE TOUR

Billy May's orch will head out on its first European tour next year. Trek, which will tee off in Copenhagen early in May, will cover key cities in Scandinavia, Belgium, Germany, Italy, Holland and Switzerland. Tour was set by orch's manager, Carlos Gastel, who planed in to New York from Europe Sunday (12). Thrush June Christy will accompany the May crew on the tour, which is expected to run about six weeks.

Gastel also is prepping European tours for Nat (King) Cole, Nellie Lutcher and Mel Torme.

Coral Inks Gorme

Eydie Gorme has been added to Coral Records pop artist stable.

Warbler recently ankled the Tex Beneke orch.

Fisher Hottest on Victor With 2 Clicks But Still Misses a 1,000,000 Seller

Although Eddie Fisher has the two top RCA Victor sellers concurrently, "Wish You Were Here," from the Brodway legit musical of the same name, and "Lady of Spain," he has yet to make the "gold record," symbol of the 1,000,000-copy platter distinction. "Anytime" went 970,000 and, incidentally, Pee Wee King's "Slow Poke" is another which couldn't accelerate enough to top the 940,000 sales figure.

"Wish" is now over the 500,000 mark and "Spain," in its first three weeks, according to sales manager Larry W. Kanaga, is pacing with Spike Jones' "Two Front Teeth," i.e. 87,000 platters for the first and second week, and 50,000 sales in the third lap.

Dissidents to Oppose teGroen, Local 47 Prexy

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Opposition appears to be developing to the reelection of the incumbent slate of officers of Musicians Local 47 on the coast.

Nominations are slated for Oct. 27 at which time it is expected that a dissident group will offer its own candidates to oppose prexy John teGroen, seeking his third term, and AM-TV veepee Phil Fischer, recording secretary Maury Paul and financial secretary Bob Hennon.

ASCAP Songsmiths' 'BMI Blues'

output for public performance. In the period since the now-historic 1940 "music battle" between both performing rights societies, BMI has made notable strides in the pop song field.

ASCAP songsmiths look askance also at those ASCAP music publishers who have been riding both horses via BMI publishing affiliates, but can appreciate that economic necessity makes this understandable. In fact, one of the most loyal ASCAP writer-publishers frankly states that "if I didn't have the Society's income for my publishing business I'd have to close my doors."

But it is the upsurge of the cornballs, country music, rhythmic oddities, in combination with the recent cycle of "new sounds" by recording artists, that is hurting ASCAP. Most of these offbeat tunes seem to stem from BMI sources. Artist & repertoire execs of the recording companies, in striving for unique interpretations, since it's the recorded version rather than the tune that matters nowadays, seemingly don't care from whence come these tunes.

Different With Standards

It's different with the standards. That's where ASCAP shines. If Peggy Lee wants to achieve a new rhythmic version of "Lover," or somebody else wants a new version of "Night and Day," obviously these Rodgers & Hart and Cole Porter tunes must be the basis. Admittedly, no a. & r. man in his right mind would ever think of telling Artie Shaw not to make his unique version of "Begin the Beguine" and favor a BMI tune instead.

This suspicion as regards current pops—and the music men by nature are a suspicious lot indeed—doesn't even extend to the new tunes. But it does seem that more BMI tunes are linked with echo chambers, shrimp boats, cajun, African veldt, bayou or country rhythm styles, whip-cracking and shrieking sound effects than with ASCAP tunes.

Diskers' Rebuttal

Most recording men scoff at the allegation with the mere statement that if it were so "then we'd have more hits." One prominent a. & r. exec observes cyncially, "Say, maybe they are giving us an idea. If X company seemingly is doing so well with BMI pops, and as you know we're not as topmost as we used to be, maybe we should stop on all those ASCAP tunes and really veer deliberately to BMI."

Realistically, the a. & r. toppers feel that maybe the suspicion and self-examination that some ASCAPers confess, pertaining to their inability to meet modern standards, is not without some foundation. One exec started to name-drop the most topflight songsmiths with an analysis of recent songsmithing performance and brushed off many of them as being too busy with legit productions, film scores and other interests, none of which has added up to a smash pop song in many months and, more often, in years.

Admittedly that pop hit is a prerequisite with the diskeries. That's the big profit. That's the insurance for keeping that traffic coming into dealers' stores. The pop pulls 'em and they wind up buying something additionally—an album, a kiddie record, perhaps a longhair or a middlebrow LP, and the a. & r. job is to keep the pop production line churning, no matter where the new pops come from.

Say the ASCAPites, who have been meeting with greater regularity of late, formally and informally—most effectively in the home of Oscar Hammerstein 2d—the fact persists that the cards seem stacked against them.

It may be as much the fault of technological progress, but instead of network musical programs, which have been diminishing more and more of late, there is that informal network of plugs called the disk jockeys.

The DJ as the new "king" of Tin Pan Alley has been explored before in these columns. But, the ASCAP music men wonder, to what degree are the DJs under the recording and radio influence—and if so, to what degree do they psychologically or realistically favor BMI tunes over ASCAP?

"Sure," say representative songsmiths like Irving Berlin, Arthur Schwartz, Edgar Leslie, Stanley Adams, Richard Rodgers, Hammerstein, et al., "maybe it's our fault. Maybe we're not writing the right songs for the American public. Maybe, for a time, we even scoffed too much at the cornballs and the hillbilly tunes when we should have been smart to get out of our Brill Bldg. and Lindy's orbit, go into the hinterland, and learn more about what present-day young America wants in its popular music."

This is a collective quote, variously voiced, and/or in parallel thinking of these topflight songwriters, who, however, conclude, "But they can't tell us that all of a sudden none of us can produce a hit equally as good as what comes out of Nashville's Tin Pan 'Valley,' as VARIETY put it last week. It just doesn't make sense that publishers, who have been doing business with the recording companies traditionally for a third to a half-century should suddenly find themselves unable to get their new stuff recorded. We have no complaints about our past catalog. The standards are our lifesavers. Even the diskers couldn't do without those. But we are certainly not replenishing our music stores with the current pop output as we have in the past—not even a small percentage thereof!"

John Schulman, counsel for the Songwriters' Protective Assn., is legally exploring it with a representative group of name songwriters. A $300,000 sinking fund, to be raised by a 5% levy on the ASCAP royalty dividends from the top writers, has been discussed. Whether there is an area for legal action is a moot question to all concerned. The writers are the first to concede it.

"If the public buys it, it's a good song," says Berlin, in his refusal to go along with the yesteryear scoffing at the so-called cornballs and country-western tunes. He reflects the thinking of that group of songsmiths who, upon self-examination, wonder whether the ASCAPites' lack of progress isn't basic from within the Society.

There is that other contingent which is frank in deploring the radio-music-recording-plugging parlay as something analogous to the production - distribution - exhibition system which obtained in the picture business until the Government ordered otherwise. And that if the U. S. looked askance at so closely knit a liaison, from the film assembly line through distribution, maybe it's also something for the Government to explore on the music recording phase.

Nobody Can Dictate Public Taste

Admittedly nobody can dictate public taste. It's particularly true of pop songs. Traditionally fortunes have been spent trying to "make" a "dog," and nobody will buy it; whereas from left field can come some surprise "rocking chair" hit that defies anybody and everybody in the music biz.

A current variation of this unorthodox evolution of the business also again focuses around the recording business. If a sudden hit pops up, because of some specially outstanding interpretation, not all the diskeries will "cover" it, i.e., record it. "Wish You Were Here" is an example where Eddie Fisher's quick click Victor version walked so far away from the field that the other majors have been giving it the brushoff. Leroy Anderson's "Blue Tango" whammed 'em so on Decca that some of the other platter-makers didn't even record it.

On the other hand, sales managers and a. & r. men are in constant touch with the field and frequently hear that a tune on some obscure label seems to be enjoying a local deejay vogue, and this in turn has influenced a reverse decision to rush that out on wax to ride the crest of a potential hit.

From VARIETY last week the five out of seven tunes on "Hit Parade" were BMI's "You Belong to Me" (Ridgeway), "Auf Wiederseh'n" (Hill & Range), "I Went to Your Wedding" (St. Louis), "Half as Much" and "Jambalaya," both Acuff-Rose. The two ASCAP entries were "Somewhere Along the Way" (United Music) and "Wish You Were Here" (Chappell), the title song from the current legit Broadway musical hit.

Again from VARIETY last week, the top 10 (50-50 BMI and ASCAP) were "You Belong to Me" (Ridgeway, BMI), "I Went to Your Wedding" (St. Louis; BMI), "Wish You Were Here" (Chappell; ASCAP), "Jambalaya" (Acuff-Rose; BMI), the English import, "Meet Mr. Callaghan" (Leeds; ASCAP), "Auf Wiederseh'n" (Hill & Range; BMI), "Half As Much" (Acuff-Rose; BMI), "High Noon," theme song from film of that name (Feist; ASCAP); "Somewhere Along the Way" (United; ASCAP); "Takes Two to Tango" (Harman; ASCAP).

Indie Akron Juke Op Fights Union 'Control' Via Appeal to Patrons

Akron, Oct. 14.

Nick Haradakis, last of the independent jukebox owners in Summit County, is asking his customers to support him in a last ditch fight to remain out of Local 410, affiliated with the AFL Teamsters Union. He said the union had threatened to "break" him unless he signed up last week, but said the proffered contract did not comply with the U.S. constitution, and would result in a 10c charge for records.

He said the contract the union urged on him "would fix prices, restrain trade, and cost the people of Summit County $1,000,000 a year in higher charges." "Once I sign, the union will control every juke box and pinball machine in the county. It will then insist on a 10c charge for the jukeboxes compared to the 5c. charged now," he said. "Where the proprietor gets half the income from the machines now, his share will be reduced to 40%" Haradakis declared.

He said that among the contract features he balks at is one that would let the employes fix the rate charged for operation of the mechanical devices. This grows out of the unique arrangement by which both the jukebox owners and their employes belong to the same union. Haradakis pointed to a clause which says that if one member acts against the interests of another, he will be expelled.

Haradakis became the last holdout against the union with the recent acceptance by Robert Holland of a union contract. A stench bomb was thrown through a window of Holland's home and two of his juke boxes were upset by hoodlums, prior to his signing.

Haradakis asked customer and the general public to support his fight to remain independent of the local, which has been the subject of a grand jury investigation of its activities last year. This probe led to a "truce" between independent and organized operators, but this was not long-lived.

HABER RCA PUB BOSS AS TONEY MOVES UP

Julius Haber was officially named RCA Victor's publicity chief last week in a reshuffle of execs following James M. Toney's promotion from publicity head to director of Victor's consumer products distribution. Both appointments become effective Nov. 1.

Haber has been director of advertising and sales promotion for RCA Technical Products, which includes the tube division. He has been with the company since 1922 and at one period was "loaned" by RCA to the old Lord & Thomas ad agency, which handled RCA's advertising. In 1931, following the consolidation of RCA and the Victor Talking Machine Co., Haber rejoined the company.

Granz Wins Injunction Vs. Indie on Piracy

Norman Granz, "Jazz at the Philharmonic" impresario, won an injunction against Colony Records, an indie N. Y. diskery, in N. Y. Supreme Court last week in an alleged piracy action. Granz charged that Colony had released three sides from his "Jazz Scene" album, which Granz released in 1949. The sides involved such jazz instrumentalists as Charlie Parker, Lester Young and Buddy Rich.

Colony claimed that an employee of its company had brought the sides to its attention while stating they had been pressed by a Canadian firm, El Torro Records. Detective work showed that El Torro was owned by the same Colony employee, Joe Marlo, who turned up with the sides originally.

Granz won the injunction plus $200 court costs.

With Vladimir Golschmann on the podium for his 22d consecutive season, the St. Louis symph orch tees off 73d consecutive season in the opera house of the Municipal (Henry W. Kiel) auditorium Friday (17) with a pair of concerts. Golschmann's return for the 1952-53 season extends his mark as dean of all conductors of American symph orchs in point of continuous service.

He is nearing the record set by the late Serge Koussevitsky who batoned the Boston symph from 1924 through the spring of 1949.

TV SLUGS KOKOMO SYMPH

Indianapolis, Oct. 14.

The Kokomo Civic Music Assn. has decided to disband for at least a year or two, and has refunded money advanced by patrons for the 1952-53 concert season.

Everett Boerrigter, association president, said that television competition was partly to blame.

Cole-Vaughan-Kenton in 23G Mop-Up At Carnegie Hall; Herman O.K. on Coast

The fall edition of "The Biggest Show of 1952" wound up the third week of its skedded eight-week tour Saturday (11) with two evening performances at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., that drew SRO for a sock $23,000 gross. Package, which headlines Nat (King) Cole, Sarah Vaughan and Stan Kenton, has been repeating the cleanup biz of last year's troupe (which headlined Cole, Miss Vaughan and the Duke Ellington orch) and it looks as though the "Biggest Show" trek is here to stay.

The packages big draw can be attributed to the lure of its headliners. Fact that the show is nothing more than an Apollo Theatre, N. Y., bill in a top hat doesn't keep the devotees from shelling out a $4.80 top for a rehash of routine vaude stuff in concert guise.

Both Miss Vaughan and Cole have appeared at the Broadway Paramount and the Apollo in recent months as solo headliners but from reception at early show it seems that the fans just can't get enough of 'em. Both were in top vocal form in their songalogs and each had to beg off. Miss Vaughan's choicest offerings were "Corner To Corner," "Perdido," "Mean To Me" and "Tenderly," while Cole scored with his record faves, "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," "Because You're Mine," "Somewhere Along The Way" and "Funny."

Newcomer to the package, Kenton drew big response with such "progressive jazz" items as "Collaboration" and "Limelight." Arrangements are imaginative and spotlights Kenton's sidemen to advantage. Orch's thrush Kay Brown, who warbled "Taking A Chance on Love" and "Don't Worry About Me," seemed a bit lost in the big hall.

Supporting the headliners are such familiar vauders as tapster Teddy Hale, mimic George Kirby, comics Stump & Stumpy, and the frenetic dancing foursome, The Congaroos. Each walked off to big mitt. Kenton's emceeing here gave them Carnegie Hall stature.

Herman's "Caravan of Stars"

San Diego, Oct. 14.

For its break-in at Russ Auditorium here last week, "Caravan of Stars" was "presented" by Don Howard, disk jockey and showman at KSDO, who proved an effective emcee by virtue of a very brief, pointed welcome, and thereafter let Woody Herman & Co. take over.

Woody's Third Herd, a well-knit jazz group, has yet to attain the stature of his previous units of '46 and '48. But his brassy crew is developing despite the absence of such stars as Chubby Jackson, Bill Harris and Flip Phillips.

In particular, drummer Art Mardigan sparked the session with a bounce reminiscent of the late Dave Tough of the '46 troupe. Unison trumpet work also glistened. Star of the trombones is Herb Green, excellent on Ralph Burns' "Early Autumn." Burns' new original, "Terresita," was a good example of inventive, melodic jazz with nice splashes of woodwinds and good piano variations by Nat Pierce.

Woody pleased with medley of "Amen," "Caledonia" and "Laura." Vocalist Dolly Houston was okay on "Somewhere Along the Way."

Comic Lou Dailey, now traveling with the Herd, proved a showstopper with good but worn carbons of Gary Cooper, Bette Davis and an all-stops-out mime of Johnnie Ray. Fast-talking comic appeared out of place in a semiconcert devoted to jazz, but was liked by crowd. Also seeming out of place was Harold King's tap dance on roller skates, a crowd sizzler that would be tops on a vaude bill but tends to weaken the Herman jazz by its inclusion.

Dinah Washington provided interesting and exciting contrast to Herman's modern jazz with the blues—most basic of all jazz forms. Her best was "You Satisfy," a true blues in traditional 12-bar setup with slightly indigo words. Curiously, singer was effective also on two songs by Cole Porter and Noel Coward—"Just One of Those Things" and "Mad About the Boy"—two composers as distant from the blues as Park Ave. is from Rampart Street.

M-G-M Sets Coleman

Cy Coleman trio has been pacted by M-G-M Records in a switch away from Decca Records. Coleman has been immediately pencilled in for a series of piano albums.

Okeh Records, Columbia Records blues and rhythm subsid, has, meantime, added another vocalist, Joyce Bryant, to its roster. Her initial releases are due in November.

Supreme Court To Rule on AFM Featherbedding

Washington, Oct. 14.

The Supreme Court announced yesterday (Mon.) that it will hear arguments on the so-called "featherbedding" tactics of standby orchestras in theatres. Court agreed to take the appeal of the National Labor Relations Board against Gamble Enterprises.

Row developed at the Palace Theatre in Akron, O., where Local 24 of the AFM refused to sign a contract unless the house orch was kept to play during the intermission, before the opening of the show and at the conclusion, on those occasions when name bands were brought to the house for special one-week stands. Theatre used a pit band, except on such occasions, then it laid off the band as not needed.

When the AFM banned Palace engagements by travelling name bands unless the contract was signed, Gamble Enterprises carried the case to the NLRB which ruled the "featherbedding" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Law were not violated by the union. Theatre appealed to the U. S. Circuit Court which reversed the NLRB. Labor board is now appealing the decision of the Circuit Court.

London Privy Council To Define 'Gramophone' In Suit Vs. Wired Music

Toronto, Oct. 14.

In a test case involving the definition of the term "gramophone" as incorporated in the Canadian Copyright Act, an appeal to the Privy Council, highest judicial body in the British Commonwealth, has been granted to the Associated Broadcasting Co. and the Westminster Hotel, Toronto. Pro and con legal arguments will be submitted to the Privy Council in London, England. Action against the defendants was brought by the Composers, Authors and Publishers Assn. of Canada, affiliate of ASCAP.

Case involves six musical works which were piped to distribution outlets by Associated Broadcasting Co., sole rights to such performances in Canada allegedly held by CAPAC. Charge is that Associated Broadcasting Co. piped these from a central studio in Toronto to subscribers over wires to loudspeakers. Crux of case is whether this can be classed as "gramophone" service.

Previously, in hearings of the test case, Supreme Court of Ontario had ruled that the Associated Broadcasting Co. and the Westminster Hotel, Toronto, were providing a public service "by means of a gramophone" and were not liable to payment of copyright fees to CAPAC.

Ed McArthur Shifts To Longhair in Harrisburg

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 14.

After completing his eighth consecutive summer season as musical director of the St. Louis Municipal Opera, Edwin McArthur began his third season as conductor of the Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra here tonight (Tues.).

Concert was devoted to contemporary American music.

Chi's Trianon Put Up For Sale

Chicago, Oct. 14.

One of the nations top ballrooms, the Trianon, goes on the auction block today (Tues.). The dancery was opened by William and the late Andrew Karzas in 1922 with Paul Whiteman's orchestra on the stand.

The Trianon, which has maintained an all-white policy both in bands and patrons, is on Chicago's south side in a neighborhood now predominantly colored, and has been the scene of a number of racial incidents in the past few years.

William Karzas will retain his northside Aragon ballroom, which was opened four years after the Trianon.

Legit Vocal Coach In Longhair Song Debut

Marjorie Schloss, vocal coach in N. Y. for many legit and TV actors, will make her Gotham debut as a lieder singer in Town Hall Oct. 26.

Miss Schloss was a blues singer with a jazz combo in Germany in '46-'47. The late Jerome Kern was her cousin.

Davis-Petrillo

several shows currently on Broadway. Davis' "Two's Company" investment presumably could force the musicians union to call out the entire orchestra, leader and contractor. Davis is not handling the orchestra for "Two's."

Charles R. Iucci, Local 802 secretary, said: "If a member invests in a show, he can't be the contractor. And Davis knows what we mean because it has been an evil of long standing. We want to prevent a member from investing to obtain the music concession and we want to prevent unfair competition."

"This resolution is a blow to production and performs a distinct disservice to employment opportunities of members of 802," said Davis. "Investments in musical shows are required in order that same be produced, which in turn gives employment to members of 802. The local, in passing this legislation, places a block in its own path, and the passage of this resolution interferes with employment opportunities of its members. Local 802 should encourage its members to invest in the theatre, instead of adopting measures to prevent same. Every dollar invested in a musical show, regardless of by whom, helps to produce same and thereby creates employment for musicians. It would appear that Local 802, by the passage of this resolution, is trying to stop production in the theatre."

Wangerin Resigns As K.C. Symph Biz Manager

Kansas City, Oct. 14.

Richard H. Wangerin, business manager of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra resigned last week to go to Louisville, Ky., where he will manage the philharmonic and take a position as consultant at the University of Louisville. Wangerin has been manager of the orch here for the past four seasons, coming at the time when Hans Schweiger was brought in as director. Both men came here from Fort Wayne, Ind.

In Louisville, he'll have a triple duty as orchestra manager, audio-visual consultant at the university and doing special work in radio, television and recording for the Louisville city library.

Nashville Notes

Capitol's Ken Nelson leaves today (15) for Cincinnati after completing sessions with Martha Carson, Faron Young and new trio unit of Miss Carson with her sisters, Mattie and Minnie. Capitol's country sales have jumped sufficiently during past month that it was necessary to cancel their first November release schedule in order to catch up on current orders.

RCA Victor's Steve Sholes due in town today (15) for week's stay. Mercury's Dee Kilpatrick on distributor tour.

Nat Tannen in Nashville this week formulating plans with his local representative, Boudleaux Bryant, for future firm promotions. Current efforts are on Red Foley's Decca cutting of "Midnight" that's showing promise in country, pop, and rhythm and blues fields with equal force.

Bill McDaniel, WSM's publicity and promotion director, planning extensive direct mail news and promotional program on station's artists and country air shows. Up for top push is the Eddie Hill nightly country deejay airer which is being considered a top item from past two month's audience reaction. Show has had no sponsors but will be offered for sale in the near future.

Red Foley's WSM Prince Albert "Grand Ole Opry" (NBC) guests will be Tommy Sosebee, Oct. 18; Hank Snow, Oct. 25; George Morgan, Nov. 2, and Jimmy Dickens, Nov. 9.

Hugh Cherry, WMAK d.j. personality, taking a lead role in Nashville Community Playhouse production of "The Red Mill." Showing starts today (15) and running nightly through Oct. 25.

Roy Smith, WSIX country platter pilot and non-commissioned chief of intelligence section, second batallion, 173rd Armoured Cavalry Regiment of Nashville, emceeing and producing taped shows for Tennessee National Guard recruiting. Bulk of talent is drawn from WSM's "Grand Ole Opry" roster.

Nashville artist's tours for this week include Roy Acuff and the Duke of Paducah in Ft. Wayne, Oct. 12, continuing with Illinois dates balance of week . . . Decca's Lonzo & Oscar in Kentucky and Illinois; Columbia's George Morgan through Iowa and Illinois; and Columbia's Jimmy Dickens in Alabama, South Carolina, and Tennessee.

Hal Hamrick, Asheville, N. C., d. j. (WLOS), in Nashville last weekend booking talent for local appearances under his promotion and sponsorship.

Ernest Tubb returns from vacation Saturday (18).

Country Chatter

Following Tim Spencer's Memphis charity appearance with Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Redd Harper, Cindy Walker and Georgia Lee two weeks ago, a downtown site valued in excess of $50,000 has been contributed for the proposed nondenominational Youth Auditorium. Other contributions have furthered plans for early construction.

Al Dexter, ex-Columbia disker who left the country entertainment business about three years ago, is starting out to renew his name in the field. A recent visit in Nashville has recording connections in the making and Dexter is currently touring Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi with Capitol's Leon Payne and Decca's Jimmie Davis. Ted Kirby & his Melondy Mountain Boys carrying the sideman work for all three.

The Carlisles of Mercury's stable began their new duties at Shreveport's KWKH last Saturday (11) after doing new Mercury sides in Nashville on previous Thursday (9).

Slim Bryant & His Wildcats, last waxing for defunct Majestic label, recently cut original sides for M-G-M. Group has just renewed paper with brewery sponsor for another season's WDTV (Pittsburgh) telecasts.

Newest singer on WLS (Chicago) "Natinoal Barn Dance" is Skeeter Bonn, who left WHO in Des Moines for the Chicago spot.

Jimmy Bond will make the next Gene Autry tour which begins in Wichita Falls, Tex., on Nov. 18 and will end in mid-December in New Orleans. Dates extend as far north as Ft. Wayne, Ind., for a Thanksgiving date, and as far east as Columbus, Ohio.

Intro Music, western ditty BMI publisher and subsidiary of Intro Records, is seeking to sell its catalog to concentrate on platter business.

KWSC in Pullman, Wash., opened it's doors Oct. 9 to first of season's weekly Big Northwest Jamborees. Two dozen performers were on hand led by Bob Ferguson, Carol Bloyd and Chuck Snyder. Artists as well as show is one of top attractions during winter season in that area.

Top Folk Name Packages From Nashville Paying Off In Big City Auditoriums

Nashville, Oct. 14.

The handling of big name country talent packages in city auditoriums is paying biggest profits of field, according to A. V. Bamford, Nashville's leading independent booker. During past year Bamford has built his promotions around this idea due to lower total cost against total receipt figures.

Bamford's office buys a number of WSM "Grand Ole Opry" top names for a sixday week and sets them together at one or two top auditorium dates for a Sunday and midweek bill. Package splits into individual names for lesser town stands enroute and all acts must be in Nashville for Saturday night "Grand Ole Opry" array from Ryman Auditorium which is considered their "bread and butter" promotion.

A typical schedule was the Oct. 5 appearance of Carl Smith, Johnnie and Jack, Ray Price and Autry Inman in Oklahoma City's Music Auditorium where the boxoffice clicked 8,000 times. Group assembled again in Wichita, Kansas, on Thursday (9) at Forum Auditorium to collect 2,800 more tickets. Each name played individually in smaller towns on the four enroute days.

A Nov. 9 Birmingham bill is also set by Bamford for Webb Pierce, Ray Price, Johnnie & Jack, Carl Smith and Martha Carson.

Booker's introduction to country and western booking came in 1944 after several years of California pop band handling from Hollywood. "Grand Ole Opry" artist's bookings on the west coast brought him to Nashville in 1948 with an early move of all operations to the Tennessee Capitol. He says that competition from other fields makes these multiname bills necessary in the big houses and the smalltown promotions are what keeps the business profitable.

Inside Orchestras—Music

Life, which is doing a pictorial history of the 75th anniversary of the phonograph record and the 50th anniversary of RCA Victor, has been inquiring of the Carl Byoir organization regarding VARIETY's Jim Walsh. Latter is a veteran diskologist, resident in Vinton, Va., longtime disk jockey over a Roanoke, Va., station and an authority on the history of the phonograph. Walsh was responsible for a good portion of the special editorial matter in the Oct. 1 special edition of VARIETY, celebrating the diamond jubilee of the invention by Thomas A. Edison of the "gramophone" and the golden anniversary of the Victor Talking Machine Co.

"The Habanera," theme from Bizet's opera "Carmen," moved into the pop market this week with two adaptations. "Dance of Destiny," which is being published by Spinland Music, hit the disk field via a Tony Martin waxing on the Victor label, and "Give, Give, Give," which is being published by Mellin Music, has been cut by Pat Cameron for the indie BBS label. Several years ago, Oscar Hammerstein 2d worked over "The Habanera" in his adaptation of "Carmen" for the Billy Rose production, "Carmen Jones." Tune, however, didn't move into the pop field.

Sandy Solo, new entry in the male vocalist sweepstakes who hit the market with his initial platter several months ago via the indie Abbey label, received solid plug last week on a CBS network show. Stanza, which was presented by the Disabled Veterans of America, dramatized Solo's life story. Solo had lost an arm in a plane crash during World War II. John Conte played the part of Solo while latter handled the vocal chore. His Abbey coupling is "Through With Love" backed by "La Rosita."

Singer Ralph Curtis, playing the Monte Carlo Club in Pittsburgh last week, had for his accompanist Ethel Burns, who used to be a teacher of his at Boys High in Brooklyn. Miss Burns took a year's leave of absence from the Boys High faculty to go on the road with Curtis. It was she who first recognized her ex-pupil's talent and encouraged him to go to the Juilliard School of Music, from which he graduated a short time ago.

Not generally known is that composer Richard Mohaupt gave up a successful musical career in early Hitlerite Germany because he refused to divorce his Jewish violinist-wife Rosa Gottlieb, as encouraged by the Nazis. In the end the Mohaupts managed to cross the border, but without funds. The act of faith and the escape were recalled recently by friends of the Mohaupts when the wife died in Manhattan at 47.

Recent RCA Victor release of Vaughn Monroe's platter, "Voters on Parade," is getting an extra ride on stations around the country as a public service stunt to get out the vote. Side is being spun during station breaks as well as on regular disk shows. The song is a takeoff of the jazz fave, "When the Saints Come Marching In," and is being sponsored by the Heritage Foundation, a patriotic organization.

Branch Interests Would Come First, In AGVA's New 'Design for Democracy'

By JOE COHEN

The American Guild of Variety Artists took the first major step to widen the democratic scope of the union with passage of a series of resolutions designed to amend the constitution to provide that every section of the country be represented on its national board. Attempts had been made at virtually every convention to amend the national voting for branch delegates, but technical, legislative stymies prevented passage. Board met for four days at Hotel Taft, N. Y., last week.

Board member Joe Campo of Philadelphia initiated the step to alter the constitution. Motions passed call for final draft of the language to be approved by the exec committee and require the next convention to consider such a move. A two-thirds vote is necessary for passage.

This constitutional change would greatly reduce the personal relationship among many delegates which has, for instance, resulted in six members of the board getting permanent paying jobs with the union. Latest to be put on the payroll was recording secretary Manny Tyler. In a session closed to all "paid employees," union counsel and press, Tyler was voted an executive job, nature of which wasn't disclosed, at $75 per week plus expenses. He will also get $200 per issue for editing AGVA News. His spot as recording secretary will be taken temporarily by N. Y. delegate Peter Chan.

Gradual Changes

With the proposed changes, the makeup of the national board may be switched so that many branch interests will have to come ahead of other considerations. The changes, if made, would be made gradually.

Constitutional change was fought by several members who felt that this would be the first step toward local autonomy and would leave New York with insufficient board members to carry on an executive meeting.

Aside from initiation of this major legislation, the meeting wasn't able to accomplish too much. In the four-day gab, many sessions lasted well beyond midnight, with members working until 6:30 a.m. on the final night. Thus the full agenda couldn't be completed.

Major legislation enacted included acceptance of the Lloyd's of London insurance offer, recognition of the need of a wider welfare program, and the extension of the agency franchise system on a week-to-week basis until an agency code can be completed with talent office reps (see separate story).

The disk jockey legislation was referred to the exec committee, but board wanted it understood that the exec committee was to increase the minimum fee for an appearance on a cafe-originated deejay show from $25 to $100. Board stated that there were some petitions afloat, but they hadn't been received as yet, and therefore legislation had to be based on their own observations.

Pass Up 6-Day Week

One bit of legislation that couldn't be enacted was the setting up of a six-day week. Some felt that it would be too much to enact a welfare program and a six-day week at the same time, so that motion was tabled.

The major points of discussion revolved around two items—insurance and welfare program, and agency control. An aggregate of three days was spent on these subjects. Major portion was devoted to the grilling of a rep from Lloyd's of London, who outlined the insurance plan and then submitted to questioning. Final draft of the policy isn't formulated because the board asked for some changes in the original draft. For

To Hear Noel Sherman On Water Show Fiasco

Executive board of the American Guild of Variety Artists will hear the appeal by Noel Sherman, who was put on the union's "unfair list" in connection with the stranding of a swimming troupe in South America. Union previously voted to force Sherman to pay costs of bringing the cast back or remain on the unfair list. Union's welfare fund advanced $3,362 for fares to return performers.

Sherman took the stance that he was merely an agent of the production corporation and produced minutes of the company's board meeting which he held absolved him personally of any financial responsibility. Corporation assumed burden of responsibility.

The exec board is expected to hear the appeal at its next meeting. Name of the show was "Water Capers," not "Water Follies" as previously stated.

Agcy. Franchises On Week-to-Week Compromise Plan

Both the American Guild of Variety Artists and representatives of the talent agencies are breathing easier as a result of a decision by the union's national board extending the deadline for applying for new free franchises on a week-to-week basis with a two-week notice by AGVA in writing to terminate the agreement.

A delegation of members of Artists Representatives Assn. addressed the AGVA board Wednesday (8), but they came as members of various agencies. Nat Lefkowitz, William Morris; Morris Schrier and Walter Hanley, Music Corp. of America; Jack Katz, General Artists Corp. attorney; Howard Hausman, Morris attorney, and various indies, including William Kent, ARA prexy; Leon Newman, Milton Berger, Jack Davies, Nick Agneta, Jack Lenny and Eddie Luntz, appeared before the board.

The settlement accepted by the union was originally suggested in Lefkowitz's talk. He asked for extension on a weekly basis. This solution was regarded as ideal, inasmuch as it prevents the agencies from stalling, and it gives them a talking point with their memberships.

Dispute stems from union's resolution to withdraw recognition from agency organizations and issue free franchises instead of charging $50

'Holiday on Ice' Hot 222G in 3 Paris Weeks

Paris, Oct. 7.

"Holiday on Ice 1952," international froster, grossed $222,000 during the three-week date at the Palais des Sports here. It has 12,000-seating capacity.

"Holiday" now goes on tour, moving first to Saint-Etienne and then to Germany, visiting Berlin, Hamburg and Munich. Show was framed in France, but is composed mostly of American acts. It has an English skating chorus. Pierre Louis-Guerin, producer, complained that 62% of the gross goes into taxes.

New Union Insurance Setup Accents Residues to Hypoed Welfare Fund

Despite generally lower costs of the American Guild of Variety Artists' accident insurance setup effective after Nov. 22 when present policy expires, employers will have to pay the prevailing fees. AGVA national board meet in its four-day powwow at the Taft Hotel, N. Y., voted that present payments of $1 for one-day club dates, $2.50 for weekly indoor dates and $3.50 for weekly outdoor dates be continued, with residue of the coin going to the union's welfare fund.

Under the new program, employers will pay the entire fee to the welfare fund which will in turn insure the performer. Through this arrangement, the union hopes that returns will be large enough to meet the growing needs of the welfare department. It is even anticipated that the welfare sector would be so large as to require new methods of administration. Board members felt that the present department headed by Margie Coate would be inadequate to administer the vast amount of coin that would accrue in a setup of this kind. Various plans were discussed and final action is being held in abeyance.

Under the plan by Lloyd's of London, through its American affiliate, Gordon Tate, Ltd., single-night would cover a performer for 72 hours for a premium of 40c; weekly stands would be $2.50. There is no differentiation in the setup between indoor and outdoor dates. However, the welfare plan recognizes that costs of administration in the outdoor field would be far greater than those incurred in indoor fields.

Because of the preponderance of club dates, it's felt that coin coming in from that division would be the mainstay of the collections. By the same token, more organizers will have to be put on the job in order to get full policing to insure greater returns.

Basic problem remains as to whether the employers will accept the new deal. In various setups such as the club-date bookers code, there is a provision that any savings in the cost of insurance would be passed on to the various club-date agents. However, the union feels that since the welfare department assumes insurance payments, the employer coin will now be a payment to that department.

Considerable opposition is expected on this count from all employers, with the greatest antis expected to be the outdoor groups. George A. Hamid has been having a running feud with the union on that score. It will be difficult to police most fair, carnival and circus dates. But it's felt that the precariousness of the work in the alfresco field will force employers to assume the liability of insuring their acts.

Heller Peddles Carousel Bldg., But Pitt Cafe Stays

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.

Sale of building in which Jackie Heller's Carousel is housed downtown won't interfere in any way with operation of the nitery. Site, which Heller and his brothers, Sol and Bill, bought six years ago, was peddled last week to an unidentified syndicate, but deal included provisions for a long-term lease of the Carousel itself to the Hellers.

At the moment, Carousel is being operated by Jackie and a cousin, Monty Jacobson, while Sol and Bill Heller are running the family's Florida business, Jackie Heller's Dinner Key Terrace Restaurant in Miami, which they took over a year ago.

Ice Show Reviews

Hollywood Ice Revue
(COLISEUM, INDPLS.)

Indianapolis, Oct. 10.

"Hollywood Ice Revue of 1953," produced by Arthur M. Writz; assistant producer, William H. Burke; choreography and staging, Dorothie Littlefield; musical director, Paul Van Loan; costumes, Grace Houston; with Barbara Ann Scott, Carol Lynn, Andra McLaughlin, Michael Kirby, Skippy Baxter, Freddy Trenkler, The Bruises, George Wagner, Carol & Hans Custer.

Arthur M. Wirtz has packaged another colorful rink extravaganza in his "Hollywood Ice Revue of 1953," which opened for 18 performances here Oct. 8 with special show for capacity audience of RCA employees and guests, followed by public preem Oct. 9. It follows format of last year's production, showcasing prime skating talents of its young ballerinas, veteran comedians and well-drilled ensemble.

Both Barbara Ann Scott and Andra McLaughlin have gained in poise and learned tricks of playing to audiences since their first appearance with show a year ago. Carol Lynne is a standout again for grace and beauty in her breathtaking free-style routines. Femme trio has strong support from Michael Kirby and Skippy Baxter, who also score in specialties of their own. Year's only newcomers, Swiss pair champions, Carol & Hans Custer, impress with brilliance in double harness.

Stamp of taste and quality is shown in all production values. Tone of show is more sophisticated than in past season, emphasizing light and delicate shades in subtle costuming and in middlebrow music via Paul Van Loan's well-integrated score. Ensemble maneuvers directed by Dorothie Littlefield also show imagination, exploiting possibilities of multiple skaters for big effects without slowing them down to dance tempo. Despite a couple of spills, line work was better than average for an opening. It pleased ice-wise crowd here, which had seen previous shows after Milwaukee for last couple of years.

Main production numbers are frothy "La Vie Parisienne," in which Miss Scott executes difficult Olympic routine; "Autumn Leaves," in which Baxter plays the wind and Miss Lynne a chrysanthemum while performing some hazardous acrobatics; "Fairy Doll Ballet," a special for the kids spotlighting Miss Scott, Kirby and the Bruises along with featured numbers of the ensemble who take their solo bits like experts; "Rhapsody," in which Miss McLaughlin flashes her pep and personality to gypsy music; "The Tango," a smash by Miss Scott and Kirby; and "Rainbow's End," the finale.

Miss McLaughlin's vim goes over big in modern dance routines highlighted in her specialty, "Sweet, Young and Torrid." She's better at the Charleston and other dances in jazz tempo than in the hula, which invites direct comparison with Sonja Henie, whose ice show also is currently in town, at the Butler fieldhouse. The hula isn't up to Miss McLaughlin's standard and might well be eliminated. Kirby teams with George Wagner in a suave and skillful "shadow" routine. Both Baxter and Miss Lynne display their techniques in exciting solos. Freddy Trenkler makes the customers happy with his "Bouncing Ball" antics and introduces a new comedy basketball number. The Bruises score in their always popular scrubwomen biz. The ensemble goes it alone to fine advantage in two intricate drills, "Zodiac" and "Post Haste."

Ice Cycles of '53
(ICE ARENA, DALLAS)

Dallas, Oct. 8.

John H. Harris production of "Ice Cycles of '53," choreographed by Chester Hale, assisted by Rosemarie Stewart, Robert Dench; costumes, Billy Livingston; scenery, Richard N. Jackson; musical director, Walter Carle; lighting, Richard H. Palmer; "Cinderella" (condensed version of original Walt Disney production), technical directors, Hal Adelquist, Jack Lavin; recording director, Lowell Frank. With Margaret Field, Jimmy Lawrence, Trixie, Joe Jackson, Jr., Raymonde du Bief, Esco Larue, Shriley Winter, Marjorie Taylor, Marshall Garrett, Jane Kirby, Chuckie Stein, Ronnie Baker, Peggy Bauer, Willie Kall, Joe Setta, William Brown, Lynn Dwyer, John Labrecque, Ice Cyclettes (32), Ice Cycliers (12), Ice Cycles Orch; Oct. 4-19 at $1.50-$3.30 scale.

"Ice Cycles of '53," John H. Harris' sister show to his "Ice Capades," again opened its season—eighth in the series—at the fairgrounds' Ice Arena for 23 performances through State Fair of Texas' run, Oct. 4-19. Newest edition, which bowed to four sellout houses (4-5), boasts nine big production numbers among 20 acts and sports new blader names as well as several favorites from past shows, namely Margaret Field, Jimmy Lawrence, Chuckie Stein, and Joe Jackson, Jr.

In sheer spectacle, lavish costuming and socko production, new "Cycles" dwarfs previous preems here. Its heavily flacked top bit is a streamlined staging, in 10 scenes, of Walt Disney's version of "Cinderella." Beamed as a moppet draw, fairy tale gets the family trade in a lush production employing the entire company.

Familiar story is executed neatly by Margaret Field as Cinderella, Jimmy Lawrence as the Prince, and a cast of 10 featured bladers. Prerecorded lines are panto-mouthed perfectly by the cast; sound and timing get a dead-heat execution. Strangely, a minimum of ice artistry is included in the major effort, when the stars, Miss Field and Lawrence, execute balletic patterns in the finale.

AT THE

LONDON PALLADIUM

"The highest tribute I can pay Betty Hutton is: It is as well that this is the final programme of the variety season. I can think of no one who could top the bill after this Michigan whirlwind."
—Evening News

"UNPARALLELED!" "This is star material . . . the atomic rays of the Ziegfeld Follies . . . the block busting energy of a group of Superforts . . . the attack of a highland division. A variety turn without parallel."
—Daily Dispatch.

"ATOMIC!" "Betty Hutton is easily the greatest rival to Britain's new atomic bomb. This devastating little lady labelled Hollywood's Bonde Bombshell hits the stage with a cavalcade of song." —The People.

"INCREDIBLE!" "She comes on like a tornado, but about half-way through a new Betty Hutton charms her audience with a quiet song or two. The girl is incredible."
—Sunday Dispatch.

"SENSATION!" "For an hour the Incendiary Blonde set the audience alight with enthusiasm . . . an almost unparalleled sensation." —Hannen Swaffer.

"BUBBLING!" "The dynamic Betty Hutton abounds with energy, vitality, good humour and, above all, first class showmanship. She is a hep performer with a bubbling personality that is projected throughout the theatre. This was show biz at its best."
—VARIETY.

"DYNAMIC!" "One of the most dynamic displays of outstanding talent that even audiences at this celebrated centre of spectacular achievement have ever seen."
—Morning Advertiser.

"DELIRIOUS!" "She drives the audience delirious with delight." —Daily Mail.

"ACCLAIMED!" "Was there ever a variety star who gave the fans so much for their money? Only the audience makes more noise than Betty—and that in acclaiming her." —News of the World.

"CONGRATULATIONS!" "Betty put over a brand-new side-busting sixty-minute act that started with a yell you could hear from here to Long Island. Congratulations, Charles ("Lucky") O'Curran. Congratulations, Betty: London still belongs to you."
—The Hollywood Reporter.

'New Faces' Idea, as Subs for Names, Big Upbeat to Foreign Acts in U.S.

Rate of talent imports has been increasing steadily and it appears that there will be a further stepping up of alien acts next season.

Music Corp. of America, for example, has done so well with Los Chavales de Espana that a similar group—Quintet Allegro—will be brought up from South America for a U. S. tour. Same firm is also ready to do a big promotion on Runi Sana, an Indian singer who has done well in Paris. MCA is also working out a tour for the "Sans Souci Revue" which it already has set into the Flamingo, Las Vegas.

The William Morris Agency, through its European affiliate, the Harry Foster Agency, London, has always made an important point of working with foreign acts. Currently, WMA has Darvas & Julia, now at the Latin Quarter, N. Y., and who will head a unit to play niteries. Les Charlivels is set for a repeat at the Latin Quarter. Les Compagnons de la Chanson is now at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y.

Latin Quarter operator Lou Walters spends considerable time in Europe every year casing acts. Most of the turns he has brought over came as a result of personal observation.

Another firm that has become active in importing talent is Lew & Leslie Grade's N. Y. office headed by Eddie Elkort. This outfit has been spotting talent regularly into the Radio City Music Hall, the Palace and Latin Quarter.

Most theatres and cafes will not hesitate to take a chance on imports, only exception being talking comics. Many feel that imports represent a change from the usual faces and are frequently a good substitute for expensive names.

Blackstone's Dates

Blackstone the Magician is being routed for a theatre tour starting Oct. 24 at the Court Square, Springfield, Mass., and following with a series of Comerford houses. Booked by Abe & Joe Feinberg.

Dicker 'What's My Line?' For Pitt Copa Edition

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.

Lenny Litman, who owns the Copa, downtown nitery, is dickering with Hal Block, panelist on "What's My Line?" for a week here in December to present a cafe version of the TV and radio program. Deal hasn't been set yet but when and if it is, Block would take John Daly's moderator role and use a panel of Pittsburghers.

AGVA May OK Cuffo Shows in Return For 15% of Benefit Gate

A return to free performances and a straight charge of 15% of the gross is being contemplated by the American Guild of Variety Artists as the keystone of its new benefit setup. An alternative may be the elimination of the one-seventh of the usual salary payment with maximum fee for a benefit held to $285, representing one-seventh of $2,000.

The AGVA board meeting last week referred the matter to the executive board.

Feeling at the confab was that since performers were returning their fee to the beneficiary organization, purpose of the benefit legislation was not only being defeated, but the union welfare funds were being deprived of the cut that formerly came from organizations holding cuffo shows. Beneficiaries had been asked to make a voluntary 5% contribution to the AGVA welfare fund, but few came through.

As a result, union will consider a move to go back to the original benefit setup.

Heine's Chi Repeat Vs. Wirtz in 'War'

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Sonja Henie is planning a second engagement at the International Amphitheatre here, possibly during the same period that Arthur Wirtz's "Hollywood Ice Revue" will play the Chicago Stadium. Latter is currently slated to open Christmas Day. Whether Miss Henie will buck Wirtz will depend on how she makes out opposite him during the current Indianapolis engagement.

Miss Henie's intentions were made known in part last week when ads inserted in local dailies apologized to those unable to get into the Amphitheatre during the show's first run. Ad closed with "watch for further announcements." Trade took this as an indication that she would be coming back here. Merton Thayer, Amphitheatre manager, declared that a return is in the discussion stages, but no dates have been mentioned in the conversations.

The heated rivalry between the Henie and Wirtz shows is somewhat paralleled by the old circus wars when two embattled outfits would book a town day-and-date. The intensity of the bitterness between Henie and Wirtz is reflected in the fact that both are switching schedules and making it tough for each show to operate. Trade figures both shows will be "hurt."

Miss Henie, after closing Indianapolis, will go to Raleigh, Oct. 20-26, and Washington, Oct. 29-Nov.9. Stands beyond that date are set, according to Miss Henie's spokesman, but are not being announced because of the competition.

Wirtz is slated to come into Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Jan. 15. Whether the Henie show will hit New York this season is still uncertain.

Rogers' 1-Niters at 3½G

Series of six one-niters in the midwest has been booked for the Roy Rogers-Dale Evans rodeo troupe to follow the Madison Square Garden stand, N. Y., which ends Sunday (19). Unit will play two shows daily in Canton, Marion, Troy and Cincinnati, Ohio; Muncie, Ind. and Owensboro, Ky.

Dates, booked by Ralph Wonders, Arena Stars, Inc., prexy, call for a guarantee of $3,500 in each town against 60% of the gross up to $5,000 and 65% thereafter.

Roy Rogers Lassoed

A Roy Rogers lasso competiton will be installed in various theatres by the A. & J. Feinberg Agency. License for those contests has been obtained from Rogers, current in the Madison Square Garden, N. Y., rodeo.

Last year the Feinbergs booked Clarabelle the Clown on a licensing arrangement with the "Howdy Doody" TV show.

Miami Cafes, Talent Agents Fighting Cold War, Spurred by Teeoff Doubts

The annual invasion of New York by Miami Beach nitery owners has started. At this point, Murray Weinger is attempting to make deals for Copa City, Jerry Brooks is on the prowl for bands for Larue's and Red Pollak is shopping around on behalf of Ciro's. Julius Gaines, Casablanca Hotel operator, was in and out of Gotham. His talks with Monte Proser, boniface of La Vie en Rose, for a Florida counterpart, failed to materialize.

Miami Beach cafe operators and the talent agencies are on the anxious seat. The percenteries are hesitant about making any deals until the ownership and policies of Copa City and the Beachcomber are settled. The date-diggers are afraid to sign pacts for their top names, being fearful that disputed ownerships may make their contracts with certain clubs worthless. At the same time, they feel they dare not sign with smaller spots that are sure to open, because they may get more money and better showcasing at Copa City or even the Beachcomber. If Copa City opens, then the Beachcomber, under terms of its lease, would not be able to use top names. Otherwise, the latter club may go in heavily for expensive talent. The agencies are therefore sitting tight. Clover Club is in a position to pact talent, but agencies are marking time.

Buck & Bubbles Up For Montreal Sentence Wed.

Toronto, Oct. 14.

Charged with illegal possession of narcotics, Buck & Bubbles (Ford Lee Washington and John Sublett) appeared in Magistrates Court for hearing and will be sentenced tomorrow (15). Also arrested by the Mounties and Toronto police in the hotel-room raid were Bubble's wife, Mabel, and Benny Winestone, sax player, who has his own nitery trio here.

Quartet were unable to post $5,000 cash bail individually when arrested Sept. 22 nor could they put up $3,000 apiece when bail was reduced. They were returned to jail to await sentence.

This Is Where We Came In; 'Original' Dagmar Vs. TVersion; No Mpls. Beefs

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Localites acquainted with the TV Dagmar and who also attended the Alvin (burlesque) here last week are still probably wondering what transformed her from a statuesque damsel into a petite and shapely chunk of femininity—and from a comedienne into a dancer.

Heavily exploiting Dagmar as its season's big deal, the theatre in its newspaper ads called her appearance "the stage scoop of the year!" Ads referred to her as "the girl you've heard about—the season's sensation," and told the public to "see her in person on our stage."

It was, of course, the usually billed "original" Dagmar, the exotic terper of niteries and burley and a femme of modest physical proportions, but the theatre's ads obscured that fact

Claiming it had no squawks ("most customers didn't know the difference" and even those who did "were satisfied"), the theatre is bringing her back for a quick return after only a seven-day interim, following her appearance in Milwaukee. If any customers felt they got cheated, especially on the physical score, they kept their grievances to themselves, the Alvin management asserts. And house set a new season's boxoffice record, grossing approximately $7,000 at $1.25 top.

Last season, the "original" Dagmar played three weeks at Vic's cafe here, but that establishment took pains in its advertising to make clear she isn't the TV star, who never has appeared in Minneapolis.

After her Alvin appearances the "original," who is suing the TV performer for alleged misappropriation of the name, goes into Vic's for a return engagement.

Chi Chez's 4-Wk. Fixup

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Chicago will be without a major nitery for almost four weeks when the Chez Paree closes for remodelling Dec. 4.

Sophie Tucker will be on the final bill before the shuttering, and Jane Froman will head the new show for the Dec. 29 reopening.

New Acts

CELIA LIPTON
Songs
25 Mins.
Hotel St. Regis, N. Y.

Celia Lipton, daughter of British bandleader Sidney Lipton and the former Marion Parker, a ballroomologist, is billed at her Maisonette (St. Regis Hotel) debut as "London's charming singer.' She lives up to the billing on physical attributes and well nigh also in a professional manner, but almost all but dissipated the showmanly charm with an inept parody on "Only for Americans." This is an Irving Berlin excerpt from "Miss Liberty," and had she clung to the original Gallic setting it would have been OK all around because not only the Americans but the British, the Norse country visitors, the Belgians, the South Americans and all who visit that dear, dear (very) Paree come more or less expecting to be pleasantly clipped. But for some strange reason she chose to transplant it all to London, needlessly making the British the lyrical "heavies." Somehow, also, the geographic transmutation took on so completely a different aura that Miss Lipton's pleasant impact took a chilly reverse. The number has since been dropped.

A new singing face and voice, especially from England, is a nice idea. We have been sending our Julie Wilsons, Nancy Donovans, Martha Wrights, Hildegardes, Sophie Tuckers, et al, into London's Bagatelle, Astor, Colony, Empress and kindred class Berkeley Square and Mayfair boites, and the reverse lend-lease is a pleasant switch. In Miss Lipton's case doubly so, because she is a charming personality, a blonde looker with a fetching if not particularly authoritative voice. The latter aspect will improve as she enhances her material which is lacking in substance.

She opens with "Friends With Everybody," singing it off—as well as on-mike in a clear soprano. "Everything Stops for Tea" ("Lipton's, of course;" a pun on her name) is also pleasant, and thereafter she is just that—pleasant but not socko. "Nightingale in Berkeley Square;" an English music hall song about "No One Believes I'm a Mermaid," "That's What Makes Paris Paree" and a cockney girls' impressions of Hepburn and Bette Davis pyramid until the backsliding "Only for Americans." The cockney number evidences a flair for mimicry, but she should support her takeoffs with sturdier lyrics.

Miss Lipton is no show biz novitiate. For all her youth she has been bandsinging with her father's combo (he's known as "the Guy Lombardo of England") as Celia Parker (her mother's maiden name); has been on BBC extensively, sang briefly with Vaughn Monroe in the U. S., with Jack Harris' orchestra in England, has made pictures and was last at the Bagatelle, London, in August. She is a personal favorite with America's Dolores Gray who has done well in London, and who, with Miss Gray's mother, is sponsoring her in her major American debut. She should make the grade all right in the class cafes.

Miss Lipton succeeded Julie Wilson who just departed to assume the Mary Martin role in the London company of "South Pacific." Miss Wilson has become more or less of a Maisonette fixture. Unquestionably also an institutional plus in this posh saloon is Milt Shaw's slick society dansapation. He's in the tradition of the smart boite maestros who knows not only his clientele's taste but has an unerring memory in greeting them with their favorite tunes. Alternating is Horace Diaz's relief combo, likewise big league. And as has been remarked about the dwindling standards of service, there are few remainders in the best of the old traditions, but for maitre d' August and his expert staff here rate among them as they shift from this class room to the Viennese Roof for the summer with the same eclat as distinguishes their services in other channels.
Abel.

EVA & NICK
Acro-dance
8 Mins.
Drap D'Or, Paris

This hubby-wife acro-dance team is a fluid group that entails some fancy throwing of Eva. Eva is pulchritudinous and Nick cuts a suave figure in tails.

Though low ceiling of Drap D'Or hampers them, it is obvious there are many somersaults and loops in their repertoire. They make for good silhouettes for group or single numbers.
Mosk.

"SKEETS" MINTON & JIMMY MORTON
Ventriloquy-Songs
12 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

The strength of "Skeets" Minton's performance resides not so much in ventriloquy, which is good in a conventional sort of way, but in his singing, which gives his act a big talking point. The dummy, Jimmy Morton, is lapped largely for Minton's vocal takeoffs and some straight chirping. After a Jimmy Durante slice and a rarely essayed sotto voce whistling, Minton brings Vaughn Monroe in with full sweep while not losing the throw illusion. He dittoes with Jerry Colonna, Mario Lanza, etc., plus a rousing, mocking Johnnie Ray in "Cry" and a straight "Old Man River" that is started by the dummy but finished by Minton as he steps away from his prop.

Minton's articulation is uppercrust, and his whole performance merits wider spottings.
Trau.

LEON BELASCO
Comedy-Songs
15 Mins.
Saddle & Sirloin, No. Hollywood

The varied experiences of successful careers as batoneer, fiddler and character actor have been combined with a shrewd sense of comedy by Leon Belasco to whip up a new act that should keep him busy. Admittedly, it's more for the intimate boites than the big niteries or vaude, but there are enough of them around and Belasco should click readily.

There are, of course, a few rough edges to be smoothed out before Belasco takes to the candlelight circuit, but the basic stuff is there. He's got some sharp special material that he wallops across with an excellent sense of timing. There isn't much to the voice but he knows how to sell the routines and the turn ranges from the ribald to the poignant. Highlights include a bilingual phrase-by-phrase translation of "L'Amour" that earns steady laughs, a ribtickling tale of the dreams of the gal who read proof on Kinsey's book, a double entendre saga of an Arab beauty, and a wistful carbon of the oldtime hurdy-gurdy man that provides a walloping finish. Jerry Dolin lends strong piano backing.
Kap.

NOVELLE & PLUTOCRATS
Dogs
7 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Joe Novelle appears as a dude bumpkin pacing a comedy canine troupe of six Dalmatians with a small, prop piano serving as centre-piece for most of the stunts. Orch pianist is recruited for the poundings. The spotted specimens seem undisciplined at times in their leaps, dances, etc., but show up okay in forming a rear-up column that segues into a conga line, following with jumps over the 88's during which the garish prop goes into slow collapse.

Okay for fairs and circuses, where act's potential seems to lie in the main.
Trau.

HARRIS & MORELAND
Comedy
15 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Bud Harris & Mantan Moreland are show biz vets. Former has been long in vaude (Bud Harris & Co., etc.) and is the boyfriend of "Beulah" in the radio-TV show of that name. Moreland has virtually made a career of sidekicking and chauffeuring for Hollywood's Charlie Chan.

They've combined for a comedy turn admixturing banter, songs, a bit of strutting and medley stuff in which Harris does piano quickies. The material is not always fresh, but Negro team goes over on its slick timing plus its offbeat way with a song.

Unfinished-sentence opener is, of course, click with those not privy to the ancient routine. A winning stanza is their "Oh Marie" in the Italian idiom. They bring in the Charlie Chan angle in a tune addressed to the screen sleuth.
Trau.

DANNY WINCHELL
Songs
24 Mins.
Sans Souci, Miami Beach

Add Danny Winchell as a likely prospect among the platter potents currently working the cafe circuit.

A personable lad with an ingratiating manner that overcomes a tendency to work too (easily eliminated) much to ringside tables, he impresses most strongly with his shout arrangements. Use of this type tune is wise, what with the vocal equipment embracing the style more easily than ballads. Scores with his versions of 'Gonna Live 'Til I Die," "Joshua" and encore "When Saints Come Marching In." Solidifies matters with projection of his recording of "Carolina," arranged trickily and befitting his loose, easy delivery. Interweaves the ballads for change of pace. With more experience a bet for video and the intimeries.
Lary.

CHIC & MAIDIE
Comedy
10 Mins.
Pavilion, Glasgow

This is man-and-wife act with unusual humor slant. Male partner is tall, young, lugubrious-looking performer with deadpan expression and a deep throaty voice. Gal is petite, neat and lively, serving as stooge. The deep voice and casual offhand manner of the male provide most of the laffs.

Act, currently in the long-running Tommy Morgan show, is limited by male's dialectic restrictions, his accent being primarily understood and appreciated by Scot audiences. Gal plays the accordion as useful variation to act, which nevertheless has much native comedy appeal.
Gord.

ACORN & SHIRLEY
Eccentric Dance
9 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Bill Acorn is a slim, towering citizen, and Lyn Shirley is about a foot lower, with neat chassis and gams. In this contrasting tandem, they pursue the eccentric hoofery route for fine returns with consistently good routining throughout the stint.

Loose-limbed guy mocks up songs and terps, being joined by partner in softshoe takeoffs segueing into his slow splits and her corkscrew spins. Do some voodoo nonsense that switches to Charleston, vintage vaude stepping and a zany conga. In the final fillip, they pair niftily on a jitterbug topped by the femme's nutty spinning.

Act should have no trouble landing dates. It's lively and interesting to watch.
Trau.

ANNEL & BRASK
Cyclists
5 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

Annel & Brask, only ofay act on the current Apollo bill, have standout cycling turn that should win them solid vaude bookings. Mixed team, from Denmark, packs plenty of excitement in its five-minute turn.

Acro stunts on the bicycle, mostly executed by the gal while partner pedals, are slickly done. Windup of gal swinging on parallel bars attached to bicycle is topdrawer. Turn, however, needs more thought in planning of routines. Team fails to build climaxes properly and each stunt runs into the other without any definite line of demarcation.
Gros.

ANNY BERIER
Songs
10 Mins.
Drap D'Or, Paris

Anny Berier is a young, solid-chassied chantooser who also possesses looks. She makes no attempt to talk to aud but comes out and belts with her songs, though having a tendency to trill and hoke up some of her ballads with false, husky interpretations. However, she has a way with a ballad and is particularly impressive with hurly-burly Paris songs that depict the street and its peoples.

Pounds out "A Paris" and "La Fete Continue" with expert feeling for the Paris scene. If gal loosens up and gives out some personality and sings her songs straight, she shapes up as a personable chanter who could do for TV or intime boites stateside. She also sings Spanish flamencos.
Mosk.

B'KLYN STRAND MAY RETURN TO VAUDE

The Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, is considering a return to stageshows. House, now part of the Fabian chain, has been asking talent agencies to submit top names. Included among those that the operators are ready to negotiate for are Dagmar and Lionel Hampton Orch. Should the house go into vaude, it would likely be on a five-day basis with Nov. 26 as the kickoff point.

Some years ago the Strand was part of a pooling arrangement embracing Paramount, Warner and Fabian interests. With its breakup, house reverted to Fabian.

Spike's 25G Mfg. Show

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

The Spike Jones troupe will get a flat $25,000 for two performances daily for eight days at the Minneapolis Manufacturing Show, March 14-22. Troupe is now laying off here.

Date was booked by MCA.

House Reviews

Casino, Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 10.

Basil Rathbone, Robert Alda, Sunny Gale, 4 Knights, Al & Connie Fenton, Jimmie Cameron, Archie Stone's House Orch; "Fabulous Senorita" (Rep).

From Shakespeare to pie-flinging, plus Browning to juggling, current stage bill is the strangest blend of high and lowbrow in the history of the Casino. Coheadliners are Bob Alda and Basil Rathbone in exhibition of their sharply contrasting talent media, with Alda as m.c., a post he filled at this house for some seasons, prior to his film break in "The Gershwin Story."

Lusty also are the Four Knights and Sunny Gale, with Al & Connie Fenton opening the proceedings with their tap-dance juggling, challenge acrobatics and a smash jitterbug finale. They get the customers well warmed up for blonde Sunny Gale, in a salmon-pink gown, with a vibrant "Please Don't Talk About Me" in shout-style; a tempo switch to "You Belong to Me"; a bouncy belting of her latest recording, "I Laughed at Love," and a terrific begoff to "Wheel of Fortune."

Four Knights, always popular here, follow with "Shine" and "Charmaine" in neat ballad style punctuated with these bass diapason effects at two mikes, plus "Up the Lazy River" and "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie," all in perfect pitch and experienced timing. "Simple Melody" and "Hucklebuck" mark their style switch for another begoff.

Then it's Basil Rathbone with his reminiscences of the English stage, with attendant vaude audience puzzlement at names they're not familiar with. There's gradual warming with his interpretation of a drunken London actor-manager doing "Richard III" soliloquies with hick-ups, some Hollywood scene chatter and a recitation of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's "How Do I Love Thee" that hushed a full house when caught. This was followed by his reading of the inspirational letter of RAF Pilot Officer John McGee, who was shot down over El Alamein.

Both readings cast a spell over even the bobbysox set to gain their open-eyed respect; for once, they were learning how poetry should sound as apart from schoolroom teaching—and they were getting it via vaude. Rathbone also rated a begoff.

Stepping out of his m.c. duties, where his showmanship is again expertly evident, Bob Alda whams into his "Walking My Baby Back Home," then his dramatic "Lady Luck" from his erstwhile "Guys and Dolls." His "No Two People," by Frank Loesser, from the "Hans Christian Andersen" film, returns Miss Gale for the he-and-she patter song, and both are over big.

Rowdy climax to the otherwise unusual bill is the company roundup in "How We Make a Picture in Hollywood." It is a riotous lampoon complete with the dignified Rathbone and Alda as victims of mayhem, plus the planting of pies in their kissers by lesser members on the bill. Costars enter into the proceedings with evident give-and-take enjoyment. A very unusual stage package on diversity and over very big on precedent-breaking blend of culture and hokum.

Palace, N. Y.

Bobby Joyce & Ginger, Eddy Manson, "Skeets" Minton & Jimmy Morton, Acorn & Shirley, Ladd Lyon (2), June Gardner, Bud Harris & Mantan Moreland, Novelle & Plutocrats (replaced by Don Francisco), Jo Lombardi House Orch; "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th), reviewed in VARIETY Oct. 8, '52.

The Palace currently is having one of its rare offish weeks though a couple of acts punch up their part of the proceedings. Next-to-closing spot goes to a newly mated pair, Bud Harris & Mantan Moreland, Negro comics with long show biz background and reviewed under New Acts.

Raising the curtain, Bobby Joyce & Ginger are okay in the acrotap department, highlighted by his splits, scissors and free-wheeling cavortings, and her coochology, plus femme's solo cleats after shedding her skirt.

Deuce is a letdown in the noisy, overpowering harmonica of Eddy Manson, who does not provide himself with a change of pace tunewise. Whatever virtuosity he possesses is lost in the din between his oral organ and the pit orch. Next, "Skeets" Minton and his dummy, "Jimmy Morton," the eccentric hoofers Acorn & Shirley are covered in New Acts. These two turns lift the bill considerably.

Fifther is Ladd Lyon in a balancing stint with props on small platform. His key stuff is via plain-Jane audience plant whom he heartily "instructs" step by step for what is supposed to produce laughs. Since the aud is never fooled by the plant, Lyon's postscript "apology" in this connection doesn't hit home. Duo has a good teeter stunt for finish.

In the sixth niche, June Gardner shows a big authoritative coloratura, and brunet is smartly groomed in a cleavaged strapless. She starts off with a rousing "Granada," in Italian, and then does two classicals in the "One Fine Day" aria from "Madame Butterfly" (in Italo) and "Love Is Where You Find It" (in English). Miss Gardner had a long-termer last winter at Ciro's, Miami Beach, and has soloed with the NBC Symphony under Toscanini. For vaude time, her boffo pipes need the benefit of a songalog encompassing some straight pops or more schmaltzy light classics. Then she could easily wrap up.

Novelle & His Plutocrats (dogs), the exit turn, was yanked from the bill after last Friday's second show (reviewed under New Acts), and replaced by Don Francisco, veteran wire artist. Francisco does a rapid-fire three minutes of dance and prance, closing with his masterful wide-arc swing that drew a salvo when act was caught at first show Monday (13).

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Oct. 12.

Bernice Parks, Herbert & Saxon, 3 Arnauts, Buddy Costa, Sam Jack Kaufman House Orch (18); "Untamed Frontier" (U).

There's an unevenness about current Capitol layout which makes it drag along at times, even though several acts are standout. B.o. has been slow here all week with little marquee allure in vaude lineup. Customers at show caught, however, approved all four acts.

Bernice Parks brings a nitery approach to this big house, and whams it across, especially with the boys in the gallery, who nod her in their noisiest manner. Chantoosey tosses the s.a. around, both in style and dress. She has, in addition, a husky and versatile set of pipes, and a highly expressive way with a tune. Uses a hand mike at times to give her mobility, and again employs cafe technique in strutting around stage.

Miss Parks bounces front and centre with "Walking My Baby Back Home," then changes pace for a very smoky "You Intrigue Me." Her "Do It Again" is literally so seductive that rafters resound with whistles and cheers for more of same; so she goes on to her latest disclick, "Sinners or Saints." Wraps it up with "Jambalaya" and leaves them begging for more of her stylized brand of warbling.

In direct contrast, newcomer Buddy Costa, who fills in as curtain-raiser, has a sound set of pipes, good range and expression, but little stage style. Tees off with "Of Thee I Sing," with another romantic tune intertwined, then goes on to "The Mask Is Off." After a slow start, makes the grade with "Birth of the Blues," by far best bet of routine. Gives this oldie plenty of punch and evidence of style he is likely to develop. Winds up with "Why Did You Leave Me" and gets nice sendoff.

The Arnauts, two men and one gal, are still plenty rib-tickling with their zany musical efforts. Play in various combos, switching from one string instrument to another. Mingled with slapstick is some surefire skill on the strings. The boys take a bow for their acro stunts while playing folk tunes on fiddles, and even more for their feats with one fiddle and two bows. Best bet is still the bird-call routine, with all three acting out a love triangle via bird whistles. Payees like, as always.

Jim Herbert & Don Saxon get laughs with their series of zany gags and takeoffs. There's the undisciplined little guy who gets all the laughs with his schizophrenic entrance, his irrepressible rompings, and his nonsensical takeoffs on foreigners embarking at Idlewild. Latter impresses as most solid part of act. Wind up with a "Dapper Dan" routine, a la turn of the century, and walk off to hep returns.

Latin Quarter, N. Y.

The return of Sophie Tucker to the Latin Quarter must mean as much to that spot as the periodic American Legion conventions to New York or the once-a-month mail boat to a remittance man. It's an annual theatrical highpoint guaranteed to return a huge profit to Lou Walters and to bring a maximum to his customers.

Miss Tucker is an evergreen in the entertainment business who is smart enough to realize that even the greatest performer must come back with sharp new material. It's as unthinkable to her to dish out the same songs as it would be to wear last year's gown on an opening night. Incidentally, her coutouriering brought a few dropped lower jaws. It's a beaded and ermined creation befitting the grand dance of the cafes.

Miss Tucker opened on Monday (13) and produced ropes up business. The holiday helped, of course, and probably her appearance the previous night on the teleshow, "Toast of the Town," must have brought in a few strays. At the break of the first show, there was a line from the lobby into 48th St. Several cafes could exist on the overflow.

Miss Tucker is always a delight. Audiences let her get away with virtually anything. She can be blue, reverent or overly sentimental—the effect on the crowd is the same. She essayed 40 minutes' worth of material, all of which scored a maximum impact. There were items on her various boyfriends keeping her young, the "Sophie Tucker School for Red Hot Mamas," and a rousing "Sophie Tucker for President" in which she distributed campaign buttons as an afterpiece. There was, of course, the inevitable "Some of These Days." The cafegoers still revere this gal and showed their appreciation with as rousing a reception as it is possible to extend. Make no mistake about it. Ted Shapiro is in there with his deft byplay.

The show accompanying the topper has been abbreviated somewhat. Darvas & Julia continue as the mainstays of the surrounding proceedings. Their's is still one of the best acrodance acts in the business, and gets them a salvo. Their top tricks rarely fail to bring gasps.

Sid Krofft continues to please with his exposed puppetry. He works out some excellent doll manipulations doing a chorus line, skelton dance, striptease and a Negro dance pair.

New vocalists are Ralph Young and Audrey Sperling, both of whom show capable pipes. Their turn has been curtailed to allow Miss Tucker the maximum time. Beverly Richards, from the line, is now doing the half-man-half-gal act. Line's costuming and lack of it, along with Mme. Kamarova's routines provide further interest. Art Waner's capable showbacking and Buddy Harlowe's relief are assets, and ditto Gigi's demeanor at the tape. Jose.

New Golden, Reno

Reno, Oct. 8.

Guy Mitchell, Step Bros. (4), Don Cummings, Golden Girls (6), Sterling Young Orch; no cover or minimum.

Guy Mitchell rides herd easily on a bunch of contented customers. Singer saddles up with "Belle, Belle, My Liberty Belle" and variously lopes, trots and runs through such of his disclicks as "Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania," "Roving Kind," "Feet Up." An abrupt rein-up on "Auf Wiederseh'n" startles the crowd. This is his second number and fits neither his style nor his repertoire.

Mitchell drags out a guitar, hauls up a chair to rest his foot on and gets folksy for "Went to Your Wedding" and "Too Late," with a nice orchestral posse following behind. He encores in the same manner with "Jambalaya."

The Step Bros. are back in this spot after only a few months. (Mitchell was here too earlier in the year.) With essentially the same attack of precision tap and trade-offs, the quartet balances the stint nicely. Each explodes briefly for spotlite prancing and all join in for a flash finish. A dash of comedy chatter is thrown in, and though it's not unfunny, it's unnecessary and superfluous, though probably used as breathing spell.

Don Cummings has some highs and lows. He appears at the front of show a a temperamental artist who can't stand being laughed at and gets the laughs as he attempts to keep house serious. Routine with a rope to indicate "the cupped hand" milking for more applause gets nowhere.

On takeoff as the TV announcer demonstrating gin, Cummings manages some variations on established material. He brings a girdle into the slapstick bit, and as he gets tighter and tighter, squeezes into the undergarment. He has some bright material in his straight palaver.

Terry True's dancers are sexy in opening and closing stanzas. Mark.

Colony & Astor, London

London, Oct. 9.

Virginia Somers, Felix King Orch, Don Carlos Samba Band; Colony: $5.50 minimum; Astor: $3 minimum to 11 p.m., $3 cover thereafter.

Virginia Somers has played several click cabaret dates at these two Berkeley Square night spots and for her latest engagement has fashioned an entirely new act which she puts over in sock style. She's handsomely turned out and makes a distinctive impression on her first appearance.

Since Miss Somers first hit the London scene there has been a striking improvement in her vocal powers. She can reach the high notes and hold them effectively. She's equally adroit as a pianist and is self-accompanied for part of her routine.

Her opening song was written for by the Colony maestro, Felix King. Tune, "I Love to Sing," starts the act effectively. Apart from a Debussy selection at the piano, the major part of the act is in lighter vein. "Lesson in French" is a breezy number which pleases the customers, and a speciality, "You Can Never Be Sure," in which Miss Somers removes bits of false hair from her coiffure, proves one of the high spots. Another first-class lyric stylishly put over is "Begin the Begat," which closes the show.

At the Colony, where show was seen, cafe was doing near-capacity biz. Felix King combo background in slick style and provide the terping music alternately with Don Carlos. Myro.

Chez Paree, Chi

Chicago, Oct. 10.

Chico Marx, Betty Reilly (with Bill Russell and Roy McNair), Johnny Martin, Chez Adorables (8), Brian Farnon Orch; $3.50 minimum, $1 cover.

With Jack Carter checking out to fill a TV assignment, Chez host Dave Halper lassoed Chico Marx to fill the week's interval before the arrival of Danny Thomas. Staying over is sharp song saleslady Betty Reilly who, with house fixtures, emcee-singer Johnny Martin and the Chez Adorables, rounds out the bundle. The ingredients add up to satisfactory entertainment and b.o. returns.

While there's much that's familiar about Marx's keyboard routines, through motion pic and TV exposure, his ingrained showmanship carries him through on a round of yocks and he has difficulty ending his generous stay on the floor.

Corduroy clad comic reaches pretty far into the blue for his patter material, but it goes over with the ringsiders. It's his trickily nonchalant piano fingering that still earns the big mitts.

The duet with the violinist from the Brian Farnon band and later with the orch pianist are rib-tickling byplays, especially when they produce some typically Marx ad libs. Session is climaxed solidly with the Chico trade-Marx, "Woodpecker Song" and "On the Beach at Bali Bali."

Miss Reilly is a winner all the way as she punches through a bright variety of standards and special ditties. Blonde looker is obviously a gal who loves her work and she spreads the fun to all corners of the room. Smartly showcased throughout, she scores at will, especially with the Cuban folk song done to her own guitar backing under a flattering amber spot and her rowdy "Molasses" done in the manner of Sarah Vaughan, Margaret Truman, Bette Davis and Johnnie Ray. Effective background assists are furnished by Bill Russell at the keyboard and Roy McNair working the hand drums.

Completing the session are a couple of production numbers built around the Adorables and Martin's vocalizing which, per usual, register well. Show's musical support by the Farnon orch is smooth. Group stays on for the patron prancing. Dave.

Blue Angel, N. Y.

Dwight Fiske, Alice Ghostley with G. Wood, Anita Ellis, Charlotte Ray, Ellis Larkin Trio; $4.50 minimum.

With a preponderance of singers—four of 'em, in fact, on a four-act bill—there is sufficient diversity, however, to get this smart east side bistro off the hook. The comedy element is there, and that's the saver.

Dwight Fiske, with his pianologs and off-color lyrics, has lost none of the assurance and ability to entertain that have marked his appearances in the smart cafes over the years. Fiske, invariably funnier and cleverer than double entendre, is the main attention-getter on this layout. "Stella, the Pure White Mouse" is Fiske's opener, and it's a smart, well-done lyric on the sex life of a mouse. All his numbers are of the same genre, of course, and much of the comedy that he extracts from them are due to the manner in which he punches them home.

Alice Ghostley, featured comedienne in "New Faces," current revue on Broadway, reveals a knowing satirical talent in her songs done to the accomp of G. Wood's voice and piano, but the material fails to do justice to her own basic ability. Miss Ghostley has the kind of kisser that can project smart comedy, but the numbers she's doing here are spotty.

Charlotte Ray is a cherubic-faced comedienne with a legit voice who lampoons various types of singers in addition to doing straight characterizations. She gets over with a mobile pan, especially when she kids Jeanette MacDonald, Gladys Swartout, Lily Pons, etc. She's a musicomedy bet.

Anita Ellis, the opening act, has shown marked improvement in her song-selling, with the blues still her forte. Miss Ellis has a strong, clear voice, with neat phrasing. Her weak spot is the finale gypsy number, which doesn't seem up her alley.

The Ellis Larkin instrumental trio fills the lulls.

This is one of the few cafes in America where the lack of name power is comparatively unimportant business-wise. The talent's the thing, and the joint is always jumpin'. Kahn.

Bar of Music, L. A.

Los Angeles, Oct. 9.

Frances King & Harry Noble, Helen Boice, Felix de Cola, Benno Rubinyi, Eddie Bradford Orch (5); $1.50, $2 minimum.

Current layout at this neighborhood tavern deep in the apartment district touches both extremes and the people's choice seems to be overwhelmingly in favor of one of the roughest acts around. The skilled pianology of Felix de Cola and Benno Rubinyi finished a bad second; in between was the harmony team of Frances King and Harry Noble, top-billed but little competish to Helen Boice.

This Boice femme, who could spot Soph Tucker an extra leg on the scales, has been around before with the bluest gags heard off skid row, and the sitters are drooling in her paws. It's a wrap-up for her and about as shocking a display of bad taste as has ever made the nitery rounds. Double entendre is understatement with her and she works every line on the seamy side of sex—about as subtle as a punch in the nose. Even at a stag her gag on Drew Pearson would draw blushes. It's a poor commentary on this trade that they relish such sordid tripe.

King & Noble are at a disadvantage in this sprawling room with ceiling so low they can touch it from the stage floor. The femme member fares much better than her partner at the piano because of her low whisperings. When Noble raises his voice it detonates with metallic distortion. She's vocally his superior and their dueting on every number lacks showmanship.

Piano teaming of de Cola and Rubinyi takes a classic turn as has been their custom for years, but the table chatter and tippling just about void their artistry. Eddie Bradford's crew takes care of the leg shakers with the usual mixed sets. Helm.

Sahara, Vegas

chore picking up ovations all the way. Since the launching, the sound system has been improved considerably, but the hard-wall problem with its echo-chamber reverberation remains a thorn.

The kinetic terpology of Bolger wins cheers from his first flash around the large theatre-type stage until begoff 40 minutes later. Brief palaver, before he churns up the parquet, grabs howls from natives and others who are hep to Sahara's early history, when the comedian-hoofer slyly uncorks the line: "Imagine, several years ago this spot was nothing but acres of sand, when suddenly—Bingo!" Rib refers to original site of Sahara, a bistro called Club Bingo.

Bolger's Boffo

Following a warble of "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries," the incredible Bolger feet gyrate into high gear with a sock display. From then on, he points up his legmania with meaty chatter, interwoven with the piping of tunes. A topnotch exhibit of oldtime vaude soft-shoe is filled to the brim with caricaturing of early hoofing and its stylized torso mannerisms. Moving forward in time cycle, he spreads a nifty batch of yocks through a nostalgia kick of "Charleston," "Blackbottom," "Conga," "Rhumba" and jitterbug.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Ray Bolger, Lisa Kirk, Trio Shyretto, Reviewers (3), Buddy Pepper, Sa-Harem Dancers (12), Cee Davidson Orch (12); no cover or minimum.

Sporting gang present have their risibilities tickled with a typical Bolger panto-tapestry of "Rocky Marciano vs. Joe Walcott." Pulls a neat pace-changer by inserting his w.k. "Sad Sack" routine, loaded with chuckles. For his terpsdeforce, Bolger smacks over "Once in Love With Amy," for tremendous ovation and begoff.

Miss Kirk, a looker from all angles, with talent to match, works hard to overcome mechanical drawbacks. Gracious manner of the thrush wins tablers from the outset as she plies special "Look at the Faces." Lowdown notes from trumpet section of Cee Davidson's orch herald a barrelhouse, "How Come You Do Me Like You Do," chirped to a clincher.

She clicks off tunes she introed in several Stem musicals: "Gentleman Is a Dope," "Why Can't You Behave" and "True to You In My Own Fashion," for big mitts. In effective pin-spot setting, works on assembled libidos with "If I Could Be With You," and smash windup. Excellent accomping at the Baldwin is furnished by Buddy Pepper.

Shyretto Trio zooms forepart of the preem extravaganza into upper strata when two guys and a gal whirl about on unicycles, bikes and special wheels. Terrif balancing, plus unique terp kicks while circling high above the stage on three 12-foot unicycles, scores for whopping salvos. Femme ropes orbs via acro tricks with partner on bicycle, and on her own wheel. Applause begins to resound from first roll-on until final breathtaker—a comic inebriation scene with two males on tall one-wheeler.

Sa-Harem Dancers, eight gorgeous terpers and four tall, oomphy paraders, exercise an East Indian fantasy to spring aside the curtain. The George Moro-trained eyefuls are richly caparisoned in stunning gold lame and sequined wardrobe. Precision work presages fine terp vistas from this line for future stanzas in the Congo Room.

Reviewers, two men and a gal, were originally skedded for a slot somewhere along the line, but were cut to mere opening chant of billboard. Some provision should have been made by producer Stan Irwin to make room for a quickie turn. So short is the ditty, effort and talent seem entirely wasted.

Cee Davidson brings his batch of windjammers from Chi's Chez Paree to hit a solid musical jackpot here, both for cutting grueling show scores and with his dansapation interims. Sound is big and devoid of clinkers as he batons his 12-man crew in overture score from "Where's Charley?"

Lighting effects created by Lee Hayes from his special panel are equal in many respects to the best anywhere, including large theatre boards. No other lighting system along the Strip gives such a full spectrum of color.

All in all, producer Irwin rates solid kudos for the preem mounting. He has undoubtedly been closeted with architects and acoustical engineers by this time to kill faults of the room. Idea of theatre-stage installation in this nitery presents definite drawbacks—lack of intimacy, stage not high enough to insure perfect vision for middle-of-the-roomers or floor section table-sitters (tiers provide okay viewing, although upper sections near entrance are quite distant), and limitations for future bookings. Currently, the Sahara's amphitheatre is a tough one to play, excepting for large package revues, sight and flash acts.

Full tests of room's potential will be ascertained closely by Sahara's boniface, Milton Prell, and Irwin, when Ken Murray follows the preem fortnight with his revue. Quintet Allegro, the volatile Latin import act, has been pacted as a hoped-for "sleeper" to headline beginning Nov. 4. Buster Keaton; Day, Dawn & Dusk, Dolinoff & Raya Sisters comprise the Thanksgiving showcase. Ella Mae Morse tops two frames opening Dec. 2, with Christmas period still unsigned, but a possible Lew & Leslie Grade packet. Irwin is currently winding up a deal to bring in Donald O'Connor over New Year's.

'Old West' Thataway

Design of the Sahara is similar to Desert Inn, having last word in contemporary architecture and interior decoration. Trend is toward the ultra-modern and away from the calculated "Old West" atmosphere.

Opening-night luck turned the tables against the Sahara's casino, when big chucks of loot went thataway instead of thisaway. Tossing the cubes on the green felt were many bigshot gamblers, plus bonifaces and stockholders of other hotels on the Strip. This opening-night pastime is referred to—with occasional sardonic implications—as "Courtesy Play."

Courtesy in these quarters is mostly reversed, with the host hotel suffering plenty from the inundation of loot-loaded visitors intent upon the kill. In the history of all resort hotel openings, only the Desert Inn emerged a heavy winner after such preem visitations. However, to offset any bad feelings that might arise from reverse hot luck on the tables, gamblers ply each new spa with enough floral displays to rival Chi's historic gangland funerals. The lobby of the Sahara was filled on Tuesday night with every known design of the florists' workmanship—and each magnum flora was inscribed with "Good Luck."

Next in line to snap the portal ribbon will be the Sands, set to open in mid-December. This hospice, with former Houston oilman-gambler Jake Freedman as its major stockholder, will become another threat to talent-booking problems in Las Vegas. Jack Entratter, former Copacabana, N. Y., biggie, is holding the trigger as show producer here, and will fire the opening salvo with Danny Thomas. Already, and still two months away from opening, the Sands is contracting big names for 1953—and takes its place alongside the six hotels in a grab for choice talent lures.

On drawing boards, but still not to be discounted as future additions to the "family" of Strip glittery are several plans for half-billion-dollar caravansaries.

The long deferred Caribbean, a $9,000,000 luxury palace, will start jutting skyward south of the Last Frontier around the middle of 1953, according to current reports, and if the necessary moola can be floated. William J. Moore, Jr., a co-owner of the downtown El Cortez and former veep and general manager of the Last Frontier, is in the foreground of the Caribbean group.

Beyond the airport, eight miles from the centre of Las Vegas, a Texas oilman has purchased acreage to complete announced plans for a 10-story hotel. He claims to have no intention of installing a gambling casino. Such a hospice would be unique; and a curious addition to a town devoted almost entirely to the biz of gambling. A long-shot chance could put such a commercial hotel in the money, provided that Las Vegas continues to spiral onward and upward in its present bonanza.

On the other side of the picture, many well-entrenched gamblers rub their luck tokens and hope that nothing will go askew with future dreams of Nevada glory and its legalized games of skill and perchance. Should such a day ever arrive, brought upon by influx of mobster - controlled syndicates usurping the present political setup—the placing of the gambling measure on the ballot or arrival of heavy industry or both—gambling biz would surely crap out.

Bagatelle, London

London, Oct. 7.

Hermione Gingold with Clarry Ashton; Arnold Bailey Swingtette, Edmundo Ros Rhumba Band; $5.50 minimum.

Hermione Gingold is one of the very few British cabaret artists who rivals the top names from America as an attraction. This became evident during her nitery debut at the Cafe de Paris earlier in the year; and the tremendous turnout for her opening at this de luxe Mayfair spot reinforces the view that she is a major draw.

Although she has for many years been a foremost star in revue, she does not rely on her name alone for pull, giving considerable thought to her material, and she presents a first-class act intelligently fashioned to exploit her individual personality.

It is all original material and mostly new. Only a couple of numbers are repeated from her Cafe de Paris repertoire, and on this occasion—as on the former—she has prepped a special lyric which is apposite only to this particular room. The theme and the lyric, "What a Smart Clientele" (which comfortably rhymes with Bagatelle), set the standard for a succession of witty songs which spark consistent audience reaction.

Miss Gingold may be something of a newcomer in the cabaret field, but she's way ahead of many of the old hands in talent, style and personality. It is a quality performance in every sense of the word and there can be little doubt that operator Harry Levene will need to have the ropes up most nights during her four-week season.

With her regular accompanist Clarry Ashton at the keyboard, the backgrounding by the Arnold Bailey combo is immaculate. The Edmundo Ros aggregation, the best purveyors of rhythm music in town, alternate for dancing.

Fairmont Hotel, S. F.

(VENETIAN ROOM)

San Francisco, Oct. 11.

Penny Singleton in her first San Francisco appearance makes a striking effect. She does not capitalize on her "Blondie" pix but on a straightforward song rendition. However, much of the material should be sliced as the special stuff is a bit overpolished, perhaps fitting for more intime bistros but not in large hotel rooms.

She's especially good with the tunes she sang in "Good News." More of the same type of clever but simple things such as "Button Up Your Overcoat" would be especially effective. Pretty blonde has an effective and well-received change of pace with "Hello Young Lovers" and caps her efforts with a smash original medley titled "Big Show in Heaven" in which she portrays Eva Tanguay, Eddie Leonard, Fannie Brice, Al Jolson and Marilyn Miller.

There's a real throat-choker with her depiction of Eddie Leonard, in which she uses her hands strikingly like the late minstrel. In her impression of Marilyn Miller she also takes on much of the quality which made the late dancer such a topper. In fact, the audience is surprised by the terping qualities that Miss Singleton reveals in this skit (at least those not familiar with her hoofing background).

With more of the type of material which scored for her in musical comedy, Miss Singleton should be a likely prospect for her former field in which there is such an urgent ned for comediennes.

Sis and Sonny Arthurs are young comedy dancers who get a brisk hand, especially for their wrap-up of the steps of the hectic '20s and '30s. Ernie Hecksher, a mainstay in this room, works hard in backing the acts and does well in bringing the diners away from the tables and onto the dance floor.

Drap D'Or, Paris

Paris, Oct. 6.

Georges Ulmer, Danny Ray, Villwolit's (2), Eva & Nick, Anny Berier, Rico Creole Orch (9), Cornut Gypsies (12); $4 minimum.

Trim, gilt-lined boite is one of the smarter headline showcasers here. The Paris headquarters of Edith Piaf, Drap D'Or fills in with lesser, but still potent, toppers while she makes her commitments abroad. Bringing them in for good biz is engaging comic songster, Georges Ulmer, who has stinted stateside at the Versailles, Miss Piaf's regular stand.

Decorator Henri Rigal went all-out in this facsimile of the old "Entente Cordiale" between Henry VIII and Francois I. Half the room is in English style and the other in French to commemorate the time the two monarchs got together for a peace talk during one of their wars. Francois, wanting to be impressive, had everything done up in gold, hence the joint tag. Interior is lush, well lit and has a small stage with good visibility from all parts of the 350-seater. Champagne for four at $15 is above the regular niteries by $3 and second only to the Nouvelle Eve.

Fine dance music is given out by the Rico Creole orch and the Cornut Gypsy outfit circulates among the carriage set clientele for some fancy serenading.

Show starts at midnight with nifty, fast-talking magico by Danny Ray. Using simple props of boxes, cards and handkerchiefs, he does some mysto passes and deft tricks good for top mitting. He brings aud into it for good results. The Villwolit, an American act, are a frozen-faced duo who do rib-tickling, expressionless mime to music and sound effects of trains and cooch dancers. Expert timing and imperturbability make this a pleasant item. Followups are chirper Anny Berier and Eva & Nick (New Acts).

After a 15 minute dance interlude, Ulmer comes on for an engaging half hour. Lad is personable with an instinct for mime and timing that makes him a top performer. He does a takeoff on how various nationalities would react to being caught in a swank club without their wallet. He catches each nuance of the characters for a fine yock number. He pleasantly segues into a few chant stints with a notable presentation of his own number, "Pigalle." It's a begoff act.

Cafe is owned by Armand Corbani who runs a namesake in Marseilles. Greeting and art direction are handled by Elizabeth Dell'Adami.

Palmer House, Chi

(EMPIRE ROOM)

Chicago, Oct. 9.

"Hold Everything" revue, with Joe Howard, Leo De Lyon, Lulu Bates, Trio Bassi, Bambi Linn & Rod Alexander, McCaffrey & Susanne, Betty Lorraine & Bob De Voye, Earl Barton, Patricia Manning & Tom Morgan, Merriel Abbott Dancers (6), Nat Brandwynne Orch (12); direction and choreography, Rod Alexander; lyrics and music, Hessie Smith; scenery, Jan Scott; $3.50 minimum, $1 cover.

"Hold Everything" is a loosely knit revue using as a theme the tracing of a producer's tribulations from show's rehearsal to final presentation. The early acts emerge as a confused jumble, not due to individual performances, which are okay, but rather to the overwhelming number of singers and dancers on the relatively small floor at the same time.

Top honors are about equally divided among Joe Howard, Leo De Lyon and Trio Bassi. Octogenarian Howard, vigorous and debonair, charms the customers with several of his old faves, "Hello My Baby," and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," and after a cakewalk, leads the patrons in one of the most enthusiastic community sings Chicago has seen since songfests were popular in pic houses 20 years ago. Lulu Bates socks across a torchy "St. Louis Blues" and "After You've Gone," then she and Howard team up for an ovation-getting finale, "Goodbye My Lady Love."

Leo De Lyon, who sometimes sounds like a one-man Spike Jones band, performs some seemingly impossible vocal gymnastics. He cavorts through impressions of current pop singers, trombones and French horns, plays the piano as his voice goes from soprano to basso profundo and back again, and ends with a delightful zany satire on a film travelog. He gets yocks and applause all the way.

Trio Bassi, two men and a girl, exhibit delicate, breathtaking juggling. Lying prone, they juggle crates, balls, barrels, tables, beds and boards for solid reception.

Capable performances are given by dance teams Bambi Linn & Rod Alexander, McCaffrey & Susanne, Betty Lorraine & Bob DeVoye, and singleton Earl Barton; by vocalists Patricia Manning and Tom Morgan, and by the handsomely costumed Abbott Dancers. However, with some judicious cutting, each act would have a better chance to exhibit its wares more fully.

Nat Brandwynne's orch does a neat job of backing the show, with its sometimes tricky special music written by Hessie Smith, and on the dance sets too.

La Vie en Rose, N. Y.

(FOLLOWUP)

The European talent mart as a source for American bookings is becoming increasingly fertile, and perhaps the day will come when foreign performers in the U. S. will come much nearer to the Americans in numbers. Importing of European talent the last few years would certainly suggest that.

Lou Walters has been a notable example of an impresario bringing over fresh talent for his Latin Quarter cafes in New York and Miami Beach; the Shuberts have financed other importations, etc.—and the results have inevitably paid off.

Probably the most exciting new importation since Edith Piaf came over some years ago is Amalia, a brunet songstress from Portugal, whom Monte Proser and Milton Blackstone ferreted out in Lisbon last spring for La Vie En Rose. Amalia relies on the "fados," Portuguese folk melodies, and the simplicity, charm, voice and projection of these unusual songs should make her a top personality here with the right exploitation and word-of-mouth.

Perhaps a second hearing is needed to acclimate oneself to a performance that is unusual, but Amalia (who has dropped her last name, Rodrigues, for billing purposes) is one to bring 'em back. She sings in her native Portuguese, and also in fluent Spanish and French. Her English is faulty, but when she does a pop number like "Half as Much," she extracts all the poignancy inherent in the lyrics, and she doesn't have to apologize, as she does, to Rosemary Clooney for the latter's Columbia recording of the tune.

Amalia has expanded her numbers and overall presentation since she first opened some weeks ago at La Vie, and she is attired more tastefully in black, giving her more s.a. She possesses none of the pieces of business that popularly pass off as showmanship. Her shyness, quiet charm and projection of the lyrics, with a big voice, are her showmanship. She is one performer who knows exactly how to deal with cafe drunks—with performance.

Amalia is a holdover at La Vie, which brings back Charlie Farrell for his second date in less than a year. The Miami Beach performer (ex-Endor & Farrell) is a somewhat paradoxical booking along with Amalia, in view of his off-color lyrics in the Florida idiom. But Farrell has a big following, and he manages to get laughs with his Florida "fados."

Bimbo's 365 Club, S.F.

San Francisco, Oct. 11.

Artie Dann, Jon & Inga Zerby, Denise, The Appletons, Dorothy Dorben Dancers (16), Derle Knox Orch (8); $2 minimum.

This melange is convincing evidence that talent can be used to supplement a show to good effect rather than spark it. Basically, this is a succession of production numbers with a group of acts interpolated to provide highlighting. Flouncy costuming, bouncy terp routines, zippy music are the main dish, with pacing and tempo cutting a big figure.

It's surprisingly good, and when the specialities are poured on as an extra helping the sum total spells out one of the best packages that has hit the local stand in some time. Nitery impresarios who are worried about the high cost of talent can take a page out of this score-sheet. This is a standard act compote, in the low-budget category, but looks and acts like upper-shelf merchandise. Production and imagination are the answer.

Opening breeze, which is mostly a Can Can routine with the six chorines in white and the four showgals in black, provides a flash. Much movement in this item is sparked by first-class music from the orch with the Frenchy motif well projected. The routine draws a good mitt both for looks and listening.

Jon & Inga Zerby, she in an abbreviated costume, are better than par in their terping, with their lifts particularly garnering the nod. They are smooth workers and cut an ornamental figure in the seance

Denise, blonde thrush whose contrib is entirely in French, is adequate if not socko, but she provides a pretty bridge to the next ensemble outpouring which recaptures the gaiety of the proceedings and segues into the Appletons, a trio which compounds an Apache of much vigor and considerable humor and novelty.

Comic Artie Dann's chatter also succeeds in holding the customers in line. He gets his laughs and builds as he goes along, his mimicry particularly paying off.

All the foregoing is good standard appeal and is well spliced between the production items, which carry the chief load. Finale, which again finds the girls costuming, routining and choreography as the big appeal, wraps it all up happily.

Derle Knox's crew plays a big part in giving the entire session zip and zest, with Dorothy Dorben entitled to a hefty slice of kudos for a top job of production and staging.

Sheraton Plaza, Boston

Boston, Oct. 11.

Myrus, The Foursome, Johnny Turnbull Orch (7), Paul Clement Trio; Hub Room, Mon.-thru-Thurs., $1.50 cover; Oval Room, Fri.-Sat., $2.50 cover.

Current package which ties in the uncanny mentalism of Myrus and lively antics of the youthful Foursome, mixed pairs who unleash an uninhibited sesh of song and dance that adds up to slick entertainment with biz correspondingly slick.

Myrus, held over from previous lineup, continues to baffle and convert skeptics with his ability to reveal the question on his subject's mind. Guy picks a folded card from a box, reads the initials on outside and requests subject to stand, meanwhile destroying the card. He then proceeds to disclose the written question and offers advice. It's handled with overtones of humor and clicks solidly.

The Foursome, new in this area, scores strongly with group of songs teeing off with "Love Is Sweeping the Country;" an original, "Rustle of the Bustle," which purveys a Gay '90s flavor with the group cavorting through terp routines ranging from soft-shoe to tango. Heftiest mitt action is garnered by a fastie stepped to "Mr. Anthony's Boogie," which segues almost immediately into the finale, "Breathless." Latter is sung and danced with group sitting and leaning on chairs apparently exhausted, and judging from pace of boogie, group is undoubtedly kidding on the square. The brief stint has nifty eye and ear appeal.

Backgrounding is competently handled by Johnny Turnbull's crew, who more than compensate for "sitting out" Myrus. Turnbull alternates for customer dansapation with Paul Clement Trio, a fave entertaining combo who moved into this room following a summer stand at hotel's adjacent Merry-Go-Round bar.

Elie.

Mapes Skyroom, Reno

Reno, Oct. 9.

Dick Haymes, Allen & Ashton, Wanda & Armand, Mapes Skylettes (7), Eddie Fitzpatrick Orch; no cover or minimum.*

Dick Haymes opened with a bad cold but the house was warm to his baritone, which seemed even more resonant with the code in the node. "I Feel a Song Coming On" kicks off his stanza, and the songs coming on blend nicely from rhythm to tender ballads. Packet includes "'S Wonderful," then a slow "Somebody Loves Me" which quiets the crowd. Al Lerner, as piano accompanist, paints an interesting background for ballads like this, and he colors up orchestrations too. The 88 sounds best behind Haymes on "The Very Thought of You," "I Only Have Eyes for You" and "It Might as Well Be Spring" added to the list pretty well describes the show.

Haymes dresses without flair for a pleasant change; no string tie or satin suit—just a nice tux with bowtie. He manhandles the mike, but not objectionably, dragging it around and bending with it. Singing to individuals, he doesn't leave many out and achieves a nice intimate mood.

Winding up, Haymes invites customers to dance and, as they cruise by, to toss their requests at him. This is a friendly gesture but is not handled with proper regard for limitations. Haymes at times stands for a full 20 minutes with a chorus of first one song and then another, until customers are so used to the voice in the air, they almost forget it. Just a few minutes of this obviously friendly pitch would be fine.

Allen & Ashton are a youthful and energetic dance duo who are both interesting and fun to watch. Bebe Allen elicits socko choreogles with stems which she waves excitingly. The couple use some eye-widening, sexy sequences in good taste.

Their forte is satire via burlesque of Vivien Leigh and Marlon Brando in "Streetcar." This has Miss Allen in an offish blonde wig and pathetic pink negligee, while Ashton does his comedy in a torn shirt, yelling "Stella."

Wanda & Armand pull the strings on a half dozen unimaginative puppets. Act lacks originality.

Quaglino's and Allegro, London

London, Oct. 10.

Lynne Bretonn, Tibor Kunstler Hungarian Gypsy Orch, Rudi Rome Quintet, Fela Sowande Piano; $5 minimum.

Back home after some four years in the States, Lynne Bretonn gets her first local cabaret dates by doubling in these two Piccadilly spots. Gal is a looker with personality, warmth and a strong set of pipes. That the act doesn't quite make the grade is due to her material.

It's not until her closing number that the chanteuse shows her strength and ability. She does "Honey Bun" with verve and style making a solid impact. This type of song is obviously her metier and illustrates how easily she gets out of her depth with some of her other tunes. A particularly unhappy choice is her table-hopping selection, "Kidnapped," which takes her out of range of more than half the customers for most of the time.

There is an above-average idea behind a composite number in which she describes how some noted composers might have put a nursery rhyme to music. The rhyme chosen is "Mary Had a Little Lamb," done as per Rodgers & Hammerstein ("South Pacific"), Bizet ("Carmen") and Gilbert & Sullivan ("The Mikado").

Show is trimmed to neat 20 minutes and when caught at Quaglino's was pulling good average trade. The three house combos alternate between the two rooms, with Rudi Rome's quintet backgrounding the show.

Ice Show Reviews

Ice Cycles of '53

port; Shirley Winter and Lawrence rate heavy mitting in "Gypsy Gold," opening production, as they leap, spin and glide in gypsy costumes, abetted by the Ice Cyclettes and Ice Cycliers.

"Jingle Belles" also features the 32-girl line in red-and-white ballet briefs in a Christmas theme, starring diminutive Chuckie Stein as a midget Santa Claus and six Yuletide trees shuttling over the frozen floor.

"Juke Box Jamboree" offers early tunes of early '20s as William Brown gets off a jump-and-jive routine, Setta & Labrecque disport as Charleston champs (one clad in flapper fashion), while a coonskin coated boy-girl line adds collegiate flavor.

Esco Larue does a boff comic session throughout "Dance Date," disrupting glide sessions by Ronnie Baker and Majorie Taylor. Sans skates, Larue emerges from the crowd onto the ice for flash pix, only to join Joe Setta and Peggy Bauer in a sock comedy routine shown this season in "Ice Capades" before Larue and his cohorts rejoined "Cydes."

Impressive "State of the Union" production moves fast to Raymond Scott's "Powerhouse" score and effective strob use for color. Precision of the Cyclettes lags here as the 32 femme skaters fall behind in a ragged line in attempting a rapid, straight-lined circling of the huge arena.

"Teddy Bears' Picnic" is a crowd-pleasing turn by Labrecque, Setta, Dwyer and Stein in pink-furred bear costumes, wherein the bruin quartet blades easily to theme tunes, "Holiday," "Mulberry Bush" and "Old MacDonald Had a Farm," and rates heavy mitting of begoff proportions.

Canadian champs Jane Kirby and Marshall Garrett are spotted in "Birds of a Feather," heavily plumed staging that rates vocal admiration from payees as the Cyclettes present a downy vision. To this spectacle du Bief adds a ballet turn, scoring heavily in a difficult dance on skates affixed to ballet slippers.

"Minstrel Daze" utilizes strob lighting to good effect as the entire cast romps to "Liza," "Darktown Strutters' Ball" and "I'm Just Wild About Harry" in a sock strutting finale.

Solo turns between production numbers rate large kudos for du Bief's cartwheels; Willie Kall's pratfalls as a comic ballerina and Garrett's top blading in sequin suit to "Old Black Magic." Juggler Trixie's bit with hats, balls, plates and mouth-stick gets a heavy salvo, as does her rope-skipping session on skates.

Familiar act here is Joe Jackson, Jr., with his tramp's rags, erratic bicycle and chick panto session that gets bellies in a short stint.

Newest "Cycles" is a talented package that should garner a hefty b.o. on tour. Appeal could be increased, however, by adding time to abbreviated comic turns between production numbers.

example, it was felt that the $2.50 weekly on the policy should be reduced considerably. Board also sought elimination of a 90-day cancellation clause, and broker responded with an escalator clause hiking rates in that event. There was also the alternative of a 180-day cancellation clause, if union would sign a three-year deal in lieu of a one-year policy.

Other insurance plan was submitted by board member Murray White, who is also a broker. White's plan called for cheaper weekly and annual rates, but higher daily or club-date fees. As a matter of fact, union's counsel recommended acceptance of this plan as a safer proposition than Lloyds, but board ruled otherwise.

Trusteeship

Discussions were initiated to institute a trusteeship and governing committees for the welfare fund, which could conceivably be a tremendous proposition in a few years (see separate insurance story), but time prevented other than a sketchy setup. As a matter of fact, treasurer Rex Weber had to threaten to resign his post in order to initiate discussion on that subject. He said that his position as treasurer would be untenable without a concrete plan to govern all that coin.

On another important insurance item, concerning the $500 life policy for paid-up members, AGVA voted to study the proposition as to whether the union's welfare fund should be the insurance carrier. Roughly, the union shelled out $85,000 last year in premiums. Insurance company distributed $59,000 on 118 deaths during 1951.

Delegates named to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America are Dewey Barto, Manny Tyler and Jack Irving. Alternates are exprexy Georgie Price and Jerry Wayne.

Hangs Onto Models

The Board voted not to relinquish its claimed jurisdiction of models, which field it will seek to organize in the future. Jurisdiction is also claimed by the Teamsters Union and Television Authority.

In the outdoor field, the meeting voted to rescind the special initiation fee of $50 and revert to the regular $100 for principals and $50 for chorus.

Chairman of the meet for the greater part of the time was Jackie Bright, who had to leave before close of the session for a date in Philadelphia. Tom Martin was chairman for most of the time afterward. A good parliamentarian, latter was able to cut through much of the red tape, get to the heart of the matter, and reduce the interminable discussion.

The heroes of the marathon were Alvin Brandt, recording secretary, and Harold Swiss, stenotypist, both of whom sat through the entire four-day session without relief.

Agency Extension

for licenses from those that apply directly to the union and giving the paper free to those that come in through ARA or a similar organization. ARA dues are $50 and hence there is no lesser cost to organized agents.

Originally, notice of termination was given by the union to ARA in July for a September expiration. It had been extended to today (Wed.) and is now on a week-to-week footing.

Meanwhile, agents and union are skedded to work on a new agency code to be known as Rule B-53, supplanting Rule B-51. Progress on that code will determine how long the weekly agreement will be in effect.

Many elements in AGVA were in favor of immediate termination and taking on all agencies, who had expressed themselves as opposed to getting franchises except through ARA. Percenters had threatened to continue dealing with union members even if they weren't franchised to do so. A fight along those lines could have either meant the end of the agencies or the end of the union. However, they recognized that the battle would be unpleasant and, as a result, the majority voted for the compromise.

Actually, it's felt that ARA is the gainer, since a new agreement will come as the result of mutual bargaining, which the organization said was their objective in the first place. They stated they opposed unilateral agreements by AGVA or anyone else. As such, they hope to make their present membership see the necessity of continuing an agency association.

Dallas Fair

"Show Boat" hadn't fared too well through Tuesday (7) and had mulled closing. However, Dallas Day (8) improved with half houses at the three shows. Biz increased since, with a three-fourths fill for six stagings and one capacity house (1,780) on Sunday. Even with a 16-day nut of $21,000, aside from his original investment, Terrell stated over the weekend he feels the local tryout will be a successful experiment, though he may only break even.

Cuffo deals closing week include Liberace, Margaret Whiting and the four Aces in a Cotton Bowl show tonight (Tues), Paul Lavalle conducting 4,000 massed high school musicians in a gratis concert in the Bowl and the closing Sunday night (19) second annual non-sectarian religious festival in the Cotton Bowl, when Dr. Daniel A. Poling, N. Y. editor The Christian Herald, will be the speaker. Fair offers a free gate at 6 p.m. for the expo's closing religioso.

adaptation of five F. Scott Fitzgerald stories.

At Paramount, John Byram, head of the play department, says the new season looks better than last year's, but he deplores the fact that "there still is a great dearth of good plays." Paramount owns the film rights to the French play, "Cuisine des Anges," which it bought for $16,000 and which Sam and Bella Spewack are adapting. Par as well as the rest of the studios are biding their time, waiting for the season to shape up, before making any moves. Metro and Par are reportedly interested in "Mrs. McThing," Helen Hayes starrer, one of the year's hits.

Play purchases at 20th so far this year include "The Number," for $35,000, and "The Late Christopher Bean," a 1932 production, and a moderate success at the time, which cost the studio $25,000; 20th also bought "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" for $150,000 and paid $250,000 for "Call Me Madam."

Columbia schedule is well stocked with films based on plays, thanks to the Stanley Kramer tie-up. "The Happy Time" is next in line for the Music Hall, N. Y., slot and goes into national release in November. "The Four Poster" opens today (Wed.) with a dual premiere at the Victoria and Sutton theatres. Timing is unusual since the Jan de Hartog play is still running on Broadway.

Upcoming Kramer properties include "Member of the Wedding" and "Eight Iron Men," the latter based on the play, "A Sound of Hunting." Due for Columbia filming are "Pal Joey" and "Happy Birthday."

M-G purchases this year have included "Kiss Me, Kate," "Brigadoon" and "Remains to Be Seen." M-G policy of not investing in pre-production has been firm for several years. Last instance came with "Command Decision," which Metro later filmed.

Play department heads in New York keep looking hard and long at television, but the medium so far has come up with little or nothing for the filmites. Half-hour programs, the usual format, are generally considered too restrictive to suit Hollywood purposes.

House Reviews

Apollo, N. Y.

rent Apollo sesh. Headlining Bullmoose Jackson orch and Four Tunes, a vocal combo, work through their sets at an okay pace but never get moving in high gear. House demands plenty of drive and excitement before it loosens up and gets off its hands. Response throughout was nothing more than cordial at show caught.

Jackson, who toots sax, heads a 10-man crew (four reed, three rhythm and three brass) in a mediocre rhythm number, "Disk Jockey Bounce," for the teeoff. Orch is spotted later in a so-so songalog including "Nosey Joe," "My Love Belongs to You" and "Let Me Love You All Night Long." Jackson handles the vocal on all for fair results.

Four Tunes are a pleasant warbling crew who dish out a varied song set in the closing niche. Boys are expert harmony technicians and deliver in class style. Such tunes as "Route 66," "I Went to Your Wedding" and "Marie" show them off to advantage. They earn an appreciative response and came back for two encores, "I Wonder" and "Cool Water."

Tapsters Spic & Span open briskly in a brief turn that displays their fancy footwork. Guy and gal work smoothly through some slick challenges. It's a first-rate bit. Baton twirler Joe Chisholm follows with an overlong act that's heavy on patter and short on his deft finger manipulations. What he does with a baton is standout vaude that's sometimes dissipated by the unnecessary vintage gab. Crackshot leads the Apollo yock company (three guys and a gal) through a tired sketch that breaks through via occasional slapstickery.

Songstress Wini Brown, of the breathless blues school, wins with her set. Pipes are easy on the ear and she displays sock styling on such numbers as "Deed I Do," "How Deep Is the Ocean" and "Be Anything But Be Mine."

Cyclists Annel & Brask, from Denmark, are reviewed under New Acts.

End to Loading of 'Inferior Plays' Promised Hub Guild Subscribers

Boston, Oct. 14.

Subscribers to the American Theatre Society season of eight plays in Boston are due to receive greater consideration, Lawrence Langner, co-director of the Theatre Guild, said during a visit here last week.

The practice of loading "inferior plays" and "weak touring attractions" onto the eight-play ATS series here will be prohibited next season, Langner said.

Last year, Boston ATS subscribers were unhappy about at least two items: the Jose Greco Ballet, which in no wise could be considered a play or musical comedy, and the Clare Boothe disappointment, "Child of the Morning." This year, ATS subscribers found their season opening with "Bernardine," new play by Mary Chase, liked only by one critic, with ATS members also receiving "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn."

For some time, it's been talk here that booking pressure is often brought to bear on the Theatre Guild subscription to force the inclusion of weak plays into the season, regardless of subscribers.

"I have talked this whole matter over with Lee Shubert and he agrees that the only way the American Theatre Society can be kept strong in each city is to preserve this valuable subscription system from any abuse," Langner said.

Rushing the Trade

Another condition in Boston which has aroused comment, all unfavorable, is the practice of rushing subscribers through the whole eight plays before the season is half over.

Last year, ATS subscribers were included in three bookings which required them to be back in the theatre every week for three straight weeks, and, actually, overlapping—for the ATS here is a two-week subscription, and the first-week subscribers would be seeing their second play while the second weekers were going to their first play. System provoked Guild subscribers to some angry comment.

This year, too, ATS subscribers are being marched to one play right after another. They were attending "Jane" last week, and the "Jane" subscribers for the first week will be seeing "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" this week, and then they will be starting in all over again to see "The Shrike" the week after. "The Shrike," opening here Oct. 20, is the fourth ATS play of the season—half the season is thus exhausted before Election Day.

ATS subscription for Boston is around $13,000 for two weeks. Langner said he hoped it would increase, saying chances for a larger Guild would be improved when the practice of booking weak shows had been eliminated.

Ballet Theatre Nicked In Chi by Sudden Upped Fee From Musicians Union

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Ballet Theatre, which comes to the Opera House Oct. 23 for 14 performances, faces an upped tab for musicians. American Federation of Musicians last week informed Opera House manager J. Charles Gilbert that the tooters would cost $24 per performance, instead of the former $21. A spokesman for the union said this pay hike is "in line with the general increase for that type of engagement."

Notification was given Gilbert without any warning or discussion on the matter. When queried, he said he didn't care to make a statement, or get involved with union officials, but admitted there had been no arbitration or bargaining in the matter. In addition to the 20 musicians which Ballet Theatre carries on tour, Gilbert also has to engage 20 local men for the engagement. Sudden upped scale will add $1,000 to $1,500 to the engagement, which hadn't been figured into the budget in advance.

Union spokesman also advised that as attractions such as opera, concert and jazz are booked into the Opera House, union will determine what scale applies, "just as we've done in the past."

Looks Like Open Season On 'Moulin Rouge' Menus

Leon Mantin, European impresario of femme shows, is now in America, prepping one of his revues for Canada, trying to place some of his European novelty acts in the States, and seeking acts for his Continental troupes as well.

Mantin, who was connected with the Mogador Club in N. Y. in 1929, has been packaging femme revues abroad for many years, playing them in Europe and in Orient. Two such revues are currently touring Europe. A revue of his titled "Moulin Rouge" played Bombay and Calcutta as recently as eight months ago.

In connection with the last-named, Mantin and his partner, Eleanore Ninon, claim U. S. copyright on three musical sketches, "Frenchie," "Madcap of Montmartre" and "Moulin Rouge," issued Jan. 2, 1932, and running for 28 years, or until 1960.

(Arthur Lesser is prepping a Broadway musical, "Moulin Rouge," based on the Pierre LaMure novel of that title, while John Huston has just finished filming the same novel in Europe, with Jose Ferrer, which is planned for indie release under that name.)

Bel Geddes Out Of 'Moon' Till London

Barbara Bel Geddes won't return to her original co-starring role in "The Moon Is Blue" until the play opens in London. Janet Riley, who recently stepped up from understudy to succeed Maggie McNamara, will continue as femme lead for the duration of the run at the Henry Miller, N. Y.

Otto Preminger, who staged the F. Hugh Herbert comedy, is currently visiting Europe, and will stop off in London to arrange a West End presentation under the joint management of Gilbert Miller and the Broadway presenters of the show, Aldrich & Myers, in association with Julius Fleischmann. Donald Cook and Barry Nelson, still playing their original co-starring roles on Broadway, will join Miss Bel Geddes in the London edition when the time comes.

With the original company still doing profitable business at the Miller and likely to do so at least until around Thanksgiving, the tentative idea is to continue the run until then. It would be closed at that time, it's figured, and the three stars and perhaps the physical production would be sent to London for an opening during the Christmas holidays.

Miss Bel Geddes, who left the Broadway cast May 31, had been slated to return Oct. 1, but asked and received a waiver of the agreement. Presumably the management was partly influenced in okaying the request by the possibility that the actress' return to the show at this point in the run (85 weeks), might reduce the profit, since her salary (10% of the gross with a $1,500 guanantee), might not pay off in boxoffice draw.

There's an outside prospect that another "Moon" company may be formed to tour territory not yet played. The troupe that recently played the Coast, with David Niven and Diana Lynn as top stars, had been booked through the northwest, southwest and some unplayed areas in the midwest. However, it had to close because Niven and Miss Lynn had picture commitments. If they or other suitable stars are available, the play might be sent out again to the unplayed territory, as the physical production is in storage and the cost would be relatively low.

Heavy Direct Mail Drive On to Put 'Pickwick' Over For Playwrights Group

Playwrights Co. is using one of the biggest direct mail campaigns in legit history in an effort to put over "Mr. Pickwick," at the Plymouth, N. Y. The management is also tying in the comedy in display ads with its other current Broadway production, "The Fourposter," at the Barrymore, N. Y.

"Mr. Pickwick," dramatized by Stanley Young from the Dickens stories, drew an even split in the notices in the New York dailies, with an especially enthusiastic review from Brooks Atkinson, of the Times. However, it apparently has limited popular appeal and there are no boxoffice names in the cast, so the attempt is being made to sell it via the direct mail drive.

Besides circulating special groups, such as the Dickens Society, literary organizations and colleges and schools, the mailing lists of the Theatre Guild, American National Theatre & Academy and Gilbert Miller have been borrowed. In addition, the N. Y. City Center list, reportedly containing more than 100,000 names, was also used.

Although the success or failure of the campaign isn't yet indicated, the effort is figured to have had some response at the b.o.

PARKS-GARRETT TAKE STRAWHATTER ON TOUR

Rochester, Oct. 14.

Larry Parks and Betty Garrett (Mrs. Parks) will tour this fall in "Anonymous Lover," the Vernon Sylvaine comedy in which they co-starred last summer on the strawhat circuit. The show, produced by the couple's attorney, Lou Mandel, is booked for the Auditorium here Nov. 13-15.

"Lover" had previously been announced for Broadway presentation this fall, but that plan was abandoned after the silo tryout.

Kaufman, Yorke Switch Stints on Touring 'Wagon'

Detroit, Oct. 14.

Wolfe Kaufman and John Yorke, doubling as co-producers and respective pressagent and company manager of the touring "Paint Your Wagon," have had to switch the latter assignment. Since both are members-at-large of the Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers, they're permitted to handle either stint.

Situation arose because Kaufman, stumbling on the curbstone outside the Cass Theatre here the night the musical opened, broke a small bone in his foot and has since been hobbling around on crutches. So Yorke, a general and company manager for years, has had to go ahead of the show to handle publicity.

Wheeler-'Ozarks' Tour Bows With Penna. Stands

John Kenley's touring production of "Maid in the Ozarks," starring Bert Wheeler, opens Oct. 28-29 in Pittston, Pa., then plays a one-nighter in York, Pa., followed by a two-nighter in Harrisburg. Then the comedy goes to the Erlanger, Philly, for a fortnight starting Nov. 3.

Show is playing at a $2 top.

Equity Meet With 'Friendly' Strawhat Operators Stirs Barn Assn. Ire

Another storm is blowing up between Actors Equity and strawhat managers. Latest situation involves a meeting last week between union officials and a group of "handpicked" barn operators to discuss summer stock conditions.

Leaders of the Stock Managers Assn., which claims to represent 85% of the active strawhatters, assert their organization was not invited to the confab, but that Equity limited the producer participants to those who failed to protest the union's stock policies last summer. It was a similar move of selecting only "friendly" managers for discussions last spring that aroused violent opposition from SMA.

According to Herbert L. Kneeter, embattled operator of the Norwich (Conn.) Summer Theatre, Equity's attitude on the entire stock situation is exemplified by an article in the current (October) issue of the union's house organ. He says, and several other prominent barn producers agree with him, that the piece in question, in the form of a report by acting executive secretary Angus Duncan to the annual union membership meeting last June, is completely misleading on the question of stock.

False Picture

"That report gives a false picture of Equity's action in relation to the Stock Managers Assn.," Kneeter asserts. "It gives the impression that Equity consulted with representative stock producers last spring and summer, but the fact is that the union has consistently refused to negotiate with the SMA or recognize us as representative of the barns.

"The purpose of meetings between the union and producers should be to try to find a common meeting ground for actors and managers, most of whom are SMA members, to bring about healthier stock conditions. Instead, these meetings have been used to impose conditions arbitrarily on the producers. In many cases those who lay down the law in this way have no real conception of conditions in

Margo Jones Readies New Season's November Bow

Dallas, Oct. 14.

Rehearsals started here yesterday (13) for the local season of Margo Jones and her Theatre '52. Season will open Nov. 3 with "Goodbye, Your Majesty," by Vivian Cornell, which will run for three weeks.

Other productions during the season will include "Hamlet," "The Rising Heifer," "The Last Island," "Uncle Marston," "The Day's Mischief" and "The School for Scandal."

Company this fall will consist of Dick Ewell, Patricia Barclay, Rex Everhart, Martha Bumpas, Norma Winters, Edwin Whitner, John Munson, Charles Braswell, Mary Dell Roberts and Evelyn Bettis.

Staff members will include Dale Clement, designer; James Pringle, technical director; Norman Howard, stage manager; Vern Armstrong, assistant to business manager Roy Somlyo; Mary Dolen, boxoffice treasurer, and Bill Dolan and Fred Hoskins, production assistants.

Ramsey Burch will be associate director for the group.

Backers Got No 'Climate' Gander

Script of "The Climate of Eden," the new Moss Hart play, was not shown to prospective backers of the Joseph M. Hyman-Bernard Hart production. As result, several of the management's regular investors refused to participate in this venture. However, the $75,000 capital (plus 20% overcall requested last week) was raised without difficulty.

Curious angle of the situation was that the backers who declined to go along, explained that their reason was that they normally invest in legit shows primarily as a sporting proposition rather than on a money-making basis. They are willing to and sometimes do put coin in a play they like artistically, even though it may be a dubious commercial prospect. But they insist on having the satisfaction of using their own judgment on the matter.

Reason Hyman and Hart declined to show the "Climate" script was that they believe such a method of financing frees a management's hands to do plays it selects, without having to get approval from numerous outsiders. As various people in the trade feel, the proper basis for investing in a play is confidence in the judgment, taste, ability and integrity of the producers and author, not in trying to dope a script's boxoffice potential or outguess the critics and theatregoing public.

"Climate" was dramatized by Hart from a novel, "Shadows Move Among Them," by Edgar Mittelholzer. The adaptor is staging the show, which is currently playing a tryout tour prior to opening Nov. 13 at the Martin Beck, N. Y.

GAXTON-WARING NAMED TO HEAD LAMBS CLUB

William Gaxton, a former Shepherd of The Lambs, has been returned to that post, with Fred Waring, also a former Shepherd, elected as the Boy.

Gaxton replaces Bert Lytell, who had been Shepherd for the last five years and declined to run again. Waring replaces Walter Greaza as the Boy.

Other officers of the actors-showmen's organization, elected for one-year terms, are Bobby Clark, corresponding secretary; Herman Phillips, recording sec; James Meighan, treasurer, and Harold Hoffman, librarian. Named to three-year directorships were Earl Benham, Joseph S. Buhler, Leo Soloman, Conrad Nagel and Harry Hershfield.

Wing Seeks Lecture Sub On Lawrence Costume Series for Actresses

Course to instruct young actresses how to dress attractively offstage as well as on, which was suggested by Gertrude Lawrence and was to have been conducted by her, may be offered with another star as teacher if the American Theatre Wing can find a suitable candidate. Miss Lawrence had intended to start the course this fall, but her death several weeks ago intervened.

According to Mrs. Martin Beck, Wing head, Miss Lawrence had the idea of the instruction after noting that many potentially attractive young actresses fail to look their best because they wear unbecoming clothes. This was true not only in restaurants or on the street but also in job-hunting visits to producers' offices, she observed. The star felt that the ability to dress attractively was not so much a matter of budget, as primarily a question of taste and special knowledge.

After approaching the Wing last spring with the suggestion of offering such instruction, Miss Lawrence was persuaded to conduct the course herself, sandwiching it in between her performances in "King and I," at the St. James, N. Y., and her acting classes at Columbia U. She also conceived the idea of getting several top New York apparel shops to cooperate in the project by lending items from stock.

Sillman's O'seas O.O.

Leonard Sillman, producer of "New Faces of 1952," at the Royale, N. Y., sails Friday (17) on the United States for a business trip to England. While abroad he'll confab with Hermione Gingold about the possibility of starring in a new revue to be produced this season by John Murray Anderson and him.

He's due back in about two-three weeks.

Boston Herald's Elinor Hughes Raps Censorship Based on 'Moldy Blue Laws'

Boston, Oct. 14.

Hub censorship, which hasn't hit the headlines for some time, was the target of a blast by Herald drama critic Elinor Hughes, who devoted her entire Sunday (12) article to lambasting the "ridiculous" antics of local watchdogs of citizens' morals. Terming it a "depressing manifestation of the everlasting bogeyman of Hub theatre, censorship," Miss Hughes slammed the "omniscience and omnipotence" of the censor, inquiring "by what right does any one man exercise such capricious authority?"

Blast was prompted by the announcement that "See the Jaguar," originally skedded for a Hub preem would bypass the city as a result of many deletions and changes in script before it would be okayed by the censor. Script had been forwarded to the censor's office several weeks ago by the scripter N. Richard Nash and producer Lemuel Ayers, who figured it expedient to obtain the censor's views before undertaking the expense involved in presenting a new play here.

Play, in verse, would lose much of its continuity, it's claimed, if offending (to censor) lines were deleted, which resulted in decision of the producers to bypass Hub in favor of Philadelphia. Cancellation of this play, plus Moss Hart's previous decision to bypass Hub with his "Climate of Eden," rather than risk censorship, resulted in Miss Hughes' article pointing up the untenable situation faced by local theatregoers.

Miss Hughes wound up stating, "the public is far more intelligent and possessed of better taste than our self-appointed regulators think, being interested in first-class entertainment, not pornography, obscenity of whatever else we are presumably being saved from. The ticket buyers are the final arbiters of taste, and they do not need nor should have to put up with civic interference prompted by outdated blue laws grown moldy with time."

Jap-Peopled 'Butterfly' Charms at City Center With Exotic Color, Song

As result of novelty appeal of its "Madame Butterfly" production, which is peopled mainly with members of the Fujiwara Opera Co. of Tokyo as guests, the N. Y. City Opera Co. has skedded another special matinee, in addition to the Oct. 18 matinee. performance. Jap troupe appeared for the first time at City Center, N. Y., last Thursday (9), to a sellout house that was charmed by the proficiency, color and native costuming of the group. Three roles were taken by American members of the Center group; all the others, plus femme chorus, were taken by the Japs.

Fujiwara troupe is here on a very limited visit, under a special American Guild of Musical Artists working permit, working at scale. Jap government is paying transportation both ways. In addition to the three N. Y. appearances, troupe will sing once each in Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, then head for home, to open its regular season in Tokyo Nov. 15. It hopes to get bids to return for a longer stay next spring or next season.

Center performance last week was one of the most unusual ever given at the house. Three American artists sang in Italian; the Butterfly (Harue Miyake) sang in Italian part time (when with the Americans) and in Japanese when with her own people, as throughout the second act. Other Jap mmbers sang in Japanese. Performance didn't clash at all on this account, while the charm and stage appeal of the visitors was very marked.

Male Nip singers weren't distinguished, but Miss Miyake proved a gifted artist, with a sweet though not over-strong voice, well schooled and placed. Shizuko Kawasaki, as Suzuki, also impressed. On the American side, Rudolf Petrak was a resounding, lyric Pinkerton and Richard Torigi a resonant, warming Sharpless. Conductor Joseph Rosenstock (who directed opera in Japan before the war) meshed the varied stage and orchestra forces for a beguiling, impressive performance.

Haas, Knill to Produce N.Y. News Staffer's Melo

Dick Haas, formerly a production aide with producer Herman Levin, and C. Edwin Knill, general manager for John C. Wilson and Alfred de Liagre, Jr., have formed a partnership to produce "Bag of Dreams," a three-character melodrama by former pressagent James P. Davis, now a member of the N. Y. Daily News staff.

Producers hope to put the show into rehearsal early December for a Broadway opening in mid-January after a short tryout tour. It's budgeted at $50,000.

U.S.-Authored British Success Is Seen Closing In London; House Lacking

"The Troublemakers," melodrama by U. S. author George Bellack which recently opened auspiciously in London, will probably have to fold there next week, because the theatre is being taken over by an incoming show and no other acceptable house is available. The play drew generally rave notices and has been building to hit proportions, but was given its exit notice before business climbed above the stop-clause level.

Opening Sept. 16 at the Strand in the West End, after a tryout at Brighton, the George Bellack drama about a murder of a U. S. college student by a group of drunken fellow-students, drew mostly fine reviews and became a conversational topic among London playgoers. Broadway legit-TV actor Gene Lyons is starred, and the play was presented by American producers Hal Cooper and Peter Glenn, in partnership with British manager Leslie Linden.

The one-setter involved a production cost of $14,000 and needs about $3,900 to break even, grossed $1,960 the first week, $2,479 the second week and was rapidly picking up at the b.o. It also had numerous theatre party bookings from the latter part of October and most of November. However, the first two weeks were under the stop-limit, and although the general practice in London is to give shows

LAMBS FETE CATLETT AT 1ST 'SEIDEL NITE'

The Lambs Club feted one of its best-loved members Saturday night (11) when it put on a special entertainment for vet comedian Walter Catlett at the Lambs' New York clubhouse. The occasion was the club's first "Seidel Night" of the season, with Catlett especially imported from Hollywood for the event.

It was one of the sockiest shows of its type ever put on by the Lambs, with the comic putting on a very funny entertainment, off the cuff, that provided the evening's highlight. He told of his experiences in the theatre through the years. Not the least of the laugh producers was his stories of how he trouped with the late Frank Bacon, a performer who "wore squeaky shoes for bad parts."

Catlett, one of the great alltime clowns of stage and screen, about whom are told stories that have long since stamped him as a near-legend in show biz, was honored by a show that was niftily emceed by Jack Waldron, a longtime hand at pacing any bill. The rest of the layout included Art Fowler, ukulele; The Great Blackstone, magico; comedians Romo Vincent and Bert Wheeler. The finale comprised a quintet singing song hits from the "Walter Catlett Album," from shows of the past with which he was associated. The quintet comprised Bob Shafer, George Britton, Mark Dawson, Jack Whiting and Jack Mann, with Harlan Dixon on for the hoofing.

"Low Jinks," a traditional afterpiece entertainment, was emceed by Mickey Alpert. Eddie Weber pianoed, as usual, for both portions of the show.

Indiana U. Series Sold Out Five Weeks Ahead

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 14.

For the first time in 13 years, Indiana U. series has been sold out five weeks before the opening event. Huge 5,000-seater will house eight events, legit and longhair.

Series tees off Nov. 5 with the Danish National Orchestra. Other events include Katharine Cornell in "The Constant Wife," Charles L. Wagner's "Carmen" troupe, "John Brown's Body," Indianapolis Symphony, Westminster Choir, Solomon the pianist, and Patrice Munsel.

N.Y. 'Girl' Return Seen With Road Co.

"Country Girl," the Paula Stone-Mike Sloane touring edition of the Clifford Odets drama of 1950-51, may play a return engagement on Broadway next spring, with Robert Young, Dane Clark and Nancy Kelly costarred. The show recently broke in on the Coast.

The original Dwight Weere Wiman production costarred Paul Kelly and Uta Hagen, with Steven Hill featured as secondary lead. In the current London version, titled "Winter Journey," Alexander Knox and Constance Cummings recently took over the two top roles, succeeding Michael Redgrave and Googie Withers, with Sam Wanamaker, who staged the production, continuing in the part of the director.

The Stone-Sloane edition, winding up its Coast stands this week, will play a week in the northwest, then several weeks of midwest bookings, before opening Dec. 1 in Chicago for a seven-week run. After that it will play the key cities of the midwest and Canada, then two weeks in Philly, a week in Baltimore and a fortnight in Washington, starting April 25.

Decision whether to bring the Odets play back to Broadway may depend largely on what kind of notices it gets in several of the major legit stands in the interim. The show got raves in San Francisco and Los Angeles, without doing commensurate business. The Sloanes aren't particularly interested in a return engagement on Broadway unless there's a prospect that it might get better reviews than the original.

Incidentally, according to present plans, "Country Girl" will probably be playing in Chicago concurrently with the Sloanes' other production, "Top Banana." The musical, currently in Philly after a season on Broadway, is tentatively due in Chi late in November for an extended run, with Phil Silvers in his original starring role.

Sloane went to the Coast last week for more pre-production confabs on the couple's next venture, "Carnival," a musical version of the French film of several years ago, "Carnival in Flanders," which they will bring to Broadway next spring, in association with Julian Claman. Sloane is due back in New York in about three weeks.

Ballet Russe Concert Co. Bows in Preem Season

Newly-formed Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo Concert Co., which the Coppicus, Schang & Brown division of Columbia Artists Mgt. is sponsoring this season, opened its tour at Glens Falls, N. Y., Monday night (13), after a preview at the YMHA, N. Y., Saturday (11).

Troupe of 16 dancers, plus two pianists, will play nine weeks this fall and 11 weeks during the winter, giving five or six performances a week. It will play Columbia's Community Concerts circuit, or other smaller towns where the senior Ballet Russe troupe has never visited.

Troupe, organized by Sergei Denham, has Moscelyn Larkin, Anna Istomina and Roman Jasinsky as lead dancers, with Jasinsky also maitre de ballet. Repertoire consists of "Swan Lake," "Gaite Parisienne," "Bluebird" pas de deux, and "Cirque" pas de deux. Senior Ballet Russe isn't touring the U. S. this season, and no foreign group is visiting the States, so that troupe has only Ballet Theatre and the smaller Slavenska-Franklin troupe as competition.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Backers of "Time of the Cuckoo," Robert Whitehead-Walter Fried production of drama by Arthur Laurents, starring Shirley Booth, include stage manager Frederic de Wilde, father of moppet actor Brandon de Wilde, $500; actress-singer Peggy Fears, $500; producers Jus Addiss and Hayden Rorke, $500; orchestra leader Meyer Davis, representing a syndicate, $500; producer Clinton Wilder, $500; producer Elaine Perry, $750; the author, $750; strawhat manager Theron Bamberger, $750; radio-TV announcer Ben Grauer, $1,500; theatre owner and realty operator Robert W. Dowling, $1,500; Oscar E. Olsen, Whitehead's general manager, representing an undisclosed individual, $1,500; Mrs. Oliver Rea, wife of Whitehead's former producing partner, $1,500; their son, Henry Oliver Rea, Jr., $3,000; Mrs. Marshall Field, $1,500; theatre owner Howard S. Cullman, $1,500, and American National Theatre & Academy staffer Flora Martel, $1,500. The venture is capitalized at $75,000.

Although Vincent Price had already succeeded Charles Laughton as costar of "Don Juan in Hell," a display ad Oct. 5 in the Cedar Rapids Gazette still listed Laughton's name with Charles Boyer, Cedric Hardwicke and Agnes Moorehead in an announcement about the show's scheduled appearance Oct. 28 at Coe College Auditorium there. One-nighter had been completely sold out some weeks in advance, and the ad was an "explanation" of how the ticket sale had been handled. Substitution of Price for Laughton has since been announced, and there is reportedly already some resentment on the part of ticket holders over the fact that Laughton, a top b.o. draw with the group, won't appear. Moreover, since Laughton's exit was necessitated by his picture commitment, it's claimed the management must have known some time in advance that he wouldn't be able to appear here—perhaps even before the sale opened.

Scheme for presenting his concert reading of "Macbeth" has been presented to the N. Y. chapter board of the American National Theatre & Academy by Staats Cotsworth. This is a rehearsed reading of the whole play, with cuts and scene arrangements by Margaret Webster. It is not related to the recent proposal by Brian Aherne that top stars might tour in one-night readings of excerpts from the classics, to raise funds for the American Shakespeare Festival & Academy.

Lecterns, lighting effects and music backgrounds are used in the Cotsworth production, which has been performed at the Plays & Players Theatre, Philly, and at Lucille Lortel's White Barn Theatre, Westport, Conn., with a cast including Cotsworth, Muriel Kirkland (Mrs. Cotsworth), Paul McGrath and Horace Braham.

In probably the first such instance in legit history, a Coast little theatre group cancelled a scheduled production last week on the advice of a few preview audiences. Show was tagged "New Footprints" and had been scheduled to open Saturday (11) at the Gallery Stage in Los Angeles. Preview audiences were invited to sit in with the cast after each of the preview performances and function as "armchair directors" in discussing the play. Consensus was the group would be better off abandoning the project, so the little theatre hastily scrapped the revue and begun prepping a new comedy, "The Maid and the Martian," which will open this week.

Morton DaCosta, director, and Sam Handelsman, producer of Bill Green's Arena Theatre in 1951, the one season the Pittsburgh strawhat operated, will be reunited in the forthcoming Broadway production of "The Grey Eyed People," a new comedy by John Hess. Play goes into rehearsal first of next month under DaCosta's direction and with Handelsman serving as general manager. Pitt Arena Theatre didn't operate this past summer after Handelsman pulled out and nobody would take it over from Green, a Pitt nitery owner, on the short-term lease, which was the only kind he'd offer on account of the property being looked upon as a prospective business site within the near future.

Fred C. Schang, prez of Columbia Artists Mgt., which is presenting the Dancers of Bali at the Fulton, N. Y., to SRO biz, took exception to ads of the Guild 50th St., N. Y., filmhouse, which advertised its pic, "Gods of Bali," as "The spectacular Bali Dancers, sensation of N. Y.'s new theatre season." As result of protests, Guild promised to drop the ref to the legit troupe out of its ads. Film did turnaway biz over the weekend, with the legit tieup seen as leading factor. Rosenman, Goldmark, Colin & Kaye represented Columbia in the matter.

Variation on the George Spelvin pseudonym was listed in the cast of last week's "In Any Language" opener at the Cort, N. Y. Comedy is set in Rome, and second porter's name was inserted as Giorgio Spelvino.

ISRAEL FOLK BALLET SET FOR 1ST U.S. TOUR

The Israel Folk Ballet, troupe of native Israeli dancers offering various-ethnic folk dances, has been pacted for a tour of the U. S. this season. Troupe of 30 dancers and musicians, in its first appearance outside of Israel, has a minimum guarantee of 36 dates in six weeks, opening in Troy or Rochester, N. Y., in February, 1953.

Deal was set up by Israeli impresario Jack M. Amidor, of the Yuval Concerts Corp. of Tel Aviv, and Sherman Pitluck, prez of Central Artists Mgt. of N. Y. Latter will book the tour. Troupe, sponsored by the Histadrut, Israeli labor group, will come here under auspices of the Dept. of Education of Israel.

George Brown, vet concert figure formerly with Columbia Artists Mgt., will be company manager.

Chi 'Fourposter' Mgr. Calms Patrons in Fire

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Over 1,000 patrons quietly filed out of the Blackstone Theatre last Tuesday (7) when a minor fire was discovered in the basement. Five minutes before curtain time of "Fourposter," company manager George Oshrin announced from the stage, "We're having a little trouble—please step out of the building."

After firemen extinguished the fire in some programs and ticket envelopes, the play began — 40 minutes late. Damage was estimated at $100.

Cincy Civic Group Takes Over Cox Theatre for New Season in Hypoed Sked

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.

Cincy's ambitious civic theatre group, Stage, Inc., with Paul Fielding as managing director, stepped up its professional approach by moving into the downtown 1,300-seat Cox Theatre for its sixth season. Opening play, F. Hugh Herbert's "For Love or Money," was presented four nights last week at a $2.75 top and a $10 subscription for five shows.

Stage, Inc., offerings in the Cox will sandwich roadshows which start Oct. 20 with eight performances of Audrey Hepburn in "Gigi" at a $4.31 top. "Mister Roberts," with Tod Andrews, holds the boards the following week.

Fielding, who came on from New York to launch the civic theatre movement, has made marked progress. Besides lining up and grooming an impressive array of talent, he also has enlisted a large list of supporters and volunteer workers for the torch-bearing stint. During the first five seasons the group performed in the bandbox Art Museum Theatre.

Cast for "For Love or Money" had Timothy Hinckley and Nancy Field as leads, and Sue Cahill and Edwin Dundon in supporting roles. Character parts were played by Pearl Zint, Fred Zint, Margaret Moran and Charles Eckerle. Set was by Lynn Kelley and Robert Newton.

Chi B.O. Perks in Cooler Weather; 'Dolls' $47,700, 'Poster' $26,500

Chicago, Oct. 14.

Loop business perked up again with the cooler weather. However, the addition of "The Fig Leaf" at the Selwyn didn't help much. In attempt to offset reviews, "Leaf" ads carry "last weeks." Three critics of the local dailies panned the show (Claudia Cassidy, Tribune; Sydney J. Harris, Daily News; Herman Kogen, Sun-Times), while Ann Marsters of the Herald-American gave the show a so-so notice.

Closing notices in the ads in the dailies are helping three shows. "Guys and Dolls" has four to go; "Fourposter" eight, and "I Am a Camera" four weeks. "Stalag 17" continues strong.

"Gigi" comes to the Harris, Nov. 3, and "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" is set for Nov. 10 at the Great Northern.

Estimates for Last Week

"Fig Leaf," Selwyn (1st wk) ($3 80; 1,000). First four days (five shows) $4,800.

"Fourposter," Blackstone (3d wk) ($4.20; 1,534). Could stay longer than the scheduled eight more weeks; $26,500, even after refunding $463 because of fire.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (34th wk) ($6; 2,100). Again helped by "last four weeks" ads; terrific $47,700.

"I Am a Camera," Harris (4th wk) ($4.40; 1,000). Closing date notices aided here, too, $19,000.

"Stalag 17," Erlanger (6th wk) ($4.40; 1,334). Still flexing its muscles with $17,300.

Ballet Theatre Ends Best N.Y. Run to Date; Garners $162,400 in 22 Showings

Ballet Theatre wound up its best N. Y. engagement to date, finishing a three-week stay of 22 performances at the Met Opera House Sunday night (12) with a sock $162,400. Troupe did $62,400 on its third week of eight shows. Second week's take was $58,600, and first week (six shows) garnered $41,400. Evening top was $4, with the two matinees each week at $3.

Troupe was well in the black for the run, although gross doesn't defray cost of the new productions. Boxoffice compares most favorably with last year, when on 22 shows the troupe took in $98,000. The current $162,400 in receipts was almost capacity (certain Met seats are "blind" for ballet), full take at scale being $177,400.

As result of the sock biz, a N. Y. spring season is being considered before next summer's European tour. Troupe set out on Monday (14) at White Plains, N. Y., for its longest tour to date, ending late April.

'COUNTRY GIRL' $18,500, 'AFFAIRS' $18,850, L.A.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.

Legit biz edged upwards last week, but grosses for the town's two offerings were still below hopes. Henry Duffy's initial production, "Affairs of State," may settle down for a run at the Carthay Circle despite a slow start.

Philharmonic Aud rekindled last night (Mon.) with a two-week stand of "Don Juan in Hell."

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Carthay Circle (2d wk) (1,518; $2.40). Up to $18,850 for the first full frame, marginally profitable and will hold.

"Country Girl," Biltmore (2d wk) (1,636; $4.20). Climbed slightly to $18,500. Mildly profitable but considerably below hopes.

'Blondes' $16,600 for Five To Bow Rochester Season

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 14.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," opening the local legit season last Sunday-Wednesday (5-8) grossed a profitable $16,600 in five performances at the 2,574-seat Auditorium. Notable aspect of the engagement was that the musical opened with a Sunday matinee, the first time the house had tried such a schedule. That performance was the biggest of the stand.

Auditorium has "Mister Roberts" tonight and tomorrow (Tues.-Wed.) and gets "Paint Your Wagon" for three performances Friday and Saturday of next week (24-25).

'Roberts' Okay $16,200 In Its Third Pitt Visit

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.

Legit season is slow in getting up steam at the Nixon, but the first two shows have been multiple repeats. House opened with "Oklahoma" and then came back last week with "Mister Roberts," which had already played here twice. Latest engagement indicated that perhaps the seagoing comedy still has some life, since the take was a profitable $16,200 at $3.60 top.

Management expects a sharp pickup from here on, however, since a flock of new attractions is on tap, starting currently with "Gigi," next week "The Constant Wife," followed by "Top Banana" and then Bette Davis in "Two's Company" Nov. 3 for a fortnight.

'PACIFIC' $34,200 IN TWO-WAY COAST SPLIT

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 14.

"South Pacific," playing a split between Richmond and Berkeley last week, picked up a total gross of $34,200 for the two stands. The Rodgers-Hammerstein musical, costarring Janet Blair and Webb Tilton, drew $13,100 for four performances Monday - Wednesday (6-8) at the Auditorium, Richmond, and added $21,100 in four performances Thursday-Saturday (9-11) at the Community here.

Miss Blair, who was married last week to Nick Mayo, the show's stage manager, is taking a three-week vacation, and Martha Wright has taken a temporary leave from the Broadway production to substitute for her during the next three weeks' engagement in the atter's native northwest. Miss Blair rejoins the musical in Denver, with Miss Wright returning to her regular assignment in N. Y.

'Juan' $49,200 for Five In Three Coast Stands

Portland, Ore., Oct. 14.

"Don Juan in Hell," with Vincent Price in place of Charles Laughton, grossed a terrific $49,200 last week in five performances in three stands. The Shaw reading, with Charles Boyer, Cedric Hardwicke and Agnes Moorehead, drew $22,000 in two shows Tuesday-Wednesday (7-8) in Seattle, added $7,100 in a one-nighter Thursday (9) in Spokane and finaled with $20,100 here Friday-Saturday (10-11).

Show is playing all this week at the Philharmonic, L. A.

'Dial' Is Socko $10,400 In Four at Hartford

Hartford, Oct. 14.

Four-performance tryout of "Dial 'M' For Murder" netted a solid $10,400 last Thursday-Saturday (9-11) at New Parsons here. A weak Saturday matinee prevented a four-show sellout. Friday and Saturday nights played to standees. Show was scaled at $4.20 top.

Next legiter is "The Seven Year Itch," which preems Oct. 30 in the interim, house will play films.

Easy Chair Come-On

Columbus, O., Oct. 14.

Critics are used to being handled with kid gloves but Samuel T. Wilson, legit and music scribe for the Columbus Dispatch, was given a start last week when a letter from Ohio Wesleyan U. offered him an easy chair to sit in, if he attended the university's artists series this winter.

Mark Lipper, Wesleyan's publicity director, wrote that he had heard via the grapevine that Wilson would attend more of the concerts if it weren't for the uncomfortable seating arrangements in Gray Chapel. (Wilson is 6 feet 7 and weights well over 250, and the chapel seat rows are narrow). "The artists' series committee," wrote Lipper, "has assured me that if you will inform us as to what concerts you will attend, they will provide you with a comfortable easy chair in the aisle. We are serious about this and hope you will take advantage of the offer."

Hilde Gueden, Met Opera soprano, arrived in N. Y. from Vienna Monday (13).

College-Civic Legit Setup Skedded for D.C.

Washington, Oct. 14.

A new type of university-community theatre is being added to the town's already bustling legit horizon, according to an announcement by George Washington U. prexy Cloyd H. Marvin. New venture will feature plays with casts of students an non-students, latter to be chosen by audition. William Callahan, ex of Catholic U's School of Speech and Drama staff, heads the novel project.

A group of university staffers and local theatre people, as well as the town's drama critics, comprise an advisory committee for the experiment.

'Jane' Nifty $16,200, 'Paris' 13½G, Hub

Boston, Oct. 14.

Plenty of activity this frame, with two newcomers bowing in, upping total number of legit productions here to five. Openers last night (13) were "Deep Blue Sea" at the Plymouth, which marked Margaret Sullavan's first legit appearance here in several years, and "Tree Grows in Brooklyn," starring Joan Blondell, at the Opera House. Opening next Monday (20) are "The Shrike," at the Colonial, starring Van Heflin, and "Good Night Ladies" at the Majestic.

Estimates for Last Week

Gilbert & Sullivan Co., Shubert (1st wk) ($4.20; 1,700). Fairly good at $19,500.

"Jane," Colonial (1st wk) ($3.60; 1,500). Nifty $16,200. Final week current.

"Paris '90," Majestic (1st wk) ($3.60; 1,280). Satisfactory $13,500; final week current.

'BELL' FAIRISH $14,800, 'NINA' $8,500, FRISCO

San Francisco, Oct. 14.

"Nina," which opened at the Alcazar last Tuesday (7) with Edward Everett Horton, garnered warm praise from all crix, both for Horton and the show itself.

Estimates for Last Week

"Nina," Alcazar (1st wk) (C-$3.60; 1,157) (Edward Everett Horton, Martha Linden, Christopher Plummer). A fair $8,500.

"Bell, Book and Candle" Geary (2d wk) (D-$4.20; 1,550) (Joan Bennett, Zachary Scott), $14,800 (previous week, a fair $14,500).

'Oklahoma' OK $29,300; 'Wagon' $23,000, Detroit

Detroit, Oct. 14.

"Oklahoma" did a good $29,300 at the Shubert. "Paint Your Wagon" grossed $23,000 at the Cass, in the first of a two-week run.

Shubert currently is dark, but relights Sunday (19) with two weeks of "Two's Company," starring Bette Davis.

Ilka Chase 'Lady' So-So $10,500 in St. Louis Week

St. Louis, Oct. 14.

Combo of Veiled Prophet parade, a major speech by Gov. Adlai Stevenson, warm weather and Nsg reviews by crix, served to make the one-week frame of "First Lady" only a so-so draw at the Ansell Bros.' Empress Theatre in midtown. Crix found fault in the presentation, although handing plaudits to Ilka Chase. With the house scaled to $2.50, eight performances ending up Sunday (13) grossed an estimated $10,500.

William Bendix is heading the cast in "Born Yesterday" that tees off a week's stand tonight (Tues.).

'Bernardine' 13½G, D.C.

Washington, Oct. 14.

The National, which opened its fall season last week with the new Mary Chase comedy, "Bernardine," did a mild $13,500 for the single week's engagement. Spotty critical reaction held down the gross.

"Climate of Eden" is current.

Greco 15G, Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 14.

Jose Greco and his company of Spanish dancers grossed a neat $15,000 at the Royal Alexandra, with the 1,525-seater scaled at $3.50 top with tax.

Reception so good that Ernest M. Rawley, manager of the Royal Alexandra, is dickering for a return engagement.

B'way B.O. Catches Fire; 6 Sellouts, Lillie $24,600, 'Language' 13½G in 5, 'S.P.' $49,400, Hayes 23G, 'Male' $20,800

With the town swamped with visitors, Broadway took a boxoffice jump last week. The World Series was possibly a factor in the heavy hotel bookings, with conventions and an influx of buyers also having an effect. Practically all shows felt the upsurge, several hitting new highs and a few joining the sellout list.

Both of the week's openings, "Sacred Flame" and "In Any Language," were generally panned, but the former did fairly well at the b.o. for its first seven performances and the latter started promisingly in its first five. Last Monday night (13) entry, "The Gambler," was generally panned. There are four other premieres this week.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical Comedy), MD (Musical Drama), O (Operetta).

Other parenthetic designations refer, respectively, to top prices; number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Price includes 20% amusement tax, but grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of tax.

"Evening With Beatrice Lillie," Booth (2d wk) (R-$6; 900; $24,500) (Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner). First full week had standees at all performances, nearly $24,600 (previous week, $11,000 for first four performances).

"Fourposter," Barrymore (51st wk) (C-$4.80; 1,060; $24,996) (Betty Field, Burgess Meredith). Over $24,500 (previous week, $16,000).

"Guys and Dolls," 46th St. (99th wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,319; $43,904). As usual, exactly $44,000.

"In Any Language," Cort (1st wk) (C-$4.80; 1,056; $27,700) (Uta Hagen). Opened Wednesday night (8) to one enthusiastic notice (McClain, Journal-American), six pans (Atkinson, Times; Sylvester, News; Coleman, Mirror; Hawkins, World - Telegram & Sun; Kerr, Herald Tribune; Watts, Post) and one inconclusive (Pollock, Compass;) first five performances drew almost $13,500.

"King and I," St. James (81st wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717). Over $51,700 (previous week, $51,200); Yul Brynner, on leave of absence the last two weeks, returned to the cast Monday night (13) with star billing, while Constance Carpenter is now featured as femme lead.

"Male Animal," Music Box (24th wk) (C-$4.80; 1,012; $25,903) (Elliott Nugent, Martha Scott, Robert Preston). Over $20,800, a new high for the run (previous week, $18,800).

"Moon Is Blue," Miller (84th wk) (C-$4.80; 920; $21,586) (Donald Cook, Barry Nelson, Janet Riley). Over $15,500 (previous week, $12,000).

"Mr. Pickwick," Plymouth (4th wk) (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019). Nearly $13,800 (previous week, $12,800).

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (27th wk) (C-$4.80; 912; $23,400) (Helen Hayes). Just under $23,000 (previous week, $20,100).

"New Faces," Royale (22d wk) (R-$6; 1,035; $30,600). Over capacity at more than $30,600 (previous week, $28,900).

"Pal Joey," Broadhurst (41st wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,160; $39,602) (Vivienne Segal, Harold Lang). Over $39,900 (previous week, $37,500).

"Point of No Return," Alvin (39th wk) (D-$4.80-$6; 1,331; $37,924) (Henry Fonda). Nearly $28,300 (previous week, $24,700).

"Sacred Flame," President (1st wk) (D-$3.60; 300; $7,000). Opened Tuesday night (7) to two favorable reviews (Hawkins, World-Telegram & Sun; Sylvester, News), five pans (Atkinson, Times; Coleman, Mirror; Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American; Watts, Post) and one so-so (Pollock, Compass); first seven performances drew about $4,200.

"South Pacific," Majestic (182d wk) (MC-$6; 1,659; $50,186) (Martha Wright, George Britton). Over $49,400 (previous week, $45,300); Cloris Leachman is subbing as femme lead for three weeks, starting Monday night (13) as Miss Wright takes over the same part while the touring company plays her native northwest.

"Wish You Were Here," Imperial (16th wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,400; $52,080). Standees at all performances and another new high for the run, $52,296 (previous week, $51,800).

OPENING THIS WEEK

"Bernardine," Playhouse (C-$4.80; 999; $21,500). Guthrie McClintic production of Mary Chase play, opens tomorrow night (Thurs.).

"Buttrio Square," Century (MC-$6; 1,645; $49,191). Gen Genovese and Edward Woods production of musical with book by Billy Gilbert and Genovese, music by Arthur Jones and Fred Stamer and lyrics by Genovese; opened last night (Tues.).

"Gambler," Lyceum (D-$4.80; 995; $22,845) (Alfred Drake). Thomas Hammond and Wayne Harriss production of play by Ugo Betti, adapted by Drake and Edward Eager, opened Monday night (13) to unanimous pans.

"Millionairess," Shubert (C-$6-$4.80; 1,361; $39,000) (Katharine Hepburn). Theatre Guild production of Shaw play, opens Friday night (17).

"Time of the Cuckoo," Empire (D-$6-$4.80; 1,082; $27,000) (Shirley Booth). Robert Whitehead-Walter Fried production of play by Arthur Laurents, opens tonight (Wed.).

'Cuckoo' $22,900, 'Top' 37½G, Philly

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.

"Top Banana" kicked off its two-week run at the Shubert with great biz for the opening session. The SRO sign was out from Wednesday night on, and house should go clean for second week.

Second week of "Time of the Cuckoo" at the Walnut ran even stronger than the initial one. Agatha Christie mystery-thriller, "The Suspects," relighted the Locust last evening (Mon.). Legit situation is still static, with only two productions for remainder of the month: "Climate of Eden," at the Forrest, Oct. 27, and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," back for a week at the Shubert, same night.

Estimates for Last Week

"Top Banana," Shubert (1st wk) ($5.50; 1,870). Return booking proved no drawback. Phil Silvers drew bravos from crix and steady queue at boxoffice. Fine $37,500.

"Time of the Cuckoo," Walnut (2d wk) ($4.50; 1,340). Good word-of-mouth, plus subscription sale and $4.55 top (high for straight play) boosted Shirley Booth starrer into tidy $22,900.

SULLAVAN-'SEA' SOCK $19,800 IN 6, NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Oct. 14.

Four-day stand of Margaret Sullavan in the "Deep Blue Sea" preem at the Shubert last week (8-11) broke a house record for a six-performance dramatic show. In at a $4.20 top, gross reached a sock $19,800.

Breakin of the Van Heflin troupe in "The Shrike" is current (15-18), followed by a solid week of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (20-25). 'Jane' (Edna Best) completes the October sked (30-1).

John van Druten's "I've Got Sixpence" is due for its premiere here in November. House is booked almost solid into December.

Blondell 'Brooklyn' $5,200 For 3 in Bridgeport Bow

Bridgeport, Oct. 14.

"Tree Grows in Brooklyn," with Joan Blondell and Johnny Johnston costarred, grossed over $5,200 in three performances last Friday-Saturday (10-11) at the Klein Auditorium here to break in its nationwide tour. Miss Blondell was a critical and popular click in the femme lead, played in the original edition by Shirley Booth, and Johnston was back in the same part he played on Broadway.

Because of newspaper reports of the actress' mother's death in Hollywood a few days previously, there was a widespread, erroneous belief that Miss Blondell wouldn't play the engagement here, so attendance was skimpy Friday night and at the Saturday matinee. However, local dailies printed pictures in the Saturday editions showing her arrival in town, and business boomed for the Saturday night finale.

Plays Out of Town

Dial 'M' for Murder

Hartford, Oct. 9.

James P. Sherwood presentation of melodrama in three acts (six scenes) by Frederick Knott. Stars Maurice Evans; features Gusti Huber, Richard Derr, John Williams, Anthony Dawson. Staged by Reginald Denham. Settings and lighting, Peter Larkin; costumes, Noel Taylor. At New Parsons, Hartford, Oct. 9, '52; $4.20 top.

|---|---|
| Margot Wendice | Gusti Huber |
| Max Halliday | Richard Derr |
| Tony Wendice | Maurice Evans |
| Capt. Lesgate | Anthony Dawson |
| Insp. Hubbard | John Williams |
| Thompson | Porter Van Zandt |

"Dial 'M' for Murder" contains three elements that should push it into the winner's circle. They are (1) Maurice Evans, (2) a good acting company and (3) good story content. The successful moulding of the three, which has been accomplished, should evidence itself at the b.o.

"Dial" is currently making a successful London run. The American version—after a short road tryout—is skedded for Broadway latter part of this month. By that time, the usual out-of-town tryout difficulties will have been ironed out. There are not too many here.

Main difficulty and show-slower is the first act. Second moves at a hypoed pace and third winds up quite successfully. It's in the first where most repairs and revisions will be done.

Mystery doesn't follow the usual pattern of the whodunit. Instead, author Frederick Knott uses a simulated narrative approach in disclosing his plot. He takes the audience along to see a murder committed and the murderer apprehended. By this restrictive means, Knott has placed director Reginald Denham in a confinement hard to break. Director does a good job with the material on hand.

The weakness which limits Denham is in the fact that a good part of the show is talked out rather than dramatized. However, it's still a good show.

Simple plot deals with an English husband (Maurice Evans) who discovers his wife (Gusti Huber) has had an extra-curricular affair with an American mystery writer (Richard Derr). The husband blackmails an unsavory college mate (Anthony Dawson) to murder her. The plan boomerangs and the would-be murderer is himself slain, with the husband pinning the rap on the wife. John Williams, as the inspector from Scotland Yard, aids in unravelling the mystery to save the wife at the last minute from the gallows.

Although Evans is the focal part of the play, a good deal of the action is spread around to the other actors. Evans is his usual, high-polished self- as the ex-playboy, money-hungry offended husband. In the wife's role, Miss Huber distinguishes herself, especially in the tense scene of the attack on her and in the subsequent interrogations by the police.

Anthony Dawson, as a blackmailer and murderer who in turn has been blackmailed to do a job, turns in a commendable performance, making his American legit debut here. John Williams, Scotland Yard inspector, plays his role with a nice, dry humor. Richard Derr, the American lover, is also okay.

Set and lighting by Peter Larkin are neat and serviceable. Denham's direction is good to the extent it can be utilized. As noted above, he is confined here. Eck.

Deep Blue Sea

New Haven, Oct. 8.

Alfred de Liagre, Jr., and John C. Wilson production of drama in three acts by Terence Rattigan. Stars Margaret Sullavan; features Alan Webb, James Hanley, Herbert Berghof. Directed by Frith Banbury; setting and lighting supervised by Charles Elson. At Shubert Theatre, New Haven, Oct. 8, '52; $4.20 top.

Taking a leaf from their own play title, the producers of this latest British import find themselves, premiere-wise, between the devil and the deep blue sea. Reportedly, there is a very substantial advance sale in the till, not only in tryout stands but also for the Broadway engagement. Having assembled a fine cast for the benefit of these ducat-investors, the sponsors now face the problem of presenting an equally fine play to match the talents of that cast. The problem shapes up as a major one.

Margaret Sullavan fans will be treated to a good performance, but unless the scripting end develops into sturdier fare, the verdict will probably be regret over not selecting a worthier vehicle.

Actually, there is nothing basically wrong with this drama. It is simply a case of not containing enough meat, fire or sustained power to lift an audience to dramatic heights—a requirement that seems to be synonymous with Broadway success these days.

"Sea" has found, and still finds, a welcome response in London, where it has been on exhibition for some time. Whether the lack of outstanding enthusiasm over here is due to a difference in British and American theatrical tastes or to a difference in interpretation, is a moot question. Possibly one important factor from the latter viewpoint is insufficient disparity in the ages of the feminine lead, who is supposed to become enamoured of a man many years her junior, and the character playing that lover.

What might normally be regarded as a woman's play, due to the nature of its theme, seems to have only modified luck in stirring feminine emotions among playgoers at the premiere.

Story opens with attempted suicide of Hester Collyer, whose marriage to a distinguished barrister had struck a snag when she had encountered a more youthful, romantic personality in glamorous test-pilot Freddie Page. Having left Collyer, without benefit of divorce, for Page, she lives in a modest flat with the latter, and makes the suicide try when she realizes that she can never get from Page the full measure of love that she is willing to bestow upon him.

Her attempt is a failure, but the act brings Collyer back into her life and he ofers to restore their former relationship. She declines and when Page walks out on her, she again contemplates self-destruction, but is brought to a more wholesome outlook on life by a disbarred medic who has been through the mill of despondency himself and still carries on the battle of life.

Miss Sullavan gives understanding and emotion to her interpretation of Hester, and displays the histrionic skill that has been part and parcel of her acting career. Her best efforts are registered in the third act, which, incidentally, is the play's most powerful.

Alan Webb, as the precise lawyer-husband; Herbert Berghof, as the delinquent ex-doctor, and James Hanley, as the weakling Freddie, are excellent in their respective characterizations. In the added support department, John Merivale and Stella Andrew, as a neighboring young couple; Betty Sinclair, a landlady, and Felix Deebank, Freddie's friend, all are well cast.

Setting and lighting of a modest sitting-room, based on the original London technical production, are in keeping with the play's theme. Direction has followed a pattern of holding the punch till the third stanza and has maintained action at a fairly interesting, if not particularly exciting, pace. Bone.

The Climate of Eden

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 9.

Joseph M. Hyman & Bernard Hart production of drama in two acts by Moss Hart, based on Edgar Mittelholzer's novel, "Shadows Move Among Them." Directed by Hart. Scenery by Frederick Fox; lighting, Jean Rosenthal; costumes, Kenn Barr; Incidental music, Trude Rittmann. At Playhouse, Wilmington, Oct. 9, '52; $3.60 top.

"Climate of Eden" is off the beaten track in drama, and if Moss Hart can get rid of the excess baggage and bring his play into focus, there should be a favorable reception for this one on Broadway. However, plenty of work lies ahead, for at present the show is overboard on length and there are too many scenes that drag—a defect which has proved fatal on previous occasions.

Regardless of the show's fate, it will be remembered as the play which gave Penelope Munday her big chance. As a precocious 14-year-old, this British actress steals the show, aided and abetted by the script.

Hart has taken the highlights from Edgar Mittelholzer's novel, "Shadows Move Among Them," and has come up with a picture of an unorthodox missionary and his ditto family. Into this Eden comes a young man, mentally sick, seeking to be healed. Before being cured, he almost kills the eldest daughter who has fallen in love with him. The younger sister develops a crush on the stranger and this also leads to near-tragedy.

There is a wealth of atmospheric detail throughout, although things move too slowly in the show's present state.

The cast is large and hard-working. As before noted, Miss Munday sparks the entire production as the electrifying teenager. Two others from London—Lee Montague and Rosemary Harris—are effective as the confused stranger and eldest sister. Montague, especially, does a good job, considering the character suffers from script weakness.

John Cromwell is fine as the missionary who has his own code for living, and Isabel Elsom makes an attractive wife who also has learned to ignore the world's conventions. Ken Walken, Leon Moore, Jane White, Ray Stricklyn and Edward Hall give good account of themselves in lesser roles.

Hart directed with an eye to dramatic effect, but he still has work to do in this division, as well as some rewriting in his capacity as author.

Frederick Fox's jungle setting, showing the missionary's house and interior of the church, is outstanding and same goes for Jean Rosenthal's lighting effects.

A month's tryout tour is planned and in that time the show's Broadway chances should be vastly improved. Klep.

The Suspects

Princeton, Oct. 10.

Messrs. Shubert-Sherman S. Krellberg production of drama in three acts (five scenes) by Agatha Christie. Staged by David Kentish. Features Henry Daniell, Nana Bryant, Joan Wetmore, Jeff Morrow. Settings and lighting, Ralph Alswang; costumes, Jocelyn. At McCarter Theatre, Princeton, N. J., Oct. 10, '52; $3.60 top.

| Gerda Cristow | Joan Newell |
| Veronica Craye | Anna Karen |

Agatha Christie's whodunit, which scored in London as "The Hollow," proves to be a neat package of entertainment with definite appeal to the average playgoer. With a rewrite and tightening job of the first act, this show should rate a good run. Hollywood prospects are strong.

The play revolves around the murder of Dr. John Cristow, handsome man-about-boudoirs, who is a guest at the home of Sir Henry Angkatell, Who killed John is anyone's guess, for everyone seems to have a good motive—everyone from his snivelling wife to his mistresses, both current and past.

The first act is weak—poor pacing, poor dialog, and too talky. Everything picks up, however, with opening of Act II. From that point, the production is sharp, terse and exciting theatre, packing suspense all the way through to the sock emotional windup.

Nona Bryant's performance as flighty, addle-brained Lady Lucy Angkatell is one of the bright spots of the production. Joan Wetmore is well cast as Henrietta, and makes the most of a role that offers too little opportunity to display her fine talent. Jeff Morrow is impressive as the philandering physician. Anna Karen's neat thesping as the actress rates a nod of approval, and Joan Newell's deft handling of a different role as the snivelling Gerda draws another bow.

Ralph Alswang's handsome settings and effective lighting, as well as Jocelyn's costuming, are on the credit side. Shan.

"Fig Leaf," authored by Norman Brooks and John Gerstad (latter is Elliott Nugent's son-in-law), travels down a familiar road. It's an infrequently amusing and sometimes painful comedy excursion into that much-maligned social strata known as surburbia. (Show had a barn tryout at Saratoga, N. Y., this summer).

There may be a future for this pennyweight enterprise somewhere along the strawhat circuit and else-

In Any Language

Jule Styne & George Abbott production of comedy in three acts by Edmund Beloin and Henry Garson, from story by Garson. Stars Uta Hagen; features Walter Matthau, Joe De Santis, Nita Naldi, Gloria Marlowe, Eileen Heckart, Louis Hawkins. Directed by Abbott. Sets and costumes by Raoul Pene du Bois. At Cort, N. Y., Oct. 8, '52; $4.80 top ($6 opening night).

Director and co-producer George Abbott and a well-chosen cast have worked valiantly here to make this a good show, but their writers let them down. Comedy has a cute idea and some funny moments, with a lot of dull stretches in between. Play can't seem to get off the ground. "In Any Language," while persuasive in spots, doesn't have enough to say to be successful.

Story, obviously suggested by the Bergman-Rossellini romance, concerns a slipping Hollywood musical star who has gone to Rome to try to rehabilitate herself and her career in a film drama directed by Italy's top personality and showman. Femme is obviously unfitted by background, training and language barrier for Italian dramatic roles, but talks the director into trying experiment. Situation is complicated by the presence of the femme's husband, a commercial flyer whom she wedded in Hollywood because of his war record and who deserted her since.

There's room here for a rollicking farce or for a sentimental romantic comedy, but not both. The play tries to be a bit of each, in alternating moments, succeeding in being neither. There are isolated hilarious moments, such as a drunk scene between actress and flyer; a breakfast scene between the temporarily reconciled couple; a rehearsal scene for the projected film, or the running off of the first rushes.

But although the show gets away to a very fast start, in oldtime Abbott style, and has laughs scattered throughout, the laughs aren't strong or frequent enough to make a successful farce, while the sentimental moments aren't substantial (and a few are too phony) for a good romantic comedy.

Uta Hagen, although she showed excellent qualities as a comedienne in the recent "Tovarich" revival, still is something of a revelation in a switch from her dramatic roles to the giddy film star here. Her pop song takeoff is a funny burlesque and some of her comic scenes are howls. She has some tender moments, too, for contrast.

Walter Matthau is good support in a dry-voiced role of the disillusioned but still infatuated flyer-husband, while Joe De Santis comes near stealing his scenes as the tempestuous, egocentric Italian film director. Onetime silent film star Nita Naldi is a pleasant, warming surprise in a brief bit as a sugar mama marchesa. Louis Hawkins, as her actor-turned-gigolo; Gloria Marlowe, as a fiery young Italian actress, and Eileen Heckart, as Miss Hagen's practical, tough-minded secretary, offer good assists, as do other figures like Francine Bond (Fawzieh).

The Gambler

Thomas Hammond & Wayne Harriss production of drama in two acts (nine scenes) by Ugo Betti, adapted by Alfred Drake and Edward Eager. Stars Drake; features Percy Waram, E. G. Marshall, Philip Coolidge, Anne Burr. Directed by Herman Shumlin. Sets and lighting, Jo Mielziner; costumes, Robert Mackintosh; incidental music, David Broekman. At Lyceum, N. Y., Oct. 13, '52; $4.80 top ($6 opening night).

|---|---|
| David Petri | Alfred Drake |
| A Station Master | Percy Waram |
| Ernest Bruni | E. G. Marshall |
| Commissioner Costa | Philip Coolidge |
| Alma Greich | Ann Burr |
| Paula Mori | Constance Clausen |
| Eva Greich Petri | Margaret Draper |

This is an interesting, but unsuccessful psychological or symbolical drama. Adapted from the Italian of Ugo Betti by Alfred Drake and Edward Eager, the play has an appealing first act, and falls apart in the second. It's also much too wordy and literary.

An excellent cast headed by Drake as the star gives it all it's worth, and more, but confusion of the second (final) act defeats them.

The play, set in Italy after the recent war, concerns a man (Drake) accused of the murder or complicity in the murder of his wife. Seems the duo were in a town about to be invaded, and he ran off, leaving her to be shot by soldiers because the couple had harbored escaped prisoners of war.

Wife's sister, a town lawyer, and a spurned femme, all accuse the man of bringing about the wife's death by informing on her in one way or another. Defiant man, who thought he no longer loved his wife and had hoped to get rid of her, but had not caused her death, accuses himself of the crime after he's been officially acquitted, in a confusing resurgence of love, faith and justice.

Dead wife appears frequently, to talk to the husband, and to chide him. There's another theatrical device in an armchair suspended in mid-air, which symbolizes the throne of God to the man. Dead woman's sister, an integral part of the play, switches from hatred to lust for man in second act, and there are other bewildering bits of business to make matters more complicated.

Drake, as first the cocksure, then the troubled leading figure, has a long, rich role which he plays admirably. Supporting cast is unusually good, with Anne Burr as the accusing sister-in-law who succumbs to the man; E. G. Marshall as Drake's lawyer who is really his enemy, because he once loved the wife himself; Philip Coolidge, as the practical but puzzled trial examiner; Margaret Draper, as the winsome wraith of the dead wife; Constance Clausen, as the jealous spurned femme, and Percy Waram, as a combination stationmaster, hotel servant and celestial messenger. Herman Shumlin's direction is sure, or as sure as the material permits. Jo Mielziner's sets are very good. But the script's confusion confounds them all.

The Sacred Flame

|---|---|
| Maurice Tabret | Charles H. McCawley |
| Dr. Harvester | John D. Seymour |
| Mrs. Tabret | Frances Starr |
| Nurse Wayland | Nancy Coleman |
| Alice | Joanna Vischer |
| Major Liconda | Noel Leslie |
| Stella Tabret | Patricia Wheel |
| Colin Tabret | Mark Roberts |

The President Theatre is in the Broadway legit sector but it's seldom considered by producers as a Broadway house. It's small, a little more than 250 seats, it's rental tab is comparatively cheap and for the past few years it's housed the eforts of Erwin Piscator's Dramatic Workshop of the New School of Social Research, N. Y., and several sundry off-Broadway productions. However, producer Anthony Parella launched his production of W. Somerset Maugham's 1928 drama, "The Sacred Flame," here, hoping to use it as a jumping-off spot to a regular Broadway house if ticket demand warranted. He won't make it.

"Flame" emerges as a dim theatre piece in the Parella resurrection. The only redeeming feature is the sock performance of Frances Starr. The veteran thesp shines through the plodding opus, bringing some freshness to the vintage Maugham dialog. As mother of an invalid son, whose life she takes by dishing out an overdose of sleeping pills, Miss Starr is completely winning. She's especially effective in the closing scene, in which she reveals her misdeed of devotion.

However, Maugham's dissertation on euthanasia and adultery is a dated, unconvincing drama. In the role of the invalid's wife, who has an affair with her brother-in-law, Patricia Wheel projects a warm, appealing quality that deserves a better showcasing. Mark Roberts is okay as the brother-in-law, but Nancy Coleman goes overboard in her characterization of the invalid's devoted nurse, bringing to the part unnecessary hysteria and posturing. Support by Charles McCawley, John D. Seymour and Noel Leslie are acceptable. John Reich's directorial efforts are unimaginative. Gros.

Evageline

Paris, Oct. 4.

Henri Bernstein production of drama in 6 acts. Written by Bernstein. Features Danielle Darrieux, Raymond Pellegrin, Renaud Mary, Denise Provence. Directed by Bernstein. Costumes by Jean Desses. Set by Laverdet; art director, Raoul Guiraud. At Ambassadeurs Theatre, Paris, Oct. 2, '52; $3 top.

| Evageline Domanie | Danielle Darrieux |
| Isabelle Offraine | Denise Provence |
| Michel Offraine | Raymond Pellegrin |
| Guy Domanie | Renaud Mary |
| Gustave | Rene Martin |

Since the last war, Henri Bernstein has made a point of having a play of his own ready to go into his swanky Ambassadeurs Theatre for opening of the Auto Shows here early in October. This year, he has a new one, his best since the war. "Evageline" has a sturdy story with a novel twist, a bit too much dialog, but okay lines, easy direction and film star Danielle Darrieux in the title role. It is socko at the boxoffice and can run a season without much effort. Paris crix with one exception gave it the greenlight.

"Evageline" might do for N. Y. and London if the proper cast could be obtained. The play offers three fat roles, and the translation, unlike most French plays, would be simple chore. It is not for films because it lacks action, being a psychological study with plenty of talk.

Raymond Pellegrin, successful novelist, is absorbed with his writing and neglects his wife, Denise Provence, who has come to mean little more than a housekeeper. He is shocked, however, when Evageline (Danielle Darrieux) wife of his best friend, Renaud Mary, informs him that her husband and the neglected wife are having a love affair. He finds this true and demands that his wife leave his house. Then he discovers that he is in love with Miss Darrieux who has mothered him through the break with his wife and friend. So he takes her to live with him while he awaiting a divorce.

One day his erstwhile friend, Mr. Mary, shows up and (play's best scene) tells him the truth about Evageline. It is she who has encouraged Miss Provence's indelity because she has long been in love with Pellegrin and determined to marry the author. Exposed as a conniving female, she (Darrieux) attempts suicide. Only then does Pellegrin realize the depth of her love, and he nurses her back to health.

Bernstein keeps "Evageline" interesting, cleverly planting strong scenes in effective spots. But the play is far too long. Characters are believable although their reactions to certain situations sometimes seem forced as Bernstein is too objective and cold in drawing their personalities. "Evageline" often appears too mathematically in its dissection of passion. Nevertheless, the play is alive and never dull.

Miss Darrieux, whose earlier legit attempts brought little applause, is first-rate as the scheming Evageline. The actress never looked better. Pellegrin, who scored in the French film, "We Are All Murderers," gives an intelligent performance as the brooding novelist, Michel. Pellegrin, however, he seems somewhat miscast in a role obviously calling for an older man. Mr. Mary plays Guy, the faithful friend, in a casual manner. Miss Provence as Isabelle, has little to do in colorless role.

Bernstein has staged "Evageline" himself, giving it natural flow and elegance. Sole setting by Laverdet is handsome while costumes by Jean Desses are in latest Paris fashion. "Evageline" has some drawbacks, but it is a solid sellout here. Curt.

Witch Hunt

Dublin, Oct. 6.

Longford Productions presentation of drama in three acts by Christine Longford. Staged by Dan O'Connell; setting, Alpho O'Reilly. At Gate Theatre, Dublin.

|---|---|
| Dame Alice Kyteler | Pamela Duncan |
| William Outlaw | Godfrey Quigley |
| Petronilla | Iris Lawler |
| Basil | Rita Foran |
| Bishop Ledred | Aiden Grennell |
| Sir John Darcy | Dennis Edwards |
| Brother Roger Outlaw | Charles Mitchel |
| Walter Islip | Kenneth MacDonald |
| Hugh Power | Desmond Jordan |

Based on a story of suspected witchcraft in Kilkenny in the 14th century, this piece tells of the persecution headed by Bishop Ledred, appointed by England to the city. Author leaves audience in doubt whether Dame Alice Kyteler is truly a witch, or merely a clever woman and an ardent feminist—the second seemed the more likely—and she disappears from the action of the play before the final curtain, apparently by way of escape to Dublin. This gives an improbable air to the piece.

Much of the play is on a comedy note, with Dame Kyteler's son, William Outlaw, willing to conform to anything the Bishop might ask—provided it could be settled in cash and let him get on with his banking biz. Efforts on part of the civil authorities represented by Sir John Darcy, Brother Outlaw and Walter Islip to avert excesses by the Bishop are indication of the fruitless effort to stop a witch hunt once it is really rolling. Comedy of earlier scenes points up tragedy of Bishop's success in convicting a suspect (Petronilla) and makes for tragedy curtain, but loose ends leave slightly unsatisfied feeling for onlooker.

Play is in one set, room in William Outlaw's house in Kilkenny, but although it is entirely a talkie piece there is a good air of action given to it by director Dan O'Connell. No attempt is made to recreate speech of the period. Playing is at good level; with first class performance from Pamela Duncan as Dame Kyteler. Godfrey Quigley has good lines as the banker, and Aiden Grennell's Bishop has the right degree of cold sourness. The Walter Islip of Kenneth MacDonald is an opportunist politician of the period and there is just enough sugar in the girl Basil of Rita Foran. Iris Lawler has a problem with her Petronilla, making little impact until the third act with a strong dramatic scene against the Bishop. Mac.

Feuerwerk
(Fireworks)

Berlin, Oct. 1.

Berlin Festival production of musical comedy (3 acts) by Paul Burkhard, Erik Charell and Jurg Armstein. With Rita Wottowa, Herta Staal, Brigitte Mira, Else Reval, Jutta von Oppermann, Gerti Russ, Charlotte Ander, Arno Paulsen, Gustav Bertram, Rolf Roeder, Karl Viebach. Directed by Paul Rose. Settings by Friedrich Pratorius; music, Paul Burkhard. At Komodie, Kurfurstendamm, Berlin.

This is a charming, entertaining musical comedy done in operetta style. It might be more amusing and effective in Switzerland (it has a Swiss locale) because of stronger contrast there between the middle-class and circus world. Such contrast is part of this vehicle's plot.

The story starts out in the household of a middle-class family with the father celebrating his 60th birthday. All the likeable and disliked relatives show up, including the ill-reputed son with his wife, a French girl. This son ran away 20 years before to try his luck in the circus world and returns as a big top director. Because his sister also yearns for the sparkle of the sawdust ring, he almost persuades her to go away with him.

There are witty lines and a number of good gags, the climax coming in the second act, which is a dream circus performance with the family acting as performers under the canvas. The third act leads back to reality.

Paul Rose garners top honors. His imaginative and skillful direction keeps the action rolling with few dull moments. Praise is also due the relatively unknown cast. The show has a number of catchy tunes, two of them, "Oh, Mein Papa" and "Auf Wiedersehen" looking okay for the U. S. Fritz Pratorious created the tasteful setting which helped the play's mood.

In short, a play with a wallop and one that appears to have possibilities for the N. Y. stage. Hans.

Porgy and Bess

London, Oct. 10.

Blevins Davis & Robert Breen presentation of musical play in three acts by George Gershwin and Dubose Heyward. Stars William Warfield, Cab Calloway. Music, George Gershwin; libretto, Dubose Heyward; lyrics, Dubose Heyward and Ira Gershwin; settings, Wolfgang Roth; costumes, Jed Mace. Directed by Breen; musical director, Alexander Smallens; choral director, Eva Jessye, assistant musical director, Samuel Matlowsky. At Stoll Theatre, London, Oct. 9, '52; $2.80 top.

London has waited a long time to see this vibrant Negro opera, but to make amends for having been delayed in transit it will surely stay here for a long time to come. Its arrival here marked the final stage of its triumphant tour through Europe, and the acclamation of the opening-night audience left no doubt that the George Gershwin opera is one of the most impressive of American exports.

The production, staging and lighting are bold in their conception, and imaginative in their treatment. The decor (by Wolfgang Roth) is particularly impressive, and immediately conveyed the squalor and poverty of Catfish Row.

This is a big production in the fullest sense. A large cast is tautly controlled by astute direction; characters are speedily established, thereby eliminating much of the confusion that is common with presentations of this kind.

My Lucky Day

Irving Jacobson and Edmund Zayenda production of musical in two acts (eight scenes) by Louis Freiman, music by Joseph Rumshinsky, lyrics by Jacob Jacobs. Stars Edmund Zayenda, Irving Jacobson, Selma Kaye; features Yetta Zwerling, Miriam Kressyn, Mae Schoenfeld. Staged by Freiman; dances staged by Felix Sadowski; sets, Michael Saltzman. In an attempt to hypo the Yiddish theatre by attracting customers from uptown, "My Lucky Day," which last week kicked off the new theatrical season on Second Ave., is billed as a Yiddish-American musical. It offers about half of the dialog and song lyrics in English, and presents a talented new face to downtown audiences in the person of Selma Kaye, dramatic soprano who has appeared with the San Carlo Opera Co., at Radio City Music Hall, and with Italy's La Scala Opera.

All these factors, however, fail to hide the obvious flaws in Louis Freiman's trite book. Granted that the book is only to serve, as a thread for the presentation of the musical numbers, many of which are socko, it still gets in the way by provoking unintended laughs.

There is a wealth of talent in "My Lucky Day," both musical and comedy. Given the proper vehicle, it might attract uptowners to the Second Ave. showcase. In Yetta Zwerling and Irving Jacobson, the Yiddish theatre has a pair of outstanding comedy troupers. Their parody of popular American tunes, done all in English, is a showstopper.

Miss Kaye's thrushing, both of operatic arias and Joseph Rumshinsky's original tunes, is another of the production's highlights. She socks across her numbers in a voice stamped with charm and authority.

Both the main and the comedy sub-plot have a mother and a daughter vieing for the affections of the same man. Miss Kaye, as a widowed opera singer, brings over from Paris her protege, a Polish refugee singer. Latter, played by Edmund Zayenda, is torn between his affection and gratitude toward Miss Kaye and his self-denied love for her college-age daughter, portrayed by Miriam Kressyn. Triangle is solved when the mother makes the sacrifice, marries a long-time suitor, leaving Zayenda free for her daughter. Jacobson, cast as a butter-and-egg man, is not as fortunate, becoming the third husband of Miss Zwerling after unsuccessfully attempting to ward off her aggressive wooing in favor of her daughter, played by Mae Schoenfeld.

Zayenda, tall and handsome, is okay as the refugee singer, handling the role with the proper restraint. Miss Kressyn, Lucy Gehrman, Gustave Berger, Miss Schoenfeld and Esta Saltzman are all first rate.

Pace of the show could be quickened by cutting down on unnecessary reprises of the musical numbers. Except for a can-can number, dance routines are dull and the terpers might as well be doing a recital for a local parent-teachers association. Rumshinsky's music sounds familiar. Holl.

Kalmanoff Opera Gets Off-Broadway Preem

"Noah and the Stowaway," one-act opera with music by Martin Kalmanoff and lyrics by his wife, Atra (she's daughter of Bugs Baer), which made its radio bow over WNYC, N. Y., in February, 1951, is having its stage premiere currently by the American Lyric Theatre at the Provincetown Theatre, N. Y. First performance was Sunday (12), with three more skedded Oct. 19, 22 and 24.

The Kalmanoffs have finished their fourth music opus, a three-act opera titled "Godiva." Their three-act opera, "The Empty Bottle," was heard over WNYC last February, and is being mulled for legit staging.

'EDEN' 7G IN 4, WILMINGTON

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 14.

"Climate of Eden" drew a fair $7,000 in four performances at the 1,223-seat Playhouse here last week.

"Good Night Ladies" is here Wednesday through Saturday (15-18).

Ferrer-Old Vic Turndown Stirs London Uproar Vs. British Equity

London, Oct. 14.

Ruling of the Ministry of Labor, at the instigation of British Equity, barring Jose Ferrer from starring in an Old Vic revival of "Seagull," has provoked a storm of unfavorable comment. Press and public generally oppose the ban, the Daily Mirror calling it "one of the most inept union rulings in years."

Highlighting the situation is the fact that U. S. Equity recently rescinded, at least temporarily, its stringent new rule on alien actors and, as a result, the entire supporting cast for Katharine Hepburn in "The Millionairess" has been imported from England for the Shaw play's Broadway run. Under the temporarily Equity setup relatively liberal alien rules apply.

The British Equity move against Ferrer affects only his proposed Old Vic engagement. There is seemingly no intention on the part of the Labor Ministry or British Equity of interfering with the actor's announced plan to co-produce with Jack Hylton and star in his Broadway hit, "The Shrike," or to co-present with Hylton his other U. S. offering, "Stalag 17." Explanation is that the latter two projects are Ferrer's own creations from America, while the proposed Old Vic appearance would be employment that a British actor would otherwise get.

Labor Ministry-Equity position is admittedly a matter of "principle," since the salary involved was to have been the Old Vic minimum of $126 a week, which Ferrer had arranged to be paid to the Actors Benevolent Fund. However, Ferrer had revised his film and legit plans in order to accept the "Seagull" assignment. As a result of the ban, the Old Vic has dropped plans for the revival, in which the rising young actress, Claire Bloom, was to have been co-starred.

Ferrer, who had delayed his return to the U. S. to arrange for the Old Vic appearance, now plans to leave Thursday (16), but will be back here in a few weeks to go ahead with his production ventures with Hylton.

D.C.'s Prettied Shubert, Ex-Burlesquer, Opens As Legiter With 'Dial'

Washington, Oct. 14.

Operating as the Sam S. Shubert Theatre, the former legiter, Gayety Theatre, originally a burlesque house, threw open its doors last night (13) to present a facelifting which makes it compare favorably with almost any legiter in the country. Theatre is now under Shubert direction, with Milton Shubert as resident manager. House will still be owned by H. L. Hornick of Philadelphia.

House has a fancy new exterior, improved and streamlined lobby, a full painting and decorating job, new carpet, the boxoffice moved, and seats recovered. An additional 40 orchestra seats have been installed to give the 47-year-old theatre a total of 1,556, including the balcony and gallery.

Opening it for the Shubert management was Broadway-bound "Dial 'M' For Murder," starring Maurice Evans, first of the 10 plays being imported to D. C. by the Theatre Guild this year. Fancy opening night audience turned out, including the Spanish, French, Brazilian and Argentine ambassadors, numbers of admirals and other Government brass, and out-of-town show biz figures, including Mr. and Mrs. Lee Shubert, Mr. and Mrs. John Shubert, Lawrence Shubert Lawrence, Victor Samrock, Morris Jacobson, N. Y. Boxing Commissioner Robert Christenberry and others.

Meantime, the National Theatre opened another Broadway-bound play, Moss Hart's new "Climate of Eden," making it the first time in many years that Washington sported two pre-Broadway opuses at the same time. Both productions are slated for fortnight runs in Washington.

Fig Leaf

where, where audiences can be found who get their kicks out hearing cuss words in public and slanted references toward sex. But bigtime prospects look dim.

Basic premise and its exploitation during the three acts is so shallow as to be almost cynical. All action takes place in the living room of the McCall family, supposedly typically middle-class suburbanites whose world centers around the golf course and parlor bar. The situation springboard is furnished by the arrival of the daughter, who announces she's a mom-to-be. Tagging along is the pop-to-be. Things start getting relentlessly coy from here on out. It develops that while the young couple's affair has been "consummated," it is still to be legalized. He's eager to make an honest woman out of her but she refuses on the grounds he's never said he loves her.

Soon plowing into this "social" vacuum is a stuffy young business associate of the gal's dad. He offers to do right by the gal and during the course of events becomes a very fatiguing character for all concerned. Meanwhile, the old man and the "cad" develop a fondness for one another and in the inevitable "man to man" drinking bout they gleefully rehash the seduction scene.

The carryings-on don't end; they just fade out. The phone rings and it's the gal's doctor reporting his rabbits got mixed up and she is not pregnant after all.

Ernest Truex and Sylvia Field do their best on a rugged assignment as the McCall elders and their craftmanship shines through the hackneyed lines. James Costigan and Sally Moffet also manage to stir up a few sparks with their ice cream man-maid romance as the sub-plot. Barbara Bolton, as the supposedly pregnant daughter; Clifford Cothren, as the seducer, and James Lee, as the friend of the family, can write this off as experience.

Robert E. Perry's direction, on opening night at least, failed to provide some much needed dicipline in character development. Single living room set designed by Marvin Reiss provided a suitably stereotyped background. Dave.

Show Boat

Dallas, Oct. 10.

St. John Terrell's Motor Music Circus production of musical in one act (seven scenes). Music by Jerome Kern; book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, based on novel by Edna Ferber. Staged by Robert C. Jarvis. Musical director, Oscar Kosarin; sets by James Hamilton. At Texas State Fairgrounds, Dallas, Oct. 4, '52; $1.20 top.

St. John Terrell, daring impresario of the Lambertville, N. J., Music Circus, has brought Texas the premiere of his newest creation, the Motor Music Circus. His one-hour, streamlined version of the Kern-Hammerstein evergreen, "Show Boat," is also believed to be the first showing of the classic in abbreviated form, a staging condoned by Hammerstein, who assisted in the editing. Terrell's portable, tent-theatre-in-the-round debut is at the State Fair of Texas and within a stone's throw of Dallas' famed Theatre '52.

It's extremely doubtful that Terrell could have chosen a finer cast, expertly directed by Robert C. Jarvis. Opening show payees applauded heavily the talent and voices of Evelyn Wyckoff, John Tyers, Eleanor Lutton and William C. Smith. "Only Make Believe," duet by Miss Wyckoff and Tyers, is a showstopper, as is their teaming on "You Are Love." Miss Lutton's soprano enriches "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" and "My Bill" in her benign role of Julie. William C. Smith, as Joe, draws ovations on two bass voicings of "Ol' Man River." George Lipton and Helen Raymond are standouts as Captain Andy Hawks and wife, Parthy Ann.

The "Cotton Blossom" show boat is guided smoothly through troubled waters in a polished performance that could persuade Terrell to tour his mobile arena theatre. As of now, it's a Texas test of popularity. Response of the opening audience should decide Terrell to hit the road. His "Show Boat" production rates the welcome mat on any highway.

Costumes are elegant, spanning 20 years of fashion.

Oscar Kosarin, musical director, ably provides accompaniment for the vocalists from an eight-piece orch.

Motor Music Circus, in an umbrella tent, is presented three times daily, with five shows on Saturdays and Sundays during the fair's run, Oct. 4-19. Bark.

Jane
(COLONIAL, BOSTON)

Boston, Oct. 7.

With Edna Best and Howard St. John in the roles they created on Broadway last February, and with John Loder and Brenda Forbes as newcomers, this Guild company turns out to be fully equal to the original, and is currently going very big with the patrons of the Colonial.

Miss Best, whose presence, delivery and timing make for a performance of extreme skillfulness, misses not a nuance of the highly inflected lines of the comedy. Nor, for that matter, does St. John, whose style is a superb blend of authority, ease and assurance. And as it happens, they are fully matched in this company in every way by John Loder and Brenda Forbes, who bring a quality of additional sharpness and focus to the roles of Willie and Milly Tower.

Loder, easily one of the most distinguished-looking men in the theatre, handles himself beautifully and speaks his lines with a razor-like keenness, to achieve exactly the right blend of detachment and participation. Miss Forbes, too, brings the role of the wife up to a point of astringent brilliance that is as dazzling, technically, as it is amusing.

Richard Stapley, as the young man who marries the middleaged widow, plays his role very well, though it is a difficult one to make convincing. His wardrobe, however, seems somewhat out of character in the Mayfair set, though perhaps interior decorators eschew the dark grey ties, and the pin stripes of Bond street.

Nancy Wickwire and Peter Donat are agreeable enough as the young couple, and Paul Byron is entirely correct as the butler. The sets and costumes are, of course, very striking and the direction happily designed to give movement to a talky play. The production, in short, is as handsome as the principals are gifted in putting over this exceedingly polished sort of thing. Elie.

Leontovich Star, Stager Of Coast 'Web and Rock'

Hollywood, Oct. 4.

A dramatization of Thomas Wolfe's novel "The Web and the Rock," will bow at Las Palmas Theatre here Oct. 22 for a four-week breakin run, prior to Broadway. Eugenie Leontovich will direct and star in the play, which George St. George will produce.

Errol Colbert, a comparative unknown in legit, will play the male lead in the play scripted by Lester Kohen from the Wolfe novel, which is generally regarded as autobiographical.

a chance to catch on at the b.o., the closing notice was given immediately.

Management has thus far been unable to get any other regular West End house, and the various private club theatres that have been offered have too limited capacity to support the play. An attempt was also made to send the meller on the road until the theatre situation might be available, but the booking situation in the provinces is also tied up until after the Christmas holidays.

Equity Wrangle

The Strand, where "Troublemakers" opened and is still playing, is operated by Manor Trust, Ltd., an indie outfit of which Lionel Falck is director. Next booking for the house is reportedly "The River Line," Charles Morgan's new problem drama about a sort of underground railway for escaping Allied war prisoners in Belgium in World War II. Presented by the largest and most influential producing organization in England, it has received respectful but generally unenthusiastic reviews during its current tryout tour.

Cooper, Glenn and Linden, who went through numerous difficulties in producing the show, including a wrangle with British Equity over the right to import Lyons from New York for the leading role, have been figuring from the start on ultimately doing "Troublemakers" in New York, probably a year hence. Until the closing notice was served on them they thought the financing of the project here would be a snap, but without a successful London run as come-on, they now fear it may be much tougher to raise the necessary $50,000-$60,000 coin for the project.

Bellack, who staged as well as authored "Troublemakers," was a member of the New Dramatists Committee, and the script was one of four given scenery-less showcase presentation by that organization last season at the Palm Garden, N. Y. A former pressagent, TV-radio writer and mag author, he became acquainted with Cooper when his previous play, "Edge of the Sword," was produced by the latter a couple of seasons ago at the Dock Street Theatre, Charleston. Cooper has since been a TV actor-writer, doing a New York-originated series for kids, titled, "Magic Cottage," starring his wife, Pat Michael.

Equity Meet

the field. Paul Ross, one of the few Equity employes who does know the subject, is not present at the meetings and seemingly isn't consulted.

"Equity still hasn't learned anything from the bitterness generated by its high-handed policy last year. Last week, in choosing a few of the more docile managers to meet with them, they pointedly ignored the more outspoken people in the field and again boycotted the SMA. By not trying to find out the true conditions in stock, which by the way were the worst last summer in many years, the same old dictatorial action will create more injustice, resentment and confusion."

Another prominent SMA member, who is also an Equity member and therefore prefers not to get into the middle of a battle between the two groups, observed, "The report in the Equity magazine seemed to me disingenuous. The union has avoided recognizing or dealing with SMA, without ever having the frankness to say so. Equity has not for several years negotiated or even discussed matters equitably with the strawhatters. I think the misrepresentation in the report to the Equity membership is a confession that the union's position is indefensible. After all, a man with a good case doesn't have to misrepresent it."

HERE WE GO AGAIN: BE KIND TO THEATREGOERS

Editor, VARIETY:

It may be futile to suggest to producers that an improvement in handling mail orders may in the long run put more money in their pockets. But there's no harm in trying.

I have a sharply limited number of days for playgoing. Yet I am a devoted theatregoer. Last season, at the first announcement of "Venus Observed," I wrote for tickets, listing a number of dates that would be satisfactory to me. Months went by. Other plays I wanted to see were announced. But I couldn't order tickets until I knew on which date I was to have seats for "Venus Observed." Letters to the Theatre Guild went unanswered; inquiries by phone brought a runaround; a visit to the boxoffice brought snarls. In the end the tickets came; but it was too late for me to get to the other plays, as I will not go to scalpers for tickets and I cannot predict my free time too far ahead.

This season has begun exactly the same way. Weeks ago, at the first announcement of the Bea Lillie program, I sent a check for tickets, listing a series of midweek matinee dates when I could attend. I have already had to pass up several opportunities to order tickets in advance for other plays I want to see, as I have not yet heard about my first order.

And the individual performances are outstanding in their quality and sincerity, capturing the drama, pathos and atmosphere of the story.

With such able performances, the Gershwin score has a forceful, moving impact. William Warfield and Leontyne Price, filling the title roles, sing and act with equal polish. Warfield's "I Got Plenty O' Nuttin'" and their two duets, together with Cab Calloway's "It Ain't Necessarily So," are among the musical highspots, but all the lyrics are put over with feeling and emotion. Many of the tunes are show-stoppers, including the unique "Street Cries."

The distinguished cast makes a notable contribution and in the more prominent parts there are class performances by Helen Colbert, Joseph James, Joseph Crawford, Helen Thigpen, John McCurry, Georgia Burke and Sam Kasakoff. Myro.

Zadek, Virginia MacWatters, Laura Castellano, Giulio Gari, Arthur Budney, Josef Greindl, Endre Koreh and Erich Kunz. Last year there were 16 new singers, most ever added in one season.

Of the newcomers, Miss MacWatters sang Adele on Broadway over 500 times in the New Opera Co.'s production of "Rosalinda" in '42-'43; has been member of the N. Y. City Opera Co., and last season sang in the Met's special touring "Fledermaus" company. Miss Castellano also sang with the touring "Fledermaus." Budney is the third American-born artist; the other six are foreign.

American baritones Mack Harrell and Robert Weede have rejoined the Met after two seasons' absence. Also returned to the roster (he wasn't on it at the start last year) is Robert Merrill, who came back the end of last season, just before the spring tour.

Of special interest are some of the names missing this year. Kirsten Flagstad, famed, controversial soprano, is in retirement; Marguerite Piazza is in television ("Show of Shows"). Most noteworthy departure is Ljuba Welitch, tempestuous Viennese soprano whose debut a few seasons ago in "Salome" proved a bombshell.

Also off the roster are Bidu Sayao, Brazilian soprano who had top roles for some years; Jussi Bjoerling, one of the Met's great tenors; Martial Singher, baritone; Lois Hunt, young soprano, who's gone into the legiter, "Buttrio Square," and Lawrence Tibbett, who didn't sing last year but was carried on the roster as "on leave of absence." "On leave" in this year's roster is Herbert Janssen.

The new season will have several unusual productions. "The Rake's Progress" will be the first modern opera preemed under Bing's regime. In addition, for the first time at the Met, an opera will be presented in both its original and English versions, the conventional Italian "Boheme" vying with the new Dietz English version.

There will be a new production of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," presented on opening night, and a revival of Mussorgsky's "Boris Godunov," sung in English at the Met for the first time, and in the original music version instead of with the usual Rimsky-Korsakov revisions.

As to roster changes, Bing says he believes a new singer is often an exciting, welcome addition to a company. But since an ensemble rather than stars decides an opera company's quality, "it stands to reason that the continuity of an opera company, with as few changes as possible, must be a good thing."

Two Harpers' Legiters

Two books on the theatre are slated for January publication by Harper's. One is by Michael Chekhov, nephew of playwright Anton Chekhov, who was associated with the Moscow Art Theatre for 16 years and headed his own schools in England and the U. S. His tome, "To The Actor,' will have a preface by Yul Brynner, star of "King and I" on Broadway.

"Playwright At Work," by John van Druten, author of "Voice of the Turtle," "I Am a Camera," etc., is a personal document which covers principles of writing and directing plays, dramatic construction, staging and other problems, including autobiographical details from his 27 years inl egit.

Britain Wants H'wood Copy

For the first time since World War II, British newspapers are prodding their Hollywood correspondents to send more art and copy about film names. Sudden change is the result of an increased supply of newsprint abroad.

One English chain, Kemsley Newspapers, Ltd., has ordered its Coast rep to send everything he can, particularly glamour material.

Wyn's Pocket Books

A. A. Wyn enters the pocket book field this month with publication of Ace Double Novel Books. Each volume will contain two full-length westerns or two full-length detective novels. One will be a reprint and the other an original.

Inital detective package will be "The Grinning Gismo," by Samuel W. Taylor (reprint) and "Too Hot For Hell," by Keith Vining (original). Western will include "Bad Man's Return," by William Colt Macdonald (reprint) and "Bloody Hoofs," by J. Edward Leithead (original). Ace books will be peddled at 35c.

Smith's London O.O.

H. Allen Smith, the "Low Man on the Totem Pole" who got lost in the Horse Latitudes, explored life in a putty-knife factory, etc., in over a dozen humorous books, has gone literary—almost. His latest, published by Doubleday ($3), is "Smith's London Journal," a Boswellian or Pepysian diary of his junket to England and his times along the Thames.

It's a rambling day-by-day ledger, covering a wide range of subjects, a few seriously, some tongue-in-cheek and almost all highly readable and spiced with the Smith brand of whimsy. He tackles the British language, landmarks, customs and culture, larding the tome with droll items that don't find their way into college courses on England or learned studies of its literature. He got around a great deal, met and writes about the big and little people, and entertainingly demonstrates he knows all the Angles (not to mention the Saxons).

More Good Anthologies

David A. Smart's two monthlies have gone between covers with two separate anthologies. "The Girls From Esquire" (Random House; $3.95) and "The Bedside Coronet" (Doubleday; $3.95) excerpt the best from both of Smart's mags. While the Esky book is something of a titular misnomer, it does include plenty of glam and gam pix; but, essentially, it's in prose, themed of course about the eternal feminine.

The new "1951 Flair Annual" (Random House; $10) is one of the best production jobs the trade will ever see. Primed for the Xmas trade, with a special gift page for suitable donor inscription, Editor Fleur Cowles has expertly subdivided her "Flair for Communication," "Flair for Sentiment," travel, Americana, art and winter in an extravagant panapoly of variegated interests and appeal. It sums up to a highly readable as well as decorative adjunct to the library. This is one of those books that looks good on the table and great for riffling-through—but, also, defies not being interrupted for one or another feature. It retains the illfated Flair mag's flair for cutouts, artistic telescopic pages and extravaganza in dash, splash and sass. Withal, a fine job as designed by Federico Pall Avicini.

Another anthology, third in the series, is "The Best Humor Annual," edited by Louis Untermeyer and Ralph E. Shikes (Holt; $3.75), with bright pieces by S. J. Perelman, Frank Sullivan, Ludwig Bemelmans, James Thurber, Arthur Kober, Will Cuppy, Al Capp, John Crosby. For its purpose—a laugh book—it delivers. It's another for those nervous-readers—the pick 'em up and lay 'em down, at will.

Bennett Cerf has a new joke anthology, "Good for a Laugh," under Hanover House ($2) imprint, a subsidiary of Doubleday which publishes originals. From A for Armed Forces and Automobiles, B for Broadway and Barbers through T for Texas, U for Universities, V for VIPs and W for Writers and Women (which also takes in XYZ) he has organized his collection of gags, anecdota and toppers in fetching style. Book is also a big namedropping deal, i.e. ascribed to this or that w.k., but that's a good technique and paid off well with his previous click gag books.

A. P. Herbert, the British MP and playwright-librettist, in his foreword to "The Best Cartoons From Punch" (Simon & Schuster; $3), salutes Marvin Rosenberg and William Cole who edited and selected the 250 items, for their good judgment to point up his premise that humor is universal. It's merely the accent that is different. He cites the Peter Arno ribaldry as a sample of The New Yorker brand as against Punch's traditional good clean fun ("for the entire family"), and whether the tipoff comes from the highlighted jacket caption, "collected for Americans from England's famous humorous weekly," fact is that the British, they are a funny race too!

"The Argosy Book of Adventure Stories" (Barnes; $3) is also in the same idiom of collected bests from that man's mag although, to give it a little cheesecake appeal, the title-page is rather on the cleavage side. But the inside text is more virile, expertly edited by Rogers Terrill, editor of Argosy.

He Has the Makins

Andrew Tully, Scripps-Howard staff writer, writing his Potomac Patter column in the N. Y. World-Telegram Saturday (11), referred to Sir Roger Makins, the new British ambassador to the U. S., as possibly turning out to be a shock to Washington's refined diplomatic set.

"Instead of dwelling learnedly on things like quid pro quos and multilateral treaties," he wrote, "he's apt to sound like a cross between Harry the Horse and a Broadway pressagent. This is because Sir Roger is a great fan of the works of the late Damon Runyon and for years has been a subscriber to the theatrical newspaper, VARIETY. All I hope is that our cultured news photographers will know what Sir Roger is talking about when he tells them, 'Nix on pix, boys, I'm here to pick up a few quick G's'."

Help Wanted

Frank C. Gruber announced the temporary suspension of seven Michigan weeklies he bought 18 months ago. Papers are the Stanton Clipper-Herald, Sheridan Advertiser, Crystal Dispatch, Endmore Times, Howard City Record, Prufant Target and Breckenridge Star.

Gruber, a screen writer, says he can't find a competent manager for the publications.

American Writer Off Presses

First issue of The American Writer, new organ of the Authors League of America, is off the presses. It includes "Co-Publishing and the Author," by Ian Ballantine, publisher who favors bringing out tomes in hard and soft covers simultaneously, and "Let's See What Happens," by Harold K. Guinzberg, who takes a wait-see attitude to Ballantine's plan. Other pieces are on copyright and recording, by John Schulman, and on the Radio Writers Guild staff strike, by Stanley Silverman.

Editor John T. Winterich announces that he's paying for contributions: writers for the pocket-size mag will get two books.

Incidentally, the first co-publishing effort of Ballantine is Cameron Hawley's "Executive Suite," which Houghton Mifflin is bringing out in hard covers for $3 and Ballantine is publishing in paper covers for 35c. Simultaneous publication date is Nov. 7.

"News Editing and Display," by Charles H. Brown, assistant professor of journalism at Pennsylvania, will be published by Harper next month.

Lloyd Shearer has a profile of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis in the November issue of Redbook. It's titled, "The Mad, Mad Lives of Martin and Lewis."

Henry Schuman yesterday (Tues.) published "Adlai's Almanac," digest-collection of Gov. Stevenson's speeches and stories, compiled by Mary Waterstreet and Bessie R. James.

Revamped edition of "The American Thesaurus of Slang" will hit the stalls in December via Crowell. Tome, by Lester V. Berrey and Melvin Van den Bark, originally was published in 1942.

Donald Freeman, VARIETY's San Diego mugg, will teach a course in jazz appreciation at the U. of California Extension Service starting Nov. 6. Course is labeled "A Study of Jazz, From Buddy Bolden to Bebop."

James A. Wechsler, editor of the N. Y. Post; Douglas M. Black, Doubleday prez; and former Federal District Judge J. Waties Waring have been elected to the board of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"Charles Dickens: His Tragedy and Triumph," biography by Edgar Johnson, will be the Book-of-the-Month Club's January, 1953, selection. Book's publication date has been postponed from Oct. 20 to "sometime in January," by Simon & Schuster.

"The Second Happiest Years," first novel by John Phillips, pseudonym of John P. Marquand, Jr., has been skedded for February publication by Harper's. Phillips formerly was on the editorial staffs of Good Housekeeping and Cosmopolitan mags.

N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun music critic Louis Biancolli, who authored "Mary Garden's Story," has "The (Kirsten) Flagstad Manuscript" due soon via Putnam at $4. Dodd, Mead is bringing out "Selected Prose of Bernard Shaw" shortly at a $6.50 volume.

Harry N. Abrams has added four more volumes in the Portfolio Editions of the Library of Great Painters, which he is publishing at $1.50 a volume. They contain color reproductions (in some instances from originals owned by show biz personalities) of Picasso, Utrillo, Roualt and French Impressionists.

"Best Advice on How to Write," which completes the series of writing books by Gorham Munson, New School for Social Research, N. Y., prof, will be published by Hermitage House Previous tomes in the series are "The Written Word," "The Writer's Workshop Companion" and "Best Advice on How to Write."

"Minnie and Mr. Clark," story by stage manager Bob Downing about how a cat stole the show from Bobby Clark by strolling onstage during a performance of "Mexican Hayride," has been reprinted in the October issue of Cats Magazine, a publication for feline fanciers. Piece appeared originally in Theatre Arts in 1949.

John F. Harding, general counsel and a member of the board of Cowles Magazines, elected a v.p. of that publishing house. He continues as general counsel, but will also assume a variety of general administrative duties, working with g.m. Marvin Whatmore and Gardner Cowles, president of Look and Quick. Harding was associated with Cravath, Swaine & Moore, specializing in publication law and litigation, before joining Cowles Magazines.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

If an Eisenhower can meet a Taft and a Stevenson (male) can date a Warren (female), would it be news that a DeMille and a Scully spent three pleasant hours together at a time when conflicting political views have a whole country at a boiling point?

It was not the first meeting between these positive and negative poles of show biz. Twenty years ago the man with the worst social ideas and the best boxoffice mind in the production end of pix and the mugg with the best social ideas and the worst boxoffice mind in the biz had a bull session at the Hotel Meurice, Paris.

At our last meeting DeMille was going to Russia to see how it compared with a picture he had made. I think it was "The Volga Boat Song." When he came back he said, "Well, I've seen the Volga and I still think my picture is better than the original."

This was one of his few wrong guesses, because the river is still running and I haven't heard a thing about the picture in years.

But this doesn't mean I won't. I thought I heard the end of the entertainment possibilities of "The Ten Commandments" 30 years ago, but DeMille now has it in the hopper again, and by 1955 it should be the boxoffice picture of the year.

It won't be a remake, with a new title. It will be a new picture with an old title. Trust DeMille to pull a switch, proving once again that though he may be a creeping reactionary in politix, he is a galloping radical in pix.

Twenty years have not done much to Cecil B. DeMille physically, though it may have done plenty to him otherwise. In fact, some of the buffetings seem to have mellowed him. He was bald 20 years ago. No toupee conceals his fine head today. He used to take a long time to make a picture. He still does. He used to direct his pictures wearing the props of a civil engineer in the field. He hasn't changed in this respect either.

How To Stand On Your Own Feet

He gave a very sensible explanation why. Between pictures, even on the Paramount lot, he dresses like a conservative businessman—blue suit, white shirt, dark tie, highly polished black oxfords and dark, clocked socks. But when the production moves on stage and on location, he dresses as he did from the beginning.

"In production I have to be on my feet 12 to 14 hours a day," he explained. "Nothing can irritate a man or muddle his thinking like aching feet. I found out long ago that well-laced high boots practically eliminated this strain."

Thomas A. Edison once said that genius is nine-tenth perspiration and one-tenth inspiration. DeMille is that kind of genius. His pictures take years to prepare. It's an education to watch even a fragment of this preparation. His staff meets for luncheon every day at 1:15 in the Par commissary. They have a table for themselves. DeMille sits with his back to the wall facing his team, as if he were defending his goal from the one-yard line. His field secretary, Berenice Mosk, is at his right. She takes a full transcript of the yards gained or lost at these board meetings.

On one flank sits Henry Wilcoxon, the director's aide de camp, who starred for DeMille in "The Crusades" and still keeps his hand in acting. (He played in Metro's latest version of "Scaramouche" and did an emergency bit in "The Greatest Show On Earth".) But his main task these days is lightening the DeMille load in production and direction.

The other flanking end is held by Donald Haynes, billed as DeMille's executive assistant. Next to Haynes sits Henry Noerdlinger, a smart Swiss scholar whose specialty is research. At this stage of the production he is perhaps the most important man on the team. He has to have all the answers. The centre of the line is held by Jack Garris and Fred Frank, the writers. Garris specializes in history and theology, Frank in construction.

The push-button DeMille of bygone days is nowhere evident in this picture. His aides are polite but by no means the yesmen of legend. Afterward DeMille confided that he hires these men for what guidance they can give him. If a man agrees with him just to keep his ignorance from showing he will be fired as soon as it does. On the other hand, if a man says "no" just to show his independence when the answer should not have been "no," he'll get the axe in time, too.

By the time all have finished luncheon, the DeMille team has the dining room practically to itself. Yesterday's queries now come up for today's answering. That obelisk. How can it be raised as it would have been raised in Biblical times? It has to be all of one piece. Out comes a sketch on a small piece of paper. DeMille reaches for it. He raises further questions. The writers try to answer them. The research expert drops his findings into the hopper.

DeMille vs. Notre Dame

The conference goes on like a quiet game of chess, though the lineup still looks like DeMille defending his goal against a much younger Notre Dame backfield. After an hour some of the problems are solved and time is called till they meet the next day to solve some more.

DeMille and Wilcoxon repair to the DeMille building with their luncheon guests, and on the way DeMille points out the barn where he made his first picture, "The Squaw Man" (cost, $15,450; grossed $225,000.) At that time the barn was at Hollywood & Sunset, where NBC now stands. It was moved some years ago to the Par lot. It looks as well kept as DeMille himself. He obviously is quite sentimental about it.

In fact, he is quite sentimental about a lot of things. A long corridor from the main entrance to his private office is a walk down Memory Lane. A still from about every picture he ever directed is framed on the walls. He directed 75, produced 275 in all. His cheapest starred Ina Claire, cost $10,811.65, took seven days to make and grossed $60,000. He made one losing picture. That was "Four Frightened People." Wilcoxon said it made $184, but DeMille insisted it was loser because prints hadn't been deducted from the profits.

Cecil B. DeMillions

All these figures, of course, will become also-rans when grosses on "The Greatest Show On Earth" are ultimately tallied. "Samson and Delilah" broke all records for DeMille and Par, but "Show" has already topped those figured in indivdual situations by 300%. More people have seen it already than saw "Gone With the Wind," the industry's alltime top-grosser till "Show" entered the field. Par figured "Show" would do $17,000,000. They have revised their estimates and look for it to gross $22,000,000 to $25,000,000 in the world market.

He feels that pictures are for the first time in their existence now in show business. Before the coming of TV, pictures were in business but not in show business. They made fabulous runs because it either was cold outside and warm inside the movie houses or hot outside and cool inside the theatres. But until TV came around, Hollywood did not have to compete with other media of show biz for that entertainment dollar. Now Hollywood has to pull people out of their homes, and it takes an overwhelming attraction to do it.

He's 71, and next spring will be celebrating his 40th year in pix. Critics may say he still can't direct a love-scene, but he knows how to live one better than anybody else in Hollywood, for he and "Gretchen," as he calls his wife Constance, first met in the cast of Charles Frohman's "Hearts Were Trumps" in 1900 and recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

When all is said and done, it doesn't take much directorial skill to make two people do what you can see amateurs doing on any park bench or in any doorway. But it takes a showman to take the greatest show on earth and top it with more thrills in shorter time than anybody, even P. T. Barnum, ever knew were there.

give odds from 8 p.m. on which candidate will win. Mickelson conceded that Univac will be unreliable for the first two or three hours, but by the same token, he said, the machine itself will be able to tell viewers exactly how unreliable it is, on the basis of the information it has received up to that time.

Single CBS camera will be stationed in Philadelphia to pick up pictures of Univac at work. Walter Cronkite, who again will spearhead the election returns (he fronted for the CBS crew during coverage of the political conventions) will be operating out of the web's Grand Central Station, N. Y., studios. Around him will be a super control board, a unit typer and a unit printer. Viewers will see him punch out problems for Univac and then see the answers appear instantaneously on a blown-up teletypewriter behind Cronkite's head.

NBC-TV, which reportedly pitched for the Univac after CBS had set its deal, will be operating in much the same way with the "Monrobot," built by the Monroe Calculating Machine Co. While not quite so large as the R-R brain, the Monroe machine will be used to spot trends as election returns pour in from across the country. NBC will also utilize special totalizers built for the web by National Cash Register, which will be able to give instantaneous totals of all results as they come into the web's studio 8-H in Radio City, N. Y.

Both webs plan to use visual presentations to keep viewers up to date on the most important contests—Presidential, House, Senate, and state gubernatorial. NBC will start airing its results on radio at 8 p.m. and on TV at 9, but will cut into the 8 to 9 TV show (Texaco Star Theatre) from time to time with results. CBS, with no sponsored show in the 8 o'clock slot, will open on both AM and TV at 8 p.m. Both webs will remain on the air until the winning candidate is known.

whereas in doing an adaptation he gets only a fee and has no equity in the property despite the amount of rewriting done.

Upped Fees

Phipps revealed that scripters of the hour-long video dramas are now earning $1,000 to $1,500 per script. He conceded that the fees have risen considerably during the last few years but said TV's drama writers are still underpaid, especially in comparison to writers of comedy shows, who sometimes earn much more for writing one or two short skits. Phipps has written for the Philco and Goodyear Playhouses and Robert Montgomery show, as well as last year's "Clock," "Lights Out" and Faye Emerson's "Wonderful Town." During the last weekend, he had originals produced on both Philco and the Montgomery show.

Explaining his method of writing, Phipps said once he gets an idea for an original drama, he can turn out a completed script in a week. He has his curtains in mind first, so that he can work from there in building to the climax of each act. Phipps keeps editing or camera-cutting in mind as he writes, but leaves the actual blocking out of camera shots to the director, except occasionally to suggest a closeup to point up the action.

Phipps said his main ambition now is to pen an original TV drama which will have enough merit to rate a crack at Broadway legit production, with only a minor rewrite job.

Deejay Chides ASCAP's 'High Horse' Career; Cheers BMI 'Enterprise'

By JOHN WRISLEY

Savannah, Oct. 16.

Editor, VARIETY:

I'd like to present a thought or two concerning the headline article last week. Your "ASCAP Songsmiths' BMI Blues" story includes a line which reads, "ASCAP men wonder, to what degree are the DJ's under the radio and recording influence....and if so, to what degree do they psychologically or realistically favor BMI tunes over ASCAP?"

I've been tangled in the web of the disk jockey era for only seven years, but perhaps I can dig into this typical recorded and transcribed mind of mine for an answer to the above.

First of all, nobody can sit down and listen to a song and detect whether it's BMI, ASCAP, SESAC, etc. If the DJ is interested he can generally get that information from the record label. If he is employed by a "blanket-license" station, he usually doesn't care. Since most of the stations have that type of license, we must assume that most of the DJs have no reason to care about the song's affiliation.

But....when BMI was born it came into the world in difficult times, musically speaking. It was conceived to fight the ASCAP "ogre." Thus it necessarily had to have a fighting spirit. It had one ....and it still has one. It fights an effective psychological war, using the DJ, the music librarian, the

Peak U.S. Ballet Interest, With $5,000,000 Potential, Yet Least Units on Tour

An ironic situation exists in ballet currently. For the first time in years, no foreign troupe will tour the U. S. Also for the first time in years, only one major U. S. company is out on tour, with cream territory all to itself.

Interest in the classic terp art is at its highest in show biz, with ballet interpolations in films, legit, tele and other branches hypoing the draw of the art-form in the concert field. Yet the country, with a $5,000,000 ballet boxoffice potential, is getting less ballet this year than for several seasons, with the smallest number of troupes going out.

There are different reasons for this anomalous situation, but the chief one is rising costs. Sol Hurok, vet ballet impresario, had planned touring the N. Y. City Ballet this year, for its first in the U. S., but his budget ran too high, and the company wouldn't cut its personnel and productions, and sacrifice quality, to reduce the nut. Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, which has toured the past 14 seasons, losing coin steadily the past few years, decided not to go out again [illegible]

$16,000 'Wish' Profits Makes Chumps of Crix

"Wish You Were Here," still making chumps of the critics by playing to over-capacity houses, is now earning the highest weekly operating profit of any show in recent years. For the last few weeks, with standees the rule at all performances, the Arthur Kober-Joshua Logan-Harold Rome musical has garnered over $16,000 a week operating net.

The Leland Hayward-Joshua Logan production, which returned its $50,000 overcall about a month ago, has since returned another $50,000 of capital and will probably distribute a similar amount next week.

Pension Fund Would Be Set By ASCAP Writers

Although beefs against the new cleffer payoff plan are down to the lowest level in the history of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, a move is currently afoot to add a "social security" angle to the distribution system. Proponents of the "social security" for ASCAP writers point out that it does not involve any radical revision of the 30-30-20-20 plan, which goes into effect with the next melon to writers.

Under the suggested amendments, a specified percentage of each writer's quarterly payments

State Dept. Nixes Trip For Luciano Pic Talks

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

The State Dept. has nixed a passport for Phil Tucker, who planned to go abroad for huddles with Charles "Lucky" Luciano on a biopic of the deported gangster, but Tucker plans to proceed with film plans anyway. Discussions will be carried out via "night letter" cable.

Luciano will finance film, which is budgeted at around $300,000, Tucker planning to start shooting within 30 days.

Luciano will do the intro and narration with that footage being shot in Italy. Tucker says Luciano's narration will admit he did lots of things wrong, and will warn kids against life of crime, preaching that his deeds cost him a chance to live in the U. S.

Tucker says he'll work without salary, getting 25% of profits after negative cost have been [illegible]

WOO PLAYGOERS OUTSIDE N.Y., CHI

By HOBE MORRISON

In what is perhaps the most revolutionary step yet taken to revive the legit theatre outside New York, an early curtain across-the-board for all shows may be adopted for the road.

The idea, involving a drastic revision in the public's playgoing habits, reflects population trends and social changes in the U. S. Plan promulgated by a special committee of the League of N. Y. Theatres calls for extension of the current Broadway schedule of an early curtain Monday nights and would apply it every night of the week everywhere but in New York and Chicago.

It's figured that the moved-up performance (probably 7 o'clock) would bring back to the theatre the young married suburbanite who has baby-sitter problems and must catch an early train or bus to his job in town the next morning. This huge public is believed to have given up the playgoing habit largely because of the difficulty of meeting the unrealistic conditions imposed by the old 8:40 performance hour.

Although the exact time of the early curtain would have to be determined by extensive survey and might involve different hours in different towns according to local conditions and custom, the idea as a whole is regarded in New York managerial circles as basically in line with present times.

Bishop Fulton J. Sheen will have a commercial sponsor on his DuMont television show this season, having signed yesterday (Tues.) with Admiral Corp. for the series which resumes Nov. 18. Admiral will pay $1,000,000 to bankroll the bishop's series of 26 weekly half-hour talks in what represents a hefty public service investment, since all coin except what DuMont gets for its facilities goes to the bishop's Mission Humanity fund, an international and interdenominational charity organization.

Admiral inked the pact for one year, with an option for two more. ## Exhibs Eye New Off-Hours Coin In Industrial Theatre TV; Lees Preems Potentially lucrative new business for film theatres, which will give exhibitors around the country a chance for the first time to earn some money in the hours before their boxoffices open, preems Dec. 8 with the first national sales conference to be held by an industrial organization through the medium of theatre television. Outfit is James Lees & Sons, carpet manufacturers, which has set a deal with Nathan L. Halpern's Theatre Network TV to present a closed-circuit sales meet in 15 key cities.

Economics of such big-screen conventions presages new revenue for theatres, which actually represents found money since it's to be made in off-hours, according to Halpern. He said that arrangements for payments to theatres carrying the Lees sales convention are still being worked out, but predicted that filmeries will eventually have an average of one such closed-circuit meet a week, which could net them an extra $1,000 each week.

Importance of such big-screenings to industrial firms, which actually permits them to roadshow a convention on a grassroots level, is equally obvious. According to Halpern, it would cost Lees about $325 per man to travel its salesmen to one central point for a sales meet, or about $400,000, whereas it will be able to stage its presentation at a central N. Y. studio and have its entire sales staff across the country sit in on the "show" for a

Marilyn's Kisses to Give Hubby Novelty Reaction

Omaha, Oct. 21.

Every happily married man in this country probably would get more thrill from kissing Marilyn Monroe than from kissing his wife, because of a "novelty reaction, the stagefright phenomenon." That's what psychologist Dr. George W. Crane, syndicated columnist, told Omahans last week.

There were no dissenters in his audience at the World-Herald's Better Living Forum.

American Legion Vetoed By UA On 'Limelight' Tabu

United Artists has nixed a request by the American Legion for the distrib to hold back on release of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" pending investigation of Chaplin by the U. S. Department of Justice. Request was made in the form of a resolution adopted by the Legion at its convention in Indianapolis earlier this month. Copy of the resolution was sent to UA execs in New York.

UA answer is that it's under contractual obligation to distribute the film and the contract was entered before there was even any hint of Attorney General McGranery's publicly-stated blast at the producer-comedian and announcement of a probe to determine

'That's What I Like 'Bout NBC Deals'—Phil Harris

The deal negotiated between NBC's video chieftains and Phil Harris whereby the network has an exclusivity on the comic-singer-bandleader's TV services, is believed unique in broadcast annals. It goes like this:

Harris gets paid $104,000 a year, at the rate of $2,000 a week for a full 52-weeks. However, he's only committed to eight guest shows a season, which pays him off on the basis of $13,000 per guest shot. Further stipulation, however, is that the final verdict rests with Harris on the skits and material used. He is also guaranteed $3,000 per appearance for a writing staff.

NBC-TV is writing off $[illegible] exclusivity [illegible] Harris and [illegible] Because [illegible]

Winchell, N.Y. Post Battle Goes to Court; Daily Charges Libel

Battle between ABC commentator Walter Winchell and the New York Post has reached the legal stage. And as the fighting grows more bitter, the Gotham daily is preparing another "expose" of the gabber and N. Y. Mirror-King Features syndicated columnist.

Post is bringing libel action against Winchell and the other parties involved in his ABC (AM & TV) shows in New York County Supreme Court, according to Marvin Berger, head of the Post's legal staff. Amount of damages sought and attorneys of record have not yet been stated.

Action stems from Winchell's radio and television broadcasts of Sunday (19) and his references to the Post and its editor, James Wechsler. WW made the comment on the evening paper and its editor on his telecast at 6:45 p.m., in the form of a message to Gov. # Bette Faints But Show Goes On, Then Cold Knocks Her Out of Det. Revue

Detroit, Oct. 21.

Following her collapse on stage Sunday night (19), at the opening performance of "Two's Company," Bette Davis found herself unable to play last night's (Mon.) performance of the revue, in which she is making her first legit appearance in 22 years. Miss Davis, accompanied by co-producer Michael Ellis, appeared just before curtaintime and apologized to the audience, in a whisper, for a cold and laryngitis that, she said, made it prohibitive for her to play a performance. Her physician had forbidden her to appear, she explained, but she hoped she would be able to appear tonight (Tues.). Her condition made this seem doubtful.

Miss Davis, who has been nursing a cold all week, appears in seven sketches in the James Russo-Michael Ellis production, and all seven were eliminated from Monday night's performance. Miss Davis, the management explained, has no understudy. The audience was told it could get refunds if they did not wish to remain for the Davis-less show, and approximately 25% took advantage of the suggestion. Those who remained were told that they could witness a special midnight showing—with

Pres. Truman Presents Bob Hope With GI Scroll For 'Greasepaint' Role

Washington, Oct. 21.

Bob Hope, who has entertained U. S. troops all over the world during the past 10 years, received a unique form of "Thank You" yesterday (20)—a huge scroll of appreciation signed by thousands of servicemen and by the generals headings all commands of the Armed Services.

Scroll was presented at the White House by President Truman. Hope did not overlook the opportunity for a gag or two. He told Pres. Truman to take Jane Russell along on his next whistlestop tour to "get some of the bigger and better whistles."

The comic also pointed that that he had signed the scroll. Mr. Truman looked down the list, picked out his own signature to show that, he, too, had signed.

It is estimated Hope has played more than 1,000 Camp and Hospital shows in the past decade. He started out in 1942 with a trip to Alaska and followed up with shows in Europe, North Africa and in continental U. S. By 1944 he played in the Caribbean area and later in the Pacific fighting area and Australia. Following the outbreak of the Korean War, Hope was the first name entertainer to do a month of shows in Hawaii, Japan and Korea.

Minevitches Divorced

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Mrs. Borrah (Betty) Minevitch has been granted a divorce from the harmonica act impresario, now a film and TV producer in France. They had been estranged for many years, the wife residing here, while the owner of the "Harmonica Rascals" and other acts is a resident in Paris.

Minevitch is currently in the U. S. on a business trip.

Gigli, Gracie Fields Set for Command Vaude

London, Oct. 21.

Some 40 acts have been named for the Command Vaudeville Performance to be held at the Palladium Theatre Nov. 3. Among the list are Beniamino Gigli, Gracie Fields, Billie Worth, Jeff Warren, Donald Burr, Deep River Boys, Nanci Crompton and Winifred Atwell.

Dominant British contingent includes Norman Wisdom, Joy Nichols, Vera Lynn, Ted Ray, Jimmy Edwards, Max Bygraves, Beverley Sisters, the Crazy Gang, Reg Dixon and Rob Murray.

British Plan Amending Copyright Law for Pix To 25 Yrs. of Protection

London, Oct. 14.

Proposals for an amendment of the copyright law for films has been submitted to Parliament by a committee set up last year by Harold Wilson when he was president of the Board of Trade. Its findings, which were published as a blue book last week, recommend that copyright in a film should remain with the producer for 25 years following the date of trade showing, with special provision to protect writers, composers, etc.

During the period of its inquiry, the panel, of which Sir Henry S. Gregory became chairman after Lord Reading joined the government, took evidence from within the picture industry and also from the Performing Rights Society.

Its recommendation to limit copyright to 25 years followed a comment from the British Film Producers Assn. that most films were not alive after 10 to 15 years. They therefore considered that protection for 25 years was ample. It is also suggested that provision be made for protection during production, and for films that have been completed but which remain in the vaults. In such cases they would enjoy copyright as an unpublished works.

Because authors and composers are already protected by copyrights which endure for 50 years after their deaths, the committee suggests that these rights should continue and it would give equal protection to the original author as well as the scripter.

Exhibitors who asked for protection against innocent infringement of subsidiary copyrights of music have been told that the committee does not recommend any special legislation to deal specifically with this issue. They have, however, made a recommendation which has bearing on the contractual relationship to be established between composers and film companies.

Reds Pitch Nazi Films to Arabia

Berlin, Oct. 14.

According to the information office of the West German Federal Government, the head of the Soviet film export outfit, Sovexport, had a couple of Veit Harlan pix screened in Muehlhausen, East Zone of Germany, and took them to Moscow. The Moscow propaganda office carefully meanwhile watched the political development in Germany, and paid special attention to the German-Israelitic rehabilitation negotiations.

After the agreement between the West German federal government and Israel and Jewish world organizations, Moscow suddenly showed its hand. Sovexport reps showed up some weeks ago in Arabian countries of the near Orient and offered them the Veit Harlan anti-Jewish pic, "Jud Suess," and the anti-British film, "Ohm Krueger." The titles of these pix have been changed, but nothing has been cut.

Soviet attention for the near and middle-East is characteristic. Moscow hopes to take advantage of the increased tension in the relations between Arabia and Israel. With "Jud Suess," Moscow is reported figuring to make the relationship between Jews and Arabs more critical and "Ohm Krueger" to point up to the Arabs that England's colonial policy does not care about the national interests of the Arabian people. It is interesting to note that the Moscow propaganda office and also the Commie press are not protesting any longer against the showing of Harlan pix. Also that demonstrations carried out in West Germany against showings of these films have been ignored.

Mpls. Cabbies in Trouble For Joining With Boston Drivers in 'Maxie' Parade

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

Ten Minneapolis Yellow Cab taxi drivers, union members, face suspension or fines because they, unthinkingly or otherwise, participated with their cabs in a KSTP-TV parade arranged in connection with the local visit of Boston taxicab drivers, who stopped over in the Twin Cities on their coast-to-coast tour to plug the Eddie Cantor "Maxie, the Taxi" character in the TV "Comedy Hour" show. Latter is carried here by KSTP-TV, a NBC affiliate.

It was a faux pas as far as the local cab drivers are concerned, because KSTP is on organized labor's unfair list and is being picketed. The AFL charges the station with locking out its union technicians who went on strike two years ago.

Borscht Belt Alumnus Schary Finds It Too Chic

Dore Schary returned to Grossinger's, the borscht circuit resort hotel where he broke into show business with Don Hartman (now production head at Paramount), and came back to New York on Monday overwhelmed by the lavishness of the Catskill Mt. resort. "It's so fancy and different, with its own airport, Olympic swimming pool, de luxe atmosphere—I just can't believe it."

Artist Asks 100G For SDG Portraiture Which Became a Bust

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Miriam Lyons Steinhart, portrait painter, filed suits aggregating $100,000 against the Screen Directors Guild of America and a number of its members, charging breach of contract. Artist declared she painted pictures of leading directors with the understanding that they would be auctioned at a charity ball which the guild would sponsor. The ball and the auction, she charges, never took place.

Named in the suit are George Marshall, Cecil B. DeMille, King Vidor, Albert S. Rogell, J. P. McGowan, Morris R. # MPAA VS. FOREIGN RETALIATION

New Faces Getting More Skeptical Of H'wood, Go Slow Before Signing

Eastern talent scouts, continuing their quest for new Hollywood faces, are meeting more and more difficulties in the eventual signing of new, young talent. Not only are they faced with a paucity of talent suitable for films, but they are running into all kinds of complications in getting an aspirant to sign on the dotted line.

Although the players show an initial interest in a Hollywood career and visit the talent-digger's office frequently for career-counseling, the diggers report an amazing number of pullouts just as a deal is about to be consummated. Frequently, according to one talent ogler, this is due to the advice of agents and personal managers, who, he claims, are often detrimental factors. The actor, he says, is all set to sign when the agent or personal manager advises in effect, "Don't sign now for $200 a week. I'll get you a Broadway show and then they'll come after you with offers of $1,000 per week."

Latter, according to the talent-oglers, is an example of the inflated views of Coast salaries. Even names currently working in television, say the scouts, are asking $350 per when they were willing to accept a picture offer a year ago for $350.

Among other reasons for the backouts, the scouts report, is a reluctance to uproot family ties in New York, fear of giving up steady incomes from modeling and video, and doubt of career possibilities in Hollywood. Latter, says one digger, stems from talking to other actors, who say: "Why go to Hollywood? You'll sit around for a year doing nothing and then they'll drop your option."

Scouts say this policy has long ceased and in today's market studios can't afford to keep non-working talent on contract. Filmeries, they point, only sign a player for particular pix or if they're sure the aspirant is a type that can be used in a number of upcoming films. The era of decorative starlets with limited acting talent has passed, the diggers stress.

Skouras, Visiting Tokyo, Vs. All Restrictions On Pix Imports to Japan

Tokyo, Oct. 14.

Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, here (8) with Mrs. Skouras for a three-week look see at the Japanese market and local 20th-Fox offices, told a press confab that there should be no restriction on importation of foreign films into Japan. He felt that the right to select their films belongs to the people, and that other free countries such as Britain, France, Mexico and Italy had no film import restrictions such as prevail here.

Discussing the current controversial matter of film rentals, Skouras stated that 'the rentals always must be proportionate to production costs. He added that musicals and super productions, which carry heavy budgets, are always accepted eagerly by the Japanese people and he believed their proportionately higher rentals would impose no heavy burden.

Skouras predicted that TV theatres would prosper in such a densely populated country as Japan. Edward Ugast, 20th-Fox Far Eastern supervisor, and the company's Japan general manager William W. Sullivan have planned inspection of local show biz for Skouras.

Arnall Stumps for Adlai On Whistle-Stop Tour

Washington, Oct. 21.

Ellis Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, hit the political trail last Friday (17) on a stumping tour for the Democratic Presidential ticket. He made clear that he was whistle-topping as an individual and that the chore had no connection with his motion picture job.

Arnall, ex-governor of Georgia, is on a speaking tour through Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and West Virginia. On Oct. 26 he will be on a Chicago roundtable radio program with Governor Sherman Adams, of New Hampshire, chief of General Eisenhower's campaign staff.

Heavy Trading In Cinerama As Mayer Heads Bd.

Heavy trading in Cinerama, Inc. common stock, which began after the company's first production was unveiled at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y., Sept. 30, became even more pronounced this week following appointment of industry veteran Louis B. Mayer as board chairman of Cinerama Productions, Inc. Naming of the onetime Metro production head to the post, Wall St. sources say, was a definite factor in further stimulating public interest in the outfit.

Mayer will devote his time to Cinerama production in association with Merian C. Cooper. Lowell Thomas, whom he succeeds, becomes vice chairman and continues active participation in company affairs. Other officers retain their present posts and their financial interest in the firm remains unchanged. Controlling stockholder is prexy Dudley Roberts, Jr.

In the wake of Cinerama's tremendous success at the Broadway with a group of shorts welded under the title of "This Is Cinerama," the company reportedly has its sights set on installing its special equipment in about 100 theatres across the country. Production for these screens would be geared at from six to eight full-length features annually. Also, pix in the

Youngstein Cites UA's Brit. Film Prod. Plans

London, Oct. 21.

An outline of the achievements of the new setup at United Artists in which an expanding British production program was to play an important part was given here last week by Max E. Youngstein, company's ad-publicity veepee, who came here with Arnold Picker for world preem of "Limelight." Within nine months the company was operating in the black and the battle for a strong operation was won, he pointed out.

Apart from its interest in "Moulin Rouge," in which UA held western hemisphere rights, Youngstein stated the company was directly associated with four British pix in which they would control world distribution. Two are currently in production in London, being Sam Spiegel's "Melba" and "A Roughshoot," Raymond Stross production with Joel McCrea and Evelyn Keyes. On location is "Scarlet Spear," a Technicolor pic.

The deal inked last week with Steven Pallos calls for production of "The Fake," with Dennis O'Keefe and Coleen Gray. UA is to handle 36 pix in the current year. On British production, the company objective is world-wide distribution.

WON'T VIOLATE 'FREE TRADING'

While a few individuals would like U. S. Government-imposed restrictions on the entry of pix from any country which sets up barriers against Hollywood product, the Motion Picture Assn. of America continues firmly against any such retaliatory action. Agitation for some form of clampdown on Mexican films in the U. S., as the result of new Mexican legislation against U. S. pix below the border (see separate story), was stirred in New York trade circles this week.

But MPAA prez Eric Johnston and heads of the MPAA member companies hold to the belief that this would be contrary to their free-trade principles. It's felt that to encourage Government intervention in behalf of the American industry against the industries of other nations could have further repercussions.

Basically, the MPAA has been a strong advocate of unencumbered world trade, and this position obviously would be impaired if the MPAA itself looked to the U. S. Government to hamper films of other countries. American industry even nixed the idea of Government reprisals against British films when England imposed its tough and shortlived ad valorem duty on U. S. pix in 1948. The MPAA acted on its own via an embargo on the shipment of films to England, and this, of course, led to an agree-

DEPINET PLANS ONLY TO RELAX FOR AWHILE

Ned E. Depinet, who ankled the RKO presidency earlier this month, states he has plans "only to relax and unwind after being in responsible executive positions the past 40 years." He became a district manager in 1912 following work at his father's theatre in New Orleans.

Depinet reveals he'll offer advice to the new RKO-ites in control as it's requested, but no thought about taking an active role in the industry at this time. There's some sentiment favoring Depinet's helming the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, of which he was first president, but he hasn't thought about that either.

Johnston Gets Truman OK On Pvt. Investment Setup

Washington, Oct. 21.

Eric Johnston was granted White House okay last week to set up a clearing house in the U. S. to collect information on opportunities for private investment abroad.

The Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy is unpaid chairman of the International Development Board, which works with the State Department on the Point 4 Program.

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, has postponed his trek to Paris, which originally was scheduled for last Saturday (18).

He picked up a cold shortly before his skedded departure and now plans to make the trip this week.

Grant Quiets Exhib Fears On TV for RKO

If there's to be TV in RKO's future, it's far from being realized. Quieting exhib fears of a quick liquidation of the studio's library via sale to telecasters, board chairman Arnold Grant told a press meeting in New York yesterday (Tues.) that the study alone of a pic sale would require nine months to a year, or, perhaps, a year to a year and a half. And no one has been assigned to such a study as yet, he added.

RKO topper covered a wide range of subjects but declined to discuss the past week's Wall St. Journal RKO series, considering that a matter to be handled by the individuals involved in the financial daily's reports.

Yesterday's luncheon session with trade, metropolitan press and financial reporters had been booked prior to the first Journal installment last Thursday (16), thus

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Holds Strong; 'Ivanhoe' No. 1 for 4th Week In Succession, 'Snows' 2d, 'You're Mine' 3d

While this session is offish in many locations, the stronger pix continue to make great showings in a majority of key cities covered by VARIETY currently. Only two new entries figure in ratings with enough playdates to place them in such category. But the old favorites are continuing to rack up smash trade, with the result that the top five films this stanza will show a gross in excess of $1,210,000.

"Ivanhoe" (M-G) is champion for fourth consecutive round, with a gross of $429,000 or only about $20,000 behind last week. Second place goes to "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th), although it is the first stanza out to any extent. "Because You're Mine" (M-G) is finishing a strong third, just a step behind "Snows."

"Quiet Man" (Rep), which was second the two preceding weeks, is winding up fourth, while "Back At Front" (U), out on extensive release for first time this frame, is capturing fifth position. "Miracle of Fatima" (WB), third last week, is taking sixth money.

"Crimson Pirate" (WB) is finishing seventh, with "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Son of Paleface" (Par) rounding out the Big Nine list in that sequence.

"Somebody Loves Me" (Par), "Just For You" (Par) and "Full House" (20th) are runner-up films in that order.

"The Thief" (UA) is attracting the most interest of all the newcomers. It is fast in San Francisco, big in Toronto, nice in Los Angeles, solid in N.Y. and okay in Philly. In Rochester, it is grossing near "High Noon" trade while in Salt Lake City the pic is running close to "African Queen" biz. "Lusty Men" (RKO), which comes into N.Y. this week, is big to sock in most locations. "Springfield Rifle" (WB), also new this stanza, shapes trim in Cincy but slow in Pitt.

"Four Poster" (Col) is disappointing on its N.Y. preem in two houses, but okay in arty Sutton. "Way of Gaucho" (20th), also new, is disappointing, but okay in Portland and good in Denver.

"One Minute To Zero" (RKO), big in Pittsburgh, is good in Montreal. "World in His Arms" (U) shapes fine in Montreal and N.Y. "Beware My Lovely" (RKO) looks nice in Cincy.

"Stranger in Between" (U), okay in Boston and N.Y., looms good in Chi. "Big Sky" (RKO), neat in Baltimore, shapes mild in Philly and Indianapolis.

"Golden Hawk" (Col) is trim in Chi. "Duel at Silver Creek" (U) looks virile in Louisville. "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th) shapes fair in Boston.

"Hellgate" (Lip), okay in Minneapolis, is big in Denver. "Son of Ali Baba" (U), bright in Baltimore, looms good in Detroit and Pitt.

SEC Reveals Zanuck Right to Prod. As Indie; But He Has No Such Plans

Twentieth-Fox has agreed to a provision in Darryl F. Zanuck's employment contract permitting the studio v.p. to engage in independent production to the extent of making two pix a year, it's revealed in a letter to Zanuck from 20th prez Spyros P. Skouras. Copy of the communication, which was dated Sept 19, 1952, was uncovered this week in official corporate papers filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission.

If he elects to engage in the indie lensing, Zanuck would be employed by 20th on a part-time basis, according to the letter.

In L.A. yesterday, Zanuck issued a statement, relayed by 20th's New York homeoffice, in which he emphatically declares no intention of either leaving 20th or swinging into indie film-making. "I can elect to change my status from active production to an advisory capacity," stated Zanuck, adding: "This stipulation was made at the time the question of temporary salary reductions arose last year, in order to clarify certain phases of the existing contract."

Zanuck's statement read further:

"I have not signed a new contract with 20th Century-Fox.

"As the largest single stockholder in the 20th Century-Fox company my interests are concentrated exclusively with this studio and will

Binford 'Limelight' Nix For Trade Showings Stirs Memphis Stew

Industry lawyers commented this week that Memphis censor Lloyd Binford's ban on even exhib trade showings of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" might open the door to an official clampdown on Binford's further bluepenciling activities.

Allegation is made that the 85-year-old Binford overstepped his authority in denying a distrib

Film Industry Maps New Strategy To Get Ohio 'Pre-Restraint' Ruling

Stymied on two counts in its attempt to beat down film censorship in Ohio, the industry this week began mapping new strategy in order to obtain a clear-cut state-wide ruling on the constitutionality of the pre-restraint of pix shown in the Buckeye State.

With the State Attorney General failing to appeal the pro-film decision of a Toledo Municipal Court pertaining to the censorship of newsreels, thereby limiting the ruling to Toledo alone, the Motion Picture Assn. of America, which has been masterminding the reel battle, is set this week to spring a surprise move, heretofore kept under wraps in order not to tip off the nature of the new legal step.

Film attorneys have discovered that under Ohio law a local prosecutor can ask the Attorney General for a ruling. It's believed this approach will be used in setting up another test case in a city yet to be selected.

Meanwhile, Classic Pictures, acting independently of the MPAA, will resubmit the film, "Native Son," to the Ohio Censor Board after the State Supreme Court refused the distrib outfit a hearing on the censor's board original turndown of the pic on the technicality that its petition was filed too late. In order to get the state censors to reconsider the film, Classic has made some cuts in "Son" and is presenting to the scissors-wielders what is ostensibly a new version.

"Son" was originally nixed in 1951 and, according to Ephraim London, attorney for Classic, outfit was informed of the 10-day appeal limit four days before the expiration date. Before Classic prexy Max Rosenberg received a reply to his letter asking for an explanation, the appeal time had lapsed, London said. Attorney, who successfully argued the "Miracle" case before the U. S. Supreme Court, said

End of 'Shenanigans' Predicted by Levy In Arbitration Adoption

Jacksonville, Oct. 21.

End of haphazard bidding and "under-the-counter shenanigans" will result from following the rules of the industry arbitration plan, Herman Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America, told the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors here today (Tues.)

Proposals, agreed to by the Drafting Committee, Levy stated, do not deprive exhibs of the right and privilege to go to litigation. Under the plan, he pointed out, only distribs will be compelled to submit to arbitration while exhibs can seek relief either in arbitration or litigation.

Pitching strongly for the acceptance of the industry arbitration plan by exhibs, Levy said that only "jungle warfare" lies ahead if the various elements of the industry did not okay the final draft.

"No system of arbitration can contain everything that everybody wants," he pointed out. "TOA however, stands ready to recommend to its units any plan that can be agreed upon by the several segments of the Industry Arbitration Conference."

He told the Florida exhibs that TOA had received a copy of the arbitration plan approved by exhibs, but neither he nor the TOA had had an opportunity to examine it yet. Based on a preliminary reading and on a statement by Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy Eric Johnston that it had not been submitted to exhibs on a take-it-or-leave-it basis, Levy said that he could state with confidence that arbitration was a reality.

Under the proposed system, the TOA exec said an exhib will be able to obtain for the first time in industry history "speedy and effective relief of any or most of his problems for less than $100." Although admitting "there remain matters to be amicably adjusted before signature," he said he could not see how any of them could be permitted to become "an insurmountable obstacle." As it stands now, Levy said the plan would be the greatest boon to the small indie exhib.

$8,104,000 Amus. Taxes From 12 Largest Cities

Washington, Oct. 21.

Amusement taxes are levied by only 12 of the nation's largest cities—those with 250,000 population or more—and they grossed $8,104,000 from this source last year, according to the latest roundup by the U. S. Census Bureau.

Philadelphia took in the largest share, $3,078,000.

Ceiling Pay For Schenck, Rubin, Mannix, Thau

Sweeping pay cuts among executive personnel which Loew's, Inc., instituted last August as part of an economy drive, have resulted in salary ceilings for four company officers, it was disclosed this week. In agreements inked Aug. 6 modifying the quartet's employment contracts, the firm stated that "fixed salary and percentage compensation" for each shall not exceed $146,799.

Affected by the ceilings are, for example, prexy Nicholas M. Schenck, veepee-counsel J. Robert Rubin as well as veepees Edgar J. Mannix and Benjamin Thau, among others. As announced by Schenck and Metro production chief Dore Schary before some 4,000 studio employees July 9, cuts would apply only to salaries of $1,000 per week or more and would vary in size from 25% to 50%.

Wage slashes do not affect expense allowances, nor will they be considered in computing basic earnings under the retirement plan for Loew's employees. Cuts are effective for the company's fiscal year, beginning Sept. 1, 1952, and ending Aug. 31, 1953.

That the pay slices apparently have effected substantial corporate savings is seen in application of the percentage reduction scale to Schenck's own compensation. According to a proxy statement mailed Loew's stockholders last March, he received a total of $224,768 (not including retirement fund benefits) for the 1951 fiscal year.

Under the company's reduction table those personnel who come within its scope have their total

MPEA HEARS 27% QUOTA LIKELY FOR GERMANY

Motion Picture Export Assn. has been advised by its German rep that despite vigorous American opposition, the proposed 27% German playing-time quota stands a good chance of early approval by the Bonn Parliament. As presently worded, the measure would not conflict with the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

It is believed that the quota will be part of a package bill to be presented to Parliament. Measure also provides for setting up a film bank. German pix even now frequently garner more than 27% of local theatres' screen time.

U-I Branch Managers Huddle at Studio

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Eleven Universal-International branch managers opened a three-day conclave at the studio yesterday (Mon.) for briefing on finished product by Nate Blumberg, Milton Rackmil and William Goetz.

Delegation includes D. J. Goldman, Milwaukee; W. Blum, Cincinnati; Arthur Greenfield, Seattle; Joseph G. Leon, Philadelphia; C. Hudgens, Oklahoma City; Dave Miller, Buffalo; L. J. Miller, Minneapolis; Samuel Oshry, Indianapolis; Ernest J. Piro, Portland; B. J. Robbins, Detroit, and Abe Swerdlow, Los Angeles.

Rep's 807G Net

Republic Pictures and its subsidiaries this week reported net profit of $807,447 for the 39 weeks ended July 26 after provision for Federal normal and surtaxes amounting to $870,000.

Company had net profit of $728,270 for the equivalent 1951 stretch. Taxes for that period came to $630,000.

Examine John Davis In Pathe-GFD Suit; Jurisdictional Issue

Old Pathe Industries vs. General Film Distributors suit continued in New York last week with a full-day examination of John Davis, managing director of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, by Morris Gutt, attorney for Pathe. Question session was interrupted to permit Davis to take a 10-day business trip to Canada. Examination is set to resume Friday (24) and, according to Gutt, may last the better part of a week.

Crux of the issue is whether GFD comes under the jurisdiction of the Federal Court. Court order directing Davis to appear for examination here, or be questioned in England, was obtained by Gutt on Sept. 23, 1952.

Original action was brought by Pathe in New York Supreme Court last November, with GFD being sued for recovery of $500,000 in alleged damages resulting from a breach in a 1947 agreement between Eagle Lion and the British distrib. Eagle Lion pact with Rank provided for an exchange of selected films. Pathe, as the parent company of EL, charged improper exploitation by GFD of EL pix and demanded fuller accounting.

GFD, represented by the law firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim, petitioned to have the case transferred to the Federal Court on the grounds of diversity of citizenship. In that court, GFD denied the complaint and held that the court had no jurisdiction over GFD, which has no business in New York. GFD further asked the court not to undertake jurisdiction on the basis that all acts of the contract were outside of the U. S. The judge then ordered a trial of the issues arising out of the jurisdiction question.

Examination of Davis aims to establish that the transaction of GFD affairs does give the court jurisdiction over the case.

REALIGN EXEC TITLES AT TOA IN NEW YORK

Further evidence that the Theatre Owners of America has dropped, at least for the present, all intention of seeking a "name" replacement for executive director Gael Sullivan was indicated last week with the quiet realignment of titles of the N. Y. office execs. Howard Bryant's title was changed from service coordinator to administrative director while that of Dick Pitts was altered from executive assistant to director of public relations. Sullivan ankled the $40,000 yearly top post last month after being with the outfit for four years.

While Bryant and Pitts have assumed many of Sullivan's duties, general counsel Herman M. Levy is spending more time at the Gotham headquarters, commuting regularly from New Haven, where he maintains his law practice. In addition, it's expected that Walter Reade, Jr., exec veepee, will play a more important role in the running of the office and will be available for on-the-spot policy statements during the absence of prexy Alfred Starr, who operates theatres in Tennessee.

Cole Wants Allied to Deviate Full Time To Trade Practices, But Execs Frown

Proposal by Col. H. A. Cole, prexy of Texas Allied, that the board of Allied States Assn. of Motion Picture Exhibitors weigh its withdrawal from participation in all industry-wide ventures, in order to devote full time to combating distrib trade practices, has been greeted by industry execs with both skepticism and resentment.

Walter Reade, Jr., exec v.p. of Theatre Owners of America, rival exhib outfit, likened the Cole suggestion to the U. S. quitting the United Nations because it wasn't getting along with the other countries. Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox sales topper and a member of the governing triumvirate of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, declared that it was "a terrible statement for him to make." He added that Allied has been constantly at war with distribs ever since coming into existence. "They started along those lines," he said, "and have kept at it for years." He said Allied members were successful in bringing about the Government antitrust suits against the film companies, and if they keep it up, he added, "they'll succeed in destroying both the production and distribution end of the business, and eventually will be out of business themselves."

Other execs, who declined to be quoted, termed the Cole proposal as another ballyhoo come-on for the Nov. 17-19 National Allied convention in Chicago. "He's just getting up steam so there will be a big turnout at the convention," one exec stated.

Suggestion To Snaper

Cole's recommendation was made in a letter to Wilbur Snaper, Allied topper. He refers to the role of Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, in the drafting of an arbitration plan; to that of Trueman Rembusch, former Allied prexy, as a member of the governing board of COMPO, and to Cole's own part as co-chairman of

Bogeaus Sued Over 15G Promissory Note

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Arvilla Marinelli filed suit in Superior Court against Benedict Bogeaus, demanding payment of $15,000 on a promissory note signed in 1950.

Note, apparently designed to cover added funds for film production, was first delivered to Telinvest, Inc. Later it was transferred to Commonwealth Plastics, Inc., and finally to Marinelli.

UK, Eire Grosses Off, Attributes It To Lagging Pay

Although Universal International has had a considerable increase in billings over the past two years in the United Kingdom and Ireland, overall grosses have been down slightly, according to Douglas J. Granville, the company's home-office rep in those territories. He attributed the slip in the b.o. take to the fact that salaries haven't risen in proportion to the climbing cost of living.

In analyzing the situation, Granville minimized the effect of television upon attendance except when video's cameras cover big sporting events. Moreover, he added, despite a high entertainment tax, filmgoers will turn out for a "big" picture at a scale comparable to if not greater than any time over the past few years.

Granville, who arrived in New York last week on the Queen Elizabeth, plans a several weeks' stay in the U. S. to huddle with both homeoffice and studio execs. He heads for the Coast next Wednesday (29) and will look over new U product, among other things.

U's distribution in the United Kingdom and Ireland is handled by J. Arthur Rank's General Film Distributors on a long-term agreement. Companies' association with Rank was described by both Granville and U world sales chief Al Daff as a "happy one" which has mutual advantages. U, for example, releases Rank product in 22 countries.

Reviewing conditions in general, Granville declared that British exhibitors are still pressuring the government for relief from the 39% entertainment tax without noticeable results, new theatre construction has been negligible due to government restrictions and the industry is getting a greater slice of Eady Fund benefits.

Schary's Anti-Commie 'Hoaxters' Documentary Getting Big M-G Push

Although no sales policy has been set yet, Metro is expecting widespread distribution of "The Hoaxters," a 44-minute documentary history of the Communist Party in America. A personal production of studio chief Dore Schary, film is set for late Novem- will be pushed with feature-like will be pushed with efature-like ballyhoo.

In addition to newsreels, Government clips and war films, pic contains heretofore unreleased footage from behind the iron curtain.

Narration is handled by Metro players Robert Taylor, Howard Keel, Barry Sullivan, George Murphy, Walter Pidgeon, James Whitmore and Marilyn Erskine.

Government offcials and Motion Picture Assn. of America execs viewed the pic last week, and arrangements have been made for Metro to turn over a number of prints for Government use.

RKO'S ECONOMY ON EXEC PAY

Johnston Burns at Indecision

Meeting of the Motion Picture Export Assn. last week to determine a policy on allocation of films to Japan produced a mild set-to over a problem which has arisen at many top-echelon industry meetings in the past. It's the matter of participants at the sessions not having authority to vote on any issue without checking back with their individual companies.

Eric Johnston, MPEA prez, did a burn when a couple of the conferees at last week's meet revealed they would have to take up the Japanese situation with their chief execs before making any decisions. Johnston had come up to New York from his Washington headquarters specifically for the conclave and had hoped for quick action.

Difficulty inherent in the idea of company reps required to "check with the principals" is a toughie to solve. For company presidents or other officers authorized to take formal action because of their own timetables, are not always free to attend the MPEA meets.

10 MPEA Members Insure Pix Flow Into Japan, Give Up 1 Permit Each

All ten of the Motion Picture Export Assn. member companies have now agreed to give up temporarily one Japanese import permit apiece. Move safeguards the continued flow of pix into Japan for the second half of the fiscal year.

Difficulties arose when the Jap government reduced U. S. total licenses from 63 to 59 for the second half. MPEA companies have been unable to agree on who will take the rap. Current arrangement has the American distribs picking up 53 permits and worrying about the remaining six later.

Company prexies are scheduled to settle the matter once and for all by mid-November, although the basis on which it's to be done hasn't been determined. Foreign managers reached tentative agreement in the permit hassle last week but Paramount threw in a monkey-wrench. Par position was that some formula should be found to divvy up the permits to avoid future wrangling. Suggestion was made that the whole issue be taken to arbitration.

When the prexies meet to dispose of the six permits, the possibility of arbitration again will be taken up. It's understood, however, that Par agreed to the current arrangement without tying its approval to future arbitration proceedings.

RKO Faces Hassle With Pub-Ad Union Due To Firings in Reorganizing

RKO last week faced a hassle with a labor union representing pub-ad staffers. The Sign, Pictorial and Display Union, Local 230, AFL, has signified that it will protest the dismissal of present staffers and their replacement by individuals from outside the organization.

Union officials were scheduled to meet with Robert Goldfarb, personnel manager, late yesterday (Tues.) and indicated that if satisfactory assurances were not obtained, an unfair labor practice claim would be filed with the National Labor Relations Board. So far, two members of the present staff have been dropped while three additions to the crew have been made. A third staffer, originally pinkslipped, has been reinstated. Duties of many of the other staffers will be shifted as a realignment is made, according to Kay Norton, the new publicity manager.

Union's pact with RKO only permits dismissals for "just cause" or economy reasons. Miss Norton termed the firings as economy measures and said the jobs had been eliminated. However, union's contention is that it is a case of out-and-out replacement although the duties of the new staffers might be different.

Labor outfit has instructed its members at RKO to sit tight and if fired, not to accept any severance pay until a decision is obtained on their rights under the existing pact.

Wald's Status

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Jerry Wald up to tonight (Tues.) was awaiting a ruling from the RKO board, in regular session in New York, on his demand that he be ruled a free agent. The company regards "Size 12" as his final committment and to be personally consummated.

Wald has other bids pending but until declared a "free agent" he claims he is in suspense. Columbia Pictures looks like his most likely affiliation.

Lesser Voices Indies' Concern Under New RKO

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

What happens, under the new RKO setup, to indie producers who have been making pictures for release through that company? That is the question raised by Sol Lesser, who has been doing business with RKO for a dozen years or more. To date, he said, he has not heard a word from the new management about the eight deals he had been negotiating with Ned Depinet, former president of the outfit.

Lesser further stated he had heard a report that the new regime would drop the old policy of depending on indies for the greater share of the RKO releasing program. In view of the fact that his product has been responsible for a good portion of RKO's annual gross, he declared he wants to know exactly where he stands in the new deal. Unless some arrangement is made, he added, he may take his product elsewhere.

In the past, the producer explained, he had often talked over deals with Depinet, and his pictures were often released before the contracts were actually signed.

In addition to Lesser, the most active contributors to RKO's releasing program in recent years have been Samuel Goldwyn and Walt Disney. Goldwyn recently signed a new five-year contract. Disney's pact winds up with the delivery of "Peter Pan," "Bear Country" and a number of shorts. Disney's "The Sword and the Rose," currently in work in England, is financed by himself and has no definite release outlet.

Fadiman RKO Story Ed

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Sherrill Corwin has appointed William Fadiman as RKO story editor to succeed Harry Tatelman, who has been given a special assignment on the lot.

Fadiman has been working with RKO producers on story treatments since 1947.

SAVINGS BINGE ON ALL FRONTS

RKO's economy binge is taking definite shape on the personnel salary front, with newcomers to key jobs for the most part taking deals providing substantially less than the payoff to outgoing execs. Board chairman Arnold Grant's $2,000-per-week remuneration is about the same as collected by former prez Ned E. Depinet, who, incidentally, is collecting $100,000 as severance pay. But thereafter the payroll differs.

Exec v.p. Arnold Picker has a deal for $1,500 per week plus a block of stock. Phil Reisman also had collected $1,500 per week but Picker has charge of worldwide sales while Reisman's job was limited to helming the foreign department operation.

Al Crown, new foreign department director, reportedly is drawing $450 weekly for the time being. It's understood an angle here is that the payoff to Crown, as well as some other new officials of the company, may be given a stock participation. Also, all salaries will be reviewed in about six months and revisions which are in order will be made.

Charles Boasberg, new head of domestic sales, it's indicated is getting $650. Robert Mochrie, predecessor in the top domestic spot, drew $1,200 a week.

Richard Condon, ad-pub director, is understood to be getting $400 a week. RKO hadn't had a man in that job for the past four years. But S. Barret McCormick, as ad chief, and Terry Turner, exploitation director, operating their departments individually, were paid around $600 each, it's reported.

McCormick bowed out Monday (20) and Turner's departure from the company followed yesterday as a result of the axing of expenses. McCormick and Turner could have stayed but wouldn't resolve differences over the pay cuts which the new management insisted upon.

Additionally, Turner insisted on the privilege of running his department autonomously as he has done in past, and the idea was nixed by RKO.

Appointees to jobs at lower levels similarly are being taken on at retrenchment salaries.

UA Slow Picking Picker Successor

United Artists is going slow on appointment of a successor to Arnold Picker as head of the foreign department. Distrib wants an exec with top administrative ability, one who can take over without causing any rub with key personnel in the foreign field.

Major factor is that UA has completed full reorganization of the foreign setup and the entire department is now running efficiently. Foreign market income is steadily mounting and UA wants to make certain that the smooth operation is maintained under a new man. Candidate will not be considered until Picker's official bowout Nov. 15.

Overhaul of the department was undertaken by the Arthur Krim-Robert Benjamin regime shortly after they took control of the company early last year. When Picker switched from Columbia to UA this year he followed through with the reorganization via appointments supplementary to the exec personnel setup made under Krim, Benjamin, et al.

Louis Lober, second in command under Picker, will be directly in charge of the department in Picker's absence pending appointment of the new foreign chief.

Picker is due in New York from Europe on the Queen Mary next Tuesday (28) following a tour of the film outfit's offices in England and on the Continent. He was also on hand for the London preem of Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" last week.

Curiosity About 'Mail Order Pic Biz' Led to Wall St. Journal's RKO Series

Curiosity as to whether there was a link between the mail order business and the film industry was the key that touched off the Wall St. Journal's series the past week. about the business background of RKO's new management, according to Henry Gemmill, managing editor of the financial daily. Articles, Gemmill said, stemmed from a natural desire to find out who the new owners were because of the obvious disparate businesses involving the key principals in RKO's new management.

With the first official statement from the RKO flackery describing the new prexy, Ralph Stolkin, as a mail order executive, Gemmill said he wondered if this were the beginning of any possible merger between a film company and a top mail order house such as Sears, Roebuck or Montgomery, Ward. Consequently, he wired the Journal's Chicago office to look into it, and assistant bureau chief John McWathy assigned K. Ames Smithers to the story.

Smithers checked the leading mail order firms and found neither Stolkin nor his father-in-law, A. L. Koolish, listed among the executives. However, he learned that both were connected with Empire Industries, which sold seat covers, coonskincaps, pens and silverware by mail. Smithers also came up with information about Stolkin's former tie with Monarch Sales Corp., which had been cited by the Chicago Better Business Bureau, Post Office Dept., the Federal Trade Commission and the Chicago Crime Commission.

Similar inquiries, Gemmill asserted, went out to all the Journal offices, a process he said was normal in the checking of any story. The Dallas office, for example, for-

Journal's RKO Plus

Wall St. Journal, which has been running the series on some members of the syndicate in control of RKO, only recently published a report favorable to the company.

Quoting "some followers of the motion picture stocks," the daily on Sept. 27 related that the film company probably will be in the black in 1952 despite the "disappointing first six months."

RKO issue, incidentally, has been tumbling on the N. Y. Stock Exchange. It's now at around $3.87½ per share, down from the year's high of $4.87½ reached a few weeks ago.

Wall St. Bestseller

First installment Thursday (16) in the Wall St. Journal series detailing the sensational backgrounds of several of the new owners of RKO saw all newsstands going clean in the midtown Manhattan area and in L. A.

Not only all RKO-ites but all the homeoffices, radio-TV outfits, ad agencies, et al., made it a quick grapevine so as to create a run on the financial sheet.

Reisman-Kennedy Tie Recalls Their Old Film Assn.

Phil Reisman's "resigning" last week from RKO as vice-president in charge of foreign, followed immediately by his assuming the post of veepee of Joseph P. Kennedy Industries, N.Y., recalls that the film man and former Ambassador to Great Britain are old friends, dating back to Kennedy's associations in the picture business. Reisman winds up at RKO in a week, like ex-RKO prexy Ned Depinet, he will be on a "consultation" deal. This will take Reisman until his pension period, when all benefits under the plan continue.

Reisman states that he has been assured by Alfred Crown, ex-Samuel Goldwyn Productions foreign veep, that the RKO personnel "will not be disturbed;" that his (Reisman's) worldwide organization is a readymade nucleus for the new RKO management.

Technically, Reisman's first and only meeting with the new RKO board chairman, Arnold Grant, took place two days after Reisman's return from Europe on the SS Liberte, after the trade press almost officially indicated his inevitable exit from the company with which he had been associated for 23 years. While Grant personally was tactful, neither to confirm nor deny Reisman's exit during the interim period, Reisman told the new RKO topper that while he "could find no fault with what you did," he did object to "how it was done." This referred to a cable from RKO's new president, Ralph Stolkin, to come home at leisure, as soon as he completed his foreign business.

Reisman had gone over to mend some fences in an RKO "unity"

Army Picture Next On Schary's Personal Sked

An army pic dealing with the training of infantrymen, entitled "Take the High Ground," will be the next personal production of Dore Schary at Metro. Film will mark the fourth production which the M-G studio chief will supervise personally this year, the others being "Plymouth Adventure," "The Hoaxters," an anti-Communist documentary, and the currently-shooting "Dream Wife." Schary expects to begin work on "High Ground" shortly after he returns to the Coast on Oct. 26. No cast or director has been set as yet.

During a Washington visit last week Schary went over the Millard Kaufman script with Defense Dept. officials and received assurance of Government cooperation. Good part of the film will be shot on location at Fort Ord, Cal.

RKO Cancels Ad Orders Pending Dept. Reorg; Reshuffle Personnel

Pending reorganization of its ad-pub department, under its new director, Richard Condon, RKO has put in a cancellation order on all national advertising which can be pulled. Order means a cessation of mag insertions and a holdup on national campaigns until reappraisal of the entire promotion operation is completed. Whether Foote, Cone & Belding continues as RKO ad agency is as yet unclarified.

In another switch, all ad work which had been carried on at the studio has been moved to New York. Rough drafts of ads, including tradepress insertions, had been sketched on the lot, with Howard Hughes' approval on copy and art work required.

Meanwhile, Condon has been reshuffling personnel in New York, with Kay Norton appointed as director of publicity. RKO thus be-

Metro has made "Plymouth Adventure," the story of the Mayflower's perilous voyage to America, a large-scale sea spectacle, lavishly presented to command important bookings and boxoffice in the country's top keys. Elsewhere, the outlook is good, as this type film, when done in such sweeping style, provides strong entertainment.

The Dore Schary production, ably executed, puts more emphasis on the voyage itself and the attendant dangers than on developing the characters into flesh-and-blood people. To this emphasis has been brought photography that is strikingly beautiful in its Technicolor hues, and technical skill that makes a raging storm sequence a film milepost in sea thrills. While lacking in characters that are more than mere marionets, the film compensates in its bigness otherwise.

Some weighty casting, marqueewise, has been used to portray those pioneers who came to a new land for the freedom of worship denied them in England. To Spencer Tracy falls the chore of enacting Captain Christopher Jones, the tough, earthy master of the Mayflower. Gene Tierney is the tragic Dorothy Bradford and Leo Genn her husband, the William Bradford later to become the first governor of the new colony. Van Johnson is John Alden, the carpenter who ships on the voyage and later marries Priscilla Mullins, played by Dawn Addams. They are all competent, even though time is not taken in the overall treatment to permit them to become real people. Clarence Brown's direction registers strongest in punching over the drama wrought by nature during the voyage. At other times he is inclined to let the pace drag as the characters tie into the dialog. Helen Deutsch did the script from the novel by Ernest Gebler, and the dialog appears more erudite than the station in life of the characters would indicate.

The film opens with the gathering of the settlers who will voyage under the auspices of the Virginia Co. to the new land, unaware they are being tricked by the agent and will be sent to land near Cape Cod, many miles north of the presumed landing. Along with the Speedwell, the ship that is to stand by in the new land through the winter months, the Plymouth begins its voyage, only to have to turn back for another start after the Speedwell becomes unsafe.

Finally, with 102 persons aboard, the Mayflower starts again and the voyagers are put through a round of almost unendurable hardships as short supplies and winter storms add to the dangers. After weeks at sea, the rigors of the trip are climaxed by a raging storm, terrifyingly depicted on the screen as a thing of monstrous waves and wild winds that batter the ship and its passengers. The rescue of William Bradford by the captain, after the former has been swept overboard, is a highlight in this storm sequence. The voyage continues, as do the hardships, until Cape Cod is sighted, a landing made and the Mayflower Compact signed. The first winter on land is survived and Captain Jones again heads his ship for England, a better man for his contact with the determined settlers.

Lloyd Bridges has the featured spot as the first mate, Coppin; Barry Jones does William Brewster, religious leader of the group; Noel Drayton is Miles Standish and John Dehner appears as Gilbert Winslow, narrating some of the action-bridging sequences.

Credit for the outstanding photography goes to William Daniels, while A. Arnold Gillespie, Warren Newcombe and Irving G. Ries supplied the highly skilled special effects. Robert J. Kern edited, giving the film a smooth 104 minutes of footage. The Miklos Rozsa music score is good. Brog.

The Steel Trap

(SONGS)

Good suspense drama, touched with comedy, for general companion feature bookings.

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

20th-Fox release of Bert E. Friedlob (Thor) production. Stars Joseph Cotten, Teresa Wright; features Eddie Marr, Aline Towne, Bill Hudson. Written and directed by Andrew Stone; camera, Ernest Laszlo; editor, Otto Ludwig; music, Dimitri Tiomkin; song, Tiomkin and Stan Jones. Previewed Oct. 13, '52. Running time, 84 MINS.

As a suspense drama, touched with comedy, "The Steel Trap" is an acceptable companion feature for general situations. Familiar names of Joseph Cotten and Teresa Wright, plus an interesting plot idea are combined to offer sufficient entertainment to meet and satisfy the demands of the regular program market.

Bert E. Friedlob produced independently for release through 20th-Fox and the presentation makes good use of locales in New Orleans and Los Angeles to background the story. Andrew Stone's direction of his own story emphasizes suspense that is leavened with welcome chuckles of relief, in telling the improbable but entertaining events that happen to an assistant bank manager in the hectic hours between late Friday afternoon, when he steals $1,000,000, and the following Monday morning, when he returns it. Amusing premise is satisfactorily carried out through the comedy suspense developed by Stone's direction and Cotten's excellent trouping.

Cotten is the minor bank exec who succumbs to a larcenous impulse and lays plans to heist the million when the bank closes on Friday, take off via plane with his wife for Brazil, where there is no extradition treaty with the states. Suspense continues to mount as Cotten encounters such frustrating difficulties as passport trouble, delays in plane transportation from Los Angeles to New Orleans that cause him to miss the Saturday plane to Brazil and, finally, customs curiosity that reveals to his wife he is a thief. Refusing to go along with his plan, she heads back home and he, after a few hours of anxiety and remorse, does the same thing, arriving back in time to return the loot to the vaults without the bank being the wiser. Cotten vows to shun future thoughts of larceny.

Cotten is very good, and Miss Wright is capable as the wife. Other roles are minor, although nicely done, with Eddie Marr, Jonathan Hale, Carleton Young and Walter Sande making the best showing.

Ernest Laszlo's camera work is excellent, as is the Dimitri Tiomkin music score. One tune, "So Much to Me," cleffed by Tiomkin and Stan Jones, is used in a New Orleans nitery sequence. Brog.

The Iron Mistress

(COLOR)

Film version of bestseller novel with Alan Ladd, Virginia Mayo. Average entertainment but okay b.o.

Hollywood, Oct. 16.

Warners release of Henry Blanke production. Stars Alan Ladd, Virginia Mayo; features Joseph Calleia, Phyllis Kirk, Alf Kjellin, Douglas Dick, Tony Caruso, Ned Young, George Voskovec, Richard Carlyle. Directed by Gordon Douglas. Screenplay, James R. Webb; from novel by Paul I. Wellman; camera (Technicolor), John Seitz; editor, Alan Crosland, Jr.; music, Max Steiner. Previewed Oct. 14, '52. Running time, 109 MINS.

| Jim Bowie | Alan Ladd |
| Judalon de Bornay | Virginia Mayo |
| Juan Moreno | Joseph Calleia |
| Ursula de Veramendi | Phyllis Kirk |
| Philippe de Cabanal | Alf Kjellin |
| Narcisse de Bornay | Douglas Dick |
| "Bloody Jack" Sturdevant | Tony Caruso |
| Henri Contrecourt | Ned Young |
| James Audubon | George Voskovec |
| Rezin Bowie | Richard Carlyle |
| General Cuny | Robert Emhardt |
| Dr. Cuny | Donald Beddoe |
| Andrew Marschalk | Harold Gordon |
| Dr. Maddox | Gordon Nelson |
| Judge Crain | Jay Novello |
| Nez Coupe | Nick Dennis |
| Mrs. Bowie | Sarah Selby |
| John Bowie | Dick Paxton |
| Col. Wells | George Lewis |
| Don Juan de Veramendi | Edward Colmans |
| Teresa de Veramendi | Daria Massey |

Warners has given a rather ponderous presentation to this screen version of the Paul I. Wellman bestselling novel. However, the picture has sufficient commercial values, such as strong marquee names, Technicolor and exploitable angles, to hold out the promise of good business, even though, as entertainment, it is just average.

In putting the story of Jim Bowie, southwest frontier adventurer, on film, the Henry Blanke production often stirs up very exciting and credible action. Just as often, however, it brings on some straight romance angles that are dull and unbelievable, resulting in a pace that has spotty interest. The 109 minutes of footage is considerably overlong. Gordon Douglas' direction has its problems because of the overworking of incidental situations, but he scores strongly with his guidance of the action scenes. Both he and the stars, Alan Ladd and Virginia Mayo, miss badly in trying to project the romance.

Best sequences in the film involve deadly action duels among the dandies in early New Orleans, Bowie's prowess with his famous knife and the manner in which he uses wits and agility to best his enemies. Ladd's quiet intensity gets over the rugged facets of the Bowie character in great style. The knife-versus-rapier duel that highlighted the Wellman novel is also a big scene in the film as Ladd tackles Ned Young in a darkened room in a fight to the death. The famous Bowie knife makes a late entry into the plot, but during the time it is around it accounts for eight deaths in as many exciting action brawls. Physically, the picture has plenty of eye-appeal in period settings and costumes that go with New Orleans of the early 1800's.

The screen story rambles through a series of brawling adventures that start when Ladd, as Bowie, comes to New Orleans to sell lumber from the family sawmill and falls in love with Miss Mayo, playing a luscious but willful and selfish Creole belle. Ladd turns to land and cotton speculation to increase his bankroll so he can marry the girl, but while he's busy rising in power and accumulating a score of enemies, she marries another. Subsequently, after doing in his last foe, Ladd gets over the infatuation when he meets Phyllis Kirk, daughter of Texas' vice-governor, and the story ends with their marriage.

Showing up well in the large cast are Joseph Calleia and Jay Novello, two of Bowie's enemies acquired during his money-making days; Alf Kjellin, the weakling who marries Miss Mayo; Douglas Dick, her brother; Ned Young, Tony Caruso, Miss Kirk, Daria Massey, briefly impressing; George Voskovec as James Audubon, Richard Carlyle and Edward Colmans, among others.

John Seitz gives the film excellent color lensing, and the Max Steiner music score is appropriate. Brog.

The Promoter

"The Promoter," British import which preems at the Fine Arts Theatre, N. Y., Oct. 27, was reviewed from London by VARIETY under its original title, "The Card." Writing in the issue of March 5, 1952, Myro called the pic "an attractive proposition for the home trade, although its success in America is likely to be more modest than some of the star's (Alec Guinness) more recent offerings."

A Ronald Neame production, "The Promoter" stars Guinness, Glynis Johns, Valerie Hobson, Petula Clark and Edward Chapman. Reviewer said the film provides "a measure-to-measure part for Alec Guinness," with the "delightful detail" in the story "enhanced by the star's capital performance." Universal is distributing in the U. S.

Eight Iron Men

Okay program war drama for general bookings as companion feature.

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Columbia release of Stanley Kramer production (associate producers, Edna and Edward Anhalt). Features Bonar Colleano, Arthur Franz, Lee Marvin, Richard Kiley, Nick Dennis, James Griffith, Dick Moore. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. Screenplay, Harry Brown, adapted from his play, "A Sound of Hunting"; camera, Roy Hunt; editor, Aaron Stell; musical score, Leith Stevens. Previewed Oct. 16, '52. Running time, 80 MINS.

| Collucci | Bonar Colleano |
| Carter | Arthur Franz |
| Mooney | Lee Marvin |
| Coke | Richard Kiley |
| Sapiros | Nick Dennis |

| Small | George Cooper |
| Capt. Trelawny | Barney Phillips |
| Walsh | Robert Nichols |
| Lieut. Crane | Richard Grayson |
| Hunter | Douglas Henderson |
| Girl | Mary Castle |
| Cafferty | David McMahon |

An okay war drama for program bookings in the general market has been made from the legit play, "A Sound of Hunting." Under the film title of "Eight Iron Men," it is a talkative but overall acceptable story of an infantry squad at the front lines that will best serve as a companion feature.

Theatre marquees will get no name help from the cast of capable players, all of whom perform well and conform to type in putting over this Stanley Kramer offering. Harry Brown did the script from his own play and, while often inclined to let his scenes run to words, the dramatic framework is good and provides director Edward Dmytryk with a number of opportunities to work in some tight suspense.

Plot shows the relationships between the squad of eight men as they sweat out a front line assignment in an old, shell-torn house. Story interest dwells on the men's desire to help one of the squad, trapped in a shellhole outside in the rain by an enemy machinegun. This desire is mostly spelled out in conversation, interrupted on occasion for a chimerical flight into fancy by one of the GI's, who pictures himself as a great lover with an army of girls just waiting for him to return from the front. As the audience sees the mental pictures he conjures, the film has been able to blend in some sex in the persons of Mary Castle and numerous nameless femmes. When most of the squad has either talked or tried to rescue the buddy, the same amorous GI goes out without fanfare and does the job himself.

There's a good stress on masculine humor in the dialog tossed to Bonar Colleano, the would-be romeo, and he does well by it. Arthur Franz, Lee Marvin, Richard Kiley, Nick Dennis, James Griffith, Dick Moore and George Cooper are the others in the squad and each gains commendable recognition in the individual spotlighting of the characters. Others are okay, too.

The Leith Stevens music score is properly used and helps the dramatics without being obtrusive. Roy Hunt's photography is excellent, painting a grim picture of war on a personal level. Editing and other technical credits also rate well. Brog.

The Black Castle

Program melodrama of the "horror" school; good names, exploitation angles.

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Universal release of William Alland production. Stars Richard Greene, Boris Karloff, Stephen McNally, Paula Corday, Lon Chaney; features John Hoyt, Michael Pate, Nancy Valentine, Tudor Owen, Henry Corden, Otto Waldis. Directed by Nathan Juran. Story and screenplay, Jerry Sackheim; camera, Irving Glassberg; editor, Russell Schoengarth. Previewed Oct. 16, '52. Running time, 82 MINS.

|---|---|
| Beckett | Richard Greene |
| Dr. Meissen | Boris Karloff |
| Count Von Bruno | Stephen McNally |
| Elga | Paula Corday |
| Gargon | Lon Chaney |
| Stieken | John Hoyt |
| Von Melcher | Michael Pate |
| Therese Von Wilk | Nancy Valentine |
| Romley | Tudor Owen |
| Fender | Henry Corden |
| Krantz | Otto Waldis |

The "horror" type of melodramatics dished up in "The Black Castle" has a Halloween touch and makes it an acceptable entry for the program market. The chiller antics are in line with the period programmers turned out by Universal some seasons back and are played straight by the good cast.

The lonely, storm-swept castle isolated on the vast, forbidding estate of a cruel count, the unwilling bride, the dashing, handsome hero, the torture chamber, hulking bodyguards and an alligator-filled pit are some of the standard "horror" ingredients that get a working over in the William Alland production under Nathan Juran's direction. The cast, names of which provide marquee strength for the general situation, enters into the spirit of things with plenty of acceptable scenery-chewing that brings off the meller antics neatly.

The Jerry Sackheim script pits Richard Greene, young English lord, against Stephen McNally, the cruel count. When two friends of Greene's fail to return from a hunting trip on McNally's estate, Greene wangles an invitation to solve the mystery. He soon is able to prove McNally had murdered the friends and is out to get him. Cat-and-mouse play ensues but when Greene tries to flee the castle, taking with him Paula Corday, the count's unwilling bride, McNally and his giant but dumb bodyguard, Lon Chaney, capture them and plot to bury them alive. Boris Karloff, castle physician who does not go along with McNally's cruelty, gives his own life to free the couple and they presumably live happily ever after—after Greene kills McNally.

The five stars fit well into the assorted, standard characters and get good assists from the featured players, such as John Hoyt, Michael Pate, two of McNally's cruel intimates; Tudor Owen and Henry Corden. Low-key lensing by Irving Glassberg is effective and he has done excellently by a scene showing a black leopard that highlights the chiller sequences. Editing is good. Brog.

WAC From Walla Walla

(SONGS)

Typical Judy Canova film comedy, broadly done for the market where these play best.

Hollywood, Oct. 15.

Republic release of Sidney Picker production. Stars Judy Canova; features Stephen Dunne, George Cleveland, June Vincent, Irene Ryan, Roy Barcroft, Allen Jenkins. Directed by William Witney. Written by Arthur T. Horman; camera, Jack Marta; editor, Tony Martinelli; songs, Jack Elliott, Harold Spina. Previewed Oct. 14, '52. Running time, 83 MINS.

| Judy Canova | Judy Canova |
| Lt. Tom Mayfield | Stephen Dunne |
| Gramps Canova | George Cleveland |
| Doris Vail | June Vincent |
| WAC Sgt. Kearns | Irene Ryan |
| Mr. Prentiss | Roy Barcroft |
| Mr. Redington | Allen Jenkins |
| Jud Canova | George Chandler |
| Betty Canova | Elizabeth Slifer |
| Col. Mayfield | Thurston Hall |
| Recruiting Sgt. | Sarah Spencer |
| Sgt. Malone | Dick Wessel |
| Lizzie | Pattee Chapman |

And
The Republic Rhythm Riders

This is a typical Judy Canova starrer, cut to order for the country-cousin filmgoer in the rural market.

The loosely-reined comedics are spread over a long 83 minutes under William Witney's free-wheeling direction and have no more subtlety than a prattfall. The screen story by Arthur T. Horman is an adequate framework for the film's main intentions, but overworks some sidelines complications.

Miss Canova pars her comedy antics of previous film entries and also pipes four songs nicely. Two are delivered straight for good effect and have enough heart flavor to please Canova fans. They are "Lovey" and "If Only Dreams Came True," both by Jack Elliott. Others are the rowdy "Boy, Oh Boy," and "Song of the Women's Army Corps."

Plot basically deals with how Miss Canova, a western gal from a soldiering family, gets into the WACS by mistake and becomes a heroine when she traps some heavies trying to steal data on guided missiles. Scenes showing Miss Canova outwitting the villains while fleeing from them with the missile's homing device have some frantic chuckles, and there are several snicker spots in the comedy version of life among the Women's Army Corps.

Stephen Dunne has the male lead as the lieutenant who is the object of romantic pursuit by Miss Canova and the latter's femme rival, June Vincent, a fellow WAC. There's not much Dunne or Miss Vincent can do for or with the material. George Cleveland, George Chandler and Elizabeth Silfer are the elder Canovas, all frenetically amusing. Irene Ryan, a wacky WAC sergeant; Roy Barcroft and Allen Jenkins, heavies; Thurston Hall and the others have all been cast to type in the Sidney Picker production.

Technical credits, from Jack Marta's lensing on down, are standard. Brog.

Le Fruit Defendu

(Forbidden Fruit)

(FRENCH)

Paris, Oct. 7.

Cocinor release of Gray Film production. Stars Fernandel. Directed by Henri Verneuil. Screenplay, Jacques Companeez from novel by Georges Simenon; camera, Henri Alckan; editor, Gilbert Rougier. At Colisee, Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

|---|---|
| Charles | Fernandel |
| Armande | Claude Nollier |
| Martine | Francoise Arnoul |
| Mother | Sylvie |
| Boquet | Jacques Gastelot |

As the title of film indicates, this concerns a misstep by a married man which sets off a series of complications. Results are familiar and film follows the prescribed course without the profound handling and acting needed to lift it out of the ordinary. Over here the Fernandel monicker should insure comfortable returns. In the U. S., the Fernandel name has some appeal but otherwise it is standard stuff and not big boxoffice.

Story concerns a country doctor, married to an exacting, frigid wife, who meets a loose but attractive young girl in a nearby city. After an affair, the doctor gets her into his home by feigning a story about a colleague having recommended time in the country for her. Things are complicated until the wife finally learns the whole story and tries to inject tenderness into their barren marriage.

Henri Verneuil has directed in an honest, uninspired manner. Fernandel vacillates between his comic, broad roles to moments of genuine pathos, but on the whole is unable to subordinate his comic personality to the character. Claude Nollier is properly stiff and restrained as the staid wife while Francoise Arnoul is sensual as the girl friend. Mosk.

Industry Asks FCC That Theatre TV Be Technically Comparable to 35m

Washington, Oct. 21.

The picture industry today (Tues.) recommended to the Federal Communications Commission that technical specifications for theatre TV be such as to provide production of large-screen pictures comparable to 35m motion picture film. Testifying at the second day of the theatre-video hearing, Andrew Inglis, engineering consultant for the Motion Picture Assn. of America and the National Exhibitors Theatre Television Committee, a video band width of 10 megacycles (as compared to the six megacycles standard for home television) as a "desirable minimum" to achieve motion picture definition in theatre television.

He further suggested that 725 lines (compared to 525 lines home TV standard) will be necessary to obtain 35m motion picture definition, in which case 10 megacycles will be required even without allowing for additional loss from the projection system.

The 10-megacycle band width is also desirable, said Inglis, "if experience shows that theatre TV in color is practical only by using the field sequential (CBS) system. Because of the low definition of this system, arising from its high field rate, even this band width does not allow anywhere near the definition of monochrome motion pictures to be achieved."

Inglis' recommendations were backed up by Paul Raibourn, Paramount Pictures v.p., who appeared for the joint theatre-television technical committee, representing producers and exhibitors. Raibourn testified that unless the standards are set at the 10 megacycle band width, theatre television will be degraded to the level of 16m pix.

Raibourn pointed out that the public is accustomed to the quality

Jacon to Become U.S. Sales Mgr. For Italo Export

Bernard Jacon, sales and distribution v.p. of Lux Films, is slated to become general sales manager for the new U. S. distrib outfit planned by Italian Films Export. Final decision on the appointment should come before Nov. 9, when the IFE board meets in Rome.

Final aim of Italian films in the U. S. market was outlined at a dinner in New York by Dr. Renato Gualino, IFE director general. Gualino, who returned to Rome over the weekend, cited the success of dubbed Italo pix in France and Sweden and concluded from this that Italian films can hold their own in the U. S. "when they compete with American films on equal terms."

Distrib company will be directed by a five-man board composed of three Americans and two Italians. One of the latter will be Dr. Gualino, who's been designated as chief exec of the new setup. Jurisdiction of the U. S. IFE office has been extended to cover Canada and the Far East, with the exception of Japan.

Blueprinting the IFE distribution setup, Gualino said five branches—in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Los Angeles and Atlanta—would be established. He commented Run Me Shaw, of Shaw Bros., Ltd., Singapore operators of more than 70 theatres in the Far East, arrived in New York last week. He expects to remain in Gotham for about two weeks before continuing on a world tour.

Shaw outfit also serves as distribs of American films under a franchise arrangement.

Flop Youmans Tuner Activated by WB

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Warners has activated "End of the Rainbow." Based on a 1927 Broadway musical, "Rainbow," which the studio has owned since sound came in. Virginia Mayo and Gordon MacRae will star.

Libby Holman and Charles Ruggles were in the legiter, which had a Vincent Youmans score and early western background. It lasted only a few performances.

Tri-Opticon, New 3d Dimensional, In Deal With Lesser

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

U. S. rights to Tri-Opticon new third-dimensional process developed by Stereo Techniques, Ltd., London, have been acquired by Sol Lesser following conclusion of negotiations initiated months ago during his trip abroad.

Process reportedly imparts absolute illusion of three dimensions to films. Raymond J. Spottiswoode, technical director of the British concern, who arrived here over the weekend to finalize the deal, will stay here for a series of demonstrations.

Revolutionary camera mount and mechanical calculator are the basis for Tri-Opticon. Calculator correlates many variable factors in stereo photography and furnishes mathematically an optically precise reading which the mount translates into camera positioning. Otherwise, photographic equipment, including two cameras, lenses and film, are standard.

Projection is by standard equipment, with two projectors mechanically synchronized by special rigging weighing less than 20 pounds. Standard-sized screen is made of plastic with metallized surface. Once installed in theatre it can also be used for flat projection or regular films.

Lesser will show five subjects at a demonstration at the Academy Theatre, where special screen and projectors are being installed. After demonstration showings he will send out the first of 10 units which will roadshow programs in major cities.

First introduced 18 months ago in London at the British Festival, it subsequently got regular-theatrical engagements in Brussels, Lucerne, Hamburg, Berlin, Frankfort, Cologne and Paris.

WSB Okays SDG Pact With Indie Producers

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

George Sidney, Screen Directors Guild prexy, announced that the Wage Stabilization Board had approved the Guild's contract with the Independent Motion Picture Producers Assn., retroactive to May 4, 1952.

Pact was negotiated by I. E. Chadwick, IMPPA chief, and a Guild committee headed by Mark Robson and H. C. Potter.

REMBUSCH RAPS SALES POLICIES

By TRUEMAN T. REMBUSCH
(President of Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana)

Franklin, Ind., Oct. 21.

After talking to many exhibitors around the country, it is my opinion that the novelty of TV wears off in about a year. However, paying for the sets goes on for a couple of years, and parents say to the kids, "No picture shows until the set is paid for." This same thing happens when the old man buys, on time, for the little woman, a new dishwasher, washing machine, garbage disposal unit, etc.

Consumer credit now is at an alltime high of $22,000,000,000. Two years ago when consumer credit reached the unheard of level of $18,000,000,000, the bankers and economists hollered: watch out for a bust! The Korean war came along and maintained the high level of work available and gave impetus to time-selling of every sort. What with taxes at an alltime high, last year the average family spent $400 more than it took in. People just don't have cash to lay out. Maybe the picture industry ought to consider some sort of credit sales of books of tickets, for "spend and owe" seems to be the philosophy of the times.

What with TV and time sales, people have gotten out of the habit of going to the movies. The backbone of our business has always been habit, particularly in the rural areas. Therefore, exhibition has to get the people back into the habit of going to theatres. To do that it must resort to promotions and merchandising methods not used in the business regularly. Such promotions as the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibit at the Indiana State Fair, and "Movietime" tours are endeavors that pay off at the boxoffice. What with their coming at the advent of the new programs on TV, the picture industry in

Ohio ITO in New Upped-Price Rap

Columbus, O., Oct. 21.

"Advanced admission" pictures come in for another blast in the current bulletin of Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Executive secretary Robert A. Wile concedes that there's nothing wrong in key city first-run houses upping prices on outstanding features, but this practice is "very bad" for subsequent runs and smaller towns.

Recalling that Metro's "Quo Vadis" and Paramount's "Greatest Show on Earth" blazed the way on "advanced admission" pix, Wile warns the ITOO membership to "get your protests ready" on three more films. These, he said, are "Ivanhoe" (M-G), "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) and "Hans Christian Andersen" (RKO) for prices on the trio will have to be raised in order to meet the "outrageously high terms demanded."

"So far this year," Wile asserts, "'Quo Vadis' at 70-30 terms and 'Greatest Show on Earth' at 50-50 have compelled exhibitors to raise their prices. . . . In the case of 'Vadis' Metro argued that the picture had cost $6,000,000, and this money had to be recouped. In the case of "Show," this is admittedly a fine picture, and while it didn't cost so much, neither were the terms as onerous. But the exhibitor's acquiescence in these two cases has led to a spate of others for which there is little or no excuse."

Distribs Can Convert $20,000,000 Under New Anglo-U.S. Accord

London, Oct. 21.

American distribs can convert a maximum of $20,000,000 during the current fiscal year under the terms of the new Anglo-American monetary agreement negotiated in New York last month.

Ceiling figure was given to the House of Lords last week by Lord Swinton as part of a general discussion on the remittance deal. Lord Swinton estimated that slightly more than half of the total earnings of U. S. distribs would be convertible. This, he said, represented less than 2% of Britain's dollar imports from the U. S.

Monetary pact is hailed in Britain as saving the Treasury $5,900,000, which is the amount for which the American distribs waived transfer rights. Actual U. S. loss is much less, since most of the companies are overdrawn on the amount of convertible dollars under the previous agreement. U. S. dollar remittances last year reportedly came close to $26,000,000.

New deal retained the $17,000,000 base remittance and the provision permitting convertibility of amounts equal to one-third of U. S. production investments in Britain. The American distribs waived convertibility rights to their $4,000,000 share of the Eady Plan money, which is derived from increases in theatre admission scales, shared by exhibs, distribs and producers. Pact continued remittance of $1,100,000 representing the so-called producers' share of the Eady Plan.

Lord Swinton emphasized there was nothing in the agreement that would injure the British industry. He repudiated suggestions that a dollar saving could be affected by restricting Hollywood imports.

In his opinion, the greatest revenue is derived not from the bulk of U. S. films but from a few top productions which everyone wants to see and which would certainly be imported "however low the quota." A similar but much less detailed statement on the remittance agreement was made in the Commons by Henry Strauss, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade.

UPT's $5,435,000 Net For 1st 9 Mos. in '52

United Paramount Theatres had estimated net earnings of $5,435,000, including capital gains of $1,465,000, for the first nine months of 1952, president Leonard H. Goldenson has announced in New York. Net amounted to $9,537,000, including $3,483,000 capital gains, for the corresponding period 1951.

Third quarter brought a profit of $1,627,000, including $300,000 in cap gains. This compares with a profit of $2,391,000, including $2,297,000 in cap gains, for the third quarter of '51.

Consolidated earnings, including cap gains, amounted to 58c per common share for the third quarter of 1952 and $1.65 for the full nine months, as compared to $1.39 and $2.80 for the same periods last year.

Estimate British Imports Double 1951 U.S. Take

Paced by J. Arthur Rank imports, British pix biz in the U. S. is reflected by estimates that the gross of British films is likely to top last year's by 100%. Distribs of British product say the b.o. appeal of their product now definitely extends beyond the arties and they opine that the improvement is due in large measure to a more realistic appraisal of American audience tastes by the British studios.

Thus the British no longer depend on isolated grossers like "Henry V" or "Red Shoes." Recent pacemakers have included Rank's "Lavender Hill Mob" and "Man in the White Suit." Both Universal releases star Alec Guinness, whose popularity is spreading beyond the artie crowd. Good British pix are beginning to get the circuit breaks. "Lavender Hill Mob" has had an estimated 1,500 bookings and is still building. It ran for 30 weeks at the Fine Arts, New York.

Flock of upcoming British pix is considered rife with b.o. appeal. That's an important point to the distribs, who say they're now reaching the point where they can follow up with quality product in spots that have recently opened up to British films. Arties, too, now can be more sure of their supply.

WB Has 24 Theatres Left to Sell Via Decree

Warner Bros. Theatres has 24 divestiture houses left of the 54 that WB must unload by Governmental decree. Houses are in New England, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Cleveland. Harry Kalmine, head of WB Theatres, has cleaned up Albany and New Jersey, where no divestitures are left.

Artie Rapp (& Rudin), Joe Seiden, Si Fabian and others have been looking at them, along with other indie theatre chain operators, but Kalmine has until next April to close out, so he is picking his deals.

No Santa Parade

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Merchants on Hollywood Blvd. have called off the Santa Claus Lane Parade in which film stars have glittered annually for 25 years.

One reason is the high cost—about $25,000. Another reason is television, which has been keeping spectators at home in recent years.

Reade Theatres' 'Charge It' Tie With N.J. Bank

Picture admissions "on time" are available at the three Walter Reade theatres in Plainfield, N. J., under a tieup arranged by Reade city manager John Balmer with the Plainfield Trust Co. Individuals who join the bank's Handi-Charge plan not only can charge purchases at retail stores, but may also charge admissions at the Strand, Paramount and Oxford theatres.

The three Reade houses are automatically credited by the bank with the cash value of the charge slips—less a minor service charge—when they deposit the slips each day. Bank handles the collection via monthly billing. Thus the theatres are not involved with responsibility for collections.

Reade chain tested a "charge" plan at its Woodbridge, N. J., drive-in some two years ago. While the plan reportedly was enthusiastically received by patrons, the burden of collections then fell upon the theatre. Charge-plan members, incidentally, merely show their Handi-Charge card at the boxoffice and sign a charge slip for the amount of admissions.

Thomas Quits AA

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

After 18 months as producer of the "Bowery Boys" series at Allied Artists, Jerry Thomas is checking off the lot to go in for indie production.

'Thief' Best Bet in Sluggish L.A., $26,000; 'Somebody' NSH at $16,000, 'Front' 18G; 'Ivanhoe' Tall 41G, 2d

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Only "The Thief," of four new bills, is doing nice biz this frame. It is landing hefty $26,000 in three theatres while adding $5,500 more in one suburban house. "Somebody Loves Me" looms disappointing at $16,000 for three theatres while same figure is likely for three ozoners where day-dating.

Minor $10,000 shapes for "Beware My Lovely" in two sites. Combination of "Back at Front" and "Bonzo Goes to College" looks okay $18,000 in three locations.

Robust $41,000 is in prospect for "Ivanhoe" in two spots, second stanza. Other holdovers are largely down considerably this week.

Estimates for This Week

Los Angeles, Chinese, Ritz (FWC) (2,097; 2,048; 1,370; 70-$1.10)—"The Thief" (UA). Nice $26,000. Last week, plus Loyola but minus Ritz, "Caribbean" (Par) and "Artic Flight" (Mono), $14,800.

Orpheum, Vogue, Loyola (Metropolitan-FWC) (2,213; 885; 1,248; 70-$1.10)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par) with "Army Bound" (Mono) at Orpheum Vogue, single-bill of "Son Ali Baba" (U) (2d run) at Loyola. Disappointing $16,000. Last week, with different theatre units.

Hollywood, Wiltern (WB) (2,756; 2,344; 70-$1.10) — "Beware My Lovely" (RKO) and "Army Bound" (Mono). Scant $10,000. Last week, with Orpheum, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Midnight Melody" (Rep) (reissue) (Orpheum only) (3d wk-5 days), $13,200.

Hillstreet, Pantages, El Rey (RKO-FWC) (2,752; 2,812; 861; 60-$1.10)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Bonzo Goes College" (U). Okay $18,000 or close. Last week, plus Fox Beverly and minus El Rey, "Sudden Fear" (RKO) (2d wk), $29,200.

Los Angeles, Hollywood Paramounts (UPT-F&M) (3,200; 1,430; 90-$1.50)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Robust $41,000. Last week, wow $57,800.

Loew's State, Egyptian (UATC) (2,404; 1,538; 70-$1.10)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (3d wk-5 days). Light $12,000. Last week, nice $17,400.

Beverly Hills, Downtown (WB) (1,612; 1,757; 80-$1.50)—"Miracle Fatima" (WB) (3d wk). Mild $11,000. Last week, good $13,600.

United Artists, Wilshire (UATC-FWC) (2,100; 2,296; 80-$1.50)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (3d wk). Fair $13,000. Last week, big $17,800.

Canon (ABC) (533; $1.20)—"Full House" (20th) (5th wk). Good $5.500. Last week, $6,100.

Rialto, Hawaii (Metropolitan-G&S) (840; 1,106; 70-$1.10)—"Monkey Business" (20th) (3d wk). Modest $6,500. Last week, fine $10,500.

Globe (FWC) (782; 70-90)—"Untamed Women" (UA) and "Lugosi Meets Brooklyn Gorilla" (Indie) (2d wk). Oke $3,000. Last week, with Uptown, Vogue, El Rey, $9,700, with Globe getting $5,200 on total.

'Quiet' Loud $16,000 In L'ville; 'Fatima' Fat 9G, 'Ivanhoe' 17G, Both 2d

Louisville, Oct. 21.

This is another hefty stanza for first-runs here. "Ivanhoe" at the State is still stacking them in for an expected big total on second stanza. "Miracle of Fatima," also in second frame at the Mary Anderson continues solid. The big newcomer is "Quiet Man," single billed at the Rialto, with great session likely. "Duel At Silver Creek" and "Lost in Alaska" at Kentucky are perky.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 54-75—"Duel At Silver Creek" (U) and "Lost in Alaska" (U). Virile $4,000. Last week, "High Noon" (UA) (4th wk), $3,500.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,200; 75-$1.10)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Fine $9,000 after last week's terrific $12,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 54-75)—"Quiet Man" (Rep). This one is going great guns at $16,000 or better. Last week, "Big Sky" (RKO), $14,000.

State (Loew's) (3,000; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Big $17,000 after last week's smash $21,000.

Broadway Grosses

Estimated Total Gross
This Week ........$528,500
(Based on 20 theatres)
Last Year ........$657,500
(Based on 20 theatres)

'Front' Okay 10G, Omaha, 'Quiet' 9G

Omaha, Oct. 21.

Holdovers loom strongest this week, with "Ivanhoe" and "Quiet Man" still big in second sessions. "Back at Front" is doing the most biz of newcomers at Orpheum. "Quiet Man" looms solid in first holdover round, nearly equal to opening stanza at the Omaha.

Estimates for This Week

Brandeis (RKO) (1,100; 16-70)—"One Minute to Zero" (RKO). Okay $5.500. Last week, "Sudden Fear" (RKO), 4 days, and "Annie Oakley" (RKO) and "Allegheny Uprising" (RKO) (reissues), 3 days, good $6,000.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,100; 20-70) —"Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Word-of-mouth should hold this at solid $9,500 after nice $9,500 opener.

Orpheum (Tristates) (3,000; 20-70)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Honeychile" (Rep). Okay $10,000. Last week, "Bonzo to College" (U) and "Sally and St. Anne" (U), oke $9,000.

State (Goldberg) (865; 25-76)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Continues solid at $10,000 after terrific $13,000 opener.

'Snow' Sock $16,000 In K.C.; 'Fatima' Fancy 12G, 'Front' Fairish $11,000

Kansas City, Oct. 21.

Strong newcomers boosting totals here for one of better recent weeks. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" reopened the Orpheum, and great session looms. "Miracle of Fatima" also is socko at the Missouri. Raised admissions at both houses helped. "Somebody Loves Me" at Paramount is strong. "Ivanhoe" showed surprising staying power to gain fourth week at the Midland. Weather continues dry and pleasant.

Estimates for This Week

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 50-75)—"Les Miserables" (20th) (3d wk). Strong $2,200, and holds again. Last week, fine $2,600.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk). Satisfactory at $8,000. Last week, fine $13.000.

Missouri (RKO) (2,650; 75-$1)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB). At advanced scale and switches house policy to solo. Socko $12,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Tale of Five Women" (Indie), $8,000.

Orpheum (Fox Midwest) (1,917; 75-$1)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Reopened this deluxe house with advanced-price policy. Smash $16,000 likely. Will hold.

Paramount (Tri-States) (1,900; 50-75)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par).

'House' Handsome $7,000, Port.; 'Quiet' Tall 9G, 2d

Portland, Ore., Oct. 21.

Two holdovers, "Ivanhoe" at the Liberty and "Quiet Man" at the Broadway, are still doing most of the biz in town. "Full House" shapes nice at United Artists. "Way of Gaucho" looks okay in two spots.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; 65-90) —"Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk). Tall $9,000. Last week, $14,600.

Liberty (Hamrick) (1,850; 90-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Terrific $18,000. Last week, $23,000.

Mayfair (Evergreen) (1,500; 65-90)—"Untamed Women" (UA) and "Models, Inc." (UA). So-so $4,000. Last week, "Sudden Fear" (RKO) and "Kid Mike Baroni" (Indie) (m.o.), $3,400.

Oriental (Evergreen) (2,000; 65-90)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Last Train Bombay" (Col), day-date with Paramount. Oke $3,500. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Lady Iron Mask" (20th), $3,500.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,750; 65-90)—"Caribbean" (Par) and "Feuding' Fools" (Mono). Okay $7,200. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Lady Iron Mask" (20th), $7,500.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,400; 65-90)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Last Train Bombay" (Col), also Oriental. Good $7,000. Last week, "Cairo Road" (Indie) and "Breakdown" (Indie), $4,800.

United Artists (Parker) (890; 65-90)—"Full House" (20th). Good $7,000. Last week, "Just For You" (Par) (4th wk), $5,000.

'Monkey' Smart $12,000, Cleve.

Cleveland, Oct. 21.

Most downtown houses are a bit offish this week. One exception is "Snows of Kilimanjaro," rolling up another strong take for Hipp on its second frame. "Devil Makes Three" looms mild at State, but "Monkey Business" is in high-voltage class at Allen. "Quiet Man" at Chi is fine on moveover.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (Warner) (3,000; 55-85) — "Monkey Business" (20th). Smart $12,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB), extra good $14,500 in 8 days.

Hipp (Telemanagement) (3,700; 55-85) — "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th) (2d wk). Smash $20,000 and may hold again following $3,500 last week.

Lower Mall (Community) (585; 55-85)—"Tales of Hoffmann" (UA). Oke $4,000 on first pop-priced run here. Last week, "Stranger in Between" (Indie), $3,000.

Ohio (Loew's) (1,300; 55-85) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) (m.o.). Fine $6,000 on fourth downtown lap after $6,000 last round.

Palace (RKO) (3,300; 55-85) — "Canyon Passage" (U) and "Frontier Gal" (U) (reissues). Last-minute replacements opening cold got only thin $4,500 in 4 days, and "Back at Front" (U), $4,000 in 3 days. Last week, "Allegheny Uprising" (20th) and "Annie Oakley" (20th) (reissues), $3,500 for 4 days.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-85) — "Devil Makes Three" (M-G). Fair $12,000 or less. Last week, "Because You're Mine" (M-G), same, but very disappointing for this pic.

Stillman (Loew's) (2,700; 55-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (m.o.). Fair $7,000. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par), middling $6,000.

Tower (Telemanagement) (500; 55-80) — "Jet Job" (Mono) and "Hold That Line" (Mono). So-so $3,000 or near. Last week, "Kiss of Death" (Indie) and "Street With No Name" (Indie) (reissues), $3,000.

'Rifle' Trim $14,000, Cincy; 'At Front' Good 11G, 'Ivanhoe' Robust 15G, 3d

Cincinnati, Oct. 21.

Biz generally at major stands this week is holding at a brisk pace. "Springfield Rifle" looks top newcomer, with nice Palace marker. Other new bills are "Back at Front," shaping good at the Capitol, and "Beware, My Lovely," a Grand winner. "Ivanhoe" is winding up three-week date at Albee in stout fashion.

Estimates for This week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 75-$1.10) — "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Robust $15,000 on heels of huge $18,500 second stanza.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 55-75) — "Back at Front" (U). Good $11,000 or close. Last week, "Hurricane Smith" (Par), $10,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 55-75) — "Beware, My Lovely" (RKO) and "Woman of North Country" (Indie). Nice $8,500. Last week, "Night Without Sleep" (20th) and "Red Snow" (Col), $7,000.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-75) — "Black Swan" (20th) and "Shores of Tripoli" (Par) (reissues). Mild $4,500. Last week, "Just For You" (Par) (m.o.), $5,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-75) — "Springfield Rifle" (WB). Trim $14,000. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col), $10,500.

'Lusty Men' Wham $22,000 Tops Hub; 'Friend' Fair 16G, 'At Front' Hep 12G

Boston, Oct. 21.

Way out in front this stanza is "The Lusty Men" at Memorial. "Back at the Front" at Boston shapes nice. "My Wife's Best Friend" at Paramount and Fenway looks about average. "Miracle of Fatima" in fourth round at Astor tapering off while "Ivanhoe" in fourth at State and Orpheum is in much the same category. "Monkey Business' in second frame at Met is off sharply.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,500; 74-$1.20)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk). Robust $10,500 following nice $13,800 third week.

Boston (RKO) (3,000; 40-85)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Fargo" (Mono). Nice $12,000. Last week, "Yankee Buccaneer" (U) and "Great Adventure" (Indie), $10,000.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-80)—"Stranger in Between" (U) (4th wk). Still oke at $3,600 after nice $4,500 third stanza.

Fenway (NET) (1,373; 40-85)—"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Born to Saddle" (Indie). Average $4,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Spider and Fly" (Indie), same.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 40-85)—"Lusty Men" (RKO) and "You For Me" (M-G). Lusty $22,000. Last week, "One Minute To Zero" (RKO) and "My Man and I" (M-G) (2d wk), oke $14,500.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 40-85)—"Monkey Business" (20th) and "Park Row" (UA) (2d wk). Off to $11,000. Last week, modest $16,500.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 74-$1.25) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk). Near $11,000 following good $16,500 for third.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 40-85) —"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Born to Saddle" (Indie). Fair $12,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Spider and Fly" (Indie), $9,500.

State (Loew) (3,500; 74-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk). Off to $9,000. Last week, oke $10,500.

Key City Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

'Snows' Terrif $30,000, Philly

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

Seven new bills here this week but biz shapes spotty, only strongest films really coming through. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" is plenty hot at the Midtown with "Because You're Mine" equally strong at small-seater Arcadia. "Lusty Men" looms disappointing at the Stanley. "Ivanhoe" is very solid in second Fox week. However, "Way of Gaucho" is slim at Randolph while "Yankee Buccaneer" is only so-so at Stanton. "Cry Beloved Country" is very weak at the Earle.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-99)—"Thief" (UA). Off to $6,000 or near. Last week, smash $11,000.

Arcadia (S&S) (625; 85-$1.20)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Sock $15,000. Last week, "Merry Widow" (M-G) (7th wk), $5,500.

Boyd (WB) (2,360; 80-$1.30)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk). Oke $9,000. Last week, big $15,000.

Earle (WB) (2,700; 50-99)—"Cry, Beloved Country" (UA). Drab $5,000. Last week, "Captain Blackjack" (Indie) plus Ivory Joe Hunter orch, Thelma Carpenter, Larry Darnell onstage, fine $17,500.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 90-$1.50)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Solid $35,000. Last week, $60,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Big Sky" (RKO) (2d wk). Dull $10,000. Last week, bright $18,000.

Mastbaum (WB) (4,360; 85-$1.20) —"Quiet Man" (Rep) (3d wk). Fine $17,000. Last week, big $22,000.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,000; 75-$1.30)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Terrific $30,000. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th), $8,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 50-99)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th). Slim $10,000. Last week, "Everything I Have Is Yours" (M-G) (2d wk), okay $10,000.

Stanley (WB) (2,900; 50-99)—"Lusty Men" (RKO). Modest $11,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) (2d wk), $9,500.

Stanton (WB) (1,473; 50-99)—"Yankee Buccaneer" (U). So-so $8,000. Last week, "Hideout" (UA) and "Strange World" (UA), $9,500.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 85-$1.20) —"Something for Birds" (20th). Thin $3,700. Last wek, "Magic Box" (Indie), $3,500.

'Ali Baba' Bright $7,000, Balto; 'Quiet' Big 7½G, 2d

Baltimore, Oct. 21.

There's some simmering down here this week with switching around of openings and holdovers not lending much to the situation. "Son of Ali Baba" is building nicely at Keith's while "The Quiet Man" is so strong in fifth round at Mayfair that it goes a sixth. This is hanging up a record for consistency in its weekly take. "Hurricane Smith" is giving the Stanley another dull session.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 35-$1.20)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Slowing down to $15,000 possibility after big $19,200 opening.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,460; 20-70)—"Son Ali Baba" (U). Bright $7,000. Last week, "Lost in Alaska" (U), $5,200.

Mayfair (Hicks) (980; 20-70)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (5th wk). Stout $7,500 after $8,000 for fourth stanza. Holds sixth frame. It's a long run record for this house.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 20-70)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th) (2d wk). Mild $4,000 after opening week's modest $6,600.

Stanley (WB) (3,280; 25-75)—"Hurricane Smith" (Par). Blah $5,500. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), dull $7,200.

Town (Rappaport) (1,500; 20-70) —"Big Sky" (RKO) (2d wk). Neat $6,000 after nice $10,200 getaway.

'Snows' Record $25,000, D.C. Ace; 'Mine'-Vaude Hep 24G, 'Front' Big 11G

Washington, Oct. 21.

There's a definite upbeat at first-runs here this stanza, thanks largely to brisk weather and some sturdy newcomers. Leading the parade is "Snows of Kilimanjaro," which is breaking all records at Loew's Columbia, smallest of company houses recently reconverted to first-run. "Because You're Mine" at Loew's Capitol is bringing that big house out of recent doldrums. "Back At the Front" is big at RKO Keith's. "Ivanhoe" continues to be champ in holdover class, with "Quiet Man" still great to become first three-week holdover in years at Warner.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 55-95)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) plus vaude. Brisk $24,000, best in weeks but not sock for this house. Last week, "Untamed Frontier" (U) plus vaude, $17,000.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 74-$1.20)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Terrific $25,000 for this smallest Loew house, and stays indefinitely. Last week, "Devil Makes Three" (M-G), $8,000.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 50-85) — "Casque D'Or" (Indie). Fine $4,500 for French import. Holds. Last week, "Cry Beloved Country" (Indie) (3d wk), steady $2,500 in final 6 days.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 50-85) — "Back At Front" (U). Big $11,000 for this pic, thanks to hep buildup. Last week, "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) (2d wk), $9,000.

Metropolitan (Warner) (1,200; 50-80)—"Lost in Alaska" (U). So-so $5,000. Last week, "Toughest Man in Arizona" (Rep) and "Lady Possessed" (Rep), $4,300.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 74-$1.25) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (5th wk). Very bright $17,000 for second consecutive week holds again.

Playhouse (Lopert) (485; 50-$1) —"Tales of Hoffmann" (UA) (reissue) (3d-final wk). Steady $3,500 after $4,500 last week.

Warner (WB) (2,174; 50-80) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) (3d-final wk). Amazingly firm $12,000, after better than hoped for $15,500 last week. Held over after exceeding hopes last week.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (600; 60-$1)—"Carrie" (Par) (5th wk). Steady $5,000 for second week in succession. Stays on.

New Fare, Cool Weather Boost Chi; 'Crimson'-Jan Murray Fast $40,000, 'Front' Nice 11G, 'You're Mine' 30G

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Strong pix and cold weather will up biz this week, but snow Monday (20) hurt some spots. Top grosser is "Ivanhoe" at Oriental with staunch $48,000 in second week. Of new films "Crimson Pirate" with Jan Murray and Al Martino onstage is the strongest, looking for $40,000 at the Chicago. Grand is aiming at nice $11,000 with "Back at Front" and "Storm Over Tibet."

"Because You're Mine" shapes hefty $30,000 in its initial frame at Palace. United Artists is taking a good $12,000 with "The Golden Hawk" and "Captain Black Jack." State-Lake's "Way of a Gaucho" and "Wait Till Sun Shines Nellie" looks fair $17,000.

"Lusty Men" still is lusty in its second session at the Woods. Roosevelt looks mild for holdover frame of "Caribbean" and "Woman of North Country." "Stranger in Between" is good in second round at the Surf.

Estimates for This Week

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 98) — "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and stageshow. Looking for okay $40,000. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) (2d wk), disappointing $32,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 55-98) — "Back At Front" (U) and "Storm Over Tibet" (Col). Fine $11,000 or near. Last week, "Horizons West" (U) and "All Because of Sally" (U) (2d wk), okay $7,500.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 98-$1.25) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Big $48,000 after rousing $68,400 first week.

Palace (Eitel) (2,500; 98)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Hefty $30,000. Last week, "Just for You" (Par) (3d wk), fair $11,800.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 55-98) —"Caribbean" (Par) and "Woman of North Country" (Rep) (2d wk). Light $7,500 after first week's $10,200.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 55-98) —"Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Wait Till Sun Shines Nellie" (20th). Fair $17,000. Last week, "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) and "The Fighter" (U), (2d wk), nice $15,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,073; 98 — "Lusty Men" (RKO) (2d wk). Should hit very good $19,000. Last week, $12,000 in 3 days.

'Snows' Smooth $45,000, Frisco; 'Thief' Hep 11G, 'Front' 11G, 'Devil' 9½G

San Francisco, Oct. 21.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro," backed by a big campaign, is soaring to socko total at the Fox this round. Tilt in prices is helping swell week's take. Remainder of Market Street biz is spotty. "Back at Front" looms barely okay at Orpheum while "Somebody Loves Me" looks good at Paramount. "The Thief" is heading for fancy total at United Artists. "Devil Makes Three" is only thin at Warfield while "Miracle of Fatima" is off considerably from a big first session at St. Francis.

Estimates for This Week

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 65-95)—"Sudden Fear" (RKO) (2d wk). Good $11,000. Last week, nice $18,000.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i. e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Hellgate' Brisk $21,000, Denver

'Snows' Smash $21,000, Seattle; 'Ivanhoe' 20G

Seattle, Oct. 21.

Some important newcomers are helping biz here this week, with cooler weather an aide. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at Fifth Avenue looks smash while "Ivanhoe" at the Music Hall is running neck-and-neck for an equally terrific session at the Music Hall. "Quiet Man" looks good in second Orpheum round.

Estimates for This Week

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,829; 65-90)—"Assigment Paris" (Col) and "Fighting Rats Tobruk" (Indie). Okay $8,000. Last week, "Cairo Road" (Indie) and "Breakdown" (Indie), $7,700.

Fifth Avenue (Evergreen) (2,236; 90-$1.25)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Smash $21,000. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Navajo" (Lip) (2d wk), $5,200.

Liberty (Hamrick) (1,650; 65-90) —"Back at Front" (U) and "WAC from Walla Walla" (Rep). Modest $6,000. Last week, "My Man and I" (M-G) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep), $3,400.

'Snows' Giant 20G, St. L.; 'McLain' 15G

St. Louis, Oct. 21.

Using upped scale, "Snows of Kilimanjaro" shapes standout here this session with smash at the St. Louis. "Big Jim McLain" looks fine at Ambassador. "Les Miserables" is doing solidly in two small spots. "Son of Paleface," which was solid in first week at the big Fox, is holding over with "Back At Front" added. "Ivanhoe" still is good in fourth round at Loew's.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (F&M) (3,000; 60-75)—"Big Jim McLain" (WB) and "Too Many Girls" (RKO). Neat $15,000. Last week "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Walla Walla" (Rep), fair $11,000.

Fox (F&M) (5,000; 60-75)—"Son of Paleface" (Par) (2d wk) and "Back At Front" (U). "Paleface" started second week today (Tues.). Last week, "Paleface" and "Bonzo To College" (U), fine $16,000.

Loew's (Loew) (3,172; 75-$1.20) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk). Good $11,000 after solid $14,000 third stanza.

Missouri (F&M) (3,500; 60-75) — "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) and "Crimson Pirate" (WB). Mild $9,000. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk), fair $9,500.

'Thief'-Johnston-Colonna Solid 93G On Spotty B'way; 'Poster' Mild 30G In 2 Spots, 'Mine' Nice 125G In 4th

Despite four new pictures and favorable theatre weather, Broadway first-run business is very spotty this session, with the current intense interest in the Presidential campaign mostly blamed for sluggish trade in many spots. Majority of holdovers are suffering from having their runs extended too long.

Good money is going to "The Thief" with stageshow headed by Johnny Johnston, Jerry Colonna and iceshow, which is getting a solid $93,000 in first stanza at the Roxy. Excellent campaign is credited with helping to such a strong week. "Full House," playing at the arty Trans-Lux 52d St., is headed for record $15,000 opening round.

"Four Poster," playing day-date at the Victoria and Sutton, is a disappointment although getting an okay $11,500 at the latter. Only a mild $18,500 was garnered on initial session at the Victoria. Comparatively stronger showing at the 561-seat Sutton would indicate that the pic likely will do best in arty houses or small-seaters. "Golden Hawk," with vaude, fourth newcomer, is okay $20,000 at the Palace.

Second week of "Just For You" is sturdy $28,000 at the Capitol while second stanza of "World in His Arms" is heading for nice $17,000 at the Mayfair.

"Because You're Mine" with stageshow is off considerably along with the rest of the Street after a big third stanza. However, it will give the Music Hall a nice $125,000 on the fourth, which is sufficient to keep it there a fifth week. Third round was big $145,000.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" is holding very well, with socko $39,000 likely in fifth week at the Rivoli. It continues.

"This Is Cinerama" pushed to the highest figure of its run at the Broadway, with capacity $44,500 for third week ended last night.

"Son of Paleface" with Louis Prima band, Five De Marco Sisters, Los Gatos topping stage bill finished the third week at the Paramount with okay $57,000.

"Limelight," new Charles Chaplin pic, opens day-date at Astor and Trans-Lux 60th Street tomorrow (Thurs.). Film is playing reserved-seat, two-a-day at the latter.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 70-$1.50) —"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (9th-final wk). Final session looks to hit okay $8,500. Eighth week was big $12,000. "Limelight" (UA) opens tomorrow (Thurs.), playing day-date with Trans-Lux 60th St. Theatre.

Broadway (Cinerama) (1,250; 90-$2.80)—"This Is Cinerama" (Indie) (4th wk). Third stanza ended last night (Tues.) was absolute capacity at $44,500 for 17 shows. Second week was $38,500 for 18 shows, practically capacity. Dropped second Friday matinee starting last week (17).

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1.50) —"Just For You" (Par) (3d wk). Initial holdover round ended last night (Tues.) with solid $28,000 but down sharply from big $42,000 opening week.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 50-$1.80) —"One Minute To Zero" (RKO) (5th-final wk). Winding up with mild $6,500 or near after okay $9,500 for sixth round. "The Lusty Men" (RKO) comes in on Friday (24).

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80) —"Stranger in Between" (U) (10th wk). The ninth frame ended Monday (20) was okay $3,500 after good $4,500 for eighth week. "The Promoter" (U) opens Oct. 28.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 50-$1.50)— "Lure of Wilderness" (20th) (3d wk). Off to $6,000 after fair $8,000 for second round. Continues.

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 50-$1.50) —"World in His Arms" (U) (2d wk). Initial holdover session ending today (Wed.) looks to hold at nice $17,000 after sock $30,000 opening week. Holds a third.

Normandie (Normandie Theatres) (592; 95-$1.80)—"Magic Box" (Mayer) (5th wk). Fourth round ended Monday (20) continued strongly with $6,700 after $9,700 for third week, near opening stanza total.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 75-$1.40)— "Golden Hawk" (Col) with 8 acts of vaude. Heading for okay $20,000 or better. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th) with vaudeville, nice $22,000 but below expectancy.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 80-$1.80) —"Springfield Rifle" (WB) with Duke Ellington orch, Howell & Bowser, The Ravens heading stageshow. Opens today (Wed.) In ahead, "Son of Paleface" (Par) with Louis Prima orch, Five De Marco Sisters, Los Gatos heading stageshow (3d wk), oke $57,000 after big $70,000 for second round.

Park Ave. (Reade) (583; 90-$1.50) —"Mons. Fabre" (Indie) (7th wk). Sixth stanza ended Saturday (18) held at $4,000 after $4,500 for fifth week. House closes Oct. 31.

Paris (Indie) (568; $1.25-$1.80)— "Savage Triangle" (Indie) (4th wk). Third frame ended Sunday (19) continued okay with $5,500 after $7,200 for second stanza. "The Thirst of Men" (Indie) opens Oct. 27.

Rivoli (UAT) (2,092; 70-$2)— "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th) (5th wk). Still smash at $39,000 or close. Fourth week was $48,000. Continues.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 80-$2.40)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) with stageshow (4th wk). Holding at nice $125,000 after big $145,000 for third stanza. Holds for fifth week. "Happy Time" (Col) is due in next, probably on Oct. 30. "Plymouth Adventure" (M-G) is tentatively pencilled in to follow if it can be opened around Thanksgiving.

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$2.20)— "The Thief" (UA) with Johnny Johnston, Jerry Colonna, iceshow onstage (2d wk). First session ended last night (Tues.) soared to solid $93,000, aided by fine campaign. In ahead, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) with Mary Small, Al Bernie, Benny Fields & Blossom Seeley, iceshow onstage (3d wk), fine $75,000, with Fields-Seeley presence on last 11 days a big factor.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-$1.25)— "Merry Widow" (M-G) (5th wk). Fourth frame ended last night (Tues.) held at $16,000 or close. Third week was solid $22,000. "Everything I Have Is Yours" (M-G) due in Oct. 29.

Sutton (R & B) (561; 90-$1.50) —"Four Poster" (Col) (2d wk). Initial stanza ended last night (Tues.) hit okay $11,500 but comparatively much better showing than Victoria, where day-dating. In ahead, "Man in White Suit" (U) (28th wk-8 days), $4,700 to wind up big long-run here.

Trans-Lux 60th St. (T-L) (453; 90-$1.50)—"Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue) (12th-final wk). Mild $2,800 after $3,600 for 11th week. "Limelight" (UA) opens tomorrow (Thurs.) on reserved-seat, two-a-day run, playing day-date with Astor.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; 90-$1.50)—"Full House" (20th). First week ending today (Wed.) looks to hit a record $15,000 or near. Holds. In ahead, "Ivory Hunter" (U) (8th wk-10 days), $4,100 to wind up nice run.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,060; 70-$1.80)—"Four Poster" (Col) (2d wk). Initial stanza ended last night (Tues.) was mild $18,500, very disappointing. Likely won't hold here long. In ahead, "Affair in Trinidad" (Col) (11th wk), oke $8,200 to complete unusually big longrun here.

'Ivanhoe' Smash $25,000, Prov.; 'Men' Lusty 10G, 'Fatima' Wow 11G, 2d

Providence, Oct. 21.

It's a boff boxoffice at most spots this week, with Loew's State heading the list with "Ivanhoe," great. Also hep in second session is Majestic's "Miracle." RKO Albee's "Lusty Men" is heading for a big total.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; 44-65)— "Lusty Men" (RKO) and "Scotland Yard Inspector" (Lip). Big $10,000. Last week, "Horizons West" (UI) and "Naughty Widow" (Indie), fair $7,000.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 44-65)— "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Still sock at $11,000. First round was terrific $18,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 74-$1.10)— "Ivanhoe" (M-G). Jamming them in with upped scale helping to terrific $25,000. Last week, "Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk), oke $10,000.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 44-65) —"Caribbean" (Par) and "Actors and Sin" (UA). Opened Monday (20). Last week, "Strange Fascination" (Par) and "Ladies of Chorus" (Indie), mild $6,500.

London Pix Biz Slow But 'College' Big $5,500, 'World'-'Mars' Hot 4½G, 1st Weekend, 'Happy' Sad 1½G, 2 Days

London, Oct. 14.

It has been a sluggish week at the West End first-runs. Most theatres getting below average grosses. Business seems to have taken a general slump and many new entries have failed to provide much of an impetus. One successful new bill, at London Pavilion, comprises "Strange World" and "Red Planet Mars," which is heading for fine $8,500 in first round.

"She's Working Her Way Through College" (WB) started well with $5,500 for opening weekend. "The Happy Time," however, opened poorly with only $1,500 for the first two days at the Carlton.

"Quo Vadis" returned to the Ritz with a hefty total in first week of its return run. It had previously played 25 weeks at the spot. "Pat and Mike" faded out at the Empire after a run of 11 days with only nearly $19,000 for the extended week. "Venetian Bird" started slowly with only $3,000 for opening weekend at the Leicester Square Theatre.

Estimates for Last Week

Carlton (Par) (1,128; 55-$1.70)—"The Happy Time" (Col). Hit by crix and made poor start, with around $1,500 in first two days.

Curzon (GCT) (500; 55-$1.70) — "Kon-Tiki" (RKO) and "Stranger in House" (GCT). After waiting months for "La Ronde" to finish its record 18-month run, "Kon-Tiki" made an auspicious start at this arty house with a $1,400 in its initial two days. Continues indef.

Empire (M-G) (3,099; 55-$1.70)—"Pat and Mike" (M-G) (2d wk). Not up to expectations, with $5,200 in second weekend after fair $13,700 opening round. Withdrawn after 11 days with "Merry Widow" (M-G) in on Oct. 13.

Gaumont (CMA) (1,500; 50-$1.70) —"Monkey Business" (20th) (2d wk). Below hopes at slightly over $2,700 for second weekend after moderate $5,600 for opening frame. Stays usual three weeks.

Leicester Square Theatre (CMA) (1,753; 50-$1.70)—"Venetian Bird" (GFD). Made moderate start at $3,000 for opening weekend. Stays on.

London Pavilion (UA) (1,217; 50-$1.70)—"Strange World" (UA) and "Red Planet Mars" (UA). Hefty $4,500 for initial weekend. Shaping to fine $8,500 on stanza. Stays.

Odeon, Leicester Square (CMA) (2,200; 50-$1.70) — "Wife's Best Friend" (20th) (3d wk). Final weekend was poor $2,000 after moderate $4,400 for second week. "Limelight" (UA) preems Oct. 17.

Odeon, Marble Arch (CMA) (2,200; 50-$1.70—"Full House" (20th) (2d wk). Received mixed praise. Around $3,800 for second weekend after average $7,700 opening week. "Gentle Gunman" GFD) comes in Oct. 23.

Plaza (Par) (1,902; 70-$1.70) — "Jumping Jacks" (Par) (3d wk). Winding its run with fair $5,500. "The Savage" (Par) and "Turning Point" (Par) follow on Oct. 17.

Ritz (M-G) (432; 90-$2.15)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G). Back for return date. Solid $4,700. Stays.

Warner (WB) (1,753; 50-$1.70)—"Working Way Through College" (WB). Opened above hopes with pleasing $5,500 for first weekend.

PLAN FULL NEWSREEL CORONATION COVERAGE

London, Oct. 14.

Extra stock is likely to be made available to the five newsreel companies for filming the Coronation. Normally, the bi-weekly reels are limited to 700 feet, but it is anticipated that an additional allocation will bring the footage up to about 2,000 feet. Present advance arrangements have the newsreelers planning to distribute a Coronation flash reel on the night of the event (June 2) to theatres in London and the suburbs. Then, 24 hours later a full reel will be in circulation throughout the country.

Because it is felt that theatres who play newsreels second and third-run would like to have day-date bookings with first-runs, exhibs in the latter category are being asked if they would relax their normal objections to such an arrangement.

Trenet Set for $100,000 Latin-Am. Concert Tour

Paris, Oct. 21.

Charles Trenet has been inked to a $100,000 contract calling for a tour of Latin-American capitals. Singer was signed by Espectaculos Victor Sturdivini, Latin-American company which has been piloting ice revues through Central and South America.

Trenet planes to Brazil Nov. 10 with manager Maurice Roget to start his tour. He starts at Sao Paulo and then hits Rio de Janeiro. Tour then goes through Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Colombia, Mexico. EVS also has possible dates in Ecuador, Panama, Venezuela and the West Indies. The EVS artists division was started last July and is after big names for tours.

Many Touring Companies Ready to Launch New Legit Season in Italy

Milan, Oct. 14.

With last week seeing the start of the Italian legit season, an exceptionally large number of touring companies are preparing to operate. Many old names are returning to the stage after a few seasons away. Among general trends already distinguishable are a swing away from plays by French and other foreign authors, predominant in past years for Italian repertoire companies, with an increase in the number of Italian plays and classics. Also on the upswing is the Little Theatre, which from an unsteady beginning in immediately after the war has been steadily gaining support, aided by city and government subsidies.

The Renzo Ricci Co. will debut here with plays by Bracco, Niccodemi, and Rovetta. Preceding it at the Odeon Theatre, also Milan, are Alda Borelli and Marcello Giorda, with plays by Sabatino Lopez, Pirandello, Praga, and Niccodemi scheduled. Also opening here are Nino Besozzi's group, and the Vivi Gioi-Luigi Cimara Co., while Emma Gramatica starts her season at nearby Novara.

Elsa Merlini returns to the theatre in one of her past hits, Pirandello's "Signora Morli Uno E Due" at Turin's Carignano Theatre, to be followed there by a new company formed around Ruggero Ruggeri. In Rome, Vittorio Gassman and his newly formed Italian Art Theatre will stage plays by Racine, Shakespeare, Esquilius, and Seneca at the Valle. Also in the capital city, the Sergio Tofano Co. is set for the Satiri Theatre while the Morelli-Stoppa troupe directed by Luchino Visconti will move to the Eliseo after a debut in Venice with Goldoni's "La Locandiera."

'Troubled Air' Set For BBC Broadcast Oct. 22

London, Oct. 21.

First world radio production of Irwin Shaw's "The Troubled Air" is to be broadcast tomorrow (Wed.) on the British Broadcasting Corp.'s Light Program. The play, dealing with Communism, has been adapted by Raymond Byrnes and Monica Mugan. It is being produced by Cleland Finn with mainly an American and Canadian cast.

Central character in the play is an American radio producer who is faced with an ultimatum from his sponsor to fire five of the actors in his top-line radio show because of their suspected Red sympathies. He begs for time to conduct his own investigation into their activities and finally comes under fire himself. Byrnes, who is currently writing film scrips for American TV, has spent most of his life in America. His coadaptor, Miss Mugan, is a regular contributor to Canadian Broadcasting Corp. programs.

'Eve' London Chances Lean on Flo Desmond

London, Oct. 21.

Sole new entry in the West End last week was Jack Hylton's production of "The Apples of Eve" by Allen Berthal which preemed at the Comedy last Tuesday (14). It is a conventional whodunit distinguished by the fact that Florence Desmond, who is noted for her impressions in cabaret and vaudeville, plays all seven femme roles.

Her contribution more than anything else will determine the success of the piece, which on merit alone would have little prospect of survival.

Tourist Travel To Mexico Soars

Mexico City, Oct. 14.

U. S. tourism is taking another upswing in Mexico. The Mexican Tourist Assn. announces that during July, latest month for which it has data, 42,561 visitors entered Mexico, mostly by train, bus or auto. July tourist spending totaled $27,100,000, the association estimated.

The association is boosting bus travel to Mexico, pointing out that practically all American bus lines have close connections to Mexican border points where there is easy transfer to Mexican-operated vehicles. More and better roads and increased hotel, restaurant and other traveler facilities make bus riding a pleasure down here, the association claims.

Stories that 50,000 foreigners, who entered as tourists, are dallying in Mexico long after the expiration of the six-month limit of their tourist permits, were branded greatly exaggerated by the Ministry of Interior. Ministry said few tourists violate the law in that and other regards. During 1952, only 36 tourists over-stayed, and only six did so willfully, the ministry revealed.

Motor car travel from the U. S. and Canada is on the upbeat, announced the Mexican Automobile Assn., which expects at least 270,000 auto visitors this year, on the basis of an entry of 90,000 cars, each containing an average of three persons. Last year, 85,138 cars entered Mexico, according to the MAA.

New Mex Import Duties Cut U.S. Distrib Coin

Mexico City, Oct. 14.

Hollywood is to get less coin from Mexico. That is because of the hike in foreign film import duties recently enacted. The U. S. is top supplier of foreign pix here, annually.

New rates are $4.62 per kilogram (2¼ lbs.) plus 10%. Former duty was a straight $2.89 per kilogram.

Victors Over Eady Coin Distrib, Brit. Exhibs Seek Further Relief

London, Oct. 14.

Exhibitors, having won their first battle over the distribution of the Eady fund money among producers, are now striving for further concessions. They are agitating to get total relief for theatres that operate in the red, and a reduction in the levy on lower bracket admissions.

The request to exclude money-losing theatres from the fund is meeting with strong resistance from distributors. They contend that exhibitors in this category should show their figures to the Kinematograph Renters Society, which will make an adjustment in film rental charges to put them in the black. But exhibs are adamant in resisting this suggestion. At the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. general council meeting last week there was an overwhelming vote against submitting to this proposal. Negotiations meantime are to continue through the machinery of the four trade associations.

One of the main spokesmen at the general council sesh was J. Arthur Rank, who declared that if there was no Eady fund, exhibs would lose money. He insisted, too, that it was not a voluntary scheme; the only voluntary thing about the arrangement was that the association had voluntarily agreed to sign a contract.

Rank fully agreed with other theatre operators in their refusal to bring their accounts before the KRS, and commented that no industry could be healthy if any part of it were losing money. However, he thought it was a great step forward when both producers and distributors said, "if exhibs are losing money we will put them in a position with film deals to make money."

Vet Aussie Exhib Likes Cinerama; Shies Off Cost

Marshall Palmer, vet Australian exhibitor and radio exec, visited New York last week on his way home after five months in Europe. He already has left for Canada and plans sailing from Vancouver Nov. 12. Palmer was the first Aussie exhib to view Cinerama, new dimensional film process at the Broadway Theatre, and is enthused over it. However, he didn't think it feasible for Australia at present because of its high cost of operation.

Palmer, who is a past prexy of the Queensland Exhibitors Assn., operates theatres in suburban Brisbane. A Queensland exhib, he produces the Aussie amateur radio program, picking top prize winners to tour them in key theatres in that territory. Palmer also operates the sole vaudeville agency in Queensland, having formed it back in the early days of the cinema.

Madrid's Legit Outlook 'Dismal'; Info Ministry To Control Two Houses

Madrid, Oct. 14.

The coming season's outlook for the two Madrid State controlled theatres looms very dismal. After 12 years on the job, director-producers Luis Escobar and Huberto Perez Hossa of the Maria Guerrero Theatre and playwright-producer Caetano Luca de Tena of the Teatro Espanol have resigned and the respective companies disbanded.

It is believed that the new setup will be directly controlled by the Ministry of Information which will give eight-month contracts to a number of artists. They will be asked to play in one of the two theatres according to the needs of the plays to be produced.

Luis F. Igoa, until now house manager of Teatro Espanol, will become its interim director and producer with the difficult job of presenting only classics and important revivals. The house, which was rented to impresario Ramon Pena until end of last month, will open officially this month with a play by Lopez de Vega. Teatro Maria Guerrero will present only new plays by Spanish authors or translations. No director has been nominated yet, but various producers have been asked since it's intended that every play should have a different producer and different sets and costume designer.

There are 18 theatres open here now with all doing reasonably well. Faring especially good are the ones presenting folklore shows which do almost capacity biz. They are helped by a large percentage of tourists now filling all the hotels in the city. Comedians Antonio Casal and Angel Andres with their "Los Quatro besos," which reached the 1,000 performance mark, have gone to the Fuencarral and their place at the Calderon has been taken by flamenco singer Juanito Valderana and Co., just back from four months in south France.

Cuban-Mex Film Unit To Make Pix in Havana

Havana, Oct. 14.

A Joint Cuban-Mexican company will begin making films in Cuba within a few weeks, Raul Acosta Rubio has announced here. He is president of the Cuban Film Industry Patronate, a semi-official organization.

Rubio stated that both Cuban and Mexican talent and workers would be used in production. Equipment of the Cuban Film Production Co. would be utilized, plus additional equipment from Mexico.

Work starts soon on the scenario and sets of the first pic, an adaptation of a radio novel by Mrs. Maria Teresa de la Cruz Munoz. Probable stars of the film flicker are Marga Lopex, Mexican actress, and Alberto Gonzales Rubio, Cuban actor. Rubio, who is also private secretary to President Fulgencio Batista, said plans are eventually to have eight films in production.

Lifar Paris Opera Terp Troupe Sock in Japan; Britisher to Make Bid

Tokyo, Oct. 14.

Nipponese balletomanes packed Tokyo's 2,500-seat Hibiya Hall six times last week to shout vociferous appreciation of the Serge Lifar troupe of dancers from the Paris Opera, who opened a two-week stand Oct. 6. Dance fans paid a top of $4.20 for the best seats, scaled up from $1.25, for the opportunity to watch what was probably the best dancing seen on Japanese stages in 20 years.

A 19-year-old, Liane Dayde, stole the show from the older, more experienced dancers. With a fine display of technique, artistry and wit, Miss Dayde garnered far more curtain calls than aging onetime Diaghilev star Serger Lifar, currently choreographer and ballet master at the Paris Opera.

Second fave was blonde Lycette Darsonval, who made up for flaws in delicacy and grace by pyrotechnical feats of sustained pirouettes. Male dancer Alexandre Kalioujny got good mitts for his support in pas de deux for both girls.

Staging was poor, as no orch was used, sets were usually plain black drops or dressed up with a few small props, and lighting was strictly amateur. Music was supplied by the single piano of Jean Laforge, who was here last year as accompanist for French solo dancer, Espanita.

Company, sponsored here jointly by the French Embassy and Yomiuri newspaper, will play six more dates this week before leaving for home.

Later this month, the British Embassy makes a bid for the ballet spotlight in Japan when it presents dancer Sonia Arova of the British Festival Ballet, who will dance the title role in "Sleeping Beauty" with Japan's leading company, Komaki Ballet. Miss Arova opens in Osaka, Oct. 21, and makes her Tokyo debut Nov. 6.

TV No Scot Panic

Glasgow, Oct. 14.

TV is not setting the heather on fire here. Since it arrived six months ago, only 22,000 people in Scotland have switched from radio to tele. Dealers had expected to sell 50,000 sets in that period.

High cost of living plus the purchase tax is hindering bigger TV sales.

'Mail Order Pic Biz'

warded information on Ray Ryan and Edward (Buzz) Burke, other new RKO owners. All in all, Gemmill reported, 12 staffers worked on the story—five in Chicago, one in Washington, two in Los Angeles, one in Dallas and three in New York.

Gemmill stressed the Journal was not attacking RKO, but was merely reporting the news. He stated it was obvious from the stories that all the principals involved were confronted with the facts and had an opportunity to make statements which were duly reported in the series.

Journal, as part of its policy of looking at the film industry as it does other U. S. businesses, has other articles coming up about other picture companies, but Gemmill didn't think they would cause as much of a stir as the RKO series.

Series Begins Oct. 16

Wall St. Journal articles began last Thursday (16), and clearly created a stir in industry circles across the country. Copies of the daily were quickly sold out in New York, L. A. and other key cities, and the background material on the new RKO-ites immediately became the No. 1 conversational subject within the trade.

Opener of the series linked some of the new owners—on an individual basis—to racketeer Frank Costello, "a yokel gambling device—the punchboard," an Al Capone associate and business activities which drew official Government complaints and repeated investigations by Better Business Bureaus. Ralph Stolkin, board chairman Arnold Grant, labor counsel Sidney Korshak, and pards Sherrill Corwin, Ray Ryan, Edward (Buzz) Burke and A. L. Koolish all are covered in the Journal series.

In the Journal's roundup, Grant was covered this way: "Without so far buying a share of RKO stock, this lawyer has been put into the $2,000 a week chairmanship of RKO, at the wish of Mr. Stolkin and other purchasers. Mr. Grant says he's the man who'll run RKO and declares he has served notice on Mr. Stolkin and his associates that he is no longer looking out for their special interests, but serving all stockholders."

The Journal reported that Stolkin provided $240,000 as part of the group down payment to Howard Hughes, and although president, he'll headquarter in Chicago, "where he has built a little empire of businesses upon the foundation of a yokel gambling device, the punchboard."

Korshak got billing as "a sort of catalytic agent," having introduced Stolkin to Grant among other things. Digging into Korshak's past, the Journal reports that his name was mentioned in testimony before the Kefauver Crime Committee. Earlier, said the sheet, Korshak "organized" a parole for "Cherry Nose" Gioe, the Capone mobster who had been convicted of participating in the million-dollar Browne-Bioff movie industry extortion plot of a decade ago.

Koolish got a big going-over by the financial paper. Father-in-law of Stolkin "blazed a trail for the younger man," it's said. Paper further noted that "he and his companies have piled up a bulky record of Better Business Bureau complaints, three Federal Trade Commission cease-and-desist orders and one grand jury indictment — dismissed by the court as faultily drafted. He has been deeply interested in philanthropy, that is to say in running charity drives for profit."

Ryan had been described by Stolkin as a "heavy gambler," according to the Journal, which adds: "and one of his associates in a business venture—inadvertently, says Mr. Ryan—was Frank Costello, the racketeer."

Burke was merely described as an oil man and Corwin as a Los Angeles theatre operator.

Ryan's Spotlighting

Ryan's reputation as a blue-chip gambler rated him the spotlight Friday in the second of the series. Ryan was a pard in the buyout of Hughes' stock, but is active in the film outfit only to the extent that he's represented on the board by his business associate, William Gorman.

Financial daily opines that Ryan's real-life story could be fashioned into a scenario for RKO to produce. For, states the Journal, he skyrocketed from a trucker at the age of 19 to his present-day status as the "top man in a whole series of petroleum ventures in Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado—wherever the land looks rich. Ryan now is 48.

Based on the extensive coverage given the subject, the Journal was particularly intrigued with the gambling portions of the Ryan saga and the company these endeavors brought him into. It stated: "Big gamblers naturally come to know big bookmakers, says Mr. Ryan, and that explains how he came to know such figures as Frank Erickson, the noted East Coast racketeer who has recently been imprisoned. Mr. Ryan says he 'bet Erickson on the horses'."

Wall St. paper, continuing, reproduces testimony before the Kefauver Crime Committee investigations last year in which Ryan's name was mentioned by "gangster" Frank Costello, latter saying Ryan was linked with him in an oil field venture. Journal thereupon quotes Ryan as saying the association with Costello was inadvertent.

Journal further relates that another Ryan investment, of about four years ago, was the purchase of a small interest in the Sea View Hotel, Miami Beach. Daily adds that the previous spring a raid on the hotel uncovered a horse book in operation. Journal quotes a former Dade County (Fla.) deputy sheriff as saying evidence was confiscated showing that $50,000 to $100,000 was bet there daily.

Journal socks across the idea that Ryan and others in the syndicate are dripping in oil and money. It notes that Burke, leaving the service after the last war, was introduced by his father to Ryan and the two formed a partnership. Reports the Journal: "Apparently the association has been rewarding; this summer Mr. Burke was able to certify his net worth at $2,114,781."

Stolkin sold his interest in a direct-mail outfit in 1948 for $1,000,000 and "decided to look around for new fields to conquer," says the Journal. He and his father-in-law, A. L. Koolish, formed a partnership with Ryan after Stolkin was lured to the southwest by a magazine article which described it as "fabulous," according to a Stolkin press agent, who's quoted by the Journal. They have only oral agreements in their dealings, instead of formal contract, it's reported.

Journal quotes Ryan as estimating the production of all his oil properties at over 5,000 barrels a day. Stolkin's reported estimate is over 10,000 barrels daily. East Texas crude oil brings about $2.65 a barrel, the Journal relates.

Monday's 3d Article

Third article, appearing Monday (20), is devoted to the "rocket rise of Ralph Stolkin to the presidency of RKO Pictures at the age of 34." Journal credits this ascent to "Unusual energy. Uncommon imagination. Unceasing use of the U. S. postal system."

It goes on to relate that whereas he began his business career eight years ago with $15,000 of borrowed money, "this summer his net worth was certified at $3,433,690." Paper then quotes Stolkin's father in Gary, Ind., as saying that his son was "always very ambitious. . . . He never felt inhibited about anything."

Article quotes from official Stolkin biography, written by Howard G. Mayer, which describes the RKO prexy as "one of the top promotional wizards in the U. S.," whose career makes Horatio Alger look like "a small time operator." After that, it dips into the background of the Monarch Sales Corp., Stolkin's first independent venture.

The article relates that Monarch in 1947 alone rang up sales of $7,000,000, according to a credit report on file at the Crime Commission, and that the company mailed out thousands of punchboards. Various Better Business Bureau comments on Monarch are recorded ("We have on file an almost fabulous number of complaints which have to do with the company's failure to fulfill orders as sent in response to their punch card sales"), and the Journal then notes a 1947 Federal Trade Commission complaint against Monarch and Stolkin.

Complaint charged "misrepresentation and use of lottery methods in the sale of cameras, fountain pens, electric razors, billfolds, and other merchandise," and it challenged Monarch's advertising claims. Later, says the Journal, Stolkin sold Monarch, but in March, 1950, the FTC nevertheless issued a "cease and desist" order.

Journal inserts a short social note, reporting that "The rise of Mr. Stolkin to millionaire status via the punchboard route followed his marriage in 1941 to Miss Ruth Koolish, daughter of the Abraham Koolish" now with Stolkin on the RKO board. "Young Mrs. Stolkin has shared both the business and social life of her husband. She was secretary-treasurer of Monarch Sales," the story says.

There follows a review of the Koolish-Stolkin partnership in Empire Industries which "has sold auto seat covers, coonskin caps, pens and silverware by mail, but one of its principal functions has been direct mail solicitations for a fee." The writer then relates Stolkin's venture of making small loans by mail through Postal Finance Corp.

Stolkin's various radio and TV interests, including purchase of radio station KOIN in Portland, Ore., through Mount Hood Radio & Television Broadcasting Corp., of which Stolkin is a veepee, and purchase of KJR, Seattle, by Mount Rainier Radio & Television Broadcasting Corp., in which Stolkin, Corwin and Burke are stockholders and Stolkin a v.p., are given a going-over.

Paper winds up with a list of other Stolkin ventures and the observation that "Mr. Stolkin, like another of the new RKO board of directors, has been active in offering his services to charitable organizations." The Wall St. paper promises a review of this "chapter" soon.

UPT Spurs Industry Publicity Campaign, Sparked by Hudson

United Paramount Theatres is underway with a nation-wide public relations campaign, headed by United Detroit's Earl Hudson, in which managers of the corporation's over 650 theatres are participating. Exhibs not associated with UPT also are being invited to join.

Promotion campaign is on the institutional level. Hudson, who headquarters in Detroit, provides the UPT managers with factual news stories upbeating the entire industry. Managers, in turn, do the job of press-planting.

Plan has met with substantial success so far, based on the amount of copy used in dailies across the country. Local exhibs or trade groups are identified as the source for the stories in each city, thus the copy has immediate value for editors.

New Haven Evening Register, for example, recently printed an article on the rebirth of enthusiasm and confidence within the trade, with New Haven "spokesmen for the industry" quoted.

In another instance, the Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, carried a report on Hollywood's extensive production plans for the future. Quoted was a fact-finding committee of New Haven exhibs for the local flavor.

Numerous other papers have carried the initial pieces from Hudson, mainly the studios' lensing programs and listing of upcoming product from all companies.

Les Zucker Heads New Universal District

Creation of a new district in its western division is part of a Universal reshuffle announced Monday (20) by Charles J. Feldman, U general sales manager. District, comprising Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Salt Lake City and Denver branches, will be headed by Lester Zucker, promoted from the Cleveland branch managership. He's succeeded in that spot by Edward Heiber. Realignment of the company's 32 branches aims at investing greater authority and supervision on the district and branch level, according to Feldman.

Zucker will headquarter in Kansas City. Other two western division districts are headed by Barney Rose and Manie M. Gottlieb. Southern division has two districts, headed by James V. Frew and Henry H. Martin. F. J. A. McCarthy is division head. P. T. Dana's eastern division takes in districts headed by P. F. Rosian, John J. Scully and David A. Levy.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

So successful have informal recitals by songwriter Frank Loesser been in Boston and Chicago to plug Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" that the concerts reportedly will be extended to other key cities. Loesser, who composed the music and lyrics for the film, is assisted at the recitals by his wife, Lynn.

Some 75 music and film critics, as well as disk jockeys, attended the Chicago session held at the Blackstone Hotel Monday (13). The Loessers played and sang the "Andersen" score which was tape-recorded at the scene for the benefit of the disk jocks. RKO and Goldwyn flacks, who devised the promotional scheme, say it's paying off in hefty puffs for "Andersen."

Cinerama has launched an ad tieup with products listed as inspired by the "film with a new dimension." Arranged by the Lynn Farnol office, first ad broke in the Sunday (19) N. Y. Herald Tribune featuring a woman's coat being sold by Russeks. Fifth Ave. shop. A six-column ad, displaying a model in Russeks' "motion-coat," the headline copy reads "Introducing 'Cinerama,' inspired by the exciting 'film with a new dimension'."

Joe Glaser, head of Associated Booking Corp., which handles Sugar Ray Robinson in all show business fields, denies that Robinson has signed with Abner J. Greshler for a biopic on the fighter. Glaser states that Greshler had approached Robinson for rights to set up a life story deal, but permission has not been granted. Glaser has written Greshler asking the Coast agent not to represent himself as empowered to act for Robinson.

Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" will be given unusual critique treatment in the upcoming issues of Saturday Review and Theatre Arts, each of which will run two reviews of the pic. In Saturday Review, Arthur Knight has a rave notice and Hollis Alpert takes it on the downbeat. In Theatre Arts Edwin Miller does the pro notice and Walter Kerr the con. Presumably the controversy anent Chaplin cued the two-way approach by the two mags.

Reorganization of top exec personnel at Warner Pathe News hasn't affected the status of Walton C. Ament, v.p. and general manager of the company. With Ament second in command under prexy Norman Moray, news editor Jack LeVien has been upped to assistant general manager. LeVien retains the editor job but will take on additional administrative detail.

NPA Okays 7 Ozoners

Washington, Oct. 21.

Seven drive-ins, three conventional film houses and one legiter get the nod from National Production Authority in its latest list of okays on use of controlled materials for commercial projects.

Period covered is the last half of 1952 and the first quarter of next year. Use of scarce materials for a legit house was for remodeling the old Gayety Theatre in Washington, now the Sam S. Shubert.

E. G. Hines Inks New Consultant Pact at GPEC

Earle G. Hines, who recently stepped down as board chairman of the General Precision Equipment Corp., has inked a new pact with the firm under which he'll act as a consultant on a part-time basis. Effective as of Oct. 1, the agreement covers an eight-year period.

Hines' deal calls for him to receive an annual salary of $18,000 for the first four-year stretch and $12,000 yearly for the balance of the term. GPEC pointed out that the consultant arrangement was drawn up in consideration of the former board chairman's desire to be less active in the company's affairs.

Agreement stipulates that, although Hines is to be employed as only a part-time consultant, he nevertheless is to devote a "substantial" amount of his time to his duties. He's also permitted to work in an "advisory or other capacity" for others providing such chores won't interfere with his tasks for GPEC.

General Precision, incidentally, owns 53,000 shares of 20th-Fox common stock. Principally a holding corporation, it controls such film industry subsidiaries as the International Projector Corp., Cine Simplex Corp., National-Simplex-Bludworth, Inc., and the Bizelle Cinema Supply Corp.

8 Majors, 2 Circuits Sued for $1,530,000

Eight majors, Metropolitan Playhouses and Skouras Theatres were named defendants in a $1,530,000 antitrust suit brought in N.Y. Federal Court Thursday (16) by Tower Amus. Corp. and Triumph Amus. Corp. through their trustees, Samuel Strausberg and Abraham Leff. Both corporations are now dissolved.

Tower operated a theatre of the same name in the Bronx, N.Y., from 1934-'40 while Triumph ran a Bronx house under the same tag from 1940-'45. Trustees charge in their complaint that the defendants conspired to deprive the theatres of suitable product, thus forcing them out of business.

ment on his AM show. Regarding the threatened suit, Winchell declared on the air, "You'll have to take your turn in line."

In its piece on the projected suit, headlined on page 1, the post said Monday (20) it was pressing the libel action because Winchell had used AM and TV in addition to his printed barbs at the sheet and Wechsler. It said it could answer WW's printed attacks but "had no effective means of rebuttal" for his radio commentary.

Post has a team of reporters gathering material on the Mirror columnist. It will probably not be ready until after the elections, according to Wechsler. First Post series on WW, a 24-parter, ran this spring.

As the Post-Winchell feud extended, Post columnists Leonard Lyons and Earl Wilson got into the act over the weekend with a blast from the former anent Winchell's alleged Broadway betting odds on Ike. (The Post is supporting Stevenson). A one-line editorial on the facing page of the Post's weekend edition (19) was a "note to a nameless columnist." The next day Wilson supported Lyons in a dual refutation of Winchell's unsubtle remark that Lyons had asked Wilson for a look-alike spotlight, because of his (Lyons') resemblance to Stevenson.

In the meantime Drew Pearson, on his Sunday ABC-TV newscast, which follows Winchell's TV-AM shows, "corrected" Winchell's statement that President Truman was once a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Winchell replies that he'll show a newspaper headline to that effect on his next Sunday's telecast. Also on the weekend futures is Barry Gray's promise to "do a job" on Winchell in his (Gray's) column in the Post, and which fact the WMCA (N.Y.) gabber has been trailerizing over his midnight mike.

houses in the keys, nabes and stix on a coast-to-coast hookup. Formerly, National Theatres had the major holdings in the chain, but this was switched to 20th-Fox following divorcement.

With building restrictions now removed here the greenlight is up for circuit operators to go ahead with theatre expansion. Skouras is expected to consult here with Turnbull and Harry Seipel, the 20th-Fox rep on Hoyts' board, regarding this. 20th-Fox also has major holdings in the Moodabe Amalgamated chain in New Zealand.

Opposition to Hoyts here is the powerful Greater Union Theatres, also operating coast-to-coast.

'Gotta Get Back Pic Habit'

Indiana crowded TV off the front pages of the newspapers and off radio to the point Hoosiers don't know the new programs have started on TV.

Theatre grosses in Indiana have remained good throughout September, and that is not true of the rest of the country. Production right now, in view of the success of Ohio and Indiana with the industry exhibit at the Fair, should be preparing a suitable picture exhibit to play all state fairs next year. These promotions give a lift to the morale of the people in our industry and show the public we are not dead on our derrière. Such an exhibit could be made self-supporting with a few gimmicks and it would be of incalculable value to the entire industry. You can't be successful in show business without enthusiasm; that's a rule of show business that is centuries old. The public won't buy a show business product unless its people have the old zip and go. Now it's mighty hard for an exhibitor to sustain any sort of enthusiasm for this business what with the destructive selling policies of distribution during the last year.

Selling the Picture

It's mighty hard, too, for the exhibitor, in view of the sales policies, to build up the habit of theatre-going in people due to these selling policies. Every time a good picture comes along the terms demanded are so punitive that the exhibitor either doesn't buy, or if he does buy he hasn't the heart to get out and sell it. In the last year distribution has worked the increased admission and restricted playoff gimmick to the hilt, and this gimmick angers the public and over the long pull drives them away from theatres. Today the exhibitor is forced, because of confiscatory terms, to pass good pictures available. An exhibitor cannot pass these pictures and still bang away at the public, week after week, with strong product as was the case in the past. Without being able to bang away at the public the habit of going to the show is not established.

Many exhibitors passed "Quo Vadis." Bill Rodgers and Charley Reagan of Metro said never again would they attempt to sell a picture as they sold "Quo Vadis." Yet less than six months later their "Ivanhoe" is being sold on the same basis. Distribution says we hate bidding, yet one company in a recent ad bragged about the bidding on a particular picture to establish prestige in the trade for the picture. Currently, Fox is trying the high-admission, extended-time gimmick with "Snows of Kilimanjaro," Warners with "Lady of Fatima"; Paramount recently with "Greatest Show" dictated all kinds of screwy playing time and high terms. These pictures ought to be played but how can an exhibitor play them and upset his precedents and lay himself open to confiscatory demands on all future releases? Selling policies being what they are, pictures of the type mentioned above will not play more than 50% of the theatres in the country, and yet without those pictures at regular admission scales how can an exhibitor build regular patronage? From what I have seen of distribution on the national and local level leads me to conclude that distribution is totally lacking in any sense of moral responsibility to itself and the industry.

Generally speaking, it is impossible to secure a clear-cut answer or commitment from anyone in distribution at the top or local level. Having received an answer or commitment, distribution generally feels no responsibility to keep its word. Distribution says we don't want lawsuits. Yet they, daily, in many parts of the country, continue practices that cannot lead to other than lawsuits. Distribution says "We want arbitration." Yet they want it watered down or so constructed that it is all in their favor. Distribution wants the "quick buck" and in insisting on the quick buck step over dollars and grasps pennies. Distribution selling policies on the local level are so atrocious that regular customers are being destroyed. Salesmen fail to call on exhibitor customers, either through indifference or through a desire to be vindictive and force the exhibitor to terms. Distributors are indifferent to the economic plight of many theatres, which eventually results in the closing of these theatres.

Recently I drove through Cheviot, a suburb of Cincinnati. I noticed that one of Cheviot's theatres had been converted into a store. That evening I talked to the exhibitor operating the other theatre and he told me that he was converting the other theatre to a store. I asked why? He told me he could not get relief from the film companies in spite of the fact that they were aware of a prolonged strike in one of Cheviot's large industries. The exhibitor said, "I am tired of losing $200 a week; I'm going to make $40 a month off my new rental and I'll be much better off." Here again illogical selling practices result in one more closing of a retail theatre outlet. How many times has this happened the country over? Many, many times, too many times. Here we have regular customers dying off for lack of consideration, yet the distributors go on their merry, merry penny-grabbing way, eating up the very sinews of the business. Wouldn't it be much smarter and profitable to keep these theatres in business by reducing film rentals? The closed theatres add up to an alarming amount of lost forever distributor revenue.

And Those Westerns

What about westerns? Well, television now has on Saturday afternoons anywhere from one to three shoot 'em ups, which they bought from the motion picture industry, plus a crime type of picture. So the kid's appetite for westerns is satiated, and westerns, which traditionally over the years pulled them in on Saturday matinees and nights, won't do it any more. The only answer to this one, and we have used it successfully in our own circuit, is to gimmick the kids into coming. Gimmick them into coming by running a giveaway over a five or six-week period. This gets the kids away from TV on Saturday and gets them into the habit of going again and they see the trailers on coming attractions and bring the adults back in later on in the week.

The popularity of Rex Allen among the kids during his recent "Movietime" tour of the state attests to strength of western stars, but Rex needs help on Saturday, and exhibition can help him and itself by gimmicks—giveaways.

Titles can be improved a great deal. However, until we get away from the bestseller book list as an important source of product we will continue to generally get bad titles and pictures that do poorly at the boxoffice. If production would move just a little farther away from the bestseller list, progress is being made, and look more to the public domain and popular magazine stories for material, pictures would be produced generally that would do better at the boxoffice. Universal has made this kind of a policy pay off. They do not seek the critics' acclaims, nor Academy awards; all they want is a nice fat profit at the end of the year. Look at their recent financial statements and you will see how well they have succeeded with their policy. The Universal production heads, and God bless them, know that 95% of the motion picture theatre's potential customers never read a bestseller, or the critics, or know the name of a bestseller or its author's name. If the rest of production would follow the Universal policy and give our patrons "what they want to see," grosses of pictures would increase generally.

However, there is one very bright picture for the industry on the horizon—that is the very good possibility that the admission tax will be repealed in 1953. If this happens many of our troubles will be solved. The tax can be eliminated if every state follows through on the plan as set up by Colonel Cole and Pat McGee, heads of the COMPO tax committee. Here in Indiana we followed the plan and have some 70% of all incumbent congressmen and Senators and candidates committed in writing to vote for repeal of the admission tax. Soon we will have 90-95% committed in writing. If the rest of the states do the job Indiana is doing on the tax fight, the tax will be eliminated and some $300,000,000 will be applied to the motion picture industry's economic wounds.

Lippert Readies Backlog Sale to Sidestep SAG's Restrictions Via TV Deals

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Robert L. Lippert is negotiating a deal to sell his entire backlog of 107 films to his partners and associates, for eventual sale to television. He's set a target date of Dec. 31 for the deal.

Ever since he got into a hassle with the Screen Actors Guild for selling pix to TV out of season, Lippert has been unable to produce any films. Understood he wants to return to production and figures that SAG can't hold him responsible if his pix are released to video by a third party.

Pizor Back From Europe

William M. Pizor, Lippert Pictures foreign chief who returned to New York last week after a three-month European trip, heads for the Coast around Nov. 10 for huddles with Robert L. Lippert. Latter has been disposing of most of his domestic exchanges but it's believed no changes are planned for the present in his overseas setup.

While abroad Pizor acquired the Italian-made film, "Queen of Sheba." Deal was made in association with indie producer Bernard Luber. Transaction gives the pair the world's English-speaking as well as a number of foreign territory rights. They're aiming for U. S. release early next year. No distribution arrangements have been set as yet.

of 35m pictures and therefore a 10-megacycle width is needed to provide a television picture that will approximately approach the 35m film.

The long-term success of theatre TV, Raibourn said, depends a good deal on being able to produce such quality. On the basis of Paramount studios, with its experimental TV stations and at showings at the Paramount Theatre, N. Y., Raibourn said that 725 lines and a 10-megacycle band width are needed. These standards, he declared, do not equal 35m quality, but "represent a suitable compromise of all the factors to allow competitive images on the motion picture screen."

Hostile Atmosphere

In a rather hostile atmosphere, the picture industry yesterday (Mon.) went before the Federal Communications Commission to plead its case for exclusive channels for theatre TV. Current hearings, expected to last two weeks, will be confined to engineering and cost phases. Further hearings, to begin Jan. 12, will be devoted to plans for programming for large-screen video and expansion of service.

In his opening statement before the commission, James L. Fly, cocounsel for the Motion Picture Assn. of America, said it is certain that theatre TV will be an "extensive" service. "Theatre television," he told the commissioners, "is here to stay and to expand in its service and in its public usefulness."

Large-screen video, said Fly, "is the next natural step by a still young industry that has gradually progressed from lantern slides, nickelodeons, silent pictures and sound pictures to full-color sound pictures and TV itself. This next step has the same inexorable quality as has the public exploitation of the benefits of advancing science in a score of industries."

Speaking for exhibitors, Marcus Cohn, counsel for National Exhibitor Theatre Television Circuit, emphasized that theatre TV does not propose to take away channels from home TV. "Ours is a new service," he asserted. It is no more nor less economically competitive with other broadcast services than are magazines, newspapers, the legitimate stage or the nightclubs."

Deny Winston (Chi) Plea For Jax Park Exclusion

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Plea of the Winston Theatre Corp., owner of the RKO Grand, to be excluded from the two-week Jackson Park decree limitations was denied last week in Chi Federal Court. Winston petition was based upon the contention that the JP decision was against film producers and distribs, not pic circuits.

Balaban & Katz chain comes before appeals court in two weeks, also seeking exemption from the two-week limitations, reportedly basing its case upon "economic necessity" and "hardship."

Bootleg Showings Haunt Reissues of German Pix

Problem of bootleg showings of "The Last Laugh" and "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" is haunting the distrib of the two German silents even before their general release.

Films have been acquired by Samuel Cummins and Nat Sanders from the Alien Property Custodian and are turning in a hefty gross at New York's Baronet, 430-seat artie run by the Walter Reade circuit. Trouble is that a number of old prints of the pix are still making the rounds. Cummings and Sanders, currently angling for a major distributor, have warned museums, universities and colleges against booking booleg prints. Duo is currently prepping injunction papers against a local distributor.

Alien Property Custodian's office gets a 50% cut of the distrib revenues, according to Cummins. Negatives of the old UFA productions were brought in from Germany by Cummins and Sanders, who say they spent $10,000 preparing them and adding a new music track. "Last Laugh," starring Emil Jannings, has no titles, since it came at a time when German producers were switching to sound.

MPAA toppers obviously are opposed to roadblocks against the free flow of American product in any foreign territory. But they are disinclined to fight these with high-tariff or limited-screen-time measures against foreign pix in the U. S., for such action could also seriously injure the film industries in the countries involved. This would run counter to the MPAA doctrine of open competition on a world-wide basis with no paralyzing restrictions on films from any country.

his client was prepared to go to the high tribunal if he receives an unfavorable verdict in the top Ohio court. He stated that if the censor board again refused to license "Son," an appeal would be entered immediately.

As a result of the Toledo decision declaring the snipping of newsreels as unconstitutional, Bob Wile, exec secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has sent a bulletin to Toledo members telling them not to show the censor board's "leader" with newsreels. Although theatres will begin exhibiting reels without the censor seal, news programs will still get the o.o. from the state board, since newsreels are also destined for other cities in the state. Except for Toledo it's still illegal in Ohio to show newsreels or other films without the okay of the censor body or without displaying the outfit's seal.

Filmites have described the moves of the Ohio legal officials as "cagey" and declared that all sorts of technicalities are being introduced in order to avoid a statewide verdict. MPAA, foiled in its attempt to get an appeal at Toledo, had hoped that the State Supreme Court would make mention of the Toledo verdict in the hearing on the "Son" case. With latter delayed because of the technical move, it was forced to resort to other approaches. London, meanwhile, is revising his brief to include the Toledo ruling.

Order 5 Deletions Restored

Baltimore, Oct. 21.

Five deletions which the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors decreed in the film, "Damaged Lives," were ordered restored by Judge S. Ralph Warnken after a hearing in Baltimore City Court. In reversing the board, the jurist held that the objectionable sequences were not obscene, indecent, inhuman or immoral.

Hearing grew out of an appeal by John Rose, of Rose Road Shows, from the board's decision that six deletions must be made in "Lives." Five of the cuts, Rose said, were of "major importance to the picture in its message and continuity."

Coliseum Preview—

Barbara's Show Goes Over Big

By HENRY BUTLER

Arthur Wirtz' 1953 Hollywood Ice Revue undoubtedly is the best of all the ice shows currently playing Indianapolis.

In a Coliseum preview last night for RCA personnel and press and radio minions, the "show with the stars," as the program delicately puts it, went over big.

Even more effectively than in last year's edition, the three major personalities, Barbara Ann Scott, Carol Lynne and Andra McLaughlin, have divided the show in a way best suited to their individual talents.

They're a wonderful trio, and they have a wonderful supporting cast. With Dorothie Littlefield's expert choreography and staging and Grace Houston's imaginative costuming, the show is exceptionally smart.

AN INDEX of the show's quality is the ingenious "Zodiac" number that opens proceedings. It's intelligent, nicely contrived fantasy that looks like a million on the ice.

Michael Kirby, Miss Scott's partner, and George Wagner do some fine precision stuff in "Silhouette," followed by Carol and Hans Kuster, Swiss team champions, in an exciting routine.

As in last year's edition, Miss Scott, Miss McLaughlin and Miss Lynne each are given important spots in big production numbers. As the center of an elaborate "Vie Parisienne" sequence, Miss Scott last night won the customary big applause for her superb and apparently effortless skating. For so doll-like and fragile-looking a creature, she has immense reserves of energy and technique.

MISS McLAUGHLIN, in the course of "Sweet, Young and Torrid" managed some hula excerpts which last night were plainly done by way of parodying Sonja Henie. The spectators understood and gave laughter as well as applause.

Miss Lynn, who often impresses me as the most gifted of the three, has a beautifully executed "Autumn Leaves" number with that paragon of male skaters, Skippy Baxter.

Besides the big numbers (one of the most effective is "Rhapsody), there are comedy deals by the incomparable Freddie Trenkler and the also incomparable, but often imitated Bruises: Sid Spalding, Geoffe Stevens and Monty Stott.

UP TO HIS old tricks, Mr. Trenkler last night nearly scared the pants off a photog who was snapping pictures at the end of the rink. Freddie did usual crash stop two inches from barrier. Photog dashed off in a panic, bringing down the house.

Everything in the show is top quality. There's no padding, no desperate imitating, no stalling for time. Ensemble numbers, involving some quite terrific maneuvering by the chorus, invariably are good.

And despite the difficulties of the big moments I saw only one spill last night.

This show, which opens to the public tonight and will play through Oct. 26, offers a lot of wonderful skating for the price of admission.

Hollywood Revue Big And Beautiful

THE HOLLYWOOD Ice Revue of 1953 spread another big and bountiful entertainment before a capacity audience in the Coliseum last night. It was a special performance for RCA employes and guests. The formal premiere of the lavish rink extravaganza will be held tonight at 8;30.

Like the 1952 edition, it's a show case for skating talent, featuring the grace, charm and sheer agility of such young stars as Barbara Ann Scott, Carole Lynne, Andra McLaughlin, Michael Kirby and Skippy Baxter. It also has, for spectacle, the usual large ensemble of lively boys and girls clad in gay and colorful raiment.

The evening's costumes were valued at $260,000 by associate producer William H. Burke, who ought to know.

ASIDE from eye-filling beauty, it has a full charge of high-powered comedy that set last night's audience roaring at times. The inimitable Freddy Trenkler and Three Bruises are in charge of this department. In addition to familiar antics the customers always love, Trenkler introduces a screwy basketball routine.

The revue offers just as much as ever to audiences who find a full evening's pleasure and excitement in Wirtz's winter wonderland. It's pure ice, all of a piece. The first performance was appreciably smooth despite the customary opening night hazard. The start was delayed 10 minutes, for instance, because the frilly garment Miss Scott wears in the French number didn't arrive until after 8 o'clock.

The big production scenes are the saucy "La Vie Parisienne," in which Miss Scott performs her Olympic figures with delicate ease; "Autumn Leaves," in which Carole Lynne and Skippy Baxter combine in perilous feats; "Fairy Doll Ballet," the first act finale in which several expert members of the ensemble share the spotlight with Miss Scott and Kirby; "Rhapsody," a medley of gypsy airs in which Miss McLaughlin displays her pep and ginger; "The Tango," a brilliant new dance in which Miss Scott and Kirby again lead the ensemble; and "Rainbow's End," the grand finale, in which the entire company makes a last appearance.

THERE also are dazzling specialties by Miss Lynne and Baxter; "shadow routine done neatly by Kirby and George Wagner; a fine exhibition of pair skating which introduces the Swiss champions, Carol and Hans Kuster; and a variety of popular dances in which Miss McLaughlin lives up to her billing, "Sweet, Young and Torrid."

The ensemble has a chance to romp by itself in "Zodiac," which opens the show, and "Post Haste," which comes near the end.

Not the least of the Hollywood Ice Revue's attractions is a first-class musical score, played as it should be by the orchestra under Paul Van Loan. It will remain at the Coliseum through Oct. 26 for performances every night except next Monday.

THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

Barbara Ann and Co. Specialize in Skating

By WALTER WHITWORTH

Barbara Ann Scott and the latest Hollywood Ice Revue came to the Coliseum last night to remain through Sunday, October 26. With the star are Freddy Trenkler, Carol Lynne, Andra McLaughlin, The Bruises, Skippy Baxter, Michael Kirby and Carol and Hans Kuster.

They are a phenomenal group because they can skate with wonderful grace—this is true of the chorus, too—and because some of them are possessed of comic genius. The entertainment gives the onlooker a "lift."

We thought last year's revue was fine, but this year's show is better. To start with the cart rather than with the horse: The costumes are not only light and cheerful in their colorings, but they are in good taste.

There is imagination in the choreography, too, the kind of imagination that knows how to explore the almost limitless possibilities of skating.

This interweaving of grace, humor, color and taste makes a land-of momentary enchantment.

To be sure, the skill of producer and choreographer would be of little avail, were there not young folk of high gifts to carry out the ideas, and give them point and meaning.

Miss Scott, who looks as elfin as ever, has gained poise and assurance in the last year, and, when she performed the tango with Michael Kirby, she was the personification of lovely motion.

Miss Lynne has the infinite grace of a great ballet dancer (we suspect she once was a ballerina), revealed in the motions of her arms and hands and in the tilt of her head. On skates, she can carry to easy completion that sense of freedom the more earth-bound ballerina seeks.

Miss McLaughlin is spirited and agile and obviously mistress of a difficult technic. She is like a cheering breeze.

Trenkler and The Bruises have the comic genius already mentioned. There was, too, one sly bit by Kirby and George Wagner with a different, unexpected humor.

We still are wondering how Skippy Baxter keeps from breaking his ankles! And we envy the Kusters the smooth flow of their gliding.

If this sounds like a "rave" notice—well, it is meant to be. The general level of the revue is unusually high. The skating—if it is skating you want—is superb.

not deviate for the 17 years that my contract calls for.

"But I have more than a financial attachment to the interests of the 20th Century-Fox company. I have devoted the major part of my career and abilities to its service. The success of the company has been my life's work and will so continue.

"There is no basis for any rumors of my leaving the company or of making pictures independently. Moreover, I have no idea of what such rumors are based on, as I have never been contacted by anyone seeking to verify them."

Regarding Zanuck's option to change his status, Skouras, in addressing Zanuck, says:

"Further, with respect to the part-time period of your employment, you have discussed with us and we have agreed to the following provisions, which shall be effectible in case you elect to commence the part-time period of your employment:

"At any time while Mr. Zanuck is employed during the part-time period of his employment contract as amended, the corporation and Mr. Zanuck shall have the following options respectively:

"Mr. Zanuck shall have the right at any time to engage in the business of independent production of motion pictures but not to exceed two such pictures in any calendar year, provided, however,

"(A) In case Mr. Zanuck so elects to engage in the independent production of motion pictures, he will first indicate to the corporation the terms and conditions of such productions, as well as the distribution of such motion picture or motion pictures, and the corporation shall have the right for a period of 30 days thereafter to modify, accept or reject, in whole or part, the terms and conditions of such proposal relating to the production and distribution of such picture or pictures, and

"(B) Mr. Zanuck shall thereupon be free to negotiate the terms and conditions for such production and distribution with anyone other than this corporation, and if he has a bona fide proposal or a bona fide acceptance of his own proposal, then before an agreement shall be entered into he shall again submit to this corporation the details of such proposal and the corporation shall have a period of 30 days in which to accept or reject such proposal.

"(C) In the event that the corporation rejects such proposal (B) Mr. Zanuck will be free to engage in such independent production provided, however, that he shall forthwith terminate his part-time employment with this corporation and this corporation shall thereupon be relieved of any obligations thereafter arising under and pursuant to the contract of employment with Mr. Zanuck, including compensation and death benefit payments.

"Also we have discussed with you a plan of salary reductions against a participation in profits by our executives. It is agreed that you will, during the full time period of your employment and while such plan is in force for our other executives, participate in such plan. It is understood that this agreement concerning salary reductions applies only to the full time period of your employment, and does not apply to the part-time period of your employment."

Zanuck's contract, dated Sept. 28, 1949, as amended, calls for full-time employment for 10 years. He has the option to extend or reduce this period.

Cinerama

new process additionally will be lensed simultaneously in orthodox fashion for conventional screens.

While the company's story pool is undisclosed, it's believed that perhaps at least one of the firm's future film output may come from Mayer's own script properties. He holds rights to "Joseph and His Brethren," "Blossom Time" and "Paint Your Wagon."

Past few weeks have seen Cinerama common stock stage a rise "over-the-counter" which some brokers describe as "phenomenal." On Oct. 8 it was quoted at 4⅜ bid and 5 asked. Yesterday (Tues.) the price had climbed to 8¼ bid and 9 asked. Stock was originally marketed publicly in January, 1951, when 100,000 shares were sold at $2 par. As of July 31, 1952, some 1,798,894 shares were issued. However, 3,500,000 have been authorized.

Other capitalization includes 1,000,000 of 5% convertible debentures due in 1957. An unaudited balance sheet as of July 31, 1952, puts current assets at $578,696 of which $553,031 was in cash as compared to the then-current liabilities of $51,922. Total assets of the same date amounted to $1,462,804. As fixed assets the company carried four wholly owned sets of projection equipment and sound apparatus ready for installation in four theatres.

Although impressed by Cinerama's future, such Wall St. houses as E. M. North Co., Inc., stress that the company's capital stock is a "speculation." This broker cautions in a memorandum that "in common with most businesses in emerging from the stage of invention and development into the realm of commercial application, Cinerama has no earnings record for the guidance of the investor; in fact, the corporation has no net income to date."

Among other Wall St. firms distributing brochures on Cinerama are Greene & Co., S. B. Cantor Co. and Gearhart & Otis, Inc. Their special reports for investors' guidance cite reviews of "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway, note that the company is in "good financial position," and express general enthusiasm.

Reisman

sales drive on the heels of the cancellation of a so-called "Elias Lapinere sales drive" when the latter, chief sales aide to Continental chief Joe Bellfort, resigned. Reisman had been assured by Depinet that his end would not be disturbed, and he regarded Stolkin's cable, the first of its kind he ever got, as natural in light of the new management. Only while abroad, by cable and radiogram from Hollywood to key RKO men in London and Paris and other capitals, and thence back to Reisman aboard the Liberte, did he learn what was happening.

Also, in the same manner, he learned that Arnold Picker, new worldwide general sales manager, now on a foreign junket on United Artists business ("Limelight" premiere in London, etc.) had written RKO-ites in Europe that he would "drop in" on them preparatory to his (Picker's) taking over all sales, domestic and foreign, for RKO in November.

Robert Hawkinson, aide to Reisman, likewise was upped to administrative assistant to Crown.

When Reisman started in charge of RKO foreign, the company had only England, Australia and Central America branches; the rest were agencies or foreign distribution leases. Reisman built up RKO's present worldwide organization.

Kennedy Industries embraces virtually every aspect of investment, realty, manufacturing, private capital and the like. While Reisman had several bids, Kennedy, who had long since wanted Reisman with him, phoned him to "take no job with anybody else."

It is not unlikely that Kennedy-Reisman will be back in the picture business, via the TV aspect, but for the moment Reisman has been instructed to "take a good holiday" and then start organizing things in the Kennedy hqtrs., in N.Y.

FILMITES-FORD DEALERS STRESS COMMON BOND

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Film and auto industries joined at a precedent-making conclave here yesterday (Mon.) when 1,500 Lincoln-Mercury dealers and salesmen met at the Warner Bros. studio for a sales session. With Jack L. Warner and Benson Ford as hosts, the joint film-auto venture featured entertainment as well as business.

With Ronald Reagan m.c.ing, a variety show was presented featuring such personalities as Kathryn Grayson, Gordon MacRae, Virginia Mayo, Sy Melano, Dick Wesson, Paul Picerni and The Adorables. Another show, presented on a different sound stage, featured a display of Lincoln and Mercury cars and accessories.

In welcoming the Lincoln-Mercury guests at lunch, Warner stressed the common bond between the film and auto industries. Earlier in the day, Benson Ford addressed the Lincoln - Mercury reps at a sales meeting.

In addition to the players who entertained, another group of film personalities was on hand to greet the guests. A tour of the Warner studio for the reps and their wives concluded the event.

Schuyler, N.Y., Takeover

Harry Harris, operator of a chain of Spanish-language houses, last week took over the Schuyler Theatre in uptown Manhattan on a long-term lease.

Harris' takeover of the Schuyler from Schuyler Theatre, Inc., represents an aggregate rental of $350,000.

Binford

(United Artists) the right to show a film for private audiences simply because he, Binford, frowns on the producer personally. Thought is that if UA decides to fight the issue in court, Binford's only defense could be his personal feeling and "that's not much of a legal position," said one lawyer.

Binford has riled the trade for years with his barring of pix on various grounds, particularly from the racial angle.

UA hasn't mapped any course for "Limelight" in Memphis for the reason that the distrib still hasn't any plan to show the pic in that city. Intention is to release the Chaplin production in the major key cities initially, the Binford matter to be dealt with only when it's time to play Memphis.

Distrib encountered difficulty with Binford some time ago on Hal Roach's "Curly." Censor nixed it because it depicted a Negro child at play with white youngsters. Suit was instituted but an ultimate decision was never reached because of legal technicalities involving UA as a Tennessee state corporation.

that IFE would rely in part on U.S. exhibs in seeking 4% share of the American boxoffice dollar, and that it would handle dubbed and subtitled pix as well as 25 to 30 others for the Italian-American market.

Italian visitors here 29 strong for the "Salute to Italian Films Week" Oct. 6 to 14, split into two contingents over the weekend, with one going to the Coast and the other flying back to Rome.

Former group included Comm. Nicola De Pirro, delegation head and director of the Italian government's entertainment industry bureau; Dr. Eitel Monaco, president of the Italian producers association; Comm. Italo Gemini, prexy of the Italian General Assn. of Show Business; banker Giuseppe La Guardia, and Renzo Rufini, IFE secretary-general.

Coast-bound also were actress Silvana Mangano and her husband, producer Dino De Laurentiis. They are guests of Paramount Pictures, while the rest of the delegation is hosted by Arthur Loew, prexy of Loew's International. Miss Mangano and her husband will discuss Italo-American co-production plans.

Now back in Rome are Dr. Gaulino, directors Lucianao Emmer and Renato Castellani; Eleonora Rossi-Drago, Marina Berti, Alberto Lattuada, Luigi Zampa, Sandro Pallavicini, Roberto Dandi, Fortunato Misiano and Antonio Mosco.

KANSAS CITY

Happy $11,000; may hold. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par), fair $6,000.

Tower, Uptown, Fairway, Granada (Fox Midwest) (2,100; 2,043; 700; 1,217; 50-75)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Loan Shark" (Lip). Fair $11,000. Last week, "We're Not Married" (20th) plus "Arctic Flight" (Mono) at Tower and Granada, sturdy $15,000.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 50-85)—"Passport To Pimlico" (Indie) and "Sleeping Car To Trieste" (Indie). Fairish $1,500. Last week, "Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue) (2d wk), steady $1,400.

'Ali Baba' Hot 7G, Pitt; 'Quiet' Loud $9,500, 3d

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

Only two new pix downtown, "Springfield Rifle" at Stanley and "Son of Ali Baba" at Harris, and the holdovers are still providing the big noise here this round. "Quiet Man" at Fulton is almost as strong in third week as it was on the opener. "Ivanhoe" will finish four-week stay at Penn very strong, and "One Minute to Zero" is banging out a satisfactory second round at the Warner. "Ali Baba" shapes trim at the Penn but "Rifle" is not shaping up to hopes.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 50-85) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) (3d wk). Running only slightly behind first two weeks and should easily better $9,500, sensational here at this stage of a run. Last week, $11,000, or slightly better than opening session. Few can recall when this ever happened before.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 50-85) — "Son of Ali Baba" (U). Neat $7,000. Last week, "Way of a Gaucho" (20th), $6,000.

Penn (Loew's) (3,300; 85-$1.25) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk). Winding up profitable stay here at probable $12,500. Last week, big $16,000.

Squirrel Hill (WB) (900; 50-85)—"Cry Beloved Country" (UA). Fine notices should help this to nice $2,000. Last week, "Stranger In Between" (U) (2d wk), same.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 50-85) — "Springfield Rifle" (WB). Gary Cooper starrer did all right in the newspapers but shapes very disappointing at mild $10,000. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par), drab $7,500.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 50-85) — "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) (2d wk). Fine $6,000. Last week, blazing $9,500.

DETROIT

Slow $18,000. Last week, "Assignment Paris" (Col) and "Rainbow Round Shoulder" (Col) (2d wk), $12,000.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 70-95) — "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Arctic Flight" (Mono). Slim $14,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Cripple Creek" (Col) (2d wk), $12,000.

Palms (UD) (2,961; 70-95)—"Son of Ali Baba" (U) and "Lost in Arctic" (U). Fair $10,000. Last week, "One Minute to Zero" (RKO) and "Feudin' Fools" (Mono) (2d wk), $10,000.

Madison (UD) (1,900; 70-95)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk). Big $10,000. Last week, $13,500.

United Artists (UA) (1,900; 70-95)— "Quiet Man" (Rep) (4th wk). Good $7,000. Last week, $9,300.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 95-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Great $20,000. Last week, $25,000.

'MONKEY' OK $11,000, MPLS.; 'AT FRONT' 7G

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

Despite big weekend football crowds with thousands of out-of-towners and wintry weather, grosses continue subnormal here currently. Tops among the few newcomers is "Monkey Business," just good at Radio City. "Back at Front" is rated fair despite good word-of-mouth. "Hellgate" shapes okay. Long list of holdovers comprises "The Quiet Man," in its fifth week, and the highstepping "Ivanhoe" and "The Crimson Pirate" in their second ones.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Par) (1,600; 76-$1)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Behind "Quo Vadis" at this house but a real boff at $15,000. Last week, $18,000.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 50-76)—"Hellgate" (Lip). Okay $4,000. Last week, "Man Man and I" (M-G), $2,800.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 50-76)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (5th wk). Last week had been announced as last, but customer rush warranted retention another stanza. Satisfactory $3,500. Last week, $4,000.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-76)—"Monkey Business" (20th). Just barely good at $11,000. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), $9,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 40-76)—"Back at Front" (U). Winning approval and trading on popularity of previous Maudlin GI Willie and Joe characters, but not making real boxoffice progress. Mild $7,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB), $10,000.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 40-76)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) (m.o.). Good $5,000. Last week, "Watusi" (Indie) and "Cajun" (Indie) (reissues), $4,000.

State (Par) (1,600; 40-76)—"Hurricane Smith" (Par). Modest $5,000. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th), $4,000.

World (Mann) (400; 85-$1.20)—"Young and Damned" (Indie) (2d run). Fancy $3,500. Last week, "Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue), $2,500.

'Thief' Bangup $12,000, Toronto; 'Front' Fat 11G

Toronto, Oct. 21.

"Ivanhoe" in third frame, is still way ahead here, with "Quiet Man," in fifth stanza, also in the big bracket. Of the newcomers, "The Thief" and "Back At Front" are lusty toppers. "Just for You" in second frame, also is solid.

Estimates for This Week

Crest, Downtown, Glendale, Mayfair, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (863; 1,059, 955; 470; 698; 694; 35-60) — "Rainbow Round Shoulder" (Col) and "Feudin Fools" (Mono). Big $17,500. Last week, "Young Man With Ideas" (M-G) and "High Sierra" (WB) (reissue), $14,000.

Eglinton (FP) (1,080; 40-80) — "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Oke $5,500. Last week, $7,500.

Imperial (FP) (3,373; 50-80)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (5th wk). Lusty $15,000. Last week, $18,000.

Loew's (Loew) (2,096; 75-$1.20) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Terrific $24,000. Last week, $29,000.

Odeon (Rank) (2,390; 50-90) — "The Thief" (UA). Big $12,000. Last week, "Way of Gaucho" (20th), $10,000.

Shea's (FP) (2,396; 40-80) — "Just for You" (Par) (2d wk). Strong $13,000. Last week, $16,000.

University (FP) (1,558; 40-80) — "Will Rogers" (WB) (2d wk). Nice at $7,500. Last week, $11,000.

Uptown (Loew) (2,743; 40-80)—"Back At Front" (U). Stout $11,000. Last week, "Yankee Buccaneer" (U), $9,000.

SAN FRANCISCO

kee Buccaneer" (U) and "Pool of London" (U), $9,000.

United Artists (No. Coast) (1,207; 65-95)—"The Thief" (UA). Fast $12,000 or near. Last week, "The Ring" (UA), $7,500.

Stagedoor (A-R) (370; 85-$1)—"Actors And Sin" (UA) and "Golden Salamander" (UA). Fair $2,500. Last week, "Marriage of Figaro" (Indie) and "Eroica" (Indie) (reissues), $2,800.

Clay (Rosener) (400; 65-85) — "Man In White Suit" (U) and "Ivory Hunter" (U). Good $3,200. Last week, "High Treason" (Indie) (5th wk), $1,900.

Vogue (S. F. Theatres) (377; 85-$1)— "Cry Beloved Country" (UA). Strong $3,500. Last week, "Young And Damned" (2d wk), $1,300.

'Affair' Torrid $25,000, Mont'l; 'In Arms' 15G, 2d

Montreal, Oct. 21.

Big news here this week is great session being racked up by "Affair in Trinidad" at Capitol. "Ivanhoe" continues great in second Loew's stanza. "World in Arms" also is fine on first holdover week at Palace.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (C.T.) (2,626; 34-60)—"World in His Arms" (U) (2d wk). Fine $15,000 following great first round at $19,000.

Capitol (C.T.) (2,412; 34-60)—"Affair in Trinidad" (Col). Smash $25,000. Last week, "Working Way Through College" (WB) (2d wk), $14,000.

Princess (C.T.) (2,131; 34-60)—"One Minute to Zero" (RKO) (2d wk). Good $12,000 after rousing first of $17,000.

Loew's (C.T.) (2,855; 75-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Still terrific at $40,000 after $47,000 for first round.

Imperial (C.T.) (1,839; 34-60)—"Loan Shark" (Lip) and "G.I. Jane" (Lip). Fine $9,000. Last week, "Diplomatic Courier" (20th) and "Lady With Iron Mask" (20th), $8,000.

Orpheum (C.T.) (1,048; 34-60)—"Black Swan" (20th) and "My Friend Flicka" (20th) (reissues). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Bonzo To College" (U) and "Small Back Room" (U), same.

'You're Mine' Solid 12G, Indpls.; 'House' Fair 9G

Indianapolis, Oct. 21.

Biz is moderate at first-runs here this week, partly because of exodus to country over the weekend. "Because You're Mine," at Loew's, is boxoffice standout and solid. "Big Sky" at Indiana and "Full House" at Circle are fair.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,300; 50-76)—"Full House" (20th) and "My Wife's Best Friend" (20th). Modest $9,000. Last week, "Lost In Alaska" (U) and "Because of Sally" (U), so-so $8,500.

Indiana (C-D) (3,200; 50-76)—"Big Sky" (RKO) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep). Mild $10,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep), sock $13,000.

Keith's (C-D) (1,300; 50-$1.00)—"Miracle of Fatima" (2d wk). Tepid $4,000 after fine $7,500 first stanza.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,427; 50-76)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Solid $12,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk), nice $8,000 at $1.10 top.

Lyric (C-D) (1,600; 50-76)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (m.o.). Dandy $6,000. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Breakdown" (20th) (m.o.), fair $4,800.

Minn. Sept. Taxes Up

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

Minnesota Federal tax collections for September reflect a healthy improvement in the amusement business over the corresponding month a year ago. Amusement admission tax collections, derived almost entirely from film theatres, were $707,000 last month, as compared to $678,000 for September, 1951.

Nightclubs also are having better going, totaling $79,000 for this year as against $65,000 last.

Due to a decline of nearly $8,000,000 in corporation income taxes, however, the aggregate of all Federal tax collections for the state dipped near $6,000,000 from September a year ago.

Pascal's 'Winkle'

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Washington Irving's "Rip Van Winkle," screenplayed by Gene Fowler, will be produced independently by Gabriel Pascal, with Edward H. Griffith directing.

Pascal is reported negotiating with RKO for a release deal. He recently produced "Androcles and the Lion" for that company.

Nebenzal Excused

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Because of a serious heart condition Seymour Nebenzal was excused from appearing in Superior Court in connection with a $39,700 judgment against him by the estate of the late Maria Montez.

Attorney for the estate declared he would appeal the excuse ruling. The judgment covers unpaid salary.

Grant Quiets Fears

there was no connection between the meet and the Journal's published roundups, ad-pub director Richard Condon explained. He identified the huddle as the first in a weekly series designed to introduce the new RKO officials.

RKO will avail itself of the $8,000,000 credit set up by Howard Hughes but only "in such a time and in such a manner as the company has maximum use for it," Grant declared. But he turned a deaf ear to questions on details of the loan agreement with Hughes and RKO's present $5,000,000 indebtedness to Bankers Trust Co., N. Y., and the Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh.

New Product

Grant has it figured that it will be nine months to a year "before we can get new product flowing into the market." For this reason, he said, the new management has been concentrating on reorganization of the distribution end of the business so that product completed or nearly finished can be properly liquidated. Deals to take on outside product will be considered as they crop up but there are no specific plans in that direction at the present, states Grant.

Immediate job at the studio is to appoint an exec producer, "and whether that takes 24 hours or 35 days we don't know," the board head declared. When the man for the job is found, he adds, "we'll then build around him."

Grant nixed queries on apparent board resignations but opined it's sound business to have qualified members of management on a directorate.

Grant was to have gone to the Coast this week to assist in setting a production head but, in light of the recent Journal spotlight on the new management board, this is being deferred a week or so. It is expected that by then matters will be clarified. It is deemed politic that board member changes will occur. Abraham L. Koolish, father-in-law of Ralph Stolkin, new RKO president, may exit the board. Likewise Stolkin.

Latter situation is complicated by the fact that, under Delaware corporation statutes, a company president must also be a board member. However it is resolved, Grant is putting the accent that he is running the company for benefit of 15,000 stockholders and 5,500 employees, and not for any special group.

There may be extraordinary board meetings, as a result, when and if the situation "comes to a boil." Yesterday's board meeting, which followed the news conference, was routine, to clean up two weeks' accumulated business, namely severance deals for people like ex-RKO foreign veep Phil Reisman.

Grant, who went to Greenbrier, in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., over the past weekend for a physical checkup (and a huddle with new foreign sales manager Alfred Crown), states this, too, was prebooked.

Grant has previously stated that his job is to do his best to protect his company, that he "runs the operations, but not the company"; that the board runs the company. Realistically, he has not been interfered with.

However, the Journal spotlight on the new owners' backgrounds presents a new problem on one level, before the company can tackle another problem 3,000 miles away—referring to the Coast studio setup.

Grant refuses to deny or affirm having approached Stanley Kramer as production chief and having been turned down.

Grant is sanguine on the RKO economies. "You don't make money by cutting; you make it from new income, getting better terms for your product and selling more pictures to more new customers. Our immediate problem is more new pictures for theatres," he stresses.

But until these improved returns occur, he points to a $250,000 payroll economy and a possible worldwide $1,000,000 annual payroll saving. Some of these economies will not show up because of the large severance payments to exiting former personnel.

He cites a "high-finish lithographing job" from the studios, which represented a $500,000 item. Grant mentions duplication of manpower and duties, and in the case of the story and talent departments in New York, "sheer waste and duplication, even frustration, because they were reading books and scouting talent and not knowing where and to whom to send it at the RKO studio."

Cole Wants

the COMPO committee for repeal of the Federal 20% admission tax.

Cole has stated that he was making the recommendation because he feels that Allied toppers, busy with other industry activities, have neglected the interest of indie exhibs, with the result that "other elements in our industry have taken advantage of our preoccupation, and through one means or another are shortsightedly doing the industry a great disservice."

Specifically, Cole charges distribs with unfair trade practices in competitive bidding, sales terms, advanced admission prices, clearances and circumvention of some Federal consent decree injunctions.

"In view of all this," he declared, "I have the following recommendations: That Allied free its personnel from their obligations to do these outside jobs. That Allied recommend to those of its members who have unselfishly taken these various jobs and obligations that they withdraw from them and resign from such positions. This recommendation is made with the greatest reluctance because those jobs have not been completed and, while others probably can and will take over, the causes themselves will inevitably suffer. However, we can see no other conclusion."

Cole stated that he does not advocate the withdrawal of all Allied members from the tax fight. He said there was no implication in his suggestion that individual Allied exhibs should stop their campaign to line up Congressmen to support the tax repeal fight.

According to Myers, Cole's proposal has already been placed on the agenda for the Allied board meeting in Chi next month.

RKO Cancels

comes the first major company to have a femme in this key spot, formerly held by Don Prince. Miss Norton is a former indie publicist.

S. Barret McCormick's resignation as ad head was announced Monday (20) and Terry Turner's bowout as director of exploitation was indicated yesterday (see separate story).

Ruth Cosgrove, formerly associated with Eagle Lion Classics and United Artists publicity departments, has joined RKO as radio-TV and music contact. Maury Segal, tradepress contact at Paramount, has resigned to take a similar post at RKO. Also joining the trek to that outfit is Fred Goldberg. Latter had been with Samuel Goldwyn only one week and previously was Par's contact with metropolitan dailies.

Pink-slipped last Friday (17) were George Held, assistant publicity director, and Fred Norman, radio-TV and music contact.

I MARRIED JOAN
With Joan Davis, Jim Backus, Hal March, Shirley Mitchell, Hope Emerson, Charlie Smith; music, Robert Wagner Chorale
Producer: Dick Mack
Director: Philip Rapp
Writers: Arthur Stander, Phil Sharp
30 Mins.; Wed., 8 p.m.
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.
NBC-TV, from H'wood
(Young & Rubicam)

Joan Davis' first film after a career in vaude was "Way Up Thar." That was in 1934. Since then she's carved out a top niche for herself on both the celluloid and radio shelves. In 1952, the free-wheeling comedienne continues to be "way up thar," in the newest of the entertainment forms.

Miss Davis mates herself easily to the medium, moves in gracefully as if nothing has changed. The plain fact is that very little has, considering that her video baptism is on film. She is no less the fine mugger and cut-up who wastes little motion getting down to brash tacks. She retains her sensitive ear and eye for the ridiculous and is a tongue-in-cheeker of unusual deftness.

This femme clown's electronic debut is helped along via the script by Arthur Stancer and Phil Sharp which is given swift, fluid pacing by director Philip Rapp. They and producer Dick Mack (credited for the first four shows, with P. J. Wolfson overseeing the subsequents) have set her up as the wife of a judge of the Court of Domestic Relations, playing his professional wisdom against her marital shenanigans in one of the "cleanest" of current situationers.

Her jurist hubby, Jim Backus, falls neatly into his spouse's bag of tricks with a gentle sort of tolerance for her antics. His support of the star is extra-special, and so too is the work of Hal March and Hope Emerson.

The bow-in, partly in flashback, has Backus in his chambers advising an ever-bickering couple. This serves as a solid hook for the judge's narrative on how he met his wife—on a plane wherein Miss Davis, in her first day as a hostess, virtually breaks up the joint, especially and including him. And so they were married.

At home, the bride cavorts madly in a long skein of laugh-rigged situations. There's a hilarious bedroom skit and delightful session with an Amazonian neighbor who comes into the house plucking a chicken which she brandishes throughout the scene. The main involvement is Miss Davis' purchase of a Persian lamb coat which she tries to secrete from her husband through devious means that, while familiar, never fail at the fun-making objective. For the snapper, the garment comes out shrunken and iced, having been stowed in the freezer.

Matching the class of the show are General Electric's filmed commercials for its vacuum cleaner, nicely encased in a domestic setting. Whether Miss Davis should solo the end plug is something else again. Trau.

CHEVRON THEATRE
(An Affair at the Embassy)
With Leon Askin, George Nader, Carolyn Jones, Guy De Vestel
Produced by Revue Productions
Director: Robert Finkel
Writer: Arnold Phillips
30 Mins.; Fri., 9 p.m.
CHEVRON STATIONS
KTLA, Hollywood
(BBD&O)

An old friend comes to call on television, the eternal triangle, long a theatric standby and writer's prop when other formulae elude the muse. Here it is done with all the pat situations but the gals will cotton to it and heave a big sigh at the finish when the cheating dame gets her just due—a slug that finds its fatal mark.

Like it happens with Rosie O'Grady, so it can happen with the colonel's lady, only here an embassy counsellor is the object of his young wife's perfidy. A young lawyer is the romantic heavy and just when it looks like a clear field ahead, the unfaithful wife stubs her pretty toe. Pretending to pass the night at the theatre, she holes up in the barrister's apartment and once back home tells her husband of an enjoyable evening at the theatre. What she didn't know was that at that performance President Lincoln was shot. She demands a settlement and divorce and he accommodates her with deadly aim.

Leon Askin and George Nader give dramatic impact to their rivalry and build good suspense. Carolyn Jones seemed too cold and emotionally insensitive to give the character the proper shading. Filming was conventional and Robert Finkel's direction competent. Chevron Stations made a good case for Atlas tires and courtesy at the pumps. Helm.

THE UNEXPECTED
(The Emperor of Nothing)
With Dan Seymour, Todd Karnes, Martha Hyer, Benny Rubin, others
Producer: Ziv TV
Director: Sobey Martin
Writers: Jerry Lawrence and Robert E. Lee
30 Mins.; 8 p.m., Wed.
IRONITE IRONER CO.
KECA-TV, Hollywood

Expert handling of a leaky script sustains interest in this bizarre story of a 500,000,000 franc swindle of the French Government. It holds interest for the televiewer despite the improbabilities presented in the meller by Jerry Lawrence and Robert E. Lee.

Wealthy man befriends a young Frenchman fleeing the Surete, accused of the swindle, and takes him to Biarritz. There they meet an elderly self-styled "emperor" and his perty daughter, and it develops the man did a mental blackout when his two sons and wife died in World War II, following which he went to Biarritz to proclaim himself "emperor." Sadistic tycoon jovially decides to present a phoney premier of France to the old man, and hires an ex-con for the job. Mixup, however, sees the real Premier show, and denouement discloses wealthy man is the real swindler, and girl and young man wind in clinch.

Todd Karnes, Dan Seymour, Martha Hyer, Everett Glass and Benny Rubin contribute good acting. Sobey Martin's direction is highly skilled. Daku.

DEATH VALLEY DAYS
(The Lost Pegleg Mine)
With Gilbert Frye, Ralph Sanford, others
Producer: Dorrell McGowan
Director: Stuart McGowan
Writer: Ruth Woodman
30 Mins.; 9:30 p.m. Fri.
PACIFIC COAST BORAX CO.
KTLA, Hollywood
(McCann-Erickson)

Legendary lost gold mine springboards action in latest in Death Valley series, with interest holding all the way through. Story penned by Ruth Woodman benefits from her obvious knowledge of the heat box, and comes over with a distinct realism.

Yarn is narrated partially in flashback form, and recites history of legend in which a 19th century hoss thief found (then lost) the untapped gold mine. Updating legend with search involving heirs of map and actual gold samples, telepic moves along at a good clip, with girl and her b.f. finding gold. But it develops the guide, tired of hunting for the mine for 40 years, planted it to end the long search.

Ralph Sanford is excellent as Peg-Leg, Gilbert Frye good as the male lead, Gloria Eaton okay as the femme lead, and Pat Mitchell and Andy Clyde competent in support. Stuart McGowan's direction is good. Daku.

YOUR TOWN'S TALENT
With Bob Moon, others
Director: Jim Gates
60 Mins.; 9:30 p.m., Thurs.
SO. CAL. PHARMACEUTICAL ASSN.
KTTV, Hollywood

A variety of amateur acts ranging from good to gruesome intersperses what amounts to an hour-long commercial, a cook's tour of a drugstore, with the various products therein being peddled heavily. Not a good show by any stretch of the imagination, this one must chalk up a neat profit for the channel, however, in view of saturation blurbs plus non-pro acts. So what does it matter if no one but the relatives is watching?

That's the spirit pervading this affair in which commercials topline. But since blurbs were never meant as topliners, blanketing of the program with them defeats the purpose. Emcee Bob Moon intros the acts, but his chief mission is to spout the blurbs, and he does this with great zeal.

Acts vary from terpers, singers, an 88'er, to the customary accordionist. It all adds up to a dull evening. Daku.

VIDPIX DOOMS NEW LIVE TALENT

L.A. Tele Stations Nix Live Shows For Film, To Sidestep Talent Nut

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Los Angeles TV stations, facing what they expect to be their most crucial year, have taken steps to cut their operating nut by sidestepping live shows for more feature films and vidpix. To that end, they have petitioned the American Federation of Radio-TV Artists not to hike scales in negotiations for a new pact, which kick off Oct. 30.

Claude McCue, the union's exec secretary, has answered that if the stations present "factual evidence relative to problems of payment for performers," the petition will be considered at a special membership meeting Monday (27). The move to film is due entirely to the fact that operating costs are too high, according to Don Fedderson, manager of KLAC-TV and prexy of TV Broadcasters of Southern California.

Pointing out that stations prefer live shows, Fedderson said he is bullish on video's future, particularly in its ability to develop new shows. He added, however, that "unless we have rates we can live with, the opportunity for Hollywood to become the national TV capital will be stifled." He declared that the "acceptance of TV in the most competitive market in the world needs another year of nursing."

Most local stations have been operating in the red, but spokesmen are reluctant to disclose actual figures. FCC figures, however, show the seven N. Y. stations grossed $23,000,000 last year; the four in Chicago grossed $13,000,000, while L. A.'s seven grossed only $13,500,000. Stations are now asking AFTRA to continue the present pact and scales, which expires Nov. 30. Managers point to the lower costs on film, which last year cost stations about $3,000,000. Figure this year is lower, even though they are using more film.

Keys' 250G Ache In 'Corkle' Demise

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

"Doc" Corkle may have laughing gas in his dental office but he's no laughing matter to Freeman Keyes. Yanked like an infested molar after three sittings, he put the ache on Keyes for around $250,000.

Reynolds Aluminum, which bought the NBC time following Red Skelton rather than the show Key Productions, of which Keyes is sole owner and prexy, put on film, threw up its hands after three airings and called in "Mr. Peepers." As if that wasn't bad enough, Keyes was left stuck with 39-week straight contracts with most of the talent and two issues of "Corkie" with no place to show them.

Only out for Keyes, and it may take years, is to continue the series for syndication. The talent may settle for X on the dollar but this would merely diminish the loss and eliminate any chance of partial return. It is hardly likely that any other sponsor would buy the show in its present form and once the dog gets a bad name it's hard to call him off.

Deepest bite on Keyes is in the talent, which he put under straight contract for 39 weeks. With Eddie Mayehoff, who is "Corkle," there is an "escape" from his $2,500 weekly stipend since sponsor cancelled within four weeks. On the 39-week payroll are Billie Burke at $750 a week; Arnold Stang and Hope Emerson, each $700; Chester Conklin, Connie Marshall, Arthur Q. Bryan and other incidental characters around $350.

DOUGFAIR'S STUDIO SPACE IN ENGLAND

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

To handle its expanding telefilm program, Dougfair Corp. has leased the National studios at Elstree, near London. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will produce part of the company's NBC schedule in England while the balance will be made in Hollywood under supervision of Alexander McDonald.

McDonald leaves for New York this week to set up offices in connection with Dougfair's recent deal with the American Museum of Natural History for acquisition of more than 1,000,000 feet of documentary film.

TV Writers Hit Screen Scribes On Snafu Charge

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Television Writers of America decided to hold off its meeting with Screen Writers Guild in the anticipation that the Screen Writers will file an intervenor petition because TWA sought a National Labor Relations Board election concering network video scribblers.

In announcing its decision to wait, TWA prexy Charles Isaacs denied the SWG contention that the scheduled meeting last week was postponed because of the new group's "inability to reach agreement on proposals" it would offer SWG and Radio Writers Guild.

TWA slapped SWG for opposing its filing for an NLRB election, averring SWG "is seeking jurisdiction over a field in which the vast majority members of writers are members of TWA." Prexy Isaacs said that in seeking such an election the union was simply resorting to "the only democratic process under which TV writers can select their own collective bargaining agent."

ALA-Web Pact Okayed

Meanwhile the Authors League of America membership ratified the contract which the group negotiated with three live tele chains—ABC, NBC and CBS. Vote was 492-20. Screen Writers Guild, which is also a party to the contract, similarly approved it, 236-4.

Contract was to have gone into effect Oct. 16.

OF'S BIOG VIDPIX SERIES; TOP NAMES

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Official Films this week set plans for a new half-hour vidfilm series, which will spotlight Hollywood stars, producers, directors and writers playing themselves in real-life stories of Hollywood at work. To be produced and directed by Robert J. Gurney, each stanza will deal with the factual incidents in the life of one name personality.

With Herbert Margolis as writer and a director, OF is currently lining up stories for such personalities as Ronald Colman, Ida Lupino, Harpo Marx, Eddie Albert, Humphrey Bogart, etc.

Two For Goodman

Harry S. Goodman Productions has pacted to handle distribution on two new vidpix packages produced by Galbreath Picture Productions of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Shows are "King Calico," a quarter-hour puppet show in the form of a cliff-hanger, and "Bert and Elmer," a quarter-hour folk humor show featuring Johnny Coons and Bob Shreve.

BLAME UNIONS IN SWITCH TO FILM

As more and more TV stations throughout the country continue to embrace films as a means of filling up their day and night program schedules, it's feared that the development of live talent on a local level will gradually become extinct. It poses the all-important question of where the future TV talent of America is coming from. Back in the heyday of radio, the networks were largely dependent on the reservoir of local station talent developed over the years. But the rising cost for talent on a local level, due to union demands, is automatically shutting off any initiative on the part of the local TV station to incubate the new crop of performers.

These were the summaries of Richard Doherty, head of employer-employee relations department of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters, who told delegates to the NARTB's Second District meeting last week that "talent costs for TV are paving the way for the gradual demise of live shows—and the unions don't even see it." As an escape, he added, all the stations are buying up film availabilities.

Doherty said that in his explorations around the country he's found that, even in the case of dick jockeys, TV stations will only restrict themselves to the tried-and-true, and steer clear of new talent, because they consider the talent scales imposed on them by unions are too excessive. The trend, he added, is away from live programming altogether, in favor of buying films, because of inflated talent union demands.

At the same time, Doherty cautioned the radio industry to put its house in order on the labor front, intimating that the Wage Stabilization Board threatens to scrutinize radio more closely in approaching months because of the high number of wage-and-hour violations reported to the WSB.

Philip Morris 'Sponsors' Cummings Pix, Plus Bankrolling AM, TV

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

In a three-media parley, Philip Morris is sponsoring Robert Cummings in television, radio and motion pictures.

Cummings, now starring in the upcoming "My Hero" vidpix series for Dunhill ciggies, a product of PM, revealed PM will take care of the bulk of financing on two indie feature films in which he will be starred next summer in Spain.

Aside from picking up weekly tab of $28,500 on his "My Hero" series which bows on NBC-TV Nov. 8, PM is also sponsoring Cummings in a similar series on AM, beginning Jan. 1 on NBC. When Cummings winds 35 telepix May 18, he'll be off to Europe for the theatrical ventures.

Cummings draws salary plus 75% of residual on the TV series, while Don Sharpe gets salary plus 25%, residual coming in five years. Cummings' pilot was angeled by Golden Key Trust, and in setup giving him a tax break "employs" him, as well as Sharpe, Mort Greene, who produces, and Julie Bishop, femme lead, and John Litel, series regular.

Forrest's Videbut

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Meridian Pictures, newly-formed production unit which this week begins turning out telepix for "Schlitz Playhouse of Stars" at the Goldwyn studios, has lined up Sally Forrest, in her TV debut, for lead opposite James Young in "Barrow Street." Roy Kellino directs.

Peggy Ann Garner and Francis L. Sullivan star in "Mr. Thayer," which rolls later this week, with Ted Post megging. William Self is associate producer.

Vidfilm Re-Run Coin Enticing To NBC-TV, Too; Expands Roster

That prospect of lucrative profits from vidfilm re-runs, which has lured a number of indie producers into the business, is also behind the decision of the TV networks to put some of their prize packages on film. NBC veepee Robert W. Sarnoff, recently-named chief of the web's film department, revealed this week that the first stanzas of "Dragnet," now airing on a network basis under Chesterfield sponsorship, will go out on the local station syndication route next year, and that the web's new "Victory at Sea" will also undoubtedly be syndicated for local sales following its initial run on the network.

Number of shows which the nets can air originally on a full network deal and then sell for re-run purposes on a local station level, of course, is limited to those to which it owns all rights. Thus, "Fireside Theatre," one of the most successful vidfilm shows on NBC, is owned by Procter & Gamble and Frank Wisbar Productions, which will undoubtedly handle the re-runs. CBS, however, has a number of its top shows, such as "I Love Lucy," "Our Miss Brooks," etc., on film and while that web has announced no specific plans for their eventual syndication, the fact that such a step is in the works is indicated by the steady expansion of the CBS-TV film sales department.

Sarnoff, who returned last week from a trip to Europe, during which he huddled with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., on production plans for the new series of 39 half-hour vidpix dramas which Dougfair Productions is lensing for NBC syndication, revealed that that show has already been sold in 24 markets. Although it won't take the air on any station until January, the show has been bought by Phillips Petroleum for 19 midwestern markets,

Familiar Ground

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Rod Cameron reported to work at Republic studios last week for both telepix and motion pictures.

Actor first starred in Revue Productions' telepic, "Police Lieutenant," opposite Lynn Bari, with Robert Finkel directing the Chevron Theatre vidpix.

The days later he returned to the Valley lot, to star in "The Golden Herd," a feature film, that is.

Capra to Rein AT&T Vidpix; $2,600,000 Cost

Most ambitious undertaking in television history has been projected by American Telephone & Telegraph for a series of scientific films, each to cost around $200,000. Series of 13 hour-long telefilms is slated for next fall but preparations are now in progress.

First move by AT&T was to engage Frank Capra, veteran film director, to produce the experimental pilot film. Reputed an authority on subjects included in the series, Capra will likely continue through the entire series as production supervisor and editor of the completed footage. He retains all foreign rights.

Initialer in the saga of science will be "The Sun," to be followed by "The Moon" and other celestial subjects. No studio has been selected for the filming and the network is still to be picked, based on the best available time.

Don Jones, head of the Ayer film department, passed several weeks in Hollywood surveying studio facilities and interviewing directors, writers and crafts. Understood that AT&T will assemble its own unit, with Capra supervising the overall production. Project has been veiled in strict secrecy although it is said that the price per picture will range from $175,000 to $250,000. This would make each subject by far the costliest ever made for television and approaching the budget for some theatrical films.

Experimental shooting will start late this year and negotiations are now going forward for a complete production unit.

Col, U-I Ink Vidfilm Contracts With SAG

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

In deal calling for additional payments to telethesps for reuse of vidpix, plus additional coin in event the telepix are issued theatrically, Columbia and UI have become the first major motion picture studios to ink telefilm pacts with Screen Actors Guild. Signing came as no surprise, since it had been known for months studios and guild were in agreement, with only legalities holding up actual inking.

RKO and Republic also participated in the discussions for a time, but both bowed out months ago, RKO due to uncertainty on telepix plans, and Republic because of demands of James C. Petrillo's AFM union.

Gargan's Coast Trek

William Gargan, star of NBC's "Barrie Craig," left Gotham for the Coast yesterday (Tues.) to talk up a vidpic version of the stanza.

He's meeting his wife in Chi and will motor rest of the way in the Cadillac she won from him in a World Series bet.

Guinness' 1-Shot 'Inventory' Film

British film star Alec Guinness will make his American television bow as star of a one-shot film to be aired by NBC-TV in its "American Inventory" series, which it produces in association with the Sloan Foundation. Show will be devoted to a short history of industrial productivity and Guinness, who played eight different roles for his "Kind Hearts and Coronets" film, will assay four different characterizations for the video program.

Deal was set by "Inventory" producer Bill Hodapp during a recent trip to England, and tis finalization awaits only Guinness' approval of the script. Film, of course, will be lensed in England, for airing sometime in January. Guinness will play the roles of an American Indian, Eli Whitney, Charles Kettering and a "modern production genius."

Roger McDougall, who scripted Guinness' "Man in the White Suit" feature, will do the writing also for the "Inventory" show.

U.S. TV FILM MARKET FOR BBC DRAMA SHOWS

London, Oct. 21.

American and British television industries may soon get another crack at international TV, via the establishment here of a new company set up specifically to record the top BBC dramatic shows on film for possible sale to U. S. video networks.

Outfit is named High-Definition Films, which is actually the British terminology for kinescope recordings. It's been learned that NBC-TV, for one, has shown interest in the project and wants a look at the finished product with an eye to syndicating the BBC shows for the American market.

ABC MULLS SINGLE NIGHT & DAY RATE; MUTUAL'S PLUS TO NON-TV STATIONS

Two new modes are developing on the network rate front: (1) a single night-and-day rate being evolved by ABC with the possibility of its going into effect next spring; and (2) re-patterning the structure so that stations in nontele markets cost more than those facing TV competition.

Mutual's new rate structure is based on the latter approach which, incidentally, had first been considered by NBC. Under the MBS format, the overall 25% nighttime cut is borne chiefly by the outlets in video areas—where the cut is about 30%—while the nick in non-TV areas is about 10%. About 60% of the skein's affiliates are in TV territory (including the web's shareholder stations) and 40% is outside the TV sphere for the present. Basis for computing TV territory is a 50-mile radius from video towers.

The trend to equalizing day and night prices is also evident in the fact that MBS is increasing morning rates to new advertisers by 5% in all areas. The 10% cut in afternoon charges, made last year, has been restored. Plan has been endorsed by Mutual Affiliates Advisory Committee and is now going to outlets for okay. Web, incidentally, announced a 13% billings increase for the first nine months of the year.

ABC, which is currently holding regional meetings with its affiliates, is mulling the idea of the single rate. This summer when the other skeins, first CBS and then NBC, announced their most recent rate slash, ABC toppers were in favor of installing the single rate. However, it was felt at that time that the stations would have to be sounded out on the plan. Since that would take a relatively long time, which might put the chain at a competitive disadvantage vis-a-vis NBC and CBS, the web made its cut in the form of a more-favorable-to-advertisers discount structure and changes in compensation to the outlets.

Nevertheless, the ABC upper echelons feel that research indicates that audiences for daytime shows are coming up to those for evening stanzas, and thus the rates should be the same. The net's new pattern, which may go into effect in April, would not result in any actual changes in the coin paid by advertisers or given to stations. Changes would be made in the discounts and in the gross rates. For the most part, affiliates have objected in the past to cuts in gross rates, feeling that such slashes would depress their local and spot rates. On the other hand, ABC execs who have attended regional meetings say they've found little objection to the new format.

Two-Way Stretch For Al Hollander

Reorganization at the Grey agency, which last week announced the resignation of William Chalmers as radio-TV director, finds Al Hollander moving into the agency as a veepee stockholder and taking over the radio-TV reins.

Hollander has been identified with the Louis G. Cowan packaging operation for some years and although moving into the Grey setup next month he continues his Cowan veepeeship, dividing his time between the two organizations. Hollander is also partnered in the Fulton Recording Co.

Grey agency has all-media billings in excess of $20,000,000. However, less than $1,000,000 is currently channeled into radio-TV and the personnel change is cued for an attempt to move the Grey operation into the TV bigtime.

With Hollander currently involved in the Eisenhower campaign, he assumes his Grey tieup the latter part of November after a two-week vacation.

WJR's 315G Net

Detroit, Oct. 21.

WJR, the Goodwill Station, Inc., announced sales of $2,424,610.14 for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $2,425,311.81 in the same period in 1951. Net profit after providing for income taxes amounts to $315,803.81, compared with $356,927.73 for the same period in 1951.

Basketball Next On NCAA Agenda?

Chicago, Oct. 21.

The National Collegiate Athletic Assn., busy trying to cope with television and its effects on college football, has been asked now to look into basketball telecasts. Request for a survey on the impact of video on basketball boxoffice came from De Paul University at the NCAA's four-day meet here last week.

The De Paul request was turned over to the group's TV committee, with no specific action recommended by full body. While the Chi school registered no definite complaint in its request that the NCAA look into the matter, it's known that officials claim they were hit at the gate last winter when their Saturday night games at the Stadium were bucking ABC-TV's coverage of various eastern and midwest contests.

With their hands full on the gridiron situation the NCAA has so far paid no official heed to video and basketball. It's expected the issue will be brought up at the association's annual convention in Washington in January.

Asa Bushnell, chairman of the TV committee, indicated his group would recommend no major changes in the current controlled TV football arrangement at the Washington meeting.

Godfrey Now SRO As Simulcast Attraction; Add 15-Min. TV Strip

CBS adds another group of quarter-hours to the simulcast route on its Arthur Godfrey morning show Dec. 1, via a deal set this week for Snowcrop Orange Juice to buy into the 10 to 10:15 segment. Frozen juice outfit will alternate with French Sardines from Monday through Thursday. No simulcast is possible on Fridays, since Godfrey works that day from his Virginia farm, but Snowcrop will have the time period alternate Fridays on AM also.

Toni, which had been alternating with the sardine firm, moves into the 11 to 11:15 segment to rotate with National Biscuit.

Under the schedule, Snowcrop will be represented on the show for both AM and TV Mondays and Wednesdays the first week, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays the second week. It will then follow that schedule on succeeding alternate weeks. New sale means that the TV web is now SRO for Godfrey on the four days possible to simulcast him, and that CBS Radio is sold out all five days.

CBS Radio Gets That Sat. Nite Hillbilly Urge

CBS Radio is hopping on the hillbilly music bandwagon with a new Saturday night show which will spotlight the top local corn talent via pickups from a number of cities throughout the south. New show will take over the 10:30 to 11 Saturday night slot starting Nov. 8, with the initial stanza originating from WRVA, the web's Richmond, Va., affiliate.

CBS' hillbilly entry will follow by an hour NBC's "Grand Ole Opry," which has become almost a perennial Saturday night affair on that web. Time period on CBS is now occupied by remote dance band pickups.

'Out of the Blue' Is A Lot of Crosby, And Well Worth It, Too

John Crosby has assembled into a book his choice radio-TV pieces over the past few years since inaugurating his N.Y. Herald Tribune (plus syndicated) column. Simon & Schuster is bringing it out this week under the title, "Out of the Blue" ($3). It's an engaging volume of equal interest to both the lay reader and those who ply the trade.

There are different methods of criticism. Crosby's way is more readable and enjoyable than that practiced by most other writers. The intent is never vicious or caustic, but the content can be dry and biting in a meaningful manner. (Crosby himself admits that, like most critics, he's incoherent when he likes something, yet "afflicted with a formidable coherence" when it comes to disapproving).

Having the freedom and scope of a column, Crosby allows himself some digressions from radio-TV criticism, and as such comes up with some delightful trivia. When he treats with a program or a problem seriously, his arguments for the most part are pertinent and knowing.

On the whole these warmed-over H-T pieces make for smooth, sometimes thoughtful reading. Whether he's writing about soap operas on TV, plunging necklines, Bill Stern's yarn spinning, commercials, kid shows or Fred Allen's battle with censor-conscious veepees, the irony is used with a light hand; the fun is never vicious. And at all times it's literate.

Assembled between covers, the Crosby pieces maintain a uniformly high standard, with a distinct style and verve. Rose.

AUTRY NOW A CBS AFFILIATE PARDNER

Gene Autry, whose radio and TV shows both air over CBS, this week became even more closely affiliated with the web. CBS Radio signed an affiliation pact with KNOG, Nogales, Ariz., a 250-watter in which Autry is the principal stockholder, with H. C. Tovre as prexy.

Outlet will become a "bonus station" in the network, meaning bankrollers who buy time on a certain minimum number of stations get KNOG for free. It's addition ups the total number of CBS affiliates to 215.

Froman's 19.2 Bow

CBS-TV's new Jane Froman starrer, "USA Canteen," knocked 15.5 rating points off NBC-TV's Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca show on its bow-in Saturday night (18). Special Trendex report gave "Canteen" a 19.2, as compared with 29.1 for first half-hour of the Caesar-Coca "Show of Shows." Latter program drew a fat 44.6 the preceding week in its opening half-hour.

It's pointed out, of course, that Miss Froman's show might have drawn an especially big audience opening night because of the pre-broadcast publicity and the novelty factor attendant on a new video production, and that it has yet to prove itself. Show preemed in the 9 to 9:30 slot, but moves back to 9:30 to 10 this week (25), with the new "Miss Millie" package debuting at 9.

CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason show, meanwhile, which had shown a steady rise against NBC's "All Star Revue" in the Saturday night at 8 period, was knocked off last week (18) by Jimmy Durante, as star of "All Star." Trendex gave Durante a 28.6, as compared with Gleason's 17.0, which almost duplicated the performance of the same two five weeks ago.

Here We Go Again!

With the future of NBC-TV's "Mr. Peepers" virtually assured for another season as the result of last week's sale to Reynolds Metals, NBC programming execs are speeding plans on other situation comedies. Web regards the successful outcome of the "Peepers" package as the first move to break the rival CBS web's stranglehold on radio-TV situation comedy, and are particularly pleased that the show receiving that honor is a house package.

Following through on the "Peepers" sale, NBC program chief Charles (Bud) Barry has at least five other situation comedy shows in various stages of preparation for either AM or TV. These include a husband-wife show starring Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy; one with Mickey Rooney; "Life of Riley," starring William Bendix; "Ethel and Albert," starring Peg Lynch and Alan Bunce, and "Father of the Bride," with Elliott Nugent and Peggy Ann Garner.

Barry pointed out that, even though NBC's video web is now sold out on its cream evening time, the web is willing to gamble via the investment of a heavy bankroll in getting the shows ready. Problem is especially difficult, since it means buying and building video shows now for possible airing in January or even next September.

So Much Grid Coin in Mpls. That 5 Stations Carry Same Game

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

No less than six Twin Cities radio stations carry the same two-hour show during the football season Saturday afternoons. For five of them the reason is that they're able to find sponsors despite the duplicity, indicating the audience is so vast that all of the stations apparently are able to share in it. The sixth station, KUOM, is non-commercial.

The show in question is the play-by-play broadcast of University of Minnesota gridiron contests directly from the stadium here or elsewhere. Stations that have sold this show are WCCO, WLOL, WMIN, WDGY and WTCN. KUOM is the university's own station. Except for the fact that it's union troubles present an obstacle, it's a cinch KSTP also would be offering the same Saturday afternoon program as it formerly did both on radio and TV. Before the NCAA ban, both KSTP-TV and WTCN-TV televised the games.

Aforegoing radio broadcasts are only part of the huge and record-breaking amount of football served over radio and TV weekends, denoting the tremendous interest hereabouts in the pigskin sport despite the fact that Minnesota has fallen far from its former football glory, having had losing teams—that still draw crowds ranging from 48,000 to 65,000 every Saturday—three successive seasons.

High school football games are radio broadcast play by play over WLOL and WMIN at night. On WCCO and WLOL Sunday afternoons there are panel shows given over to discussions of the previous day's Minnesota contest and other football games. There are numerous sports newscasts, giving out scores, and WCCO, WLOL and WTCN football shows preceding and following the Minnesota game broadcasts. WMIN carries the play

'What's My Line' Radio Casualty

Philip Morris has decided to ditch the radio version of "What's My Line," which it bankrolls Wednesday nights at 9:30 on CBS, and is now seeking another show to put in that time.

Execs of the Biow agency, which handles the PM account, said they're looking at a number of properties and have made no decision yet.

Agency cited a musicians' union ban against the use of recorded music on a transcribed show as the primary reason for dropping "Line." Since emcee John Daly has a back-to-back news show on the ABC radio web, Biow has been forced to tape the "Line" show each week. Because of the union regulation, producers must cut live music into the finished tape and, according to the agency, the finished result has not always been as good as it desires.

PM bankrolled "Line" as a summer replacement on the NBC radio web during the summer, but moved it over to CBS at the start of the fall season. Video version of the show, bankrolled Sunday nights on CBS-TV by Stopette, has been a consistent top rater.

Okay Landon's WREN Buy

Topeka, Oct. 21.

Sale of WREN to Alf M. Landon, Kansas Republican figure and former governor, was approved last week by the FCC. Sale is by R. C. Jackman and associates to Landon and associates for $150,000.

In addition to the radio station the new owners acquire a petition before the FCC for a television license in Topeka.

WGN Axe Swings, 35 Staffers Hit

Chicago, Oct. 21.

WGN, which is cutting its nighttime rates 50% next month, is pruning its staff in several departments in a far-reaching cost-saving move, with 35 staffers, including a few from WGN-TV, sister tele station, having been let go or put on notice.

Latest to get their walking papers were five staff announcers and soundman Kob Klein, who has been with the station for some 17 years. Two directors and two producers and 10 engineers have been let out.

Economy wave is part of a general overhauling of the station's operation by general manager Frank P. Schreiber to bring costs down to present day AM realities. Station is gradually shifting emphasis from live productions to the recorded music-news format exploited by the Chi indies.

KATE SMITH TV SHOWS LOSING 2 SPONSORS

Pointing up the TV networks' difficulty in tying down sponsors for their daytime participating shows, two bankrollers served notice this week that they are checking off NBC-TV's Kate Smith program. Two are Pillsbury, which bows out of the 4:30 to 4:45 p.m. segment Wednesday after the Dec. 3 program, and Toni, which exits the 4:45 to 5 o'clock segment Fridays after Jan. 2.

Miss Smith's show at this time last year was SRO, and served as the fulcrum for the web's afternoon programming. This year, the two cancellations bring the number of open quarter-hour segments each week to a total of five-and-a-half (half is represented by the 4 to 4:15 period Fridays, which is bankrolled alternate weeks only by Knomark).

CBS Radio Affiliates To Meet at L.A. TV City

CBS has decided to give its radio affiliates a chance to see how the other half (TV) lives.

Web has scheduled its next Columbia Affiliates Advisory Board meet for the AM station managers on the Coast Nov. 11, to tie in with the formal opening hoopla of CBS-TV City Nov. 15. Radio ops, of course, will attend the new studios' preem, together with most of the top CBS brass from both the AM and TV sides.

NO 'SECOND CHANCE' FOR TV

A Slight Case of D.T.'s

It's no secret that execs of both CBS and NBC, particularly the latter, have been undergoing some jittery moments with the d.t.'s (displaced talent). Notable instance is that of Worthington L. (Tony) Miner, who chucked his prize winning "Studio One" property on CBS-TV to throw in his lot with NBC boys. The switchover cost NBC $600,000 on a four-year contract basis. The network even gave Miner his own unit to work with.

But since the Miner-produced summer replacement drama series for RCA has faded, Miner is without a show, Further, there's no prime time left, with the web now SRO on cream availabilities. Some months back the web tried to peddle a "Studio Miner"-type of full-hour dramatics, but there were no takers because of the high price asked.

Similarly, Gertrude Berg, under contract to the web, reportedly to the tune of $300,000 per season for her complete "Goldbergs" package, remains without a showcase time because of the network's inability to clear sufficient stations. In Mrs. Berg's case she even had two sponsors, Procter & Gamble and Vitamin Corp., all set to ride with the property, but they've despaired of finding a solution to the problem.

CBS has only a mild case of d.t.'s—involving but one personality—Ken Murray. He's down on the books for $100,000 a year, but isn't working. CBS, unable to sell him, considers it a savings to keep a sustaining Murray show off the air.

Finding New Sponsor Blood Still Tough Hurdle for TV Networks

Television's major problem this season seems to be the ferreting out of new sponsorship blood.

Major networks, virtually SRO on their cream evening time slots, are finding it increasingly difficult to wrap up advertisers for the sustaining holes in their Class B and C periods. And whenever a participating sponsor drops out of a daytime show, the webs have considerable difficulty in lining up a replacement. While station clearance problems, TV's high costs and other factors all contribute to making the life of a video time salesman especially tough at this time, sales execs generally agree that the main reason is the dearth of new sponsor blood.

Quick scanning of the 100 top-spending advertisers in the country will reveal, according to network sales chiefs, that they're now virtually 100% committed to TV. Chief reason for this is the number of participating shows on the air and the number of bankrollers who buy in on an alternate-week basis. Such selling policies, while highly instrumental in providing NBC and CBS with their SRO status, have also forced the webs to touch bottom in their list of available sponsors, and so the word is out to pitch new properties to advertisers who have not yet tasted the benefits of TV.

Situation has worked a particular hardship on DuMont and particularly ABC. When NBC and CBS became SRO last year, the overflow of sponsorship coin went to those two webs and helped them

The Paley Pattern

Since the new CBS TV City is, in essence, "the house that situation comedies built," the network will pay homage to the successful formula at the Nov. 15 ceremonies marking the official TV City inauguration.

Elaborate 90-minute coast-to-coast TV show, which Jack Benny will emcee as the main event of the three-day hoopla, will have a situation comedy format in keeping with the Paley pattern. CBS thinks the continuity is so surefire that it's anxious to keep details under wraps until the lid is officially off.

WB Nixes 'Father' Title for CBS-TV

When CBS-TV preems its video version of "Life With Father" (the network hopes to have the tele audition transcription ready by Nov. 15), it will be required to change the title to "Life With Father and Mother." That's because Warner Bros., which did the filmization, holds the rights to the original title and refuses to release it. However, it reverts back to the Clarence Day estate, Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay in 1955, at which time CBS can take it over.

Instead of an adaptation, CBS will start from scratch with original material, with John Cheever having written the initial installments. Mrs. Day, Crouse and Lindsay (latter two co-outhored the record-running Broadway legit production) will be closely identified with the TV project, going on the CBS weekly payroll.

Lead roles for "Life" are still unselected (CBS had initially hoped that Lindsay himself would return to the Father role, but he rejected the idea). Ezra Stone will direct.

'Margie' Coming Home to Roost On CBS-TV Sked

CBS-TV has successfully wooed back into the web fold "My Little Margie," which in the span of a few months has hurdled the TV gap from "just another summer replacement" into one of the prize situation comedy properties (it wound up in the No. 2 Nielsen spot on the Sept. 13 ratings). It registers as one of the coups of the early season and comes as a blow to NBC, which has been anxious to invade the rival web's precincts on situation comedy dominance.

"Margie" did summer duty for "I Love Lucy" in the Monday night at 9 CBS-TV slot. By the time "Lucy" returned, "Margie" was piling up ratings so sponsor Philip Morris decided to stick with it for another round of 13. CBS was unable to clear stations so the show was moved over to NBC.

Now that the program has emerged as a bigtime rating puller, the ciggie sponsor is taking a full-year renewal and letting its "Racket Squad" go by the boards. The cops-'n'-robber series happens to be a Thursday night CBS-TV property, so into that segment goes "Margie" upon expiration of its current cycle on NBC.

Bayuk Cancels 'Ellery'

Bayuk cigars has cancelled "Ellery Queen" on ABC-TV, after the Nov. 26 broadcast. Reason is insufficient station clearance, with only 14 stations carrying the program. Agency is Ellington.

"Queen," a Norman and Irving Pincus package, is in the 9 p.m. Wednesday slot. Show, which originally was on DuMont, is now tied to ABC-TV and can't move to another web.

SWEZEY'S 'CREDO FOR B'CASTERS'

By GEORGE ROSEN

There are grim years ahead for the television industry. The video broadcasters will find no peace in the next few years to come from the competition for the advertising dollar and the American audience, with forces at work sniping away against TV. Unless the television operators face up to the real battles ahead, stop strangling themselves with intra-mural wrangling and bickering while ignoring the real menace from without, and unless they do the job right, "somebody will take TV away from us ... We can ask for a second chance, but there won't be a second chance."

Here, in essence, was an approximation of the warning sounded before the Second District meeting of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters, at their two-day meeting last Thursday and Friday (16-17) at the Weschester Country Club. Rye, N. Y. In a forceful delineation of the manifold problems facing a new industry, Robert D. Swezey, sparkplug of the NARTB's TV Committee, who has played a dominant role in the promulgation of the TV Code and other industry policy matters, came up with what may well serve as a "Credo For TV Broadcasters."

It was one of the most hard-hitting, realistic presentations to come out of industry conclaves, with Swezey pulling no punches in alerting the broadcasters to the inherent dangers facing them unless they measure up to the job ahead of them and avoid the mistakes that they made in radio. There was no pontificating; Swezey was merely one of them, too, groping for the correct formulas.

On the Line

Swezey's comments were presented as the prelude to an enlightening panel forum, of which he was chairman, which touched on practically all facets of TV operation, with a group of knowhow operators kicking around the TV ball through a morning of provocative discussion. It was by far the top event on the two-day calendar, richly rewarding to the approximate 100 New York state broadcasters in attendance. It was a session that generated enthusiasm among the delegation, mostly from upstate, but which presented a conspicuous void—in the virtual brushoff given the meeting by New York City broadcasters, with little or practically no representation from Gotham stations.

Swezey, v.p. and general manager of WDSU-TV, New Orleans, and a veteran of the bigleague radio sweepstakes, laid it on the line. He told them there's no place in TV for a "warmed over" radio. He reminded them that, 15 and 20 years ago, the AM broadcasters didn't recognize what their service was worth; they were content in the "easy pickings" they were finding, while other media rates kept going up and up. They sold radio short, only to recognize it too late when the day of rate cut reckoning came.

TV, he warned, will require more alertness, with the need to

'Who Said We've No Problems?', Some NBC Affiliates Chime In, Beat Drums for 'On to Boca' Meet

It begins to look now as if there might be a Boca Raton, Fla., convention of NBC affiliates in December—but without NBC.

Agitation for a meeting of affiliates, particularly those in TV, got under way over the weekend when letters went out from P. A. Sugg, of WKY, Oklahoma City, chairman of the Station Planning Advisory Committee, to members of the network's SPAC group, on the advisability of getting together on their own and asking the committee members to sound out the NBC affiliates in their respective districts with a view toward congregating at the Florida resort the first week in December. Meeting would also be contingent on whether Boca facilities would be available in view of NBC's cancellation order last week.

NBC notified the affiliates that there was no need for a convention this year because the web, after a series of meetings with affiliates in the past two months, had resolved its major differences, including the establishment of a new radio rate structure.

Apparently some of the TV affiliates share different beliefs, particularly on the stalemate on daytime television programming, and think it's important enough for a get-together with the network officialdom. These affiliates, claiming that NBC is giving daytime TV a "complete brushoff" from 9 a.m. on, say they're taking a terrific beating from local clients and losing money to the CBS opposition stations. One TV affiliate manager claims that it's costing him $2,000 a week "and how long can you keep on taking that kind of a licking?"

Specifically, they argue that by NBC's failing to program from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m, and returning the programming burden to the stations, CBS has made such vast inroads that local clients are beating a hasty retreat to the opposition station.

Joseph H. McConnell, NBC prexy, stated on Monday (20) that he still sees no reason to bring the affiliates together at Boca.

Ham On Rye

The Rye, N. Y., two-day meeting of the Second District of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters last week found NARTB prexy Harold Fellows doubling in the role of performer when the entertainment at the opening night's banquet ran short.

Fellows contributed an extensive "Glossary for TV Broadcasters," which proved the click of the evening.

Midget Racing For TV at 5G; Buyer Also Keeps Gate

One of the most unusual deals offered for a network or a tele station is being submitted by the United Speedway Assn. and All State Racing Drivers Assn. Groups are peddling an evening of midget auto racing to emanate from the Kingsbridge Armory, Bronx, to any taker for $5,000 weekly, with the buyer having the option not only to sell the show to a sponsor, but to keep the entire gate receipts. Only proviso is that if the gate goes below $5,000, then the station must contribute $500 to the drivers' group.

Both the Speedway and the drivers group feel that video is necessary to get auto racing started in New York City. For that reason they are willing to practically give away the show, in return for what they feel will cover costs, and possibly provide a small margin of profit.

General Artists Corp., which is submitting the deal, feels that the

Sponsor Conflict Kayoes CBS Radio Tandem Deal

CBS Radio got caught in the middle of another one of those sponsor conflicts last week. Web had an order in the house for Smith Bros. (coughdrops) to buy in on its "power plan" (Operation Tandem) but was forced to call off the deal when it was learned that the outfit's commercial copy would conflict with that of American Chicle, which is already in on the plan.

Smith wanted to use the show to advertise its new chlorophyll lozenge, with the blurbs spotlighting the way it fights unpleasant breath. Chicle, however, advertises Dentyne gum on the web, which bases its sales pitch on the same claim. CBS, as a result, was forced to advise Smith Bros. that it could not accept the business.

Rate Your TV Mate

If anything, last week's NARTB Second District meeting at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., proved conclusively that radio broadcasters getting their TV feet wet for the first time are completely baffled in attempts to evolve a rate structure. With individual station rates, for the most part, now being formulated on a hit-or-miss basis, and with the industry lacking any type of yardstick, the meeting of the New York State broadcasters memorialized the NARTB board of directors to appoint a committee to probe the entire rate situation. Committee will bring forth a standard formula which will guide new entries into TV in promulgating rate structures which, on the one hand, won't sell the medium short and on the other, be realistic in terms of other media.

Some of the broadcasters admitted that, lacking any better means of arriving at a rate formula, they've been applying their Class A evening radio time to television on the basis that TV is worth that, at least. Others reluctantly admitted that they had pulled their figures out of thin air.

Lucky Strike Likes Red Buttons on TV

What shapes up as one of the fastest TV sales of the season is now in the option stage, with Lucky Strike reported poised for purchase of the new Red Buttons show on CBS-TV. Program bowed only last week in the Tuesday night 8:30 to 9 period and won critical kudos, with Buttons generally hailed as the TV comedy find of the year.

However, Lucky Strike, in the event of a buy, plans to move the show out of its Tuesday night tenancy, which will put the CBS programming department right back where it started in building properties designed to take the play away from the NBC-TV Milton Berle opposition.

It's reported Lucky Strike plans to install Buttons in the Sunday at 7:30 period, where "This Is Show Business' has been a several-season fixture for the tobacco company. Where "Show Business" would wind up, remains a Lucky Strike BBD&O agency poser. Client is happy with the latter property.

Mutual's Pro Grid Sale

Miller beer has bought the World Championship Football Game on Mutual. Pro contest will be aired Sunday, Dec. 21, from 2 p.m. to conclusion.

Agency is Mathisson Associates.

Canadian B'casters Protest CBC's Rule on Greater Use of Home Talent

Toronto, Oct. 21.

Privately owned station groups, plus Canadian Association of Broadcasters, were working over the weekend on protest briefs to be presented to the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., following the latter's announced plan to force radio stations in this country to devote increased time to Canadian talent and more Canadian programs.

On stations serving cities of over 50,000 population, proposal is that privately-owned affiliates taking the CBS service devote 48% of their time to Canadian talent produced programs on the Trans-Canada and French-Language Networks. For those stations affiliated with the CBC's dominion network, the minimum of Canadian-produced programs would be 43%. Independent stations, not affiliated with the three CBC networks would have to meet a 40% minimum.

CBC defines a "Canadian program" as one live or reproduced in Canada or originated by Canadians who are sent to other countries to originate programs for Canada. A reproduction made in Canada from an imported original cannot be tagged a "Canadian program," says CBC.

Schechter Exiting As NBC-TV Exec

A. S. (Abe) Schechter, general executive with NBC-TV, is bowing out of the web at the end of the month. It's understood he didn't see eye-to-eye with the management on the chain's news operations. He has not yet announced future plans.

Schechter, who until early this year was v.p. over promotion and public relations for Crowell-Collier mags, was brought in to oversee the 7-9 a.m. "Today" project. Latter, which opened up the breakfast time network video operation, has brought in about $2,000,000 in income so far and is now in the black.

Before his Crowell-Collier post, Schechter was v.p. over news, special events, sports and publicity at Mutual. Prior to that he was with NBC, where he was one of the pioneers of radio news coverage in the '30's.

Kerner Negotiating For 1st Drama Quartet Holiday B'cast Series

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Sam Kerner is negotiating a deal for a series of holiday broadcasts starring members of Paul Gregory's First Drama Quartet. Program would be straight reading, A La Stage presentation, with Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer, Sir Cedrik Hardwicke and Agnes Moorehead reprising their roles.

There's also a possibility he'll strike a deal for similar holiday radios and/or television stints by Tyrone Power, Raymond Massey and Judith Anderson, whom Gregory sends out next month in "John Brown's Body." Shows would be keyed to holiday.

NEW 2-YEAR ABC PACT BY MPLS. WTCN EXECS

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

A new two-year contract with ABC has been signed by the Twin Cities group which recently purchased radio station WTCN from its former owners, after the latter consolidated WTCN-TV with radio station WCCO in a CBS deal.

In making the announcement, general manager Edward G. Smith, pointed out that WTCN has been a basic affiliate since the network first was established, and that the new contract "assures midwest listeners continued service of the programs they have enjoyed over this station."

KSTP and WLOL are NBC and MBS affiliates, respectively, while CBS is part owner of WCCO.

CBS' BRITISH-MADE 'HORNBLOWER' TO BBC

London, Oct. 21.

British radio listeners apparently like their native product as much as do the Americans. "Horatio Hornblower," a show produced here solely for export to the U. S., where it is aired on the CBS Radio web, has been successfully auditioned by BBC and is to be given a permanent weekly slotting.

"Hornblower" is packaged by Harry Alan Towers, under his Towers of London aegis. It bowed in on CBS as a summer replacement and was held over for the regular season. CBS so far has not been able to come up with a sponsor for it.

ABC-TV Acts Fast In Pearson Lopoff

Carter Products has cancelled Drew Pearson on ABC-TV, although it will keep his Sunday at 6 p.m. radio edition on ABC. Reason for the move was to reduce broadcast expenditures. Pearson exits after the Nov. 9 broadcast.

Burton-Dixie mattresses moved in immediately to grab the 11 p.m. slot in which Pearson is berthed at present. It will install Paul Harvey with a news stanza. It was a last minute sales for ABC-TV, since cancellation order on Pearson had to go out to stations on Friday (17) and the B-D deal was inked that afternoon.

Because the web has a lineup of about 18 stations live, it had two sponsors interested in the period. Other bankroller is Charles Antell, which is expected to take another show. Antell launched "Live Like a Millionaire" on ABC-TV Saturday (18) at 7:30-8 p.m.

Symph Concerts Making Beer Ads Respectable For WDAF, Kaycee Star

Kansas City, Oct. 21.

Station WDAF is bending its long-standing policy of "no beer" commercials in a special deal to carry full concerts on the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra. Sponsor for the series, which begins Oct. 25, is the M. K. Goetz Brewing Co., Kansas City and St. Joseph ou[illegible].

Series will not only mark a "first" for the station with a brewery as a commercial sponsor, but will be the first time the Philharmonic has ever been caught in such a tieup. Orch concerts have been broadcast in various ways over the past several years, but this will be the first with brewery backing.

There will be no relaxing WDAF regulations to handle any other beer or liquor advertising, according to station officials. The Philharmonic concerts are virtually an exception to the rule, and special consideration is being given because of public interest in the concerts, they indicated.

Orch series also is proving a wedge via which the brewery gets into the ad columns of the Kansas City Star, which owns WDAF. Star will permit announcements of the concert coverage, with credit to the sponsor. No other beer advertising will be taken by the Star, however. Compton agency represents Goetz.

WPIX SPORTS BLOCK GETS ANOTHER CLIENT

Piel's Beer this week pacted with the N. Y. Daily News' WPIX to sponsor one-fourth of the station's 93 sports events to be televised during the current season from Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Old Gold had previously signed to bankroll half the schedule, leaving the last quarter of the events still available.

Piel's kicks off tonight (Wed.) when WPIX televises the Boston Bruins-N. Y. Rangers hockey game.

'Rootie' to ABC-TV

"Rootie-Kazootie," program that has been identified with NBC-TV where it has been sponsored by Coca-Cola, moves over to ABC-TV with Johnson candy picking up the tab. With Coke cancelling out, "Rootie" will go into the 10:30-11 a.m. slot on Saturdays, starting Jan. 3.

Johnson was one of the first candy firms to cash in on TV's big lure for kids. Agency is Franklin Bruck.

AFTRA, Stations In Chi Stalemate On New Contracts

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Negotiations between AFTRA and the Chi network stations and indies WGN and WLS for a new staff announcers' pact ground to a standstill last week with the managements reps turning thumbs down on the union's proposals. After a series of warmup meetings, the stations offered the present contract as their counter-proposal. Talks then broke off with no definite date set for further bargainings on the pacts which expire Oct. 31.

Since several of the unions demands, especially those pertaining to the health and welfare clauses, involve top level company decisions, it's expected the tussling will be bucked up to the various web's homeoffices and made a part of the national talks in the overall radio-TV codes.

Exceptions to this possibility are indies WLS, WBKB and WGN which have their final authorities headquartered here. WGN has been bargaining individually with the union. Indie TV station WBKB has been bypassing the preliminary sessions until some common ground has been established between the other industry reps and AFTRA.

As expected, one of the prime causes of the stalemate is the union's asking for the elimination of the so-called point system that prevails here for staff announcers. Under the current pact, staffers work a total of 12-quarter hours of commercial shows weekly as part of their base salary of $135 before additional commercial fees can be earned. Union now wants the weekly stipened upped to $150 with all sponsored shows earning the commercial fees.

Other hurdles that require top brass negotiations are the AFTRA requests that the various companies pay the full tab for the health and welfare benefits and that co-oped shows carrying a single spot be classified as commercial shows.

The local TV code for singers and actors is expected to be tossed into the bargaining hopper next week.

Cisler Eases Out Of Radio Holdings

Louisville, Oct. 21.

Gene Sanford, prez, and El Weldon, manager of WKYW, local daytime indie, have bought out the financial interest of Steve Cisler, who has moved to San Mateo, Calif., where he has radio properties. Cisler also sold his interest in an Indianapolis station, and reports that he will soon dispose of his interest in the Richmond, Va., station which he operates.

Dave Wilburn, former program director of WKYW, now with the Richmond outlet, is reported as being a possible purchaser of the Cisler holdings in the Virginia station.

Food Stores' WNBT Buy

Associated Food Stores has bought "Between the Lines" on WNBT, N. Y., starting this Sunday (26). Show will be a half-hour pro-and-con session on questions of interest to New Yorkers, such as taxi rates. Lester Wolff is producer and Bob Kennedy is emcee. Agency is Coordinated Advertising.

Show will go into a noon slot.

FCC Okays Five More TV Outlets, Boosting Post-Freeze Total to 78

Washington, Oct. 21.

The FCC gave the nod to five more television stations last week, raising to 78 the number authorized since the freeze was lifted in April. Awards went to:

Michigan State Board of Agriculture at East Lansing, Mich. This commercial station on Channel 60 will be a companion to Michigan State College's radio station WKAR. Estimated cost of the plant is $461,465, and annual operating costs are estimated at $125,000.

KFEQ, Inc. at St. Joseph, Mo., Station gets Channel 2. Plant will cost $428,389 and operating nut is figured at $234,253. Station is owned by the News-Press and Gazette Co., publishers of the St. Joseph News-Press and Gazette. They operate Station KFEQ, Mutual web affiliate.

Cornbelt Broadcasting Corp., at Lincoln, Neb. Grant is for Channel 10 and goes to the operators of Station KFOR, an ABC affiliate. Estimated cost of the plant is over $300,000, with an operating overhead of $170,000. There is interlocking ownership here with Station KOIL, in Omaha.

Sir Walter Raleigh Television and Broadcasting Co., at Raleigh, N. C., which gets Channel 28. Company plans a $296,500 station with an operating overhead of $160,000 in the first year. Stockholders are two attorneys, a department store owner and a ship broker.

Amarillo Broadcasting Co., of Amarillo, Tex., channel 10. This company operates Station KFDA, an affiliate of ABC. Wendell Mayes, president and 25% stockholder, also has the controlling interest in KBWD, at Brownsville, Tex., and KNOW at Austin. Gene L. Cagle, also a 25% stockholder, is president of KFJZ at Fort Worth. Other two officers and 25% stockholders are Charles B. Jordan and C. C. Woodson.

LATE LIVE SHOW TO BOW ON DU MONT

Despite the inability of local N. Y. television stations to program successfully on a live basis in the post-11 p.m. hours, WABD, DuMont's N. Y. flagship, is taking the plunge. Station is moving its Bill Silbert disk jockey program from its present cross-the-board daytime slot into the 11:20 to 11:45 p.m. period two nights a week, and from 11:35 to midnight the other three nights.

Station manager Dick Jones is making the move on the assumption that there are still plenty of N. Y. viewers who would prefer to watch a live show instead of feature films in those hours. Silbert's show has guest personalities "dropping in" to pantomime their own recordings. He and his vocalist, Nancy Reed, intro each platter with their chatter.

CBS' $1,800,000 St. Loo TV Bid

Washington, Oct. 21.

CBS applied to the FCC last weekend for a television channel in St. Louis. It wants Channel 4 there and figures to spend $1,800,000 to erect a building and set up studios and technical equipment there. CBS would provide a major operation for the Missouri metropolis, with the operating nut for the first year to be about $800,000, it told the FCC.

Web already has on file applications for channels in Chicago, Boston and Frisco. It now operates two television outlets—WCBS in New York; and KNXT in Hollywood.

CBS also owns a 45% share of WTOP-TV in Washington; 45% of KOV-TV in Pittsburgh; and 47% of WCTN-TV in Minneapolis.

The network owns six standard broadcast stations, five FM stations, and a 25% interest in Bing Crosby Enterprises.

Video Makes Grade With Used Car Dealers; Cleve. Group Hears NBC Exec

Cleveland, Oct. 21.

The National Used Car Dealers Assn., recognizing television as a major advertising factor, included a spokesman from the video industry as a convention speaker for the first time in NUCDA history.

Hamilton Shea, NBC general manager here, spoke on tele advertising on the same panel (17) as did George Bailey, classified advertising manager, Cleveland Plain Dealer, when the used car dealers convened at Hotel Hollenden for a three-day session.

Bailey pointed out that the classified pages are uniquely, dynamically forceful in that the "potential buyer comes to the medium ready to buy, while other forms of advertising set out to attract buyers."

Shea countered that "television makes it a business to put a prospective buyer in the mood to buy," and he added that TV meets the buyer in his home and with a frequency that keeps reminding him of the idea to buy.

Shea also pointed out that a recent TV survey showed that, while the average persons might spend 43 minutes per day reading papers, the average person spends over two hours per day viewing TV.

Mo.'s 3d TV Station

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 21.

Third TV station in the State of Missouri is to be set up here by KFEQ under license granted last week by the FCC. Others are WDAF-TV, Kansas City, and KSD-TV, St. Louis.

KFEQ officials said the new station is expected to be on the air in about nine months after construction permits are granted. It will require expenditures of about $450,000, including a 750-foot prefabricated antenna tower.

New Shows, Billing In WJZ-TV Upbeat

WJZ-TV, N. Y., has come up with an additional billings bonanza and is adding several new commercial shows.

Namm's - Loeser's department stores has bought "Buyer For a Day," which will go into the 11:30 a.m.-12 noon slot, starting Sunday (26). On the same day the station will also preem a new 7:30-8 p.m. participating series with Tiny Fairbanks, who is also on WOR-TV. An ex-WOR-TV feature, wrestling from Ridgewood Grove, will go into the Thursday 10 p.m. slot, effective Nov. 6. Lonny Starr will handle the mike chores, with Sunset Stores picking up the tab.

I. J. Fox, fur firm, will back a film series on Sundays at 1:30-2 p.m., starting Nov. 9. The participating "Movie Carnival" on Sundays, which takes the 10:30-11:30 a.m. period, is SRO.

Paul Mowrey, program topper for the ABC key set Monday (20) as kickoff date for the new package of second run half-hour vidpix, which will be screened on a Monday-Wednesday-Friday basis at 7-7:30 p.m.

TWO PRIMARY TV AFFILIATES FOR NBC

NBC-TV this week picked up two new primary affiliates in what will be single-station markets as soon as the projected TV outlets take the air. New affiliates are WSLS-TV, Roanoke, Va., which is scheduled to launch operations about Dec. 1, and WBRE-TV, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., which takes the air about Dec. 15. Twin radio stations of the two are both primary NBC radio affiliates.

Roanoke station will operate on Channel 10, in the VHF band. Outlet will not be interconnected by the time it takes the air so will be forced to reply on NBC kinescopes at the outset for its network programming. Wilkes-Barre station will operate in the UHF band, on Channel 28, and will be interconnected via radio relay.

ALMOST LIKE OLD TIMES IN AM

Harvest Time

Networks are reaping a November harvest as both Democrats and Republican groups are buying up electioneering time in radio and tele. The 10 p.m.-to-midnight block on AM and TV webs on Nov. 3 will be practically taken over with paid politicals.

Citizens for Eisenhower has bought the four radio and four television networks for the 11 p.m.-to-midnight hour on Nov. 3, for a big Election Eve splurge.

Details of the program are still being worked out, but Gen. Eisenhower will be featured. Additionally, there will be entertainment segments and pickups from various parts of the country. Stations which can't be cleared live will be able to rebroadcast the show, provided it can be done before midnight local time.

Move will give the Republican candidate's supporters "the last say" in electioneering, since some time ago the backers of Gov. Stevenson had sewed up the 10:30-11 p.m. time on radio and TV.

The general's forces are engaging in a pincers move, flanking the governor's period with another buy at 10 p.m. Republicans have bought the 10-10:30 slot on election eve on the radio webs—with the possibility that all four may be inked—and on two TV chains, NBC and ABC.

Other recent network political buys include: The Senator McCarthy Broadcast Dinner Committee has the Mutual web for Monday (27) at 9:30-10 p.m. from the Palmer House, Chi.

Independent Business Men for Sparkman bought the ABC radio skein for 9:30-9:45 p.m. Oct. 27, 28, 29 and 30.

Republican National Committee has bought ABC and ABC-TV for a half-hour on Sunday, with the AM edition pencilled in for 6:30 p.m. and TV time not yet cleared. Clare Booth Luce will be beamed.

Networks to Rotate Election Nite Allocation of TV Relay Facilities

Three television networks have set up a complicated rotation system allocating the coaxial-microrelay facilities on Election Night so that returns can be beamed coast-to-coast on an equitable basis.

Under this setup, ABC-TV will have the westbound facilities, feeding its Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and other western outlets from 8-9 p.m. Starting at 9 o'clock, the webs will rotate use of the hookup in 20-minute takes, with ABC getting the 9-9:20 segment, CBS-TV the 9:20-9:40 period and NBC-TV the 9:40-10 slot. Same order will be kept for the rest of the night.

While one network is feeding its western leg from the east, the other two webs will get a northbound cable out of L. A. so that stations in the Pacific area will have a continuous flow of election news. Western affiliates of the three webs will, of course, be able to get an uninterrupted feed from the east.

Pool arrangements are also being extended to coverage of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates and President Truman. The reason is the limitation of cable-relay links and the cost factor.

Lotsa Chi Coin On Election Cut-Ins

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Chi web-owned and affiliated stations are set to cut themselves in on the Nov. 4 election night coin. Unlike on the political conventions radio-TV coverage when the web bankrollers held onto all but station-break time, the networks each have earmarked two five-minutes each hour for local sale and programming during the presidential balloting roundup.

In the case of the tele stations, particularly, where a lot of regularly sponsored shows will be

Chevalier's 1-Man Show London Preem on BBC

London, Oct. 21.

Opening night of Maurice Chevalier's one-man shop at the Hippodrome next Tuesday (28) will be broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corp. An excerpt from the program including many old faves will be featured.

Radio commentator Brian Johnston will be at the theatre to set the scene for listeners. Chevalier will be accompanied by Fred Freed at the piano.

Hot Stuff

Heat in tele studios isn't produced by hot lights alone, according to Bern C. Benson, temperature control expert of Minneapolis-Honeywell, which designs controls for TV air conditioning.

Body heat of thespers just relaxing in front of a camera is as much as that thrown off by a 100-watt bulb. And when they're "acting their hearts out," they radiate heat equivalent to a 1,000-watt lamp.

Ike's Spot 'Blitz' All Set to Bow; 150G in N.Y. Alone

The spot "blitz" for Gen. Eisenhower kicks off this week in one of the biggest AM-TV saturation campaigns the industry has seen.

The spot project is being handled in critical areas by local committees of Citizens for Eisenhower. and other local groups.

Its size can be approximated from the fact that in New York City alone over $150,000 is being spent on the radio and tele plugs, according to conservative estimates.

The pro-Ike groups last week, gave the radio and TV stations a list of the spots they want. On one TV outlet it asked for some 30 one minute and 20-seconds plugs. On another AM station it ordered 60 spots. In radio many of the positions ordered were available, but in TV most of the adjacencies sought were already occupied.

SET 'CLAUDIA' SERIES FOR BRITISH VIDEO

Rose Franken, author of the "Claudia" series, and her husband, William Brown Meloney, are sailing to England at the invitation of BBC for whom they'll write and produce a series of "Claudia" shows for British video. It's believed theirs will be the only U.S.-originated drama to play to BBC-TV audiences.

The Meloneys plan to stay in England all winter, to do the complete series. A problem at this time is whether to play the show with American or British accents. They'll visit Spain also to see the Spanish legit production of "Claudia" in Madrid.

SPONSORS BUYING UP AVAILABILITIES

Pointing up the renewed interest among agencies and clients in network radio, the CBS web this week wrapped up a $53,000 saturation package deal with Plymouth Motors, sold American Oil its annual New Year's Day "Year of Crisis" show and optioned its Thursday night at 10 slot to American Tobacco for a major network spread. Single week's activity, following other recent CBS and NBC sales. serves to emphasize, according to CBS Radio sales veepee John Karol, that network radio is over the hump and has definitely started on the road back to its onetime heyday status.

Karol returned this week from a series of visits with execs of some of the web's clients and reported they're "highly enthusiastic" about AM's promise of product sales payoff, to the point where they're integrating much of their publicity, both to dealers and customers, with their radio buys. As for agency execs, Karol said that a year ago they were so engrossed with television, it was practically impossible to talk to them about radio. Today, he said, the fever has apparently switched back to radio and agencies are now phoning him, asking "what's available?"

Karol quoted the advertising manager of one top-spending radio-TV sponsor as saying that his family has become highly selective in its video viewing, tuning in now only when there's a show they want to see. After that, the adman told Karol, the family goes back to radio. CBS exec pointed to that as one of a series of straws in the wind.

As for CBS' new sales, Plymouth has bought four net sustainers for the week of Nov. 18 in a saturation deal to kick off its 1953 models. Shows include "Lineup," "Junior Miss," "Gunsmoke" and "Mr. Chameleon." Deal was set through the N. W. Ayer agency. "Year of Crisis," which Amoco bought for New Year's Day, will follow CBS' pickup of the Orange Bowl game from Miami. Show is an annual event, in which CBS correspondents from all over the world are flown in to roundtable on the year's top news events.

Which show Lucky Strike will pick for its optioned Thursday night spot has not been determined. CBS has pencilled in a new musical show starring Nelson Eddy for that period, but will move Eddy to another slot if Luckies desires another package.

Margo Jones Prepping 'Theatre '52' Dramatics As Major TV Showcase

Dallas, Oct. 21.

Margo Jones and her Theatre '52 will broaden their activities to include a national TV network dramatic program, according to a plan that was outlined at the theatre's board of directors meeting.

New project as outlined by Miss Jones will be an auxiliary of the repertory theatre and is still in the formative stage. Tentative plans call for a national network series originating here, titled "Discovery '52." Numerals will change each New Year's Day in the manner of the parent group.

Series will not televise productions of Theatre '52 but will be an entirely separate producing unit. It is probable, however, that theatre-in-the-round techniques will be used, with an audience viewing the program as it is telecast.

The TV plan will expand and strengthen the local theatre facilities with ultimate aim of bringing here an acting group twice the size of the present company. Actors of the larger troupe would alternate between the arena and the TV productions. The TV project would develop new material, new talent and production methods.

William Dubensky would be television coordinator for the group.

Winchell As Key Figure in ABC's Thru-The-Night Election Roundups

ABC's intensive coverage of the election returns on Nov. 4-5, with all regular programs cancelled after 8 p.m. on Election Day, will feature a semi-simulcast setup with much of the results and commentary beamed simultaneously in both media. Web's experience in the Chi nominating conventions showed the advantages accruing when the AM and TV staffs pool their resources rather than work independently.

However, because of video's special requirements, it won't be a fullscale simulcast. Walter Winchell will be key man in the tele setup handling election bulletins with Paul Harvey, midwest ABC gabber, as his ABC-AM counterpart. Handling the electoral college vote analysis will be John Daly for ABC-TV and Elmer Davis for ABC-AM.

Unlike CBS and NBC, which are using "electrical brains" to compute trends, ABC is putting its emphasis on its gab staff. This will include Drew Pearson, pollster Dr. George Gallup, Julian Anthony, Pauline Frederick, Leo Cherne (director, Research Institute of America), Walter Kiernan, Ted Malone, Bryson Rash, Martin Agronsky, George Sokolsky, Erwin D. Canham and Henry Weaver.

Thomas Velotta, ABC news-special events v.p., is handling overall direction, with John Madigan supervising the TV phase and Don Coe taking the AM chores. Velotta said that he has divided his forces into a dozen units, each handling a separate aspect of the situation and each with its own statistical and editorial aides. These units include an overall control group and units for presidential electoral college race, popular vote, vote by states, Senatorial races, House races, gubernatorial contests, a Hollywood centre headed by Quin-

Tallu-Adlai Team

Tallulah Bankhead will introduce Gov. Adlai Stevenson, Demo Presidential candidate, on his Oct. 29 simulcast over ABC (AM & TV).

Airer is the fifth and last in a series of political broadcasts bankrolled by the campaign committee of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and beamed Wednesdays at 10:15-10:30 p.m. Agency is Furman, Feiner.

Video Networks Cut Losses On Election Windup

While the tele webs took a multi-million-dollar shellacking on their coverage of the political conventions last July, their election night roundups will not put them further in the red. "Or if we do lose money," one network exec said, "our losses will be limited."

Reason is that the amount of coin which has to be paid out to bankrollers, due to preemption of their time slots, is small—and predictable. Chains expect that a decision will be in 9 a.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 5. With ABC-TV starting its coverage at 8 p.m. on the big Tuesday and NBC-TV and CBS-TV starting at 9, relatively few spenders will have to be reimbursed for the time and talent knocked off the air. In most cases, since the skeins had several months' advance warning, contracts with clients took into consideration the fact that Nov. 4 telecasts would be out due to the politicalcasts.

Further, owned-and-operated stations and affiliates are getting a windfall in terms of station break spot sales. Availabilities in the post-midnight-to-breakfast stretch were snapped up eagerly, by advertisers who figure there'll be a huge audience staying up the night to get the results.

The webs will, of course, have considerable expense in cable costs, remote pickups, special staffs, production charges, etc. And in view of the fact that Admiral (ABC), Westinghouse (CB) and Philco (NBC) bought the convention-election coverage as package deals, the big losses which the chains sustained on the July telecasts will heavily overbalance anything they take in on the Nov. 4-5 phase.

Westinghouse Retains 'Winner' Till Election Eve

Westinghouse is expanding its "Pick the Winner" series on CBS-TV to the eve of election, deciding this week to air the final show in the series in the 10 to 10:30 p.m. slot Nov. 3. Westinghouse decided on the "Winner" show that night since, with the Democrats having already pre-empted the 10:30 to 11 period (usually occupied by the second half of Westinghouse's "Studio One") for a speech by Presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson, the sponsor did not want to attempt a half-hour version of "Studio One" in the 10 to 10:30 time.

"Winner," originally bought by Westinghouse as part of its conventions-election night coverage on CBS and designed to help get out the vote, has been airing Thursday nights at 9. New Lucky Strike vidfilm package, "Biff Baker, USA," moves into that period.

ABC Affiliates To Share on Cut-Ins

ABC's election coverage format will permit local stations to cut-in with local returns at 8:25 p.m., 8:55 p.m. at half-hour intervals throughout the night. The five-minute spots on both AM and TV are designed to provide outlets with some local income as well as an opening for their local news. Web is, however, providing a feed during those periods for areas where the offices were decided earlier.

On WJZ-TV, N. Y., the package was bought by Amoco, which is taking one-minute announcements, with Newsweek mag getting 20-second plugs and Farberware 10-second breaks. Total package is bringing the Gotham key $11,000 of which about $6,000 represents the Amoco share.

Deal was made for the N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun to provide the editorial coverage.

'We, The Undersigned' Sets Own RWG Slate

We, The Undersigned, anti-Communist group in the Radio Writers Guild, has put up its own slate in the union's Nov. 6 elections.

Candidates are Laurence Hammond for eastern v.p.; and Stephen Flanders and Tom Langan, for the council, repping staff scripters. Undersigned nominees for the council, repping freelancers, are Daisy Amoury, David Davidson, Henry Denker, Harry Gersh, Paul Manning, E. R. (Jerry) McGill, Robert Shaw and James Shean.

Group, which opposes the RWG administration ticket, has distributed literature attacking "Communist influence" in the RWG and citing charges made against RWG administration supporters in Congressional probes.

ABBOTT & COSTELLO SHOW

(Colgate Comedy Hour)
With Lizabeth Scott, Gisele MacKenzie, Les Dassie, Sid Fields, Joe Kirk, Bobby Barbour
Producer-director: Ed Sobol
Writers: John Grant, Elwood Ullman
Music director: Al Goodman
Sunday, 8 p.m., 60 Mins.
COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET
NBC-TV, from Hollywood

(Sherman & Marquette, Bates)

Abbott & Costello in their first TV show of the season for Colgate offered a comedy show lacking in comedy.

There's little fault to be found with using old material, per se, since TV is certainly all-consuming in devouring material. It's just that A&C, on their seasonal opener, were not funny doing the old stuff. It was the old comedian-straightman format, and it was, unfortunately, much too hackneyed in the way A&C dished it out.

For s.a., they added Lizabeth Scott, cinemactress, but she was unable to add to the show. There were a few enchanting moments when Gisele MacKenzie sang a couple of pops with a rich voice, excellent for either rhythm or ballads.

Les Dassie, male acro pair, had a few lively moments, the diminutive duo excelling with their spaghetti-like twists and leaps, plus the comedy stuff.

As for the headlining pair, they had an able feed in Sid Fields in the sketches.

Then there was the A&C bit in which Costello recommended an aspirin for Abbott's headache. Whereupon the latter harangued Costello for having the gall "to practice medicine without a license."

Miss Scott had her "big" moments during a sleeper-train bit, and also in the Daniel Boone sketch, both unfunny and unflattering to her.

UNION-RPI FOOTBALL GAME

With Bob Bender, Bill Carpenter, Ernie Tetrault
153 Mins.; Sat. (18), 2 p.m.
GENERAL MOTORS
WRGB, Schenectady

WRGB's televising of the Union-Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute traditional game, as a substitute for the network Yale-Cornell contest—by permission of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.—gave area viewers first opportunity to see a local gridiron origination. The General Electric Co. station capitalized on it with a generally good technical pickup and a moderately fair commentary by sportscaster Bob Bender. Bill Carpenter, also of WGY, handled the color and recap; Ernie Tetrault, of WRGB, interviewed Presidents Livingston Houston, of RPI, and Carter Davidson, of Union, on the field between halves.

The presentation of the pair, and their emphasis on the fact the two institutions, maintaining high scholastic standards, keep athletics in proper perspective—"with amateurs, not professionals, participating"—symbolized an obvious situation. This was football without the excitement, showmanship and panoply of the Big Time brand in huge stadia. Two elevens who had not won a victory this season met for the 50th time. Union scored a decisive triumph, by 42 to 6, at Alexander Field in Schenectady. The cameras showed that it had only bleachers. One end section seemed to be empty—whether this was due to the telecast, an angle closely studied, could not be immediately determined.

The orthicons demonstrated quickly and conclusively that these were not two titans gripped in mortal combat, although Union did show to advantage after a fumbling start. The camera work was sound for the most part, vividly catching long Union runs, and near the end, short but sure RPI passes. Bender started rather slow and uncertain, but improved as the game progressed. He spoke quietly and easily, using plenty of dead air. Knowledge of football appeared adequate. The spotting was not too sharp in the early moments; substitutions were unannounced. Weather and wind were seemingly ignored. Time checks were not aired until the second half.

Carpenter sounded briskest in tabbing scores of other games. His analysis, toward the finale, sharpened. Voice was a bit weak in several commercials when crowd noise overlapped. Tetrault registered nicely in the interview. Cadillac was plugged in the first canter, and Chevrolet, in the second—live, filmed and super-imposition. GE displayed a sound idea of public service in arranging the telecast.

INSIDE ISRAEL

With Bartley C. Crum; Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, guest; Melvin Elliot, announcer Producer: Sam Elfert
Director: Barry Shear
Writer: Crum
15 Mins.; Sun., 1:30 p.m.
SCRIP FOR ISRAEL
WABD-DuMont, N. Y.

"Inside Israel," Bartley Crum's commentary show on the new Middle East nation, which formerly aired over a local N. Y. radio indie, has made the switch to television with virtually no change in format. Video version, which preemed Sunday (19) over DuMont's N. Y. flagship, WABD, will probably play to a limited audience because of the limited appeal of its program content but should both please and inform those who tune in.

Initialer showed a lack of sufficient preparation, which forced Crum to give almost a brushoff to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, his guest. By the time he outlined the show's purpose and discoursed at length on the economic aspects of Israel (complete with a film clip of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion), there was time for Mrs. Roosevelt to answer only two short questions. It left viewers feeling cheated that she could not have spoken more.

Crum, a lawyer and author, is also a former appointee to the Anglo-Palestine Commission of Inquiry, so obviously knows whereof he speaks. He conducted himself learnedly on the preem. Show is bankrolled by Scrip for Israel, an outfit which arranges for Americans to send money certificates to friends and relatives in Israel for the purpose of buying food and other articles. Announcer Melvin Elliot did an okay job on the blurbs, but they were too long for the quarter-hour show.

ALL ABOARD

With Skeets Minton, Junie Keegan; Eddie Bracken, guest Writers: Mort Lewis, Lawrence Markes
Producer: Lester Lewis
Director: Frederic A. Carr
15 Mins.; Sun., 12:15 p.m.
LIONEL CORP.
CBS-TV, from New York

"All Aboard," a 15-minute hodgepodge designed to plug Lionel model trains, preemed on CBS-TV Sunday (19). In a case such as this the sponsor's own product could easily carry the entertainment ball on its own. But for devious reasons the show's producer has seen fit to throw in ventriloquist Skeets Minton, the latter's dummy, teenage songstress Junie Keegan and film actor Eddie Bracken as guest.

Contributions of Minton's puppet were confined to fair imitations of Johnnie Ray, Billy Eckstine and Mario Lanza plus some weak patter about his school work. Minton was so busy getting in sundry plugs for Bracken's "latest picture" etc., that the actor hardly had a chance to push in a word of his own. Miss Keegan warbled an acceptable "You Made Me Love You." Primary market for toy trains are boys in the five to 15 age bracket. They want to watch the trains in action. Anything besides rolling stock is superfluous.

ANNIVERSARY FASHION SHOW

With Livingston Gilbert, Ed Kallay, others Producer-writer: Dick Turpen
Director: Burt Blackwell
30 Mins., Tues. (14), 8 p.m.
LEVY BROS.
WAVE-TV, Louisville

(Boone)

Commendable one-shot effort by the WAVE-TV staff for the town's leading clothier highlighted latter's 91st anniversary. While the session could be rated as practically 100% commercial, models, both adult and juve, made several changes of costume which certainly must have been of interest to all ages of viewers. Sports clothes, business outfits and the like were well modeled by local amateurs.

Half-hour came off in three sequences, first a living room scene with models in conventional home outfits, and discussing the football game which they were ready to attend. Football game then followed, with actors in the stands, attired in heavy outer clothes. Final sequence had the young adults at a dance following the game. This particular segment was too long drawn out, and had the participants obviously stalling for time.

One interesting facet of the show was the exhibiting of old prints, showing styles of men and women, which appeared in the first edition of Harper's Bazaar. Copies were borrowed from the local public library, and were well described by Ed Kallay and Livingston Gil-

CHICAGO SYMPHONY POPS TV

With George Schick, conducting; Ken Nordine, announcer Producer: W. G. T. Hyer
Director: Barry McKinley
30 Mins.; Wed., 8:30 p.m.
CHICAGO TITLE & TRUST
WGN-TV, Chicago

(Buchen)

Here's a rarity—a local offering that has the class to compete on equal terms with most network ventures. Now into its second season, this TV-tailored pops concert featuring selected first-chair AFMers from the Chicago Symphony debuted the new series (15) in strictly top shelf fashion. Perhaps even more so than last year, this musical oasis seems destined to go over big with large segments of the Chi tele clientele.

Symphony group is being batoned the first few shows by associate conductor George Schick, with regular maestro Rafael Kubelik coming aboard later. On this teeoff stanza, the program featured slightly bobbed longhair, but of sufficient quality for broad appeal without alienating the "music lovers." It was a neatly balanced package from the "Marriage of Figaro" Overture opener to the closing "Knightsbridge March." An excellent spicer was Schick's keyboarding of Morton Gould's arrangement of Tchaikovsky's "October."

And the tele showcasing set up by producer W. G. T. (Bill) Hyer, of Television Airshows, and director Barry McKinley and his WGN-TV lensers did full justice to the lush musical assemblage. Calling for some fast cutting, the cameras roamed through the orchestra, picking up the featured sections and soloists highlighted by the particular number. It was an unobtrusive yet effective video commentary to the music.

Ken Nordine again this year serves as host and does a fine job. He also does the spiels for Chicago Title & Trust, with the main plug wisely spaced midway.

FRONTIERS OF FAITH

(The Water)
With Rev. Michael F. Mullen, Ann Sullivan, Billy Coleman, Joan Shea, Joseph Fallon, Patsy O'Shea, Leopold Badia
Write: John Pinto
Producers: Dean McCarthy, Doris Ann
Director: Martin Hoade
30 Mins.; Sun., 1:30 p.m.
NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CATHOLIC MEN
NBC-TV, from New York

As part of a series of religious dramas explaining the Sacramentals, the National Council of Catholic Men presented "The Water" via some 47 NBC-TV stations Sunday (19). This half-hour playlet clarified the meaning and use of Holy Water as last week's "The Sign" interpreted the symbolism of the Sign of the Cross. Last in the series is next Sunday's (26) "The Medal" which concerns Medals and Images.

Written by John Pinto, "The Water" emerged as a moving portrayal of how a Catholic mother used Holy Water during a thunderstorm to dispel fears of her daughter. The use of Holy Water, she pointed out, is an external sign of faith and "helps us to fulfill our duties of worship to God." Further light is provided in a sequence where a priest tells a small boy that "reverent use of Holy Water is a prayer in action."

Major points brought out in the drama were summed up at the program's close by narrator Rev. Michael F. Mullen. Headed by Leopold Badia as the priest, the cast contributed fine performances in keeping with the dignity of the subject. Withal, both the National Council of Catholic Men and NBC-TV are to be commended for their collaboration on a high type religious airer. For its script was so devised that the subject undoubtedly was of interest to all faiths.

IN THIS WE BELIEVE

Director: Robert Brewer
Writer: Robert Elverman
30 Mins., Sun., 5:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WAVE-TV, Louisville

Ex-radio publicist Bob Elverman, now publicizing Community Chest activities, has the background to turn out topnotch scripts for the TV medium, and this one is one of his best. Program was an explanation of how the viewer might shape the future of the child, whether from a broken home, or the child of an unwed mother.

Panel of reps from various religious faiths discussed this important subject, and each stressed how important Red Feather services are. Discussion was interspersed with Negro quartet, the Hughletts. Sepia foursome showed nice vocal balance in spirituals, and were a bright spot in an array of statistics anent the Community Chest services. Quartet made a nice impression with their vocalizing of "I've Done My Work," "Battle Hymn Of The Republic" and "Finlandia."

Show was an excellent example of cooperation among different faiths in a common cause, and also a fine job of placing the community effort before the public via the TV medium. Production and scripting of shows seen locally during the current Red Feather campaign are much advanced in presentation over efforts last year, and should be productive of much good to the Community Chest effort.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

NBC-TV's nasal operations starring Jimmy Durante continue to provide sock entertainment. Saturday's (18) edition of "All Star Revue," in which the Schnoz was abetted by Frank Sinatra and Fifi D'Orsay, in addition to his regular troupe, scored solidly.

Durante got a topical flavor with his "If Washington Needs Me, I'll Answer the Call" routine, which also involved some gals as his mock presidential cabinet. Sinatra showed that he's a hep comic when paired with a funnyman of Durante's ability. There was a strong sketch in which Durante and Sinatra met in a barber shop, with the thin man switching off the radio when it played a disk by Frankie Laine; then it was Durante's turn to dial out when the set gave forth with Jose Iturbi at the piano. Miss D'Orsay also registered strongly in her role as a siren unable to lure Durante from his interest in his concerto. Entire segment spoofed Hollywood biopix deftly. Columnist Sheilah Graham, incidentally, played herself in this section.

Canter wound, per usual, with the Club Durant doings, featuring Eddie Jackson and other Durante regulars—Candy Candido, Jules Bufano and Jack Roth. Production, which originated from the web's new Burbank studios, was topflight. Joseph Santley was producer-director, with Roy Bargy handling the musical chores, Charles Isaacs and Jack Elinson scripting, Jackie Barnett contributing the special lyrics, Aida Broadbent doing the choreography and Sid Smith as TV director.

Bril.

Elaine Carrington, most prolific of the radio soap opera scripters, turned her talents to TV Monday night (20) with an hour-long original play on NBC-TV's Robert Montgomery show. Titled "Keane Vs. Keane," the yarn about a poor little rich girl marrying a poor boy made for absorbing drama, with any soapera overtones discernible only to those looking for them. Scripting finesse evidenced that Miss Carrington will be welcome on TV any time, if she can take the time off from her radio writing chores.

Story's denouement was telegraphed but events leading up to the final curtain sustained maximum viewer interest, as delineated by a standout cast working under the deft direction of Norman Felton and producer Montgomery. Wanda Hendrix starred as the millionairess who fell for and married the poor guy who stopped to aid her when her car stalled on a highway. James Daly etched a sensitive characterization as her husband, who naturally discovered he loved her after the judge had granted them a divorce. Barbara Baxley turned in a near-perfect carbon of a femme five-letter word, who persuaded Daly to marry Miss Hendrix for her dough, then divorce her so they could get together. Tom Coley, as Miss Hendrix's friend in need, topped a good supporting cast, which included Jean Stapleton and Donald McKee.

As usual on Montgomery's shows, he backed the action with some lush-looking sets designed by Syrjala and his production techniques, including the camera work, use of rear-screen projection, etc., gave the show a major Hollywood film studio look. Montgomery again utilized doubles for the lead players, in conjunction with prerecorded sound tracks, so that the stars could get more easily from one set to another, and the process came off without a hitch.

CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" took an obvious breather Sunday night (19). Show had a fistful of acts, including some of top-name quality, but none to give the stanza any particular perk or sparkle. And, while it played comparatively well, the overall result was only an average affair, making for pleasant viewing at most. Maybe co-producers Ed Sullivan and Marlo Lewis have conditioned viewers to something better via their bio shows, "story" productions, etc., to a point where straight vaudeo presentations no longer suffice.

Show teed off with a funny sight gag, including orch leader Ray Bloch and Metopera soprano Hilde Gueden. Emcee Sullivan then brought back comic Harry Mimmo (he was on the preceding week as well) for an overlong skit about Mimmo's not getting paid. Miss Gueden, in the big production number, impressed with both her voice and looks on "One Night of Love" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." Arnell & Brask, unicycle act, scored with a series of difficult tricks, best of which had the gal spinning on a trapeze which was balanced on the shoulders of her male partner as he cycled around the stage.

Sullivan teamed vocalist Pearl Bailey and her tapstering brother, Bill, for one of the session's brighter spots. Duo duetted a neat "Takes Two to Tango" and then worked solo, with Miss Bailey registering as usual with her fatigued mien and audience asides and her brother scoring with some tap takeoffs of the late Bill Robinson. Jay Sisler and his two dogs, imported from the Roy Rogers rodeo current at Madison Square Garden, must have pleased the kids, and Jay Marshall socked across his standard magico-ventriloquist routine. Ballerina Nanci Crompton and comic Will Mahoney teamed for a takeoff on "Cinderella," which seemed rather pointless and which wasted Mahoney's talents.

As usual on this show, the Lincoln-Mercury commercials were tops.

Stal.

The Max Liebman - produced NBC-TV "Your Show of Shows" changed its pace somewhat last Saturday with the selection of ballerina Alicia Markova as the emcee of the session. Miss Markova, one of the more gifted premiere danseuses, projected a charming facade. Her introes were in a small, cultured voice. They lacked firm authority, but didn't intrude upon the performers and sketches that followed.

In direct contrast to her emceeing was the sureness of her ballet chores. Backed by a well-drilled chorus, Miss Markova negotiated excerpts from "Les Sylphides" with James Starbuck assisting. Miss Markova started out slowly enough, but as she progressed into this number, her skill, charm and delicacy became more apparent. It was a rewarding interval on the show.

Rest of "Show of Shows" was in the usual groove. Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca were in good form in their various contributions. Topper of their collaboration was a takeoff on "High Noon" which had some genuine comedic moments. Marguerite Piazza and Jack Russell hit it well with their duetting of "Pagliacci" and Judy Johnson and Bill Hayes warbled in the pop vein acceptably. The Billy Williams Quartet similarly hit their mark with a pair of tunes.

This stanza maintains its quality and style with virtually every appearance. It's true that many of its efforts look like they've been seen previously, but even at that, Liebman is helming a program that offers as high a quotient of variety entertainment as any show on the spectrum.

Elmo Roper, in a provocative ad lib interview with James Fleming on "Today" over NBC-TV (15), listing his poll figures as 36% for Eisenhower, 33% for Stevenson, and 31% "conflicting forces" or "uncertain," said that neither he nor any other pulse-taker could now predict what the election result would be on Nov. 4. Poll takers had corrected "some" of the mistakes made in the 1948 presidential election, but Roper did "not know" whether "all" had been corrected. The election results will tell that.

The 31% in the "conflicting forces" group "could swing back and forth in the remaining weeks of the campaign," Roper observed. It principally comprises three categories: young people, housewives and less-educated persons normally voting the Democratic ticket "who do not know Stevenson, and do know Eisenhower." Articulate, candid and direct, Roper listed six main issues (shown on a chart), three favoring the Democrats and three the Republicans. In answer to joking questions by Fleming and by Dave Garroway, the poll-taker-NBC radio broadcaster conceded that he could be classified in the "conflicting forces" division.

BALANCE YOUR BUDGET

With Bert Parks, Lynn Connors, Les Vines, contestants
Producer: Peter Arnell
Director: Sherman Marks
30 Mins.; Sat. 10 p.m.
SEALY MATTRESS
CBS-TV, from N.Y.
(Olian & Bronner)

"Balance Your Budget" is an audience participation quiz with variations on the familiar theme. The Louis G. Cowan package starts each contestant out with money in the amount specified by his so-called "budget problem." At the windup, each quizzee tries to open a "treasure chest" with a key previously selected by him from a large number of 'em on a keyboard. The right key wins the boodle.

At the opening show (18), the first contestant happened to choose the right key and earned (if that is the word) a largesse of $2,000 without going into conniptions about his good fortune. The ultimate winner had been slated, according to announcement by conferencier Bert Parks, to try his key first. For reasons which are probably more apparent behind the scenes than in a living room, he was the third and last to insert the key. A kind of third-act climax, no doubt.

It's a good thing Parks heads up this one. He's a crackerjack handler of contestants and an ebullient fellow who can spark a cake of ice. Even with Parks, "Balance Your Budget" is hardly more than a routine entry. The cheesecake slant is supplied by Lynn Connors, a curvaceous lass who's billed as "Miss Posture Perfect" by the skip-a-week sponsor, whose plug is for PosturePedic Mattresses. Miss Connors' sole function is to escort the contestants front and centre for their workouts. This she performs posture-perfect in a one-piece bathing suit. The workouts consist in answering questions which are difficult only for those with extremely low-grade i.q.'s The "budget problems" serve as a framework for the interviews by Parks. Trau.

LEAVE IT TO LARRY

With Eddie Albert, Ed Begley, Katharine Bard, Olive Templeton, Bradley Huston, Gene Lee, Patsy Bruder
Producer: Leo Solomon
Directors: Mervyn Nelson, Allen Reisner
Writers: Solomon, Vinnie Bogert, Billy Friedberg
30 Mins.; Tues., 8 p.m.
CBS-TV, from N.Y.

CBS-TV has had almost a monopoly during the last few seasons on good situation comedy, but "Leave It to Larry" won't do anything to cement that hold. New series, which bowed in last Tuesday night (14), has good star value in Eddie Albert, but the whole show apparently is being built around material that might serve for one good sketch in a vaudeo production. As with all such shows, it's the scripting which counts and "Larry" will need much better writing if it's to pay off.

Show is one of a group which CBS was juggling to fill its two open program holes—Tuesdays and Saturdays at 8. With Milton Berle holding down the Tuesday night period on the rival NBC web, any show CBS tossed in there would have had its work cut out for it. As a result, CBS would have been much wiser to spotlight its new Red Buttons show, which also preemed last week, in the 8 to 8:30 period Tuesdays, since it has much better prospects (see separate review). Buttons would have given the web a better fighting chance against Berle. Then, once the audience was tuned in, "Larry" might have followed at 8:30.

Format of "Larry" has Albert as the likeable but bumbling head of a family, whose life isn't made any easier by the fact that his domineering father-in-law is his boss. Initialer was built around a series of grossly exaggerated happenings when Albert forgot to mail the checks for his phone, gas, electricity, milk bills, etc. Ed Begley, as the father-in-law, was trying to swing a business loan from the bank and invited the bank prez and his wife to Albert's home for dinner. Naturally, that was the night they shut off his gas and electricity.

Producer Leo Solomon made a noble effort to bulwark home viewers' laughs by having the show play to a live studio audience. But the offscreen applause and laughter sounded almost patently phony, as though a stage manager was wildly waving his arms during the performance to cue the reaction. Another flaw was use of a gag situation which was seen last year on Alan Young's video show. Albert, Begley, Katharine Bard (as Albert's wife) and the rest of the cast turned in creditable jobs, but they couldn't rise above their lines. Production mountings and camera work were good. Stal.

U.S.A. CANTEEN

With Jane Froman; Eddie Fisher, Jack Carter, guests
Writer: Howard Teichmann
Director: Byron Paul
Producer: Irving Mansfield
30 Mins.; Sat., 9 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from N.Y.

"U.S.A. Canteen," which CBS-TV has primed with one of its top producer-director teams in an effort to challenge the NBC-TV "Your Show of Shows" competition, shapes up as an ingratiating half-hour session, sparked by Jane Froman's excellent warbling and charming personality. Firstrate ingredients, including initial guest shots by Eddie Fisher and Jack Carter, failed, however, to jell into the hoped-for heavyweight punch in the Saturday night program arena.

Miss Froman, whose comeback after her airplane accident during World War II appears complete, is a top song interpreter but, on the kickoff stanza (18), she was handicapped by a routine format. The setting is an Armed Services canteen and the show is given a khaki coloring via some of the costuming and ballet sequences, including the precision drill marching of an infantry battalion which opened the preem session. It plays, however, as a straight variety show and, as such, the pace of the opener was on the pedestrian side.

Aside from Miss Froman, who was standout in her hostessing and in her delivery of a brace of ballads, Eddie Fisher made the standout impression. The singer, a pfc. just returned from Korea, was unfortunately given little to do. He did one number, "Everything I Have Is Yours," and made a brief pitch for the blood donor program. Fisher's modesty and boyishness clicked all the way and rated a bigger showcasing.

The other guest, Jack Carter, was only in fair form. Carter, in GI uniform, was okay in his gag patter about Army life but wound up limply singing an unfunny special material number, "He Was A Jerk," with two other male singers.

Miss Froman opened strongly with "It's A Big Wide Wonderful World" and segued neatly in "Hello, Young Lovers," with a ballet accompaniment. Her closing number, "You Belong To Me," also registered solidly, with Miss Froman showing a fluidity of motion across the stage that bespoke her complete recovery. The ballet choreography was along strictly conventional lines. Herm.

JUNIOR PRESS CONFERENCE

With Ruth Geri Hagy, moderator
Producer: Mrs. Hagy
Director: Roddy Rogers
30 Mins.: Sun., 11:30 a.m.
WFIL-TV, from Philadelphia

New current events session (j.g.), an idea of newspaperwoman Ruth Geri Hagy, has editors of high school and college papers interviewing the shapers of national and world policies. Program of special interest in local TV and press circles as Mrs. Hagy is the women's club editor of the Evening Bulletin and director of the Bulletin Forum, while WFIL-TV is owned and operated by a rival newspaper, the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Preem topic (19) was "Youth and the Election." Rep. Walter N. Judd (Rep., Minn.) answered Democratic and Republican quizzers by going off into anti-Administration tirades and pro-Eisenhower salutes. Chief interest of the collegiate reporters was Korea. The calm and to-the-point interrogation of the youngsters was in marked contrast to the very animated Judd. The Congressman informed that the working press was biased, the news having been slanted pro-Democratic since 1936. The reporters got away with this, Judd explained "because their editors go home at 6."

Like other panels, time had to be called in the middle of a sentence, the subject matter at times running away with the speakers. There were four interviewers, from Yale, Pennsylvania, Harvard and the University of Miami. Strength of show rests in the calibre of the students, and "Junior Press Conference" break-in was lively and intelligent as well as topical.

Mrs. Hagy's contribution as moderator was unobtrusive but effective. As the producer, Mrs. Hagy's prime asset is the calibre of the guests she is able to attract. Through her contacts with the Bulletin Forum she has an impressive array of personalities on call. Next week's guests, for example, will be Sen. Estes Kefauver and Mrs. Kefauver. Gagh.

ARTHUR MURRAY PARTY

With Kathryn Murray, Bert Wheeler, Mary McCarty, Tony Bennett, The Cabots, Ray Carter's Orch
Director: Coby Ruskin
30 Mins.; Sun., 10 p.m.
ARTHUR MURRAY STUDIOS
DuMont, from New York
(Ruthrauff & Ryan)

"Arthur Murray Party" has waltzed around all four networks and is now back on DuMont. It seems to be at its best, adding up to a fair variety show with good marquee names providing an audience draw. On the second bill Sunday (19), lineup included Bert Wheeler, Mary McCarty, Tony Bennett and the Cabots.

Wheeler did a duo comedy routine with femcee Kathryn Murray, in which she outlined a scenario for a picture in which Wheeler would play a straight dramatic role. Bit had Wheeler doing the straight part for Mrs. Murray and didn't register strong. Team was shown to better advantage in a terp segment. Bennett put over an effective rendition of "Stay Where You Are" and Miss McCarty was solid in her amusing "Little Things Meant So Much To Me" vocal. The Cabots (two men and a gal) opened with some sprightly hoofing and the male members of the trio joined Mrs. Murray for a humorous dance at the close. Ray Carter orch provided a tasteful musical backdrop.

From the commercial point of view, "Party" does a good job. It's set in a festive ballroom atmosphere, which makes an excellent framework for a dancing lesson pitch. Buildup for Mrs. M. as a video personality also is a plus for the Murray schools. Plugs themselves, stressing the "stop being a wallflower and get some fun out of life" theme, should prove potent. A score of Murray teachers are part of the attractive decor and also did a "mystery dance." Guessing the answer to the simple question entitles viewers to two free lessons. And since few will learn to dance in such a hurray, it's a smart come-on for the bankroller. Bril.

LIVE LIKE A MILLIONAIRE

With John Nelson, emcee; Ivan Ditmars Orch
Producer: Jerry Bowne
Director: Ed Leftwich
30 Mins.; Sat., 7:30 p.m.
CHARLES ANTELL
ABC-TV, from New York

This Masterson - Reddy - Nelson package is a passable talent hunt stanza. Format calls for kids to bring on their performing parents, three acts per show, with the winning family getting a cash prize (one week's interest on $1,000,000) and a week at a resort.

On the opening telecast Saturday (18) the talent included a so-so male singer, a mild comic and a clicko pair of acro hoofers who lacked polish but had a zesty turn. Terpers won the audience nod.

On the whole the bill needed sparking. As for the kids, they were cute and emcee John Nelson (one of the "Three Johns" in the package firm) did a good job in spieling with them naturally. He did, however, hoke it up somewhat by getting down on his knees to talk to one of the moppets. In a couple of instances, cameras cut to a shot of a kid chewing gum or watching his parent intently. Production was on the tentative side. Commercials bordered on the pitchman approach, technique which Charles Antell first used in his spot TV splurge. As handled it wasn't as well suited to the conventional commercial setup. Bril.

TELL ME A GOOD ONE

With Gale Robbins, Dick Hazard and guests Matty Malneck, Jack Douglas, Sid Dorfman, Sol Meyer, Hal Kanter
Producer: Roley Langley
Director: Dave Harvey
30 Mins.; Thurs., 10:30 p.m.
KTTV, Hollywood

The grim difference between theory and practice is aptly illustrated by this new panel show in which gagwriters are required to provide adlib humor. Judging by the opener, some trade reputations may be blasted by this program which could be called "wits' end."

Gimmick, a switch on "Can You Top This," has Gale Robbins singing some of the tunes of the week's guest composer (Matty Malneck drew first honors) with the scribes then offering stories or plots suggested to them by the tunes. It's a job for a real wit and writers Jack Douglas, Sid Dorfman, Sol Meyer and Hal Kanter looked as if they couldn't wait to get back to the warmth and comfort of the files.

Miss Robbins' singing and interviewing is okay as is the piano work of Dick Hazard, but badly placed microphones frequently permit the keyboarding to drown out the interview and commercial segs. Kap.

RED BUTTONS SHOW

With Dorothy Jolliffe, Howard Smith, Allan Walker, others; Elliot Lawrence, music
Producer: Jess Kimmel
Director: Peter Kass
Writers: Joe Stein, Will Glickman, Larry Gelbart, Sam Locke
30 Mins.; Tues., 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from N.Y.

CBS-TV has a surefire winner in this one, and one which should give the web its long-sought chance to dent Milton Berle, airing directly opposite on the rival NBC network. Show also establishes Red Buttons as a bright new video comic, and one who will probably emerge as the top entry in the 1952-53 season. It might take a while for Buttons to cement his hold on this hotly-contested Tuesday night spot, but once he does, CBS should have little trouble in finding both an audience and a sponsor for his shenanigans.

Buttons, incidentally, is much the same type comic as Berle, displaying good versatility in the stand-up gagging department, as a skit player and in song and dance. Although comparatively young, he has a lengthy background in burlesque, the borscht circuit, legit, vaude and niteries, all of which was evident in the easy manner with which he preemed last Tuesday night (14). He also displayed the correct proportion of humility, which should win him friends as well as viewers.

Judging from the initial stanza, his show basically is a revue, since it comprised two sketches with a short musical number between. As with any such program, it's the writing that counts, and Buttons was blessed with some socko material, penned by a quartet of scritpers—Joe Stein, Will Glickman, Larry Gelbart and Sam Locke. First sketch, which had a none-too-subtle gibe at the CBS brass, showed how Buttons, as messenger boy for a delicatessen, got his video job. He received a solid assist in this one from Howard Smith. Second sketch had him as a traveling salesman, returning dog-tired from a road trip only to run into his wife's bridge club Dorothy Jolliffe, a real looker, assisted him competently as his wife.

That CBS is sparing little expense in building the show was proved by the solid-looking sets, number of extras, writing stable and fact that orch leader Elliott Lawrence is doing the musical backing. Although he's not fronting his own band, Lawrence did a fine job of helping Buttons build the yocks. Withal, the show marks the entrance of a welcome new star and new Tuesday night stanza to the TV races. Stal.

BILLY DANIELS SHOW

With Jimmy Blaine, Benny Payne and trio
Producer-writer: Fred Heider
Director: Alex Segal
15 Mins.; Sun., 6:30 p.m.
VITAMIN CORP.
ABC-TV, from N. Y.
(Kastor, Farrell, Chesley & Clifford)

For a prime exponent of that socko oldtime showmanship such as displayed by Al Jolson, Sophie Tucker, et al, there's probably no better example among the male singers right now than Billy Daniels. It was to have been expected, then, that the intimate qualities of television would have made for a near-perfect projection of his talents. And that's just about what ABC-TV has in this new Sunday evening stanza, which seems all too short in its 15-minute running time. Show directly precedes Walter Winchell's new TV'ing but any audience Daniels lures, and it's sure to be a big one, he rates strictly on his own.

Show is directed by Alex Segal, who won his TV spurs last season for his imaginative staging of ABC's "Celanese Theatre," but it's all Daniels. His infectious personality helps him sell the bounce tunes best, with his unique arm-waving and other mannerisms. But his ballad renditions are equally good, evidencing a fine sense of feeling for the lyrics. Benny Payne, Daniels' perennial accompanist, is on hand to front a smooth-sounding trio and to join the vocalist in at least one tune each session.

On the show caught (19), Daniels mixed his numbers neatly, faring best with "Begin the Beguine" and "Funny That Way." Show is staged on an attractive set and Segal displayed his camera technique with his on-cue cutting. Jimmy Blaine, who vocalized himself on the late "Stop the Music" shows, did a competent job as emcee and commercial spieler. Show is bankrolled by Vitamin Corp. for its Rybutol product. Stal.

NBC TELEVISION OPERA
(Billy Budd)

With Theodore Uppman, Andrew McKinley, Leon Lishner, Kenneth Smith, David Williams, Paul Ukena, Robert Holland, Robert Goss; Peter Herman Adler, conductor
Composer: Benjamin Britten
Producer: Samuel Chotzinoff
Music, Artistic Director: Adler
Associate Producer: Charles Polacheck
TV Director: Kirk Browning
90 Mins., Sun., 2:30 p.m. (19)
NBC-TV, from New York

NBC's Television Opera Theatre company did itself proud last Sunday afternoon (19) when it inaugurated its '52-'53 season with Benjamin Britten's new opera, "Billy Budd," based on the Herman Melville novel which only a couple seasons back was transformed into a legit play on Broadway. This was the first performance in the U. S. of the opera, which was given a 90-minute video adaptation specially for NBC (complete opera, running three hours, had its world premiere in London in December, '51).

The standard set on last Sunday's presentation, while lacking the emotional appeal and overwhelming charm of NBC-TV's performance last Christmas of Gian-Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and Night Visitors," nonetheless bodes well for the future of opera via video. With the scheduled repeat of "Amahl," with the new Leonard Bernstein opera next on the NBC-TV roster, and with the Ford Foundation "Omnibus" series on CBS-TV providing a major showcase for three studio-created Metropolitan Opera performances, the '52-'53 opera season offers TV its most artistic challenge to date.

To bring to TV viewers, most of whom are novices to the realm of opera, a new and original work represents a display of unusual courage. That producer Samuel Chotzinoff, music director Peter Herman Adler, the fine cast and supporting technicians brought it off with such artistic appreciation and finesse, reaffirms the exciting potential for opera in TV.

There's no doubt that in "Billy Budd" TV picked a tough one. Basically a morality play with a rather elusive message of good vs. evil to propound, its appeal is not too general. Yet here was an instance where Britten's operatic score almost overcame the inadequacies of the drama and breathed new life into the strange ship and its crew. Skillful use of visual continuity budged the lebretto in several spots.

As a TV production, it came off with hardly a flaw, certainly revealing painstaking rehearsal. The slick designing job by William Molyneaux, sympathetic understanding of the camera direction, integration of technical and artistic facets, and above all the sustained mood and feeling—all contributed toward making "Billy Budd" an operatic experience, even for those who might argue as to its permanence on opera's repertoire.

But it's the combination of Britten's score and the cast chosen to interpret it, that rate the major laurels. The prolog and opening recitatives make for a rather inauspicious start, but as the opera unfolds, the music grows in stature, sometimes achieving dramatic heights and revealing some poignant, lovely arias.

Title role was sung by baritone Theodor Uppman, who created the part in London. In both his musical and dramatic interpretation, he extracted all the composer could wish for. Andrew McKinley, tenor, gave a warm presentation in the role of the philosophical Captain Vere. The others sang and acted with understanding and integrity.

Peter Herman Adler's musical direction was of a superior quality throughout. Rose.

THE ESSO REPORTER

With Dick Hawley
15 Mins., Mon.-thru-Fri., 6:15 p.m.
Producer-director: Tim Kiley
ESSO OIL CO.
WMCT, Memphis
(Marschalk & Pratt)

Here's a five-a-week TV news program in the Class A bracket—a streamlined, newsy, well-produced, well-announced and well-arranged package. Newscaster Dick Hawley does a fine job in giving viewers down-to-earth coverage of local, regional and national news events.

Camera crews of WMCT also come in for praise, as does production performance by Tim Kiley.

In addition to his punchy news style, Hawley's neat, handsome appearance before the lenses earns him added viewers in femme circles. Program is best offered by WMCT on a local basis in many-a-moon. Matt.

AMERICA CALLING

With Rebel Randall; Dinah Shore, guest; George Walsh, announcer
Writer-director: Les Farber
30 Mins.; Sun., 4 p.m.
REGENT CIGARETS
CBS, from Hollywood
(Hilton & Riggio)

This is the musical program devoted to playing disk selections requested by servicemen overseas and to helping their women folk make phone calls to them. Heard weekly on CBS' Pacific network, heretofore, it's had a big pull and has been praised as a morale builder by both listeners and the GI's and their families involved.

It's not difficult to see why the Coast went for the airer, or to predict its wider success now that it's bowed over the entire CBS web. Music selections which the GI's pick seem to be of high grade, judged by the several played on Sunday's (19) premiere, and would appeal to the general listener. For added draw, Dinah Shore was guest Sunday, to sing "I Want To Be Loved By You."

As for the GI's and families involved, program has vital meaning for them. Emcee Rebel Randall talked from Hollywood to a GI in Trieste, then hooked in his mother from Frisco, so that the two could chat a bit. Miss Randall also talked to a corporal in Korea, and then hooked him up with his wife in Tracy, Cal.

Miss Randall is a warm, persuasive person, with a nice voice, charming manner and sure appeal. But a listener might wonder about the question of taste involved here, trading on the anxieties of folks at home for their boys in service, to make up a commercial radio program. True, the families apparently don't mind, while the GI's wholeheartedly support Miss Randall, by sending in disk requests as well as some very personal messages (judged from a few aired) to pass on to their femme folk.

The surprise in the Trieste GI's voice when his mother was piped into the phone conversation brought an involuntary lump to this listener's throat. So did the joy in the wife's reaction to a call to her man in Korea. Miss Randall's conversation with the GI's, before the kinfolk were brought telephonically together, was rather probing or naive. "How's the war going?" she asked the Korean corporal at one time. "How's morale in Korea?" she asked on another occasion. "It's high," was the answer. "That's good to know," was the sapient followup.

Regent cigaret commercials were crowded in, with two in the first 10 minutes of the show. Bron.

MINER MIKE

With Ted Rogers
Writer: Jack Goodman
15 Mins.; Sun., 12:45 p.m.
UTAH MINING ASSN.
KALL, Salt Lake City
(Adamson, Buchman)

"Miner Mike" is a quarter-hour session that makes no effort at being a bigtime show, and because it doesn't try too hard it succeeds in being an interesting and pleasant interlude. Sponsored by the Mining Assn. to set up favorable public reaction to the industry, it skillfully avoids the pitfall of pitching too strong a message.

Jack Goodman whips together an easy listening script that's billed as stories about people who rarely make the headlines. Brief anecdotes, angled strictly from the human interest point of view, are centered entirely on personalities in the state, with a cagey emphasis on individual enterprise. A typical stanza includes a yarn about the problems of running a fix-it shop, adventures of a travelling bookseller, what goes on in a candy factory preparing for Hallowe'en and such.

Ted Rogers does a neat job of characterizing Mike. He gives listeners a straightforward, friendly reading, keeping it intimate without getting involved in a corny attempt at dialect.

Single commercial is tied in with one of Mike's stories, and pitches importance of mining industry to the state. Basic idea that too high taxes can undercut the industry and hurt everyone is handled gently, and should put its point over well.

"Miner Mike," without fanfare, should grab itself a nice slice of the listening audience. Berl.

Okay Flacks' Boost

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

After reconsidering its previous decision, Wage Stabilization Board has okayed a 15% hike for Publicists Guild members at CBS, under pact inked last July. It's reported by guild exec John Bowman.

New deal gives flacks a $86.75 minimum weekly. WSB first approved a 9% uppance, but on plea from guild reconsidered

JOE REICHMAN SHOW

With John Allen, announcer
Producer: Reichman
90 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 1 p.m.
Participating
WFAA, Dallas

After 20 years as an orch leader, pianist Joe Reichman has dropped the baton and entered radio, utilizing platters in a new format that, in nine shows weekly, has earned the self-styled "Pagliacci of the Piano" a hefty fan following in four months here. Admittedly quitting the podium while a top draw as a hotel orch "name," Reichman took a wallet wallop to enter radio. Family ties transcended earning power. Married to a local lass in 1938, ex-maestro has two young sons and a lavish suburban ranch style home, where his family settled in 1948.

Prior to coming home, Reichman auditioned his unique air show for WFAA's station manager, Alex Keese, and sold the idea. A "deejay" tag for Joe would be erroneous; he makes scant use of waxings. From a sock selection of pop and semi-classic tunes he's extracted on acetate, four to a side, choice bits from records. On segment heard he used only the vocal portion of the late Buddy Clarke's "For You." To date Reichman has assembled a streamlined library of some 500 top excerpts from wax for use on his daily airer.

New idea gets top execution. Always at the piano, using earphones and twin mikes for piano pickup, Joe fingers an intro and first chorus. At his nod, alert engineer Charlie Davis spins the dubbed tune, as Reichman segues his 88'ing to join the recorded bit. Often he embellishes the wax session from his piano, but always follows with the closing chorus and butterfly keyboard ending. Gimmick is on the nose; alert listeners can't detect the wax portion's start and finish. This results from pre-program timing. As Reichman tells his audience, "It pays to rehearse." He tells too much, however, in confessing he's a "street-corner piano player," who plays by ear. As of now, he can and does read melody notes to assist in keying his pianoing to the abbreviated waxings.

Astute Reichman is a top showman; in his short time on WFAA he's larded his fan following with a boff 35 personals on his show by 24 top show biz names, including Johnnie Ray, Russell Nype, Harry Richman, Russ Morgan, Xavier Cugat, Phil Harris and Alice Faye. For his sponsors Reichman is indefatigable. Casually, yet sincerely, he mouths ad libbed commercials, ~~sans copy, for a dozen products in~~ his 90-minute stint. One 5-minute segment, across the board, goes to Texas Quality Network, a five-city hookup, with Grand Prize Beer of Houston paying the tab. For the brewery Reichman delivers four hefty plugs. Local music store, Whittle's, also buys a quarter hour daily, and there's a waiting list of time buyers.

On show caught Joe made a pitch for fan mail and inserted a safe-driving plea to motorists.

Adversely, Reichman should be penalized five yards for delay of the show, due to deadly pauses in reminiscing anent show biz names and tunes. Both his chatter and spot plugs almost usurp air time. Conversely, he's built a solid following, the hard way, and gives out with talent and experience to hold and enlarge his audience. Faster beat on verbiage might lose listeners gained by the easy delivery that's always abetted by tasteful music. Barker.

TWO AT MIDNIGHT

With Jane Marvin
60 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 12 M.
Sustaining
WPTR, Albany

New romantically-pattered midnight ride is reined by Jane Marvin, identified only as "Janie." It takes along male listeners, although the musical portions should find acceptance, and perhaps favor, with women. Miss Marvin directs her intimate messages toward a mythical lover in the first half. She addresses them more broadly to college boys, men at service posts and other lonesome, impressionable, far-from-homers, on second segment. Love angle is a thread linking recorded numbers.

Miss Marvin hit a surer stride after the opening blocks, but some unevenness and projection inadequacy were still observable when program was last heard. While repetition in coo-casting is inevitable, greater imagination and flexibility in phraseology would diminish it. Miss Marvin's philosophical reveries and nostalgic references to family life in childhood indicate sensitive intelligence and balanced maturity. Music is usually well chosen, although numbers by full-volumed orchestras may not be ideal for late-night reception. Jaco.

Radio Followups

Henry Morgan seems to be walking away with the post-midnight deejay sweepstakes around New York. Not since Barry Gray's initial impact has a saloon spieler created so quickly a click as Morgan who, kidding-on-the-square, picked up "jabberjockery" as a nom-de-DJ. This was contributed by a listener. Morgan plays it strictly for laughs which, amidst the punditing and political debates by Gray, Art Ford's straight music, NBC's longhair marathon, and "Big Joe's saccharine do-goodness via WVNJ, Newark, is welcome contrast. And especially right now with all the political contradictions and confusion. Even in his erudition, Morgan gives it an adult and highly appealing approach. He is apparently a hepster on art, but he doesn't let the cubism and/or the orthodoxy gets too much into his microphone. Morgan's schooling in the craft comes through in sundry styles. For one thing, he is less the character assassin of his products (Stuhmer's bread, "Flying Irishman," etc.) than has been his wont, but when he does give it the tongue-in-cheek treatment even the most sensitive sponsor can't hate him for it. Originating from Hutton's, a new West 51 St. branch of the east side eatery of the same name, he is certainly a more accessible forum. Jule Styne, Leonard Sillman and Herman Levin, legit impresarios, sounded off interestingly this past week. Maurice Zolotow's interview was one of the better things on anybody's microphone, at any hour, pre-/or post-midnight. As a matter of fact Zolotow does all right in anybody's saloon, having clicked with Barry Gray, from Ohandler's, for the same cause—plugging his new book, "It Takes All Kinds." Latter book is an unique anthology of "characters," as only Zolotow knows how to treat them, and somehow Morgan has a flair for attracting these "characters" (bizarre Broadway p.a. Jim Moran, et al.), along with others who, if they are not avowed zanies, Morgan certainly knows how to give the madcap treatment. An open-mike interview with a Mayfair mag editor-publisher was something that shouldn't happen to an interviewer, excepting that the journalist unwittingly was too good a straight for the devestating Morgan because he led with his typewriter.

This Morgan - Hutton's show has put WMGM (N.Y.) on the wee hour map as nothing since Ted Husing put the Loew station into the daytime deejay sweepstakes. In fact Husing announced one morning that "this is the last plug I'm gonna give Henry Morgan on WMGM; he keeps my wife awake so late listening to him that she's not awake to hear me in the morning" (he comes on at 10 a.m.). Morgan's wit is socko and somehow it scintillates best in this new orbit. Abel.

Ted Husing, who has been doing the play-by-play on the Army games for WMGM in New York, has come up with a new idea in football coverage—the two platoon system. As heard on Saturday's (18) Army-Pittsburgh game, Husing covered the plays from the offensive point of view while his aide, Walter Kennedy, detailed the defensive strategy on each play. The switching between Husing and Kennedy was handled smoothly and the two-headed coverage managed to give a good all-around perspective on the action.

The technique is simple enough. Husing describes the offensive action while the ball is in play while Kennedy fills in for the opposing side during the huddles. Kennedy, former publicist for Notre Dame who has worked with Husing supplying the color patter on football games for several years, has a sharp eye and tandems effectively with Husing. Latter is still expert with the rapid-fire gab and the verbiage was kept punchy and pointed in the Army-Pitt game. Herm.

U. OF UTAH FOOTBALL

With Mal Wyman, Kay Richins
Producer: Richins
Sat., 8 p.m.
UTAH OIL REFINING CO.
KALL, Salt Lake City
(Gillham)

Mal Wyman has been a fixture on KALL, handling football, baseball and basketball for six years, and he obviously has the technique that clicks solidly here.

It's not hard to see why Wyman is this area's top sports man. He shows he likes his chores, he knows his sports, and he can whip through a complicated play on the gridiron and stay on top of it all the way. Not one of the "it's-a-beautiful-day-at-the-stadium" school, Wyman sticks strictly to the business of putting over a clear, understandable picture of what's going on, and succeeds handsomely.

When the occasion demands, he gets plenty of excitement into the telling. But he saves his enthusiasm for the situation and avoids screaming about a play that ends up with a one-yard gain.

Kay Richins works nicely with Wyman's play by play work. He handles color and comment and does it with a gratifying lack of hems and haws. His approach is straightforward and interesting.

Commercial pitch is for Utah Oil service stations, and with Richins doing them they're brief, to the point, and not tossed in too often.

Utah Oil is making plenty of friends for itself with its top quality handling of a year-round sports program. Berl.

CAMPAIGN CALL

With Leif Eid, Esther Van Waggoner Tufty, Ned Brooks, Frank Blair, moderator
Producer-Director: Ted Ayers
30 Mins., Mon.-thru-Fri., 10:30 a.m.
NBC, from Washington

This information panel show, product of the political campaign, has an unusual format and spontaneous quality which is likely to catapult it to permanent status on the network. Skedded as a question-and-answer show for the intensive campaign period of the six weeks preceding Election Day, show has gained momentum and is currently being carried by about 25 stations.

Gimmick of the show is that it reverses the usual role of quizzer and quizzed by putting newsmen and political analysts on the spot, with Mr. and Mrs. John Q. in role of inquisitor. Rotating amongst NBC's stable of news experts, show features daily panel of three analysts who answer questions mailed or wired in to them. Frank Blair acts as moderator, tossing the questions and steering the answers so that they do not get out of line or overlong.

At show caught, panel of the day, consisting of Leif Eid, Esther Van Waggoner Tufty, and Ned Brooks, handled queries with deftness and sincerity. All able reporters, they were able to catch each verbal ball and toss it back without hesitation or visible difficulty. Even such questions as "Is Senator Nixon's maid in this country illegally," failed to stump this board of news experts.

Though intended primarily as an information show, an occasional news scoop crops up, as in show caught. One question on who was paying for the thousands of thank you postcards sent out by Vice Presidential aspirant Senator Nixon in response to letters of support he received following his famed simulcast, required off-the-scene checking. Reporter Eid came into show late because he was checking facts, a touch which resulted in added spontaneity and authenticity for show.

Mrs. Tufty, who debutted as a TV news commentator during the political conventions, rates special attention as a comparative newcomer to the field. A vet reporter on the capital scene. Le Tufty brings a forthright manner, an air of authority, and an attention getting appearance to the screen. A large woman, with hair worn in prominent braids, she has a uniquely refreshing personality. Rounding out her regular chores for a chain of dailies by doubling as special campaign correspondent for web, she has gained in smoothness and style since her convention debut. Eid and Brooks, old hands at the TV news game, operate with customary skill and smoothness.

Interesting angle of show is wide geographical distribution of queries, despite limited network coverage. Eight states were represented on the nine questions used. Other interesting feature is generally solid caliber of questions asked. Despite an occasional screwball query, most of them restore listener's confidence in intelligence of that much maligned "average citizen."

Producer Ted Ayers, whose brain child this is, screens letters for variety and interest out of an average 60 received daily. Questions rarely leak to panel, both because most of the news staffers are busy hopping from one candidate's train to the other, and just about make show deadline. In addition, Ayers is convinced that briefing would destroy freshness and spontaneity of show.

Format of show, and general technique, makes it a worthy candidate for a permanent spot. With an all year round capital background, it impresses as highly saleable. Lowe.

YOUR MONEY AT WORK

(America On Wheels)
With Milton Fox-Martin; Harold X. Schreder, guest
Producer-director: Ed Rooney
15 Mins., Sun., 3:30 p.m.
KIDDER, PEABODY
WOR, N. Y.
(Doremus)

This series, which bowed last spring on WOR, is back again with its sound, interesting discussion of investment opportunities available in the country's leading industries. Each week, Milton Fox-Martin, head of sponsor Kidder, Peabody's mutual funds department, interviews a guest from a different business field. On series' second fall airer Sunday (19), guest was Harold X. Schreder, exec veepee of Distributors Group, Inc., who discussed opportunities for investment in the automotive field.

Series is interesting because the discussion is on a simple, man-of-street level, neither highbrow nor complicated. Host Fox-Martin is a clear, logical speaker and his guests seem well-chosen. Schreder divided the automotive field into four—autos, trucks, parts and tires; gave some historical background on the various big motor companies, and how they began, and analyzed the auto industry from an investment point of view in a persuasive manner. He discussed today's analysis techniques, stating that the principle of selection still prevails. It's a helpful program for the investor. Bron.

THE HAPPY HOME

With Bea Johnson, David Andrews
Producer: Fran Heiser
Writer: Mrs. Johnson
30 Mins., 8:30 a.m. Mon.-Fri.
Participating
KMBC-KFRM, Kansas City

Morning half-hour for femme listeners recently has been taken over by Bea Johnson in a major program shift by KMBC and its outstate Kansas affiliate, KFRM. Two former quarter hours, "The Happy Home" and "The Happy Kitchen," are now combined in this one segment in which Mrs. Johnson covers the full range of women's topics. She covers fashions, household hints, cookery, child care, women in the news, etc., with David Andrews of the station staff along as sidekick, commentator and recipe writer.

It's a return to the air for Mrs. Johnson who served the station in the late 1930's as "Joanne Taylor," an established program for the John Taylor department store. In the interim she has done agency ~~work, lecturing, writing and raised~~ two daughters. Generally prominent on the local and area scene, she is a fitting candidate for heading up the station's department of women's interests.

As the program is working out it evidently is imminently satisfactory to the station and to the listeners. It generally carries its full quota of spots, most of them on a semi-permanent basis, and in that light is profitable to the station.

Listener-wise the show comes off satisfactorily, as Mrs. Johnson gives it something of a personality touch and leaves no doubt that she has been around in the world of homemaking, public contacts and better living. She takes the straightforward approach in most of her airings, with Andrews ad libbing and giving the show a lighter cast. As broadcast it evidently relies 100% on script, and possibly suffers somewhat at times being a bit stiff. It could stand a bit of casualness in the doing.

Saturday "Happy Home" is handled by Caroline Ellis, who for many years handled it daily in a quarter-hour morning segment. One of KMBC's alltime radio favorites, and one with national recognition, Mrs. Ellis picks up the weekend show where Mrs. Johnson leaves off and maintains the interest level nicely. New set up represents something of an easing off in the work load for her, much deserved after more than a score of years on the air. Quin.

FOOTBALL GAME OF WEEK

With George Mooney
Sat. 2 p.m.
Participating
VOL, from Memphis

George Mooney's recent bow as sportspieler for the U. of Tennessee grid tussles over the Vol web proved a socko start. The new Vol sportscaster, who heretofore handled sport shows on local stations, moved into the big-league collegiate sports announcing ranks in topflight fashion.

Mooney's performance keeps the listener glued to the speakers. His keen knowledge of the game and ability to diagnose plays quickly are his trump cards.

Mooney's unique stunt of recapping plays for the femme fans is also earning him spurs and added attention. Matt.

Rotate Election Allocations

with each other and the candidates on where they'll be on election night, so that the pooled pickups can be determined. Where the politicos will be is still up in the air in most cases. Stevenson is expected to be in Springfield, Ill., Eisenhower in Denver or N. Y. Nixon may be in Whittier, Calif., outside of L. A. and Sparkman be in Huntsville or Birmingham, Ala., or Washington. Pres. Truman is expected in Independence or Kansas City.

Just where the biggies alight will influence cable allocations. As in the convention coverage, all the skeins are trying to get the broadest possible station lineup for their sponsors, and if a cable has to be used to pick up a solon it could interfere with beaming the show. For that reason some of the candidates have been invited to D. C.

Pool on the candidate pickups would permit the chains to get some exclusive stuff. A net newsroom, for example, will tell the other webs via a conference call telephone setup that it will take Candidate X at 10 p.m. Other nets will be able to take the video feed also. However, each web will have its own announcer do the audio. If a candidate announces that he has a statement to make at a specified time, there will be a 15-minute "no man's land" before he delivers his statement, to prevent any chain from "sneaking in" with an exclusive. All official statements of the candidates will be pooled.

Dallas—"Kiddie Karnival," new series for children around the ages of five to eight, has made its debut on WFAA-TV as a daily series. It is designed to give youngsters with and without special talent a chance to appear on TV. Bob Blaze is m.c. of the series.

Radio Paging Service

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

A one-way radio paging service is being launched here with the transmitter in the Rand Tower, the city's tallest building, and receivers in several hundred pages' pockets.

Installation of the 250-watt broadcasting equipment, with call letters KAD510, is being supervised by J. M. Kleinman.

Broadcasting will be on a 43.58 megacycles VHF just below the TV band. Receivers weighing six ounces and containing three tubes and battery are being manufactured here.

Subscribers, who are limited to 200 in number because of recording limitations, get receivers which may be carried in their pocket, car or golf bag. A message to a subscriber is transcribed, then broadcast repeatedly in series with other messages until the page calls in, or until an hour has elapsed. Fifteen to 20 abbreviated messages may be broadcast in a minute's time.

Univ. of L'ville, WAVE Preem Quickie TV Operas

Louisville, Oct. 21.

First of a series of 13 operas, condensed for TV by Moritz Bomhard, teel off Monday (20) at 10 p.m. Music-dramas are sponsored by the University of Louisville School of Music and WAVE. Series will be aired over WAVE-TV. Shows will be held to 30 minutes, and will not have a chorus.

Repertoire will consist of several lesser heard works, as well as some of the familiar operas. Teeoff bill Monday (20) was Kurt Weill's one-act folk opera "Down in the Valley." Others to follow are "La Boheme," "Marriage of Figaro," Gounod's "Faust," "Hansel and Gretel," Menotti's "The Medium" and "The Telephone" and "La Traviata."

and by Rheingold Beer for New York and New Haven. Other sales represent local sponsors in three other markets.

On other shows which Sarnoff's department is distributing the NBC exec disclosed that the new half-hour "Hopalong Cassidy" pix are now airing in 45 markets, and that "Dangerous Assignment," the only NBC-produced series in the batch, is now on the air in 59 markets. Sarnoff said the web has abandoned its intention to put "Texas Rangers" on film and, while it has no specific plans at this time to produce other packages on its own, may shoot another group of "Assignment" pix to follow the 39 already in the can.

Fairbanks' show, Sarnoff said, will be titled "Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., presents the (name of the local sponsor) Show." Fairbanks will serve as host on each of the stanzas and will star personally in one out of every four. Producer has taken over the British National studios at Elstree, which are now the only studios in England devoted exclusively to vidpix production. According to Sarnoff, Tom O'Brien and other British film labor leaders are highly enthusiastic about Fairbanks' vidpix ventures, regarding them as the beginning of a new business for British film technicians.

Midget Racing

network could conceivably make a profit even if the show is never sponsored. The house will be scaled to $7,800.

Jake Kedenburg, promoting the event, thinks that if the proposition is accepted by a station, same outfit may have the option of going along on approximately the same terms on the outdoor season which has returned a profit to the racers. It's felt that regular video may give the auto racing venture a chance to hit the really tall coin.

This proposition is being tried on a cooperative basis between the speedway association and the drivers because of the usual inactivity during the winter. Recent development of a special muffler and exhaust minimizes the exhaust fumes. The regular ventilation system makes attendance at an indoor meet harmless.

by play broadcasts of the Notre Dame games each Saturday afternoon throughout the football season. On Monday mornings Wes Fesler, Minnesota football coach, is interviewed on WCCO.

Television also does right well by the gridiron sport here. On Saturday afternoons KSPT-TV carries the NCAA telecast of the game of the day and WCCO-TV the service teams' contest. WCCO-TV brings in the telecast of the Chicago Bears or Chicago Cardinals professional game on Sundays and has a football show of its own preceding it. On Mondays Fesler, the Gopher tutor, has a WCCO-TV football show and on Tuesdays the filmed Big 10 game of the week is presented on KSTP-TV.

And the beautiful part of it, as far as the stations are concerned, is that there's a sponsor for all these programs.

Yes, wrestling on film is particularly adept at pinning down big audiences. All of the lulls and lags are snipped out. All of the temperament captured at the boiling point. And "Ringside With The Rasslers," produced in Hollywood by Jerry Fairbanks, Inc., is further distinguished by a superb cast of mighty grapplers... the very best grip-and-groaners in the business: Lord Blears, Baron Leone, Gorgeous George, Hans Schnabel, Ali Bey, Argentine Rocca, Gino Garibaldi, Mr. Moto, Danny McShain—practically any other monarch of the mat you can mention.

"Ringside With The Rasslers" is amazingly adaptable. It may be shown in versions running 30 minutes...or a full hour. Its informal format makes it ideal for one sponsor...or many. And it sells at a starkly competitive price...low enough to give you a high profit in any market.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce is advising businessmen not to permit "pro-Communist entertainers to be employed for their radio, television and other advertising programs." Chamber has put out a new study on Communists in labor, a section of which is devoted to the entertainment field. "American business," it says, "must take full responsibility for entertainers employed to advertise its products. There is no excuse for the employment of entertainers who contribute to the Communist cause or who display sympathies for the organizations which front for Communism.

"Communists, because of their potentialities for disrupting labor-management relations, should not be employed where a labor union exists or is possible. They should not be hired as actors, script writers, or in similar positions in the entertainment fields because they acquire prestige and funds for Communist causes. In fact, controlled labor unions and the entertainment field have been two of the major sources of revenue for the American Communist Party."

Poll Okays Com'l Ray Disk Program in Boston After Station Nixes Platters

Boston, Oct. 21.

Whether by accident or design, a request to sponsor a weekly 15-minute program of Johnnie Ray disks was received by WBMS execs from the Riley, Brown & Willard agency on heels of a ukase that the singer's platters would no longer be aired by the station. Placing the relaxing of the ban squarely in the hands of listeners, frequent announcements were aired over a period of three days requesting listeners to vote on the issue.

When results were tabulated, those favoring the program outnumbered the opposition by a margin of 3-1, with result that Ray's waxings will be aired from 10:45 to 11 a.m. each Wednesday for 13 weeks. Morris Travel Agency is bankrolling.

Duquesne Lone Sudser To Resume Pitt Musicals

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

It begins to look now as if Duquesne Brewing Co. will be the only one of Pittsburgh's big beer three to resume live TV musicals here, following the four-month long strike which ended middle of August. Duquesne went back on WDTV with top-talent live half-hours first of the month, but on a limited basis (a show every fortnight, alternating with "The Unexpected" on film) until 1953, when the old weekly policy is to be resumed. Fort Pitt, even before the strike, had pulled out of the tuners in favor of a nightly 15-minute news show at 11 with Dave Murray and Ray Scott.

However, Iron City was figured to resume Monday night "Perfection Time" when the present "Telesports Digest" series expired, but the brewery announced over the weekend that it had bought the "China Pix" vidpix to follow the sportser Nov. 3. Tech Beer, same company as Iron City, some time back had dropped the "Tech Variety" musical Friday nights in favor of "Files of Jeffrey Jones."

WDAF-TV Gets NCAA 'Reprieve' in Latching To Local Fray Fever

Kansas City, Oct. 21.

Fever pitch of interest in the Oklahoma-Kansas football struggle at nearby Lawrence, last Saturday, brought about a major change in television coverage here, WDAF-TV moving in to cover the battle from the K.U. campus.

Event was an exception to the established schedule earlier blueprinted by NCAA, but permission was readily granted when the game was sold out to its plus-39,000 capacity a week in advance. O.U.-K.U. game replaced the Yale-Cornell tussle, originally scheduled nationally, for viewers here. General Motors stepped in to sponsor the local pickup, just as it picked up the tab on the game at Yale which was carried by other network stations.

Game is the first picked up from a Big Seven campus by WDAF-TV, although the season's opener at Lawrence between K.U. and T.C.U. was carried here as it was by all others in the NCAA. Arrangements were quickly made early last week for the special coverage through cooperation between Dutch Lonborg, K.U. athletic director, Reaves Peters, executive secretary of the Big Seven, and Walt Byers, exec director of the NCAA, all located here or nearby.

Jay Barrington handled the play-by-play with Randall Jessee doing commentary. Direction was by Bill Donovan and Bill Ladesh, all of the regular WDAF-TV staff.

WDTV's 'Polka Party'

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

Capitol TV recently closed for a new half-hour musical show, "Polka Party," on WDTV Saturday evenings at 6. It'll be the station's only live program that particular evening, its other schedulings being either network or on film.

"Polka Party" will feature Nick Perry, WDTV newscaster and staffer, as m.c. and Frank Budzik's band along with the National Polka Dancers.

TV 'Miracle' or 'Monster,' Sez Peck; Aid to Most, But for Sports It's Heck

Gloversville, N. Y., Oct. 21.

Television is a miracle or a monster, depending on one's viewpoint, George L. Peck, publicity director for WRGB and WGY, Schenectady, told the Gloversville Rotary Club at the Kinsborough Hotel here last week. Sketching video's history from the time General Electric engineers staged a program with crude equipment in December, 1928 (the screen was the size of postage stamp, moved first to show the eyes and then the lips), Peck said that sets totalled 240,000 nationally in 1948, compared with 19,000,000 today.

After emphasizing the medium's entertainment scope and advertising impact Peck pointed out that three groups, sports promoters, teachers and librarians, claim the effect of television is detrimental. Challenging the latter two, Peck conceded that in some case sports entrepreneurs may be right. He said that television had been blamed for the suspension of the Canadian-American baseball league and questioned whether Schenectady would have an Eastern league club next season.

GE and WRGB, keeping close tabs on attendance at the Schenectady park, found Wednesday — when boxing bouts are telecast— to be the worst. The WRGB official suggested that baseball promoters install a large screen, move up game time at night and let the fans stay to see the fightcasts.

He praised the educational value of TV and expressed hope the ruling by Speaker Sam Rayburn banning the televising of committee hearings will be modified.

DU MONT LABS SHOWS 359G PROFIT IN '52

DuMont Labs, which suffered a net loss last year of $320,000, bounced back this year to show a net profit for the 12 months ended Oct. 5 of $359,000. Earnings are equal to 11c per share on preferred stock, as compared to a loss of 18c per share last year. Figures include both DuMont's manufacturing division and broadcast network, which are never broken down in the company's annual statements.

Statement was released at a special stockholders meet Monday (20) by prexy Dr. Allen B. DuMont. Shareholders reelected the incumbent officers, including Dr. DuMont; Stanley F. Patten, as veepee; Paul Raibourn, treasurer; Bernard Goodwin, secretary, and Irving Singer, assistant treasurer. Elected as directors by Class A stockholders were Dr. DuMont, Patten, Dr. Thomas T. Goldsmith, Jr., Percy M. Stewart and Bruce T. DuMont.

Class B shareholders voted in as directors Edwin Weisl, Barney Balaban and Raibourn, all of Paramount Pictures, which owns the entire block of DuMont's B stock.

LUCKY?

Sure.

We can't guarantee we'll win 7 of the top 10 every time, as we did the first time up. (Let alone 4 of the top 5...or 13 of the top 20.)

But when you add ratings like that to our usual highest average nighttime audiences in all television...starting the new season even further out in front than last year...a pattern begins to emerge.

And the whole thing begins to look less like good luck than good programming.

2 TV Credit Courses On U. of Toledo Agenda

Toledo, Oct. 21.

University of Toledo went on the air with two TV credit courses starting last week, from 9:45 to 10:15 a.m., daily through Friday, over WSPD-TV, with the station donating the time.

Western Reserve University in Cleveland is the only other Ohio college offering credit for television courses.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday, a history of Ohio will be offered, and on Tuesday and Thursday, a course entitled "Modern Homemaking" will be aired.

The Ohio history courses, giving two credit hours, will be offered by Dr. Randolph C. Downes, professor of history, while the homemaking course, with one hour credit, will be given by Dr. Helen Marley.

Last year Western Reserve offered seven credit courses to the Cleveland area TV audience. Commercial surveys showed that from 40,000 to 70,000 sets were tuned to the program, although only about 110 persons completed the courses for credit.

ask Procter & Gamble

and Ernie, the Hamburger King

Procter & Gamble is the biggest advertiser in America.

Last year they spent over $18,000,000 in radio. Like the National Biscuit Company, Liggett & Myers and many other of America's largest advertisers, they invested more money in radio than in any other medium.

Ernie, the Hamburger King, of 118 Pike Street, Seattle, is one of the smaller advertisers in America. Last year Ernie spent approximately $7,000 in radio. Like countless other local merchants from coast to coast, he invested more money in radio than in any other medium.

Sales results? P&G had the biggest year in its history. So did Ernie. (In fact, Ernie's sales climbed to an average of 1,200 hamburgers a day.)

The truth is that at both the national and local level, radio offers economy and flexibility that no other medium can touch. And do you realize how much the radio-listening population has grown? Today there are 105,300,000 radio sets in the U. S. A. Virtually every home is a radio home—and over half of them have two or more sets.

The average American now spends more time with radio than with magazines, TV and newspapers combined.

Beyond question, the smartest buys in all advertising are being made in radio. And they're being made right now.

DU MONT D.C. KEY SHIFTS TO BIGGER QUARTERS

Washington, Oct. 21.

Following town's trend towards TV expansion, DuMont has completed move to WTTG, its key station in the capital, to enlarged quarters on the 10th floor of the Raleigh Hotel.

New quarters feature two large studios and a two-story control room, each with latest in technical, lighting and acoustical equipment. The upper floor of the control room houses master control, video and projection units, while the lower level contains individual audio and switching facilities for each unit. In addition, there is an engineering shop and lounge, conference room and department offices.

Under the new setup, station will be able, for the first time, to telecast local shows simultaneous with feeds to the web. In addition, audience participation shows, previously barred for lack of space, can be added to the station log.

Construction, which took eight months to complete, was under supervision of Rodney Chipp, engineering boss for DuMont, and Malcolm Burleson, WTTG's chief engineer. William T. Meyer, New York, was architect, with local firm of Don McAfee in charge of decorating. Walter Compton is station manager.

KLIF Files For UHF

Dallas, Oct. 21.

Trinity Broadcasting Corp., owners of KLIF, filed application yesterday (Monday) with the FCC for UHF Channel 29 for Dallas, to be operated as KLIF-TV.

Gordon B. McLendon, veepee, said KLIF-TV would concentrate on news and sports, with special emphasis on local programming and public service segments.

4 for Nebraska

Two TV outlets in Lincoln are expected to be operating by April 1, giving Nebraska four stations. Omaha's WOW-TV (Channel 6) and KMTV (3) have been on air three years.

KFOR-TV (10) will operate on 55 kilowatts, more powerful than Omaha outlets. Cornhusker Radio and Television Corp., headed by Lincoln auto king E. M. O'Shea, will use Channel 12.

D. C. Plunges Heavily Into Longhair Scene; Three Stations Now Air Shows

Washington, Oct. 21.

Interesting phenomenon on the local radio scene is recent swing towards music of the longhair and operetta type. Following successful trail blazed by WGMS, "Good Music" station, two capital broadcasters announced new longhair stanzas last week.

WTOP, CBS affiliate, and town's largest (50,000) watter, preemed a cross-the-board "Starlight Symphony" this week, featuring almost two hours of strictly longhair recordings narrated by staffer Allan Jeffreys. Show, from 12:05 a.m. to 2 a.m., replaces humorist-platter spinner Gene Klavan. Latter, once hailed by station as a "second Arthur Godfrey," was a casualty of his own stomach ulcer plus low sales rates of late-hour shows. Klavan's request for an earlier slot for his simulcast was nixed by the station because of an already loaded schedule.

In addition to WTOP, indie station WOL launched a late-hour music show this week. Latter specializes in longhair tunes from 10:30 to midnight, then segues into high class pop—operetta, semi-classical, etc.—until 2 a.m.

A virtual lovefest between the giant of the town's AM stations and its most specialized one has resulted from WTOP's excursion into the classics. WGMS ran a full-page ad in one of the town's dailies welcoming WTOP into the good music field, and WTOP responded by buying time for a series of spot plugs for its new show on WGMS.

3d TV Station Okayed For North Carolina

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 21.

A third television station for Northern Carolina has been authorized by the FCC. Commission authorized the Sir Walter Raleigh Television and Broadcasting Co. of Raleigh to proceed with a station for Channel 28.

Other two stations, operating for more than two years now, are WBTV, Charlotte, and WFMY-TV, Greensboro.

Sir Walter company is headed by John W. English, Erie, Pa., attorney. Associated with English are John J. Borland, a ship cargo broker of Buffalo; James R. McBrier, department store owner of Erie, and James B. Donovan, a Brooklyn lawyer.

Group also has filed for a television station in Baton Rouge, La.

Gloversville, N. Y.—Dale Robertson, general manager of WENT from 1945 through 1949, and a veteran of 25 years in radio, has been reappointed to that post by George F. Bissell, of Plattsburgh, owner of the station. He succeeds Jack Charles, who joined WENT two years ago and was named g.m. last year. Charles resigned.

Inside Stuff—Television

David F. Schoenbrun, CBS' Paris correspondent who's covered General Eisenhower at SHAPE and since the start of the present political campaign, in an article, "The Ordeal of General Ike," in the October Harper's, discusses, among many other things, Eisenhower's "own acute distaste for radio and television." The General, says Schoenbrun, rebels against the mechanical nature of the media. "He has often said that appearing before a camera makes him feel like an actor, insincere and uncomfortable. He was slow to realize that he has the plastic face and genuine warmth of personality which should make him a television natural if he could get over his uneasiness in the presence of the machinery. In addition, he was and is far from convinced that television is good for our public life. He wonders whether television viewers will judge a man's worth by the way he looks rather than by more solid virtues. And he asks what use of the medium might be made by a demagog like Huey Long, who happened to be a great public speaker and actor."

Schoenbrun adds, "he has adjusted himself to the mechanics of campaigning, even going along with the belief of his managers that he should use television to the utmost."

---

The trade may be in the middle of an ad hassle between TV Guide, of which Lew Sarnoff (General David Sarnoff's brother) is board chairman, and Quick, a Cowles publication. They sell at 15c and 10c respectively. TV Guide has almost 500,000 circulation with its elaborate listings, particularly a breakdown of the late-hour films, casts, credits, when originally released, etc. Quick last week liked the idea so well that for its N. Y. distribution edition, it incepted a special listing of the same TV information. TV Guide is locally published in N. Y. but has working arrangements with other video fan digests and guides. This info, incidentally, is not found in the normal daily listings. It is also supplemented with fan mag features and other info.

---

CBS-TV, anticipating more station relations work with the recent lifting of the FCC freeze, has upped Robert Wood to the post of assistant director of the station relations department and named John M. Bolan and Edward Scovill as staff representatives. Department is headed by Fritz Snyder.

Wood has been with CBS-TV since 1946 and was with the sales service and station clearance departments prior to moving into station relations last year. He's been CBS-TV's rep at all cable allocation meetings.

WNBT, N. Y., paid tribute to the "unsung heroes" with a cocktail party for the outlet's technical crews and their dates last week. Idea was to cement ties between the technical staffers and the front-office personnel. Station's talent roster was out in force as well as WNBT and NBC o-and-o station execs, including veepees Charles R. Denny, Jr., Jim Gaines, Ted Cott and Carlton Smith.

---

Pointing up Columbia Pictures' enthusiasm about television as a film promotion medium, the company has turned over a six-minute clip from its "Happy Time" feature for screening on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" via CBS-TV Sunday night (26). It's believed the deal marks the first time any major Hollywood studio has permitted video viewers across the country a free glance at so much of a new film prior to its opening. Film was placed by George Ettinger of Col's homeoffice publicity department.

Int'l Advisory Council Formed to Aid NAEB In AM-TV Educ'l Exchange

National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters has effected a 12-nation International Radio & TV Advisory Council. New council has as its goal the interchange of the "best in exportable radio and TV fare throughout the free world," according to Seymour N. Siegel, NAEB prexy.

Idea for the international council grew out of the trip by a three-man NAEB committee, headed by Siegel, to west Europe this summer. Intense interest was evinced by high-level U. S. State Dept. officials in the proposed cultural interchange, Siegel said. Although primary interest of new group is aid to educational outlets, it will also be available for the entire broadcast industry.

New council includes: Siegel; Philip Barbour, Radio Free Europe; Peter Aylen, UN Radio; James Fisher-Northrup, Voice of America; Lt. Commdr. H. A. Spindt, Armed Forces Radio Service; J. B. Thornton, BBC; Pierre Crennesse, French Broadcasting System; Sam Elfert, Israeli info bureau, and reps of the Canadian, Australian, Netherlands and Brazilian consulates and the Norwegian info service.

Memphis Solons Mull TV Station; Need 500G

Memphis, Oct. 21.

City fathers here are mulling plans to file for an educational television station. The FCC has reserved Channel 10 for educational purposes for Memphis.

Memphis city officials have until next June to decide on filing for the channel. Biggest problem facing city officials is the nut of nearly 500Gs to put the station on the air.

Chairman Julian Bondurant said that the proposed cost of building the station was estimated at $300,000, and that it would cost another $200,000 a year to operate.

No 'Second Chance' For TV

gear rates to circulation and creditable research. "We've got to start off right, know what we're selling, and have confidence in our service," he told them. "Otherwise TV will be asking for that second chance."

He particularly deplored the intra-industry bickering, where a station operator expresses more elation over a rival losing an account than over outside media moving in. "There are years of tough competitive fighting ahead," he cautioned. "It won't be a pleasant fight. But we've got to recognize who our real competitors are—and stop fighting among ourselves. For if we don't do the job right, somebody's going to take it away from us."

Competition Waiting

It's not only the threat of newspaper competition, said Swezey. "There's theatre television....Color is on the horizon....There will be plenty of legislative battles ahead. Congress knows all too well the impact of TV and they'll want to run it....And we've got to remember that the competition won't let us alone. They're only waiting for us to make mistakes—and then they'll spring."

So satisfactory was the TV panel discussion, as the closing event on the two-day agenda, that it was suggested it be "packaged for road showing." It was a "Meet the Press" type of presentation geared to a TV question-and-answer format. Those in attendance wanted to know about UHF and its potential and they got an expert size-up from Ray Guy, who put the first UHF station on the air and operated it for two and a half years.

It was perhaps the most frank, honest appraisal yet espoused, with Guy alerting them to the ultra-high drawbacks and terrain limitations (naming names and cities). They wanted to know about single-station markets, multiple station markets, non-network operations, how a station can get along with practically all film and translate it into one of the early phenomenon of TV (as in the case of Irving Rosenhaus, of WATV, Newark). They got the answers, not only from Rosenhaus, but from such authoritative sources as Bill Fay, of WHAM-TV, Rochester; Paul Adanti, of WHEN, Syracuse, and Dick Doherty, NARTB's labor kingpin, who heads up the employer-employee relations division.

The first day was devoted to radio, with Paul Morency, of WTIC, Hartford, chairman of the Affiliates Committee, presiding at a panel session at which Raymond Spector, the agency man who parlayed Hazel Bishop into one of the biggest merchandising success stories; researcher Horace Schwerin; Hugh Beville, NBC's director of research and planning; Hans Zeisel, of the Tea Bureau, Inc., and Kevin Sweeney, veepee of BAB, making the major contributions.

There was golf, too, after the meeting.

fillout their sponsorship schedules. This year, however, with program and time costs up, virtually the same number of bankrollers who were spread on all four webs previously are now concentrated on the first two. Such participating shows on NBC's "Today" and the Kate Smith program, and CBS' Arthur Godfrey simulcast, are now drawing that overflow business.

Illustrative of the trend is the Saturday night at 8 spot on CBS. Last year, Budweiser Beer had the entire hour with the Ken Murray show. This year, CBS has lined up three participating bankrollers for its new Jackie Gleason show. By the same token, sales execs point out that it would have been expected that a top firm like duPont would have bought a half-hour for itself when it went TV. Yet, the firm bought only alternate weeks on NBC, sharing the Wednesday night at 8:30 time with Scott Tissue.

LADIES' DATE
With Bruce Mayer, Bob Hund
Producer: Mayer
Director: Keith Thomas
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 1 p.m.
Sustaining
WABD, N. Y.

"Ladies' Date," half-hour cross-the-board audience participation show which bowed on WABD, N. Y., last week, follows a familiar pattern. For emcee Bruce Mayer leads his studio guests through a variety of games and stunts calculated to create interest among both participants and viewers at home.

Studio activities — at least on Thursday's (16) edition—had a run-of-the-mill quality that hardly would encourage the average set-owner to concentrate upon the screen. On hand for the session were members of the Parent-Teacher Assn. of a Maspeth, L. I., school. Mayer had them performing such parlor tricks as picking up paper cups with broom handles and hopping about to the strains of a polka.

These antics were accompanied by vociferous applause from the studio non-participants but it's questionable whether the daytime viewer audience found things equally as amusing. Contest winners, incidentally, received table lighters, slippers, blouses and sundry other merchandise as prizes. Companies donating the loot were liberally plugged.

Lest the games become too monotonous, Bob Hund warbled a medley of football tunes to provide a pleasant change of pace. Mayer, who is said to have emceed a similar daytime show in his hometown of Detroit, has a disarming approach which quickly relaxes the hausfrau guests. But he injects far too much slapstick into the proceedings. It was incongruous to see the PTA members breaking phonograph records over Mayer's head. Gilb.

(J. Walter Thompson)

This is an educational stanza discussing scientific subjects in an easy-to-take informal manner. In role of science expert is Dr. Robert M. Goldenson of Hunter College, a former panelite of NBC-TV's "It's a Problem." He's a personable, articulate speaker, with a background in psychology and able to couch his gab in popular terms. He's assisted by Ed Herlihy, who as vis-a-vis serves to put the questions a layman might ask and at times to act as guinea pig.

On the second edition Thursday (16) Goldenson led off with a report on a new international language, Interlingua, which uses words that are common to most European tongues. Someone speaking English, for example, would understand 80% of the words in Interlingua. Goldenson tried it out on Herlihy to demonstrate. Second portion was on functional music, the use of tunes to aid production in factories, earphones for dentists' patients to drown out the drone (and fear) of drilling, etc. There were also a couple of human interest sidelights. Subjects were not visual, but were given some sight interest by means of slides, cartoons, etc.

Pages of memory, poetry, philosophy, narration and song are turned daily by staffer Jerry Coyle on this new, intimate, unpretentious program. It is cozily presented. Coyle sits in an easy chair, a large scrapbook in his lap, pipe and coffee on a table, while logs burn in a fireplace. He reads and reveries in a quiet tone, breaking up the routine with a ballad (to recorded accompaniment).

Material is chosen for mass rather than class mentality; emphasis is on the cheerful and inspirational. Coyle, veteran of radio and night clubs, has an easy, likable personality that fits the homey format. Jaco.

Memphis Video Snarled As WMPS Switches Bid

Memphis, Oct. 21.

Memphis' television application status was snarled when WMPS, ABC outlet here, did a hop, skip and a jump from Channel 13 to Channel 3 this week.

WMPS, owned and operated by Plough, Inc., a pharmaceutical company here, had applied nearly two months ago for Channel 13, which at the time was unopposed. WHBQ, Mutual outlet o. & o. by Church of Christ and Harding College, jumped aboard Channel 13 by filing with the FCC about two weeks ago.

This situation left WMPS and WHBQ both battling for Channel 13 and WREC, the CBS affiliate here, o. & o. by Hoyt Wooten, the only unopposed applicant in the Memphis TV derby. Wooten's WREC literally cemented its filing on Channel 3 when WMCT, Memphis' only operating TV station, was notified by the FCC to change from Channel 4, its present location, to Channel 5. WMCT, o. & o. by the Commercial Appeal, a Scripps-Howard morning daily here had also filed for Channel 3 at one time.

WMPS' application on Channel 13 called for maximum power of 316,000 watts, while Channel 3's power calls for 100,000 watts.

WREC is one of Memphis' first radio stations and is currently celebrating its 30th anniversary of AM broadcasting under Wooten, original owner and builder.

Godt has also served as president of the Associated Press Broadcasters of Iowa.

Ky. B'casters Elect

Louisville, Oct. 21.

Joe Eaton, WKLO general manager, was elected prez of the Kentucky Broadcasters Assn. Tuesday (14) at the K.B.A.'s annual fall meeting held in Ashland, Ky., last week. His election followed a program clinic conducted by Jean Clos, WKLO newscaster.

Eaton succeeds J. W. Betts, WFTM, Maysville. Other new officers are Mike Layman, g.m. of WSFC, Somerset, first v-p.; Sam Livingston, business manager of WKYB, Paducah, second v-p., and Hugh Potter, g.m. of WOMI, Paducah, reelected secretary-treasurer.

Ike's 'Spot Blitz'

This leaves it up to the stations to call the advertisers who have those berths and ask whether they are willing to surrender them.

It's understood that some stations are asking the bankrollers whether they are willing to yield their franchises for the 10-day period for political business in the interests of stimulating interest in the election. If they are willing to do so, they would thus make their franchises available for both parties, on the possibility that Stevenson backers would want to buy spots also. If the exact spot could not be given to the Stevenson supporters, a comparable spot would have to be made available if a pro-Democrat group wanted to buy it.

Although the situation hasn't fully crystalized as yet, some advertisers have given the greenlight for their adjacencies to be pre-empted, while others have said no. There have been objections to the turning over of spots from a couple of agencies.

Chi 'Cut-Ins'

washed out for the special event, sale of the five-minute local election squibs means they will at least break even on the affair. And the AM stations, with less of a pre-emption problem, should come out ahead.

Several of the outlets already have their local sponsorship deals finalized. WGN-TV, which will share the Westinghouse CBS-TV coverage with WBKB, has peddled its local inserts to its parent company, the Chicago Tribune. Daily has also bought in on WGN's Mutual web coverage. WNBQ, the Chi NBC-owned tele outlet for the Philco web spread, has sold its cut-ins to Pepsi-Cola.

Admiral, which is backing ABC's dual coverage, is also taking the quickies on WENR and WENR-TV. And at WBKB, Westinghouse and its local dealers, have snapped up the availabilities until midnight when Nelson Bros. Furniture Stores takes over one of the hourly five-minutes.

WMAQ, NBC's AM arm, and WBBM, CBS AM outlet, haven't inked their election night clients as yet.

cy Howe, a Chi centre headed by Austin Kiplinger, John Edwards covering Pres. Truman, Taylor Grant handling WJZ-TV, a WJZ-AM unit, and other staffers at the various party headquarters, and with the candidates.

Setup will have its HQ at the web's big studio in the TV Centre on W. 66 St., N. Y. Replica of the U. S. Capitol will be constructed as setting with a duplicate board in L. A.

Almost all the skein's Washington staff will be brought up to N. Y. Web's newsrooms in D. C., 'Frisco, Chi and Detroit will also feed copy by teletype to the N. Y. and L. A. centres. Radiowise extensive use will be made of pickups from affiliates with reports on important local battles.

As part of the stress on men rather than adding machines, ABC underlines that all its spielers will ad lib from their charts. Latter have been set up so that an indicator is pulled out as each return is given (to prevent repetition); red disks mark close races and blue disks denote significant contests. Each commentator also has a handy flip-file with a dossier on the key candidates in his field.

WNYC Preps Extensive Election Nite Coverage, Recruiting Radio Hams

Despite possibility that it may not get FCC approval to beam beyond its usual shutdown period, WNYC (N. Y.) has made extensive arrangements for covering the results on Election Night. Station will use Civilian Defense amateur radio hams to get the results from 480 county seats across the country and expects to scoop the webs with its CD hams.

Even though the municipal station's AM transmitter may be shut down, it will carry the returns on its FM adjunct. It's also offering to feed any other stations that want to pick up its coverage. WGBH, Boston College outlet, will take the service. Seymour N. Siegel, WNYC topper, has been doing the election pickups for the station for 20 years and the outlet generally beats the Gotham field in N. Y. City returns.

In 1950 the FCC turned down WNYC's bid to "stay up late" with returns, although in previous years permission had been granted.

TV Creating More Texas Job Placements

Austin, Oct. 21.

Television is being credited with creating many jobs in the state of Texas.

Texas Employment Commission reported here this week that the coming of network TV has created a demand for salesmen and repairmen. Employers are willing to take inexperienced people for training, if they show an aptitude for either selling or repairing the sets, according to TEC.

Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston, are the only Texas cities at present with network TV, this only since July 1. Local TV outlets are being built here and in several other Texas cities.

Wichita Falls, Tex.—The FCC has approved the sale of KWFT-and KWFT-FM here to Kenyon Brown for $13,300, through purchase of 30% of the stock interest. Brown was partner in the outlet with E. H. Rowley.

WHO CARES IF IT'S ASCAP OR BMI?

Rude Awakening

Technological progress takes its toll in show biz as it does elsewhere but, eventually, the bane usually proves a boon. What the end result of the current ASCAP-BMI hassle will be is a matter for the crystalball-gazers. But it may be history repeating itself. The talkers kayoed vaudeville and the silents. Next came color. Coincidentally came radio, next TV, and on the horizon is Cinerama.

In the music biz there were the million-copy Woolworth (10c) bestsellers. Then came 1,000,000-copy hits at 25c and 35c a sheet. Now it's the jocks, the jukes and the disks.

This technological evolution is, perhaps, a rude awakening for ASCAP. Perhaps, too, it will startle the old guard into post-midcentury realities. One disk jockey makes no bones about it; Savannah deejay John Wrisley, with his carping and captious criticism of Tin Pan Alley, as it has been under ASCAP domination, and how it is today with the enterprise of an emergency-created BMI.)

ASCAP, of course, differs from BMI in that it is more strictly a performing rights collection agency and, as the title clearly states, a society of songsmiths and publishers—but not a publishing operation. BMI is both. It is this aggressive difference which spells out greater enterprise for deejays and amateur songsmiths in their relations with Broadcast Music, Inc., which is both a performing rights organization and an underwriter not only for one but any number of music publishing operations.

However, ASCAP may have to rewrite the rules in order to play the current game. Tiffany, Cartier's, and kindred staid houses have found that they, too, had to match the aggressiveness of more enterprising little jewelers from the West 47th St. "jewelry row," Maiden Lane and Bowery sectors in the metropolitan New York area. ASCAP may not mean to remain smug, but if that impression persists, then the Society, which is so concerned with its "service" to the trade, should manifest some showmanship and tell its publisher-members how to go about more judicious songplugging. Abel.

Irving Caesar Alleges BMI Practices Of 'Monopoly' in Links to Networks

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

The strongest and most specific blast to date against alleged links between Broadcast Music, Inc., and the broadcasters and the disk companies was sounded by Irving Caesar at the semi-annual meeting of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers at the Beverly Hill Hotel, Beverly Hills.

Speaking off the cuff, Caesar indicted BMI for what he called "monopoly practices and discrimination." Caesar's thesis was that BMI exerts pressure on deejays around the country to play down ASCAP tunes. He also charged that RCA Victor, because of its NBC tie, and Columbia Records, because of its CBS link, are recording more BMI tunes than ASCAP offerings.

(In New York, Dave Kapp, Victor's pop artists and repertoire chief, categorically denied any discrimination in favor of BMI tunes. Kapp said "we don't care what the affiliation is; we are only interested in the quality of the song." Kapp also said that an examination of Victor's current releases would disclose no partiality one way or another.)

Another angle stressed at the ASCAP meeting was the need for divorcing BMI from the broadcasters. Songwriters Walter Gross and Ted Snyder, and Ruby Cowan, a former publisher, hammered away on this theme as the ASCAP conclave showed more sensitivity to the BMI challenge than at any other time since BMI's formation in 1940.

L. Wolfe Gilbert, ASCAP's Coast rep, also hammered away in this groove, flaying ASCAP writers who flirted with BMI. Gilbert said it was "downright ingratitude" for longtime ASCAP members to work with BMI and warned that such activity is "vitiating the bargaining strength of ASCAP."

Gilbert said that the subject of loyalty to ASCAP has been long discussed in private but never previously brought into the open. And, he asked, "Is it ethically and morally honest to serve two masters or two wives?" He added, "Two wives I know is tough."

Jules Stearns, Broadcast Music, Inc., professional manager, returned to N. Y. this week after a midwest plugging trip on "Stay Where You Are."

Kosty Batons Israel Orch

Andre Kostelanetz has been set to conduct the Israel Symphony Orch next spring when he will tour Europe and the Near East. Kostelanetz will also maestro in Oslo, Amsterdam, Paris and London, where he will conduct the Royal Philharmonic in a special Coronation Week concert.

After returning to the U. S., he will head for South Africa in August to conduct the Johannesburg Symph.

Stafford Tops Femme Vocalist Contingent With 4 Current Clicks

With four platter releases racking up big sales around the country, Jo Stafford on Columbia Records is currently the top femme vocalist on wax. Miss Stafford has topped the disk field for more than six weeks with her waxing of "You Belong to Me." Combined sales of "Belong to Me" and previous release, "Jambalaya," have passed the 1,000,000 mark. Her etching of "Early Autumn" has been building steadily while latest release, "Settin' the Woods on Fire," in which she's teamed with Frankie Laine, racked up 200,000 sales in three weeks on the market.

Col estimates that Miss Stafford's waxings sell on an average of 2,000,000 annually. The disk royalties and personal appearances give her a yearly gross of $300,000.

Commodore Music Claims Infringement on 'Honky'

Peer International, Decca, RCA Victor and Columbia were named defendants in an infringement suit filed in N. Y. Federal Court Monday (20) by Commodore Music. It's charged that Peer's tune, "It Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels," which was recorded by the diskeries named, is a piracy of "The Wild Side of Life," tune assigned to Commodore.

"Honky Tonk Angels" was written by J. D. Miller while William Warren and Artie A. Carter collabed on "Wild Side of Life." Commodore is seeking an injunction and damages sustained.

SONG'S THE MAIN THING--DISKERS

From the diskers' point of view, Dave Kapp, RCA Victor's pop artists and repertoire chief, is of the opinion that the present Tin Pan Alley situation is not a case of ASCAP vs. BMI but of writer against writer and publisher against publisher. And that's the way it should be, says Kapp.

The Victor exec points out that where writers used to be counted in the hundreds now they are counted in the thousands. A proportionate hike from tens to hundreds goes for the publishing picture. Each one is trying to get his share of the music dollar, resulting in the highly competitive status of the music business today.

For Kapp, one of the key differences between the bygone and modern-day music eras is the lack of a concentrated plugging medium. In contrast to the 1930s when air plugs by two such artists as Bing Crosby and Kate Smith could make a song, the current business is dependent on 2,000 disk jockeys, each one of whom receives from 60 to 75 disks a week. It is this diffusion of plugs, Kapp claims, which has made obsolete the old publisher methods with the large professional staffs and the heavy nut, from $5,000 to $40,000, needed to put over a plug song. A publisher today can't risk this type of investment on any one song, according to Kapp, because there is no assurance that he can get it across enough times to enough customers.

The conflict in the business, as Kapp sees it, is more between the different approaches to writing than between the different licensing societies. "I don't care what the licensing affiliation of a tune is," Kapp said, "I am only interested in its potential to become a hit."

In the Modern Idiom

The newer writers, many of whom are in BMI, have come up with a bigger share of hits these days because they are writing in a contemporary idiom, Kapp contends. "They seem more attuned to the new generation of music buyers than the veteran writers who still think in terms of writing great standards."

Kapp believes, however, that the vet ASCAP writers can once again assert their dominance if they would tailor their tunes to the market of today and not of yesterday. "ASCAP still has the great talents," Kapp said, "and they can still turn out the songs that will sell. It's wrong to say that only bad songs are selling today. Give the public what they want in a language they can understand and they will buy the good songs too, such as 'Too Young'." Kapp believes that one of the remedies for the vet writers is a recognition of the condition and demands of the present market.

After all, Kapp said, ASCAP writers were responsible once for such numbers as "Barney Google," "Yes, We Have No Bananas," "Flat Foot Floogee" and "I'm Dancing With Tears in My Eyes." Kapp pointed out that the latter tune is the yesteryear version of "Tennessee Waltz," and was a hit because it was in the popular idiom of its day.

Must 'Stun 'Em'

One factor in the current idiom, Kapp says, is that a tune must be literally "stunning" in order to get a hearing. The new writers understand this need as do the diskers themselves in the struggle to get an audience. Without that John Abbott, exec of Francis, Day & Hunter, is due in New York early in November, accompanied by his wife.

It is essentially a holiday visit to renew old U. S. friendships.

New ASCAP Payoff Plan for Pubs Draws Lotsa Kudos, Some Squawks

The revised payoff system for publishers in the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, which went into effect with the dividend checks mailed last week, resulted only in minor alterations in income received by each publisher. The failure of some of the smaller firms to receive substantial increases caused anticipated squawks but, on the whole, ASCAP publishers appear to be overwhelmingly favorable to the new system.

The new system has put an end to the old arbitrary "availability" ratings by giving the availability factor, which accounts for 30% of the total publishers' melon, on a strict mathematical base. Availability is now rated on a five-year performance average of all songs more than two years old in each publisher catalog. The new system was devised as a result of persistent squawks by some publishers that they were being short-changed in their dividend payments. Southern Music cracked the situation by winning a promotion in its rating after appealing to an outside arbitration board set up as a result of the antitrust decree.

Some of the smaller publishers are still unhappy and want the establishment of a 100% performance basis for the payoff regardless of the age of the songs performed. They claim that even if they get a smash hit, it still doesn't hike their availability rating in view of the two-year limitation.

The medium-sized pubs, however, endorse the new system because they see the possibility for steady growth within the ASCAP system. They point out that the powerhouse pubs, like the Music Publishers Holding Corp., the Big Three and the Chappell combine, would still get the bulk of the coin whatever plan was adopted. Under the new system, however, even the smaller pubs can advance through strengthening of their catalogs and plugging staffs.

These publishers also contend that the stress on old songs, via the two-year proviso in the availability factor, is right since ASCAP is based on the old songs. It's argued that ASCAP's best bargaining feature is its vast reservoir of oldies, whose value to the broadcasters is far more than the current clicks.

If ASCAP's payoff were based exclusively on current plugs, pubs fear it would lead to inflated and artificial performance ratings via hypoed plugging and outright payola. The current system, however, allows for the growth of a standard catalog with an ever-increasing value.

Young Chi Bandleader Killed in Brawl Mixup

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Raoul Mendez, 21, a bandleader here, was accidently shot and killed early Saturday morning (18) by a watchman who thought a group of men were attacking him.

Mendez, who was featured at the Preview Lounge recently, was attending a dance at a place near the shooting.

Victor, Without Investing, Nabs 'Hazel Flagg' for Wax; May Cut Bette Davis Show

RCA Victor will do the original cast album of the new Jule Styne-Bob Hilliard legit musical, "Hazel Flagg," musicalization of "Nothing Sacred," which Chappell Music is publishing. Cast includes Helen Gallagher, Benay Venuta and Thomas Mitchell. Consistent with new RCA policy, neither the company (nor veepee Manie Sacks, through whom it sometimes operated) is investing in the show. Sacks handled this deal but also isn't investing personally either. Songsmith Styne and George Abbott are producing.

RCA will probably also disk the original album of "Two's Company" by Charles Sherman, Vernon Duke, Ogden Nash and Sammy Cohn, with Bette Davis marking her Broadway musical debut.

RCA also is waxing "My Darlin Aida."

LESTER SUES CORAL FOR 5G ROYALTIES

Jerry Lester filed suit in N. Y. Supreme Court Monday (20) against Coral Records for royalties allegedly due him from four sides he etched for the diskery. Lester claims that a little more than $5,000 is due him under a 1950 pact with Coral for his waxings of "Orange Colored Sky," "Time Takes Care of Everything," "Bean Bag Song" and "Your Sister Knocks Me Out."

Coral asked for a dismissal of the complaint claiming that a California court, which had been appointed receiver of Lester's assets, had requested that they withhold any monies due him.

Col Gears Okeh Subsid For Indie Distrib Setup

Okeh Records, Columbia Records' blues and rhythm subsid, is being geared by the parent company into a quasi-independent operation with a separate distrib setup. Move is a result of the inability of regular pop labels to crack the b&r market via the regular distrib channels. In fact, most of the top sellers in the b&r field currently stem from indie diskeries that shoot exclusively for the specialized retailers and customers.

As the initial step, indie distrib outlets have been pacted in three cities, Detroit, Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Col's Boyd Push

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Jimmy Boyd, 13-year-old singer from Mississippi, is being set for a major promotional push by Columbia Records with a new Christmas etching, "I Saw Mama Kissing Santa Claus." Mitch Miller, Col's artists and repertoire chief, cut the tune on his current stay here and the side has been pre-sold to distribs with a 100,000 advance order.

Boyd appears daily on the Al Jarvis show on KECA-TV, Hollywood, and will star in the "Peck's Bad Boy" video series now in preparation.

Pubs in N.Y. Meeting To Discuss Need For Revision of 1909 Law

Need for revision of the Copyright Law in the light of the recently enacted Geneva Universal Copyright Convention will be discussed at a conference of music publishers at the Hotel Warwick, N. Y., Nov. 12.

Leonard Feist, prexy of the Music Publishers Assn. under whose auspices the confab will be held, said, "we operate, in 1952, under laws based on a 1909 dollar and a 1909 culture. We are going to develop a longterm campaign to modernize obsolete sections of the law."

Mitchell Miller Guests Longhair Oboe Concert

Mitch Miller, Columbia Records artists & repertoire head, will be guest oboist with the Saidenberg Little Symphony at a YMHA, N. Y., concert Nov. 2.

Incidentally, Miller's monicker when he switches to longhair oboe is Mitchell Miller.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By MIKE GROSS

Helen O'Connell-Gisele MacKenzie: "Water Can't Quench The Fire of Love"-"A Crazy Waltz" (Capitol). Miss O'Connell and Miss MacKenzie have put their pipes together on a pair of offbeat novelty items that should please the juke trade. Gals are in a frivolous mood here and the dual gaiety projects strongly. "Love" should hit payoff bracket first because of its driving country-styled beat and catchy lyric. Femmes give it plenty of spark. "Crazy Waltz" is a cute entry but it doesn't hit as hard as its mate. It'll get plenty of spins, however. Dave Cavanaugh offers an a-one orch assist.

Hugo Winterhalter Orch: "Blue Violins" - "Fandango" (Victor). Hugo Winterhalter has a sock followup to his highriding "Vanessa" with "Blue Violins." It's a tasty instrumental dish which will chalk up hefty spins on all levels. Tune has a captivating melodic line which Winterhalter delivers with a rich, full interpretation. Reverse is in a lighter groove and shows off the brighter side of the Winterhalter orch styling to advantage. Due for solid play.

Al Martino: "Now"-"In All This World" (Capitol). Since he switched to Capitol several months ago after kicking off the smash "Here In My Heart" on the indie BBS label, Al Martino hasn't been able to move out of the near-hit bracket. "Now" may do the trick. Martino is in top vocal form on this side and the tune serves as an excellent showcasing for his big-voiced technique. It's an above average ballad that could catch on. Martino's efforts on the bottom deck are less successful.

Tony Alamo: "If I Had Wings"-"After Your Love" (M-G-M). Tony Alamo, ex-Sammy Kaye orch vocalist, impresses as a platter potent in solo initialer for M-G-M. He's a fine legitimate baritone who doesn't need any wax-gimmickry to create impact. Sides, however, will rate spins on the Alamo pipings only since his material is far from top calibre output "Wings" is the better tune but its take-off chances are slim. "After Your Love" is a lacklustre entry which even Alamo can't help. Norman Greene's orch is standout on the backing.

Kai Ericson - Gordon Jenkins Orch: "Bring Back The Sunshine"-"North Country" (Decca). Decca's latest male vocalist entry, Kai Ericson, will have to wait for tunes that are stronger pop fare before his impact on the market can be ascertained. He displays a good set of pipes and a sock masculine quality which should appeal to the femmes. "Bring Back The Sunshine is a moderate entry that rates occasional spins because of the top-drawer blending of Ericson's vocal and the Gordon Jenkins orch and chorus. They show best on "North Country," a spirited number with some commercial potential.

Ella Mae Morse: "Greyhound"-"Jump Back Honey" (Capitol). This is a high-voltage platter headed for big returns. Both tunes are offbeat items which Ella Mae Morse drives home with clicko effect. Sides are packed with frenzy a la Miss Morse and will attract plenty juke trade coin, "Greyhound" is a tour de force for Miss Morse and the orch backing under Joe Lippman's baton. "Jump Back Honey" is in the same frantic groove but it's closer to orthodox pop material and should take off fast.

Danny Winchell: "Carolina in the Morning"-"There Goes My Heart" (M-G-M). "Carolina in the Morning" gets an old-fashioned ride via Danny Winchell's neat workover. Winchell's pleasant piping style brings a charm and freshness to the oldie that should keep it moving with the platter spinners. He gives "There Goes My Heart" the kind of warmhearted reading that wins fans.

Dorothy Loudon: "Nickel and Dime Man"-"Sinnin' Again" (Victor). Dorothy Loudon, one of Victor's recent femme acquisitions, continues to impress as a sock platter stylist with breakaway potential. She's got some interesting material to work with on this coupling but sides aren't strong enough for hit bracket spotting. They rate solid spins though, as fine examples of Miss Loudon's technique. On "Nickel and Dime Man," she hits a neat Calypso beat while "Sinnin' Again" showcases her exciting torchy style.

Longhair Disk Review

Lehar: The Merry Widow. With Dorothy Kirsten, Robert Rounseville, Genevieve Warner, Clifford Harvuot, Wesley Dalton, others; orch and chorus; Lehman Engel, conductor; Goddard Lieberson, producer. (Columbia, LP, $5.45). This is a warm, lively recording of the charming Viennese operetta perennial, done in English, with complete score. Expert singers do the engaging operetta full justice for a gay, lilting production under Goddard Lieberson's careful, personal guidance. Cast has been well selected, and the graceful score, full of charming melodies, many of them familiar, sounds fresh and intriguing again.

Dorothy Kirsten brings a beautiful lyric soprano to a choice rendition of "Vilia," and to such fine duets (with Robert Rounseville) as the gay "Cavalier" and especially the lilting "Merry Widow Waltz" ("I Love You So"). Rounseville's ringing high baritone is also an asset for the "Maxim's" solo, and in the rousing march, "Women" ("Girls, Girls, Girls"), supported by chorus. Other leads, chorus and orchestra lend good support, under Lehman Engel's sensitive baton, for a merry recording. Bron.

Philly Orch's 50th Anni In N.Y.; Zorina as Lead

The Philadelphia Orchestra's Nov. 18 Carnegie Hall concert will officially mark the 50th anniversary of the Quaker City orchestra's New York debut. To celebrate the event, conductor Eugene Ormandy will direct a concert version of Arthur Honegger's "Jeanne d'Arc Au Bucher."

Vera Zorina will take the speaking role of Joan of Arc.

'Too Many Disks' Squawks Prompt Major Cos. to Hold Down Releases

In response to squawks from all sectors of the music biz over "too many disks," the major companies are currently holding their weekly releases to the lowest figure in several years. Most of the majors are now turning out about four records a week, and occasionally have been dipping to two or three platters in an effort to milk past releases to the maximum.

Coral Records, Decca's subsid. highlighted the trend last week with an announcement to its distributors that it will release only a couple of more records for the balance of the year. Company is now riding with 10 good sellers and has decided to push these instead of issuing additional sides.

Retail outlets have been clamoring for fewer releases over the past few years as a result of overloaded inventories. Under a setup where some 60 to 75 disks a week are released on the major labels, it has become virtually impossible for the average nabe store to keep abreast of the releases and remain solvent at the same time. New policy of fewer releases represents a more selective approach which permits the retailer to get off the hook on any current stocks that he buys.

Rackmil Back East

Milton R. Rackmil, prexy of both Decca Records and Universal Pictures, returns to New York tomorrow (Thurs.) after a three-week visit to the Coast.

Rackmil has been operating in the prexy spot of both companies under a pact which requires him to give two-thirds of his time to Universal and one-third to Decca.

ELMORE WHITE FORMS OWN BMI PUB FIRM

Now Big Three Hits Hillbilly Trail Via Nashville Rep; Other Folk Notes

Nashville, Oct. 21.

New York's Big Three firm (Robbins, Feist & Miller) is first of parent ASCAP associates to place representative in Nashville with appointment of Bill Morgan for immediate duty. Morgan (country singer George Morgan's brother) has been handling publicity and promotion for several of WSM's artists. New duties will be in addition to these.

WSM's "Grand Ole Opry" backstage last Saturday night (18) looked like a New York musicman's meeting. On hand were Frank Loesser with associates, Herb Reis (Frank Music, and Nat Tannen (Tannen Music). RCA Victor well represented with Steve Sholes, country A & R boss; Bob McCluskey, promotion dept. head; and Sam Wallace, Atlanta distributor manager and active in label's country planning. Capitol's Lloyd Cook, district head; Julian Aberbach, Hill & Range topper; and E. E. Simon, Jr., head of Springfield, Missouri's Radiozark Enterprises, were also on hand. Univ. of Florida's 50 man grid team had reservations for entire four hour performance.

RCA Victor's recording past week included album sides by label's comedy Homer and Jethro team with material from one of Frank Loesser's Broadway scores. Release will come early next year with top promosh from Loesser's offices and RCA Victor.

Jim Denney, WSM's Artist Bureau head, reports artists' personal appearance nets for the year up 10% over same 1951 period.

Acuff Serenades Taft

Roy Acuff and his Smoky Mountain Group entertained at Senator Taft's speech in Huntington, W. Va., last Saturday night (18). Acuff was defeated in Tennessee's gubernatorial race by his Democratic opponent four years back, but remains active in Republican barnstorming every opportunity.

Randy Wood being host to local musicmen and out-of-towners at Hermitage Hotel's Main Ball Room Oct. 24 in interests of his Dot Records enterprise housed in nearby Gallatin, Tenn.

Chi Test Suit on 12 Tunes to Clarify Igoe's Decision on Unlicensed Disks

Chicago, Oct. 21.

In a crackdown move against the distribution of unlicensed disks in the midwest following similar successful measures in the east recently, a group of top publishers, through agent and trustee Harry Fox, filed suit in Chicago Federal Court last week against two diskeries, Chess Records and James H. Martin, Inc. Suit, covering test cases on 12 different tunes, is of particular importance to the music industry because it involves clarification of Federal Judge Michael Igoe's decision in the Shapiro-Bernstein vs. Miracle Records suit of a couple of years ago.

Since the decision of Judge Igoe of the same Federal district court, in the case of Shapiro-Bernstein against Miracle Records, the midwest has been flooded with unlicensed recordings. They are being manufactured by a number of companies upon the advice of their attorneys that the music publishers can have no redress.

These attorneys point to the ruling in Judge Igoe's decision that "the production and sale of a phonograph record is fully as much a publication as production and sale of sheet music. I can see no practical distinction between the two. * * * When phonograph records of a musical composition are available for purchase in every city, town and hamlet, certainly the dissemination of the composition to the public is complete, and is as complete as by sale of a sheet music reproduction of the composition."

They then argue that as the publication of sheet music without the required copyright notice, either before or after the copyright of the composition, throws it in the public domain, the publication of a phonograph record without such notice either before or after copyright must have the same effect. They have accordingly advised their clients that once a phonograph recording has been made and disseminated under a license from the proprietor of a composition (either common law or copyright), future recordings can be made without a license from the proprietor or under the compulsory provision of the Copyright Act.

The attorneys for Fox are Arvey, Hodes & Mantynband, Chicago law firm, in association with Julian T. Abeles of Abeles & Bernstein. One group of actions was instituted against Chess Records, Phil Chess and Leonard Chess, and the other against James H. Martin, Inc., and James H. Martin.

Plaintiffs in the actions are Mills Music, Shapiro-Bernstein, Edwin H. Morris Music, Famous, Paramount, Santly-Joy, Bourne, Volando, Robbins, Feist and American Academy of Music, a Mills subsid.

Seek to Dissipate Argument

The primary purpose of these test cases brought by Fox is to dissipate this argument, and to obtain a determination that any such unlicensed recording is an infringement. His attorneys will likewise seek to establish the same legal precedents that Abeles successfully established for Fox, in the recent test cases in the N. Y. Federal Court against Paradox Industries and Dante Bollentino. This involves an 8c royalty, a minimum of $250 for each infringement, and a personal judgment against the individuals conducting each recording company.

The current litigation is likewise a novel one in that the actions have been brought in unfair competition for the unlawful use of the titles as well as in infringement for the unlawful use of the compositions. Fox will seek to establish that in such actions the plaintiff publishers are entitled to recover damages for the unfair competition, in addition to the 8c royalty and $250 minimum for each infringement. As the sale of these records are said to be substantial, in some instances in the six-figure bracket, Fox is confident that the recovery will be so out of proportion to the regular 2c royalty as to discourage all such future operations in the west as did the judgments he obtained against Paradox and Bollentino in the east.

Decca's Kid Pitch

Decca Records is gearing for a major pitch for the kidisk market with a package of 21 platters primed for the Christmas market. As a part of the drive, diskery is issuing 500,000 kidisk catalogs and is setting a sales drive on its juve line during November.

Among Decca artists on the kidisk label are Peter Lind Hayes, Frank Luther, Ray Bolger and "The Lone Ranger." Si Rady is heading the kidisk operation along with being chief of Decca's longhair Gold Seal division.

Chappell's Video Book Spotlights New Type Of Plugging Showmanship

Perhaps in light of the "service" BMI accords radio-TV production people—and the lack thereof from ASCAP sources—Max Dreyfus & Co. have taken the initiative with a compact "Chappell Television Book" which video producer Perry Lafferty (Kay Kyser, Victor Borge, Freddy Martin, Peter Lind Hayes shows, etc.) has edited. As the title indicates it is intended for TV producers, giving dramatic treatments for video of 40 top standards from Chappell's collective catalog. (There is a dominant proportion of DeSylva, Brown & Henderson copyrights, along with Williamson Bros., T. B. Harms Co., Cinephonic, Ascherberg, Hopwood & Crew and Chappell Music excerpts from British and American sources).

Lafferty realistically approaches his showmanly script suggestions by culling songs whose lyric content speak for themselves, and whose values can be embellished with a minimum of people and props. The singers, dancers and/or other interpreters can be two or three; the "production" values at a minimum. The ingenuity of the local TV station producer can do much or little with what has been given him in this "Chappell Television Book," which bids fair to be a standard for every publishing house.

The songs perforce are dominantly boy-meets (or loses)-girl, and Lafferty has evidenced showmanship savvy in contriving variations on the theme, several of them with considerable good humor which is obviously a good change of pace. Dominantly this "Chappell Music Book" gives Dreyfus' team a quick entree into production values with the new medium. PS—in another era it was known as the "ill. slide," trade argot for the oldfashioned illustrated song slides. Today's technological progress has given a slicker variation on the theme. Yesteryear's nabe movie house, Coney Island and 6-day bike race songpluggers (Jimmy Flynn, Leo Lewin, Al Beilin, Ray Walker, Maurice Abrahams, et al.) have given way to kinescopes and production scripts such as this one fashioned for Chappell by Perry Lafferty. The book also has a foreword by CBS-TV veep Hubbell Robinson, Jr.

M-G-M APES PIX WITH DOUBLE-FEATURE SET

Taking its cue from the pic business' double feature b.o. lure, M-G-M Records is prepping packages of soundtrack scores from two Metro films on a single long play platter. Heretofore the diskery had confined its soundtrack packages to a single film at a time.

Teeoff platter, skedded for Nov. 21 release, will include the soundtrack of the background music from "Ivanhoe" and "Plymouth Adventure." Miklos Rozsa heads the orch on both sides. M-G-M plans to follow this tandem with soundtracks from the upcoming Metro pix, "Everything I Have Is Yours" and "Lilli." Orch on "Yours" will be headed by Hans Sommer while David Rose and Johnny Green will share the baton on "Lilli." Diskery will continue to release soundtrack albums of the big Metro musicals as solo offerings.

Pension Fund

would be laid aside in a pension fund. At the age of 65, each ASCAP member will become eligible for a pension to be scaled proportionately to each member's payments into the fund.

Suggestion has been meeting wide favor in ASCAP cleffer ranks in view of the economic uncertainties of the music business. Before 1950, the ASCAP payoff plan was equivalent to "social securiy" insofar as payments to individual writers never went downwards. It worked out so that many writers who received about $5,000 yearly went into retirement and lived exclusively on their ASCAP checks.

The new accent on performances, however, has ended the "security" feature. Despite efforts to include cushions in the current plan, writers' incomes have been fluctuating widely along with their performance ratings. It's expected that the pension plan will ease the fears of aging ASCAP writers who are unable to hustle as many plugs as the younger and more energetic members.

station manager....the whole radio station staff as its army. The army must be indoctrinated. That is where BMI wins over ASCAP.

The Human Equation

To the disk jockey BMI is a "human" organization. It regularly bombards the music library with all sorts of interesting material for posting. A monthly, colorful calender which also lists, by the way, the top BMI tunes. A newsletter comes in regularly which is "must" reading for the DJ. BMI even prints the DJ's picture in a glossy eight-page magazine. In short, BMI bends over backward to make the DJ happy . . . and he is influenced.

On the other hand, the DJ thinks of ASCAP as an aloof old organization located in an ivory tower somewhere in Manhattan. On a trip to New York he would never think of popping in for a visit in the ASCAP offices. He would, of course, stop in to see the folks at BMI. Nobody in the world is stopping ASCAP from using a tiny fraction of its quarterly "melon" in an effort to "humanize" itself. I will happily send ASCAP 10 ideas, free, upon receipt of their request to get them started down off the horse. ASCAP has got to stop being mad at radio stations for what they did to them so long ago. They can continue the grudge against station managers if they want. They need only concern themselves with the DJ, since he controls a major part of the local programming.

Let me cite the experience of a novice songwriter. Myself. When I told an ASCAP publisher, once, that I had some tunes that I'd like him to listen to, he held up his hands in anguish and said "no" in a speech of 15 minutes' duration. Didn't even want to hear them. I'd like to mention that this particular publisher hasn't had a hit in his catalog for over two years.

I approached, a BMI publisher. Listen to them? Sure! Not only listen to them, but offer constructive criticism, too! I've learned they consider anything and everything with a wide-open mind. This publisher, incidentally, has had more tunes on the Hit Parade than they know what to do with.

Our conclusion would be that the DJ is definitely influenced by BMI. He doesn't consciously plug BMI tunes, but when in doubt for a selection he'll remember the songs BMI has been telling him about in every manner conceivable. That, coupled with the fresh BMI outlook for new songs, is probably the answer in part to today's prominence for Broadcast Music, Inc.

PRESSER TO PUBLISH MASK & WIG SHOW SCORE

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

Theodore Presser Music, longhair music publishing firm, will launch its first venture into the pop field by putting out score of "Here's Howe," 65th annual production of the Mask and Wig Club, University of Pennsylvania theatrical group. Show opens Nov. 21 at the Erlanger Theatre.

Songs this year are by Allison F. Fleitas, class of 1933, and Clay A. Boland, Jr., '53. Boland, incidentally, is the son of Dr. Clay A. Boland, songwriting dentist who contrived a half-dozen scores for Mask & Wig shows.

"Here's Howe" is a revival by the Wiggers, of their 1923 production. Two songs by Charles Gilpin from the original show are featured, to which Fleitas has written additional lyrics.

Inside Orchestras—Music

The N. Y. Sunday News (19), in its lead editorial, took a swing at Johnnie Ray and the flock of lachrymose crooners and tunes that have been dominating the music biz for the past year. News contends that there has been too much of this moaning set to alleged music. "Why not turn a lot of it off for a while," editorial adds, "and turn on some humor, even if it's no better than the 'Hut Sut' or 'Mairsy Doats' idiocy of a few years ago?" Editorial also stated, "Mr. Ray is an able performer in his line, assuming you like his line. But when Ray's synthetic tears grow into a tidal wave of glycerine and goo, and the Hit Parade gets up to its hips in sobsters shedding brine, then we think it's time to call some cops. A few cops that we'd nominate would be Jimmy Durante, Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Arthur Godfrey and Milton Berle. These babies (and there are others) could turn the heat of satire and ridicule on the current flood of gush, mush and boohoola, and would stand a fair chance of drying most of it up."

It was, incidentally, exactly a year ago this week that Columbia Records issued the Ray sides, "Cry" and "Little White Cloud That Cried," which catapulted the singer into national prominence. To commemorate the first anni, Columbia is releasing a couple of more tearjerkers, "Gee But I'm Lonesome" and "Don't Say Love Is Ended."

The auctioneer's hammer, which was to have fallen on Chicago's Trianon ballroom last Tuesday (14), has been stayed. William Karzas, owner of the Trianon, said the sale was called off at the last minute when he received "a flood of protests from patrons who asked us to reconsider." The Trianon will continue to operate nightly except Mondays and Wednesdays.

New director of RCA Victor public relations Julius Haber was inadvertently given a cut in VARIETY's story last week by billing him publicity chief.

Latter post, which is under Haber's overall supervision, is held by Hal Desfor, as he did when Jim Toney was the p.r. chief. Toney has been moved up to director of distribution for consumer products.

RCA Longhair EPs Over 500,000

RCA Victor's introduction of the 45 rpm "extended play" disks early in September is shaping up as one of the most successful promotions in the company's recent history. The new-style platters have been gaining increasing momentum since their bow two months ago and have already gone over the 500,000 mark in single-disk sales. This figure only covers the longhair Red Seal releases since the pop 45 EP's have been out too soon for a retailer reaction.

The 45 EP's have been moving at a far more rapid pace than did the original 45 rpm platters at the outset three years ago. That's explained, of course, by the fact that the EP's are riding on the standard 45 promotion by Victor plus the fact that over 7,000,000 phonograph machines are now equipped to handle the new platters.

Victor, meantime, is going all out on its EP promotion via all advertising media. One new important phase has been added with a transcription service to radio stations, featuring the EP disks. Titled "The Album Shop," the transcriptions are being aired currently by 188 indie stations around the country. Show is being packaged by Henry Onorati, formerly Victor's pop promotion manager, who has been commissioned to do this special job.

"The Album Shop" transcriptions completes the radio program service covering the whole Victor line. The Red Seal division has been riding with two shows, "Favorites of the Famous" and "Music You Want," while the pop department has the "Stars Review the Hits" show and the kiddie department has the "Children's Story Time" e. t.'s. Shows are sent cuffo to the stations, with local distribs and retailers getting the option on buying spots fore and aft.

Who Cares If It's BMI or ASCAP

initial impact, even the best tune and lyric might get lost in that shuffle produced by too many songs and too many disks.

One BMI Viewpoint

Another music publisher, a BMI affiliate, observes that "I never found that it helps us one way or the other. In fact, I was discussing that very thing recently with a publisher who is on both sides of the fence, i.e., has both ASCAP and BMI firms. He lays it all at the door of the deejays." Since the jukeboxes and the general public follow the disk jockeys, the latter are the big keys in this new exploitation development. Back of the DJ is the a.&r. man, and perhaps their attitude best may be illustrated by one artist & repertoire exec who is quoted as cracking, "Who cares about the big publishers any longer? That goes for the best of 'em; the writers included. Why so-and-so hasn't had a pop hit for years, so who cares? Main thing is to make what our customers will buy."

This veteran publisher observes that on a recent visit to Washington, D. C., he "met, lunched and drank with seven or eight local disk jocks and you'd be surprised how much knowledge they all have of the music business in general. But I must admit that none of them even indicated that they push one thing over another. This is just a trend that happened with the evolution of the times. True, it's a situation due perhaps to the a.&r. men, such as the one who insists 'I need none of the biggies or the smallies; I can get songs my own way, and until I'm a flop I'll continue doing so, so long as it fits our artists and our market.'

"Despite this objectivity I do get the feeling that the deejays, like many in the trade, have a lingering suspicion that ASCAP has been too much of a closed-shop. I sense that some of these deejays are frustrated songwriters—as who isn't? You know how many think, want or feel they too can write songs; and it must be admitted that BMI's flock of current pop hits, from relatively unknown songwriters, seems to substantiate that premise. So, maybe, the deejays are emotionally inclined to encourage some unknown songsmith, but I must come back to the original premise—they don't look to see if it's SESAC or ASCAP or BMI or if it's Berlin or Joe Hillbilly. If they like the interpretation they give it a ride, and yesterday's Four Aces or Johnnie Ray, Ames Bros., Al Martino, or make up any name of a former unknown who has sprung to disk fame, can become a household word.

"One more thing comes to mind—maybe we're leveling at the wrong thing in this ASCAP singing of the 'BMI Blues,' because it's not BMI, per se; obviously it's the record, the interpretation, the artist and the combination thereof. The fact that the batting average is in favor of BMI may be purely coincidental." (To this, the ASCAPites charge, "impurely" coincidental, because as one name songsmith puts it, it could readily be solved by one simple thing—"give more plugging time to ASCAP songs on the network chain-controlled diskeries, deejays and exploitation outlets, meaning radio and TV stations.")

M-G-M's Frank Walker Denies BMI Favoritism

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

My 34 years in the record business encompasses both the "before" and "after" BMI periods.

Insofar as I am concerned, the entrance of BMI into the music business made no change whatsoever in the duties of an a&r man. His principal function is to procure the best possible song and match it up with the best possible artist, disregarding entirely publishers, writers, or their particular affiliations. Naturally consideration has always been given to the importance of the writer and the publisher, and the amount of work to be done in the proper exploitation of the song.

Any a&r man who would discriminate against a song because it was ASCAP or BMI, or who would favor the recording of a song because of the song's connection with either organization, should have his head examined quickly, and I am sure that within a reasonable length of time he would find work in some other line of endeavor. I know that in many instances a song is picked, assigned to an artist, recorded, approved and ready for listing, without knowledge or interest in whether it is ASCAP or BMI. I will personally defend any a&r man in the record business on these grounds.

I would, however, through years of experience, like to throw perhaps a bit of light on "why" the current top pops seemingly favor BMI. It could be a long story, but we can sum it up to a great extent in two words—"country music."

Twentyfive years ago the trend began turning toward music of this type—simple, direct songs with a touch of the hills and plains running through them. The country loved them, but the cities could not see them. Two major wars made a considerable difference, for a total of some 20,000,000 men began travelling to all corners of the U. S., and even though many of them came from the cities, they learned the importance of this type of American folk lore.

It is for this reason that the play on radio stations throughout the country and the recording of many of these songs has come about, and it would seem that BMI has been rather fortunate in coming into the field of music at a time when recognition was being given by the public to country songs.

Pat Ballard Also Sees Equal Break for Writers

Editor, VARIETY:

I think it would be a fair statement to make that regardless of what strange and new elements may have crept into the music business, I doubt if there is any affiliation between anybody that prevents the record companies recording a piece of material they feel will sell records. Recently, as an individual writer, I have been in a few inner-sanctums with tunes. Two of the biggest a&r men told me frankly that they are looking for songs first of all, whether the publisher is big, little, BMI, ASCAP, or insolvent and of a hateful nature.

I think, in all fairness, they mean this. Their jobs depend upon coming up with those half-million and million hits . . . and while there will always be some favoritism in every business, I think if you can get a good song, politely show it to the czars, and they go for it, there's no problem. The problem is to get the good song.

Hotel Pierre, N. Y.

Rose Marie, Teddy & Phyllis Rodriguez; Stanley Melba and Chico Relli Orchs; $1.50 and $2 cover.

Rose Marie, just-closed as femme lead in "Top Banana" (Phil Silvers), gives the posh environs of the Pierre's Cotillion Room quite a little bounce. It's a good change of pace and maestro-impresario Stanley Melba should do more of it. The polite femme and male song delineators have become too stylized in the hotel room circuit and the answer is that the paprika Kay Thompson-Williams Bros. act is perking up the Persian Room, the across-5th Ave. "opposition," not a little.

No longer the "Baby" Rose Marie of adolescent grooming, the comedienne is quite a hunk of singing babe who knows her way around cafe floors albeit inhibited by essaying too precious material. That second number, for example, which has since been displaced. When she gets into the zingier Schnozzola stuff; the gags asides (when they're good, they're boffola, although some of them are more polite snickers than riotous yocks), and zingier numbers she is in high. She makes a good femme Durante, and in general knows how to sell. She might essay an excerpt from "Banana" for all its undistinction as a distinguished chore, and also something more from the pop crop. Rose Marie has been around too long not to know how to edit her stuff for the medium.

Teddy & Phyllis Rodriguez also have been around as ballroomologists. They get rolling about midriff with the Charleston, the waterglass-on-the-noggin number (Chilean), but when they don't essay more characteristic stuff they are in too much of an orthodox pattern and, as such, suffer comparison.

Per usual, Melba affably emcees the proceedings which his band capably paces. The relief combo is Chico Relli and his Rhumbas, likewise a standard in this class room which maitre d'Pasquale major domos in savvy manner. Abel.

Chez Paree, Chi

Chicago, Oct. 17.

Danny Thomas, Wini Shaw, Estelle Sloan, Johnny Martin, Chez Adorables (8), Brian Farnon Orch; $3.50 minimum, $1 cover.

Danny Thomas' periodic Chez Paree visitations have always been one of the season's high spots. Comic's current four-week stay, launched Friday (17) with an overflow dinner crowd, looks a cinch to be the kind of magnet that makes a booking "genius" out of Dave Halper.

Thomas steps onto the floor with an initial advantage here, having established himself as a sort of adopted "favorite son" down through the years, harking back to his identity with the old 5100 Club. So via his first-name acquaintanceship with many of the ringsiders and his familiarity with the city, he's able really to put meaning into the standard "it's good to be back in Chicago again" routine. It gives his showmanship here a sock local plus.

As demanded by fans, Thomas' smartly-paced canter of gags, dialect yarns and songs contains a lot of the old standbys. The lox story, the tale of the guy with a flat tire and no jack, and the Irish wake ditty are unwrapped again to boff acclaim. But as befits the serious careerist, there's plenty of new material that's on a par with the old. His comments, apparently kidding-on-the-square re TV, and the travails of a dieting frau are fine stuff and go over big. Entire potpourri of comicalities earns terrific response throughout.

Since it's Thomas that brings out the devotees, it's something of a tough go for the warmup gals, singer Wini Shaw and terper Estelle Sloan. Miss Shaw has trouble holding attention with her songalog, embracing such oldies as "Lullaby of Broadway" and "Lady In Red," and newie "You Belong to Me." Miss Sloan, in the opening slot, succeeds okay with her fast taps, especially the baseball takeoff, but she could well edit a couple of numbers for tighter impact.

Two production numbers by the Adorables, with Johnny Martin vocalizing, are carryovers and thus fall strictly into the filler class this time. Dave.

Cafe de Paris, London

London, Oct. 14.

Harry Richman, George Smith Orch, Ray Ellington Quartet; $5.50 minimum.

It was a nostalgic night for Harry Richman and the customers at this ritzy nitery, and when he delivered his oldies they were greeted with vociferous applause. A good 90% of the act was devoted to a reprise of songs synonymous with his name over a long period.

Richman is filling his first London cabaret assignment in 15 years, although more recently he appeared in West End vaudeville. He has lost none of his zest, exuberance and vigor. He remains the smooth and polished performer and his first entrance, with the inevitable strawhat and cane to the tune of "I'm Glad to Be An Actor," sets him off on the road of memories. The old faves are there in profusion and the customers lap 'em up. "Puttin' on the Ritz," "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," "It Had to Be You," "Sunny Side of the Street," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Birth of the Blues" and many others are all in the Richman series.

The heavy dose of nostalgia is fine and in keeping with the personality, but Richman displays a tendency to overdo the gab side, some of it could comfortably be eliminated, particularly when some of the gags are near becoming standard chestnuts.

But this is only a minor criticism. Whether he's at piano or mike, Richman's personality dominates the room and his deft showmanship insures that customers get what they want. He did a 50-minute route to a crowded opening night, garnering the inevitable bowoff.

Bernie Fenton at the piano and the George Smith orch do a sterling job of backgrounding. A new acquisition on the dais is the Ray Ellington quartet, a name combo with a big following who share the terping time with the other aggregation. Myro.

Mocambo, Hollywood

Hollywood, Oct. 14.

Gloria DeHaven with Don Powell; Eddie Oliver Orch (5); $2 cover.

Film names who venture into vaude or nitery work generally shy away from hometown appearances. There's usually a sound basis for the trepidation; when Gloria DeHaven first tried it two years ago, the ringside wiseacres smirked their "I told you so's."

Now, with considerably more experience, she's back to prove the wiseacres wrong—and she succeeds with no difficulty. Singer has gained, poise, assurance and showmanship and belts over a half-hour songalog that is good entertainment all the way. Sole weak spot is a soft-shoe bit with Don Powell.

Best on the rhythm tunes, Miss DeHaven spices her turn with an occasional ballad such as "You Belong to Me," and with special material stuff that is high calibre. Best is the rollicking "It's the Same the Whole World Over," which provides a smashing finale to the turn. She also has a special ditty on the work of tunesmiths that permits incorporation of a Berlin-DeSylva-Gershwin medley to good results. Throughout, she gets fine backing from Eddie Oliver's musicrew which also handles the dance chores.

Stint readily erases the disappointment Miss DeHaven may have had two years ago. Kap.

Latin Quarter, Boston

Boston, Oct. 18.

Frances Faye, Billy Vine, Sonny Howard, Don Arden Lovelies (8), Arthur Johnson, Dave Lester Orch (9), Zarde Bros. Orch (4); $3 minimum.

Shuttered since last New Year's Eve, the Latin Quarter has reopened under the aegis of a new corporation determined to reglamorize the spot in effort to lure back the visiting firemen and members of that lost tribe, the spenders. As result of a complete facelifting and refurbishing job ranging from the lobby bar throughout the main room to the stage and bandstand focal point, the spot sparkles. New owners have also installed a complete new kitchen presided over by a w.k. Hub chef in an attempt to build the dinner biz.

While plans to open spot were not consummated in time to book a top-drawer name for opener, tee-off bill is adequate with headliner Frances Faye grabbing mitt honors. Gal appeared at first show in street gown, explaining that her wardrobe and music were delayed somewhere between Coast and Hub, but that didn't deter her from giving out with a sesh of songs and banter to click neatly with opening-nighters.

Tossing off "I'm not pretty, but I'm fascinating" and "Do you think my type will ever come back?" Miss Faye warms ringsiders with a melange of songs, including the saucy "Don't Worry About Stranger," "Night and Day," "Darktown Strutters Ball," and bits of rambling pianoistics to add up to an entertaining stint.

Billy Vine, a comic who manages to hit this room each season, uncorks a few new gags but for most part reprises his carbons of his "gang" — Jackie Miles, Buddy Hackett, etc.—throwing in impresh of Richman and Jolson for good measure. Guy's comic antics grabs mixed results.

Sonny Howard opens bill with overlong series of takes on Laine, Armstrong, Lanza, Cole, et al., winding with straight treatment of "Vesta La Guibba."

Don Arden's line, late of Bill Miller's Riviera, in Ft. Lee, N. J., is clicko, the gals cavorting through three slick routines with accent on eye appeal. Art Johnson handles the production vocalizing doubling as emcee, with Dave Lester batoning in his usual efficient manner. Zarde Bros. combo is also on hand to furnish dansapation for customers, splitting chores with Lester. Elie.

Old Romanian, N. Y.

Alfred & Lenore, Larry Marvin, Sadie Banks, Larry Best with Judy Sinclair, Joe LaPorte's Orch, D'Aquila's Latin Orch, Line (6), Showgirls (2); $2.50 minimum.

N. Y. Downtown's "Koshercabana" is going into its 28th year, an apt illustration of current-day nightclub economics in an era when it's a revelation if a cafe lasts 28 days. But through the years Jack Silverman, who started the Old Romanian as a 75-seater and has expanded it to five times its original size, has been making it pay off with probably as great a nightclub value as there is anywhere. Wedding parties, barmitzvah celebrations and anniversaries are the backbone of Silverman's biz, and the Old Romanian has become an institution to that sort of trade. At a $2.50 minimum, where can you beat it?

The current buy is an apt illustration. It comprises standard acts that have appeared on the borscht circuit, notably Larry Best, a clever impressionist; Larry Marvin, a robust, good-looking baritone who majors in Jolsoniana; the perennial Sadie Banks, with her lyrical excursions into love, sex and marriage; and Alfred & Lenore, a dance act who go over with numbers leaning towards the Latin.

Best has a knowing way with dialectics, and his best one is still the apple-eating character, though he has some new ones. Towards the close of his act, Judy Sinclair, lush, blonde looker who recently became Mrs. Best, joins him in a parody number.

Marvin needs a little direction in the selling of his numbers, but he's a bet for the Broadway musicals. He's built like a football tackle; has pretty-boy looks and a belt-'em type of voice that's made to order for the girls.

Miss Banks is a fixture here. She's been through the gamut of show biz, a downtown version of Sophie Tucker.

Joe LaPorte is another longtime standby with his orch, and he plays a neat show while accomping on the fiddle. Kahn.

Ciro's, Hollywood

Hollywood. Oct. 17.

Willie Shore, The 4 Lads, Joe Stabile Orch (10), Bobby Ramos Orch (5) $2; cover.

On the heels of Johnnie Ray's record-setting stand here on the north slope of Sunset Strip comes Willie Shore. His showmanship, hard work and experience carried him over with a fair preem night house. Biz prospects appear okay.

Mixing in, per usual, extraneous chatter amid agile hoofing, Shore experiences some ups and downs on reception, but most of his bits can be classified as ups. In his 30 minutes he uncorks no routine which really whams 'em, but at least interest doesn't flag. What he could use is one really socko routine for climactic punch. His standard pinball-player routine and Scotchman satire bit are the standouts.

An impression is gained that too much of his patter centres on Las Vegas gambling or racetrack bettor badinage. Gal plant he uses

Jim Barton's Stroke Rushes Subs To Vegas; Comic's Speech Retarded

Las Vegas, Oct. 21.

James Barton, making his first major nitery appearance, collapsed from cerebral thrombosis following his opening show at the Thunderbird, Thursday (16). The vet performer, 62, had gone through his act consisting of "Ballroom Lizard," the famous "drunk" routine, and a duet with Maggie Nelson, when he fell to the floor backstage. The only indication of anything amiss in the usual Thunderbird format came during finale, when Barton failed to appear. The audience was not aware that the show's headliner had suffered a stroke.

Rushed to a local hospital immediately by the Thunderbird's producer, Hal Braudis, Barton was placed under care of Dr. J. R. McDaniels, Jr., who pronounced his condition "fair." Since Thursday night, Barton has shown remarkable recuperative powers, with restoration of use of his right arm and hand. His speech faculties, however, are retarded. Barring any unforeseen turn, the actor's condition will continue to improve, according to Dr. McDaniels. Complete rest was prescribed, with a possible date for dismissal from the hospital being announced for Thursday (23). Whether Barton will be able to continue his stage career remains doubtful at this point.

Diosa Costello, et al

Set to replace the stricken Thunderbird headliner is Diosa Costello. After hearing of the unfortunate bowout, Miss Costello rounded up her male terp partner and bongo drummer to motor west. Although no contractual arrangements via agent and the Thunderbird were signed following the Costello decision, producer Braudis okayed everything verbally with Marty Baum in New York. Also heading

Sugar Ray's 15G Potential As French Casino Hoofer

Sugar Ray Robinson may give up the ring should his stand at the French Casino, N.Y., starting Nov. 7, indicate that he can make good in theatrical circles. Robinson was set by Joe Glaser's Associated Booking Corp. into that spot on a deal that can return $15,000 weekly to the pug.

The cafe will retain its present show with Robinson's dance debut in a nitery.

Robinson feels that he still has several fights left in his gloves before he hangs them up. However, if theatrical developments warrant, he'll forget festicuffs.

Saxony Names Vs. Miami Cafes

Miami, Oct. 21.

Straight cafes here can expect the Saxony as definite competish for patronage this season. The swank hostel has set Pupi Campo and his orch, plus Los Chavales de Espana group which clicked at Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y., for a December engagement.

Campo, long a local fave, worked the local Latin Quarter last season and was expected to return to the Lou Walters plushery here this year. He'll probably be spotted in the refurbished Shell-I-Mar Room, a 250-seater which will feature a Latin policy.

Los Chavales are ticketed for the Saxony's Pagoda, which will run as a dining room until 10 p.m. and then turn supper club (seating 350) until the 2 a.m. curfew which local zoning laws apply to hotels in the Saxony sector. Understood Hildegarde and other top hotel-cafe acts are being dickered for the room by the hotel management.

Pitt AGVA Invokes Hikes In 1-Niter, Banquet Scale

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

Nat Nazarro, Jr., head of the local unit of American Guild of Variety Artists, has just notified bookers and agents that minimums for one-niters and banquets rise at the end of this month. It'll be $18 instead of $15 for the single-night stands and $22.50 instead of $17.50 for the eatery circuit dates. At same time, minimum for one-nighters beyond 40 miles of Pittsburgh will go to $25.

Ex-Vaude Team Wins $2,500 From Boston L.Q.

Boston, Oct. 14.

A suit seeking damages of $3,491 from the Latin Quarter Corp. here, by the now dissolved vaude team of Desmond & Mack, was settled in Federal Court here last week for $2,500.

Suit was instigated in 1946 when team lost entire wardrobe in backstage fire at nitery which resulted in act losing six weeks of bookings before suitable wardrobe could be replaced.

M&L Pull 255G In Sock Dallas

Dallas, Oct. 21.

State Fair of Texas, closing its 16-day run, Oct. 4-19, for the 10th consecutive year broke its previous attendance record. Tally at Sunday (19) windup showed 2,387.140 had visited the 187-acre fairgrounds, topping the '51 season total of 2,320,100.

Weekend draws put the expo over when 30,000 worshippers attended a religious festival in the Cotton Bowl. Second annual closing religioso featured Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, as speaker. Fair dropped the ropes at 6 p.m. final day, allowing free gate for the holy session.

Saturday's top lure was the pro grid game of the Dallas Texans and Green Bay Packers, getting 14,000 fans to the Bowl's night game.

"Martin & Lewis Revue," with sellouts at four closing shows (18-19) wound up with a net of $255,300, near to last year's smash legiter, "Guys and Dolls," which drew $267,800 for 24 performances. Attendance was 86,000. Duo skied to N. Y. early yesterday (Mon.) to set a one-nighter eastern tour of the show produced here at State Fair Auditorium. Revue, even without b.o. of the two closing performances, had racked up a record for variety shows at the Texas expo. All 24 shows were to capacity (4,283) or near-SRO houses.

"Ice Cycles of '53" had its best of eight straight season openings here, with 23 blade shows in 16 days grossing better than the '51 "Cycles," which had 100,000 attendance, against this year's 121,700.

Variety Club's Circus stand reported full houses for each performance and reverted to grind policy soon after expo opened. Proceeds will go to Variety Clubs of Texas charities.

St. John Terrell's Motor Music Circus wasn't fortunate in its preem here. Impresario said biz was poor for his experiment, admitting his misunderstanding of the expo setup. "No regrets, and everyone has been very kind, but we should have been located off the midway," he stated. (See story in Legit section.)

Indpls. Overlap on Dates No Test In Blade War of Henie and Wirtz

Indianapolis, Oct. 21.

First round in ice war between Sonja Henie and Arthur M. Wirtz ended here Saturday night (18) with both contenders apparently unhurt by direct competitive test.

Henie management pledged local associates to secrecy on gross before leaving here for Raleigh, N. C., after final performance of two-week stand at Butler Fieldhouse Saturday night. But a reliable source said that she "got her expenses out the first week."

Dick Miller, manager of Coliseum, where the Wirtz show starring Barbara Ann Scott opened Oct. 8 to remain through Sunday (26), claimed attendance is running 5% ahead of last year, when there was no other ice show in town. Standing room has been sold several nights, he said. Coliseum seats 10,500. Henie spokesman claimed average 80% at 7,500-seat Fieldhouse.

Miss Henie's original dates here, Oct. 3-11, overlapped Wirtz's by three days. She announced week's extension, through Oct. 18, opening night on grounds of boxoffice demand. It's understood here that she had option on Fieldhouse until Oct. 25.

There were charges and denials of heavy papering on both sides. Miller accused Miss Henie of "conducting a campaign of spite which is costing her a lot of money." Ken Stevens, Henie show's manager, labeled this "preposterous," stating, "People who are successful in show business, as Miss Henie is, do not do foolish things. She is very happy with the success of her Indianapolis showing and doesn't care to comment.

Indications are that Round 2 is coming up when both shows play Los Angeles at the same time. Meanwhile, Wirtz's unit has clear sailing here for next week.

Comerford's Pa. Vauders; Binghamton, N.Y., a Maybe

The Comerford Circuit of Pennsylvania and New York will inaugurate vaude in two houses. The Penn, Wilkes-Barre, will start Oct. 30 with a Thursday through Saturday policy, and the Capitol, Scranton, will begin talent operations Nov. 5 on a Wednesday through Saturday basis.

Wilkes-Barre will teeoff with a six-act bill, while the Blackstone Magico unit will usher in the vaude operations in Scranton. Another house that may put in stage shows includes a Comerford unit in Binghamton, N. Y.

The Abe & Joe Feinberg office will book.

AGVAns Circulate Pro-D. J. Petition

Despite the recent action by the American Guild of Variety Artists raising the ante from $25 to $100 for performer appearances on cafe-originating disk jockey shows, petition to permit cuffo shots now circulated by union members will continue. Circulators declare that they will strive for 2,000 signatures. AGVA would have to submit the question for a referendum if that amount is reached.

Those concerned with the petition declare that many performers need these cuffo appearances to achieve some publicity. They also state that the deejay shows with performers help glamorize the live appearance fields.

Union toppers are reportedly displeased with the board's raising the fee to $100. Not only do they feel that it's impossible fully to enforce that legislation, but performers who do appear will now have to kick back $100 instead of $25. One AGVA member cracked that the new law makes it more expensive for the performer.

Strip Gets Suspended Term in MB Cleanup

Miami, Oct. 21.

Continuing crackdown on strippers working this area, police had Pequita (Vegas) and boss, Louis Brooks, of the Rainbow Club up on charges of "indecent exposure" before City Judge Cecil Curry.

They were sentenced to 15 days in jail, with sentence suspended on condition they adhere to police definition on what constitutes "modest" attire.

Ciro's, Hollywood

in his mock rhumba nonsense adds some color to the act but here again the routine builds to no strong climax.

In opening the bill, The Four Lads weave harmony vocals for 13 minutes. The youngsters, who have gained some attention from backstopping J. Ray on a number of Columbia disks, have good arrangements, but not a stout nor new array of songs. Repertoire consists of "Shine," "Little White Cloud," "Wabash Cannonball," "Just Say I Love Her," "Mocking Bird." They could bunch together something more compelling than that. In plaid Eton jackets, the boys are smartly turned out and have poise and aplomb. Their tones are sufficiently varied for modern, pop-tune quartets, though there isn't a standout lead voice in the group.

Joe Stabile's crew frames the show adeptly and, with Bobby Ramos' quintet dispensing the Latin rhythms, alternates on pumping out the dansapation between shows. Bert.

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Oct. 16.

John Carroll, Will Mastin Trio with Sammy Davis, Jr., Herb Flemington, Flamingo Starlets (8), Victor Piemonte, Ike Carpenter Orch (augmented) (13); no cover or minimum.

Although ropes may not be stretched taut this fortnight, enough biz will ease into the Flamingo Room for six-two-and-even casino requirements. Potency of Sammy Davis, Jr., stands out in the 60-minute stanza.

John Carroll, at show caught, was not equipped via his song route to cope with the kinetic stabbing of young Davis. Unless he gives some serious thought to re-routining his setup, semester will be counted against him. Following the flashing heel-and-toe of the Will Mastin Trio with its pyramid magnet, Sammy Davis, Jr., is tough for many acts.

Carroll's virile appearance and set of powerful pipes belie the type of routine he chooses to croon. Only his opener, "Lady of Spain," is in brightened tempo. The rest are slow, moaning and overly - sentimental outpourings. Tablers seemed to be waiting throughout for change of mood, but Carroll—besides being under-rehearsed for opening show—left the stage without dishing up a well-rounded performance. His conductor, Victor Piemonte, led the Ike Carpenter orch capably, augmented for Carroll's booking by three violins.

Mastin Trio continues to rise further in estimation of Vegas rounders with this showcasing. The budding Davis, Jr., proves his ability on all counts, and should become a top star one of these days. Versatility is shown in his amazing legmania, but is heightened when he parades some accurate and, at times, slightly vitriolic mimicry. From his roster of impressions, best returns noted via waves of yocks, register during a Lanza series, sliced with a howlingly funny Jerry Lewis. His Johnnie Ray is also top stuff. For the first time, be it noted in Vegas, Junior Davis turns to Yiddish expressions while spouting comedy lines. Such a trend on the part of the youthful comedian-terper could be okay in certain niteries, but rings a peculiar sound here, smacking of restricted humor.

Flamingo Starlets look gorgeous while twirling about in a couple of well-staged terps. "Holiday for Strings" is a delightful round of motion, delicate yet full of zing. Midway costume parade is less of a footwork display on the part of the eight femmes, and more for Herb Flemington's easy warbling. Ike Carpenter orch has to run the musical gamut from killer-diller rhythms to legato, with all temps emerging solid. Will.

Ritz Carlton, Montreal

Montreal, Oct. 18.

Helene Francois, John Gallant, Joe Settano Trio; $2 cover.

Helene Francois, making her third appearance at the Ritz Carlton Hotel's plush Ritz Cafe, is a more relaxed performer than previously. Engagements in New York and Mexico have done much to get this gal away from just being a beautiful entertainer to someone who combines the look with the song. There's a similarity in her songfest to other efforts in this boite, but the inclusion of "Mr. Sun" (in English) and a try at aud participation with "C'est Si Bon" break routining neatly.

With the latter, Miss Francois is still on the shaky side. Trying to get ringsiders to double up on a number is always questionable and picking a French song makes the effort that more doubtful despite the bi-lingual overtones of this room.

Vocal shortcomings, slight as they may be, are overshadowed by the drawing power of this chantootsie and biz for both shows each evening, particularly on Friday and Saturday (room is closed Sunday) is pleasing management. Newt.

Cleveland News, Oct. 16th ... Spaeth ...

"Miss Lee makes it clear she's no mere 'another act'. In a captivating fifteen minutes of better than standard petite concert, she displays a varied style that is as fresh as her clear, clean soprano, whether it's a sentimental 'Anniversary Waltz', a re-fired 'Kiss of Fire', a rueful 'Hello Young Lovers', or that excellent 'Oklahoma' medley. IT'S MANY A DAY SINCE WE'VE HEARD A SALON THRUSH ARTICULATE THE WAY THE LEE GAL DOES. EACH SYLLABLE COMES CLEAR AND INTELLIGIBLE—That WE THOUGHT WAS A LOST ART."

Last Frontier, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Oct. 17.

Chico & Harpo Marx, Nilsson Twins, Dolores Frazzini, Eddie Gallagher, Devlyn Dancers (12), Garwood Van Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Two of the biggest money-makers in Last Frontier history, Chico & Harpo Marx, are back with their superlative brand of comedy, music and zanybusiness. Another period of over-capacity biz, both in Ramona Room and casino, is expected.

Chico heads off the Marx march, lipping his slight Italiano dialect for some intro patter about the brothers and how they began. Sliding on the Steinway bench, he gallumphs over the keys in some funny punchings. Harpo's entrance is deferred until the middle of buxom Meri Fenn's operatic soliloquy. During this sequence, Harpo doubles everyone over as he scissors Miss Fenn's skirt up to her derriere. Upon turning her around for reverse bow, Harpo points to sign reading, "Vote For Dewey." Chico eases back for another piano sesh of "Moonlight Cocktails," before a pin-drop segment of harpistry, performed with great feeling by Harpo.

Trilogy of "Penthouse Serenade," "If I Loved You," "Some Enchanted Evening," is sequeled by "Stardust." Breaking off the mood, Harpo picks up trick clarinet. Joined by Miss Fenn, he illustrates his exercises with real bubbles from clarinet as she trills "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles." Quick segues into "Tiger Rag," tiny harmonica quickie, and return to harp for "Swanee River" mark Harpo's principal turn. Chico pulls attention to the piano where he hokes away, followed by Harpo's slapstick "Rhapsody in Blue," and duet on "Lilt." Pair walk off to ovation.

Nilsson Twins form top support for the Marx comedics, with some warbling of funny tunes in prime slot. Twins clown from moment of walkon to bows, making it hard for audience to take their one serious harmony attempt. Otherwise the pair hit off quickly with "Never Too Busy To Say Hello," slowing down for "I'll Walk Alone," then quickening interest with "Folk Tunes." From this point on, nonsense takes over, and tablers fall right into scheme of things. Gals build into fine salvos at close.

Jean Devlyn puts 12 well-stacked femmes around the floor and gives them uncomplicated footwork. Consequence of this wise policy on the part of the choreographer is a neat dozen oomphy gals knowing pretty much what to do at all times, and showing it.

Dolores Frazzini and Eddie Gallagher duet curtain-raiser, a heady bolero and mambo in stroblighting. Preceding the brothers Marx, line panics house with "Boardwalk in Atlantic City," and "Charleston" melee finish. Costumes are authentically "Roaring '20s." Garwood Van guides his crew with assurance through the many scores. Will.

Gatineau, Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 14.

Valaida Snow, Hal Fisher, Jerry Cooper, Conners Models (6), Harry Pozy Orch (8); 75c admission, $1 Sat.

Gatineau Country Club's current show hits and keeps a high level with Valaida Snow canarying, Hal Fisher in comedy and Jerry Cooper warbling with and without the Conners line. Miss Snow, in black gown, picks her tunes carefully, teeing off with "Begin the Beguine" and following with okay medley from "Porgy and Bess." She has the customers beating rhythm for her "Jericho" and begs off after "Chloe." Only once is her trumpet in use, during an animated "St. Louis Blues" session.

Fisher's gabbing and mugging is fast and capable, comic grabbing steady flow of yocks during brief stint. Standouts include bits on blinking lighthouses and chugging trains, with heavy laughs on his w.k. drunk addressing a temperance meeting. Big punch of Fisher's humor is in facial expressions which ought to make him okay TV or film material, but this approach loses him plenty of response from the back seats. His blonde wife.

Cooper, a holdover, solos with socko arrangements and presentations of "When the Red, Red Robin" and "Old Black Magic," besides handling chores with the Conners femmes in three productions. Harry Pozy band still clicko for dancing and backing of Show. Gorm.

Saranac Lake, N.Y., Oct. 21.

A bow to "Mr. Ballantine," with the Martin & Lewis Show at Texas State Fair, for his gifts.

Virginia Farraro, cashier of Loews' in Mount Vernon, N.Y., registered to take that first observation routine. Ditto for Grady V. Graham, manager of drive-in theatres in North Carolina.

Steve (Warners) Baranek, a graduate from here, in from Yonkers, N.Y., for annual checkup and went back to work with an all-clear.

May Coates, Interstate circuit, planed back to Houston after receiving the final greenlight.

Al Munroe, ex-magico and now a staffer on the Detroit Times, detoured in here for a bedside chat with this columnist.

Charles "Chick" Lewis, Variety Clubs Hospital exec, in from Gotham for the monthly inspection of the hospital.

A carnation to Herman Robbins, exec of National Screen Service, and his party for gifting every patient with a large box of sweets.

Charles Hillyer, staffer of Florida Paramount theatres, shot in from Jacksonville for that look-see and observation period.

Jean Commerford, ex-nitery boniface, and Peggy Van Valkenberg, VC Hospital office staffer, off to Gotham for two weeks of Broadway and a honeymoon.

Murray Weiss, Will Rogers Hospital exec, in from Boston for final inspection of the new oil-burning system, accompanied by his wife, Nancy, and the Dr. Julius Aisners of the Boston Variety Clubs Tent.

Jim Barton

for Vegas almost immediately after hearing of Barton's condition, comedian Larry Storch winged in from Gotham for skedded opening tonight (Tues.). Folk singer Harry Belafonte, having concluded two frames prior to entrance of the Barton packet, continued on following Thursday interim, and wound up his emergency stand yesterday (Mon.).

With the news of Barton's collapse hitting the wire services within minutes after he went into a coma backstage, a flood of telephone calls and wires of assistance poured into the Thunderbird from all over the country. Boniface Jacob Kozloff of the Last Frontier rushed Willie Shore down the Strip to fill in second-show gap. The comedian-terper had just capped his fortnight at that spa. Show put together hurriedly proved to be a sock exhibit, enhanced by each performer's extra effort to illustrate the old show biz adage. Tribute to Barton at finale, spoken by Shore, echoed sentiments of entire cast and audience.

Among the many offers to assist the Thunderbird was one from Robert Q. Lewis, a headliner at that hospice in April. Lewis stood by in New York, ready to sky westward for two days before commitment on the Arthur Godfrey vidshow.

Continuing throughout the two weeks, Barton's close assistants during his musicomedy run of "Paint Your Wagon" will be the act, "We Three," with Maggie Nelson. The Kathryn Duffy Dansations terp their special production routines sans Barton, ably abetted by Johnny O'Brien, Normandie Boys, and the Al Jahns orch. Will.

New Lease in Akron

Akron, Oct. 21.

Liberty Theatre, dark most of this year after the Highland circuit terminated its lease, reopened last Friday (17) with Max and Charles Schneier, of a wholesale fish company, as operators.

They will operate Friday through Sunday, with action and art films on Friday-Saturday and a hillbilly stage show in addition on Sundays.

MAD. SQ. GARDEN'S 107G 3-MONTH NET LOSS

Business has been rather slow at Madison Square Garden, N. Y., the company's report for the quarter ended Aug. 31 disclosed last week. Indoor arena, which houses boxing, ice revues, rodeos, etc., has an estimated net loss of $107,270 after depreciation, taxes and other charges.

Figure compares with a net loss of $100,345 chalked up during the same 1951 three-month period. Operating revenues for the 1952 quarter were $199,881.

Eckstine's Pitt Package For Stanley's Yule Week

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

The Stanley here will install a holiday stageshow headed by Billy Eckstine. Singer plus a unit will start Christmas Day for a week.

Eckstine is playing the house on a guarantee plus percentage. He'll supply the surrounding band and talent.

Kaye's Wow 50G in S.F. 2d

San Francisco, Oct. 21.

The Danny Kaye Show wound up its second week at the Curran, with a house record, hitting a tremendous $50,000. Figure was chalked up as result of capacity or SRO for 10 performances at 1,758-seater, scaled to $4.80.

Previous week's gross was a sock $38,500 for eight shows.

Johnnie Ray Switched to N.Y. Capitol After Paramount Nixes 25G Label

Switch of Johnnie Ray from the Paramount to the Capitol Theatre, both N. Y., indicates a buyer's revolt. The Paramount, where Ray was originally slated to play, rebelled at paying $25,000 plus percentages for this show. The Capitol, which is now on a straight film policy, promptly picked up the date and will start the lachrymose singer on Dec. 24 for two weeks plus one week option. It's believed that the Loew house is paying the same salary that was asked of the Paramount.

As a Paramount spokesman put it, there was no way of coming out ahead on the deal. Theatre would be getting a percentage picture, and by the time they got through paying for film, rent and ushers it was felt they'd be in the red.

Unless the Capitol goes on a stageshow basis permanently, it's believed that the Paramount will stick to its present position of making deals in which it is almost certain of hitting a profit. Percentage pictures will get no expensive headliners, and weak pictures will get a costlier stage accompaniment. At this point, there's little chance that the Capitol will return to stagers. Trade feeling is that if the Cap remained open during the long siege of terrible business after it first dropped the show policy, then there's little hope that it will return to talent outlays. An occasional stage venture will be bought to hypo interest.

GAC will probably put Ray Anthony orch, a comic and a dancer or dance team with Ray. Neither the terms nor the personnel of the show have been finally set. However, deal is expected to be inked this week.

Judge Upholds State's Nix Of Cleve. Cafe's License

Columbus, Oct. 21.

Franklin County Judge Cecil J. Randall of Columbus, in a long-awaited decision, has upheld the action of the Ohio Liquor Board in revoking the liquor licenses of Eleanor's Show Bar, Cleveland. The lengthy opinion, given after six months of deliberation, held that the board had acted within its discretion in lifting the permits, after state liquor agents described an alleged lewd show they witnessed there a year ago.

The Show Bar has been operating under a restraining order since last March, when the permits were revoked. Isadore Topper, Columbus, counsel for the Cleveland spot, indicated he would appeal.

Cowpokes' N.Y. to Omaha Commutation Kick For 'Championship' Awards

Omaha, Oct. 21.

Ak-Sar-Ben's Rodeo once again is heavy on stock and steaks on the hoof—and short on sock entertainment.

But Omaha's cow classic held its own this year with the Madison Square Garden giddap in Gotham, running concurrently in part, since International Rodeo Assn. titles were at stake in Nebraska.

Hence, leading cowpokes such as Buck Rutherford, Harry Tompkins, Casey Tibbs, Jim Shoulders, etc., commuted by plane for the two shows. They couldn't afford to pass up the Garden swag, and had to show at the Omaha "championships" to get in on the final gravy and stay in grace with their bosses.

Vet Leo Cremer again produced the stock and show here.

Interspersed with cowboy action were Bob Davenport and his hoss, Buck; Beeswax Moore's Dogs and ~~comedy mule;~~ Tony White Cloud and the Jemez Pueblo Indians; Cilly Feindt and her dancing horse, Pasha; and the clowns, Zeke Bowery and Wiley McCray.

Parades of top beef and animals in the stock show plus high school band competitions took up the rest of the slack between the rodeo contests. Trump.

RAY'S $7,000 PACKAGE FOR COAST CONCERTS

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Johnnie Ray will get a guarantee of $7,000 against 60% of the gross for matinee and evening performances at the Shrine Auditorium here Nov. 23. He'll supply the surrounding talent, to include the Harry James orch, Big Jay McNeely's band, the Four Lads, Harry Morton, Peg Leg Bates and the Dewey Sisters.

Shrine performances are being promoted by Irving Epsteen, Fox-West Coast exec and one of the operators of the Palladium Ballroom here, and Harry Maizlish, KFWB prexy. Capacity for the two shows could provide a gross of $34,000 at a $4.80 top.

Noonan in 'Ghost' Guise On Geo. Jay's D.J.'er—AGVA

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Continuing its crackdown against cuffo appearances on deejay shows, the American Guild of Variety Artists has ordered comic Tom Noonan (& Marshall) to appear before the board to explain his stint with deejay George Jay from King's Restaurant here a fortnight ago. Union charges he appeared, did an imitation of Frank Fontaine but used a fictitious name to shield his identity.

AGVA requires cafes employing deejays on whose program talent appears, to pay a night's scale for such work and has ordered members not to participate without such fee.

AGVA-ARA TO MEET WED. ON RULE B-53

The American Guild of Variety Artists and Artists Representatives Assn. are slated to meet tonight (Wed.), in the first of a series of confabs to complete Rule B-53, a code which will govern union-agency relations. ARA board will confer the following day, not only to report progress on the AGVA matter, but to discuss agency topics generally. ARA board members will come in from Chicago.

The union is meeting with the agency men as reps of individual percenteries, not as ARA members. AGVA convention went on record as being opposed to dealing with talent rep organizations. AGVA wants agencies to apply for franchises individually.

Originally, AGVA-ARA pact was to have expired Sept. 10. It was then extended to Oct. 15 and at its recent national board meet, deadline for agencies to apply for AGVA franchises was extended on a week-to-week basis, with AGVA to give notice in writing two weeks before date of termination.

City Bureau OK's License Switch of Curley's, Mpls.

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.

Although the ownership of Curly's, one of the city's major niteries, has been linked to the so-called Minneapolis "liquor syndicate allegedly headed by ex-bootleggers controlling a number of liquor establishments in violation of the law restricting ownership to one, the city council health and hospital committee has approved transfer of its license to Tom E. and Harry Hastings.

Curly's license presently is in Oscar Rubinsky's name, but the Hastings announced they had paid $50,000 for the nitery to the J. & C. Holding Co., one of whose partners is a long-time associate of Thomas W. Banks, who recently was sentenced to a prison term and fined for U.S. income tax evasion.

This will mark the third license change at Curly's within six months. A previous long-time owner had sold out, ostensibly to Rubinsky, after a raid on the bistro for allegedly selling liquor after hours.

Original intention of the Hastings was to convert Curly's into a Hawaiian type room on the order of Don the Beachcomber's. This plan has been abandoned, however. While the establishment is being remodeled, it's expected to continue with its floor entertainment policy.

Slater Told to Quit Brit.

London, Oct. 21.

Ralph Slater, the hypnotist, who earlier this year was involved in a damages claim for negligence and assault, has been ordered by the Home Office to quit the country at the end of this week. He has been warned that an extension will only be considered if his application is accompanied by documentary evidence that travel arrangements have been completed.

When the claim against Slater was first heard, damages against him totalling over $3,000 were awarded, but on appeal these were struck out and the plaintiff was given leave to apply for a new trial. The Home Secretary has now told Slater that further court proceedings are not contemplated, and in the circumstances he's unable to prolong his stay in Great Britain.

Agencies Warn Acts to Stay Away From Vidpix Until Repeat Coin Set

Talent agencies have been advising their acts to stay clear of film video until scales have been set to cover repeat performances on that medium. Date diggers feel that unrestricted use of filmed variety shows or shorts is impairing the value of acts and destroying their appeal in the many markets where the vidpix are shown.

Where such shows are repeated, it's difficult to sell a live act, the percenters say. There are many novelties that cannot change their turns appreciably. Thus, when there are several exhibits in one area, the act is finished, not only on teevee but for stage shows as well.

Pay for work in the filmed teevee varieties has been fairly good for the non-names, who frequently have earned more than a week's salary for one session. Generally, these are flat deals and there are no restrictions as to exhibition.

Talent offices recognize the logic of the ruling by the American Federation of Musicians that kinescopes be played only once in an area where original show hasn't been seen live. Networks and agencies may keep the kinnies, but only for their records.

The potential for repeat shows of a vidfilm is even greater than that of a kinescope because of the better quality of the celluloid. Thus the agencies feel that an act can be hit harder with films than with film recordings. Another angle considered by the percenters is that a performer may improve to the point where his early film efforts will create a downbeat impression of the act. Another talking point is that the turn may achieve name value and conceivably get $10,000 for one guest shot and have to compete with himself in a reproduction for which he originally received, say, $250.

Mpls. Flame's Torch Song Via Cuffo Cabs and Loot

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.

Flame nitery is the first such local establishment to provide free taxi transportation for patrons. Newspaper ads contain its offer of the cuffo rides to groups of three or more in the loop. Bistro is located on fringe of downtown business section.

In effort to put itself on map, Flame also has gone in for policy of musical revues, with dance music by the Harry Blons Dixieland orch. It's stressing food, too, and has a "Mystery Husband" contest tieup with WTCN involving broadcasting from the premises by disk jockey Sev Widman and carrying prizes aggregating $2,000.

Backers Get Out From Under on E. St. Louis 'Gala Festival' Stag

St. Louis, Oct. 21.

When gendarmes of the East St. Louis police department's morality squad were tipped off that the "Gala Fall Festival" in Croation Hall was to feature nude femmes and obscene films, the stag party was suddenly called off and more than 500 St. Louisans who had "donated" $3 each to attend were turned away. The sponsors of the affair also learned of the activity of the cops, so the women and pictures did not show up.

George Kuk, manager of the hall, told the cops that some men whom he did not know had rented the ballroom on the second floor for a private party and he did not know the nature of the show.

"Invitations" to the affair were also extended in East St. Louis.

Ballet Interest

trying its luck in Central and South America instead.

No Foreigners

Foreign companies, like Sadler's Wells Ballet, Grand Ballet de Monte Carlo, Ballets de Paris, or Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, aren't booked here this season, leaving the U. S. field—as far as major troupes are concerned—exclusively to Ballet Theatre. Where three or four major companies have toured annually, Ballet Theatre has the road to itself. As result, it has the longest trek in its history lined up, and should draw a bigger boxoffice than in preceding seasons.

Picture next season is much more encouraging, with Sadler's Wells Ballet due for a return visit, Ballet Theatre definite to tour again, and such newcomers as the Danish State Ballet and Israel Folk Ballet as added possibilities.

Joining Ballet Theatre on tour this season are several smaller ballet units, such as the Jacob's Pillow Festival Co., Slavenska-Franklin-Danilova Co., Marina Svetlova Co., and Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo Concert Co. (a small adjunct of the big troupe). Not strictly ballet are such other small groups as Ana Maria Spanish Ballet, Janet Collins & Co. and Iva Kitchell Co., while the only other major troupe giving Ballet Theatre competition (yet not strictly in the ballet vein) is the highly successful Dancers of Bali.

New Acts

AMRU SANI
Songs
21 Mins.
Hotel Statler, Washington

Amru Sani, who has been a featured singer on three continents and a recent hit in Paris, made her American debut this week (20) at the Statler's Embassy Room. Tall, svelte, stylish daughter of a Hindu father and a Panamanian mother, with black hair and snapping dark eyes, she easily lives up to her billing as exotic. She has a regal bearing and generally carries herself almost ramrod stiff with her arms at her sides and slightly bent backwards.. Occasionally she lifts her hands in clawlike motions for emphasis.

She is a sultry stylist, holding herself somewhat aloof from the audience and with a theatrical sophistication which should do well in class rooms such as this. Voice is husky, often sinking to low softness, sometimes rising to a shout.

However, it is not a strong voice as she showed opening night. When she left the mike to work intimately close to the ringside tables, she could not be heard except by those directly in front of her. She was obviously nervous and stiff for her opening night, but the genuine style came through just the same and she will go a lot better when she is more at home before U. S. audiences.

Act opens with a warmup number in Spanish and swings to a French selection, "Maladie d'Amour," then to a very dressy rendition of "What Is This Thing Called Love?" Follows up with a soft, low Spanish number, "Maria Dolores," switches for her first encore to a lighter French song, "C'Est Paris" and for her second encore, "Angelus was Ringing" in English.

Notable that chanteuse got her biggest salvos for the two English language songs, an indication that she ought to do more in English and less in Spanish and French while in this country. Lowe.

GAY DECEIVERS (2)
Record Pantomime
9 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

This is a routine record-panto act which comes off only mildly but deserves "A" for effort. The two guys, who've tagged themselves The Gay Deceivers, display lots of spirit and bounce but the humor is on the weak side and the panto is not too imaginative.

Team relies on wierdie costumes (mostly femme attire) for its biggest yocks, and only in a bit where they essay circa 1920, in "Gigi From the Fiji Islands," does the outlandish flapper garb tickle the risabilities.

Other disks in repertoire are "Tim-Tayshun," here the femme garb misses, and "The Preacher and the Bear" (a Phil Harris waxing). "Gigi" is their best number and shows the pair off to advantage. They've got some good zany mannerisms which could be developed for nitery situations. Gros.

JEAN VALTON
Magic
20 Mins.
Aux 3 Baudets, Paris

Jean Valton is a smooth, talking magico who depends on excellent gimmicks for pleasing effects. He pulls innumerable lighted cigarets out of the air, makes good designs with colored cards and tosses them around for agile recoups that make for a good visual number.

He patters along to keep the aud eye from getting too close on him and pulls off some slick bits that make for heavy mitting. This bids good for general variety dates or intimery spotting. Mosk.

THE SUNNYSIDERS (4)
Songs
12 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Lively vocal combo of three guys and a gal generate lots of excitement in their songalog. It's a youthful group with plenty of bounce and little inhibition. Their harmony technique is ear-appealing and their zestful delivery attracts the eye. Occasionally the continuous action during the song delivery detracts from the vocal but on the whole it's a gay 12-minute turn pegged for nitery and TV assignments as well as vaude.

Combo opens with a rousing "I Got Rhythm," and closes with a fine special-material bit, "We're A Team." In between is fair bit of vocal mimicry on the tune "Cry." Carbons of Morton Downey, Peter Lorre, Marlene Dietrich and Barry Fitzgerald are ordinary and slow up their fast-paced turn. Gal is a 'ooker and guys present an attractive, clean-cut appearance. Gros.

HENRI SALVADOR
Songs
30 Mins.
Aux 3 Baudets, Paris

Henri Salvador, light-skinned singer of Martiniquaise origin, is in the bouncing, zestful class, with a frantic exuberance that immediately carries the audience in its sway. Salvador hops out in a white suit and after a few leaps about the tiny stage greets the crowd with an infectious chortle that is fine for relaxing them. He then hits them in a good style with straight songs, fine Gallic ballads and some top spoof numbers.

He does a fine interpretative number with "The Deep Sea Diver," in which he is bathed in a green light and contortions the flowing undersea gyrations while chanting the sights he sees. His "Coquin D'Amour" is another spirited number, and then he sashays into a good crooning delivery. He does a comic turn on various-type personages' reactions to forgetting their wallets in a chichi restaurant for good yock effect. Salvador is a good personality singer act for stateside interest. Mosk.

MOULOUDJI
Songs
24 Mins.
Aux 3 Baudets, Paris

In the Existentialist garb, black pants, sweater and open-at-the-throat white shirt, Mouloudji sings his ballads about the busy Paris streets and its loves and tragedies. Also an actor of repute, his delivery is aided by a fine dramatic style and timing that punches home his more balladic opuses. Mouloudji, who also paints and writes poetry, is fairly new at the chant game, but is rapidly becoming a topper here.

Shock of unruly hair, a Christmas tree smile and an air of recalcitrant youth make him of appeal to the femme contingent. He is well heard in "Belle Fillette," about longing for a lovely gal and "Mal De Paris," a nostalgic hymn to the poetic draw of Paris for the Parisian who deigns to leave the city. Also tops is a spirited edition, with boff mime accomp, of the tough-guy street, "Rue De Lap," plus a good rendition of the boy who saw the "Devil" and found nobody to believe his eerie story. Audience reaction was fine.

He looks like a fine bet for intimeries or TV for stateside with the peg of the still-potent hypo value of the Existentialist set. Mosk.

GLORIA WARE
SONGS
12 Mins.
Bellevue Casino, Montreal

Playing her first Montreal stint at the Bellevue Casino, Gloria Ware scores heavily with her vocalizing in a room that has never been too friendly to song stylists.

Tall, attractive and well-groomed, Miss Ware stays, for the most part, on the operetta side during her solo session and picks up salvos for her smooth delivery.

Gal gets most work to do in the productions, with male singer Charles Danford, and team makes one of the best to work in this spot in some months. Miss Ware, with a revised and more intimate songalog, should be a cinch in the smaller boites, and overall visual impact and piping show okay video possibilities. Newt.

DOLORES PARKER
Songs
9 Mins.
Apollo, N.Y.

Dolores Parker is an exceedingly attractive Negro singer who has been around on various bandstands. She has styling, and there are moments when she's reminiscent of Lena Horne and Sarah Vaughan, but she emerges with her own vocal identity.

Miss Parker toys engagingly with melody. She takes standards and converts them to her own liking. The results are good. Singer makes an excellent appearance. Jose.

ELENA
Songs
12 Mins.
El Mambo, Miami Beach

Elena is a Cuban import working in a small-budgeted show at the only Latin nitery in the area. Brought in as part of the Tito Ledouk group of dancers, the dusky thrush was supposed to background one number, but was such a click with opening-nighters she has been installed in the feature spot.

She's an old type, tall, with pipes that can embrace certain types of tunes, thanks to a husky tremolo that limits range. What seems to gain attention is odd

Roxy, N. Y.

Although the current Roxy bill has a couple of good marquee names in Johnny Johnston and Jerry Colonna, the show is not among the more effective presentations at this house recently. Layout runs at a lucklustre pace although production backgrounds and the ice spectacle are up to the Roxy's lush standards.

Johnston, who has been active in legit recently with his bow in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," is an ingratiating personality and okay vocalist, but he lacks the heavyweight punch as the bill's headliner. He's brought on with an embarrassingly silly intro by the Roxyettes who chant his praises in unison. It's a tough getaway, but Johnston does nicely with "You Belong to Me" and segues into an aud participation bit in which four customers are brought onstage to harmonize with the star on "Auf Wiederseh'n, Sweetheart."

Johnston also hits nicely on a hokey dramatic tune, "Flying Saucers," and follows with a tribute to the top songwriters, a la Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" TV show recently, with bits from the big songs of yesteryear. He closes with his best number, "Old Black Magic," with the Roxyettes furnishing a ballet obbligato.

Jerry Colonna is back again at the Roxy, but his routine fails to ignite. His opening gags about the screen show, "The Thief," and it's no-talking gimmick, are good for laughs, but too much of his act depends upon his own trick vocalizing. This is okay for a couple of numbers, his high-pitched pipes tend to become grating after five or six songs, including his trademarked "On the Road to Mandalay," "When You and I Were Sweet Sixteen" and "Caroline."

Anthony, Allyn & Hodges, the initial turn, are fair with their spoofing of the ballroomology hoofers. Trio opens with a straight dancing routine and slowly comes around to comedy pratfalls and acro-adagio. More stress on the comedy angles would pay off.

Arnold Shoda, virtually a regular here, again impresses with his blade ballet to "Temptation," backed by four femme and four male skaters. The Roxyettes are spotted in one solid production in which they use large ostrich feathers.

Robert Bouche, leading the house orch, does a good job of cutting the show. Herm.

Seville, Montreal

Montreal, Oct. 18.

Basil Rathbone, Robert Alda, Sunny Gale, 4 Knights, Al N Connie Fenton, Tommy Wells, Len Howard House Orch; "Smuggler's Island" (U).

For its anniversary show, the Seville scores heavily this week with one of the most unusual show packages ever to play the house.

The combo of Basil Rathbone interpreting "Hamlet" and Robert Alda whamming over songs from "Guys and Dolls," the terping of Al & Connie Fenton; the chirping of Sunny Gale; the harmonizing of the Four Knights and a windup, hoked-up version of a film studio in action complete with pie throwing, is a sight to behold.

The Rathbone stint, which starts with a preamble about his pix and radio work together with a few mild gags, is followed by his reading of a poem by John McGee, an RCAF pilot shot down in Africa and then the soliloquy from "Hamlet." To an audience, for the most part on the juve side, some of this is perhaps bewildering, but the Rathbone manner and diction keep the upper hand at all times. On night caught, a front-row femme started snickering during the most serious part of act; with a few well-chosen words, which also served to quiet any other offender, Rathbone cut her down to size, sharply and neatly.

Robert Alda as emcee builds the show nicely and picks up a hefty reception when he breaks into song during his before-closing slot. Show openers, Al & Connie Fenton are effective with a fast jitterbug set that displays their terping ability in solid fashion.

Sunny Gale sets up an average collection of songs that draw plaudits but would do better business if she stayed with a few straight numbers and cut down on the tricky, over-arrangements now in her songalog.

The Four Knights, sparked by the comedics of the bass singer, had to beg off after seven rousing numbers. Team has developed act since last viewing and injection of comedy is a welcome change from the usual group of this kind who huddle around the mike as though they were in a recording studio instead of on a stage.

As a closer, Alda, Rathbone, Miss Gale, Tommy Wells and the Fentons join forces to do their film studio bit to salvos. The switch from Rathbone doing Shakespeare to the role of an aging ham being hit in the face with a loaded, oversize powder puff by a makeup man and dodging pie-throwers, brings him down to a level the youngsters in the house seem to enjoy. Alda as the director of this epic plays it to the hilt and ends up on the receiving end of a well-aimed custard. A fey photographer, an amorous leading lady and the antics of Tommy Wells all add to this incongruous finisher.

Palace, N. Y.

3 London Girls, Otto Eason, The Gay Deceivers (2), Gerri Gale, Joe Morris & Barbara Barry, The Sunnysiders (4), Tim Herbert & Don Saxon, Divena, Joe Lombardi House Orch; "The Golden Hawk" (Col).

A flock of new faces are on tap in the current Palace layout to give the session plenty of exuberance and bounce. The newcomers, who are reviewed under New Acts, are The Three London Girls, jugglers; the Gay Deceivers, record panto duo; ballerina Gerri Gale, and the Sunnysiders, a vocal combo. The vets round out the bill for generally pleasing results.

Divena, an offbeat attraction for this house, draws plenty of enlarged pupils in her underwater "strip" ballet. Gal moves around gracefully, submerged in a water tank, and though her marine maneuvers are limited, she presents an attractive picture with flowing hair and billowy skirts in the bubbling aqua. She peels down to a bikini for sock closer.

Tim Herbert & Don Saxon, in next-to-closing, get standout response for their zanyisms. Herbert's a master mugger and Saxon is a ditto foil. Patter is fresh and yocks are abundant. Theirs is a clicko turn.

Other comedy turn on bill, Joe Morris & Barbara Barry, spotted fifth, work effectively through a pleasing chit-chat round. Morris, the heckler from the box, and Miss Barry, the eye attraction in front of the mike, win laughs easily through expert delivery. Some of the material needs a fresh scripting coat, but on the whole it comes off well. In the No. 2 slot, roller skate-tapster Otto Eason scores with some nifty stunts. He's a speed hoofer and his work on the wheels is amazing at times. Wins big mitt, especially in windup with a Bill Robinson on staircase. Jo Lombardi gives all acts able orch support. Gros.

Casino, Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 17.

Peggy Ryan & Ray McDonald, Ming & Ling, Wally Boag, Burt Taylor, The Novellos, Archie Stone's House Orch; "High Noon" (UA).

Current stage package has pace and novelty and includes plenty of w.k.'s for vaude regulars. For marquee lure, there's Peggy Ryan & Ray McDonald, plus Ming & Ling, but all other acts were over to top returns when caught.

Apart from their "admitted" Vernon & Irene Castle impressions of sophisticated tap-terping, Ryan & McDonald are still, in their own right, a gay team on class, punctuated with sauciness and evident enjoyment in each other's challenges. Here is the "history" of the dance, via vaude, in softshoe and waltz clog, the Castle Waltz glides, their impressions of such toppers as Bill Robinson, Eddie Leonard and Eleanor Powell, all with respectful tributes, and climaxed with their smash Charleston in wardrobe of the '20s. The hoydenish Miss Ryan, of course, is all over the stage for cut-ups and ad libs in a performance marked by physical vivacity, with both youngsters over big on looks and talent.

Way up on response are Ming & Ling with their standard Chinese hillbilly routine combined with Scottish brogue and Greek dialect. Novel turn also incorporates impressions of Laine, Como, Ray, Ink Spots. All are over big.

Neatly wrapping the bill are Wally Boag as m.c. and in and out for his ventro work, a bit of softshoe, frustrated playing of the bagpipes, more impressions of screen stars; Burt Taylor's relaxed singing of "I May Be Wrong," "Tenderly," a novelty bounce to "Let's Do It," and Ellington's "Solitude," and the neat and nonchalant work on the bars and ladders by the Novellos for audience-warmer. McStay.

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, Oct. 17.

Al Martino, Jan Murray, Tippy & Cobina with Manuel & Marita Viera, Wells & Four Fays, Louis Basil Orch (11); "The Crimson Pirate" (WB).

A good boxoffice should result from the combination of the Technicolor adventure pic and the added lure of Al Martino, Jan Murray, and Tippy & Cobina. However, the marquee value of these personal appearances surpasses the onstage performances.

Teenage squeals greet singer Martino, who opens with "I'm Yours." After several other effective numbers, "Take My Heart," "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" and "I Used To Walk With You," the hearty mitting calls him back for an encore of "Somewhere Along The Way" and his disk hit, "Here in My Heart."

Murray is a genial, personable guy. But he tends to dip into indigo when out of microphone range. He gets titters and occasional yocks with his clowning, mugging, gags, imitations and songs, and ends with a long plug for his Sunday night radio show and the hoped-for video program.

(Incidentally, on the first show Friday (17), in the middle of a vocal by Martino and Murray, there was the sound of a dog baying offstage. Presumably this was a rib between the singer and comic, and while it made a hit with the band and the first few rows of seatholders, the rest of the patrons must have wondered what was so funny).

Tippy & Cobina, with the sure, light touch of their masters, Manuel & Marita Viera, perform as only those two monkeys can. Their highly amusing rhumba session is a crowd-pleaser. Their standards of "Lone Ranger," headstand, banana-eating contest, and uke-piano duet are all top-drawer. However, their close with a new routine—tippy playing a simian-sized electric organ—doesn't come off. This can be a rousing bit when the monk is properly rehearsed and ready, but it's not yet ripe for act's finale.

Wells & the Four Fays, a man and four attractive girls, is a slick tumbling act with standard routines. Louis Basil orch backs the show nicely. Don.

Apollo, N. Y.

Freddie Mitchell Orch (12), 5 Blazes, Paul White, Dolores Parker, Vicki David, Lee Marx; "Anne of the Indies" (20th).

Although the current Apollo bill puts an unusually heavy accent on music, there are some good non-instrumental moments. Highlight of the present session is Paul White, the Negro comic who spent many years with the Ted Lewis organization. White and the other acts were handicapped by a lethargic audience at show caught, but this comic seemed to get the biggest rise out of the mob.

White's work reveals the Ted Lewis influence. He's a good showman, can make the most out of his material and knows how to project to an audience. His routines aren't for the sophisticates, but he'll get along handsomely on the family time.

The Five Blazes, a competent musical and vocal group, have good voices plus instrumentation comprising a sax, two electric guitars, bass and drum. Their routines should be surefire in houses with sizable crowds. Their arrangements are designed along showmanly lines and they can be good for top reaction on bills where the audience hasn't been saturated with music previously.

The Freddie Mitchell band, aside from its renditions with the full-sized orch comprising three sax plus the maestro, four brass and four rhythm, breaks up into a smaller combo. From that point on it can be assumed that the crowd should have had sufficient musical entertainment. The Mitchell congregation is a well set up crew whose arrangements offer a simpler brand of riffing that can be understood in the majority of situations.

Lee Marx, sole ofay on the bill, is a proficient juggler who has dressed up his act with a modicum of teeterboard work and walking on a ball while juggling. He's off to a good mitt.

In the New Act column are Vicki David and Dolores Parker. Another act, Hamtree Harrington & Louise, didn't go on at show caught. Jose.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, Oct. 15.

Hutch, Canfield Smith, Morton Fraser's Harmonica Gang, Reg Varney, Gaston Palmer, Estrella Sisters (3), Mundy & Earle, Trio Eleanor, Bobby Dowds Orch.

Current vaude bill is satisfying if not exciting. All performers billed are sound, providing fairish entertainment that's easy on the eye and ear.

Bill-topper Hutch, w.k. West Indian singer at the piano, gives out in pop numbers which include "I'm Yours" and "Somewhere Along the Way." He's familiar performer by now in vauderies. Gimmick of mopping brow with spotlessly-clean white handkerchief is still employed, though in moderation now. In fact, colored balladeer now uses a song about his kerchief, skitting gently at the gimmick. Number itself is n.s.g.

American ventriloquist Canfield Smith scores strongly with his urchin doll, Snodgrass. He's a clever manipulator, although apt to turn his doll's head too far round both ways. Lifelike quality is given to Snodgrass in character of a brash youngster who knows all the answers and will take no telling. At show caught, vent garnered warm mitting.

Morton Fraser & his Harmonica Rascals offer an unusual musical combo of playing around a microphone, linking this with high-spirited fooling. Leading light of group is a perky midget who indulges in much comedy. Act works against a back-cloth of a backcourt, performers being garbed as street urchins. In second half of bill, they again link comedy and ballads in their "Hillbilly Polecats" act, which closes the show. This is a lively selection of mountain and hillbilly music.

Rest of layout is not minus entertainment value, one of the best acts in support being the new miming team of Mundy & Earle, a Scot duo, working to offstage disking. Gaston Palmer, French juggling clown, also clicks solidly.

Cockney funster Reg Varney offers more comedy, registering visually. The Estrella Sisters are a trio of hard-working femme perchists and pedestal artists who don't spare themselves physically. Layout is neatly opened in both segments by youthful terping team, the Trio Eleanor. Bobby Dowds offers able backing via orch. Gord.

Bette Faints

Miss Davis—next Monday, following the regular Monday evening show.

Miss Davis gave her version of the fainting spell during her opening-night appearance. "I was singing away, then, all of a sudden somebody was slapping my face hard and a voice was saying: 'Get up, Bette, get up.' I had blanked out completely. The voice was that of Bill Ross, our company manager, and I've never been so grateful for a slap in the face before. I got up."

First entrance onstage comes when Miss Davis emerges from a magician's sealed box. She said being cooped up in a box made her dizzy. She also said she had been exhausted by rehearsals, going 24 hours without sleep before the opening.

Miss Davis remarked that she had blanked out once before, just before a high school debate, when she was a student in her native Lowell, Mass.

Miss Davis, making her debut in a musical, fainted during the third chorus of her first song number, "Good Little Girl." Four boys with her were stunned. Red Walters, a stagehand, stepped out from the wings and carried her off. House lights were thrown on, but curtain not lowered.

Miss Davis came to after several moments, muttered "I've got to get back," and went on to resume the number, telling the audience "You can't say I didn't fall for you." Back in the dressing room, she asked her husband, Gary Merrill, "are Mike and Jimmy alive?" Duo are producers Michael Ellis and James Russo.

Star went on to finish the show without further mishaps, and got an ovation at show's close.

Reviews by all three papers here were good. J. Dorsey Callaghan, Detroit Free Press, said: "'Two's Company' needs quite a bit of working over, but the possibilities are fine for a lengthy life." Harvey Taylor, Detroit Times, remarked that it "shapes up as a potentially good, fast musical revue . . . has the promise of being a hit." Russell McLaughlin, Detroit News, said: "'Two's Company' is a grand show in potential."

makeup (platinum flitter-powder for the hair and silver eye makeup) to contrast her dark skin, plus a stark delivery that, properly lit, makes for dramatic effect. Aud either thinks she's great or else listens politely, but overall there's complete quiet when she essays French version of "Love For Sale" to the dance group routine, then on mike solo for her versions of "La Mer" and an original, (her best), an Afro-Cuban chant, "Oguere." Winds with Spanish-lyric "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes." Could use a smarter gown (current one is sheathtype, also in the platinum effect); also, another deterrent is working with orch ad-libbing her routine.

An interesting act that may develop into a novelty for the intimeries catering to the hep and off-trail patronage. But needs restaging. Lary.

3 LONDON GIRLS
Jugglers
7 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Three London Girls impress as an okay opening turn in their Palace preem. Gals are deft club-manipulators and create effective patterns in their tossing stunts.

The femmes work at an easy gait and keep the action flowing throughout. A fair bet for vaude and niteries. Gros.

REG VARNEY
Comedy
14 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

Young English comedian opens with n.s.g. patter, but develops into fairly good comedy act, particularly in facial impersonations. He has the benefit of possessing a pliable mien which he twists into various guises. For instance, using much rolling of the eyeballs, he impersonates a ventriloquist's dummy to solid effect. Comic also shows skill at piano.

Okay for vaude with facial comicking, but new patter and gags are a must. Gord.

GERRI GALE
Ballet
8 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Gerri Gale, ballerina who's appeared in legit and films, has whipped up a neat turn for vaude and niteries. She's a slick terpster who commands attention as she twirls and toe-dances through her routine. Attractive gams guarantee a strong eye-hold.

Opens with a lively "Ballet In Boogie" to win immediate mitt. It's a bright number that shows off her expert terp technique. She slows up a bit in an overlong production number tagged "Solitaire." It's a story in dance form of a lonely gal who's called up for a date, prepares for same and is finally cancelled out. She gets an assist here from an offstage voice who narrates the tale in verse. The verse is pretentious but the dancing is delightful. Gros.

VICKI DAVID
Baton twirling, taps
6 Mins.
Apollo, N.Y.

Vicki David is a cute Negro youngster who seems to be marking time until she finds her metier. She works at baton-twirling and taps, plus a few acro tricks. At the present stage of her development the mixture of the various ingredients isn't too integrated.

Miss David's baton tricks are in the standard vein, and her taps are confined to comparatively simple steps. More showmanship and a firmer set of routines are needed. Jose.

MUNDAY & EARLE
Comedy Miming
14 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

Boy and gal twain offer much comedy via miming to gramophone records. Colorfully garbed, they are a youthful duo with much vitality and spriteliness.

Male partner offers much comedy in impersonation of Teresa Brewer. Miming is worked out to good timing with offstage disks. Duo make good use of brightly-colored wardrobe. They are solid bet for vaude. Gord.

New Bronx Vaudfilmer

Joseph Green has leased the Avalon Theatre, Bronx, for weekend vaudfilm. Yiddish names will be featured. Double features will be shown the remainder of the week, plus special children's shows Saturday afternoons.

The Avalon will open Oct. 31 with Molly Picon heading the bill.

Two, Maybe Three, Hits Last Week Act As Hypo to Slow N.Y. Legit Season

Two indicated hits and a possible hit last week, plus a promising prospect the week before, have been a pickup for a lagging Broadway season. Immediate boxoffice response to last week's two clicks, "Time of the Cuckoo" and "The Millionairess," are expected to be a stimulus to the whole local legit scene, with the potential success of "Bernardine" and the previous week's "In Any Language" as an added boost. "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie" started the procession with a smash opening three weeks ago.

With New York hotels jammed for the annual autumn boom and the public apparently in a theatre-going mood, there have recently been complaints from the ticket brokers because of the dearth of current shows. Agencies claim that in the last couple of weeks they've been able to sell practically all shows except the out-and-out flops. One broker ventured the opinion that he might have been able to double his sales if there'd been enough shows to supply the ticket demand.

Except for the Lillie show, which is playing to sellout houses, no recent entries have gotten a unanimous favorable critical response. However, Katharine Hepburn's "Millionairess" had a huge advance sale, including Theatre Guild subscription and numerous theatre party bookings, and the line at the boxoffice window has been steady even after the decidedly mixed notices.

Shirley Booth Raves

The split press for "Cuckoo," including raves for Shirley Booth as star, have seemingly boosted window trade for the Arthur Laurents play. Both it and the Hepburn starrer played to standee attendance at all regular performances last week and appear set for bullish trade in the next few weeks. However, "Millionairess" is scheduled for only a 10-week run.

"Bernardine," with a six-to-two nod from the first-stringers, has had lively window sale and a broker call since the opening, and attendance indicates the Mary Chase comedy has a good chance to make the grade. "Language," starring Uta Hagen in a frank laugh show, has also done promising business, despite a dubious press.

Consensus opinion among the brokers is that what the town needs is a big musical smash, which might stimulate the entire Broadway show list. However, nothing of the sort is in prospect for the next few weeks. Meanwhile, such established hits as Miss Lillie, "Guys and Dolls," "King and I," "New Faces," "Pal Joey" and "Wish You Were Here" went clean last week, while the juggernaut "South Pacific" was only a trifle off capacity and "Fourposter," "Male Animal," "Mrs. McThing," "Point of No Return" and even the longrun "Moon Is Blue" had hefty grosses.

Wolin, Flamm Prep 'Ring' Production for London

Donald Wolin and Donald Flamm, who were partnered last season in the Broadway production of "The Brass Ring," hope to do the show in London this fall-winter, probably in association with a West End management. They're also considering an initial London production of a new comedy, "Mother's Day," by an undisclosed author. They'll sail for England around mid-November and, after a visit to Paris, expect to be back in New York about a month later.

Wolin left last weekend for visits to Chicago and North Dakota and will return in time to sail for England with Flamm.

Dinelli Due in Britain For 'Man' Meller Preem

Mel Dinelli, author of the 1949-50 Broadway production, "The Man," is currently in New York en route to London, where the meller will be produced in late November or early December after a provincial tour. Before sailing he expects to start the projected dramatizations of two undisclosed stories, which he will work on during his stay in England.

Scripter arrived from the Coast about a week ago and has been catching up on the Broadway shows.

Legit Perks in Rochester; Upstate N.Y. House Busy

Rochester, Oct. 21.

The Masonic Auditorium, local legit stand managed by Will R. Corris and his son, Robert, has its most promising show lineup this fall and early winter that it has had in years. House, normally a split-week spot in combination with the Erlanger, Buffalo, is pretty well set into mid-November, and has dates pencilled in through next January.

Opening Oct. 5, the first Sunday preem in its history, the house played a five-performance engagement of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," for a $16,700 gross. It had "Mister Roberts" for three performances last Tuesday-Wednesday (14-15) for a $5,700 take, and gets "Paint Your Wagon" for three performances Friday-Saturday (24-25).

Booked thereafter are the Mia Slavenska-Frederic Franklin Ballet, Nov. 3; Katharine Cornell in "Constant Wife," Nov. 7-8; Larry Parks and Betty Garrett in "Anonymous Lover," Nov. 13-15; "Call Me Madam," full week of Dec. 8, followed by pencilled dates for "Bell, Book and Candle," "I Am a Camera," "Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and "Country Girl."

'Boat' Nearly Sinks In Labor Storm

Dallas, Oct. 21.

The State Fair of Texas' hour-long musical version of "Show Boat," put on by St. John Terrell's Motor Music Circus, rocked and rolled in a sea of labor dissension last Tuesday (14), and for a while the theatrical bark seemed all but wrecked.

First the show's manager, Terrell, fired the orchestra. Prospective audiences had stayed away in droves and there were other reasons he said, which brought about the decision.

After giving the orchestra its notice Monday night he ordered its director, Oscar Kosarin, to double as pianist with Marion Carley at the organ.

The musicians' union uttered a sour note at this and called a conference with management and employees. That included the pianist and organist, who were still in conference when the next scheduled appearance of the show rolled around at 5 p.m.

So, without any accompaniment, the actors sang "Make Believe" and "Old Man River." It was something of a feat, said the manager, who termed it embarrassing, but wonderful.

At the 7 o'clock show, things began to pick up. At least the piano and organ were back again and after the 9 o'clock show Terrell was able to announce that "Show Boat" was past the shoals and in quiet water.

Motor Music Circus finished out its run Sunday (19) with pianist and organist. Since the orchestra had a 16-day contract, an adjustment was made with the musicians' union. Circus moved to Miami, to open a 10-week season in January.

Ana Maria Spanish Ballet In 3d Cross-Country Tour

Ana Maria Spanish Ballet has been set by impresario Sol Hurok for its third successive cross-country tour, with an eight-week trek of 54 dates set up from Oct. 10 to Christmas. Average fee is $1,500.

Group with 15 dancers, is one of the few full Spanish troupes to make three successive annual tours. It's playing mainly one-nighters, six or seven a week. Opening in Montreal, it's now in the midwest, heading west and south.

Equity Show

(Oct. 20-Nov. 2)

"Getting Married"—Lenox Hill Playhouse, N.Y. (22-26).

Broker's Broker Wanted

Lou Schonceit, head of the Mackey ticket agency, N. Y., went to considerable effort last week to get tickets down front for a preview of the Katharine Hepburn show, "The Millionairess," at the Shubert, N. Y. Since he has to wear a hearing aid, he was pleased to get a pair in AA center, the first row.

Arriving at the theatre, Schonceit was informed that rows AA and BB had been removed only a couple of hours earlier at the insistence of Miss Hepburn, who preferred not to have the audience so near her at the preview or the following night's premiere. Consequently, Schonceit and his wife, Renee Carroll, and nine other disgruntled patrons were shoehorned into single seats and chairs in the rear and sides of the house.

Schonceit, unable to hear from so far away, left at the intermission, vowing to go to a broker for his seats next time.

Way of a Symph Is Hard; New York Philharmonic's $3,525 Loss Per Concert

Giving a symphony concert in New York is an expensive business. A first-rate orchestra (like the N. Y. Philharmonic), in the choicest auditorium (Carnegie Hall), with every seat sold, runs deeply into the red. The Philharmonic averages at $3,525 loss on every concert it gives.

Situation comes to light with a study of the Philharmonic's figures. Oldest symph in America (now in its 111th season), perhaps the best known (via its national radio hookup), and regarded as one of the nation's Big Three (Boston and Philly symphs being the others), it nevertheless can't make ends meet. It never has. Even if it sold out every concert (which it doesn't), there would be a deficit.

For the '46-'47 season, just by way of comparison, average cost of a Philharmonic concert was $7,895. Income per concert was $4,978, leaving a deficit per concert of $2,917.

For the '50-'51 season, average cost per concert had gone up to $8,643. Income per concert was $5,011, leaving a deficit of $3,525.

Orch gives about 100 concerts a season, for roughly an average $352,000 deficit. This loss is cut down via outside revenues from broadcasts, recordings, endowment funds, etc. Management has found that an audience pays for half the cost of maintaining an orch; the other half must be met by gifts or special sources of revenue.

Carnegie Hall, which seats 2,760, can't be enlarged. Ticket prices (now at $4.25 top) can't be raised to compensate fully for increased costs. If ticket price is pushed too high, the Philharmonic has found, receipts begin to fall off. It could never increase fees to the 8G needed to cover cost of a concert.

A symph orchestra normally can't make ends meet, anymore than a postoffice or museum. Philharmonic has managed to reduce certain costs. Where it used to pay as much as $140,000 a year for conductors, today it pays $60,000. Conductors anywhere in America no longer get extravagant fees (Leopold Stokowski once got $100,000 annually. Today's exception is Arturo Toscanini who'll receive $100,000 for 14 performances this year.)

Cost of the Philharmonic orch has risen $100,000 since 1943. In '43-'44, salaries came to $353,000. For the '50-'51 season, cost was $453,000.

Philharmonic players get a top rate for the country, with a $130 a week minimum for 28 weeks. Musicians get an extra $26.45 for broadcast programs that are sponsored, and extra pay for recorded sessions. Most play in Lewisohn Stadium an extra six weeks in summer at $125 a week minimum. But they still average only $5,000 a year before taxes.

JUDSON INKS BARBIERI

Fedora Barbieri, Met Opera mezzo-soprano, has been signed by the Judson, O'Neill & Judd division of Columbia Artist Mgt.

Judson division has also inked young conductor Thomas Schippers to a management pact.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Adding to beefs against N. Y. boxoffice men is complaint of a critic who went up to Carnegie Hall one night last week. He got into one line behind six people and when he reached the window, asked for tickets left in his name. Boxoffice man brusquely told him the next window was the one for reservations. Critic who didn't identify himself as a newspaperman protested there was no sign over the other window to indicate it was for reservations; that he'd been in line a while; that another line stood before the other window, and since the two windows were adjacent, the treasurer could reach over for the reservation. Boxoffice man angrily refused. Critic had to move over to the other line and wait his turn before getting his tickets.

Substitution of Vincent Price for Charles Laughton in some of the "Don Juan in Hell" dates was due to an unavoidable chain of circumstances, producer Paul Gregory pointed out last week. Laughton was committed to do "Young Bess" at Metro, but the start of the film was repeatedly delayed due to litigation between Howard Hughes and Jean Simmons, star of the film. When that was settled and the film ready to roll, Laughton came down with a virus attack that kept him in bed for a week. He has about two more weeks of work in the film, after which he will rejoin the First Drama Quartet, but the exact date hinges upon the manner in which Metro shoots remaining scenes. Meantime, he's appearing in the production at the Philharmonic, Los Angeles, as billed.

Milton Shubert is sole lessee and manager of the new Shubert (formerly Gayety) in Washington, and not resident manager, as erratumed. Bernie Ferber is resident manager. Theatre will be a personal operation of Milton Shubert, not of the Messers. Shubert.

Metop Boffo Year Seen; $1,500,000 Subscription Coin; 1,000 New Names

Indications point to a sock year as the Metropolitan Opera preps bow of its 68th season Nov. 10. In face of declining biz elsewhere (in mercantile fields, for instance), the Met's subscription list (its b.o. backbone) is up over last season, with 1,000 more names added and $100,000 more in revenue. Season looks better than last (which was a good one); more people apparently are liking opera, and Met audiences are getting bigger. New regime of Rudolf Bing, now in his third season as general manager, seems to be taking public hold.

Subscriptions for the '52-'53 season (they're not all in yet) may run to $1,500,000. For 1950-51, Bing's first year as manager, subscription sales totaled $1,034,785, or just under 70% of capacity. For '51-'52, they increased to $1,355,210, or over 70%. Current season tabs have already passed the $1,451,800 mark.

Where there were 7,311 subscribers in '50-'51, and 7,638 last year, there are already 8,613 this season, or 1,000 increase in a year.

Both in number of subscriptions and in coin, according to Francis Robinson, boxoffice and subscription head, the Met has again broken its own record of last season. As for opening night Nov. 10, at greatly advanced prices, ticket demand is even greater than last year; entire orchestra was subscribed for by last Saturday (18), and only nine of the 34 boxes (at $450 a box) were left to sell.

The Met has upped its regular night top this year from $7.50 to $8. Prices have gone up generally, 10c to 50c, depending on seat location.

YALE DRAMA GETAWAY

New Haven, Oct. 21.

Yale Drama Dept.'s 1952-53 semester unfolds its first major production Nov. 5.

Titled, "The New World," play is the work of Arthur Kelley, third-year student in the department.

Equity, Barn Mgrs. Huddling Weekly Though No Official Status Given

Weekly meetings are being held by Actors Equity representatives and a group of strawhat managers to discuss conditions and possible changes in the rules covering stock. The union is still not formally recognizing the barn operators' organization, the Stock Managers Assn., but is including a number of the leading members in the confabs.

Over a dozen silo managers attended the first session with union officials and members of its stock committee, of which Gerald Savory is chairman. They and the others of the 27 producers have also been asked to the subsequent meetings, at which all points of view will be explored. Meanwhile, the SMA had its first fall membership meeting last night (Tues.) at the Algonquin Hotel, N. Y.

Equity officials deny charges by Herbert L. Kneeter, manager of the Norwich (Conn.) Summer Theatre, that they have asked "hand-picked" or "friendly" producers to the meetings. They explain that they made a point of not inviting Kneeter, who they say tends to be disruptive at such confabs and to take over by monopolizing the floor. They say they also omitted him from the list of those asked to similar meetings last spring, but that he came uninvited and turned the discussion into a wrangle that prevented any general agreement.

Managers who attended or sent representatives to the initial meeting recently included Manuel Davis (Asbury Park, N. J.), Gail Hillson (Binghamton, N. Y.), Lee K. Falk (Boston), Lewis Harmon (Clinton, Conn.), Richard Aldrich (Cape Cod), Philip Barry, Jr. (East Hampton, L. I.), Milton Stiefel (Ivoryton, Conn.), Barton Emmet (Mt. Kisco, N. Y.), Theron Bamberger (Philly and New Hope, Pa.), Kenneth Banghart (Olney, Md.), Thomas G. Ratcliffe (Sea Cliff, L. I.), Virginia Franke Davis (Skaneateles, N. Y.), Rea John

Petrillo Refuses Stay Of Local 802's Ruling Vs. Davis' Legit Interests

James C. Petrillo, American Federation of Musicians prez, has twice now turned down request from Meyer Davis for a stay of judgment on a N. Y. Local 802 ruling, forbidding musicians from playing in a Broadway show in which another member has an investment.

On first refusal last week, bandleader Davis, who is a heavy legit investor, asked for reconsideration, on grounds that an emergency existed. Some legit producers, now financing new shows, couldn't accept his investment, he said. Petrillo, however, answered the second personal appeal yesterday (Mon.) negatively, stating it was a matter for the international executive board to decide. He promised Davis matter would be rushed through, however.

Davis now plans filing an appeal within the next two weeks to the international board.

M. FERRER PREPS 4-PLAY TOUR SERIES FOR TEXAS

Dallas, Oct. 21.

Mel Ferrer has worked out plans here for a four-play subscription series with R. J. O'Donnell, whose Interstate Theatres would play the shows, and Charles R. Meeker, Jr., managing director of State Fair Auditorium, who would co-produce with Ferrer.

Ferrer's theatre-for-Texas plan calls for touring plays that will be produced and opened in Dallas, either at the Interstate Circuit's downtown Melba, with 1,800 seats, or in the fairgrounds auditorium, with a 4,283 capacity. Actual dates are still uncertain. Two stagings due are "The Moon Is Blue," with Diana Lynn, David Niven and Scott Brady, and "Strike A Match," headed by Eva Gabor and Pat O'Brien.

Conferring here last week with Meeker, O'Donnell and N. Y. attorney Howard Reinheimer, Ferrer announced his Southwestern play tour, which may tour, which may start by Christmas.

Show Biz Cavalcade For Musicians Fund 20th Anni

Musicians Emergency Fund, headed by Mrs. Lytle Hull as prez and Fritz Kreisler as board chairman, will hold its 20th anniversary celebration dinner and cavalcade at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, N. Y., Oct. 31.

Program will be devoted to scenes from productions created by the Fund in legit, opera and ballet since 1932. Produced and directed by Felix Brentano, written by Bella Spewack and narrated by Eddie Albert, program will include the City Center Ballet Orchestra, under Leon Barzin; Westminster Choir; Cesare Siepi, Jarmila Novotna, Andre Eglevsky, Melissa Hayden, Brian Sullivan, Wilma Spence, Virginia MacWatters, Ernest McChesney and Arnold Eidus, and William G. McKnight as emcee. Musical highlights will include scenes from "Rosalinda," "Merry Widow" and "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk."

40G Stock Setup For Chi Area

Chicago, Oct. 21.

The past several highly successful strawhat seasons in this area have led to the formation of a winter stock company, Showcase Theatre, Inc., in suburban Evanston. It'll be housed in the Stadium Theatre, a 1,200-seat pic house closed since June 30, currently being remodeled. First production is scheduled for Nov. 18.

Showcase will be Equity, on the same basis as strawhat—a minimum of six Equity resident players under season contract, and not more than 30% non-Equity performers in any one production.

Hope Summers, radio, TV and legit actress, is production topper. Carl Stohn is assistant producer. Film actor-director Fay Roope is set as director. Most of the resident company will be drawn from the Chi radio-TV-stock talent pool. Few, if any, names from outside Chicago will be used. Two-day preliminary auditions will begin Oct. 28, when Roope arrives from the Coast. Also, plans call for a small training school in conjunction with the theatre, with a maximum of 12 students.

Showcase will run six nights weekly. Each production will run two weeks, after a two-week rehearsal. During the summer season, a "film festival" will be held in the theatre.

The venture is capitalized at $40,000. Miss Summers holds half of the stock, and the remaining $20,000 is held by 20 persons.

'Guys' to Quit Chicago After 38-Week Run

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Having extended its local run a week because of a booking jam, "Guys and Dolls" is now set to leave the Shubert here Nov. 8 to resume its tour. That will give it a 38-week engagement, easily topping "Kiss Me, Kate," but not near the 67-week mark set by "South Pacific."

After leaving here, "Guys" will play a flock of new stands, including a few split-weeks, and also making repeat appearances in several key cities. It plays a one-week engagement in Milwaukee, opening Nov. 10, then goes to Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Toronto (repeat), Cleveland (repeat), Pittsburgh, Detroit (repeat), Louisville, Nashville-Memphis and St. Louis. That will take it to next March 21.

Doom Lima Opera House

Lima, O., Oct. 21.

Faurot Opera House here will be razed in January to make room for a S. S. Kresge store. Opera House, which had operated from 1882 until 1935, was once a top legit-vaude stop in the midwest.

Lima Assn. of Commerce is prepping an "Open House" fete to commemorate the razing.

Philly's Midtown Arena Bow at Academy Foyer

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

Arena-style theatricals will make their midtown Philadelphia bow Nov. 19, in the Foyer of the Academy of Music, with Tennessee Williams' "Summer and Smoke."

Foyer Theatre will be run by Theodore Mann, Jose Tuintero and Emilie Stevens, and will be fashioned after their Circle-in-the-Square Theatre, in Greenwich Village, N. Y. Betty Miller and Michael Sheehan will have the lead roles.

Guinness Modern Dress 'Hamlet' Slated to Preem Canadian Bard Fest

Toronto, Oct. 21.

With Alec Guinness slated to do "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar" next summer, plus Tyrone Guthrie of the Old Vic as producer, the start of an annual Shakespearian Festival at Stratford, Ontario, seems to be set, this to be financially backed by a group of local businessmen, plus an additional city fathers' grant. "Hamlet" opener will be done in modern dress, a repeat of the former successful Old Vic production in London, in which Guinness played the title role and Guthrie directed.

With British guest-stars supplementing Canadian casts, plan is to present large-scale outdoor Shakespearian productions on format of the Malvern Festival, with these to be staged in the mid-town park of the Avon River gardens at Stratford, similar to the setup of the namesake city in England.

Plans also call for the immediate construction of an Elizabethan-style theatre, with audience sitting around three sides of the stage in the Shakespearian tradition. Financial syndicate's venture also includes hotels and motels as an annual American tourist lure, similar to the Malvern event.

Guinness and Guthrie, with Tanya Moiselwitsch as scenic designer, have agreed to come over for the "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar" productions, according to Tom Patterson, chief of the Stratford civic committee, and responsible for the Canadian undertaking. (Guthrie was here in August to study the Brill-Kamsler 1,640-seater theatre in-the-round setup of Melody Fair in Dufferin Park, Toronto, and is expected to adapt some of those stage technicalities in connection with the seating arrangement for the installation at Stratford).

Guinness, now appearing in London with Diana Churchill in "Under the Sycamore Tree," is understood to have turned down a film commitment in Britain in order to appear in Canada next summer.

AUSSIES BUY 'MADAM'; EVIE HAYES IN LEAD

J. C. Williamson Theatres of Australia, through its N. Y. agent, Dorothy Stewart, has bought Aussie rights to "Call Me Madam," and will produce the Irving Berlin musical there early next year. Evie Hayes, wife of Will Mahoney, will play the Ethel Merman lead role.

Miss Stewart will probably do the rest of the casting of principals in N. Y. Sets and costumes will be done in Aussie.

Miss Hayes originated the title role in Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun" for Williamson in Australia, in a production that ran over three years. She went back this summer for a four-week revival of "Annie" in Melbourne, and will return for another revival in Sydney end of the year. Then she'll preem "Madam," probably in Sydney rather than Melbourne, as Williamson has a longrun hit currently in Melbourne in "South Pacific."

Lenore Tobin to Marry Book Publishers' Rep

Theatre party agent Lenore Tobin, who also publishes Stubs, a booklet showing the capacity and seating layout of New York theatres, will be married Oct. 31 to Meyer Schattner, a book publishers' representative.

The couple met several years ago when Schattner tried to buy the Stubs. When he was unable to purchase the annual publication, he became its rep and subsequently got it into bookstores in various cities, reportedly quadrupling its sale. He's now listed as "sole distributor."

Unorthodox Coin Deal on Miller Show As Aid to Lo, the Poor Producer

Kermit Bloomgarden, on his forthcoming production of the new Arthur Miller play, temporarily titled "Those Familiar Spirits," will be his own general manager at a salary of $200 a week. That will apply until the show's production cost is recouped, after which Bloomgarden will revert to the standard setup of a share of the profits.

Another unusual angle on the "Spirits" financial arrangement is that Jed Harris' slice of the profits as director, believed to be 15%, will be absorbed entirely by Bloomgarden, instead of being borne equally with the backers, as was done in the case of "Death of a Salesman," on which stager Elia Kazan got 15% of the net in addition to his regular royalty based on the gross.

The Miller play is budgeted at $75,000, including bonds, with no provision for overcall. Boris Aronson is set to design the scenery and Mildred Dunnock and Maureen Stapleton are prospects for the cast.

Growing Complaint

Although the arrangement for Bloomgarden to receive a salary as his own general manager is unorthodox, it is intended to meet a growing complaint in producer ranks. That is that under present economic conditions in legit, it is becoming more and more difficult to make a living as a producer. With even hit shows taking many months to pay off, the producer frequently has to wait almost indefinitely to share in the proceeds, and in many cases may make nothing out of a show that pays sub-

Touring Martha Wright Getting N.Y. 'SP' Billing

Although Cloris Leachman is subbing for Martha Wright as femme lead in the Broadway edition of "South Pacific" for the next three weeks while Miss Wright plays the same role in the touring company in her native northwest, the billing in the ads, program and house boards will remain unchanged. Miss Wright is still listed as costar with George Britton, while Miss Leachman's presence is indicated only in a slip in the program and by announcement from the stage before the opening curtain.

Explanation is that the switch is not actually a cast replacement, but merely a temporary substitution. Since the change is for only three weeks, the management prefers not to spend the money to have the house boards repainted and picture blowups made. Latter would be required under Actors Equity rules if the move were permanent.

Road Tour Mapped For Bennett 'April'

Constance Bennett who toured in stock and on the strawhat circuit last spring and summer in George Batson's "I Found April," will partner with Kenneth Banghart in a road presentation of the comedy this winter, with herself in the starring role again.

Plan is to open around Jan. 1 and play about six weeks of key city stands, then go to Chicago for a run. On basis of critical and boxoffice reaction in the latter town, Miss Bennett and Banghart will decide whether to bring the play to Broadway.

Warren Munsell will be general manager of the production, which is budgeted at $40,000 and will break even at something under $12,000 weekly gross. An undisclosed name director is being considered to stage the show, and most of the cast used in the silo tour will probably be retained.

Banghart and Munsell are still planning a Broadway production of "Comin' Through the Rye," play-with-music by the late Warren Munsell, Jr., which was tried out last summer at the Olney (Md.) Summer Theatre, of which TV-radio announcer-commentator Banghart was co-producer with Evelyn Freyman, with young Munsell as business manager. Approximately $40,000 of the required $100,000 financing is pledged for the "Rye" production.

Bizet Season Seen For 'Carmen'; Lotsa Versions

Opera department of Boosey & Hawkes, music agents and publishers, has added three works in English of interest to legiters, in the Howard Dietz-Garson Kanin version of "Fledermaus"; Benjamin Britten's "Let's Make An Opera," seen briefly on Broadway last season, and the Virginia Card-George Houston libretto of Bizet's "Carmen."

Last-named is being offered for production in three styles, as a full-length opera, in opera comique or arena style, and streamlined or concert version. Leopold Stokowski used the first full-blown opera to open his Hollywood Bowl season; the arena form had its first production at Pat Hurley's St. Petersburg Operetta last April, and the concert unit is being readied by Miss Card herself for a tour of U. S. and Canadian concert halls next season. She toured it briefly last season.

Sadler's U.S. Return

Sadler's Wells Ballet will return to the U. S. in the fall of 1953 for a coast-to-coast tour booked by Sol Hurok, American manager of the troupe.

This will mark third U. S. visit of the company. Tour will be launched in September, '53 at the Met Opera House in New York.

Segal & Cowles Audition Puppet Pic at New Haven For $200,000 Angel Coin

New Haven, Oct. 21.

Following a plan similar to the one they have utilized in promoting coin for stage productions, Ben Segal and Chandler Cowles, in association with Michael Meyerberg, held an audition here last week for purposes of financing a setup involving a new puppet-type of animated cartoon.

Called Aladdin, Inc., setup is an outcropping of a new kind of puppet which Meyerberg, after 14 years of experimentation and a $500,000 personal investment, is now ready to market.

Audition consisted of demonstration of puppets, whose features can be altered manually or by electrically-controlled dial system, also a runoff of film showing puppets in action.

Enterprise is now being supported via manufacture of film commercials, which draw around $5,500 for a nine-minute pic. Plan is to produce a full length feature, "Aladdin," hence the pitch for the added financing, which is estimated around $200,000.

Audition elicited considerable interest here and brought immediate response from a moderate list of investors.

COAST EQUITY SEEKING LIBRARY THEATRE PLAN

Hollywood, Oct. 21.

Quarterly meeting last week of the local membership of Actors Equity voted to ask the union council in New York to okay a project here similar to the Equity Library Theatre.

The gathering also suggested the expansion of the Coast advisory board from nine to 15 members. Other moves passed at the session included a request for the council to empower Coast representative Charles Meredith to inaugurate new little theatre contract terms and scales for a three-month period.

Members also heard a talk by Ralph Wade, public information rep of the California State Dept. of Employment, who drew criticism when he revealed that it was solely his decision that thesps rehearsing without pay are not entitled to unemployment compensation, explaining that rehearsals constitute merely preparation for work. Equityites branded the action unfair and asked reconsideration by the state.

Plays on Broadway

The Millionairess

Theatre Guild, in association with H. M. Tennent, Ltd., production of comedy in two acts (four scenes) by Bernard Shaw. Stars Katharine Hepburn; features Cyril Ritchard, Robert Helpmann, Campbell Cotts, Peter Dyneley, Nora Nelson, Genine Graham, Vernon Greeves, Bertram Shuttleworth. Directed by Michael Benthall; settings, James Bailey. At Shubert, N. Y., Oct. 17, '52; $4.80 top ($6 Friday, Saturday nights; $8.40 opening).

|---|---|
| Julius Sagamore | Campbell Cotts |
| Lady | Katharine Hepburn |
| Alastair Fitzfassenden | Peter Dyneley |
| Patricia Smith | Genine Graham |
| Adrian Blenderbland | Cyril Ritchard |
| Doctor | Robert Helpmann |
| Man | Bertram Shuttleworth |
| Woman | Nora Nicholson |
| Manager | Vernon Greeves |

Perhaps because New York is more accustomed to her volatile personality, Katharine Hepburn is unlikely to repeat her London success in the title role of Bernard Shaw's "The Millionairess." The star has an uninhibited field day with the part, but doesn't make much of a transparently weak play. However, the Theatre Guild subscription, heavy theatre party bookings, a large advance sale and Miss Hepburn's b.o. draw are likely to insure capacity business for virtually the entire scheduled 10-week run.

Marching onstage and roaring her lines like an irate top sergeant, the actress starts her performance at top of her range, thereby leaving herself nowhere to go except down for the balance of the long evening. She is just as striking looking as ever, particularly in a succession of Parisian gowns that will be the envy of femme playgoers, and her unique personality is even more electrifying than in the past. But her performance becomes a Johnny One Note before long, and "The Millionairess" then demonstrates that even the miraculous Shaw could grow senile in his final years.

Probably the script couldn't be played legitimately and have any value at all. Shaw himself remarked that even his good plays had to be given almost a musical comedy performance. But the riot-squad farce treatment used by director Michael Benthall obviously doesn't do the trick for "The Millionairess," so the show becomes a monotonous gabfest and the dramatist is revealed as having been a pretty addled thinker on occasion.

As top-featured leading man, Cyril Ritchard and Robert Helpmann give amusing light comedy performances, while Genine Graham and Peter Dyneley are plausible in secondary leads, but the others don't especially register. James Bailey's scenery is decorative, with effective depth, but requires long intervals for changes.

Incidentally, this Shaw mash note to wealth and authoritarianism was first produced some years ago at the Malvern Festival in England and was to have been done later in London with Sybil Thorndike in the name part, but was postponed because of the war. It was presented in the summer of 1938 at the Westport (Conn.) Country Playhouse, with Jessie Royce Landis as star. The present edition is more dynamic and handsome than that strawhat version, but the script remains a dud.

The Time of the Cuckoo

Robert Whitehead & Walter Fried production of comedy-drama in two acts (six scenes) by Arthur Laurents. Stars Shirley Booth; features Dino DiLuca, Lydia St. Clair, Geraldine Brooks, Donald Murphy. Directed by Harold Clurman; setting and lighting, Ben Edwards; costumes, Helene Pons. At Empire, N. Y., Oct. 15, '52; $4.80 top ($6 Friday, Saturday and opening nights).

|---|---|
| Signora Fioria | Lydia St. Clair |
| Eddie Yaeger | Donald Murphy |
| June Yaeger | Geraldine Brooks |
| Giovanna | Silva Gaselli |
| Leona Samish | Shirley Booth |
| Mrs. McIlhenny | Jane Rose |
| Mr. McIlhenny | Daniel Reed |
| Mauro | Jose Perez |
| Renato Di Rossi | Dino DiLuca |
| Vito | Ruggero Romor |

It's easy to see why producers Robert Whitehead and Walter Fried were willing to wait a year for Shirley Booth to be available for "The Time of the Cuckoo." For this comedy-drama, which Arthur Laurents wrote expressly for the star, not only provides her with a glove-fitting role, but it derives much of its substance and plausibility, and virtually all its poignance, from her virtuoso performance and touching personal quality.

But if the producers' decision to wait until Miss Booth had finished her appearance in the musical "Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and played her original role in the film edition of "Come Back, Little Sheba" has been so manifestly justified, so is the actress' desire to portray this part of the affection-starved American spinster who finds herself through an abortive romance while on a tourist visit to Venice. So "Cuckoo" becomes another of those by-now familiar instances of Miss Booth's irresistibly honest, artful performances providing the validity and heart to an otherwise undistinguished play.

In this case Miss Booth, already recognized for years in the profession as one of the most accomplished players on the stage, reveals still greater talent than in "Sheba" and "Brooklyn." This performance in "Cuckoo" shows that she is still developing and maturing as an actress, with a new authority and personal radiance. An artist of persuasive directness and superb technique, she is now ready to join the ranks of the very top dramatic stars, with that priceless gift of making you choke up even as she scores with a laugh line.

Already the darling of her profession, she may now become a public favorite who packs 'em in at the boxoffice. Certainly only the great ones can inspire the affection that welled up in the audience at her entrance opening night.

There are other values in "Cuckoo" besides its star, however. In Dino DiLuca, an Italian making his Broadway bow, the U. S. stage has a new romantic charm boy, sort of a non-singing Ezio Pinza. He is a poised and capable actor who radiates the sort of mature s.a. that captivates femme playgoers, particularly the dowagers with the price of an orchestra seat. Within the limits of Equity's alien rule, he should be a U. S. fixture hereafter.

Other effective portrayals are turned in by Lydia St. Clair as an Italian concierge with a "practical" moral code, Geraldine Brooks as a likable young American wife whose good looks have made her rather spoiled, Donald Murphy as her restless artist-husband, Jose Perez as the Venetian equivalent of a street urchin and Silva Gaselli as a slattern pension servant.

The play itself is a trifle thin and at times somewhat synthetic, but it has an absorbing basic situation and offers a perceptive study of femme psychology seasoned with amusing comedy touches and, at least in the hands of Miss Booth, several affecting scenes. Harold Clurman's direction seems sensitive, if a bit introspective on occasion, and the pension garden by Ben Edwards is atmospheric and apparently authentic.

A likely prospect for boxoffice success, "Cuckoo" is probably good film material if judiciously adapted.

Bernardine

Irving L. Jacobs presentation of Guthrie McClintic production of comedy in two acts (10 scenes) by Mary Chase. Features Johnny Stewart, Alney Alba, Beverly Lawrence, John Kerr, Michael Wager. Staged by McClintic; scenery and lighting, John Robert Lloyd; costumes, Noel Taylor. At Playhouse, N. Y., Oct. 16, '52; $4.80 top ($6 opening).

Because of its comedy scenes and the quality of recognition it offers playgoers who recall something of their own youth, "Bernardine" should have a satisfactory run. But the Mary Chase play is never quite believable and it's unevenly cast and played, so it's not likely to repeat the success of the same author's "Harvey" or "Mrs. McThing." The material offers screen possibilities, however, perhaps as a series.

Mrs. Chase, who has several sons of her own, is becoming something of a kid's Boswell. Where "Mrs McThing" was an adventure saga for moppets, "Bernardine" devotes an affectionate eye and an accurate ear to the humorous anxieties of teenagers. As result, its scenes of adolescence seem true and funny, while adult characters tend to be stilted and unconvincing.

The play was originally scheduled for production by Irving L. Jacobs and on the latter's death recently was taken over by Guthrie McClintic, who had been slated to stage it (and who has given Jacobs program billing as presenter). It is a carefree yarn about an unhappy teenager with a curious yen about sex. It is Mrs. Chase's idea that the youth's teenage friends are more sensible in the situation and help him more than does his doting, prudish mother.

As played by Johnny Stewart, the hero of this sympathetic comedy is a somewhat self-conscious and mannered, but essentially likeable boy, while John Kerr, Girard Gillen, Fred Baker and Frank Valenza are lifelike and laughable as his understanding cronies. But, doubtless partly due to the ill-written parts they play, Alney Alba, Jane Van Duser and Beverly Lawrence seem awkward as sentimental grownups. Peggy Cass as a waitress and Bobby Vail as a hotel manager score in bit roles, however.

John Robert Lloyd's scenery looks flimsy, but allows for lightning changes.

Children: Barbara Karen, Babs Wood, Darryl Richards.

No use wasting space on a hopeless flop like "Buttrio Square." Except for the choreography of Eugene Loring and the comedy performance of a newcomer, Susan Johnson, it offers virtually nothing. The chief interest in the project is its fantastic mismanagement. After the succession of financial migraines it's a wonder the show ever opened at all, and on the basis of its quality it seems questionable why anyone bothered.

To accent the positive, Loring's dance direction and Miss Johnson's clowning are worthy of a better show—and should help to get them just that. The dancing is lively and entertaining and, although it occasionally seems overlong, it advances the story. Miss Johnson, in the dubious role of a sad sack gal soldier who has been assigned to the regular army instead of the WAC, and can't get a transfer to the proper outfit, has a laughably broad style of comedy and can put over a song.

But the rest of the evening is dreary. The show's book, something or other about Yank soldiers in a small Italian town in the final days of World War II, is depressingly similar to that of last season's calamitous "Shuffle Along" (which was another financial fiasco). The music is undistinguished, the lyrics are dull, the physical production is visibly budget-hogtied and, except for Miss Johnson and several unbilled ensemble members, the cast fails to add any sparkle. Film comic Billy Gilbert is stalled by the material he co-authored. Incidentally, a dance number titled "Tarantula" is so realistic it chased out of the theatre a few first-nighters who are presumably ultra-sensitive to spiders.

For the record, the show's songs include "Every Day Is a Holiday," "Let's Make It Forever," "I'll Tell the World," "No Place Like This Country," "Take It Away," "Get Me Out," "I'm Gonna Be a Pop," "One Is a Lonely Number," "Love Swept Like a Storm," "I Keep Telling Myself," "More and More" and "You're All Mine."

The Mikado

S. M. Chartock presentation of musical in two acts, with lyrics and book by W. S. Gilbert, music by Arthur Sullivan. Features Martyn Green, Robert Rounseville, Ella Halman, Joseph Macaulay, Lillian Murphy, Frank Rogier, Robert Eckles, Dorothy MacNeil, Earl William, Mary Roche, Glynn Hill, Radley Flynn. Staged by Chartock. Sets, Ralph Alswang; costumes, Peggy Morrison; production consultant, Green; musical director, Lehman Engel; assistant conductor, Eugene Kusmiak. At Mark Hellinger, N. Y., Oct. 20, '52.

| Pish-Tush | Frank Rogier |
| Pooh-Bah | Robert Eckles |
| Ko-Ko | Martyn Green |

| Pitti-Sing | Mary Roche |
| Peep-Bo | Dorothy MacNeil |
| Katisha | Ella Halman |
| Mikado | Joseph Macaulay |

School Girls, Nobles and Guards: Mary Louise Beatie, Dolores De Puglia, Helen Dodge, Grace Long, Stella Matthews, Eileen Moran, Shirley Pringle, Rita Schoen, Catherine Currie, Bonnie Grevatt, Glynn Hill, Jan Newby, Athena Pappas, Gloria Sacks, Jeanne Schlegel, Helen Whitfield, Don Kaplan, Don LaMon, Ray Morrissey, Feodore Tedick, Vincent Henry, Anthony Cerami, Michael Rich, Ken Smith, John Dorrin, Herbert Estrow, Radley Flynn, Roger Franklin, Irl Mowery, Bill Nuss, Stanley Propper, Chase Willard.

S. M. Chartock, a loyal as well as persistent Savoyard, who had a Gilbert & Sullivan troupe on Broadway three seasons ago, is back again—this time with quite an impressive one. He's buttressed his setup, mainly by borrowing the D'Oyly Carte's sparkplug, Martyn Green, of the comic gait and rubber feet, as well as Ella Halman, also from the famed British troupe. Romantic leads are strengthened, as with Robert Rounseville, former N. Y. City Opera Co. tenor who was lead in the film, "Tales of Hoffmann." Frank Rogier, seen on Broadway in "The Medium," is another strong addition.

With strengthened cast, all of good voices (Green, of course, doesn't need any for his comic antics); an able chorus; neat costuming, and brisk stage business and pace, under Chartock's staging and Green's supervision (doubling as production consultant), result is a pleasant evening, with full justice done the memories of G&S.

Chartock troupe opened a four-week stay on Broadway at the Mark Hellinger Monday (20) with "The Mikado." (It will follow with "Pirates of Penzance," "Pinafore" and "Iolanthe," then take off for a lengthy tour.)

"Mikado" tees off a sprightly Savoyardian season. Rounseville makes a robust Nanki-Poo vocally, although his stage deportment is slightly diffident and gentle. Lillian Murphy is a charming opposite as Yum-Yum, graceful on stage and lyric vocally. Robert Eckles is an amusing, pompous Poo-Bah and Joseph Macaulay a regal Mikado.

Miss Halman shows her years of D'Oyly Carte training and discipline by making Katisha an imposing figure, dramatically as well as musically. Frank Rogier gives stature to the Pish-Tush role, and Mary Roche is a delightful minx as Pitti-Sing. As for Green, his comedy, though familiar, is still laugh-provoking, and his style a treat.

Lehman Engel conducts the orchestra and cast with authority.

'Horn,' Carolina Al Fresco, Sets Year-Round Mgr.

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 21.

William M. Hardy, of Chapel Hill, has been named year-round general manager of the outdoor drama, "Horn in the West," which was presented this summer for the first time.

First successful run prompted creation of a permanent group. For the last two years, Hardy has served as manager of "The Lost Colony," presented since the early 30's on Roanoke Island. Last year Hardy was elected executive secretary-treasurer of the Southeastern Theatre Conference.

Faith and Prudence

Blackfriars' Guild production of comedy in three acts (six scenes) by Lottie Michelson. Features Anne Marie Lee, Mary Westland, Edward Wrenn, Allan Cary, Gerald Buckley. Directed by Dennis Gurney; settings and lighting, Floyd Allan. At Blackfriars' Theatre, N. Y., Oct. 14, '52; $2.40 top.

|---|---|
| Julie Anne Peck | Anne Marie Lee |
| Prudence Clark | Mary Westland |
| Jonesy | Edward Wrenn |
| Duncan Peck | Allan Cary |
| Timothy Boyle | Gerald Buckley |

The Blackfriars' Guild, group devoted to the development of Catholic drama, exercised more faith than prudence in its selection of Lottie Michelson's comedy as its initial offering of the 1952-53 season. Play, a lightweight comedy effort, falls far short of the Blackfriars' previous productions and fails to bring Miss Michelson near the "promising playwright" classification.

Occasionally Miss Michelson displays a sense of comic values in her development of the plot, in which a young married couple attempt to marry off their spinster "aunt" to an old salt, but much of the humor is lost in the weak construction and interminable length of each scene. It's doubtful, however, if a script tightening job would add much meat to the flimsy idea.

Mary Westland is standout as the fluttery old maid and Gerald Buckley compliments her nicely as the reluctant sailor. Buckley draws most of the yocks in his anti-marital spiels delivered in a thick brogue. A drunk scene between Miss Westland and Buckley, in which he's finally trapped into marriage, is played to the hilt, but never rises above routine slapstickery. Anne Marie Lee and Allan Cary, as the young couple, miss in their attempts at frivolity or seriousness. In the fanciful role of a "talking dummy,' confidante of the spinster, Edward Wrenn does an outstanding job.

Floyd Allan has provided a busy set of a kitchen and living room in a New Hampshire farmhouse. Dennis Gurney's direction brings some spirit to the production, but he's hampered by the butterfinger quality of the comedy.

Uncle Sam in Israel

Herman Yablokoff production of musical in two acts (18 scenes) by Benjamin Ressler, music by Sholem Secunda. Features Shifrah Lehrer, Ben Zion Witler, Michael Rosenberg, Bella Mysell, Tillie Rabinowitz, Myra Leeds, Max Rosenberg. Staged by Yablokoff; choreography, Belle Didjah; sets, Michael Saltzman. At Public Theatre, N. Y., Oct. 18, '52; $3.60 top.

| Shoshanah | Myra Leeds |
| Yehudah | Max Rosenblatt |
| Meirtl Gazlen | Yacob Susanoff |

| Israel | Max Rosenblatt |
| Yemenite Man | Isidor Elgard |
| Yemenite Woman | Rena Rosea |

When Herman Yablokoff's new production, "Uncle Sam in Israel," does not take itself seriously, it is frequently loaded with sock entertainment. Benjamin Ressler shows a knack for writing comedy and Michael Rosenberg has the ability to project the author's lines effectively. These aspects, combined with Sholem Secunda's tunes, sprightly terp routines, and young, attractive femme talent, makes the Public Theatre offering a welcome departure from the usual Second Ave., N. Y., fare.

It's obvious that a strong attempt has been made to introduce modern innovations in musical comedy to the Yiddish stage. Although the hard-working downtowners haven't succeeded completely, they have the satisfaction of knowing they're on the right track.

Yablokoff is to be congratulated for introducing new faces. He has brought in three young femmes, who at least look the age of the characters they are portraying. Shifrah Lehrer, as the rich girl from Kentucky, of all places, who comes to Israel as a pioneer, scores in both acting and thrushing departments. Myra Leeds, as a native Israeli, offers an unusual coloratura voice. Mira Yaron, playing a Yemenite, is on hand for decorative purposes. Latter is a striking beauty, and although her thesping is limited, is definitely worth looking at.

Story introduces various elements of the world's Jewish population in Israel. There's Samuel Laks and his wife, Gussie, played by Rosenberg and Tillie Rabinowitz, as the wealthy couple from Kentucky who had come to Israel to talk their daughter out of a pioneering venture. Rosenberg's caricature of the rich Jewish-American business man who would build a Pepsi-Cola factory as a source of water is a firstrate portrayal. There's Ben Zion Witler as a displaced person from the Warsaw Ghetto who falls for the American girl from Kentucky. In addition, there are veteran settlers, a Jerusalem zealot, a Yemenite, and displaced persons, all who find themselves in Israel for diverse reasons.

Another plus for the Yablokoff production is the choreography by Belle Didjah and the young, enthusiastic dancers who carry it out. Producer's direction, portrayals of the entire cast, and Michael Saltzman's settings, also rate nods.

Chi B.O. Maintains Perky Pace; 'Dolls' $50,700, 'Poster' $27,400

Chicago, Oct. 21.

Loop legit scene was hit with the not unexpected folding of "The Fig Leaf" after an 11-day run. However, the other four shows are maintaining the perky grosses of recent weeks.

"Stalag 17" is the only show in town which has not posted a closing notice. "Fourposter" has seven weeks to go. "Guys and Dolls" has been extended one week, and will be followed into the Shubert Nov. 11 by "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," which was originally set for the Great Northern Nov. 10. "Gigi" comes to the Harris Nov. 3 when "I Am a Camera" hits the road.

Estimates for Last Week

"Fig Leaf," Selwyn (2d wk) ($3.80; 1,000). Folded Saturday (18) with a poor $11,000 for the week, and $15,800 for the entire run of 13 performances in 11 days.

"Fourposter," Blackstone (4th wk) ($4.20; 1,534). Continues at almost-capacity; nearly $27,400.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (35th wk) ($6; 2,100). Here, too, not many empty seats with a boff $50,700; engagement extended one week to Nov. 8.

"I Am a Camera," Harris (5th wk) ($4.40; 1,000). Riding high with fine $19,300.

"Stalag 17," Erlanger (7th wk) ($4.40; 1,334). Very bright $17,700.

'SHRIKE' GOOD $13,600 FOR NEW HAVEN STAY

New Haven, Oct. 21.

Breakin of national company of "The Shrike" (Van Heflin) got off to a slow start at the Shubert last week (15-18), but word-of-mouth built to SRO. At a $4.20 top, gross ended up a good estimated $13,600.

Current is full week of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and next week gets "Jane" last-half (30-1). Two new ones follow, "Rise By Sin" (Nov. 6-8) and John van Druten's "I've Got Sixpence" (Nov. 12-15). "Don Juan in Hell" plays a three-day stand Nov. 20-22, then comes another tryout preem, "The Grey Eyed People" (Nov. 27-29).

Bali Troupe Winds Boff 5-Wk. N.Y. Run With 101G

Dancers of Bali, presented at the Fulton, N. Y., for the past five weeks by Columbia Artists Mgt., ended its run Saturday (18) with a sock $101,050 take. Troupe took in $17,700 first week, capacity $21,000 the next three, and $20,300 for the windup. Friday night's (17) performance was sold to the UN, some of whose members wouldn't sit in the gallery, hence the lone non-sellout night since opening week. Troupe, originally regarded as a limited draw, surprised show biz with its pull and boffo take. Troupe played seven performances weekly.

As result of its biz, troupe was booked for a return N. Y. engagement of two weeks, starting Monday (27). It had to fill previously-set out-of-town bookings this week. The extra N. Y. fortnight was sold out by last week, and troupe can't stay longer, because of tour commitments. Fred C. Schang, Columbia prez, personally set up trip of the Bali dancers to the U. S., their first away from home.

'Bell' Moderate $15,000; 'Nina' Fair 11½G, Frisco

San Francisco, Oct. 21.

"Bell, Book and Candle" concluded its third and final frame at the Geary Saturday night (18), with house going dark. "Nina," town's sole legit, is building, greatly sparked by TV, radio and personal appearances of Edward Everett Horton.

Estimates for Last Week

"Nina," Alcazar (2d wk) (C-$3.60; 1,157) (Edward Everett Horton). Fair $11,500 (previous week, a colorless $7,500).

"Bell, Book and Candle," Geary (3d wk) (C-$4.20; 1,550) (Joan Bennett, Zachary Scott). Moderate $15,000 (previous week, okay $16,000).

'Wagon' 25G, Detroit

Detroit, Oct. 21.

"Paint Your Wagon," starring Burl Ives, grossed $25,000 in its second week at the 1,452-seat Cass.

Bette Davis returned to the stage Sunday (19) in "Two's Company," which will be at the Shubert for two weeks. Current Cass attraction is "Bagels and Yox," in for a week.

'Blondes' Pale $19,400 In New England Split

Providence, Oct. 21.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" had a rough time last week, going into the red with a gross of only $19,400 on an eight-performance string of three stands. The musical opened with $3,600 for two performances Monday-Tuesday at the Elm Street, Worcester; added $8,200 on two evenings and a matinee Wednesday-Thursday (15-16) at the Court Square, Springfield, and finaled with $7,600 for two evenings and a matinee at the Metropolitan here Friday-Saturday (17-18).

Show is at the Shubert, New Haven, all this week.

'Juan' $49,900, 'Girl' 13G, L. A.

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

"Don Juan In Hell" racked up a new one-week Los Angeles record for a dramatic show last week with $49,900, in the first of its two frames at the 2,670-seat Philharmonic Auditorium. Virtually unanimous rave notices greated the production, which had played a one-nighter at the same house 18 months ago. Current, final frame is expected to be right around the same figure.

"Country Girl" exited the Biltmore Saturday (18) after a disappointing three-week stand and was replaced last night (Mon.) by "Farfel Follies," Yiddish-American vaude revue, in for three weeks. Sole other opening this week is "The Web and the Rock," dramatization of the Thomas Wolfe novel starring Eugene Leontovich, which rekindles the long-dark Las Palmas tomorrow night (Wed.).

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Carthay Circle (3d wk) (1,518; $2.40). Up another notch to $14,300 with advance building. Typographical error last week gave it $5,000 too much; gross was $13,850.

"Country Girl," Biltmore (3d wk) (1,636; $4.20). Down to $13,000 on the final frame, to exit with $47,000 for the three-week stand, for an operating profit of around $2,000 on the run.

"Don Juan in Hell," Philharmonic Aud (1st wk) (2,670; $4.80). Smashing $49,900 for the first week, helped by $6 opening night top. New record for a dramatic show.

'Pacific' Smash $74,730 In Portland Stanza

Portland, Ore., Oct. 21.

Martha Wright and Webb Tilton in "South Pacific" chalked up a new house record with a smashing $74,730 for five evening performances and three matinees at the Civic Auditorium last week (14-18). The 3,500-seat seat house was scaled at $4.80. Manager William Duggan turned away enough customers to sell out for nearly an additional week, if the big musical could have been held over.

Robert Young, Dane Clark and Nancy Kelly in "Country Girl" is next at the Mayfair Theatre, starting Thursday (23).

Seattle's $12,523 Single

Seattle, Oct. 21.

Opening a week's engagement last night (Mon.) at the 4,000-seat Municipal Auditorium, "South Pacific" drew $12,523 for the single performance. With the show completely sold out in advance, the week's receipts are expected to be in the neighborhood of $100,000, easily a local record for legit.

From here the Rodgers-Hammerstein steamroller goes to the Fox, Spokane for an eight-day stand Oct. 27-Nov. 2.

'BAGELS' $16,400, TORONTO

Toronto, Oct. 21.

Thanksgiving observance in Canada, with holiday exodus, dented "Bagels and Yox" at week's start, but show built up to end engagement with a satisfactory $16,400.

Royal Alexandra, 1,525-seater, was scaled at $4 top with tax.

Ballet Theatre $27,500 For Six in Split Week

Ballet Theatre, starting a coast-to-coast tour last Tuesday (14) in White Plains, N. Y., racked up a healthy $27,500 in six performances in a split week.

Troupe did $4,500 in White Plains; a $2,500 capacity take in Northampton, Mass., Wednesday (15); $4,700 in Syracuse Thursday; $9,600 in two, Friday-Saturday, in Rochester, and $6,200 Sunday at a matinee in Cleveland.

Company this week had stops in Indianapolis and Lafayette, Ind., before opening a 10-day stand in Chicago tomorrow (Thurs.).

'Brooklyn' 30G, 'Sea' 19G, Hub

Boston, Oct. 21.

Two newcomers bowed in last night (20), "The Shrike," in for two weeks at the Colonial, and "Good Night Ladies," set for an indefinite run at the Majestic. Holdovers, "Deep Blue Sea" in finale at Plymouth and "Tree Grows in Brooklyn" ditto at Opera House, continue in upper brackets. Slated for next week (27) is "The Suspects," bowing into the Plymouth.

Estimates for Last Week

"Deep Blue Sea," Plymouth (1st wk) ($4.20; 1,200). Margaret Sullavan lured a tasty $19,000 into the boxoffice, with final frame expected to hold near it.

Gilbert and Sullivan Co., Shubert (2d wk) ($4.20; 1,700). Off to about $18,000 for final week. Dancers of Bali here for two performances (20-21).

"Jane," Colonial (2d wk) ($3.60; 1,500). Second week wound within few dollars of initialer, with nifty $15,300.

"Paris '90," Majestic (2d wk) ($3.60; 1,280). Dropped to about $11,700 for final stanza; previous week registered $13,500 and the week before reached $19,500 in Toronto.

"Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Opera House (1st wk) ($4.20-$4.80; 3,000). Slick $30,000 for first week.

'DIAL' FINE $23,800; 'CLIMATE' BAD 6½G, D.C.

Washington, Oct. 21.

Washington's two major legit houses represented opposite extremes business-wise last week.

The newly done over Shubert-Gayety, opening with Maurice Evans in "Dial 'M' for Murder," chalked up a sock $23,800 week and looks very good for the current stanza as well. House was assured of solid biz by the Theatre Guild subscription list and by the fine critical reception.

On the other hand, Moss Hart's new "Climate of Eden" grossed a very bad $6,500. Although it was skedded for a two-week stand, Hart yanked it at the end of the week and sent it into Pilly, leaving the National dark for the current week.

Both plays were scaled to a $4.20 top.

'Gigi' Disappoints At $15,600 for Pitt Week

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.

"Gigi" began its tour rather disappointingly at the Nixon last week, getting only around $15,600 at $3.90 top ($3 plus 30% Federal and city taxes). Show was figured to do much more on at least a couple of counts. It was the first attraction of the season that hadn't played here before—first two tenants were "Oklahoma" and "Mister Roberts," both multiple returnees—and notices were generally excellent, with all of the critics singing hosannahs for Audrey Hepburn. Broadway hit of last year started slowly and while it picked up somewhat down the stretch, the potentialities were never realized.

ATS-Theater Guild subscription series tees off this week with Katharine Cornell in "Constant Wife," and then the Nixon gets two musicals in a row, Phil Silvers in "Top Banana" and Bette Davis in "Two's Company," latter for a fortnight.

'LADIES' $8,600, WILMINGTON

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 21.

"Good Night Ladies" drew $8,600 here last week at the 1,223-seater Playhouse.

Show was in for six performances Oct. 15-18.

B'way B.O. Hotter, With 5 Sellouts; Hepburn, Booth Capacity Starters, 'Bernardine' OK $13,100 for First 6

Business on Broadway continued to roll along in high gear last week. With the town still jammed with visitors and the public apparently in a buying mood, brokers were helped by the arrival of five new shows during the week.

Booming attendance brought sellout totals to five shows, "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie," "Guys and Dolls," "King and I," "New Faces," "Pal Joey" and "Wish You Were Here," while "Millionairess" and "Time of the Cuckoo" had standees at all regular performances for the first partweek. New highs were registered by "Male Animal," "New Faces" and "Wish You Were Here."

Of the new entries, "Cuckoo" and "Millionairess" appear to be virtually assured hits, while "Bernardine" has at least fair prospects and "In Any Language" is also getting promising attendance. "Buttrio Square" closed last Saturday night (18), with the management announcing plans to refinance and reopen, and "Sacred Flame" exits next Saturday (25).

This week's only premiere is S. M. Chartock's new Gilbert & Sullivan company, which started Monday night (20).

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical Comedy), MD (Musical Drama), O (Operetta).

Other parenthetic designations refer, respectively, to top prices; number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Price includes 20% amusement tax, but grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of tax.

"Bernardine," Playhouse (1st wk) (C-$4.80; 999; $21,500). Opened Thursday night (16) to six favorable notices (Atkinson, Times; Chapman, News; Coleman, Mirror; Hawkins, World-Telegram & Sun; Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American) and two pans (Pollock, Compass; Watts, Post); first four performances and two paid previews grossed almost $13,100.

"Buttrio Square," Century (1st wk) (MC-$6; 1,645; $49,191). Opened Tuesday night (14) to unanimous pans; first seven performances grossed an estimated $12,000; closed Saturday night (18) at a loss of about $110,000, with the management announcing plans to refinance and reopen.

"Evening With Beatrice Lillie," Booth (3d wk) (R-$6; 900; $24,500) (Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner). Over $24,500 again.

"Fourposter," Barrymore (52d wk) (C-$4.80; 1,060; $24,996) (Betty Field, Burgess Meredith). Almost $20,800 (previous week, $20,500; week before, $18,400).

"Guys and Dolls," 46th St. (100th wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,319; $43,904). As usual, exactly $44,000.

"Gambler," Lyceum (1st wk) (D-$4.80; 995; $22,845) (Alfred Drake). Opened Monday (13) and first full week drew nearly $8,600 for a loss of about $1,400; continuing at least through this week.

"In Any Language," Cort (2d wk) (C-$4.80; 1,056; $27,700) (Uta Hagen). Just short of $19,000 (previous week, $13,500 for first five performances).

"King and I," St. James (82d wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717) (Yul Brynner). Over $51,700 again.

"Male Animal," Music Box (25th wk) (C-$4.80; 1,012; $25,903) (Elliot Nugent, Martha Scott, Robert Preston). Went to another new high for the run, over $21,000 (previous week, $20,800).

"Millionairess," Shubert (1st wk) (C-$6-$4.80; 1,361; $39,000) (Katharine Hepburn). Opened Friday night (17) to three favorable reviews (Chapman, News; Coleman, Mirror; Watts, Post), four pans (Atkinson, Times; Hawkins, World-Telegram & Sun; Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American) and one inconclusive (Pollock, Compass); first three performances and two paid previews drew $24,500.

"Moon Is Blue," Miller (85th wk) C-$4.80; 920; $21,586) (Donald Cook, Barry Nelson, Janet Riley). Almost $15,600 (previous week, $15,500).

"Mr. Pickwick," Plymouth (5th wk) (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019). Nearly $12,800 (previous week, $13,800); must move to another house if it continues next week, as "Dial 'M' for Murder" is due here.

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (28th wk) (C-$4.80; 912; $23,400) (Helen Hayes). Over $24,000 (previous week, $23,000).

"New Faces," Royale (23d wk) (R-$6; 1,035; $30,600). New high for the run, almost $30,900 (previous week, $30,600).

"Pal Joey," Broadhurst (42d wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,160; $39,602) (Vivienne Segal, Harold Lang). Just under $40,000 (previous week, $39,900).

"Point of No Return," Alvin (40th wk) (D-$4.80-$6; 1,331; $37,924) (Henry Fonda). Over $27,800 (previous week, $28,300); closing Nov. 22, to tour.

"Sacred Flame," President (2d wk) (D-$3.60; 300; $7,000). Around $2,000 (previous week, $3,000 for first seven performances); closing Saturday night (25).

"South Pacific," Majestic (183d wk) (MC-$6; 1,659; $50,186) (Martha Wright, George Britton). Over $49,400 again; Cloris Leachman is subbing for Martha Wright for three weeks, but with the billing unchanged.

"Time of the Cuckoo," Empire (1st wk) (D-$6-$4.80; 1,082; $25,056) (Shirley Booth). Opened Wednesday night (15) to a four-four split of favorable (Atkinson, Times; Chapman, News; McClain, Journal-American; Pollock, Compass) and negative (Coleman, Mirror; Hawkins, World-Telegram & Sun; Kerr, Herald Tribune; Watts, Post); first five performances and two previews grossed over capacity $20,300.

"Wish You Were Here," Imperial (17th wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,400; $52,080). Went to still another new high for the run, $52,319 (previous week, $52,296).

OPENING THIS WEEK

Gilbert & Sullivan, Hellinger (O-$4.80; 1,507; $40,113). S. M. Chartock's Savoyard troupe opened Monday night (20) for a week's engagement of "The Mikado," with "Pirates of Penzance" set for next week.

'Suspects' $8,600, 'Top' 42½G, Philly

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

Smash business was continued here by "Top Banana" with terrific $42,500 for its second session. Other entry, "The Suspects," at the Locust, drew a panning from two of the three critics and wound up with a thin $8,600. Show is being revised, with cast changes and cuts bringing it down from three acts to two.

Surprise entry last night (20) was Moss Hart's "Climate of Eden," which came into the Forrest one week ahead of schedule. Show dropped the second week of its Washington engagement to move up the Philadelphia date.

'Madam' $33,300, St. Louis; 'Born' Pleasing $18,000

St. Louis, Oct. 21.

Irving Berlin's "Call Me Madam," at a $5.50 top, opening the legit season here at the American Theatre, wound up the first of a two-week frame Sunday (19) with nearly $33,300 for eight performances. The musical piled up a $60,600 gross the previous week at the Fox, Milwaukee.

"Born Yesterday," with William Bendix and Doddie Bauer, visiting leads, closed a successful one-week stand Sunday (19) at the Empress Theatre, with house scaled to $2.50. Gross for eight performances was approximately $18,000. "Royal Family" with Ruth Hussey, John Newland and Ilka Dehl in top roles, tees off a week's frame tonight (Tues.).

'Roberts' Okay $17,700 In Three-Way Split

Buffalo, Oct. 21.

"Mister Roberts" had another profitable gross last week in a three-stand series of eight performances, totalling $17,700 for the string. The Tod Andrews starrer got $2,200 for a one-nighter Monday (13) at Shea's, Bradford, Pa.; picked up $5,700 more in two nights and a matinee Tuesday-Wednesday (14-15) at the Auditorium, Rochester, and wound up with $9,800 for three nights and a matinee at the Erlanger here.

Leland Hayward production is splitting this week between Jamestown, N. Y., Ashtabula, O., Akron and Youngstown.

Plays Out of Town

Two's Company

Detroit, Oct. 19.

James Russo & Michael Ellis presentation of musical revue in two acts (20 scenes), with book by Charles Sherman; music, Vernon Duke; lyrics, Ogden Nash, Sammy Cahn. Directed by Jules Dassin. Stars Bette Davis; features Hiram Sherman, Nora Kaye. Sketches by Charles Sherman and Peter deVries; scenery, Ralph Alswang; costumes, Miles White; dances, Jerome Robbins; musical supervisor and conductor, Milton Rosenstock; ballet music by Genevieve Pitot; associate producer, Clifford Hayman. At Shubert, Detroit, Oct. 19, '52 $4.80 top; Fri.-Sat. $5.40.

With Bette Davis, Hiram Sherman, Nora Kaye, Bill Callahan, Stanley Prager, George Irving, Peter Kelley, Maria Karnilova, Ann Hathaway, Nathaniel Frey, Sue Hight, Maurice Brenner, Si-Moi Ling, Earl Renard, Buzz Miller, June Laine.

Singers: Art Carroll, Clifford Fearl, Bill Krach, Robert Neukem, Frank Neil, Lenore Korman, Tina Louise, May Muth, Basha Regis, Deborah Remsen, Teddy Tavenner, Doris Wolin.

Dancers: William Inglis, John Kelly, Ralph Linn, Robert Pagent, Job Sanders, Stanley Simmons, Florence Baum, Eleanor Boleyn, Babs Heath, Dorothy Hill, Julie Marlowe, Helen Murielle.

Teen Aces: Robert Orton (Leader), Francis Edwards, Henry Mallory, Gilbert Shipley, Armstead Shobey, Norman Shobey.

Bette Davis' collapse during opening night performance of "Two's Company" Sunday night (19) here proved a shocker. But Charles Sherman's musical revue needed no opening-night hypo. It stands on its own very well. However, it stood far too long opening night: two hours and 50 minutes. The first act, with 11 scenes, lasted an hour and 42 minutes. There was a 17-minute intermission. There were nine scenes in the second act.

"Two's Company" opens on a stage bare to the brick walls except for a piano and a step-ladder. Dancers drift on the stage as Hiram Sherman deadpans an intro with the explanation that nowadays the "production" has forced the introduction out of existence. As he talks, curtains, resplendent with color, drop and the stage blooms with fine hues.

Scenery by Ralph Alswang and costumes by Miles White are beautiful. Capacity audience in the 2,050-seat Shubert exclaimed or laughed uproariously at each change of scenery or costumes. The belly-laughs, incidentally, occurred when Miss Davis donned outlandish costumes for her hillbilly and other character sketches.

While Miss Davis is no singer, it's also true that a singer isn't required for the "songs" she is called upon to "sing." Actually, the music of Vernon Duke can be "talked" and it is good-enough talk-music that it sounds like song.

Miss Davis talks on beat in a deep voice which produces a very nice effect of singing. Her diction is sharp and the witty Ogden Nash and Sammy Cahn lyrics come through clearly. Her best numbers are the hillbilly "Purple Rose," and "Just Like a Man."

No one left the theatre humming the Duke music or trying to remember the Nash-Cahn lyrics. While music and lyrics fit aptly into the revue, they don't have the lilt that will make them hits.

Miss Davis reveals a real talent for broad comedy. She has 'em rolling in the aisles as a gap-toothed hillbilly with a Park Ave. background in "Purple Rose," and as the frowzy wife of a jealous truck driver in "Jealousy." She also scores with Hiram Sherman in a set of sketches (costume accessories changed onstage) showing how Noel Coward, Eugene O'Neill or William Saroyan would have written "Clear Blue Sky." instead of Duke and Nash.

Miss Davis' dancing is good. Her hip-shaking dance in the "Roll Along, Sadie," sketch is outstanding. The ballet numbers, featuring Nora Kaye, are excellent. Miss Kaye's portrayal of the rejected girl in "Roundabout" and the torrid role as the stripper in "Haunted Hot Spot" bring down the house.

"Two's Company" is rich in talent, dancing, color and very clever sketches. It isn't so rich in music, producing not a single discernible hit song.

The revue obviously ran too long opening night. It is just as obvious, however, which scenes need to be eliminated: "The Kongais," "Herbert," "Glug, Glug, Glug" and "Conservation Piece." With those cuts, "Two's Company" will be a comfortable production which should enjoy a long life on Broadway. Opening night audience gave it a great sendoff, with heavy on-the-spot mitting and six curtain calls.

As to Miss Davis' collapse in her first stage appearance in 22 years, it happened as she was singing her opening number. She did not wilt and flutter to the floor; she toppled over stiff-as-a-board and hit the stage with a terrific, bone-jarring bang. It was as if someone had given her a knockout punch on the chin.

Fellow performers were frozen in position onstage. A shirtsleeved stagehand had to rush out to half-carry, half-drag Miss Davis to the wings. The orch recommenced and then stopped. Then the house lights went on.

Five minutes later, the curtain parted and a disheveled Miss Davis, trying to arrange her hair and her dress at the same time, teetered to the front apron. "Well, you couldn't say I didn't fall for you," she quipped. She blew a kiss and the show went on.

The Robe

Phoenix, Oct. 9.

Phoenix Little Theatre production of drama in three acts (10 scenes) by John McGreevey, dramatized from novel by Lloyd C. Douglas. Directed by Bob Pollard; sets by Charles R. Larkin. At Phoenix Little Theatre, Phoenix, Oct. 9, '52; $1.50 top.

"The Robe," a dramatization by John McGreevey of the late Lloyd C. Douglas' 1942 best-selling novel, is an interesting trailer to Frank Ross' forthcoming film production for 20th-Fox. Confined dimensions of the play point up the need for full-blown screen treatment, on Homeric scale; if premise of the novel in all its ramified phases is to be fully realized. It's virtually too big an assignment for a stage vehicle.

Play was written by McGreevey, a localite, for publication by the Dramatic Publishing Co. (Chicago), and should prove its worth to religious groups and amateur secular thesps. It lacks sufficient literary and dramatic scope for the big-time.

Subject matter deals with the conversion to Christianity of Marcellus, Roman legate who carries out the Crucifixion order of Pontius Pilate, and to whom Christ's robe becomes a momentous symbol of his new faith.

Hegira of Marcellus and Demetrius, his Greek slave, to Calvary, Rome, Athens and Jerusalem, while facing moral and spiritual conflicts, provides the nub of the story and lends an insight into the mores of the times.

Play runs to more than three hours, but moves at a brisk clip with a minimum of dull stretches. Task of telescoping the turgid Douglas novel to three acts is an assignment that would have fazed many a more experienced playwright, but McGreevey turned the trick by the elision of considerable material and by dropping a score of minor characters. Result is a good piece of stage craftsmanship of its kind.

The Phoenix Little Theatre has invested the play with firstrate scenic and production values, and lead roles are limned with authority by George Hills and Bill Peterson. Remainder of simon-pures, with a few exceptions, are just passable. Bob Pollard's direction shows a professional touch, and the period costuming is handsome as well as authentic.

Renaud-Barrault Troupe Wows Montreal; Opener Lives Up to Big Buildup

Montreal, Oct. 21.

The Madeleine Renaud, Jean-Louis Barrault Co. from the Theatre Marigny in Paris hit Montrealers last Wednesday (15) with a theatrical whammo seldom witnessed before in this city.

The long-awaited arrival of this celebrated company from Paris; the hefty word-of-mouth buildup and advance raves were all justfied when these talented performers opened with two French classics, "Les Fausses Confidences" by Marivaux and Moliere's frothy comedy, "Les Fourberies de Scapin."

To a near-capacity, opening-night house at Her Majesty's Theatre, this company brought a theatrical experience to localites that was elegant, classical and showwise. Here is a group steeped in an era of the theatre that could come only from France; a company that has directed its choice of offerings to a certain intellectual level and a group that has more than a little faith in its thesping convictions.

Choice of "Confidences" and "Scapin" (which it played for its first six performances) exhibited outfit's forte to best advantage. Barrault played the lead in both vehicles and the combined effort showed all 20 members of the cast effectively.

Polite Manners

Opener, Marivoux's "Confidences," is a play of polite French manners and intrigue. Miss Renaud, the femme lead, is outstanding as Araminte, with Barrault as the scheming Dubois intent on arranging a marriage between Araminte and Dorante (played by Jean Desailly). The obvious and expected complications arise with a domineering mother who wants her daughter to marry nothing less than a count; a tinkering uncle, and a maid of the social level of the suitor who thinks she is the lucky girl.

As the disappointed girl, Simone Valere is standout. She plays the role with restraint and just enough of the exaggeration required for the period to contrast sharply with the broad interpretation by Barrault. The latter, as the late Louis Jouvet, is given to the grand gesture, the blatant wink and a series of neatly calculated stage tricks that would make an experienced American up-stager look like a juve from a backwoods circuit.

Pierre Bertin as the uncle is excellent; Marie-Helene Daste as the mother is convincing at times but fails to sustain, and looks more like a sister than a mother to Araminte. Costumes and decor by Maurice Brianchon are effective, particularly the gowns of Miss Renaud, which drew audible appreciation from payees.

"Scapin," directed originally by Jouvet, is a tour-de-force between Charles Mahieu and Pierre Bertin, who as the miserly fathers create a form of comedy that is a joy to behold. The plot revolves around the fathers and their respective sons who marry beneath their station and because of this have been cut off financially. Barrault, as Scapin, is brought in to try and convince the fathers that they should support the young lovers, and the ensuing pantomime and events are loaded with every possible Moliere situation (Scapin was one of the last plays written by Moliere).

Here again the Jouvet influence is apparent in Barrault's treatment of the rascally Scapin.

In fact, there are moments during this cream puff that verge very close to what present-day theatregoers know as slapstick. Overall stage savvy, however, comes through every time just when things are going overboard.

All 10 members of this single-acter are well cast; the late Christian Berard did both set and costumes, a heavy contributing factor to the offering, and incidental music is by Henri Sauguet.

Company is currently playing Andre Gide's translation of "Hamlet," to be followed by Jean Anouilh's "La Repitition ou l'Amour Puni" starting Friday (24), and then winds up its Montreal stay with Moliere's "Amphitryon" and a group of poems and pantomime, "Les Adieux."

Canadian Concerts & Artists is handling the Montreal date for Sol Hurok, who planed from New York for the opening. Following Montreal, company goes to Quebec City and then to Ottawa for brief appearances, and opens at the Ziegfeld Theatre, N. Y., Nov. 12 for a four-week stand.

Legit Followups

The Shrike

(SHUBERT, NEW HAVEN)

New Haven, Oct. 15.

Regardless of whatever else this national company of "The Shrike" may do, it will present to road audiences a well-rounded cast that will leave little, if any, leeway for the beef that touring troupes hang their merit on the peg of a single name, and let the rest of the acting chips fall where they may. Minor roles, and there are a flock of them, get good treatment and help to turn in a neat overall balance.

Although in one respect, Van Heflin's lead assignment is a sort of followup of the Jose Ferrer thesping chore, in a more comprehensive sense it is not because, although it's not generally known, Heflin was obliged to turn down the role originally about two years ago, when picture commitments made it impossible for him to assume the part.

A comparison of the Ferrer and Heflin interpretations is beside the point. It's sufficient to note that the latter gives a sincere, moving and sympathetic performance that carries an authenticity that has every member of the audience living the part with him. His work in this one should add stature to his record.

Featured in the cast are Doris Dalton, as the possessive wife, and Kendall Clark, as the inquiring medic. Although at times Miss Dalton seems to lack emphasis in conveying the insidious facet of her role, her overall delineation is good. Clark, a member of the original cast, offers a smooth picture of the precise doctor.

Other holdovers from the Broadway troupe are William Bush, Joe Comadore and Arthur Jarrett. Newcomers include Rica Martens, Fred Miller, Jill Miller, Si Oakland, Maxwell Glanville, Ann Driscoll, James Clark, Robert Berger, Walter Appler, Sy Travers, Edgar Grower, Kermit Kegley, Bernard Pollock, Ken Renard, Metro Welles, Mary Farrell and Harold McGee.

This Kermit Bloomgarden presentation is billed as a Jose Ferrer production and carries no listing of a director. However, author Joseph Kramm is the unbilled stager and he has done a highly competent job. Sets are by Howard Bay and costumes by Edith Lutyens.

Tree Grows in Brooklyn

(OPERA HOUSE, BOSTON)

Boston, Oct. 20.

The tree that grows in Brooklyn may not be exclusively indigenous to that community, but this particular specimen of it, now current at the Opera House, isn't taking root any too securely.

Main trouble, aside from the notoriously weak and hitless nature of the score, is the shifting of emphasis in the characterization of Cissy that goes with the Joan Blondell instead of the Shirley Booth personality. Miss Blondell does the role well enough in her conception of it, but that conception is a little too blowsy, a little too dependent on appearance. Cissy thus becomes a pretty low character rather than a completely natural one, and it somehow brings the level down.

Supporting cast is very able, with Robert Shackleton and Evelyn Ward as the romantic pair likeable and convincing, and up to the vocal demands of the roles. John Vivyan does Cissy's oafish partner with a nicely-drawn deadpan approach, and Anne Mary Tallon as the child is appealing.

Despite the period character of the staging, it often seems dull and forced, however, to give the overall aspect a dated look. The dancing is good, as is the raffle ballet of the second act, and the costumes and sets are fine. The whole show is nicely paced, too, and the p.a. system in operation when caught allowed dialog and lyrics to be heard throughout the big house. But this version needs a lot of improvement to demonstrate to the road how come it lasted so long on Broadway.

Top Banana

(SHUBERT, PHILLY)

Philadelphia, Oct. 15.

"Top Banana" tried out here at the same Shubert Theatre almost exactly a year ago and impressed from the start then as pretty much of a natural for New York, due almost entirely to the fast and whammy comedy of the star, Phil Silvers, and his collection of stooges.

As seen on its return (and it's been doing near-capacity biz at the Shubert after a rather slow start) it still rates as first-rate entertainment, a pretty good bet for success on tour.

There haven't been too many changes in the cast and those that have been made are not unduly important. Kaye Ballard has the heroine's role originated by Rose Marie, sings it well and acquits herself creditably in the romantic and dramatic (such as they are) sequences. Ditto goes for Danny Scholl, who has taken over Lindy Doherty's chores as Cliff Lane.

Judy Lynn is still playing the other femme lead of Sally and Jack Albertson continues as Vic Davis. Then most of Silver's crew of zany stooges, headed by Joey Faye, are on hand again and they and the star still coax a carload of laughs. Silvers has evened out the rough edges of his performance and works more smoothly without missing any of the guffaws. It is, of course, his show from start to finish.

It's to the credit of producers Paula Stone and Mike Sloane that they have not only not allowed the tempo of the performance to slacken but have also maintained the high standard of the physical production. The ballet in Act II is spiritedly performed and all the dance routines, neatly staged by Ron Fletcher, still have their original zip. There has been some rearrangement of scenes (only eight in Act 1 as compared to 13 originally), but this too is a minor detail. It seemed to this reviewer that vocally, especially in regards to the singing chorus, "Top Banana" is better now than it was last season. At all events, it's a good, lively, rowdy show and should be liked in the hinterlands.

The Constant Wife

(FORD'S, BALTIMORE)

Baltimore, Oct. 13.

With Robert Flemyng playing the straying husband essayed on Broadway by Brian Aherne, and Margery Maude as the understanding mother played there by Grace George, Katharine Cornell's touring version of "The Constant Wife" holds up in good style. Other cast changes include Anna Cameron as the straying girl friend, and Peter Boyne as the butler.

Miss Cornell is enjoying a romp in this somewhat madeover Maugham vehicle and the daring dialog and unorthodox situation of another era is given authority by her presence. Supporting players fall in line and it's all pleasant enough, if on the lightweight side.

Flemyng's clipped British reading will have to be slowed down and pointed a bit to save some of the lines that are being lost in this opus of almost solid conversation and little action. The same goes for most of the others headed by Miss Maude, who will have to learn to speak out in the spacious auditoriums of the provinces. There's too much mumbling in the beards at the present moment.

John Emery, as the returning lover, takes hold with each entrance, and Miss Cornell captures every nuance of Maugham's nimble telling of the problem of whether to meet connubial cheating with cheating or let it take its natural course. Setting is attractive and direction sure. It's all theatre, and with Miss Cornell on the marquee it's money in the bank for the tour ahead.

Gigi

(NIXON, PITT)

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.

If producer Gilbert Miller hadn't elevated Audrey Hepburn to stardom last season for her performance in "Gigi" on Broadway, it would have been a crying shame. Young actress justifies and deserves it with a performance that takes a trivial little comedy and lights up the stage with it. Although she's only here on a temporary visa, the theatre should immediately put in motion the machinery to make it a permanent one.

Miller has sent the original Broadway company on the road with two exceptions. Margaret Bannerman is now playing the Cathleen Nesbitt role, that of the aging cocotte with the grand manners, and Roland Telfer is the butler in place of Francis Compton. Miss Bannerman delivers all the way with a job of trouping that presses the acting skills down to a fine point, while Telfer is okay, too, as the lady's gentleman with the imperious manner.

The others, if anything, have matured in their parts since the New York run last season, and Michael Evans is delivering solidly in the part of the suave Paris blade, a longtime friend of the

Brit. Equity Bd. Reverses Ferrer Ban; Final Decision Now Up to Full Council

London, Oct. 21.

In an emergency session yesterday (Mon.), the British Actors equity executive reversed its previous ban on Jose Ferrer playing at the Old Vic, by seven votes to five. Owing to the small attendance, it decided to ballot the entire council membership before proceeding. Widespread protests stemming from the original ban, imposed by nine votes to eight, led to the unprecedented action in quickly reversing a major policy decision.

Ferrer left Southampton on the Queen Mary, Thursday (16), and is due in N. Y. today (Tues.).

Opposition by British Equity towards the granting of a work permit to Jose Ferrer to appear at the Old Vic, because it's a repertory theatre working under certain labor concessions led to considerable ill feeling. The Broadway star, who recently finished filming in a British pic, had agreed to work for a nominal salary of around $100 a week, all of which would have been donated to the Actors Benevalent Fund.

Hugh Hunt, director in chief of the Old Vic, applied to the Ministry of Labor for a permit to enable Ferrer to star in a production of Chekhov's "The Seagull." Following the usual procedure, the Ministry referred the application to Equity, whose opposition was accompanied by an offer to name British artists who could adequately fill the role. In view of this opposition, the Old Vic withdrew its request to the Ministry.

An Old Vic official told VARIETY last week that after some difficulty, the theatre had built up good working relations with Equity. In the interests of continued harmony they decided not to press the application.

U. S. Equity Affected

Attitude of Actors Equity membership on the alien actor question, which the union is currently polling by mail questionnaire, may be strongly influenced by the recent action of British Equity in originally barring Jose Ferrer's proposed guest appearance in a revival of "The Sea Gull" at the Old Vic in London. It's figured the incident, particularly come at this time, will cause widespread resentment among U. S. players.

Results of the poll will be seriously considered by the Equity council in working out a basis policy on the alien actor situation. The union's stringent restrictions on alien employment, adopted last August, are in abeyance until Jan. 1. Meanwhile, the council hopes to decide on a general policy, which will be the basis of negotiations with British Equity. Therefore, those favoring a mutual liberalizing of alien rules in both countries fear that the Ferrer incident may complicate the situation.

Until the results of the membership poll are tabulated and the Equity council has worked out a policy, no moves toward negotiation can be taken. After that, a representative will presumably be selected to go to London to try to reach an agreement with British Equity.

stantial sums to authors, director and actors, besides returning almost the entire investment to the backers.

In Bloomgarden's case, the general manager assignment is figured manifestly legitimate, since he was regarded as one of the most competent men in the field, working for such established managements as Herman Shumlin and the Group Theatre before becoming a producer on his own. Since going into production himself, Bloomgarden has participated more in the business end of his operations than most producers do. Thus, he has been in effect largely his own general manager anyway, but without drawing a salary for it.

"Spirits" is now second on Bloomgarden's production schedule for the season, probably due for presentation in midwinter. It had been planned for early fall, but Miller recently withdrew the script for further revision and has not yet completed the new version. Meanwhile, Bloomgarden is going ahead with his revival of Lillian Hellman's "The Children's Hour," in which Patricia Neal, Kim Hunter and Iris Mann are set for the three leads. The authoress will stage the production, which is financed at $50,000 including bonds, without provision for overcall.

Bloomgarden's touring edition of Joseph Kramm's "The Shrike," with Van Heflin in the leading role played by Jose Ferrer in last season's original, opened in New Haven last week and is currently at the Colonial, Boston.

John Huntington, operator of the Spa Theatre, Saratoga, and president of the SMA, said last week that Kneeter's accusations against Equity did not represent the policy or views of the SMA. "He did not and does not represent the SMA," Huntington explained, "and he was not authorized to issue any statement in the name or behalf of the organization. He speaks only for himself."

family of unmarried women, who doesn't realize at first he's fallen in love with 16-year-old Gigi. Doris Patson is vastly amusing as the third-rate opera singer; Josephine Brown gets everything there is out of the role of the old harridan of a grandmother, and Bertha Belmore, who doesn't come on until the second act, bangs out a 10-strike as the nosey, independent servant woman.

But it's Miss Hepburn who stacks the cards in favor of "Gigi" as she develops a full-length portrait from adolescent gaucheries to poignant, mature womanhood. She has, in her very first visit to this country, already taken permanent possession of the welcome mat. Cohen.

'Honorary Critic' Kaye

San Francisco, Oct. 21.

San Francisco's Drama Critics Council, in a special session Friday (17), presented Danny Kaye with a lifetime honorary membership card, making him an "Honorary Critic" of the organization.

Recognition came partly as result of a testimonial benefit during Kaye's first engagement at the Curran.

CORNELL SETS BALTO OPENER MARK, $30,400

Baltimore, Oct. 21.

Season of legit finally got under way here, with an all-time record opening week's business chalked up by Katharine Cornell in "The Constant Wife" at Ford's, drawing a smash total of $30,400 at a $4.22 top. In as the first of a stepped-up series of subscription of productions promised under Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society auspices, opener indicates healthy activity for attractions ahead, practically guaranteed by increased list of subscribers, whose coins are already in the till. "Jane" is current, with "The Shrike" set for Nov. 10.

Gross was a new record for Miss Cornell here, her former high marking of $28,900 having been set in "Antony and Cleopatra" in 1948.

Letter From Paris

London, Oct. 11.

Tennent Productions, Ltd., presentation of drama in three acts by Dodie Smith; adapted from Henry James' novel "The Reverberator." Directed by Peter Glenville. Settings and costumes by Oliver Messel. At Aldwych Theatre, London, Oct. 10, '52; $2 top.

| Francie Dosson | Brenda Bruce |

It is 14 years since Dodie Smith's last London production, "Dear Octopus," kept unbroken her continuance of successful plays. It seems that the gap has been too long and not too happily bridged with this adaptation of a Henry James novel. Both writers lack something, and the homely family touch which proved so consistent a winner has been lost in the author's collaboration with an alien mind. In addition, there are no top-ranking stars for the marquee so that the venture likely will hang precariously on the authors' fame.

This is the kind of plot that the early Cochran could have embellished and glamorized with lilting music and lavish period settings. It circles about American residents in Paris, one of whom has been in France for 40 years and is now more French than the French. His daughters have acquired marital titles.

His only son is an art loving, correctly behaved scion of the house, but choked by family affection and influence. He falls in love with an American girl whose portrait is being painted by his friend. But he is conscious of her brash father and elder sister, and fears his family's snobbish aversion to a match. They are officially betrothed but the boy is tactfully shunted off on a business trip to America, during which time his family hope something will occur to prevent the marriage.

On his return the son is appalled at a "Letter from Paris" column in an American newspaper printing plenty of dirt involving his household. His fiancee had artlessly divulged some home truths to a journalist, and the skeltons fairly rattle in the cupboard. The engagement is broken following a stormy scene with the outraged family and the girl packs up to leave, but a reconciliation is effected when her sweetheart finds her in the studio where they first met.

Brenda Bruce is all charm and naive sincerity in the leading role while Peter Barkworth is excellent as her convention-bound lover. Nicholas Hannen gives a sound performance as the "French" papa, with Eliot Makeham less happily cast as his American counterpart. Maxine Audley makes a human, gracious figure of the boy's sympathetic sister. Jessie Evans turns in a lively contrast as the older American girl, with minor roles in graduating levels of quality

The settings are in the good period taste and design associated with Oliver Messel. Peter Glenville directs the story with unerring simplicity. Clem.

The Apples of Eve

London, Oct. 15

Jack Hylton production of drama in three acts by Allen Berthal. Stars Florence Desmond. Directed by Richard Bird. Setting by George Ramon. At Comedy Theatre, London, Oct. 14, '52; $2 top.

The casting of Florence Desmond in all seven femme roles of this play is an exploitable gimmick which may well determine its success in London. In other respects, "Eve" is a pedestrian whodunit with little action, conventional dialog, and lacking in inspiration.

Action of the play takes place in the office of the superintendent of a mental home who has been murdered just before the story opens. Miss Desmond plays the five inmates as well as the dead woman's mother and the daily help. Her performance, involving rapid costume changes, is reminiscent of her cabaret and vaudeville appearances. Her solid sense of characterization is given every scope.

Without this novelty angle, the play would have little or no chance of survival. Thence, any success it may achieve will result from her personal effort. With equal facility she plays a dipso, an American playwrite, a grandmother and a maid, and each of the roles is carefully etched. The plot itself is of little merit, the three acts developing a minimum of incident. The familiar red herrings are liberally strewn across the stage but there is little surprise in the final denouement.

The male roles are completely overshadowed by Miss Desmond's multiple performances but Anthony Ireland as the police inspector and Geoffrey Kerr as the medico at the mental home fill the two principal masculine roles adequately. Richard Pearson as a comic, dull witted policeman is too much of the familiar stock character. Richard Bird's direction and decor by George Ramon are quite adequate. Myro.

Early Curtain

touring shows in the last couple of seasons have noted that audiences now tend to arrive at the theatre early and that there are relatively fewer late-comers than formerly. It's not uncommon nowadays for a sizable group, sometimes up to 100 or so, to be in the theatre lobby by 8 o'clock, waiting for the performance to start at the scheduled 8:30 or 8:40.

Similarly, in the road cities and towns even more than in New York and Chicago, many people invariably have to leave before the show is over, and it's a regular thing to see commuters hurrying up the aisles before the curtain so as not to miss the last train or bus home to the suburbs. This is regarded as proof that the established late-performance schedule is no longer practical.

Numerous studies have demonstrated that the prevalent trend is for people to live in the suburbs and in some cases in the semi-country, even though they may continue to work in the city. There is even a growing tendency of industrial concerns to move factories and offices outside the city.

Since much of the consequent commuter traffic is now by private auto, rail and bus transportation is no longer available at late hours, so the old performance time tends to be less and less convenient. It's argued that the 8:30 curtain dates from the time when theatregoing was more of an event and people expected and had more time to make the effort involved. The virtual disappearance of formal evening wear at the theatre, even at New York openings, is a symptom of altered conditions.

Nowadays, most white-collar employees are through work at 5 o'clock and have ample time for dinner before a 7 o'clock or 7:30 curtain. The old tradition of dressing to eat out and then go to the theatre is a thing of the past. It's expected tha most potential theatregoers would welcome the earlier curtain, with its chance of getting home via regular transportation and getting to bed at a reasonable hour.

In New York and to a lesser degree in Chicago it's figured that the old setup may still be practical, although even there conditions may be changing and continued study may ultimately reveal the need to extend the Monday early curtain to other nights of the week. But in these two cities a substantial portion of the theatregoing public consists of transients, many of whom are in town primarily for recreation purposes and others are on business trips in which attending shows is a regular part.

The proposal to move up the performance time every night of the week on the road was recently made to the Early Curtain Committee of the League of N. Y. Theatres. It was generally approved, with Lee Shubert expressing immediate agreement, and plans were undertaken to poll theatre managers, critics and newspaper ediitors in the principal legit towns on the desired time for the curtain.

The early curtain Monday nights in New York is now regarded as an established success, with all but "New Faces" conforming to the policy. Receipts for the earlier showing have been up from the start, and now that the setup has been widely publicized and is generally known, it is expected that it will operate smoothly. It's assumed that an intensive educational campaign will be necessary before the idea is extended to the road, although the fact that it will apply every night of the week should make it less confusing to the public.

'Fanny' Promotion Drive

Ladies' Home Journal is prepping a big promotion drive on "Fabulous Fanny," bio of Fanny Brice by Norman Katkov, which it is serializing prior to the tome's publication by Knopf. First of the four-part serial hit the stands today (Wed.). Mag is sponsoring a cocktailery Oct. 28 for the late comedienne's friends at Toots Shor's New York restaurant.

Miss Brice's children, Frances Stark and William Brice, turned over about 300 pages of her unpublished memoirs to Katkov for this bio chore.

Esquire Reshuffling

Death of David A. Smart, prez and board chairman of Esquire, Inc., at age 60 in Chicago last week (16) has necessitated a reshuffling of the mag publishing company's top echelon. A new prez and board chairman will be named tomorrow (Thurs.).

Smart was the publisher of Esquire and Coronet mags.

Jack Lait Back In Hosp

Jack Lait is back in University Hospital, N. Y., with the same circulatory leg ailment which bedded him four months ago. He was recently discharged but the N. Y. Daily Mirror editor is encoring for new treatments.

Chapman's New 'Best Plays'

George Jean Nathan didn't think the 1951-52 season warranted his annual "Theatre Year Book" but John Chapman, continuing where Burns Mantle left off with his "Best Plays" series, again has an appealing record and document of the past season. In addition, as if to take up the slack where Nathan-Knopf left off, it is subcaptioned "The Yearbook of the Drama in America."

The N. Y. Daily News' drama critic gives detailed space to "Mrs. McThing," "I Am A Camera" (the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle choice), "The Shrike" (the Pulitzer prizewinner), "Barefoot in Athens," "The Fourposter," "Jane," "Venus Observed," "Gigi" and "Remains To Be Seen," besides the other vital statistics of the 1951-52 season. These include the chronology of openings and closings; and other vital statistics; the Pulitzer and Critics Circle winnahs over the years; a review of the Broadway season by Chapman who also did the Off-Broadway and Dance reprises; and informative key city reviews by the local critical outstanders: Elliot Norton (Post) on Boston; Arthur B. Waters (Gazette-Democrat) on the Philadelphia season; Claudia Cassidy (Trib), Chi season; Fred Johnson (Call-Bulletin), San Francisco; and Edwin Schallert (L. A. Times) on the season in Southern California.

There are several references to VARIETY for source material by several critics, and Chapman mentions this paper's Hobe Morrison (Hobe) for his statistical breakdown on the dollar equations. It holds a load of pertinent info expertly put together, such as best plays over the years (and their publishers where in book form); agents for the current crop; births and birthplaces; necrology for the past year and the toll of other show biz personalities over the years. Withal, Chapman's newest "Best Plays" (Dodd, Mead; $4) is a library must and for general reference. Abel.

fraction of that. And industrial sales meets represent only one facet of the possibilities open to such uses of theatre TV.

Halpern revealed that TNT lost out by a shade in pacting with Volunteers for Stevenson to use a circuit of big-screen theatres for fund-raising campaigns. With the number of equipped theatres expected to be far more numerous in 1956, he said, it's inevitable that Presidential candidates will turn to them to help raise funds. Deal to televise the United Nations Ball Oct. 24 to a string of interconnected theatres fell through because of lack of facilities, and TNT also almost had a deal with the D'Arcy ad agency for Coca-Cola to hold its national sales meet in theatres.

Surgical Demonstrations

Big-screen TV'ing should be especially valuable to organizations like the American Medical Assn., since TV will permit a number of doctors to watch demonstrations of new surgical techniques, unique operations, etc., without being forced to close down their own practices while they travel to Atlantic City for the usual AMA meet. Such outfits as Smith, Kline & French, pharmaceutical lab which sponsored such demonstrations on CBS-TV recently, could tie in easily with the AMA meets to add further coin to the exhibs' coffers.

Halpern also pointed to the potential use of the medium by manufacturers of certain intimate articles for women which are not permissible on regular broadcast TV. Such a manufacturer, he said, could rent a string of theatres to sell an educational program on its product to young girls. Or, Halpern said, there could be Emily Post lectures, how-to-dress demonstrations, etc. And, he added, there's a definite use for theatre TV in fighting juve delinquency, via sales pitches on safe driving, etc., which could be made by popular athletes.

Best feature of big-screen video for sales meets, Halpern said, is the dramatic way in which the sales pitch can be made. Lees, he said, will literally roll out its carpets for the assembled salesmen, retailers, stockholders and others, and then, via montage effect, will depict the use of Lees products on the new United States steamship, United Airlines, in the new Lever House, etc. Lees will air the show in Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland, Denver, St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Detroit, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Halpern has set up a new division of TNT, Theatre Tele-Sessions, to handle the new biz. Victor M. Ratner, former veepee for CBS and Macy's department store, N. Y., is in charge.

Ceiling Pay

compensation converted into weekly amounts. If the sum is less than $1,000, no cut is made but the slice is 25% in the $1,000-$2,000 bracket, 35% in the $2,000-$3,000 category and 50% on everything in excess of $3,000 weekly.

Assuming that Schenck's 1951 salary of $130,357 and his additional compensation of $94,411 (based upon Loew's profits) continue at the same rate in the 1952-'53 fiscal year, he would be cut to a total of $159,172 upon application of the percentage table. But since this figure is in excess of the $146,799 ceiling, the company chief would collect the latter.

Likewise, Rubin would find himself with a new salary of $137,176 compared to his 1951 total coin of $180,898. Mannix, who drew $202,607 in 1951, would be sliced to $148,096. Here, too, the $146,799 ceiling would apply. Evidently losing the least under the percentage table is veepee William F. Rodgers. Collecting $1,100 weekly as a consultant under a July, 1952, deal, he's been docked only $25 per week.

Chaplin's right to re-enter the country. He's now in England.

UA is currently testing exhib reaction to various policies for "Limelight." Pic opens in New York tomorrow (Thurs.) with a dual premiere at the Astor Theatre on Broadway and the Trans-Lux 60th St. artie. Astor will play on a grind policy at regular prices, while the Trans-Lux goes two-a-day at $1.80 and $2.40.

Key-city poll on two-a-day, added to the New York experience, will help UA establish the final pattern for showing the Chaplin film. Pic is skedded to open at the Odeon, Toronto, and the United Artists Theatre, San Francisco, Nov. 14. Odeon run will be at advanced prices, but the UA Theatre plays the film at regular admissions.

Hollywood Foreign Correspondents will honor Charles Chaplin, in absentia, at a luncheon at Ciro's, Hollywood, Oct. 30.

Award will be given for the producer's newest, "Limelight."

Big Chaplin Ovation, Pic Sock in London

London, Oct. 21.

After the terrific buildup for the world preem of "Limelight" at the Odeon, Leicester Square, last Thursday (16) the event itself might easily have come as an anticlimax. That it didn't was indicative of the tremendous upsurge of pro-Chaplin popularity since the star returned to his native London a month ago. The gala drew a bigger turnout of fans than is normally seen for a Royal Command show, and the crowds held their positions outside the theatre for several hours.

Chaplin's personal ovation as he entered the theatre after his presentation to Princess Margaret was far greater than that accorded the royal personage. It was a spontaneous tribute almost without parallel.

Entire proceeds of the royal preem were handed over to the Royal Society for the Blind. Inflated admissions for the occasion (with a top of $45) raised a net of over $25,000. The following day, "Limelight" began its normal run at the Odeon, where it is expected to play into the New Year. It grossed $8,500 in the first three days. Pic is leading for a record-breaking $19,500 in first week.

During the past week the Chaplin probe by the U. S. Attorney General was the subject of questions to Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons and he was asked to make representations to Washington to allow Chaplin's re-entrance to the U. S. The Minister resisted the suggestion of official action, explaining that nothing could be said until the U. S. Attorney General's decision had been made known.

Although qualifying their reviews, the London critics gave exceptional space to "Limelight," and with one exception the notices all appeared after the press screening and were not delayed, as is normal custom, for the usual weekly column. The majority verdict appeared to be that the film was overlong and that Chaplin had overdone the pathos. With these reservations, however, they were almost unanimous in hailing a picture of magnitude and went overboard in their comments on the final pantomime sequence. Claire Bloom nabbed unanimous raves for her sensitive performance as the ballerina.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

Having looked in vain through several thousand words of Uncle Joe's brochure on the laws governing capitalism, Socialism and Communism for some reference as to how sweet charity louses up the admittedly selfish motivations of capitalism now and then, I thought of John Haskell and wondered what he was doing to keep Uncle Joe confused on this issue. I found he was doing alright.

The Variety Clubs of America, it seems, are celebrating their 25th anniversary this year and plan a big show in Pittsburgh Nov. 23. Haskell has lined up a charity show in Dublin for next May 30. So he is taking the troupe from Hollywood, stopping off in Pittsburgh to give his Variotous pals a sneakview.

In Dublin Louis Ellerman, et al, hope the Haskell touch will do as much for Irish kids as it did for London kids a year ago. That benefit raised 18,000 quid, which is about 50G. According to the Duke of Edinburgh, who is prez of the National Playing Fields Assn., this sum exceeded the committee's wildest dreams and broke all records for charity performances, including command performances in pix and vaude.

Considering that the benefit was played in the middle of December and was under advance wraps because it was feared such publicity might take off some of the sheen of the Command Performance, which was due in ahead of the playground pitch, such a response was the triumph of hope over experience.

In London They Pan Benefits?

The show as a show took some terrific pannings both at home and abroad. Frank Sinatra was in rather low favor at the time and his name, unfortunately, led a troupe, which I suspect got panned-by-association. Among them were Ava Gardner, who said nothing and did nothing, so frightened was she by the whole thing; Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh, Dorothy Kirsten, Orson Welles, Rhonda Fleming and Jimmy McHugh. The London end of the bill was carried chiefly by Noel Coward and Tommy Trinder. Trinder also staged the event.

Haskell showed me photographs of what had happened to the $52,000 take in the intervening 10 months. A bombed-out slum area had been cleared and is now a beautiful playground of 30 acres and three cricket fields. It even has a baseball field and stands, so the Yanks will never be allowed to forget their beau geste.

Variety tents have been or are being formed in other continental capitals, and these will follow similar lines of activity. If the Dublin show is well received (at the boxoffice, to heck with the critics), it will be repeated in Hamburg, Paris, most certainly Madrid, and possibly Rome.

Haskell went to Madrid this summer. He didn't know a soul there. He got in touch with a publisher and explained who he was, what he had done in London and what he would like to do for the children of Madrid.

Five's a Crowd in Madrid

In a short time he was called back. A senor named E. Sanchez Cobos was in the lobby and wanted to talk to him. Haskell said he would be right down, but checked with the Embassy first and was assured the senor was allright. He interviewed Haskell, who seemed to him more like a Wall St. magnate in appearance than a humanitarian (See what I mean about lousing them up?). After the interview he warned Haskell about a Spanish law which made it a prison offense if more than five persons gathered together for any purpose, and assured the humanitarian that after the Cobos interview appeared in Madrid, the innocent abroad would be swamped with visitors.

It worked out exactly as Cobos predicted. Haskelll's hardest job was keeping out of that population squeeze. It seemed every time he turned around in his room there were at least 15 persons present. Franco must have been busy elsewhere, because Haskell got his Variety tent set up and his arrangements in order for the playground benefit, and then hopped back to Hollywood to round up a troupe.

As the primary objective was Dublin, he began contacting people like Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Blyth, Stephen McNally, Dennis Day, Barry Fitzgerald, Owen McGiveney, Jack Mulhall, Irene Dunne and Virginia Mayo, though my own belief is that he'd do better by trying to rescue acts from the Masquers, whose cavalcade of show biz, put on as a benefit for the Motion Picture Relief Fund a few weeks ago, not only scooped up $50,000 but put on a show that not even Pegler could have panned.

In fact, the Masquers show, cut from four to two hours, and retaining all the features of the original format, was worthy of a world tour and would do more good to relax the tensions of the era of ill-feeling than anything that has come out of Hollywood since Charlot made "Shoulder Arms!" Of course, it would be pretty hard to get singles like George Burns, Frank Fay, Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny, but there are lots of performers buried in the files of Central Casting whose real talents haven't been used since they were typed as character actors.

That names are not all-important was proved at that Masquers presentation of an old time minstrel show, which closed the first half of the program. People didn't know that the great singing and dancing were being done by Dan Dailey, Dick Haymes, Jack Carson and Phil Harris. Well, maybe they knew Harris, but Dailey was certainly applauded first as a performer and afterward as a name.

Europe has fond memories of our old minstrel shows. They were about our most original contribution to show biz, and they still carry as much of a kick as the can-can. Burlesque, too, was something we added, and Jane Wyman's performance as a soubret, backed by a chorus of the ugliest female impersonators in history, would panic even a conference at Panmunjong.

I urge Senor Haskell to look into this before flooding Europe exclusively with a troupe of singing and dancing Sinn Feiners.

Silo Group May Form Barn Circuit, Producing, Touring Own Legiters

Group of top strawhats may form a circuit next summer to produce and tour their own shows. Those mentioned as prospective participants, informally referred to in the trade as the Big Ten, would work cooperatively, sharing production costs and booking expenses.

Idea is admittedly tentative as yet, but is being considered by barn managers on basis of successful tours last season of the Beatrice Lillie show (produced at the Falmouth Playhouse, Coonamessett, Mass.), Faye Emerson in "Dangerous Corner" (produced at the Olney, Md., Summer Theatre), Peggy Wood in "Here's Mama" (produced at the Ogunquit, Me., Playhouse) and, although it was a consistently disappointing boxoffice draw, Dana Andrews in "Glass Menagerie" (produced at Falmouth).

As it worked out last summer, those shows were produced by the barns themselves, with costs shared equally, and were booked over the complete circuit for a limited number of weeks, depending on how many weeks the star involved wanted to work. Costs were kept at a minimum, with stars generally accepting profitable but not excessive terms. With the exception of "Menagerie," all the shows cleaned up for everyone concerned.

One aim of the cooperative producing-booking plan is to expand this limited-cost aspect of last season's operation. Instead of leaving it to agents and New York promoters to put together and book package shows, the silo managers would deal directly with the stars or their agents. A possible angle on the setup would be that full cast productions could be booked, without bothering with

Beats U.S. Taxes By 'Donation' Admissions; Candy Sales Make It Up

Okanogan, Wash., Oct. 28.

An exhibitor here has come up with a fool-proof method for beating admission taxes.

Fed up with local and Federal levies, Loren A. Gillespie has stopped charging admissions. Instead, he started last week to ask patron "donations" in any amount that suited their pocketbooks. The response was fine. He had a full house. And while adults donated an average 29c (usual price, 55c including tax), Gillespie's candy and popcorn sales more than doubled, with patrons spending almost exactly as much as they did for admission alone on pay-the-tax nights.

Before embarking on his experiment, Gillespie checked with a local tax solon and was told he need not pay a national tax as long as the contributions are not in specified sums.

WATSON QUICK WITH NEEDLE FOR GOTHAM

Ottawa, Oct. 28.

Lucile Watson, Ottawa-born actress who will be 73 next March, told Austin Cross of the Evening Citizen last Friday (24) that she may play Effie Ellsler in a revival of "The Bat." She's visiting relatives here.

She described New York these days as "awful," its parks as "filthy" and overrun with "rough people," and its air as "carbon monoxide." She said that people there comb their hair during a play and laugh at the wrong places. "It seems to me," Cross quoted her, "that as New Yorkers get worse, Canadians get better."

Top BMI Melon Of $3,076,640

Continuing its steady upwards financial growth, Broadcast Music, Inc., shelled out $3,076,640 in performance rights and royalties for the fiscal year ending last July 31.

Total, which also covers expenses for selling, public relations and production costs, represents more than a $400,000 increase for the same purposes last year and about $800,000 over 1950's disbursements. Financial status was disclosed in BMI's consolidated profit and loss statement received by stockholders last week.

BMI's income last year showed an even bigger jump than its performance rights kitty, going about $800,000 over the previous year's revenue. BMI's income for the fiscal year was $5,607,841 as compared with $4,799,000 last year. Financial statement broke down the income sources as follows: License fees from radio and TV sta-

N.Y. Roxy at Stageshow Xroads; May Be 'World's Only' Steady Ice Theatre

Future stageshow policy of the Roxy Theatre, N. Y., will be decided latter part of this week with the arrival of Charles Skouras, National Theatres prexy, for huddles with the staff. Expected to receive the major attention will be the suggestion that the Roxy feature ice shows exclusively on its stage. Refrigeration engineers already have made preliminary surveys to enlarge the Roxy rink, and costs will be weighed against current entertainment outlays in formulating future plans.

Meanwhile, Roxy will be devoid of a chorus for the first time in

$150,000,000 BIZ, BUT SLIM PROFIT

By GEORGE ROSEN

NBC-TV will wind up 1952 with an approximate gross business of $80,000,000. That's tops to date, far exceeding the best year that the network ever enjoyed in radio. CBS-TV will wind up '52 with about $70,000,000 gross biz, topping its banner year in radio.

Yet, when the incoming-outgoing balance sheets are tallied, NBC-TV will be lucky if it comes through with a net of $1,000,000. CBS-TV will make some money; certainly far short of $1,000,000.

The extreme divergence in the margin between gross (a combined $150,000,000) and profit (under $2,000,000) is perhaps the No. 1 ripley in American industry today. The networks themselves are far from convinced as to the economic feasibility of coast-to-coast TV, a state of affairs recognized in the past by no less a communications chieftain than RCA's board chairman Gen. David Sarnoff.

At the end of last year the TV networks just managed to get over the hump and into the black ink stage. This was to have been the year of the mop-up, with SRO in nighttime commercial availabilities and the first full year of coast-to-coast live video transmission. But the cleanup hasn't materialized,

Radio-TV Set For '99% Coverage' On Election Nite

The marriage of electronics and electioneering, with the candidates putting major emphasis on vote-getting via video and radio, will culminate in the most comprehensive coverage of the election returns by broadcasters on the night of Nov. 4. The 99% of the population with AM sets and the half of the U. S. with TV will be sitting up with radio and tele and sitting in on the vote-sorting process. Closeness of the race is expected to pile up a record audience.

The communications network being set up will be the most ex-

TVatican-to-N.Y. '53?

Crystal-balling the TV future, Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, NBC veepee in charge of radio-television, told the Manhattan College Centennial Seminar last week that international TV will be sufficiently advanced to permit for a direct pickup of the Christmas Mass from the Vatican in Rome in 1953.

Presidential Songs Used to Be Part Of U.S. Topical Scene—Now No More

By JIM WALSH

Whirling turntables may have helped turn the tables in more than one Presidential election.

Ever since the phonograph has been a popular medium of entertainment, it has been put to political use—sometimes by Presidential candidates themselves (as related in the recent special RCA Victor edition of VARIETY, Oct. 1), and sometimes as a medium of topical songs and sketches.

One of the most hotly contested campaigns was between William McKinley and William Jennings Bryan in 1896. Stanley L. Johnston of Lansing, Mich., has just reported finding a cylinder evidently made that year and sung by one of the popular pioneer recorders, Steve Porter. Roller doesn't have the name of the song engraved on the end, as was later the case, but Johnston says the words of unidentified ditty give a good cussing out to McKinley and that year's astute GOP campaign manager, Mark Hanna.

In this writer's collection is a seven-inch Emile Berliner disk by George Graham, Washington, D. C., street corner patent medicine spieler who also made "comic monologs" for the early phono firms. It's called "Free Silver Orator" and was made on Nov. 30, 1896—several weeks after the election in which McKinley came out ahead. There have been funnier records. Graham gives a burlesqued rendition of

KAYE RUNS S.F. SCORE TO WOW 247G IN 5

San Francisco, Oct. 28.

The Danny Kaye show wound up its third and final frame Saturday (25) at the 1,758-seat Curran with a sock $49,400. Total (two-part) run, one day short of five weeks, drew a smash gross of $247,400.

The initial run of two weeks pulled capacity $110,000 and repeat three weeks a solid $137,300.

House was scaled to $4.80, with first two stanzas backed by Civic Light Opera mailing list campaign.

4 Rodgers Shows In One N.Y. Block?

Richard Rodgers may have four shows running simultaneously next spring in the 7th-8th Ave. block of West 44th St., New York. He's virtually certain to have four shows on Broadway, if not in the same block. As far as recalled, no other composer or author has ever had such a record.

With the new, untitled Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein 2d musical due to open in New York late in May after a tryout tour, there has been trade speculation that it might be booked for the Majestic, with "South Pacific" being moved to another theatre. If rumors that the forthcoming Cole Porter-Abe Burrows show, "Can-Can," is set for the Shubert are incorrect, "S.P." might go to that house.

That would give Rodgers the four concurrent shows in the same block, since his and Hammerstein's

Color Line Into Focus On Joyce Bryant's Dec. Date at Algiers, M.B.

Miami Beach, Oct. 28.

Booking of Joyce Bryant, Negro songstress, by the new Algiers Hotel here (opening in December), brought conjecture among talent agents and nitery operators on what official reaction would be. This is in face of the fact that colored entertainers (Josephine Baker, Billy Daniels, Lena Horne, et al) have worked such cafes as Copa City, Ciro's, Five O'Clock Club and Mother Kelly's. There is, however, no record of Negro talent working a hotel spot.

Procedure in hotel bookings here includes room and other privileges. Local law does not allow colored people to live in any hotel catering to whites. Cafes have been okayed as long as they provide washroom and separate dressing facilities for such entertainers or musicians.

B'way Crix 'God-Complex' Claimed by Playwright; Sees H'wood Scribe Bias

The Broadway legit season is now officially open. A playwright has let fly with the season's first blast at the critics.

According to Edmund Beloin, coauthor with Henry Garson of "In Any Language," the New York aisle-perchers have a "God-complex." In a by-line piece in the Monday (27) issue of the N. Y. Compass, he added, "They can't help it. It's an occupational hazard, like laryngitis to a radio announcer."

The former film and radio comedy scripter defines a God-complex as leading individuals to "think of themselves as beyond human frailties and prejudices. They forget that by the very nature of things mortal opinion must be subjective. What is sad to one man may make another man laugh derisively. One person will smile where another will wince. People with God-complex sometimes confuse opinion with truth."

Noting that seven of the eight stringers panned "Language," the author asserted, "The audiences laugh throughout and enjoy Uta Hagen. We even get a lump in the throat a couple of times." But he

Uruguay Shocked at Josephine Baker's Anti-U.S. Blast and Pro-Peron Pitch

Montevideo, Oct. 24.

Josephine Baker's current South American tour has developed into a political crusade, with a virulent anti-U.S. twist, and a pronounced pro-Peron angle.

On arrival in Buenos Aires early this month, the colored singer, who is always looked upon as a Frenchwoman by Argentine audiences, and who is admired as a French resistance worker of World War II, launched into praise of the Peron regime, and solicited an audience from Peron himself.

It was first thought likely that this was part of the routine which most entertainers, visiting Argentina, must go through to avoid stymies with the government of one sort or another, such as excessive taxation, or to obtain unfreezing of their coin when they leave. However, Miss Baker went overboard to stress that her calls on the President and on entertainment "czar" Raul Apold, and the customary tour of the Eva Peron Institutions were more than routine gestures into which she had been pressured.

In fact, apart from the "required" calls on the Press Minister, and tour of the Foundation showplaces (which are never used except for show), Miss Baker was present on a balcony near Government House during the mass demonstrations honoring Peron and the memory of Eva Peron on Oct. 17, the Argentine "Loyalty Day" instituted by Peron in 1945, which is commemorated as other countries celebrate Labor Day.

Miss Baker also summoned a

WORLDWIDE TRIBUTE TO KALMAN BIRTHDAY

Composer Emmerich Kalman is being honored with a worldwide tribute to mark his 70th birthday last Friday (24). In a greeting in behalf of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, ASCAP prexy Otto Harbach linked Kalman's name "with such other great American operetta creators as Herbert, Kern, Friml, Romberg and Youmans." Kalman came to the U. S. in 1940 and is now a citizen. Kalman is currently residing in Paris.

Radio networks in the U. S. are programming special concerts of Kalman's music while European capitals are staging festival performances of his works. Zurich, Berne and Munich are putting on simultaneous productions of Kalman's classic, "Countess Maritza." Kalman, meantime, is winding up a new musical, "Arizona Lady," his first in several years, with an American setting. The book is by the late Alfred Grunwald, author of "Countess Maritza," and Joseph Beer. Production is planned for early next year.

Deanna Returns

Deanna Durbin, who's been in Europe for some time, returned to New York yesterday (Tues.) on the Ile de France. She was accompanied by her husband, French film director Charles David.

Couple leaves for the Coast today (Wed.). Miss Durbin later plans to return to N. Y. for discussions on resumption of her career.

Jessel East for UJA, N.Y. Stevenson Rally

George Jessel flew east Sunday morning (26), directly after his "All-Star Revue" NBC-TV show for Kellogg's Saturday night. Under United Jewish Appeal auspices he played Rochester, N. Y., on Monday. Last night (Tues.) at Madison Square Garden (N.Y.) he appeared for the Stevenson rally. Dates in Toledo, Providence, Tulsa, Chicago and Shreveport follow, all for UJA.

Jessel is talking with RKO's Arnold Grant in connection with an upcoming indie pic, "Rip Van Winkle, Jr.," starring Jimmy Durante.

It's West Vs. Storm In Tempest of Chests; Lotsa Bust (50G Worth)

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Two burlesque peelers are unreeling for legal action in Federal Court here in "The Battle of the Treasure Chests."

Plaintiff is Patricia McQuillan, known professionally as Evelyn West, and defendant is Annie Locke, known as Tempest Storm.

Miss West declares she took out a $50,000 insurance policy on her bust with Lloyds' of London in 1947, chiefly for publicity distinguishing her from other strippers as "Treasure Chest West" and "The $50,000 Treasure Chest Girl."

Recently, she charges, Miss Storm took out a $50,000 policy and publicized herself as "The $50,000 Hollywood Props."

Miss West wants an injunction and $50,000 damages.

THEATRES IN PITCH FOR ELECTION NITE TV-ERS

Exhibs in many key areas across the country are set to fight the TV bid for attention on Election Day with the pitch that the outcome of the presidential, state and local public office sweepstakes will be determined only after theatre-going hours. Point the theatremen will stress is that patrons can catch the film shows and return home in time to catch the elections windup on TV. Also, theatre audiences will be kept posted on trends on returns as they're recorded via announcements by house managers and the like.

International News Service has a deal with exhibs in which teletype machines are installed in theatres at $130 to $150 each with the news thus channeled through. Some chains are tying in with local newspapers and radio stations as a means of obtaining spot coverage for the theatre ticket-buyers. Another plan is to use film slides with announcements of who's on top in the political arena at various intervals.

All five newsreels will have special issues out Wednesday (5), that is, devoted entirely to the elections with background material as filler.

No theatre TV is planned, Exhibs with large-screen facilities feel that the elections for the most part will make for a dull show and not worth the expense in arranging for hookups.

Royal Command Film Showing In 70G London SRO

London, Oct. 28.

Seventh Royal Command Film Performance held last night (Mon.) at the Empire Theatre, Leicester Square, grossed approximately $70,000 for the Cinematograph Trade Benevolent Fund, with admissions scaled to $75 top. House was sold out well in advance for the event, which had Metro's "Because You're Mine" on the screen.

Stage show portion of the Command Performance plugged the film industry's "Let's Go to the Pictures" slogan in a cavalcade of pix over the past 50 years. Biggest ovation went to Gene Kelly's

Cantor Ready to Resume Taped Show Biz Series

Eddie Cantor, recovering from a heart attack, admits that he had a scare, but is making rapid recovery. He is already sufficiently mended at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Hollywood, to evidence a desire to resume his taped deejay-type show of show biz memories (he still has two more shows in reserve). When he starts recording again next week Cantor will also possibly start a series of radio shows plugging the picture business.

Abe Lastfogel, William Morris Agency head, has been huddling with Robert J. O'Donnell for a film industry, exhibitor-backed (COMPO, etc.) series where, three mornings a week, Cantor would chatter about Hollywood and urge the housewives "to go out and see the movies."

Incidentally, George Jessel states that he, too, has a similar "picture of the month" vidpix series, on film, set with Ed Morris & Co., a Coast sponsor.

Cantor will probably omit his Dec. 21 TV commitment on the Colgate "Comedy Hour."

—But Ike & Adlai Say No

The entire video networks' facilities would be opened on Sunday night, two days before the nation's electorate goes to the polls, for the "Electronic Debate of the Century." To Democratic Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson and GOP aspirant Dwight D. Eisenhower, would be offered a full hour of choice time, for a no-holds barred crystallization of all the vital issues, with the "See It Now" TV technique of picking up the candidates at their respective homes as they individually square off in resting their cases before the nation's TV audience.

Thus far there's one stumbling block. Neither Stevenson nor Eisenhower will say yes to the plan whereby six of the country's top newsmen and political analysts frame the six most vital issues and present them, one by one, to the two candidates.

It's a program feat without precedence, pitting as it would the two "men of the hour" in a simultaneous projection to define their policies on the eve of "the great event."

TV is still hoping.

CHEVALIER CHEERED IN 1-MAN BERLIN SHOW

Berlin, Oct. 28.

The Titania Palast rocked with applause when Maurice Chevalier appeared on the stage last Wednesday (22) night. The house did SRO biz, tickets ranging from 50c to $3. Using only the curtain as backdrop and performing under full houselights, Chevalier immediately established intimate contact with his audience. The cocked strawhat, the slightly wicked grin and the laugh are all there, and proved as irresistible as ever to the Berlin audience.

Enthusiastic applause greeted his chansons. He smilingly gave one encore after the other, but finally begged off with a friendly "non."

REMAKES DRAW EXHIB SCORN

RKO Down $1,050,000 in 5 Wks.

In the five weeks which have passed since Ralph Stolkin and pards bought out Howard Hughes' hefty block of stock in RKO Pictures, the shares have depreciated $1,050,000 in open market value.

Stolkin group bought 1,050,000 shares (including 36,000 from former RKO President Ned E. Depinet) at $7 per share. Market price at that time was $4.75. Closing price yesterday (Tues.) was $3.75.

Interesting to the trade will be the amount which Stolkin, et al., will now accept for their holdings, in the event they want to unload.

Total Hughes price was $7,345,000, via an initial payment of $1,500,000, with the rest to be paid off in two and one-half years. Purchaser, of course, would be required to meet all obligations to Hughes, as set forth in the Stolkin purchase agreement.

Majority of Stockholders Now Control RKO for 1st Time in Many Years

For the first time in many years the control of RKO is in the hands of the majority of stockholders, independent of any vote-controlling individual or group. Last week's bowout of Ralph Stolkin from the presidency and board membership, and Abraham Koolish and William Gorman from the board, meant the end, at least temporarily, of a succession of "single units" at the helm via ownership of stock blocks, from Howard Hughes dating back to Floyd Odlum's Atlas Corp., Radio Corp. of America and Joseph P. Kennedy.

Board chairman Arnold Grant states that the replacements on the parent corporation's board will, like himself, be independent and bent on serving the interests of all shareowners. In other words, they'll be unbound by any commitments to any minority group.

Stolkin, Koolish and Gorman (latter repped Ray Ryan on the board) each will have only the status of individual minority stockholders, with only the right "to ask normal stockholder questions in the normal way," Grant declares.

Situation will remain thus so long as the Stolkin associates hold on to the 1,014,000 shares bought from Hughes (at $7,098,000) and the 36,000 shares from former prez Ned E. Depinet (at $252,000). Total amounted to 1,050,000 shares for $7,350,000.

Would Like Out

It's widely accepted that the Stolkin group has a strong desire to sell out. But the $7 per share commitment which was made to Hughes is substantially more than the control is worth at this time, say some close observers. Thus, while Stolkin and his pards would like to unload they'd have to take a loss of about $1 per share, or a total of $1,050,000, according to insiders.

It's recalled that Hughes had been offered $6 per share by, among others, a group headed by

With Stolkin, Etc., Out Of RKO, Wall St. Journal Ends 'Expose' Series

Wall St. Journal's "expose" series on the biz backgrounds of the recently-resigned RKO officers has been concluded, according to Henry Gemmill, managing ed of the financial daily. Last article, dealing with the "philanthropic" ventures of Ralph Stolkin, former prexy, and A. L. Koolish, Stolkin's father-in-law and ex-RKO board member, appeared in yesterday's (Tues.) Journal.

Gemmill said the paper "had other stuff" on the syndicate which recently took over control of the film company, but saw no point in continuing the stories since Stolkin, Koolish, etc. were no longer officers or employees of RKO.

"We will watch the company with great interest and take notice of the personnel changes," he declared, "but we don't believe in kicking dead dogs." Editor also noted that news interest had dropped off since the resignations and that except for spot news coverage the Journal planned no further probing of RKO. He stressed again the reportorial job was

Bigs Fete RKO Sales Chiefs

Execs of all film companies and prominent circuit and indie exhibs are on the list to attend the testimonial luncheon for Arnold Picker, Charles Boasberg and Walter Branson to be sponsored by the Independent Theatre Owners Assn. at the Hotel Astor, New York, tomorrow (Thurs.).

Honor guests were recently appointed to new posts at RKO, Picker as exec v.p., Boasberg as domestic sales chief and Branson as assistant domestic sales head.

Corwin Jockeys To Unload Stock In RKO Tangle

Sherrill C. Corwin was seen this week jockeying to unload his 2% holdings of the Howard Hughes block of RKO stock acquired by the Ralph Stolkin-Corwin, etc., group. However, his plans appear at least temporarily thwarted by contractual agreement with his pards.

Under the setup, all members of the syndicate are jointly liable for commitments made to Hughes under the purchase terms. It's this tieup from which Corwin hasn't been able to extricate himself.

Corwin's aimed-for stock interest sale reportedly would be a preliminary to his departure from the RKO board and from the post of board rep at the studio. He, Edward (Buzz) Burke and Arnold Grant are the remaining members of the parent corporation's directorate.

Corwin is currently in New York but repeated efforts to reach him for comment have been unsuccessful. Others in the setup also have been ducking press queries, including top homeoffice attorney William Zimmerman and assistant board chairman Harry Pimstein, who reportedly have been given v.p. chevrons.

All Cos. to Supply Pix For Telemeter Test

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Carl Leserman, back from N. Y. huddles with various homeoffice execs, reveals that all majors, save 20th-Fox, have agreed to supply product for Telemeter's test in Palm Springs next February.

Leserman said he hadn't had a chance to talk with 20th toppers, but anticipates no difficulty getting their pix for subscription TV system.

Mochrie on Coast Scouting Film Post

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Robert Mochrie, former RKO v.p. in charge of domestic distribution, is here from New York apparently scouting possibilities for a new industry post.

Mochrie is said to be specifically eyeing a tieup with indie producers whom he would represent in the east on distribution matters.

'PUBLIC WANTS SOMETHING NEW'

Coupled with the recent, renewed squawks of exhibs over alleged trade practice abuses by distribs, as evidenced in recent statements by Wilbur Snaper and Col. H. A. Cole, officials of Allied States Assn. of Motion Picture Exhibitors, theatremen are raking over the production companies for a predilection toward remakes. Snaper, Allied prexy, is leading a campaign for new story ideas, charging that the remakes "are seldom better than the originals and rarely, if ever, are profitable for exhibitors."

The public, according to Snaper, wants something new and no matter what attempt the studios make to disguise the fact that the pix are remakes, the film-going audience catches on quickly. Allied topper also has similar views of sequels, pointing out that few of the followups do as well boxoffice-wise as the originals. When Snaper blasted distribs for trade practice "abuses" recently, he said that it wouldn't be such a bad idea if the production outfits consulted exhibs occasionally on what type of pix to make. "At least, we'll be able to tell them what not to make," he asserted.

Apparently a dearth of new story material is forcing the studios to work over properties in their vaults. In addition, it's an economy device, making it unnecessary for the filmeries to shell out new coin for yarns. Studios go to great lengths to update the stories, frequently giving them new twists, turning them into musicals or making them lavish Technicolor productions. In addition, they'll alter the titles, or if the stories are too well known or classics, the filmeries will wage a special campaign to tell the public that they're new pictures. For example: a Loew's Theatres' informal survey on "The Prisoner of Zenda" still indicates that around 25% of people interviewed are uncertain this is a new picture, a factor the Loew's-Metro flackeries are concentrating on correcting.

Warner Bros. apparently shows the greatest propensity for dipping into its story bin for overhauling jobs. Eight of the outfit's recent, current or upcoming pix are more or less in the remake category. These include "Where's Charley?"

Wald Named to Head Col. Prod; Excepting Indies, As He Exits RKO

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Jerry Wald has been appointed a v.p. of Columbia Pictures and the executive producer of Columbia Productions, studio subsid outfit, it was announced today (Tues.) by Col prez Harry Cohn. New affiliation followed by a day the disclosure that the Wald-Krasna Productions contract with RKO has been terminated.

It's understood that Wald will have charge of all Col lensing on the lot, that is, excepting for the output of indie units such as Stanley Kramer's. While the Col deal provides that the film-maker will not engage in any continuing production himself, consistent with his new responsibilities, Wald likely will be free to produce at least one major pic a year on a profit-participation basis with Col.

Milton E. Pickman, v.p. and general manager of the W-K outfit, will continue in that spot so long as W-K exists corporately (see separate story). Pickman will, additionally, switch to Col with Wald

Hartman's N.Y. Look

Don Hartman, Paramount production head, is due in New York from the Coast around the second week of November.

He'll look over the Broadway scene and huddle with Par homeoffice execs during a 10-day stay.

Cinerama Maps H'wood Studio; Sked 1st Feature

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Cinerama will either buy or build its own studio here, according to Merian C. Cooper, general production manager, who announced further that the company will start filming its first feature length picture within the next two months. He neither confirmed nor denied the report that the firm is interested in taking over the Republic lot, where his Argosy Films is currently quartered.

Cooper will produce and direct the first picture, and his Argosy partner, John Ford, will probably direct the second. Two films, in Technicolor, are slated for the first year and the number may be raised to four. One under consideration is "Paint Your Wagon,"

Blumberg East

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal's board chairman, arrived in New York from the Coast over the weekend and will remain about a month. He'll preside at U's board meeting on Monday (3), heading back to the Coast following the Motion Picture Pioneers dinner on Nov. 25, at which he'll be honored as "pioneer of the year."

Meanwhile, U prexy Milton Rackmil, who also heads Decca Records, left yesterday (Tues.) for England for what was described "as strictly Decca business." Topper will be abroad about two weeks.

Wald-Krasna Co. Due For Dissolution With Wald's Shift to Col.

Jerry Wald's switch to the exec producer's berth at Columbia will mean the eventual dissolution of Wald-Krasna Productions, indie unit which Wald and his erstwhile partner, Norman Krasna, formed some time ago, according to New York sources. In a subsequent split, Wald bought out Krasna's interest in the company.

As part of the new deal, it's believed, Col will purchase from Wald equities in the four W-K pix made for RKO release, plus some story properties also owned by the unit. Formula, it's said, involves a bottom payment of $200,000 which is to be scaled upward in accordance with profits on the four films. These were "Behave Yourself," "The Blue Veil," "Clash By Night" and "The Lusty Men."

Pres. Election Hits Trade; 'Snows' New Champion, 'You're Mine' 2d, 'Ivanhoe' 3d, 'Rifle' 4th

The tough opposition of the Presidential election is hurting biz in many key cities covered by VARIETY this week. Despite this, the big grossers are continuing to show amazing strength, with the great sessions rolled up by uppedscale films sending the three top pix to nearly $1,000,000 currently.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th), which was a strong second last week, is taking over first place by a healthy margin. "Because You're Mine" (M-G), which was a big third-position winner a week ago, is pushing up to second.

"Ivanhoe" (M-G), which was first for four successive weeks, is winding up third this stanza. "Springfield Rifle" (WB), just starting out extensively this session, is capturing fourth money.

"The Thief" (UA), also just getting under way, will take fifth position, with "Lusty Men" (RKO) landing sixth spot.

"Quiet Man" (Rep), up on top for several weeks, is capturing seventh place, while "Back At Front" (U) will be eighth. "Miracle of Fatima" (WB), high in ratings for weeks, rounds out the Big Nine. "Just For You" (Par), "Hellgate" (Lip) and "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) are runner-up pix in that sequence.

"Limelight" (UA) stands out as brightest new entry this round. Charles Chaplin pic is big at N. Y. Astor, and smash at Trans-Lux 60th Street, where it's playing day-date. "Battle Zone" (Mono) is rated good in L.A. "Four Poster" (Col) is doing comparatively better on its second N. Y. round than initial week in two houses. "Something For Birds" (20th) is okay in Minneapolis but dull in three other situations.

"Devil Makes Three" (M-G) looms mild in Denver. "Horizons in West" (U) looks good in Toronto. "Monkey Business" (20th), okay in Omaha, is doing mild to slow biz in three other keys.

"Stranger in Between" (U) is faring well at arty theatres in Minneapolis, Boston, Chicago and Baltimore. Film just finished a fine 10-week run in N. Y. "Big Sky" (RKO) is okay in Toronto. "Way of Gaucho" (20th) looks sluggish currently.

"Caribbean" (Par) looms fairish in Boston. "Full House" (20th), good in Balto and L.A., still is big on second N. Y. week. "Apache War Smoke" (M-G) is light in L.A. "Strange World" (UA) looks fair in Indianapolis. "Dreamboat" (20th) shapes stout in Washington.

"Crimson Pirate" (WB), weak in Chi, shapes okay in Baltimore. "Golden Hawk" (Col) is rated good in Seattle. "Duel at Silver Creek" (U) looks nice in Louisville.

'New Faces' Revue May Be 1st Legiter To Be Filmed in Third Dimension

"New Faces," current Broadway revue hit, may be the first stage show to be filmed in a three-dimension medium. Deal has been discussed between "Faces" producer Leonard Sillman and Milton Gunzburg, prexy of Natual Vision Corp., with the actual closing of a licensing pact awaiting Sillman's return from London.

Conversion of the revue to the tri-dimension medium is beyond an exploratory stage. According to present plans, a budget of $200,000 has been alloted for the project. The sum, a modest one when compared to present film production costs, was arrived at by an arrangement for a participation agreement, with the producer, the writers, the players and the film outfit sharing in the profits. Initial coin, in all probability, will be shelled out by Natural Vision and the legit producer.

Another factor contributing to the low filming cost is that the revue would be shot exactly as it is being presented on Broadway. Some of the scenes would be filmed at the Royale Theatre with others to be shot at a Gotham studio, where the sets would be duplicated. The cast is to work on matinee-less days. All in all, the sponsors figure that it would take about two weeks to film the production. Still to be worked out are arrangements with the many unions involved.

Gunzburg has been conferring with other legit interests, and the Shuberts reportedly are mulling the idea. According to Gunzburg, currently in New York, almost life-like reproductions of Broadway shows could be presented in areas which do not normally receive legit fare.

While in Gotham, Gunzburg is holding talks with George J.

Luciano Perturbed By 'Bad' Publicity, Calls Off Biopic

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Indie producer Phil Tucker reveals that Charles (Lucky) Luciano, deported gangster, has chilled deal whereby the deportee was going to angel a biopic to tune of $300,000, with Tucker producing and directing.

Tucker says he talked to Luciano, who is in Italy, via phone, and the racketeer, perturbed at what he considers unfavorable publicity on the project, said Tucker would have to put up half the coin. Tucker told Luciano he didn't have it, and the gangster then intimated he might proceed only if Tucker complied with a set of conditions which were outlined, and Tucker felt he couldn't proceed on that basis.

Conditions set forth by Luciano would have pretty much whitewashed the gangster of any wrongdoing, simply having him admit he "made a few mistakes," alleging he was a friend of labor, was being persecuted by the press, etc., Tucker said.

PIDGEON AS SAG PREXY GETS NO OPPOSITION

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

With no independent nominees in sight, Walter Pidgeon will become the next president of the Screen Actors Guild without a struggle. Ronald Reagan, retiring as prexy after five years, will turn the job over to Pidgeon at the annual meeting on Nov. 9.

Other officers and board members named by the Guild's nominating committee will be nominated without opposition. They are: First veepee, Leon Ames; second veepee, John Lund; third veepee, William Holden; recording secretary, Paul Harvey; treasurer, George Chandler, all for one year. Board members: Ward Bond, Richard Carlson, Fred Clark, John Litel, Millard Mitchell, Emory Parnell, Ronald Reagan, Barry Sullivan, Audrey Totter, Robert Wagner, Rhys Williams, all for three years; Bud Linn, two years, and Frank Lovejoy, one year. Class A-J board members, Anne Cornwall and George Sowards, both for three years.

Division Mgrs. Meet At 20th H. O. Nov. 12-13

Schedule of releases for first nine months of 1953 will be detailed by 20th-Fox at a special division managers palaver set for the homeoffice Nov. 12-13. Reps from company's sales force throughout U. S. and Canada will attend the confab to hear sales and advertising plans for product set for rest of this year and beginning of 1953.

Distrib chief Al Lichtman will preside, aided by W. C. Gehring, assistant general sales manager; Edwin W. Aaron, western sales chief, and Arthur Silverstone, eastern and Canadian sales chief.

Pub-ad topper Charles Einfeld will present ad, publicity and exploitation plans for the upcoming pix. Special note will be taken of the company's anniversary week, set for the Thanksgiving period.

$15,00,000 Eyed Domestically For 'Show' by 1953

Paramount has its sights set on a $15,000,000 U. S. and Canada distribution gross on Cecil B. DeMille's "Greatest Show on Earth" by the end of 1953. On the basis of coin collected so far, that tall figure is likely.

The circus epic brought Par a domestic distribution take of $9,700,000 in its first six months of active release. In the U. S. A., it grossed over $4,000,000 in 300 pre-release engagements and $5,000,000 in 4,000 general release spots.

In Canada, "Greatest Show" raked in $500,000 in its initial 60 pre-release dates and another $200,000 in 200 general release bookings.

Pre-release dating of the pic took place last February, March and April following a single booking at New York's Radio City Music Hall in January. Film was pulled during May and June and was swung into general release during July, August and September. Potential of 15,000 dates is figured by next summer, taking into account numerous drive-ins which have yet to play the film.

Adding further to the upbeat will be the foreign income which, it's estimated, should approximate about 60% of the domestic money.

TOA GOES SLOW ON ITS PART IN 16M SUIT

Decision as to whether the Theatre Owners of America will move to become a co-defendant in the Government's 16m antitrust against the majors will probably be delayed until February. TOA board of directors is slated to meet at that time. Member units, totalling 27, are currently being polled on whether TOA should became an active participant.

TOA has been named a "co-conspirator" but not a defendant. Change of status could make the exhib outfit liable to hefty damage costs should the Government win its case. It's this aspect that has the TOA proceeding cautiously.

Welch Asks Par Release To Make Net TV Deal

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

After seven years at Paramount producing most of the Bob Hope and Bing Crosby pictures, Bob Welch has asked for his release to make a network television deal. He has talked to both NBC's Pat Weaver and Columbia's Hubbell Robinson and Harry Ackerman and will take the offer that gives him the best percentage or equity in the shows he creates and produces.

Welch moved to pictures after a long career in radio as comedy writer-producer.

750G in Back Pay Due Under New Extras Pact

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

New collective bargaining contract, approved by the Wage Stabilization Board, between the Screen Extras Guild and the major studios opens the way for the collection of retroactive pay amounting to something between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

Studios have been paying the new basic wage increase since Sept. 21 of this year, but the retroactive pay dates back to Oct. 25, 1951.

The WSB ruling means that the extras will collect the difference between the old and new rates for approximately 11 months, all in one lump.

36-40 Pix For UA Next Year

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Prexy Arthur Krim says United Artists' 1953 lineup will be between 36-40 pix, with firm now concentrating on its 1954 program. Says company this year will do 50-60% better than last year in both domestic and foreign returns, and is now in the comfortable position of having its biggest backlog of completed and committed films.

During 1953 firm will maintain a three-a-month schedule, with occasional extra pix. Edward Small will contribute 12, of which three are completed.

SDG STALLS DECISION ON HERBERT BIBERMAN

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Hearing of Herbert Biberman's petition for reinstatement in the Screen Directors Guild was postponed for two weeks at the request of the board of directors.

Biberman, one of the original "Unfriendly 10," served a prison term for contempt of Congress after refusing to answer questions of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Board members declined to comment on the case but agreed that all members must comply with the bylaws requiring them to take the non-Communist oath.

Delay Ohio Censor Test Till After Election

New industry test of Ohio's right to censor newsreels is expected to be delayed until after Election Day.

Postponement, it's figured, will give filmites a chance to get the views of public officials who may come into office. In addition, it's reasoned that'll be tough to get present officials to act for fear of antagonizing any groups.

Joseph Exits Metro

John Joseph announced this week he's bowing out as Metro's eastern publicity manager, effective at the end of the year. He'll probably leave the homeoffice before that time for a vacation.

Joseph had been with M-G the past four years. Previously, he was Universal's ad-pub director for 12 years. Exec has been maintaining a home in L. A. and may shift to the Coast in his next industry spot.

Howard Dietz, Metro pub-ad chief, said Joseph would not be immediately replaced and that his duties would be spread among other members of the department.

UA Gets Lopert Pic

United Artists has acquired for distribution the Lopert Films release, "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier," British film about jet planes. Pic will have its Gotham preem at the Victoria Theatre Nov. 6.

Starring Ralph Richardson, Ann Todd, Nigel Patrick and John Justin, "Barrier" was produced and directed by David Lean from an original screenplay by Terence Rattigan.

Exhibs, Distribs Clash on Print Availabilities; Shortages Claimed

Is there or isn't there a print shortage? Question is assuming an Abbott & Costello "who's on first?" aspect as exhibs and distribs are making diametrically opposite claims.

Problem of prints is one of the most frequently cited complaints of exhibs in their raps at distrib trade practices. Theatremen in many areas charge that they have lost or almost lost playing time on pix because of distribs' inability to furnish prints on time. They further intimate distribs might have cut down on their print orders, a charge distrib outfits violently deny.

Rather than decreasing their print orders, exhibs maintain they are providing at least a hundred more currently than five years ago. On top pix, distribs say they are ordering about 300 b&w and 400 tinters, with the latter allotment almost hitting the 450 mark. Metro, for example, has ordered 444 Technicolor prints for "Million Dollar Mermaid," "Plymouth Adventure," "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Everything I Have Is Yours." With the print for an average-length Technicolor film costing about $535, overall print order per picture runs about $250,000.

Distribs argue it's economically unsound to increase the print allotments, since they'll end up with considerable unnecessary, costly celluloid. They stress they are aware of the necessity of more prints to take care of the ever-increasing day-and-date bookings, but point out they plan their shipments according to runs and shift

Schary Joins Top Execs In N. Y. Oscar Huddle

Top officials of Motion Picture Assn. of America member companies began their annual huddles on the controversial Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences "Oscar" awards in New York last week, and left decisions to a later date. Initial session was unusual in that it was attended by a top production exec, Metro studio chief Dore Schary, who accompanied Loew's-Metro president Nicholas M. Schenck to the conclave. Schary had been in N. Y. on other matters and returned to the Coast over the weekend.

Academy Awards in recent years have set off disputes among some industry execs from the standpoint of their value vis-a-vis cost and effort. Split centers on spotlighting one pic a year as being artistically superior, one segment of the trade holding that emphasis on aesthetic values is not helpful to the commercial b.o.

COMPO Activity Up for Review By Bd. in Chi

All activities of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations will be up for review and its three-man exec committee setup for reappraisal at a board meeting to be held in Chicago the second week of December.

Principal attention will be given to the industry's current campaign looking to repeal of the Federal 20% admissions tax. Also to be prominent on the agenda will be the manner in which the "Movietime U.S.A." tours will be continued.

Meanwhile, COMPO's former exec v.p., Arthur L. Mayer, has been continuing speaking engagements in behalf of the industry. Appearing Saturday (25) before the Women's Press Club, New York, he attacked what he termed misconceptions about the film business.

Mayer cited five of these "myths" as follows: That the public is deprived of mature pictures with messages because of "uneducated" Hollywood tycoons; that foreign films are better than American product; that the industry is on the verge of bankruptcy; that the American public is showing a greater fondness for television, and that Hollywood is dominated by a "greasy crew of Communists and fellow travelers."

N. Y. Booth Union Weighing Further Action Vs. Chains

What may be the final "friendly meeting" in the current pact talks between the Projectionists Union, Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and the N. Y. metropolian area theatre chains was scheduled for late yesterday (Tues.) afternoon. Union has indicated that unless it receives a "genuine" offer from the theatre ops, it will weigh further action to end the stalemate. Action, it was noted, would not consist of a strike threat or actual walkout, but might take the form of a slowdown.

Union and theatremen have been conferring since after Labor Day to negotiate a pact to replace the one which expired Sept. 1. Labor outfit is asking for a 13% package deal, with 10% as a wage hike and 3% for the union's welfare fund. Exhibs, citing the b.o. decline, have nixed the demand and have countered with a proposal for a reduction in the number of men manning the booths.

2-A-YEAR PIX LIMIT FOR TOP%

H'wood Again Stressing the Services For Stories Adapted for Films

With 25 pix with Army, Navy or Marine backgrounds in the planning stage, in various stages of production, or in release, Hollywood is stressing the services for story material. Not since the plethora of war pictures following the end of World War II hostilities have the filmeries shown such a concentration on the activities of the fighting men.

Not all the upcoming films deal with the adventures of U. S. servicemen. British, Greek and United Nations fighting men are also set to receive some of the glory. Many of the pix do not necessarily deal with actual fighting in Korea or in World War II areas, but relate to numerous side aspects of war as well as training activities.

With the U. S. Defense Dept. regarding many of the military pix as important public relations gimmicks, all-out cooperation is offered by the Government, which often provides location sites as well as manpower.

Metro has four military-slanted films on its production schedule. These includes "Take the High Ground," story of infantry training, which Dore Schary will personally produce; "Above and Beyond," yarn about Col. Paul Tibbetts' dropping of the first atom bomb; "Battle Circus," about Army nurses in Korea, and "Wind From the East," story of the installation by the Navy of a weather station in China during World War II.

Ref OK's Continuing California Studios Without Receiver

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Bankruptcy referee Benno M. Brink has authorized continuance of operations of the California Studios without a receiver being appointed following filing of a reorganization petition in Federal Court showing studio owes creditors a total of $135,000.

Petition was filed by George T. Goggin, whom Brink named to supervise studio operations following death of owner Harry Sherman last month. Goggin said Vern Clark will continue as studio manager and Sherman's lawyers, H. P. Babson and John Goff, will work with Paramount exec Jacob Karp, administrator of Sherman's estate, in watching over operation.

Goggin said plan is to maintain and operate studio for rental to indies and tele producers. Goggin forsees an annual income of $225,000, with expenses about $125,000. He is asking for a three-year plan to repay creditors on an annual installment basis. Chief creditor is Bank of America, $40,000, while $9,500 is due the Clune Memorial Trust, which owns property on which studio stands.

TECHNI'S 474G FOR QTR., OFF FROM 1951

Consolidated net profit of Technicolor, Inc., for the quarter ended Sept. 30, as well as for the nine-month stretch concluded on the same date, dipped slightly from the equivalent 1951 periods. Net profit after taxes for the 1952 quarter is estimated to be $474,087, or 50c per share.

Tally compares with $500,131, equivalent to 54c per share for the corresponding 1951 quarter, with taxes for the latter period adjusted to the effective rate paid for the entire year, according to prexy-general manager Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus.

Consolidated net after taxes for nine months ended Sept. 30 is estimated at $1,499,507. Sum is equivalent to $1.60 per share. Same 1951 stretch resulted in $1,561,525, or $1.68 per share, with taxes for the period in question adjusted to the effective rate paid for the entire year.

Seadler New Chairman Of MPAA Ad-Pub. Unit

Si Seadler, Metro ad director, is new chairman of the Advertising and Publicity Directors Committee of the Motion Picture Assn. of America. He replaces Charles Simonelli, Universal's eastern ad-pub manager and national exploitation head.

Chairman for the past nine months, Simonelli drew a unanimous vote of thanks from the committee for his "able guidance" of the body's activities since Jan. 1. Chairmanship, incidentally, is a rotating post usually held for a minimum of six months.

$60,000,000 Cost For Theatre TV Regional Relay

Washington, Oct. 28.

An indication of the investment required for a nationwide theatre TV system was given out by motion picture industry sources yesterday (Mon.) as the first phase of hearings before the Federal Communications Commission on need for exclusive channels was completed. Hearings will be resumed Jan. 12 for testimony on cost of transmission and plans for expansion of the medium.

Rough figures based on estimates to be presented in January by Manfred Toeppen, cost analyst for the joint theatre television technical committee, representing producers and exhibitors, place an overall construction cost of a regional relay system serving practically all theatres, excepting drive-ins, in nine eastern cities at around $60,000,000. This amount would provide facilities for New York, Trenton, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Reading, Allentown, Wilmington, Baltimore and Washington.

Estimate provides for three circuits, permitting transmission of three different programs simultaneously, from New York to Washington, and six circuits in each of nine cities. It is believed that more than 80% of total cost would go for facilities for intra-city distribution.

A breakdown of estimate puts cost for a three-program relay system from New York to Washington at $3,300,000, cost for Washington intra-city system (six circuits) at $1,500,000 and cost for program source links at $650,000.

Annual operating cost is based on three-year amortization period, for New York-Washington intercity link (six hours of operation daily), is estimated at $1,600,000. Expense of operating Washington intra-city system is put at $580,000 annually and operation of program source links at $250,000.

Sues for Colman's 'Champagne' Salary

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Claim for at least $75,000, representing Ronald Colman's deferred salary for "Champagne for Caesar," was made in a Superior Court suit brought against Yoland Productions, Inc., and Cardinal Pictures by C. Fanning, to whom Colman assigned the debt.

Action alleges that Colman was to receive 7% of the gross up to $2,500,000 and 10% thereafter, with a guaranteed minimum of $100,000. Of that amount, $25,000 was paid and the rest deferred.

Suit demands payment of the $75,000 plus interest and an accounting of the gross on the United Artists release.

DISTRIB RELIEF VIA ARBITRATION

Exhibs coming to a boil over the number of pix being given the high-percentage pre-release treatment by distribs appear headed for some relief. Film companies conditionally have agreed to limit themselves to two such pix each in any single year.

Company concession on this point is contained in the most recently-revised industry arbitration plan, which has the okay of distrib prexies and is now awaiting exhib approval or further negotiation.

Distrib curb on the number of specially-handled films is, of course, tentative in that no part of the arbitration setup is definite in itself; the arbitration program must be approved in its entirety by both distrib and exhib sides and subsequently by the Department of Justice and the Federal Court in New York.

Under the pre-release system, which has many exhib associations in the field as well as national organization execs howling, the film companies send important pix into a number of exhibition dates in advance of general release. Factor which has the exhibs squawking, they say, is that the companies are excessive in their rental terms. Theatremen's beef, widely stated, is that a boost in their admissions scale is demanded if they're to show a profit on the pre-release deal.

Tipoff on the two-a-year ceiling was given by exhibitor leaders in talks to their respective organizations in the field. They received copies of the company-approved draft from the distributors last week after revisions of an earlier draft were made by the company chief execs.

Not counted as a pre-release run under the tentative proposal is a one-shot showing of a film in a particular territory. Falling into this category would be a "sneak" preview or the single exhibition of a pic at a particular time, such as New Year's Eve.

SPAIN STEPPING UP AS LOCATIONER FOR U.S. PIX

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Spain is stepping to the front as a location field for U. S. film companies, according to Rouben Mamoulian, who is readying Bizet's "Carmen" for indie filming there next year.

Among other indie filmmakers with Spanish production plans are Albert Zugsmith, who is preparing "Female of the Species" and "Conquest and Desire" for spring shooting; Frederick Brisson, with "It Happened in Spain"; John Huston, with "Matador," and Mike Frankovich, who is projecting a second picture to follow his recently completed "Decameron Nights."

Personnel shuffle at 20th-Fox this week resulted in promotion of Leo Pillot to the berth of assistant exploitation manager and upping of Edward Solomon to post of assistant ad director. Shifts were respectively disclosed by exploitation manager Rodney Bush and ad manager Abe Goodman.

Pillot has been with the company for the past 18 months. Solomon, who joined the firm in 1940, moves into a newly created post.

Mulvey Easting After Goldwyn Studio Survey

James Mulvey, president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, and Sylvan Oestreicher, independent tax consultant, are due back in New York from the Coast toward the end of this week.

They trekked west over the past weekend for work on studio operations.

New Arbitration System Could Award Double Damages to Exhib Plaintiffs

Arbiter panels to function under the proposed industry arbitration system will be empowered to award monetary damages in the maximum amount of double the actual damages which complainant theatremen prove they have suffered as the result of inequitable distributor practices.

Subject to the unanimous approval of the entire setup, this provision is contained in the arbitration plan revised and okayed by company presidents this month. Exhibs now have the overall arbitration system under study.

In processing their claims through the arbitration machinery, as it's proposed, exhibs are required to state specifically the amount of alleged damages. It's thereupon set forth that the arbiters may award sums equal to the exhibs' actual losses as determined, with the burden of proof on the theatremen.

Additionally, the arbiters may award extra damages where it is found that the defendant distribs engaged in business conduct with the "deliberate purpose of injuring the exhibs or with willful disregard of the probable consequences" to the exhibs. It's under this provision that "exemplary damages" will be permitted in amounts not to exceed the actual damage.

Double-damages ceiling is in contrast with Federal antitrust statutes which direct that damages stemming from violations are to be trebled.

In instituting an arbitration proceeding under the proposed plan, exhibs are called upon to limit

Arthur W. Anderson, former Warner branch manager here and now district manager out of Chicago, is in St. Mary's Hospital here recovering from gunshot wounds suffered in a hunting accident near Albert Lea, Minn.

Anderson was shot in the stomach and eye while duck hunting. He may suffer the loss of one eye.

Chief Exec Post May Remain Open As RKO Incentive

Hosting another luncheon-meeting with reporters in New York Monday (27), RKO board chairman Arnold Grant indicated election of a new company president, succeeding Ralph Stolkin, is a matter of uncertainty. "Maybe we'll bring in a president on an interim basis—or permanent basis for years to come," he said. "It's up to the board."

Grant also said it's possible the chief exec's post will be kept open as an incentive to an RKO-ite now on the payroll with presidential aspirations.

Original purpose of Monday's session, said the board chairman, was to introduce the team of execs whose job is to keep the company going. He said he's proud of the job done so far and confident the company eventually will recover from its "multiplicity of ills."

Grant also feels sure that studio problems will be solved. In line with latter, Grant says he can't trek to the studio for perhaps another week. As for the president's duties, Grant stated he is taking full responsibility for all decisions but the chief exec's job itself, which really defies definition, can be absorbed by the "exec team." Grant said "no one is being considered or thought of for the prexy spot" and flatly denied having any talks with Robert J. O'Donnell, as reported in some lay press dailies.

Asking for an end of speculation on corporate affairs, Grant related

Agents Claim Share Of 'African Queen'

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Alvin Manuel and Michael Baird, agents, filed suit in Superior Court demanding an accounting and a share in the profits of "The African Queen." Named as defendants are Horizon Pictures, Inc., Horizon Enterprises, Inc., John Huston and Samuel Spiegel (S. P. Eagle).

Plaintiffs declare they conducted negotiations with Romulus Films, Ltd., of London, for co-production of the picture, for which they were promised 10% of the profits. Later, they charge, the defendants refused to share the earnings.

Errol Flynn's Paris Suit On Partnership Snafu With Coast-Made Film

Paris, Oct. 28.

William Marshall, now making TV pix here, is suing Errol Flynn for defamation of character, recovery of partnership assets (namely a jointly-produced film, "Hello God"), and for losses incurred because of Flynn's alleged failure to live up to contractual agreements. Marshall is repped by Gang, Kopp & Tyre, with Martin Gang handling. Flynn's present salary already has been tied up by Gang in an effort to recover the $300,000 alleged loss incurred by his client when he claims Flynn obtained a negative of "God" before Marshall could sell film to the Motion Picture Sales Corp.

Flynn and Marshall partnered in 1950 to produce "God" based on an original, "Before You Sleep Tonight," by Marshall. Flynn reportedly was to buy into a 40% partnership for $25,000, plus his services as star of the film. Flynn was making "Kim" at Metro then on loanout from WB. The film was made on location at Santa Barbara and the Hal Roach studios. Marshall acted as producer-director.

According to Marshall, Flynn wanted to break his contract with Warners at that time. After WB gave him a new pact, Flynn al-

PICKER CLAMS ON RKO, CITES 'TRANSIT' STATUS

Arnold M. Picker, United Artists foreign chief who becomes RKO's executive veepee Nov. 15, arrived in New York yesterday (Tues.) on the United States. Citing his "in transit" status, he declined to discuss whether he would become an RKO board member, as is expected, and nixed other queries.

Although RKO board chairman Arnold Grant on Monday (27) disclosed that Picker was returning from a two-week European trip with some recommendations for changes in the company's foreign set-up, the new exec-veepee also begged off comment on that subject.

Androcles and the Lion

Fairly entertaining film version of Shaw's satirical comedy; spotty business.

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

RKO release of Gabriel Pascal production. Stars Jean Simmons, Victor Mature, Robert Newton, Maurice Evans, Alan Young; features Elsa Lanchester, Reginald Gardiner, Gene Lockhart, Alan Mowbray, Noel Willman, John Hoyt, Jim Backus, Lowell Gilmore. Directed by Chester Erskine. Screen adaptation, Erskine and Ken Englund; camera, Harry Stradling; editor, Roland Cross; music, Frederick Hollander. Previewed Oct. 27, '52. Running time, 98 MINS.

Bernard Shaw's satirical comedy on Romans and Christians provides the basis for a fair film offering. While bulging with marquee names, and backed by the Shaw reputation and some exploitation possibilities, the business outlook is spotty.

Picture is a curious mixture of basic comedy elements and Shavian wit. The former has its occasionally funny moments, mostly because of physical projection, while the latter, although having lost some of its crackle and sting with time, should still mildly titillate the sophisticate. However, neither is strong enough, or used in sufficient portions, to insure heavy mass or class followings. The romance between the Christian girl and the Roman captain is the most effective part of the film, differing from the original play.

The Gabriel Pascal production undertaking is the first filming of a Shaw play in Hollywood, although several of the playwright's works have reached the screen from England—and to more advantage. The presentation reaches no heights in spectacle and has the confined feeling of having been made indoors. Chester Erskine directed as well as working with Ken Englund on the screen adaptation, and he put the able cast through spotty paces. There's an amusing superficiality to some of the sequences involving the decadent Roman court, its customs and reactions, with real wit in the Shaw dialog. Erskine's strongest guidance is evidenced in the scenes with Jean Simmons and Victor Mature as the Christian girl and the Roman captain. The handling and the trouping here are very good, with the players getting sincerity into the love words.

Alan Young's Androcles is wistfully drawn in his own brand of comedy and carries sympathy despite a stress on hokum called for in the script. Robert Newton apparently enjoys himself in the rôle of Ferrovius, the violent, powerful Christian whose sword and strength save the devout from death in Caesar's arena. Maurice Evans is a soothsaying Caesar, recognizing the coming future of Christianity but having to play out his own destiny in keeping with the customs of the times. Reginald Gardiner is the foppish Lentulus. Elsa Lanchester, seen only in the opening sequences, is Young's shrewish wife. Gene Lockhart, Alan Mowbray, Noel Willman, John Hoyt, Jim Backus and Lowell Gilmore are others enacting the Shavian characters.

The familiar story deals with Androcles' love of animals, a feeling that saves the Greek tailor when he frees a lion from a thorn and later meets that lion in the Roman arena after Caesar's forces have rounded up the Christians to provide arena sport for the ruler and the populace. The march of the Christians to Rome, the arena games, the vestal virgins and other trappings that go with the story lack the wallop of reality, in both the staging and the physical appurtenances. While there are large sets, well peopled, the picture does not appear to wear a plush, costly dress.

Harry Horner did the production design and Harry Stradling photographed. The Frederick Hollander music score was directed by C. Bakaleinikoff. These and the other technical credits are no more than average in providing the film with production polish. Brog.

A group of Runyon characters and situations set up this musical offering from 20th-Fox. While the title of "Bloodhounds of Broadway" scarcely hints at the film's contents, it is a pleasant 89 minutes of screen diversion that has average chances at the boxoffice. Mitzi Gaynor is teamed with Scott Brady and both provide a youthful emphasis for the marquees to go with the songs, dances and comedy that have been decked out in Technicolor.

The George Jessel production features several dance numbers, and two new tunes, against the Damon Runyon fable about a bigtime bookie who takes it on the lam to avoid a state crime investigation, takes up with a little Georgia miss who saves his life and sponsors her Broadway career after the legal heat has momentarily cooled. Harmon Jones' direction is geared to make the most of the Sy Gomberg screenplay, the Runyon characters and the heart tug that writer gave most of his fables.

"Bye Low," gets a brief, one-shot presentation when Miss Gaynor uses the Eliot Daniel tune as a lullaby to sing to sleep the two loveable hounds that enact the title role and who prove to be scene-stealers at every appearance. "Jack O'Diamonds," by Ben Oakland and Paul Webster, is the finale production number, slickly sold by Miss Gaynor. There are several other tunes, mostly standards and uncredited, used for both song and production dance spots. Miss Gaynor is teamed with Mitzi Green and Richard Allan for one terp spot, and little Sharon Baird (an Eddie Cantor TV protege) steps out with her in another.

There's a good-humored air about the presentation as the players go about the business of capturing as much as possible of the Runyon flavor. Brady is most capable as the bigtime bookie being chased by Michael O'Shea. Miss Gaynor's story chores are fitted to her pert personality and she does a good job of the Georgia accent. Miss Green, Marguerite Chapman, O'Shea, Wally Vernon, Henry Slate, George E. Stone, Allan, Timothy Carey are among the others pleasantly involved.

Film has been given a good physical furbishing, and the camera work features effective lighting and hues in the musical numbers. Edward Cronjager's lensing otherwise also is easy on the eyes. Numbers were staged by Robert Sidney, and Lionel Newman provided good musical direction. Miss Gaynor wears some smart costumes by Travilla. Brog.

The Berliner

"The Berliner," German import which preemed at the Beekman, N. Y., Monday (27), was reviewed in VARIETY from Edinburgh, Sept. 28, 1949, under its original title of "Berliner Ballade." Gord. rated the topical comedy as a "significant, postwar German effort, inconclusive but always entertaining. Foibles of both occupied and occupiers in present-day Berlin are cleverly painted."

Distributed in the U. S. by Joseph Burstyn, the film stars Gerd Froebe. Producer credit is carried by Alf Teichs while R. A. Stemmle directed. In further appraising the picture the reviewer noted that "there are excellent comic touches, bordering on the Chaplinesque . . . and gentle satire, penetrating and pointed."

Thunder in the East

Alan Ladd, costars to spark biz for run-of-mill action-adventure feature.

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Paramount release of Everett Riskin production. Stars Alan Ladd, Deborah Kerr, Charles Boyer, Corinne Calvet; features Cecil Kellaway, Mark Cavell, John Abbott, Philip Bourneuf, John Williams. Directed by Charles Vidor. Screenplay, Jo Swerling; adaptation, George Tabori, Frederick Hazlitt Brennan; from novel by Alan Moorehead; camera, Lee Garmes; Everett Douglas; music, Hugo Friedhofer. Previewed Oct. 22, '52. Running time, 97 MINS.

| Singh | Charles Boyer |
| Lizette Damon | Corinne Calvet |
| Dr. Willoughby | Cecil Kellaway |
| Moti Lal | Mark Cavell |

| Newab Kahn | Philip Bourneuf |
| General Harrison | John Williams |
| Maharajah | Charlie Lung |
| Dr. Paling | Leonard Carey |
| Norton | Nelson Welch |
| Habibbudin | Robert Ben Ali |

This is a run-of-the-mill action-adventure feature with Alan Ladd's name and draw the chief business asset for general playdates. It's so-so entertainment, packaged against a Far East locale, with added marquee adornments in the names of Deborah Kerr, Charles Boyer and Corinne Calvet.

Production guidance of Everett Riskin permits an uninspired script by Jo Swerling to be ploddingly directed by Charles Vidor. The occasional flashes of good Ladd action are too often bogged down in talkative sequences and attempts at character nuances that don't come off. The competent stars and featured players try hard but needed more help from writing and direction. Ladd appears to the most advantage, only because the type of tough hero he plays is his stock-in-trade.

Ladd, a flying adventurer out to turn a buck, arrives in the state of Ghandahar with a planeload of machine guns and ammunition to sell to either the maharajah or the rebel forces causing trouble in his state. Ladd finds people leaving, not coming to, Ghandahar, and falls in with the British colony, among whose members is Miss Kerr, the blind daughter of the minister. While Ladd waits to dispose of his weapons a quick romance blooms with Miss Kerr, only to get a setback when he attempts to double his plane fare rates for the Britishers because his ship is the only safe way out of Ghandahar. Events proceed to the point where the colony is holed up in the palace with Boyer, the maharajah's advisor and a man of peace, who has confiscated the guns and refuses to let them be used against the rebel forces.

Action pace picks up in the latter sequences. Ladd's plane is wrecked and the rebels are attacking before another can arrive from Bombay. When it does come it can only take seven, and Ladd stays on to fight, redeeming himself with the blind girl. Even Boyer relents from his non-resistance stand at the finale and, with Ladd beside him, machine-guns the rebel force to put a blazing fadeout on the pulp fiction plot.

While costarred, Miss Calvet has only a few scenes. There's one sizzling bit in Ladd's hotel bedroom in which she attempts to use her charms to win a seat on his plane. Cecil Kellaway plays the British minister, and others in the crown colony include John Williams, Leonard Carey and Nelson Welch. Young Mark Cavell does a small native boy who attaches himself to Ladd. The rebel leader is smoothly done by Philip Bourneuf, and Robert Ben Ali plays his chief lieutenant.

Technical credits, including lensing, editing and music score, are all acceptable. Brog.

Montana Belle ### (COLOR-SONGS)

Jane Russell - George Brent western with good b.o. prospects.

RKO release of Howard Welsch (Robert Peters) production. Stars Jane Russell, George Brent; features Scott Brady, Forrest Tucker, Andy Devine. Directed by Allan Dwan. Screenplay, Horace McCoy and Norman S. Hall. from story by M. Coates Webster and Welsch; camera (Trucolor), Jack Marta; editor, Arthur Roberts; music, Nathan Scott. Tradeshown N. Y., Oct. 27, '52. Running time, 81 MINS.

On RKO's shelf several years, "Montana Belle" is finally moving into distribution in November. Jane Russell-George Brent starrer appears to have a good b.o. potential in most situations largely due to the actress' presence in the cast.

Picture was bought by former RKO controlling stockholder Howard Hughes from producer Howard Welsch after its completion on the Republic lot. Welsch had Miss Russell on a loanout from Hughes. That the film was lensed at the Rep studio probably accounts for its use of Trucolor as well as a number of Rep players and technicians.

Screenplayed by Horace McCoy and Norman S. Hall from a story by M. Coates Webster and Welsch, the film has Miss Russell portraying noted outlaw Belle Starr. Four Dalton brothers, notorious gunmen of frontier days, are tossed in for good measure. Group does some feudin' and fightin' among themselves but at the same time manages to pull bank jobs and stay beyond a posse's reach.

A misunderstanding with the Daltons finds Miss Russell leaving them to team with Forrest Tucker and Jack Lambert in roaming through the country on a holdup rampage. To relieve gambler-saloonkeeper George Brent of a reported $50,000, she does an "inside" job by deceiving Brent into taking her on as partner. Romance flares between them but is extinguished when she's killed in a trap set for the Daltons.

Script gives Miss Russell a meaty role, for not only is she called upon to be a crack marksman but also warbles a couple of tunes in Brent's saloon. Perhaps best of the songs is "The Gilded Lily" by Portia Nelson and Margaret Martinez. But insofar as the star's acting prowess is concerned in this entry, it's safe to say that her more recent efforts are much better.

Brent's interpretation of the saloonkeeper is too placid to be convincing. Tucker and Lambert are good as a couple of lusty outlaws. Disguised with a beard and frightwig, Andy Devine is okay as an itinerant trader. Scott Brady, a Dalton boy who takes a fancy to Miss Russell, does well by his role as do Ray Teal; Rory Mallinson and Holly Bane as the remaining Daltons.

Direction of Allan Dwan stresses the action. Yarn occasionally lags as far as credibility is concerned, but there's plenty of shootin' and fisticuffs sandwiched between dialog to compensate. Physical values are more than adequate. Camerawork of Jack Marta is fair. Greenish hues of Trucolor several years ago, compared with current Trucolor prints, evidences the improvement Republic has made in its tint process. Gilb.

Randolph Scott in slambang western for outdoor market.

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Columbia release of Scott-Brown production, produced by Harry Joe Brown. Stars Randolph Scott; features Donna Reed, Claude Jarman, Jr., Frank Faylen, Glenn Langan, Richard Denning. Written and directed by Roy Huggins. Camera, (Technicolor), Charles Lawton, Jr.; editor, Gene Havlick. Previewed Oct. 23, '52. Running time, 80 MINS.

The Randolph Scott fans, and others who go for rough and ready western action in a credible story, will find "Hangman's Knot" satisfying filmfare. The business outlook is good in situations where this type of virile outdoor feature plays best.

The Harry Joe Brown production for Columbia release is a forthright offering of rugged violence that makes no concessions for pantywaist viewers. Roy Huggins' plausible screen story and vigorous direction provides the players with valid words to say and action to perform.

The plot is laid in Nevada at the time the War Between the States ends. Scott is the leader of a small Confederate band sent west to ambush a Union gold train. Twelve men die in the ensuing battle, but before one of the Union men kicks off he reveals the war has been over for a month. This leaves Scott and his men with the problem of dodging posses out to get them for felony and murder, not an act of war, and of best disposing of the gold.

Scott doesn't easily convince his men the gold should go south to help rebuild that land. Before they can leave Nevada, however, they are trapped in an isolated stage station by a group of greedy men, posing as deputies but really after the gold. Trapped with them are Donna Reed and Richard Denning, stage passengers, and Jeanette Nolan and Clem Bevans, keepers of the station.

Defense of the station against the renegades' onslaught, keeping peace among his men and winning over the hostile Bevans and Miss Nolan occupy much of Scott's time, and the other story footage mounts in tension and suspense with the nearing of the finale clash when the renegades attempt to burn out the trapped party. A flash thunderstorm, native to the west, saves the group from burning and enables the survivors to drive off the false deputies. Fadeout has Scott and Claude Jarman, Jr., his sole remaining soldier, ready to push off for the south, leaving the gold behind to be returned to its rightful owners.

The film has been very well cast, so the characters, while western, are a cut about the usual type portrayals. Miss Reed is excellent as the ex-Union Army nurse who tends Scott's wounded men. Jarman does well as a young Confederate soldier, more frightened than glorying in war. Lee Marvin stands out as the killer in Scott's group, and others showing up strongly among the assorted players are Frank Faylen, Denning, Miss Nolan, Bevans, Ray Teal, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Monte Blue, the latter three topkicks among the renegades; and John Call. Glenn Langan has only a brief spot early in the footage as a Confederate soldier who tries to get the gold.

Extremely mobile camera work by Charles Lawton, Jr., socks over the action highspots, including the opening raid on the gold train, the fire and the finals scrap at the height of the thunderstorm. Editing is tight and other technical assists good. Brog.

The empire carved out of the wilderness beyond the Missouri in the 1880's provide the background for Republic's "Ride the Man Down," an acceptable, if overlong, western that should bring good returns in the outdoor market and in some general situations. A cast of names w.k. in the field, some brawling action scenes and a fine TruColor trapping enhance the Joseph Kane production.

A trifle too much has been stirred into the screenplay by Mary McCall, Jr., to maintain peak interest throughout but the tale of a man's stubborn fight to hold together the sprawling cattle ranch after the death of its owner spins along fairly smoothly for its 90-minute running time. Plot complications pit Rod Cameron, ranch foreman, aaginst jealous neighbors who seek to move in after the owner's death and whittle the cattle empire down to a patch. He's also opposed by Forrest Tucker, engaged to Ella Raines, the owner's daughter. Greedy machinations of Taylor Holmes, his own prospective father-in-law, and the weakness of sheriff J. Carrol Naish are other elements in the story, which follows a familiar plot line.

When his prospective father-in-law allies himself with the baddies, Cameron's romantic affairs come a-cropper. Simultaneously, Miss Raines and Tucker have a falling out over her determination to back Cameron in preserving the ranch, paving the way for their fadeout clinch after he has killed Tucker, Brian Donlevy, the leader of the opposition, and others of the latter's cohorts to erase the threat to the cattle empire.

Script and Kane's direction call for rugged performances which are suitably handled by Cameron, Tucker and Donlevy. Miss Raines and Barbara Britton share honors as the two femmes, and there are good supporting performances by Chill Wills as a loyal ranch hand;

Italo Pix Group Eyes Co-Prod. With U.S. Cos.

Two prominent members of the Italian film delegation, on the eve of their departure for Rome today (Wed.), made a pitch for co-production in Italy with American film outfits. No U.S. companies were mentioned but indication is that talks looking to deals for pard production deals have been initiated with Paramount and 20th-Fox.

Nicola De Pirro, director of the Italian government's entertainment industry, and Eitel Monaco, president of the National Assn. of Motion Picture and Allied Industries of Italy, stated that co-production arrangements could be of "mutual economic usefulness." They added that such joint ventures also would be "helpful to the further development of cultural relations between our two countries.

Lili St. Cyr Stars In Limited-Partner Pic Made in N. Y.

Limited partnership and use of deferments are the means of financing an "under $100,000" budgeter now before the cameras at the Calhoun Studios, N. Y. Titled "East of Broadway," the venture stars burlesquer Lili St. Cyr and is about 10% completed, according to producer Leonard Burton.

Burton, who formerly was with the Motion Picture Assn. of America and Warners, is general partner in Delta Productions, which has been set up to produce the picture. Total coin to be raised via limited partners in Delta is $20,000. Balance of the production cost is to be defrayed by giving key personnel a cut in the film's profits.

Directing "Broadway" is Josef Zorovich. Associate producer is Leo Lewis and script is by Bobby Weil. As limited partners in the project Zorovich contributed $300 and Lewis provided $1,200. As of Oct. 17 there were 13 other limited partners, with the largest individual investment amounting to $2,500.

Burton disclosed that a tentative distribution agreement has been made with Astor Pictures to handle the film. Its story, incidentally, concerns the efforts of a wife (Miss St. Cyr) to hold the love and affection of her husband. To do this she pursues a theatrical career, which, of course, permits the star to display her varied talents.

Partnership papers filed with the N. Y. County Clerk's office disclose that contributors will share in the picture's net profits after 26% of the gross profits are deducted for Burton's compensation. Out of this sum he's required to pay the cost of the film's writing and direction.

In using a limited partnership to partially finance "Broadway," Delta Productions employs a device invariably resorted to by legit producers. However, it's rarely used for film ventures.

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Warners' Sunset Studios have been offered for sale for $1,250,000.

Telepix producers, industrialists and others have been eyeing the 10-acre site.

Col Execs to Coast

Columbia sales head Abe Montague, v.p. Nate Spingold and homeoffice exec Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., left New York for the Coast early this week to look at new product.

They're likely to be back at the homeoffice in a couple of days.

Megger Files for 12½G Pay On Nixed Film Project

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Suit for $12,500 was filed by screen director Alfred Werker in Superior Court against Mort Briskin and Morjay Productions, charging breach of an oral agreement.

Plaintiff declares he was hired to direct a film titled "Cry Tough" in 1950 and worked several months on its preparation. Later, he avers, the project was abandoned and he is still waiting to be paid.

'Most Successful' Convention Held By Mich. Allied

Detroit, Oct. 28.

Allied Theatres of Michigan held its largest and most successful convention last week, according to Ernest T. Conlon, executive secretary. Highlight came when seven Michigan congressmen attended a luncheon which attracted 180 members, largest turnout in Michigan Allied's history.

The congressmen indicated they were in sympathy with the industry's campaign to eliminate the 20% tax on theatre admissions. Wilbur Snaper, National Allied prexy, said the congressmen's reaction was very encouraging and thought similar meetings throughout the country would be helpful.

Trueman T. Rembusch, co-chairman of COMPO and prexy of Allied Theatre Owens of Indiana, told delegates of the tremendous reception at the Indiana and Ohio state fairs of the motion picture exhibits and suggested that a similar plan in Michigan and elsewhere would be good publicity and add to goodwill.

John Vlachos was re-elected president. Also re-elected were E. J. Pennell, v. p.; Irving Belinsky, secretary-treasurer; Ernest T. Conlon, executive-secretary, and Allan Johnson, national Allied director. Mrs. Delores Cassidy, of Midland, was named Johnson's alternate.

The three new directors are Lew Wisper, Henry Carley and Lawrence Griffin.

LATEST TRY TO SET UP FLA. AS FILM CENTRE

Miami, Oct. 28.

Latest attempt to bring pix production to Florida is under way here, with Miami National Pictures, Inc. launching a program of theatrical and TV films. Florida has long tried to establish itself as a Hollywood competitor in film production.

Company has two shooting studios in operation and a 1,500-seat theatre with a big stage ready for musical and other large stage, productions. Recently organized by William Van Ness and Edgar Pearce, the firm has already completed a number of shorts and commercial films.

Ness and Pearce cite the Florida weather as one of their main assets.

Awaits C. P. Skouras On N.Y. Roxy Policy

Various possibilities for policy changes at the Roxy Theatre, N.Y., are currently scouted by Dick Dickson, special rep for Charles Skouras, National Theatres prexy. Dickson has been conferring in N. Y. with Dave Katz, Roxy managing director, in an effort to map plans prior to the arrival of Skouras, who's due later this week.

Dickson says it's too early to outline the shape of the policy revamp but emphasizes "whatever happens, we'll have something on the stage at the Roxy." Indications are that, rather than cut the live show, it'll be built up.

Hollywood, Oc. 28.

Total of five Paramount pictures will be filmed on foreign soil in 1953, the heaviest overseas production in the studio's history.

FLEXIBILITY IN HANDLING CROWDS

With drive-in interest in theatre television definitely on the upbeat, possibility looms that the ozoners will play an important part in keeping the theatre TV ball rolling next year.

Outdoor operators have been firing inquiries at the equipment dealers in the wake of the successful large-screen TV presentation of the Rocky Marciano-Joe Walcott championship bout at the S3 Drive-In, Rutherford, N. J. Fight attracted an overflow crowd at the ozoner, which carried it via an RCA direct-projection system mounted on a truck.

While exhibs haven't torn down any doors in a rush to purchase sets, concensus of opinion is that the potential of theatre TV at the open-airers is great. Flexible capacity of the ozoners permits them to rake in more coin than the regular houses, which are limited as to attendance. Many feel that the type of events predominant so far in theatre TV holds a unique appeal for the drive-in crowds.

According to A. H. Baldwin of the RCA Engineering Products Division, in Camden, N. J., more than 60 inquiries were received by RCA following the Rutherford show, with drive-ins that stay open all year showing particular interest. "We think the day will come when the drive-ins will make up the backbone of theatre TV networks," he said.

Par Ends Production On Its Intermediate Theatre TV System

With six of Paramount's film storage theatre television systems installed in theatres, the company is discontinuing production of the units.

Par spokesman blamed the stoppage on inability to bring down costs and reduce the size of the units but emphasized that no basic policy decision was involved. He indicated Par would await the outcome of the theatre television hearings before the Federal Communications Commission in Washington before making any final determinations.

The company still has four of its intermediate systems on hand, with no orders in sight. Exhibitors have been generally holding off placing orders but their hesitancy re the Par apparatus has been pronounced from the beginning due to practical considerations. Units cost $25,000 apiece, including installation, and they take up a good deal more space than the average theatre has at its disposal.

The Par equipment never did get to the point where mass production was feasible. Ten odd units turned out so far were assembled by Par. System records the image on film, which is processed and dried within 20 seconds, ready to be threaded into the projector.

8 Pioneers Inductees

Eight film industry execs who have been in the biz for 25 years or more will be inducted as new members of the Motion Picture Pioneers at the org's Jubilee Dinner at the Hotel Astor, N. Y., Nov. 25.

They include Samuel Eckman, Jr., managing director of Metro in Great Britain; Gen. Edward P. (Ted) Curtis, an Eastman Kodak v.p.; Harold Fitzgerald, Fox-Wisconsin Theatres; Martin Levine, Brandt Theatres exec; Frederick C. Quimby, M-G shorts subjects producer; Will J. Comer, John Hamrick Theatres of Seattle; Norman Gluck, United World Films v.p., and Samuel Rosen, Fabian Theatres exec.

Dinner will honor Universal board chairman Nate J. Blumberg. Ned E. Depinet is chairman and George Jessel will be toastmaster.

Industry Delegations From Abroad Pay Off in Better Working Setups

Stepped-up visits to this country of industry delegations from abroad are paying off both in good-will and better working arrangements with foreign top execs.

Touring contingents here during the past few months have included groups from India, Japan, Italy and Germany. In some instances the Motion Picture Assn. of America foots the bill, in others the visits are part of an overall State Department plan to bring over key figures in various industries abroad.

MPAA execs know from practical experience the value of personal contact. They say also that the visitors from abroad return home with a very different slant on the problems confronting not only their own films in the American market but also on the difficulties besetting the U. S. industry. MPAA toppers feel that the first-hand looksee here on the part of the Italians, for one, has straightened out a lot of cockeyed ideas on the potential of the market and U. S. exhib and distrib attitudes towards imports.

Ironic sidelight on the visits is that the most important groups to be feted here recently included reps of the three former Axis nations—Italy, Germany and Japan. Industries in these countries have made impressive comebacks and the areas now count among Hollywood's most important foreign markets. Hitler, Mussolini and the Japs wasted time banning U. S. pix as they tightened the reigns of dictatorship.

Last year, the MPAA sponsored the trans-Atlantic hop of Sir

Ask Studios for Two Hours Off Nov. 4 to Cast Votes

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Roy M. Brewer, representing the Hollywood AFL Film Council, has asked the major studios to schedule regular two-hour periods on Nov. 4 to enable union voters to exercise their citizenship duties at the polls without confusion.

To prevent workers from playing hookey during the two hours, it was suggested that the studios require the voters to show their ballot stubs when they return to work.

Stagehands Union Exec Seeks to Smooth Over Chi Circuit Situation

Chicago, Oct. 28.

While negotiations have not reached the breakdown stage between the theatre circuit representatives and stage hands' union, matters had reached such a stalemate last week that Felix Snow, international veepee of the union, flew in from New York to try and smooth over matters.

Union is asking for a hike from $2.09 per hour in picture houses to $2.45, but motion picture operators are pleading that grosses are on the downgrade and that no increases can be given.

Attorneys and officials of Balaban & Katz, RKO, and Warner Theatres are meeting with the union reps. Twelve film houses are affected by the negotiations.

A union official said that the men have been working without a contract for the past four years.

ALL KEY UPT MEMBERS AT W. VA. 2-DAY MEET

Every key member of United Paramount Theatres will be in White Sulphur Spfings, W. Va., today for the opening of the outfit's third annual meeting to swap views on the state of exhibition, take up problems in each territory and analyze the effectiveness of promotional work.

Two-day session also is designed to develop possible new ideas in the way of boosting the b.o. via general discussions.

Participants from the New York homeoffice will include prexy Leonard Goldenson; v.p's Robert M. Weitman, Walter Gross and Edward L. Hyman, and secretary-treasurer Robert H. O'Brien.

Reps from the field include toppers of all affiliated chains across the country, including: Karl Hoblitzelle, Robert O'Donnell, Robert Wilby, H. F. Kincey, John Balaban, Dave Wallerstein, A. H. Blank, Kermit Carr, Martin J. Mullin, Earl J. Hudson, Harry B. French, Leon Netter, Louis Finske, Gaston Dureau, Henry Plitt, John Adams, Raymond Willie, James Harrison, Emil Bernstecker, Roy Smart, Ray Hendry, George Aurelius, Arthur Krolick, Eugene Street, Ben Rosenberg, Selig Seligman, Jerry Zigmond, William O'Donnell, Jack Katz and James Redd.

Kalmine Heads Unit At 2-Day WB Confab

Harry Kalmine, Warner Bros. Theatres topper, heads a delegation of homeoffice execs attending a two-day confab of the Philadephia WB zone which got under way yesterday (Tues.).

Meeting precedes launching of the six-month "Showmanship Crusade." In keeping with confab's theme, Jerry Pickman, Paramount pub-ad chief, and Stirling Silliphant, 20th-Fox publicity director, addressed the group yesterday.

Double-Severance For 2 RKO Letouts Key to Union Snarl

With assurance from Richard Condon, RKO's new pub-ad topper, that the department has been completely reorganized and no new dismissals are contemplated, the union repping RKO pub-ad staffers is attempting to obtain double severance pay for two staffers pinkslipped last week.

George Held, assistant to former publicity manager Don Prince, and Fred Norman, radio-TV contact, were let out and given only single severance pay, according to the labor outfit. Sign, Pictorial and Display Union, Local 230, AFL, maintains that this is a violation of the pact with RKO. If staffers aren't given the double severance pay, union has indicated it will file an unfair labor practice claim with the National Labor Relations Board. Union says it will make no attempt to reinstate Held and Norman, since both staffers have shown no desire to return to the revised setup. A meeting with Robert Goldfarb, RKO personnel chief, was slated for late yesterday (Tues.) for settlement of the double severance claim.

Union has further indicated that it has no objections to the shifting of duties within the department as long as the staffers receive the same salaries.

L.A. Using 2d-Run Pix To Fill Double Bills

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Owing to the opening of outlying suburban houses to day-date availability with Los Angeles first-run theatres, coupled with a shortage of good "B" pictures, a number of theatres in this area are using second-run films in support of "A" features just going into regular release.

Paramount, 20th-Fox and Allied Artists are obliged to fill their double bills with first-run films and second-run features unless they can arrange to package an "A" and a "B." Exhibs declare this condition will continue unless more worthwhile "B's" are produced or unless the "A" films are strong enough to stand alone.

'Snows' Standout in L.A., Wham 60G; 'Battle'-'Bowl' Okay $20,000, 'Smoke' Minor 18G, 'Quiet' Loud 13G in 4th

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" is the only new bill doing biz here this week. It is heading for socko $60,000 or better at upped scale in two theatres, after an unusually big weekend. Pleasing $20,000 is seen for "Battle Zone" and "Rose Bowl Story" in three houses, with near $11,000 probable in addition for four outlying sites.

"Apache War Smoke"-"Hour of 13" shapes minor $18,000. 'Horizons West" looks dull $16,000 in two sites. "Quiet Man" looms okay $13,000 in fourth week, two spots. "Ivanhoe" is maintaining a neat $30,000 for third round in two locations.

"Thief" is rated okay $11,000 in three houses, second round. "Somebody Loves Me" is light $10,000 in second stanza three spots.

Estimates for This Week

Los Angeles, Chinese, (FWC) (2,097; 2,048; 80-$1.50) — "Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th). Sock $60,000. Last week, with Ritz, "Thief" (UA), (9 days L. A.-8 days Chinese), good $28,000.

Loew's State, Egyptian (UATC) (2,404; 1,538; 70-$1.10)—"Apache War Smoke" (M-G) and "Hour of 13" (M-G). Minor $18,000. Last week, "Because You're Mine" (M-G) (3d wk), $11,100.

Hollywood, Wiltern, Palace (WB-Metropolitan) (2,756; 2,344; 1,230; 70-$1.10—"Battle Zone" (Mono) and "Rose Bowl Story" (Mono). Good $20,000. Last week, without Palace, "Beware My Lovely" (RKO) and "Army Bound" (Mono), $10,500.

Hillstreet, Pantages (RKO) (2,752; 2,812; 60-$1.10)—"Horizons West" (U) and "Island Rescue" (U). Dull $16,000. Last week, with El Rey, "Back At Front" (U) and "Bonzo To College" (U), $18,000.

Los Angeles, Hollywood Paramounts (UPT-F&M) (3,200; 1,430; 90-$1.50)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Neat $30,000. Last week, $40,000.

Beverly Hills, Downtown (WB) (1,612; 1,757; 80-$1.50) — "Miracle Fatima" (WB) (4th wk). Mild $8,500. Last week, $10,900.

United Artists, Wilshire (UATC-FWC) (2,100; 2,296; 80-$1.50)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (4th wk). Okay $13,000. Last week, $14,600.

Canon (ABC) (533; $1.20)—"Full House" (20th) (6th wk). Good $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

Rialto, Hawaii (Metropolitan-G&C) (840; 1,106; 70-$1.10)—"Monkey Business" (20th) (4th wk). Small $5,000. Last week, $6,000.

Globe, Iris, Ritz, (FWC) (782; 814; 1,370; 70-$1.10)—"Thief" (UA) and "Arctic Flight" (Mono) (m.o. Globe, Iris, 2d wk Ritz). Okay $11,000. Last week, Globe, "Untamed Women" (UA) and "Lugosi Brooklyn Gorilla" (Indie) (2d wk-9 days), $3,600. Iris second-run, Ritz with other unit.

Orpheum, Vogue, Loyola (Metropolitan-FWC) (2,213; 885; 1,248; 70-$1.10)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par) (2d wk), with "Army Bound" (Mono) at Orpheum, single bill at Vogue, "Son Ali Baba" (U) (2d run) at Loyola). Mild $10,000. Last week, $15,200.

New Films Lift L'ville; 'Front' Hot 11G, 'Rifle' Hefty 8½G, 'Mine' 9G

Louisville, Oct. 28.

Biz continues at a fairly even keel at the four firstruns here. "Because You're Mine" at State looks okay but leader this round is "Back at Front" at Rialto. Latter shapes fine. Weekend pulled plenty of Ft. Knox soldiers to help it at wickets. "Springfield Rifle" at the Mary Anderson looms hefty.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 54-75) —"Duel Silver Creek" (U) and "Lost In Alaska" (U) (2d wk). Still going strong at $3,500 after last week's oke $4,000.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,200; 54-75)—"Springfield Rifle" (WB). Catching hefty $8,500. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk), nice $10,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 54-75)—"Back At Front" (U) and "Yankee Buccaneer" (U). Fine $11,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep), $12,000.

State (Loew's) (3,000; 54-75)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and "My Man and I" (M-G). Okay $9,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk), trim $11,000.

'Front' OK $8,000 In Lagging Prov.

Providence, Oct. 28.

Trade is down again this week, with Loew's State still standout with "Ivanhoe," big on second round. Best newcomer is "Back at Front," okay at Majestic.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; 44-65) — "Something for Birds" (20th) and "African Treasure" (Lip). Dull $5,000. Last week, "Lusty Men" (RKO) and "Scotland Yard Inspector" (Lip), nice $9,000.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 44-65) — "Back At Front" (U) and "Wife's Best Friend" (20th). Oke $8,000. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk), nifty $10,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 74-$1.10)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (2d wk). Neat $11,000. First week, sock $24,000.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 44-65) —"Battle Zone" (Mono) and "Rose Bowl Story" (Mono). Opened Monday (27). Last week, "Caribbean" (Par) and "Actors and Sin" (UA), slow $6,000.

'Thief' Wow $9,500, D. C.; 'Fatima' Fancy $25,000, 'Snows' Great 21G, 2d

Washington, Oct. 28.

A pair of sock newcomers and at least one sturdy holdover are giving main stem an air of activity this session. "Miracle of Fatima" at the Warner, "The Thief" at the Playhouse, and second week of "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at Loew's Columbia, have brought out lines to midtown sector. General tenor of biz is firm.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 55-95)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G), plus vaude, (2d wk). Firm $17,000 after fine $24,000 last week.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 74-$1.20)—"Snows Kiliminjaro" (20th) (2d wk). Hot $21,000, after terrific $26,000. Last week, over hopes. Holds again.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 50-85)—"Casque d'Or" (Indie) (2d wk). Steady $3,000 after $4,500 last week.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 50-85)—"Yankee Buccaneer" (U). Pleasing $9,000. Last week, "Back at Front" (U), ditto.

Metropolitan (Warner) (1,200; 50-80)—"Hellgate" (Lip). Okay $5,500. Last week, "Lost in Alaska" (U), same.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 50-80)—"Dreamboat" (20th). Fine $17,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (5th wk), steady $17,000, at tilted scale in final 9 days.

Playhouse (Lopert) (485; 50-$1) —"The Thief" (UA). Sock $9,500,

'You're Mine' Lofty 15G, Buff.; 'Snows' Hot 20G

Buffalo, Oct. 28.

Big news here this round is the smash biz being done by "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the Center. "Because You're Mine" also is bright at the Buffalo. Elsewhere takings are mild to slim.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Loew's) (3,000; 40-70)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and "Hour of 13" (M-G). Bright $15,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk) (6 days), $7,500.

Paramount (Par) (3,000; 40-70)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB) and "Fargo" (Mono) (2d wk). Oke $6,000 in four days. Last week, fine $13,000.

Center (Par) (2,100; 70-$1.20)—"Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th). Lofty $20,000 or better. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk-6 days), $6,500.

Lafayette (Basil) (3,000; 40-70)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Secret People" (Lip). Sluggish $6,000 in five days. Last week, "Capt. Pirate" (Col) and "Voodoo Tiger" (Col), $7,200.

Century (20th Cent.) (3,000; 40-70)—"Hellgate" (Lip) and "Scotland Yard Inspector" (Indie). Dull $8,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) and "Feudin' Fools" (Mono) (2d wk), sturdy $10,000.

H.O.s Dull Philly; 'Front' Fair 10G

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.

The strong array of holdovers and upped-scale pix is keeping trade down currently although weekend biz helped save some spots. Only three new bills with "Back at Front" probably best of trio, with fair session at Goldman. "Toughest Man in Arizona" looms so-so at Stanton. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" continues smash at Midtown while "Because You're Mine" still is great at small Arcadia, both in second stanzas. "Thief" is rated fast for third round at Aldine.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-99) — "Thief" (UA) (3d wk). Fast $5,500. Last week, $6,000.

Arcadia (S&S) (625; 85-$1.20)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk). Great $13,000. Last week, $15,000.

Boyd (WB) (2,360; 80-$1.30) — "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (5th wk). Mild $7,500. Last week, oke $9,000.

Earle (WB) (2,700; 50-99)—"Cat People" (RKO) and "Hunchback Notre Dame" (RKO) (reissues). Weak $6,500. Last week, "Cry Beloved Country" (UA), $5,000.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 90-$1.50) — "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Strong $27,000. Last week, $35,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Back at Front" (U). Fair $10,000. Last week, "Big Sky," (RKO) (2d wk), $10,000.

Mastbaum (WB) (4,360; 85-$1.20) —"Quiet Man" (Rep) (4d wk). Good $12,000. Last week, $17,000.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,000; 75-$1.30) — "Snows of Kilimanjaro (20th) (2d wk). Smash $24,000. Last week, $30,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 50-99)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th) (2d wk). Dull $7,000. Last week, $10,000.

Stanley (WB) (2,900; 50-99) — "Lusty Men" (RKO) (2d wk). Thin $8,500. Last week, $11,000.

Stanton (WB) (1,473; 50-99) — "Toughest Man in Arizona" (Rep) and "Without Warning" (UA). So-so $7,500. Last week, "Yankee Buccaneer" (U), $8,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 85-$1.20) — "Night Without Sleep" (20th). Fair $4,500. Last week, "Something for Birds" (20th), $3,700.

'Snows' Smash $25,000 in Dull Det.; 'Front' Okay 10G, 'Ivanhoe' 12G 3d

Detroit, Oct. 28.

Biz is mostly mild to slow this week with exception of "Snows of Killmanjaro" which is shaping smash at United Artists. "Ivanhoe" is still strong in third week at Adams. "Monkey Business" is mild at Michigan while "Hellgate" is slow at the Fox. "Back at the Front" is about okay at the Palms.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox-Detroit) (5,000; 70-95) — "Hellgate" (Lip) and "Capt. Black Jack" (Lip). Slow $18,000. Last week, "Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Night Without Sleep" (20th), same.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 70-95)—"Monkey Business" (20th) and "Fargo" (Rep). Mild $13,000. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Arctic Flight" (Mono), $14,000.

Palms (UD) (2,961; 70-95)—"Back at Front" (U) and "Oriental Evil" (Indie). Oke $10,000 or over. Last week, "Son of Ali Baba" (U) and "Lost in Arctic" (U), ditto.

Madison (UD) (1,900; 70-95) — "Full House" (20th). Good $7,000. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (4th wk), $8,000.

United Artists (UA) (1,900; 95-$1.25) — "Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th). Smash $25,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) (4th wk), $6,800.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 95-$1.25) —"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Still strong at $12,000. Last week, $19,000.

Key City Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

This Week ......$2,502,500

(Based on 25 cities, 219 theatres, chiefly first runs, including N. Y.)

Total Gross Same Week

Last Year .......$2,445,500

(Based on 24 cities, and 213 theatres.)

'Mine' Paces Pitt, Rousing $15,500

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.

Penn looks as if it has another winner in "Because You're Mine," following four-week run of "Ivanhoe." Mario Lanza starrer is a cinch to hold. "Quiet Man" is winding up month's stay at Fulton with strong take, and both "Tomorrow Is Too Late" at Warner and "Lusty Men" at Stanley are on the upbeat. Only one currently running out of the money is "Something for Birds" at Harris.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 50-85)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (4th wk). Could still stay on but comes out tonight (Tues) because of closed commitment for "Snows Kilmanjaro" (20th) to open tomorrow (Wed). Latter already had been delayed a week. In fourth looks fine $7,500 on top of nearly $9,000 last week to give picture nearly $40,000 for run.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 50-85)—"Something for Birds" (20th). Sluggish $5,000 or under. Last week, "Son of Ali Baba" (U) $7,000.

Penn (Loew's) (3,300; 50-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Very good $15,500. May hold. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk-9 days), $12,500. It's been moved to the smaller Ritz.

Squirrel Hill (WB) (900; 50-85)—"Cry Beloved Country" (UA) (2d wk). Not much of drop over preceding stanza; trim $1,800. Last week, $2,100.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 50-85)—"Lusty Men" (RKO). Good $10,000, and in these times not bad at all here. Last week, "Springfield Rifle" (WB), $12,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 50-85)—"Tomorrow Too Late" (Indie). First Italian-language pic ever to play this downtown house; sock $7,500. Last week, "One Minute To Zero" (RKO) (2d wk), $5,500.

'MINE' STOUT $13,000, K.C.; 'RIFLE' FAST 11G

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

Film row is mixture of new bills and holdovers with outlook sturdy in most situations. "Because You're Mine" is sturdy at Midland. Paramount's "Springfield Rifle" is hefty. "Miracle of Fatima" in the Missouri and "Snows of Kilimanjaro" in the Orpheum, both holdovers at advanced admissions, still are solid.

Estimates for This Week

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 50-75)—"The Well" (Indie). Strong $2,800. Last week, "Les Miserables" (20th) (3d wk), $1,500.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 50-75) —"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and "Holiday for Sinners" (M-G). Sturdy $13,000. Returns house to regular prices and dual policy. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk), $8,500 at $1.10 top.

Missouri (RKO) (2,650; 75-$1)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk). Staying at $7,000. Last week, sock $12,000.

Orpheum (Fox Midwest) (1,912; 75-$1) — "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th) (2d wk). Okay $12,000. Holds a third. Last week, nifty $16,000.

Paramount (Tri-States) (1,900; 50-75)—"Springfield Rifle" (WB) Strong $11,000, and will get extra time. Last week, "Somebody Loves Me" (Par), $12,000 in 10 days.

Tower, Uptown, Fairway, Granada (Fox Midwest) (2,100; 2,043; 700; 1,217; 50-75)—"Bonzo To College" (U) and "The Raiders" (U). Fair $11,000. Last week, "Back at Front" (U) and "Loan Shark" (Lip), same.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 50-85)—"High Treason" (Indie). Sock $3,000, and will hold. Last week, "Passport Pimlico" (Indie) and "Sleeping Car To Trieste" (Indie), $1,400.

Mpls. Climbs; 'Snows' Great $14,000, 'Men' NSH $8,000, 'Mine' Boffo 8G

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

Powerful array of newcomers is putting some life into limping boxoffice here. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" tops lineup and bids fair to set record $12,000 at Lyric. Others doing well are "Lusty Men," "Because You're Mine" and "The Stranger in Between." Too much strong opposition makes going tough for "The Thief" at the State. "Something for the Birds," sold on a money-back basis, looms fairly good at Radio City. There's only one holdover, smallest number in some time, "Ivanhoe" being still strong in third roadshow week at Century.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Par) (1,600; 76-$1)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Still plenty strong at $12,000. Last week, $13,000.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 50-76)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Boff $8,000. Last week, "Hellgate" (Lip), $4,000.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 76-$1)—"Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th). Great $14,000 for roadshow, upped scale date. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) (5th wk), $3,000.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-76)—"Something for Birds" (20th). Advertising your money back if you don't like it, but they do. Fairly good $8,000. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th), $10,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 40-76)—"Lusty Men" (RKO). Barely okay $8,000. Last week, "Back at Front" (U), $6,500.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 40-76)—"Whistle Stop" (Indie) and "Pitfall" (Indie) (reissues). Fair $4,000. Last week, "Crimson Pirate" (WB) (2d wk), $4,500.

State (Par) (2,300; 50-76)—"The Thief" (UA). Well-regarded, but this isn't catching on too well, probably because of tough opposition. Mild $6,000. Last week, "Hurricane Smith" (Par), $4,500.

World (Mann) (400; 85-$1.20)—"Stranger in Between" (U). Highly praised and in right spot to get somewhere. Good $3,000. Last week, "Young and Damned" (Indie), $3,500.

'You're Mine' Solid 35G, Hub; 'Somebody' $16,500, 'Caribbean' Bangup 16G

Boston, Oct. 28.

Although there is nothing spectacular here this stanza, biz shapes fairly strong. "Somebody Loves Me" at Met looks nice while "Lusty Men" in second round at Memorial is holding nicely. "Caribbean" at Paramount and Fenway looks fairly good. "Because You're Mine" opened strong at State and Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,500; 74-$1.20)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (5th wk). Still oke at $8,000 after $9,500 last week.

Boston (RKO) (3,000; 40-85)—"Untamed Women" (UA) and "The Ring" (UA). Not bad $10,500. Last week, "Back at Front" (U) and "Fargo" (Mono), $10,000.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-80)—"Brandy for Parson" (Indie). Opened Sunday (26). Last week, "Stranger in Between" (U) (4th wk). Okay $3,200.

Fenway (NET) (1,373; 40-85)—"Caribbean" (Par) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep). Fairish $4,000. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Born to Saddle" (Indie), same.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 40-85)—"Lusty Men" (RKO), "You for Me" (M-G), (2d wk). Still in chips at $15,000 following big $23,000 for first.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 40-85)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par) and "Toughest Man in Arizona" (Rep). Fairly good $16,500. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Park Row" (UA) (2d wk)), $10,000.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 50-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and "Apache War Smoke" (M-G). Sturdy $20,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk), $13,500.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 40-85) —"Caribbean" (Par) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep). Good $12,000. Last week, "Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "Born to Saddle" (Indie), $12,500.

State (Loew) (3,500; 50-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and "Apache War Smoke" (M-G). Oke $15,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (4th wk-9 days), $9,200.

Chi Blames Offish Biz on Election; 'Fatima' Strong $20,000, 'Rifle' 14G, 'Gaucho' 10G, 2d, 'Ivanhoe' 35G, 3d

Chicago, Oct. 28.

Pre-election doldrums plus the return of pleasant weather has hit the night biz at Loop houses. Not much new product but "Miracle of Fatima" with upped scale at the United Artists looks stout $20,000. "Springfield Rifle" and "Apache War Smoke" at Roosevelt shapes strong $14,000.

Second week bills include "Because You're Mine" at the Palace where a good session is in sight. "Way of Gaucho" is slim at the State-Lake for second round. Also lean is "Crimson Pirate" and stageshow at the Chicago. "Ivanhoe" at Oriental is down in third frame but still solid. "Stranger in Between" at Surf looms neat in third week.

Estimates for This Week

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 98)—"Crimson Pirate" (WB), plus vaude (2d wk). Weak $25,000. Last week, $38,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 55-98)—"Allegheny Uprising" (RKO) and "Annie Oakley" (RKO) (reissues). Just okay $8,000. Last week, "Back Up Front" (U), $7,000.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 98-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Slipped to $35,000. Last week, big $48,000.

Palace (Eitel) (2,500; 98)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk). Off to $20,000. Last week, great $28,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 55-98)—"Springfield Rifile" (WB) and "Apache War Smoke" (M-G). Strong $14,000. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par) and "Woman of North Country" (Rep) (2d wk), $8,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 55-98)—"Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Wait 'Til Sun Shines Nellie" (20th) (2d wk). Slim $10,000. Last week, $17,000.

Surf (H&E Balaban) (685; 98)—"Stranger in Between" (U) (3d wk). Okay $4,000. Last week, $5,000.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 98-$1.25)—"Miracle Fatima" (WB). Strong $20,000. Last week, "Golden Hawk" (Col) and "Captain Black Jack" (Indie), $9,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,073; 98)—"Lusty Men" (RKO) (2d wk). Is holding at nice $15,000. Last week, solid $19,000.

World (Indie) (586; 98)—"Sky is Red" (Indie) (2d wk). Fairish $3,000. Last week, $3,500.

Cleve. Limping; 'For You' Hep $12,000, 'Birds' NG 7G, 'Snows' Big 14G, 3d

Cleveland, Oct. 28.

Heaviest moneymaker here this week for new pix is "Just For You," heading for trim session at State. Allen teamed "Hellgate" and "Wife's Best Friend" for good total. "Snows of Kilimanjaro," phenomenal on third lap, now stands as Hipp's ace grosser since house was taken over by Telemanagement interests. "Quiet Man" at Ohio is doing excellent stayover biz.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (Warner) (3,000; 55-85)—"Hellgate" (Lip) and "Wife's Best Friend" (20th). Good $9,000. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th), $10,000.

Hipp (Telemanagement) (3,700; 75-$1.10) — "Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th), (3d wk). Red-hot on titled-price run, catching stout $14,000 after $20,000 last week.

Lower Mall (Community) (585; 55-85)—"Tales of Hoffmann" (UA) (2d wk). Oke $2,500, following $3,700 last week.

Ohio (Loew's) (1,300; 55-85)—"Quiet Man" (Rep) (m.o.) (5th wk). Sweet $6,000 after $6,500 last week.

Palace (RKO) (3,300; 55-85)—"Something For Birds" (20th). Drab $7,000. Last week, "Canyon Passage" (U) and "Frontier Gal" (U) (reissues), $4,500 in 4 days.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-85)—"Just For You" (Par). Trim $12,000. Last week, "Devil Makes Three" (M-G), same.

Stillman (Loew's) (2,700; 55-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (m.o.). Held at $5,000 on third downtown folio after $7,000 last week.

Tower (Telemanagement) (500; 55-85)—"Thief of Damascus" (Col) and "Purple Heart Diary" (Col). Nice $2,500. Last week, "Jet Job" (Mono) and "Hold That Line" (Mono), $3,000.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i. e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Rifle' Brisk 16G In Mild Frisco

San Francisco, Oct. 28.

Best newcomer here this stanza is "Springfield Rifle," sturdy at the Golden Gate. Biz otherwise is spotty, with "Snows of Kilimanjaro" shaping solid in second Fox round. "Golden Hawk" looks mild at Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 65-95)—"Springfield Rifle" (WB). Sturdy $16,000. Last week, "Sudden Fear" (RKO) (2d wk), $11,000.

Fox (FWC) (4,651; $1.20-$1.50)—"Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th) (2d wk). Solid $24,000. Last week, $45,000.

Warfield (Loew's) (2,656; 65-95)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Only fair $16,000. Last week, "Devil Makes Three" (M-G), $9,500.

Paramount (Par) (2,646; 65-95)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par) (2d wk). Way off to $8,500. Last week, fine $17,000.

St. Francis (Par) (1,400; 65-95)—"Les Miserables" (20th). Good $11,000. Last week, "Miracle Fatima" (WB) (2d wk), $7,000 at $1.20-$1.50 scale.

Orpheum (No. Coast) (2,448; 65-95)—"Golden Hawk" (Col) and "Strange Fascination" (Col). Mild $9,000. Last week, "At Front" (U) and "Stranger in Between" (U), $10,500.

United Artists (No. Coast) (1,207; 65-95)—"Thief" (UA) (2d wk). Down to $5,400. Last week, nice $11,000.

Stagedoor (A-R) (370; 85-$1)—"Never Take No For Answer" (Indie). Good $3,000. Last week, "Actors And Sin" (UA) and "Golden Salamander" (UA), $2,500.

Clay (Rosener) (400; 65-85)—"Ivory Hunter" (U) and "Man In White Suit" (U) (2d wk). Held at $2,500. Last week, big $3,100.

'Snows' Smooth $17,000, Balto; 'Mine' Sock 15G

Baltimore, Oct. 28.

The ballyhoo drums beat for two big ones here this week with "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the New and "Because You're Mine" at the Town attracting way over normal trade. Response for the Stanley's "Springfield Rifle" is only fair.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 35-$1.20)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk). Some pace at indicated $10,000 after all right second sesh to $12,700.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,460; 20-70)—"Horizons West" (U). Slow $5,000. Last week, "Son Ali Baba" (U) $5,900.

Little (Rappaport) (310; 25-90)—"Full House" (20th) (2d wk). Nice $3,000 pace after big $4,200 preem.

Mayfair (Hicks) (980; 20-70) — "Quiet Man" (Rep) (6th wk). Still strong at $6,000 after fine $8,000 for fifth.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 35-$1.20)—"Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th). Great $17,000. Last week, "Way Gaucho" (20th) (2d wk), $4,400.

Playhouse (Schwaber) (430; 50-90)—"Stranger in Between" (U) (2d wk). Fancy $3,500 after $4,400 starter.

Stanley (WB) (3,280; 25-75) — "Springfield Rifle" (WB). Fair $9,000. Last week, "Hurricane Smith" (Par), $4,900.

Town (Rappaport) (1,500; 35-70)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk). Starting second round tomorrow (Wed.) after sock $15,000 opener.

'Snows' Hotsy $17,000, Port.; 'Front' Oke 9G

Portland, Ore., Oct. 28.

Two films are playing at upped prices this round, and both are big. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" is torrid at Orpheum while "Ivanhoe" on third week at Liberty still is solid. "Quiet Man" continued doing well on moveover for third week downtown.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; 65-90)—"Back At Front" (U) and "Old Oklahoma Plains" (Rep). Okay $9,000 or close. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) (2d wk, $9,000.

Liberty (Hamrick) (1,850; 90-$1.25)—"Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk), advanced prices. Lofty $13,000. Last week, $18,000.

Oriental (Evergreen) (2,000; 65-90)—"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "The Brigand" (Col), day-date with Paramount. So-so $4,000 or less. Last week, "Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Last Train Bombay" (Col), $3,700.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,750; 90-$1.25) — "Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th), advanced prices. Hotsy $17,000 or near. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par) and "Feudin' Fools" (Mono), $7,200.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,400; 65-90)—"Wife's Best Friend" (20th) and "The Brigand" (Col), also Oriental. Modest $7,000 or under. Last week, "Way of Gaucho" (20th) and "Last Train Bombay" (Col), $7,000.

'Snows' Solid $20,000, Indpls

Indianapolis, Oct. 28.

Politics, football and ideal outdoor weather are cutting into first-run grosses here this stanza. Biz, while good at most spots, is less than expected for what is showing. "Snows of Kilimanjaro" is top money film with solid take at Circle. "Somebody Loves Me," at Indiana, also is nice.

Estimates for This Week)

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,800; 60-$1.00) — "Snows Kilimanjaro" (20th). Solid $20,000. Last week, "Full House" (20th) and "Wife's Best Friend" (20th), modest $9,000 at 50-76c scale.

Indiana (C-D) (3,200; 50-76)—"Somebody Loves Me" (Par). Nice $11,000. Last week, "Big Sky" (RKO) and "Tropical Heat Wave" (Rep), $10,000.

Keith's (C-D) (1,300; 50-76)—"Les Miserables" (20th). Dull $4,000. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (2d wk), fair $4,000 at 50-$1 scale after trim $7,500 opening stanza.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,427; 50-76)—"Washington Story" (M-G) and "My Man and I" (M-G). Tepid $6,-00 in 5 days. Last week, "Because You're Mine" (M-G), $12,000.

Lyric (C-D) (1,600; 50-76) — "Strange World" (UA) and "High Sierra" (WB) (reissue). Moderate $5,000. Last week, "Quiet Man" (Rep) (m.o.), slick $6,000.

'Story' OK $10,500 In Denver; 'Somebody' 10G

Denver, Oct. 28.

Biz generally is way off this stanza, only some of holdovers doing okay. "Somebody Loves Me" is rated fairish enough to hold a second at Denham. Biggest coin total is going to "Rainbow Round Shoulder" playing in three houses but it is fair at all three. "Washington Story" is doing okay at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (1,400; 50-85) — "Rainbow Round Shoulders" (Col) and "Brigand" (Indie), day-date with Tabor, Webber. Fair $6,000. Last week, "Hellgate" (Lip) and "Jungle" (Lip), $8,000.

Broadway (Wolfberg) (1,200; 50-85)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk). Good $9,000. Stays again. Last week, $11,500.

Denham (Cockrill) (1,750; 50-85) — "Somebody Loves Me" (Par). Fair $10,000 but holds on. Last week, "Caribbean" (Par), $7,000.

Denver (Fox) (2,525; 50-85) — "Back at Front" (U) and "Cry Beloved Country" (U), day-date with Esquire. Only $9,000 in 6 days, and then comes out. Last week, "Monkey Business" (20th) and "Rains Came" (20th) (reissue), $19,000.

Esquire (Fox) (742; 50-85) — "Back at Front" (U) and "Cry

Electioneering Nips B'way Grosses; 'Limelight' Sock 45½G in 2 Spots, 'Rifle'-Ellington 67G, 'Lusty Men' 16½G

Interest in the Presidential election in cutting into the boxoffice at Broadway first-runs this stanza, this coupled with a surplus of extended-runs. Four new bills are failing to provide much of a hypo. Clear, brisk weather was deemed not particularly helpful to trade.

Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" is rated big playing day-date at the Astor and Trans-Lux 60th St. It is soaring to smash $12,500 or close at the latter, a 453-seat arty house, which is close to capacity. Pic is heading for big $33,000 at the Astor on its first session also ending today (Wed.) Astor biz is the best it has had on an opening round in some time.

"Springfield Rifle" with Duke Ellington band, Howell & Bowser, The Ravens onstage, wound up its initial week at the Paramount with a good $67,000.

"Lusty Men" is heading for modest $16,500 or under in opening week at the Criterion, which is very disappointing. "Assignment Paris" with the usual eight acts of vaudeville shapes up to good $20,000 at the Palace.

"Because You're Mine" with stageshow is winding up a nice five-week run at the Music Hall with an okay $112,000 in final (5th) round. "The Happy Time" opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

"This Is Cinerama" continues terrific at the Broadway with capacity $44,500 for fourth stanza ended last night (Tues.). "The Thief," with Johnny Johnston, Jerry Colonna, iceshow topping stage layout, finished with okay $68,000 for second week at the Roxy, and stays six-day third frame.

"Four Poster" perked up a bit in second week to land $16,800 or better than the initial stanza at the Victoria. Pic held at nice $10,200 in first holdover week at the Sutton, where playing day-date.

"Snows of Kilimanjaro" still is solid with $33,500 in prospect for sixth round at the Rivoli. "Just For You" completed its third week at the Capitol with fairish $17,000. It stays six days of fourth, with "Prisoner of Zenda" coming in Nov. 4.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 70-$1.50)—"Limelight" (UA). Initial week ending today (Wed.) is heading for big $33,000, strongest here in months. Holding. Playing day-date with Trans-Lux 60th Street. Last week, "Miracle of Fatima" (WB) (9th wk) down to $8,000 but finishing unusually profitable run.

Broadway (Cinerama) (1,250; 90-$2.80)—"This Is Cinerama" (Indie) (5th wk). Fourth round ended last night (Tues.) continued at capacity $44,500, same as third week, both for 17 shows. Continues indef.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1.50)—"Just For You" (Par) (4th-final wk). Third stanza ended last night (Tues.) was down sharply to $17,000. Second wek was solid $28,000. "Prisoner of Zenda" (M-G) opens Nov. 4.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 50-$1.80)—"Lusty Men" (RKO). Very disappointing with modest $16 500 or less opening week. Holds. In ahead, "One Minute To Zero" (RKO) (5th wk), mild $6,500.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80)—"The Promoter" (U). Opened yesterday (Tues.). Last week, "Stranger in Between" (U) (10th wk), okay $2,900 in 6 days after $3,500 for ninth session, but very nice longrun.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 50-$1.50)—"Lure of Wilderness" (20th) (4th-final wk). Off to $5,000 or under in final stanza after $6,200 for third round. "Cairo Road" (Indie) opens Friday (31).

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 50-$1.50)—"World in Arms" (U) (3d wk). Continues okay with $11,000 after nice $16,500 for second round. "Thief of Venice" (20th) due in next.

Normandie (Normandie Theatres) (592; 95-$1.80)—"Magic Box" (Mayer) (6th wk). Fifth frame ended Monday (27) held at $6,000 after $6,700 for fourth week.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 75-$1.40)—"Assignment Paris" (Col) and eight acts of vaude. Reading for good $20,000 or close. Last week, "Golden Hawk" (Col) with vaude, nice $21,000.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 80-$1.80)—"Springfield Rifle" (WB) plus Duke Ellington orch, Howell & Bowser, The Ravens onstage (2d-final wk). Initial round ended last night (Tues.) hit good $67,000. In ahead, "Son of Paleface" (Par) with Louis Prima orch, Five De Marco Sisters, Los Gatos onstage (3d wk), nice $56,000.

Park Ave. (Reade) (583; 90-$1.50)—"Mons. Fabre" (Indie) (8th-final wk). Seventh week ended Saturday (25) was $3,400 after oke $3,800 for sixth week. Holds only six days in eighth week since house closes as theatre operation Friday (31) for two years.

Paris (Indie) (568; $1.25-$1.80)—"Thirst of Men" (Indie). Opened Monday (27). Last week, "Savage Triangle" (Indie) (4th wk), was $4,000 after okay $5,500 for third session.

Rivoli (UAT) (2,092; 70-$2) — "Snows of Kilimanjaro" (20th) (6th wk). Continues solid with $33,500 after sock $40,500, over hopes, for fifth week. Stays on indef.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 80-$2.40)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G) and stageshow (5th-final wk). Winding up five-week run with $112,000. Fourth week was good $125,000. "The Happy Time" (Col) opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$2.20)—"The Thief" (UA) with Johnny Johnston, Jerry Colonna, iceshow onstage (3d-final wk). Second frame ended last night (Tues.) was okay $68,000 or near after solid $84,000 for initial week. "Way of Gaucho" (20th), with Frances Langford, Blackburn Twins & Marion Colby heading stage bill, opens Nov. 4, with "Thief" holding six days of third week in order to open new bill Election Day.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-$1.25)—"Everything I Have Is Yours" (M-G). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Merry Widow" (M-G) (5th wk), finished up with $9,000 after okay $10,500 for fourth stanza, with previous much higher rounds spelling a highly profitable run.

Sutton (R&B) (561; 90-$1.50)—"Four Poster" (Col) (3d wk). Initial holdover frame ended last night (Tues.) held at nice $10,200. First week was okay $11,300. Showing in second round indicates a substantial run.

Trans-Lux 60th St. (T-L) (453; 90-$1.50)—"Limelight" (UA). First session ending today (Wed.) is soaring to smash $12,500, which is near capacity for this small spot. House is sold out at nights for about two weeks, with matinees running strong at about 65% of capacity. Holds, of course. In ahead, "Lady Vanishes" (UA) (reissue) (12th wk), $2,800 to complete a fine longrun.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; 90-$1.50)—"Full House" (20th) (2d wk). First holdover week ending today (Wed.) shapes up very big at $11,500 after record $14,800 for first week. Stays indef.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,060; 70-$1.80)—"Four Poster" (3d wk). Second session ended last night (Tues.) perked up to good $16,800 after light $15,000 for first week. "Breaking Through" (UA) due in Nov. 6.

'You're Mine' Robust 14G, Cincy; 'Fatima' Big 12½G, 'Lusty Men' Good $12,000

Cincinnati, Oct. 28.

Three hefty new bills this week are keeping downtown trade in the harvest groove. "Because You're Mine," sweet music at Palace, stacks up as standout. "Miracle of Fatima" is big at Capitol while "Lusty Men" is good for the Albee.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 55-75)—"Lusty Men" (RKO). Good $12,000. Last week, "Ivanhoe" (M-G) (3d wk), at 76-$1.10 scale, $11,000.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 55-75)—"Miracle of Fatima" (WB). Big $12,500. Last week, "Back at Front" (U), $8,500.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"The Ring" (UA) and "Confidence Girl" (Indie). Moderate $7,000. Last week, "Beware, My Lovely" (RKO) and "Woman of North Country" (Indie), split with "Comanche Territory" (U) and "Apache Drums" (U) (reissues), same.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"Springfield Rifle" (WB) (m.o.). Fairish $5,000. Last week, "Black Swan" (20th) and "Shores of Tripoli" (Par) (reissues), $4,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-75)—"Because You're Mine" (M-G). Robust $14,000. Last week, "Springfield Rifle" (WB), ditto.

Closed Brit. Studios Get New Lease On Life Via U.S. Telepix Production

London, Oct. 21.

A new lease on life for shuttered British studios is following the development of U. S. telepix production in London. One plant, which has been dark for some time, reopened recently, another will swing into activity in 1953, and negotiations are proceeding for reopening a third.

The first studio to turn on the electricity was the British National outfit at Elstree, which has been taken over on a long-term lease by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. His outfit began production on an immediate program of 39 features for National Broadcasting Co. The first group will keep the studios busy for a minimum of six months, and renewal contracts are expected to lead to a policy of continuous filming.

The next plant to be opened probably will be the former J. Arthur Rank experimental lot at Highbury, North London. This outfit is being taken over by Norman Collins, former British Broadcasting Corp.-TV boss, for his recently formed High Definition Films, which is using the television electronic technique in production. Collins returned last week from a trip to Canada, where he set a deal for telepix productions with the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. New equipment will be installed before the company gets into full scale activity.

The third reopening probably will result from negotiations initiated by the Danziger Brothers, who are lining up a program of 39 half-hour "Crime Club" films. Scripts for these are now being readied and lensing will start as soon as studio space has been arranged.

Several other projected telepix ventures are being delayed because of the tightness of available studios. The recent shuttering of so many lots has put a premium on available stages, and many of those that are in circulation are considered too expensive for the modest requirements of a telepix program.

BRIT. STUDIO WORKER WAGE PARLEY FAILS

London, Oct. 21.

After protracted negotiations lasting more than a year, efforts to draft a comprehensive wages and conditions pact to embrace all studio personnel have collapsed. At a meeting last Friday (17) between British film producers and the production unions it was agreed to record their failure to agree. Two years ago machinery was set up within the industry to plan this comprehensive studio pact and thus avoid drawn-out parleys with each of the constituent unions. The Joint Industrial Council, with reps from the British Film Producers Assn. and the film labor organizations, has been hammering away at the problem ever since.

Last week's meeting failed to reconcile the opposing viewpoints. The next step wil be delayed until all parties concerned consult their respective leaders.

Because of the delay in negotiating the new pact, producers were forced earlier in the year into separate negotiations with some unions for cost-of-living boosts. These were agreed speedily with the Electrical Trades Union asd the National Assn. of Theatrical and Kine Employees. After a hassle the Assn. of Cine Technicians agreed to similar terms.

Praesens' 'Heidi' Winds After Swiss Shooting

Zurich, Oct. 21.

Praesens Film, Zurich, has just completed its first feature production in over a year (last was "Four in a Jeep"). It is a new filmization of Johanna Spyri's novel "Heidi," done in Hollywood in 1937 as a Shirley Temple starrer. Italian Luigi Comencini directed from a screenplay by Richard Schweizer.

The cast is composed of Swiss and German talent. Little Elsbeth Sigmund, a new Swiss discovery, has the title role. German screen and stage favorites Theo Lingen and Willy Birgel also have important parts. Outdoor shootings were done on location in the Swiss mountain area of the Grisons.

Int'l Union of Exhibs Sees Alliance With TV

Paris, Oct. 21.

The International Union of Film exhibitors composed of France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Israel, Switzerland and Spain has outlined its program on TV. Secretary Andre Trichet, of the National Federation of French Cinemas, explained the stand taken during recent session in Venice. Aim of the organization is the safeguarding of the exhibitor's economic interests.

Main point on the agenda was the question of TV. The union felt that video was not a danger but a means of progress and there had to be an alliance between film and TV rather than enmity. Trichet outlined a possible future program for the use of film houses in the television setup. He felt TV could be divided into two sections, one destined only for the home and another exclusively for large screen theatre television.

Indie Brit. Film Prods. Leery of How Eady Coin Is Diverted to Shorts

London, Oct. 21.

Independent British fiim producers who look to the extra coin they get from the Eady fund as their means of survival are becoming apprehensive at the way in which a substantial amount of revenue is being diverted from feature production to shorts. At least $700,000 was received by shorts film makers last year as their cut of the fund.

While the producers' share of the Eady revenue is calculated on the distributor gross, there is a special procedure for estimating the Eady payments for shorts. In view of the fact that income normally earned by shorts is restricted, the fund directors agreed that the gross should be multiplied two and a half times before calculating the Eady share.

With this special incentive as an encouragement, there is a growing tendency among some major distribs to use British-made shorts varying in length from one to three reels in support of a top feature which is too long to carry a supporting film.

By dispensing with flat rentals (usual for a second feature) and by charging around 10% for these shorts, the distribs are garnering substantial coin from the fund. It has been estimated that a short booked on this basis could earn as much as $50,000 in film hire and a like amount from the Eady fund.

Although such bookings cannot legally be interfered with, several prominent indie producers fear that if the practice is seriously extended it would make deep inroads into the Eady fund, and thus absorb much of the capital which was raised primarily to aid feature film production.

London Legit Bits

London, Oct. 21.

Norman Payne and Jock Jacobsen (MCA) have closed deal with Emile Littler and Tom Arnold for Jane Morgan to play femme lead in the London Casino Coronation Revue opposite Vic Oliver. Show follows L. & A. pantomime, "Jack and Jill," which stars Charlie Chester and terminates mid-March. . . . Ronald Shiner, star of George & Alfred Black and H. M. Tennent's "Seagulls Over Sorrento," Apollo Theatre hit, throwing a special party Nov. 16 to celebrate 1,000 performances.

Bill Fraser, currently starring in BBC's "Henry VIII" on its Third Program, has been signed by Littler & Arnold for a featured role in their Xmas pantomime, "Jack and Jill," at the London Casino, after which he will be featured in a new film for London Films which stars Alec Guiness, Yvonne de Carlo and Celia Johnson . . . Googie Withers takes the Peggy Ashcroft role in the Terence Rattigan hit, "The Deep Sea," at the Duchess when the latter quits to star next year in Stratford at the Avon Festival season.

Exotic Dancers Barred From Mexico's TV

Mexico City, Oct. 21.

TV is out for exotic hoofers even if they are properly dressed. That is the edict of the Ministry of Communications and Public Works, in charge of radio affairs in Mexico.

Exotics are unsuitable entertainment for the increasing family public tele is claiming, the Ministry explained.

Govt. Chief Hits M-G Aussie Setup

Canberra, Oct. 21.

Arthur Calwell, deputy leader of Her Majesty's Labor Opposition government here, has declared in the House of Representatives that Metro was adopting unethical tactics to force minor independent Aussie exhibitors out of business. Calwell blasted the U.S. organization for allegedly buying up the small independent theatres and then releasing films in them which currently were showing in other theatres of the same city, thereby putting other theatre owners in the same district at a disadvantage. If this sort of thing was allowed to continue, more and more small men would be squeezed out of business, Calwell charged.

Calwell suggested to politicians present that action should be taken as done in the U. S. by divorcement action whereby no distributor had the right to operate also in the exhibition branch of the business. The Robert Menzies Liberal government may give some attention to Calwell's suggestion.

Indie Exhibs Back of Move

Sydney, Oct. 21.

Industry insiders here believe that independent exhibitors operating in the same zones where Metro also runs theatres made the approach to Calwell in an effort to have governmental action taken to halt further expansion by the American distrib in Sydney and Melboure suburban territory. Under local chief Bernard Freeman, Metro controls a circuit of some 10 houses playing its own product exclusively. Major squawk by the indies is that Metro spots key pix into its own suburban houses on day-and-date schedule with Metro's city houses; hence when they (independents) buy the product naturally the pix are weakened boxofficewise.

Some time ago Melbourne indies threatened political action against Metro unless it halted the day-and-date setup and the alleged pressure on minor exhibs. Airing in Parliament this week of Metro's current operational setup indicates that the indies are carrying out this threat.

'Limelight' $20,300, New High in London

London, Oct. 28.

"Limelight," new Charles Chaplin pic, broke the house record at the 2,200 seat Odeon Leicester Square with $20,300 in its first week. Film is playing continuous run rather than two-a-day. Most crix lauded the pic but a majority of them declared it was overlong.

Chaplin starrer is holding so strongly that it may even top $21,000 in its second week.

'Troublemakers' Finds Another House in London

London, Oct. 28.

Although it has been squeezed out of the Strand Theatre to make way for H. M. Tennent's production of "The River Line" George Bellak's "The Troublemakers" switched to the Comedy Theatre yesterday (Mon.), where it will continue for the next three weeks. It replaces Jack Hylton's "The Apples of Eve," which folded Saturday (25) after a run of less than a fortnight.

Desmond O'Donovan, who presented "The Troublemakers" in association with L. Linder, H. Cooper and P. Glenn, is continuing negotiations with other West End theatres and plans a further transfer on conclusion of the limited run at the Comedy.

Buenos Aires Legit Houses Plan New Plays for Spring to Fight Slump

Buenos Aires, Oct. 21.

Almost all legit houses here are putting on new plays this spring to counteract the boxoffice drop caused bv the serious industrial depression. In spite of this slump, producers in Buenos Aires are optimistic about the future, believing that a bumper harvest of plays in December will adjust things again. Result is a mad scramble to lease the city's small number of theatres for 1953.

Because of the general decline in Argentine, a good many legit companies cut short their runs and are starting on tours earlier than usual. Biz on such road tours to date has been uniformly good for all companies having some screen or radio connection. Engagements are generally for not more than one week.

Most legit talent now doubles from the radio and the screen to stage and these tours are considered excellent way to build up their screen and stage careers.

Mecha Ortiz will close the run of "A Streetcar Named Desire" at the Casino Nov. 2 after being there since July, and will tour Rosario, Cordoba and Santa Fe in this and the other play, "El Mal Amor" (The Wrong Love) she produced this year. Comedienne Olinda Bozan is also on tour as is the Spanish "Song From Spain" company which had an unprecedented five-year run at the Argentino Theatre.

The Casino Theatre reopens Nov. 7 with a musical revue. The revue's star will be Flamenco dancer Lola Flores, due in soon from Spain.

Another importation due is the ballet company, headed by Claude Marchand, signed by Francisco Gallo, for the Astral Theatre in

Buenos Aires Niteries Badly Hit by Recession

Buenos Aires, Oct. 21.

Nitery business has been badly hit by the current recession, but nitery operators merely up their prices to cover the decline, arguing that anyone with enough money to visit a nitery today doesn't care what he pays. Some spots charge $8 for a jigger of synthetic Scotch and $10 for a chicken. Some of the old-type cafes on the Avenida Corrientes, which formerly served coffee, or chocolate and cakes, beer and pretzels with a femme band, are now being converted into automatic bars with juke boxes. First of these to open recently is Cuba Libre on Calle Esmeralda.

Despite the recession, concert managers are lining up many name longhairs for 1953. A deal is being mulled to bring Leopold Stokowski to baton a series of the state symphony orchestra concerts at the Gran Rex cinema late in 1953.

W. Berlin's Film Prod. Fails to Perk Because Of Internal Disputes

Berlin, Oct. 21.

Studio capacity in West Berlin and West Germany should be able to produce 70-80 pix annually and about 30% can be made in West Berlin studios. This contrasts with 80% of all German films being made here before the war and the 20% in Munich. Situation now as regards Munich and Berlin is just about reversed. In 1952, the pix released and in production totaled 57 in West German and West Berlin studios. The reason is not artistic or technical but a question of economy and jurisdictional problems.

While Berlin offers many advantages there is little production as talk goes on about a new form of the German film organization. Industry men don't know yet whether to build up a strong film bank which could finance a number of small producing outfits or to set up several big producing companies. The present film situation here is one of internal disputes, but all linked with local film production hope for an early solution.

At present there are three pix being made in West Berlin studios: "The Well at the Gate," a comedy by Berolina, produced in Agfa color and directed by Hans Deppe; "The Merry Vineyard," a comedy by Magna which will be distributed by London Films and directed by Erich Engel, and "Sun in My Heart," a Pontus production.

The East Berlin studios have three pix in production: "Ernst Thalmann," biog of the German ex-Commie leader; "The Undefeated," a political propaganda pic, and "Mischief Makers," a juvenile film.

ADMISSION TAX RELIEF DRIVE MAPPED BY CEA

London, Oct. 21.

Looking ahead to the future, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. is now prepping, on more scientific lines, its campaign for admission tax relief. It is collating detailed statistics with which to bombard the government and private Members of Parliament before next year's budget is introduced next spring.

Accent of the campaign, as always, will be to seek relief for smaller theatres, and the association's accountants, in part of their inquiries, have concentrated on theatres with a capacity of 750 seats or less. Owing to the method of tax calculation, however, it is unlikely the CEA will be able to proceed with a suggestion that it should campaign for total relief on all admissions up to one shilling (14c).

Although it is realized that the tax scale and the Eady levy may be related ultimately, the exhib campaign is concerned solely at this stage with what theatres remit to the government in direct taxation.

The major argument to be used (no statistics have been available thus far) will be the serious increase in exhibitors' operating costs.

3d Advance Ducat Deal On 'Pacific' London Run

London, Oct. 21.

With the consummation of a third advance ticket deal, the London edition of "South Pacific" has established a new local record. When the play opened last Nov. 1, ticket brokers invested $280,000 in seats covering the first 24 weeks. Subsequently, they invested a similar amount for the ensuing 28 weeks.

Last week they bought in advance again, to the tune of another $280,000, covering the first 28 weeks of the second year of the production. This latter deal involves the period when Julie Wilson takes over the starring role from Mary Martin. The brokers made their deal without waiting to see Miss Wilson's performance.

From its opening last November until the week ending last Oct. 11, "South Pacific" had grossed $1,290,942 here.

Govt. Committee Asks Tighter Control Of Aid Law to Stabilize French Prod.

Paris, Oct. 28.

A governmental committee, headed by Jean Lanet, has made public its report on the condition of the French film industry. Main consensus is the known fact that the industry has been in a state of financial crisis for many years. The report specified that the crisis was not only due to the declining purchasing power of prospective patrons, foreign competition and rising production costs but also the setup of the film biz as a whole. It made clear that drastic reforms are needed.

Committee found that grosses had fallen 6.5% since 1948, while the cost of films had gone up 50%. Aid funds have managed to keep an equilibrium until now. This explains the need for a cleaning up of production financing and a clearer working use of the Film Aid Law funds.

There are far too many producers, with 299 registered and 90 fairly active, with only 50 producing regularly since 1950. This leads to many one-shot and fly-by-night producers. A suggested remedy is to set a certain level of declared assets before a firm can go into production. Committee feels that many abuses can be abolished by making producers put up 25% of the nut.

On exhibition, the report cited three main problems. They are the rundown theatres and equipment; the single feature policy and the surplus of mediocre pix. Suggested remedies were special dispensations to top quality films; aid to exhibs in renovating houses and equipment and eliminating the fixed quota of French film playing time (five out of every 13 weeks) to make the market more competitive, thus weeding out the low quality films.

The committee felt there were also too many distributors in the field; also that the limited French field is not enough to support all of them, with cutthroat competition resulting. A suggested remedy is also to have distribs with a certain amount of assets. Also under consideration is the distrib's cut, which is considered too big a bite into the production take.

Other questions on the committee agenda were on author's rights, censorship, and the status of related film industries. It was felt that the labs should obtain government aid as well as the producers and exhibs. The protective measures of the 138 foreign film quota, the tax on foreign films, and the French quota playing time were also discussed. It was felt that the single feature ruling could be eliminated.

Brit. Producers Decide To Give Up Agitation For Distributors' Quota

London, Oct. 21.

After giving the matter further thoughts, British film producers have decided there is no advantage to be gained in agitating for the restoration of the distributors' quota. They came to this decision at their council meeting recently when they decided there was no reason for a change.

It was mainly as a result of producer policy that distributors' quota was dropped from the 1948 Films Act after having been in operation for 20 years. They claimed then that, provided the exhibitors' quota was controlled, the normal law of supply and demand would insure British films being made and that the industry could dispense with distrib quota.

Most of the studio unions shared this viewpoint, but Tom O'Brien's National Assn. of Theatrical and Kine Employees always opposed it. Exhibs, too, have been anxious to see the return of distrib quota because they feel this would provide them with a wider booking margin.

While in some sections of the trade the agitation to put the distributors' quota back on the statute books continues, the officail government view is that existing agreements on tariffs preclude this. The Geneva and Havana conventions, to both of which the British government subscribe, irrevocably rule out the introduction of a distrib quota in Britain.

U.S. Chirp Set for Opera Dates in Spain and Italy

Rome, Oct. 21.

Dolores Wilson, U. S. coloratura soprano, who recently returned to Italy from her first series of opera dates in Spain, has been signed for opera engagements in Madrid, Seville, Valencia, Rome and Palermo the next two months.

Singer has been studying voice abroad since she turned down bid to be a vocalist with the Spitalny All-Girl Orchestra, and has been getting several opera bids. She sang Gilda of "Rigoletto" at the La Fenice Theatre, Venice, recently, at a memorial performance for Verdi.

British Film Biz TV Show Clicks

London, Oct. 21.

Having had a free plug on British TV for the last nine months, the picture industry here has been taking stock and learned that the experiment has paid off well. The boost comes via the fortnightly program, "Current Release," which features extracts of upcoming releases and interviews with topical film personalities. Introduction of "Current Release" was the major achievement of the British film industry's Better Business Drive. The results, according to informed opinion, more than justified the prolonged negotiations that preceded the launching of the program.

Although originally started on a trial basis "Current Release" has become a strong favorite with audiences, and recently its screening was switched from Thursday to the peak mid-week viewing night of Wednesday. It runs 45 minutes and usually includes clips from six new pix. It is now regarded as one of the top British Broadcasting Corp.-TV attractions. Since the expansion of the network to Scotland, it is estimated that the program reaches between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 viewers every two weeks.

Although it has been impossible to pinpoint the effect of "Current Release" on boxoffice biz, all major British and U. S. film companies agree that it has proved a strong selling factor. Its impetus on receipts can best be gauged by the experience of most majors who report that with two comparable productions and only one getting screenings time on "Current Release," the contrasting effect at the wickets is quite substantial.

Despite its popularity, the program comes in for regular digs from TV columnists, most of whom complain that the effort is too one-sided, and that it is time for the film industry to show its appreciation by releasing current attractions for TV programs.

Venice Prize Prompts Paris Reissue of 'Games'

Paris, Oct. 21.

"Forbidden Games" (Jeux Interdits), the Rene Clement film which won the First Prize Golden Lion of St. Marks at the Venice Film Festival, is getting a first-run house for reissue run here on the strength of the kudo. Film originally ran at two first-run houses here last spring with only fair returns. Pic had been turned down by the selection committee for the Cannes Festival last May. When shown there out of competition, it raised a storm of protest from film crix who claimed the best French picture had to be shown out of the running.

Entered at the Venice Festival it was first turned down because shown at Cannes but was finally reinstated. This moving moppet film easily took the big prize. The film's boxoffice returns will serve as a good indication of the actual business value of a festival prize. Director Rene Clement is reported to have offers from 20th-Fox but is staying on here to make another film before accepting any U. S. deal.

Guinness Signed by Korda

London, Oct. 21.

Alec Guinness, whose recent films, with a couple of exceptions have been made by the J. Arthur Rank organization, has been signed by the Sir Alexander Korda group to co-star with Yvonne de Carlo and Celia Johnson in "Paradise." Anthony Kimmins is directing for London Films, with distribution through British Lion.

Film is based on an original story by Alex Coppell, with screenplay by Nicholas Phipps.

1st Feature Defaulters' Dip Forecast in Past British Quota Year

London, Oct. 21.

A drop in the total of first feature quota defaulters is likely to be revealed when returns for the year ended Sept. 30 are published. It is expected officially that there will be a substantial improvement on the figure of 771 defaulters in the previous 12 months.

A number of prosecutions in regard to the 1950-51 quota year are now being readied by the Board of Trade's legal division. Four already have been successfully instigated by the department, and others are to follow during the coming months. Official government view is that many of the defaults were unjustified and exhibitors could have fulfilled their legal obligation had they made the necessary effort. It is believed that the cases already heard in the courts will spur other exhibitors to take the law more seriously.

The four successful prosecutions to date were all in respect of theatres occupying solo positions, but future cases will include some theatres who have been granted partial relief from the 30% quota. Such relief is only granted where a theatre's booking position is weakened by competitive houses.

Although prosecutions already launched involve only first-feature defaulters, it is understood that consideration is also being given to supporting program defaults. Earlier in the year, it will be recalled the Films Council considered it there was justification for instituting proceedings against some of the Rank-controlled theatres which defaulted in this category.

'BELL' RINGS LOUDLY ON TOKYO ROADSHOW

Tokyo, Oct. 21.

"For Whom the Bell Tolls" (Par) opened its Tokyo roadshow run at one theatre here and almost nudged Metro's "Gone With Wind" from first place in the boxoffice sweepstakes. "Bell" grossed $13,200 the first week while "Wind's" did $13,800. The second week of "Wind" held firm at $13,000, while "Bell" dipped to $9,600.

Other roadshow releases during the fortnight were "Ivanhoe" (M-G) and "Place in Sun" (Par). "Ivanhoe" took $8,300 on first week while "Sun" was sluggish at $5,600.

'Sun,' 'Queen' Big in Kansai Area

Osaka. Oct. 21.

"Place in Sun" (Par) shone brightly in the Kansai area for two weeks. Playing the first week in four houses, it grossed $16,300. "African Queen" (UA) did $15,000 during its first week also in four spots. "Wind" (M-G), suffering a steady decline here where it has been roadshown at one theatre, was a weak $7,300 for two weeks.

"David and Bathsheba," only other film to run two weeks, was strong $10,700 in first week in five houses. "Third Man" (UA) hit $12,500 in one week at six theatres.

Marvin Plans London Prod. of 'Physicians'

London, Oct. 21.

London production of "Five Philadelphia Physicians" by American playwright Hugh Evans is being lined up for presentation on Feb. 4. Andre Van Gyseghem has been inked to direct.

Play will be presented under the auspices of Mark Marvin, the American producer who has co-presented two plays in the West End, "All the Year Round" and "Red Letter Day." He will be associated with Mrs. Renee Soskin, lessor of the Embassy Theatre.

Aussie Pix Chains Mull Bringing Back Stageshows to Bolster Biz

Sydney, Oct. 21.

Return of stage presentations in ace Aussie cinemas is forecast for early next year as a business hypo. While major circuit operators decline to admit a switch to stageshows, Greater Union Theatres, headed by Norman B. Rydge, will experiment this week with the Bobby Limb band (popular local combo) at the Capitol here, 2,275-seater.

Some time ago, both GUT and Hoyts, the opposition loop, dropped stageshows and pit bands because of the high operational costs. Metro also nixed pit bands from their own key houses for the same reason. The 1,400-seater Prince Edward here, run by Carroll-Musgrave, is presently the only spot using a stageshow with pix. Understood that several executives with GUT, Hoyts and other key circuits figure that a good stage policy, spotting overseas' talent combined with films would give the necessary shot in the arm to jaded film patrons to provide a boxoffice upbeat.

Should plans mature beyond the talk stage, overseas' talent could be obtained via a hook with one of the major vaude loops such as David N. Martin or J. C. Williamson to save on importation costs. Radio has been buying talent for a long time from the local vaudeville circuits to good advantage. Figuring is that cinemas could do likewise.

Reopening of key cinemas to stageshows would make Australia a sought-after playdate by both U. S. and British talent, especially since this territory is now less than three days by plane from the U. S. and Britain.

Jackson Religioso Disk Top Dane Foreign Seller

Copenhagen, Oct. 28.

Lead selling foreign record in Denmark this year is colored church singer Mahalia Jackson's interpretation of "Silent Night," issued here by Metronome. After being played one Sunday over the State Radio, nearly 20,000 orders for the record poured in. She waxes for Apollo Records in her native U. S.

Miss Jackson is now coming to Denmark to give a recital of hymns over the State Radio and in Holy Souls' Church. She has declined offers to sing in concert halls here.

Iran Launches Own Film Prod.

Washington, Oct. 28.

Although Iran is best known currently for its row with the British over oil, it is also making some headway with its smallfry film industry. Country's largest studio, Pars Film Studio, which turned out two features last year, was destroyed by fire in May. It is being rebuilt.

The nation now has four additional studios, reports Nathan D. Golden, director of the Commerce Department film division. One studio has a feature in production, a second has finished a 16m pic, a third mainly dubs foreign films, and the fourth has retained a German pic expert to make 35m product.

Iran now has 62 theatres, of which two were erected in Teheran in the past year. Hollywood product still has the bulk of the market but Russian pictures have been muscling in recently. Naturally, British films are not so popular any more, but German and French films are getting a foothold in the country.

Golden also reports that Ceylon now has 159 theatres with a seating capacity of 110,000, including touring theatres. Of the regular theatre pix, 49% are made in India and 41% come from the U. S.

There is an official Ceylon government film unit which released four documentaries, three shorts and four newsreels last year. The lone commercial producer set up shop in 1950 at Kandana.

Golden revealed that Afghanistan has nine theatres with a 10th under construction. A system of censorship has been established, pix being screened before an officer of the press department. About 40% of the films comes from India, with a slightly smaller percentage from the U. S.

Selznick-DeSica Pic To Star Jennifer Jones

Rome, Oct. 21.

In an interview broadcast over the Italian Radio networks, director Vittorio DeSica, producer David O. Selznick and Jennifer Jones announced the start of their film, "Termini Station," to be shot here. Scripted by Cesare Zavattini, it was originally scheduled for direction by Claude Autant-Lara as a Franco-Italian co-production, with Marlon Brando starred, but the deal fell through. It was subsequently picked up by Selznick, who proposed it to DeSica while the latter was in Hollywood prepping his forthcoming "Miracle in the Rain." Montgomery Clift is due in Rome at the end of the month to co-star with Miss Jones in "Station."

Most of the action takes place in Rome's ultra-modern railroad terminal. Film will depict the last 90 minutes passed in the station by two lovers before being separated forever. Gino Cervi, Virgilio Riento, Giovanni Grazzo and Giuseppe Porelli are among Italian actors slated for parts in the film. It will be shot in English, and dubbed for local distribution.

Number of High-Grossing Films in Italy Nearly Double Total of '50-'51

Genoa, Oct. 21.

With final figures still to be tabulated, film returns indicate significant rise during the past season in the number of films making over 100,000,000 lire (about $150,000) at local boxoffices. In the past 10-month period, a total of nine features made the grade, with another just missing that figure.

The past season's winners, in order of biz, are "Don Camillo" (Italian-French), "Samson and Delilah" (Par), "David and Bathsheba" (20th), "Cops and Robbers" (Italian), "Anna" (Italian), "Gone With Wind" (M-G), "Toto in Color" (Italian) and "All About Eve" (20th), with "Pandora" not quite reaching the $150,000 mark. Grosses on "Don Camillo" nearly doubled those of its nearest rival, with the pic still playing in Italian houses.

As against nine this season, only five features passed the $150,000 mark during the 1950-51 season. In order of grosses these were "Gone With Wind" (M-G), "Cinderella" (RKO), "Forsyte Saga" (M-G), "Three Musketeers" (M-G), and "Millionaire Naples" (Italian). "Wind," slowly playing out its first-run dates made the grade both seasons, and is still doing healthy trade. A significant rise is noted in the number of Italo pix to hit top positions this year as against past seasons.

RANK TO HANDLE NEW ACT PICTURE, 'TEST'

London, Oct. 21.

Second major co-operative production by the company set up by the Assn. of Cine Technicians will be distributed by the J. Arthur Rank group. It will be lensed at the Pinewood studios. The film titled, "The Final Test," is from Terence Rattigan's play which had its first outing on TV earlier this year.

Anthony Asquith, who is president of ACT, will direct. Production chore will be handled by R. J. Minney.

ACT's first production, which was mainly financed out of public funds, failed to get circuit release, and has little prospect of recouping its $250,000 negative cost. With this new effort, the labor organization is using its top names in an endeavor to establish its claim as an important producing unit.

Series of 1-Hour Wildcat Strikes Nearly Halts Prod. in Brit. Studios

London, Oct. 28.

A series of unofficial one-hour strikes, which have been in progress in the major British studios during the past week, have almost halted production on several films, including some Hollywood sponsored projects. The action has been taken by members of two of the three main studio unions as a reprisal for the breakdown of the protracted wage talks through the machinery of the Joint Industrial Council.

Accompanying the sporadic strikes the unions have also unofficially imposed a complete overtime ban which has eliminated weekend work, cut one night shooting and played havoc with production schedules. The Columbia production of "The Red Beret," for example, which calls for a considerable amount of night lensing, has been seriously interrupted.

By their timing methods, the laborites have made it almost impossible for a director to get anything finished by the end of the day. Each of the unions, taking individual action, stops work for one hour each day. They wait, however, for a scene to be lined up, after maybe two hours of preparatory work, and then pull the switches. By the time the 60 minutes have passed, it is time for lunch. More or less the same procedure is followed in the afternoon. The National Assn. of Theatrical and Kine Employees and the Electrical Trades Union have been taking this action. Toppers of both organizations have been touring the studios urging their members to continue normal working in order that negotiations for extra pay can be resumed. The Assn. of Cine Technicians has not used any stoppages.

Main centers of disturbances have been the major British outfits at Pinewood, Shepperton, Elstree and Nettlefold. There has been no interruption of work at Metro's Elstree studios. Among projects affected have been United Artists' "Melba," and Walt Disney's "Sword and the Flower" as well as a number of major British films.

British Rep Cos. Ask Aid Of Arts Council on Coin

London, Oct. 21.

Although the 23 theatres affiliated to the Council of Repertory theatres are exempted from admission tax, because they operate as non-profit distributing companies, they all experience difficulty making ends meet. This is reflected in a report published recently which records the "encouraging rise in attendance" but warns that unless a larger and more regular audience is found, standard of production will suffer.

The repertory (stock) theatres have asked the Arts Council to assist them in their financial difficulties and have appointed a committee to probe the problem and submit findings in the form of definite proposals.

London Legit Bits

London, Oct. 21.

Gilbert Wakefield's latest comedy, "Deep Freeze," to be televised after tryout at the New Theatre, Bromley. Other wellknown plays getting TV dates include Arthur Schnitzler's "Professor Bernhardi," Beverley Nichols' "Shadow of the Vine" and "Rooms With Secrets," by D. G. Bellini . . "And So To Bed," the Vivian Ellis musical, is to get special staging at Folks Theatre, Oslo, Norway . . . Elmer Harris' "Johnny Belinda," with Sorrel Carson in lead, is being directed in French by John Hanau in November at the Municipal Theatre, Lausanne.

Eric Glass has sold stage and film rights of Patrick Gargill's comedy, "Ring For Cathy," to John Boulting of Boulting Bros., who own "Seagulls Over Sorrento."

Legit Prize to 'Giovane'

"Salviamo la Giovane," by Cesare Giulio Viola, has won the million lire ($1,500) Prix St. Vincent. Annual prize for best Italian legiter is voted on by top Italo dramatic authors.

The Italian Playwright's Assn. at the award ceremony, expressed hopes for increased government aid to Italian legit.

Straus Collections To Vienna City for $15,000

Vienna, Oct. 21.

The city of Vienna acquired for the sum of $15,000 the well-known Johann Straus collections, compiled by relatives of the waltz king.

A few single objects were retained by the owners, such as the Boesendorf grand piano and the original score of the "Bat." But most of the original manuscripts of Johann Straus now belong to Vienna.

Rossellini Backs Away From Making Color Pix; Would Study Technique

Monte Carlo, Oct. 21.

Stopping off at Monte Carlo on the way to visit his mother in Barcelona, Robert Rossellini discussed his future plans in some detail. Having terminated the montage of the pic, "Europe 51," in two versions and also completed "Where Is Liberty" with comic Toto in the lead, Rossellini and his wife will take a short vacation, spent probably in their villa at Santa Marinella outside Rome. Rossellini then starts work on a new film, "Sacapo," in three episodes, in which he will again use a story from every-day life and employ unknown talent.

In the spring, with Ingrid Bergman as the star, Rossellini hopes to start "Duo" from the story by Colette. He explained that he will use a free adaptation of the book, particularly because the action is in Italy whereas the original was laid in France.

Speaking of the possibility of his making color pix, Rossellini stated that until he had a full knowledge of the technical elements involved in such a production, he will abstain from tinters. However, he believes a man of the trade must keep in mind all technical advances and keep as up-to-date as possible.

"Personally I think the time has come," he said, "for color film making to leave the hands of the technicians and laboratory experts, and be studied intelligently by the actors, producers and directors. At the moment I am doing some private 16m work in an effort to get a little knowledge on the subject. But until I know it thoroughly and can interpret it in my own fashion, I won't tackle a color picture."

In the case of black and white, Rossellini has a wide technical knowledge. Starting in 1934 doubling in Italian films, he progressed from there to montage, and photography in documentaries and then to director.

Asked if he had any pet projects, Rossellini said that he was rather disappointed to hear that John Huston cherished the same dream, to make a film of Herman Melville's "Moby Dick."

"I have read the book three or four times and seen John Barrymore's great performance in the film; hence, I would not like to finish my life without producing it. However, the time and money needed is so enormous that I doubt if it will ever be possible."

Asked if he would make a picture in the U. S., Rossellini said he didn't think so, because in films just as in life, one must be sincere.

"I work on things I know very well and I make realistic films, I feel the realism, and whenever possible I use an Italian background because it is the place I know best."

Questioned about his private life, he said that for the first time in two years, his wife and himself were enjoying a normal family life, and he hoped the press had decided at last to give them a break because the attacks on them had an effect on their work.

Buys Cinema for Old-Age Hobby

Chesterfield, Eng., Oct. 21.

Herbert Reed, a dentist and vet cinema patron, has bought the Empire Cinema here for $19,500. He explained he purchased the house as a hobby in his old age (he is 73).

He goes to a picture show two or three times a week.

Johnnie Ray for Honolulu

Honolulu, Oct. 21.

Johnnie Ray is booked for four concerts in Honolulu, according to spokesmen for Ralph Yempuku and Tats Matsuo. Ray would appear in the Civic Auditorium under joint auspices of Yempuku and Matsuo Dec. 10-13.

Teaser campaign is being mapped for the newspapers, with formal announcement to follow.

Swedes Cold To U.S. Legiters

Stockholm, Oct. 21.

Swedish legit season to date has been a bleak one for American imports. "South Pacific," current at the Oscar's Theatre here, hasn't evoked the interest that "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Kiss Me Kate" drew at the same house in previous years. Likewise, "Finian's Rainbow" proved a disappointment at the Municipal Theatre in Malmo.

Sam Spewack's "Sycamore Tree," which bowed at three theatres over the past two months, created little critical stir. Both reviewers and the public have complained that the play's story "isn't suitable for Swedish audiences." Piece is still at the Alle Theatre here. It also was produced at the local Municipal Theatre and the Municipal in Halsingborg.

On the other hand, native plays have been faring well. Among new entries are "Fullname" ("New Moon") at the Intima Theatre here and "Yttersta Dagen" ("The Last Day") at the Municipal Theatre, Gothenburg. Former is a comedy by Hasse Ekman, who costars with his actress-wife, Eva Henning.

"Dagen" is the work of Stig Dagerman. Another of his plays, "Den Dodsdomde," was unveiled at the Irving Theatre, London, Oct. 13 under tag of "Condemned to Live." Rounding out the domestic scene are "Den Ratta" ("The Right One"), a political comedy, at the Folkets Hus Theatre, Gothenburg, and a Gogol revival at the Royal Dramatical Theatre here.

Brit. Exhib Raps Eng. Pix as 'Not Suitable'

London, Oct. 28.

Because it believes the film would offend Catholic opinion, the London County Council has banned the French film, "L'Auberge Rouge," for showing here. The LCC viewpoint has been shared by other local authorities in the London region. The film, which has been shown in France without cutting, stars Fernandel.

The British Board of Film Censors also has rejected the pic but would be prepared to grant a certificate if a certain amount of scissoring is done.

Italo Govt. Huddles on Getting More Films Okayed by American Censors

American Sees Vidpix Expanding in Europe

Paris, Oct. 28.

Malvin Wald, here before heading for U. S., has been a year in Denmark making vidpix for American TV. Wald feels that foreign pic production is a satisfactory operation provided a man trained in American knowhow is in charge of the operation. Wald thinks that there is a fund of colorful subjects for use in making vidpix.

Wald produced and wrote a package of 24 half-hour stories based on the Hans Christian Andersen fairy tales.

December. Although Enrique Serrano has had fair success at the Astral since he opened there Aug. 28, he must fold to make way for the Japanese Takarazuka ballet, due there for a short run after appearing in Brazil.

Jean Anouilh Well Represented

French playwright Jean Anouilh has three of his plays currently playing, "Jezebel," now switched by Anita Lassalle from the theatre which bears her name to the Buenos Aires Theatre; "La Sauvager," in which Rosa Rosen Co. opened at the Versailles a week ago, and "Euridice," which the Luisa Vehil-Esteban Serrador Co. opened at the Politeama.

There is a big preponderance of foreign atmosphere at the local theatres. Apart from the coming Jap ballet, Josephine Baker is packing them in at the Opera with two night performances daily; Spain is represented by the Pilar Lopez Ballet at the Avenida Theatre, one of the biggest moneymakers of the year; also by Lola Membrives Co. at the Odeon in works by Jacinto Benavente or Garcia Lorca; by a Spanish Operetta Co., a Spanish musical comedy and now by "Relations from Spain" at the Apolo Theatre. The Marconi has an Italian Canzoni di Napoli Co. in "Carrosella di Napoli" and doing big biz while Pirandello's "L'Imbecile" is running at the Colonial. The same author's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" is playing the Cervantes. France, besides the Anouilh plays, is also represented by Salacrou's "Pouf" at the Van Riel and by Jean Bernard Duc's "Le Complexe de Philemon" at the Comico. Britain also figures with "Charlie's Aunt" at the Grand Splendid and Oscar Wilde's classic "The Importance of Being Ernest" at the General San Martin. The U.S. drama has been repped by "Streetcar" at the Casino and "Desire Under the Elms" at the LaFarsa.

Among other plans for 1953, Pablo Palitos, currently at the Grand Splendid in "Charlie's Aunt," has leased the Politeama for a 5-month engagement in March and will produce "Detective," a new comedy by German Ziclis.

Juan Carlos Thorry has joined with vet musical comedy star Gloria Guzman, and plan to revive the long-runner, "Had Eve Worn Clothes".

'Ice Parade' Aussie Click

Skouras Visits Korea

Tokyo, Oct. 21.

Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy now on inspection tour of company branches in Japan, here from a one-day visit to the front in Korea where he renewed his friendship with General A. Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander whom Skouras first met in Greece.

He also paid a frontline call on elements of the Greek forces serving with the United Nations.

Rome, Oct. 21.

Italian government heads of the film industry here again have been studying American censorship. The study seeks to enlighten producers to make pictures for export to the U. S. which will meet Yank censorship rules. Feeling here is that censor rulings in America are made up from standards set up by many separate groups, all having some influence. The Italians have strong censorship rules, too, but they do not always include as many stipulations as certain U. S. groups.

Eager to get their pictures widely distributed in the American market, the Italians would avoid mistakes that subsequently lead to cuts in the U. S. or their complete banning.

Giulio Andreotti, Undersecretary of State, has formed a committee to make a study and report on various censorship regulations. The Italians in general fail to comprehend the reasons for the American censors being touchy about things not considered bad here. One Italian filmite gave his opinion that the Americans are jealous of Italian pictures and their new-found success.

Some Italians object to certain American pictures because they are too violent. Drunkenness, especially women; divorce and remarriage while the mate is still living, are frowned upon. Parents' Clubs and Catholic Youth Action take a dim view of gangsters in U. S. films. The worst offenders of American films are those having scenes depicting anyone in a government office, whether a senator or sheriff, as dishonest.

Andreotti said that the Italo government will continue to aid the picture business and boost the present number of Italian film experts in the world market, particularly the American market, to encourage dollar earnings. He explained that the government is considering the problem of the so-called protective laws and also the necessity for strengthening the position of Italian films in the world market.

The undersecretary stated that the 1949 law to aid Italian films had accomplished a dual purpose: First, to produce more and better pictures, so as to supply product needed for Italo houses. Second, these pictures had to make the rounds of all the Italian film houses to increase the average earnings of each.

'Offensive to Catholics,' London Ban French Pic

Manchester, Oct. 21.

British film producers are not making suitable pix for the box-office, said John X. Prendergast, leading Yorkshire exhib, speaking here. It was a peculiar thing that British producers had a market to themselves, yet they could not hold it, he added.

The exhib named a group of films made by American companies in England which proved that good productions could be made in Britain.

British Name Dand

Charles H. Dand has replaced Mrs. Katharine Noel Parker as director of the British Information Services' Films and Publications Division. Mrs. Parker has been reassigned by the Foreign Office in London.

For the past two years, Dand headed the British delegation of the Non-Commercial Cinema Committee, organization which arranged production and exchange of cultural films between France, Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg and the United Kingdom.

Wyler's 15-Wk. 'Roman'

Rome, Oct. 21.

William Wyler, director-producer of "Roman Holiday," wound up shooting last week, finishing lensing of the Paramount pic in 15 weeks.

Wyler remains on until December to complete the film, doing all of the technical work in Italy.

Nip Nabes Nix Duals

Nagoya, Oct. 21.

Triple features and duals, current among neighborhood houses here, have been nixed by the local exhibitors association. The group voted to use single-feature shows.

New U.S. Agency, Doing Work of ECA, Uses Radio, Pix to Blanket Europe

Paris, Oct. 21.

The Mutual Security Agency, the new monicker of what was formerly the Economic Cooperation Administration, is doing a big job in blanketing free Europe with information as to the aims and workings of the program via radio and films. The radio beaming of the MSA patter is a large-scale job being run by Gene King, previously of WOR, New York, and WCOP, Boston. King has applied his commercial knowhow to this idealogical form of dissemination. He has found a vast difference between the workings of commercial radio and the needs for a network involving 18 countries with all sorts of complications arising from language barriers and national sensitivity.

King said that selling an idea called "Democracy" to Europeans via the ether called for special gimmicks. He explained that ratings here were measured by how much the Red vote went down. He has learned the airwave habits of the Europeans from scratch.

The European lives with state controlled radio and most propaganda is heaped at him mainly through this medium with newspapers second and television still a negligible factor here. The average European is sensitive about America, and the MSA people must stay in the background and feed their shows through people who can put it in their own lingo. This also entails realizing that what may go in Denmark may not do in Italy.

Main objects of the info service is to make clear four themes: the promotion of Free Trade Unions as a defense against Communism; increased industrial production; common defense and political integration. Records show that production has risen enormously, and the Schuman plan, pooling coal and iron of ex-enemies, is a fact.

MSA headquarters in Paris controls the radio affiliates in 18 countries; Great Britain, Austria, Netherlands, France, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Sweden, Trieste, Switzerland, Portugal, Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark, Western Germany, Italy, Greece, Ireland and Norway. All the American Embassies in these countries have radio setups of their own to deal with local conditions. Via a system of integration, the State Dept. and the MSA facilities have been merged in these countries, with the result there has been a smoother operation, less duplication and a cut in outlay to taxpayers.

The MSA radio setup in Paris has three studios, 40 tape machines and eight engineers. A normal week finds 150 tapes recorded and distributed on the Continent. King pointed out that MSA is entirely different from the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe or any other operation having its own transmitter. King explained it can only work through already established national hookups.

BBC SEEKING NEW PIX SHOW FOR TELE

London, Oct. 21.

With "Current Release" program firmly established as a major TV show, the British Broadcasting Corp. has initiated negotiations with the picture industry for launching a new film feature. The project, which is now being discussed with the major companies, aims at a monthly program compiled from old films whose commercial potentialities have long been exhausted.

Such a compilation of feature films would have a marked "museum appeal" for televiewers but would not hypo the boxoffice in the same way as "Current Release," which consists of excerpts from upcoming and provincial programs.

If the new program matures it is likely to be produced by W. Farquharson Small, who also does the "Current Release," the fortnightly program.

The BBC initiative in opening industry talks on another film program is indicative of their growing desire to get motion pictures to fill up the expanding program schedule. They see no hope of getting TV rights to latest product, and therefore are exploring an alternative course.

MPEA Asks $1,950,000 Be Unfrozen by Nips

Tokyo, Oct. 21.

Motion Picture Export Assn. special envoy Richard T. McDonnell returned here last week determined to effect the release of the remaining 30% blocked yen held here by Japanese government in the accounts of U. S. film distributors. This amounts to around $1,950,000.

McDonnell said he would not return home until he had unfrozen the remaining blocked yen. He added that he hoped to get it all in dollars instead of part dollars, part sterling, as done last summer. At that time McDonnell succeeded in releasing 70% of the $6,500,000 fund, 40% of which was sterling, later reconverted to dollars, and 30% in dollars.

French Actors Shuttle From Stage to Films As Legit Season Opens

Paris, Oct. 21.

French actors are busy between legit and pix chores as the new season gets under way here. Arletty, of the film, "Children of Paradise," who played in the legit version of "Streetcar Named Desire" here, is back in the new Marcel Achard play, "Les Compagnons De La Marjolaine," opposite her is Bernard Blier who appears in a lot of films. Edwige Feuillere is back with her annual legit presentation of "Camille" which is a top solo femme appeal boxoffice success here every year.

Pierre Fresnay, the top biopic interpreter, is preparing a revival of "Hymenee" for the stage. Georges Guetary, after completing a film "Feather in the Wind," is slated for an operetta "The Enchanted Route," which is to play the ABC Theatre. Jean Marais, after finishing two pix, is back at the Comedie-Francaise to play two roles in Paul Claudel's "Hostage" and in "Mithridate."

Francois Perier and wife, Marie Daems, now doing the legit version of the Jean-Pierre Aumont "A Lovely Sunday," will appear together in Jean Stelli's new film, "A Woman's Treasure." Madeleine Robinson, now in the successful play, "The Queen of Clubs," will play the lead in a new film, "The House of Crime." Michel Simon, with three of his pix on the marquees here, will be represented in legit here by "Flaminco."

Nicole Maurey, who was in "Harvey" here is the femme lead in the new Bing Crosby starrer, "Little Lost Boy." Other French actors going in for English-speaking roles are Gerard Oury who plays in the new Walt Disney film, "The Rose and the Sword;" Claude Nollier, Colette Marchand and Suzanne Flon all in the John Huston pic, "Moulin Rouge," and Nicole Courcel and Brigette Auber in the "Foreign Intrigue" series being lensed here for American TV. Courcel is now in the new hit play, "Zoe."

Brasseur in Legit

Pierre Brasseur, who was in the Jean-Paul Sartre legiter "Devil and the Good Lord" last year did two films in his spare time. Bourvil will partner Georges Guetary in the new operetta, "The Enchanted Route." Maria Casares, actress in Jean Cocteau's film "Orphee," is now with the Comedie-Francaise in "Don Juan."

Daniele Delorme, who starred in the film, "The Mad Girl," is now rehearsing Ibsen's "Doll's House" for both stage and screen. Gerard Philipe, one of the top film draws here and known for "Devil In The Flesh" and Fanfan La Tulipe," has been doing legit work in the Theatre National Populaire.

Micheline Presle, who has played in U.S. films, is back starred in a new pic version of "Camille." She has also done legit work here. Martine Carol, who has become a topper here with her sexy roles, has little stage experience but has come into her own on the screen. She has done three big pix here this year.

Fearon's M-G Aussie Post

Sydney, Oct. 21.

Joe Fearon, long representative in London for the Hoyts' film circuit here, has resigned to accept an important post as aide to Bernie Freeman, Metro chief in this territory.

Fearon left London to take over a post with Melbourne's radio station 3 XY, in which Hoyts hold an interest. Understood that Fearon was not too happy in the new radio post after being in theatre management for such a long time and accepted Freeman's offer. Fearon will look after the theatre end of the Metro setup, with "Quo Vadis" as his first assignment.

O'seas Opera Pay Keeps Stars Home

Vienna, Oct. 21.

Economics of international operatic engagements are increasingly absorbing the attention of European singers, who wonder whether it's so profitable anymore to grab an American booking, even the Met Opera's.

It's noted, true enough, that only La Scala at Milan can compete with or outdo the Met. At the top Italo spot, a featured singer can knock down $400 to $600 a night, tax free, and expect to work twice a week through a 10-month season.

In Vienna, big names continue to appear for prestige, since coin rarely exceeds $150 a night, with taxes taking a 30% bite from foreigners and even more from natives. This accounts for the fact that much of the top Vienna talent is available in the home house only at the start and finish of the season, filling in in between with sugary dates in the U. S., Italy and Germany. The latter country is now paying good names approximately $250 a night, less 25% tax.

Met figures are a cut under those of La Scala, take home pay considered. But booking at the N. Y. house does open the door to radio, TV and above all lucrative concert dates for the better draws, so it's still quite a magnet, despite tax complications.

Blames Admission Tax For B-L Prod. Losses

London, Oct. 21.

Heavy incidence of the admission tax, which channels off more than the producers receive, was blamed by Harold C. Drayton, British Lion chairman, for the company's production losses. Addressing stockholders at the annual meeting, he explained that in the last three years, the treasury had claimed more than $13,400,000 from boxoffice receipts of B-L productions, whereas its own share was just over $9,000,000.

Drayton appealed to the government to take decisive action to help the producing industry and suggested they should lop off a large proportion of the tax and put it at the disposal of British producers. He urged that this be done without increasing admission prices. Although the corporation's adverse balance now amounted to over $5,600,000, he insisted that production and general running costs had not been the main factors contributing to B-L losses.

Canada's Pix Receipts Up Over 11% in Year

Toronto, Oct. 28.

Canada's film take for 1951 was 11.4% ahead of the previous year, with the 2,689 situations' showing a gross of $96,319,583. This does not include $11,887,226 obtained via a 15% amusement tax. This is highest film take ever recorded in this country, according to Dominion Bureau of Statistics' report.

Breakdown of Bureau's figures shows Ontario (531 houses) grossing $38,052,587; Quebec $22,629,851: British Columbia, $8,740,857. Drive-ins showed a heavy increase, with 82 ozoners grossing $3,347,670 as compared with previous year's take of $2,287,679 by 61 situations.

BARON PANTO LEAD

London, Oct. 28.

Bert Montague signed Bunny Baron to play lead in his pantomime, "Cinderella," opening at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, Dec. 24.

Slump in Filipino Exports' Earnings Hits Film Grosses; Manila Biz Off 30%

A decline in world market prices for such Filipino exports as copra and fibre has been a factor behind a 30% dip in Manila theatre attendance this year as compared to 1951, according to Vicente A. Rufino. In partnership with his brother, Ernesto, he operates six first-run houses in Manila.

Rufino, who is making his first visit to New York in 22 years, recently arrived in the U. S. for a medical checkup and to confer with top foreign department execs of major distributors. Although less money is in the hands of the filmgoing public, he said in New York this week, "people still turn out for the 'big' pictures."

Paramount's "Greatest Show on Earth," Rufino pointed out, ran five weeks on advanced admissions at one of his houses. Price scales, incidentally, have seen little postwar change. In fact, he added, when the admission tax was raised from 10% to 25% in 1949 "we absorbed part of the increase."

Designed to help native film production, a 10% "exhibitors' quota" is on the books, but Rufino noted that this provision is not rigidly enforced. He estimated that his theatres use no more than 2% Filipino pix with the balance of playing time devoted to Hollywood films. Major reason for this is that there are not enough domestic features to fill the quota.

Despite the biz slump this year, Rufino feels that the outlook is bright. Three new second-runs are now under construction in Manila, and his own circuit plans to raze its 900-seat Rialto next year to make way for a 1,200-seater. Although the government exercises import controls there are ample construction materials.

Rufino brothers operate their theatres through Luzon Theatres, Inc., and the Eastern Theatrical Co., Inc. Vicente is prez of Luzon and general manager of Eastern while Ernesto heads Eastern and is g. m. of Luzon.

Accompanied by his wife, Vicente Rufino is making a trip around the world After sailing from Manila for the U. S., they visited Hollywood early this month. Couple sail for Europe on the S.S. United States Friday (31), and later will plane for Manila from Rome.

British Reject Indie Coronation Film Fete

London, Oct. 21.

A proposal by an independent distributing house to organize an international film festival immediately prior to the Coronation has been nixed by a joint committee of the four major industry associations. The project, which was begin promoted by Regent Films, aimed at showing two films a day, mainly Continental ones, at the New Gallery.

Viewpoint of the British Producers Assn., which was agreeable to the other organizations, was that any film festival in London in Coronation year should be supported by the whole industry, and not be just an individual company operation.

Big Havana Pix Houses Back to Stageshows As Peace Parley Succeeds

Havana, Oct. 21.

Havana's larger film theatres resumed stageshow this past weekend following a truce with the Assn. of Artists (entertainment union). This was agreed on at a meeting presided over by Minister of Labor Jesus Portocarrero and attended by officials of the various unions connected with stageshows.

Under the law all first-runs and houses having over 2,000 seats are required to use stageshows regularly along with films. Theatre chains containing at least one first-run or a house with over 2,200 seats must have one theatre using shows. Some smaller theatres have been getting around the law by presenting orchestral music between film showings. Larger houses protested that this was evasion of the law, but that if the smaller house could get away with it, they could also. Early last week they substituted "musical interludes" for stageshows.

Under the agreement between theatre owners and the union, the status quo will be preserved until Nov. 3. Large first-runs will present shows, smaller ones will continue musical interludes. Meanwhile, a commission composed of five theatre owners and an equal number of union reps will attempt to find a satisfactory solution.

4 British Exhib Groups Seek New Juvenile Pix

London, Oct. 21.

The exhibiting industry, divided into four distinct groups, is to ballot for the first share in the new output of the Children's Film Foundation set up a year ago on an all-industry basis with finance provided out of the revenue of the Eady fund. Total output of the first year will comprise six features, six two-reelers, six shorts and a colored novelty film.

The four exhibiting groups will comprise the three major circuits, Odeon, Gaumont British and Associated British, plus the independents. Each of the four groups are to draw lots for the exclusive first-run share of the product.

'Bachelors' Heads For Scot Touring Record

Aberdeen, Scotland, Oct. 28.

New Scot comedy, "Bachelors Are Bold," by T. M. Watson, is breaking records on a tour through Scotland, with SRO biz the rule. When present itinerary winds up here Nov. 15, company will have played to upwards of 150,000, an all-time record for any play ever to tour Scotland.

In Edinburgh, "Bachelors" played to nearly 35,000 during the festival. Cast is headed by Duncan Macrae, Scot legit actor, who is presenting the tour jointly with the author.

TUC'S O'BRIEN ASKS PERPETUATION OF EADY

London, Oct. 28.

While the British film industry is still undecided on the future of the Eady levy, through which a substantial subsidy is handed over from each admission tab to British producers, the labor movement under the leadership of Tom O'Brien, M.P., Trades Union Congress prexy, is to ask the government to take any necessary action to insure its perpetuation. Its economic committee has asked the Board of Trade prexy to receive a deputation.

By taking this action, the TUC is hoping to force a quick decision on the issue. It appreciates the important part the Eady fund plays in maintaining a degree of prosperity in British studios. At the same time, TUC would urge the government to take steps to restore the distributors' quota which was wiped out in the 1948 Films Act. It now is barred by international agreement.

Satchmo Touring Italy

Milan, Oct. 21.

Louis Armstrong and his band will tour Italy starting from Milan Oct. 22 under the management of Luigi Ivaldi, who represents the Lew and Leslie Grade Agency for Italy. The same impresario is organizing a four-month tour of West Germany for the Buster Crabe show, "Water Parade," starting next January. A tour of Europe will follow.

Ivaldi is the Italian agent-impresario with probably the largest number of American acts under contract in Italy.

Cinerama

the legit musical recently purchased by Louis B. Mayer, but no definite decision has been reached to date.

Cooper pointed out that "This Is Cinerama," currently running in N. Y., cost about $1,000,000 and is expected to recoup the original cost from that run alone. He predicted the picture would run in N. Y. for several years and that the company will have to open another theatre there to show it.

Several major studios want to use the Cinerama process, Cooper said, but to date no commitments have been made. He has been contacted by a number of name stars eager for roles in Cinerama. Cooper predicted that Cinerama will be television's main enemy within two years.

Problem of setting up Cinerama throughout the country is still unsettled, Cooper declared, but will be handled by Louis B. Mayer, whose investment in the company is "way over a million." Company has equipment now for three more Cinerama theatres, and one of them, and probably two, will be opened in Los Angeles in about six months. The current cost of installation ranges from $25,000 to $75,000, according to the theatre, but mass production is bound to bring that figure down.

Cinerama pix, Cooper explained, can be made with lower budgets because of fewer scenes and longer takes. Because of the tremendous scope of the Cinerama screen, there will be no need of closeups. "You see the full expression on a full-length figure," he said.

Schaefer, who is associated with him in Natural Vision. Pair are discussing with major film companies and indie producers further licensing of the tri-dimension process. First licensing of Natural Vision was given by Gunzburg to Arch Oboler's "Bwana Devil," which is slated for a late November release. Oboler's second Natural Vision film will be "Spear and Sand." No production date has been set on this property yet. Before winging east, Gunzburg closed a deal with Bob Clampett, who plans to transpose the popular TV puppet show, "Time for Beany," into a full-length tri-dimensional film. Gunzburg said he was also in the process of negotiating a four-picture-a-year deal with a major studio.

Exec stressed that Natural Vision, which requires the use of polaroid specs to obtain the three-dimensional illusion, is an inexpensive process, adding little to the production or exhibition cost. He said it calls for little changes in theatre equipment, requiring only that two projectors be synchronized. He estimated this operation would average about $100. Theatre would also need a reflector or directional-type screen.

Natural Vision, based on the stereoscopic system, employs the fundamentals of "natural vision." Its camera is actually two cameras in a single unit photographing separate film strips. These in turn are projected simultaneously with two projectors interlocked to run in unison.

some years. Stager starting Tuesday (4) or Wednesday will have four vaude acts with band on stage. It's likely that show following that will have a similar policy.

The productionless policy with band on the boards was designed in time for the Skouras confabs. If it's decided to make the Roxy "the world's only permanent ice theatre," then these periods can be utilized to change over to the larger ice rink. Otherwise, it would be necessary to close.

Closing of the house temporarily is still a possibility, nonetheless. New NT management may want to make a big splash out of the Roxy conversion to ice. Therefore, the theatre may be closed for a short time for redecoration or possibly a change of seats, and would reopen with a big gala.

Show going in will comprise Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals with Johnny Puleo; Frances Langford, Maurice Rocco, and Blackburn Twins & Marion Colby.

It's recalled that the Center Theatre (now an NBC televising point) was for several years a permanent ice theatre operated by Arthur M. Wirtz and Sonja Henie. Feeling still lingers that there's a permanent market for icers in New York and Roxy may change over to hit that b.o. segment.

the prints from exchange area to exchange area to meet the demands of the particular zones. Exhib argument is that the number of prints hasn't been upped in proportion to the increase in simultaneous runs.

With increase in the number of prints, distribs claim their film costs have skyrocketed. Although cost for Technicolor footage has remained steady since 1946, cost for b&w footage has been hiked, with a black-and-whiter costing about $210 currently as against about $160 in '46. Reason for increase cost of the b&w prints is the cutdown in orders in this category while there has been a steady upbeat in tinter prints. With labs working on a mass production basis, it's less costlier per unit on large and more frequent orders.

WB

AND FOLLOWS 'SPRINGFIELD RIFLE' AT THE N.Y. PARAMOUNT!

Healthy Upbeat In Total Value Of Sept. Shares

Healthy upswing in aggregate value of amusement shares during September was disclosed in figures released by the New York Stock Exchange last week. The shares increased in value, during the 30-day period by $29,562,890. However, their average per-share price declined from $19.96 at the end of August to $19.56 as of the last day of September.

Dip per share results from more stock on the market following last month's divorcement of 20th-Fox from its big subsidiary, National Theatres. Both companies retired their old and issued new stock. Slump in per-share value reverses a trend in past months which saw average prices climb due to policies of some majors in purchasing their own stock on the open market for retirement.

A similar upsurge in values is evidenced in comparisons of closing prices at the end of September, 1952, with those of the same date a year ago. Composite value of all amusement shares listed on the Big Board went up $30,866,211. Total value of all shares was $1,256,139,922 at the end of September; $1,226,577,032 at the end of August and $1,225,273,711 at the end of September, 1951.

Most of the increase is believed to stem from advances in television and radio stocks, whose current quotations are around the year's high. Films, on the other hand, have not been faring as well. In contrast to the activity in stocks, amusement bonds were quiet both last month and in August. Their total market value remained unchanged at $6,963,630.

Short interest in RCA as of Oct. 15, the Exchange revealed, was 24,755 shares as against 24,131 on Sept. 15. While these figures are virtually the same, short interest in 20th-Fox's new issue as of Oct. 15 was only 800 shares, compared to 3,190 (old) the previous month.

New England Allied Preps List of Beefs For Nat'l Conclave

Boston, Oct. 28.

Although the agenda for Allied States Assn.'s annual convention to be held Nov. 17-19 at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, hasn't been disclosed as yet, the organization's New England affiliate has prepared a list of beefs to be "explained and discussed" at the conclave. As outlined in its current bulletin, Independent Exhibitors cites seven "paradoxical cases within our industry."

"We have said on several occasions that the industry was too young too die," Independent Exhibs states, "but this does not preclude immature, non-thinking individuals from committing harikiri and affecting all of their associates—like, for instance: 1, Columbia's making half-hour programs for competing TV; 2, Film companies are generally getting more money from exhibitors while Government figures showed $6,074,808 less collected in taxes at the boxoffice for July, 1952, than in 1951."

For its third squawk IE asserts that Metro, Fox, Warners and others are "literally forcing" exhibs to advance admissions . . . instead of attempting to woo the public back to the b.o. No. 4 concerns an "apathy in New England and other places toward 'Movietime' tours when we should be out hollering from the mountain tops . . ." Last three complaints involve retrieving that "lost audience," berate certain companies for making product available to TV and criticize the majors for insisting upon extended playing time to the "detriment" of everyone concerned.

Howard Barnes at M-G

Howard Barnes, former drama and film critic on the New York Herald Tribune, has joined the Metro homeoffice ad-pub department on a temporary basis.

He has a three-month assignment, working on the buildup for the upcoming M-G production of "Julius Caesar."

Strange Praise

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

Usually devoted in large part to raps at distributors for alleged unfair trade practices, the North Central Allied monthly bulletin gets off its much beaten path to actually heap praise on a film company. In its current edition, the bulletin makes United Artists the recipient of its kind words because of the company's announcement that it will reveal the winning bid to losers when it awards pictures competitively.

The bulletin also states that, as it went to press, it learned that 20th-Fox probably "will go along on the same basis, with limitations," and that, it declares, "is another step in the right direction."

"Many of us have long suspected that bids are not fairly awarded," says Bernie Berger, NCA president, in addressing the territory's exhibitors through the bulletin.

Metro Would Cash In On Cinerama by Reissue Of 3d Dimension Shorts

Based on the acclaim received by Cinerama with its presentation of a tri-dimensional illusion, Metro, at the urging of exhibs, is weighing the reissue of a trio of Pete Smith one-reelers which, with aid of special glasses, offer a three-dimensional view. First short, originally released in 1936, was popularly received, but only regarded as a novelty. It was made by Loucks & Norling, production outfit which has been pioneering the three-dimensional process.

Titled "Audioscopiks," the Smith specialty requires cardboard spectacles with red and green gelatin eyepieces. It is the cost of these special specs which is delaying M-G's decision to reissue the shorts. According to a shorts dept. exec, the cost of these glasses has increased several hundred percent, and if a deal can be worked whereby exhibs will contribute to the cost, the shorts may be revived to cash in on the Cinerama publicity. One angle being considered to defray the costs of the specs, which have to be die-cut, is the selling of advertising space on the cardboard frames.

Idea to reissue the Smith tri-dimensionals stemmed from members of Jersey Allied, who see in the one-reelers a method to hypo biz by tying in with the publicity obtained by Cinerama. The exhib outfit's execs are set to confer this week with Charles Reagan, M-G sales topper, about the possibility of getting first crack at the Smith shorts.

Riot-Hit Loew's House To Reopen in Cairo

Loew's Metro Theatre in Cairo, which was severely damaged during the Egyptian riots last January, will be reopened in late November. House was refurbished at a cost of $300,000. Reopening picture will be M-G's "Quo Vadis."

Meanwhile, Loew's as well as other companies whose properties were damaged during the rioting have filed claims against the Egyptian government.

Sam Dembow, indie producer's rep and vet in distribution. Hughes nixed the proposal. Reports are that Dembow may still be interested in buying at the $6 price, or close to it.

Stolkin, Koolish and Gorman ankled RKO last Wednesday (22) on the heels of the Wall St. Journal series, which detailed embarrassing aspects of their business careers. Sidney Korshak, Chicago lawyer who had been taken on as a $15,000-per-year labor counsel, also joined the exodus.

Trio exiting the board stated: "Our only interest in acquiring stock of RKO Pictures Corp. was our belief that the company can be, under able and independent management, brought to the full realization of its great potential. We recognize that a volume of unfavorable publicity directed against us as individuals has been or can be damaging to the company."

CLOSEUP OF A U.S. FILM ON LOCATION IN ISRAEL

Tel Aviv.

Editor, VARIETY:

We have been a real curiosity to the Israeli people. A major movie company moving into the streets of Haifa, Jerusalem, Safed, Acre with cameras, sound trucks and real live Hollywood actors, is enough to bring out thousands each day we work. The Kramer Co., anticipating just this, had made police arrangements accordingly. But the one factor that none of us counted on was the police being as curious as the crowds. Enough said. They were valiant always, but the crowds did occasionally wind up in the shot. As the days went on, we adopted a procedure that worked. We roped off areas blocks away from the location, but the children were not to be denied (and there are literally thousands of them, it seems), and they kept slipping through anyway. There also was one old gentleman of Arab extraction who insisted on passing through our lines, regardless of police, our entreaties and threats of arrest. He argued it was his right to go up the street, and no end of discussions would dissuade him. He went through. Democracy in action.

Kirk Douglas has been working as hard as any actor I have ever seen. Between running up alleys that start at about 70 degrees, 20 and 30 takes, and climbing Israeli mountains, making personal appearances where 5-6,000 people almost tear his clothes off, he manages to keep a cheery and excited attitude towards his work and the people. And it's not hard to understand. These people have a relish and appreciation of American films and American pix actors that make you proud you are part of the business. And with all their short rations and high prices, the picture theatres are jammed.

"The Window" had just closed the day before we arrived, and the surprise on the faces of so many people that recognized me was rewarding. The fact that I materialized before their eyes, with the picture so fresh in their minds, was great timing for us.

We have a skeleton crew from the States, and the differences in language have produced some amusing results. The additional crew we are using here, all native, speak Hebrew, Yiddish, German, French, Arabic and, if you'll excuse me, sometimes Russian. In addition to our two assistant directors brought from the States, we use a multi-lingual Israeli assistant. Sometimes an order is translated into all the languages, and then the action begins.

We have all been thankful that we haven't anyone with us by the name of "Ken," since it is the Hebrew word for "yes." And just before the shot when they are asked if they are all set, you hear ringing out over the hills, "Ken, ken, ken." It seems we have brought the Hollywood "yes" man to Israel.

Oscar Karlweis is with us, and has renewed his European fame. The next village to where we are staying is a resort called Naharya. It was settled in 1936 by German Jews who saw the handwriting on the walls of Berlin. They have retained all of their German habits and external appearances. The village streets are lined with eucalyptus trees instead of Linden. Delightful cafes, serving fine beer, are crowded almost one next to the other. When the inhabitants learned that Karlweis was in the country, it wasn't long before he was invited to appear in a concert at their tiny outdoor amphitheatre. Douglas, Edward Dmytryk and a lot of us attended. While the program was performed in German, between us we managed to translate the best of it. It was a sentimental journey for all, Karlweis was delightful in song and chatter, and recalled many of his successful musical comedy roles in Vienna and Berlin, all composed by Ralph Benatzky. Later, when he sang "Zwei Herzen In 3/4 Takt," a song he had introduced in 1930 in UFA's never to be forgotten film, when he finished there wasn't a dry eye in the house, including ours. So successful was this appearance, that before he leaves the country, he will play in Haifa and Tel Aviv, and as many other dates as will fit in with our schedule.

All things considered the work has been going quickly and efficiently. The cooperation of the Israeli government has been extraordinary, as well as the Israeli people. We are hoping that when we leave, the Israeli people will like and admire us, as we do them.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

The sort of thing that is going to save Hollywood from a fate worse than debt is well illustrated in Warners' "The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima." Here is something that has been a matter of public record for 35 years. Hundreds have written books and articles about it. Churches throughout the civilized world have held novenas in honor of it. Documentary films, newsreels and stills have shown as many as a million pilgrims making the trek annually up those barren Portuguese hills to Fatima.

Any night in many towns around seven o'clock you can hear rosaries being recited over local radio stations, all designed to win Russia back to sanity by prayers instead of cold or hot wars. They are doing this because they believe those Fatima revelations to three little children were the sort of prophecies the world had better pay more attention to.

But all this doesn't mean that there's a motion picture in it. How Warners ever were convinced that there was is a bigger mystery than Fatima. That they picked Bryan E. Foy to produce it is another uplifting mystery. That he picked John Brahm, a well-grounded Lutheran, to direct is the biggest mystery of all.

Wilbur Crane is credited with the story but it was, as I say, practically in the public domain for 35 years. Jimmy O'Hanlon was called in to polish the script, and this was the nearest the Freres came to hiring anybody to whom Fatima was a matter of faith, not a picture property.

Yet all of them have turned out a boxoffice hit. They spent nine months fighting each other on how to make the picture. It was nine months well spent. Truth crushed to earth, many times I suspect during those conferences, rose again and proved once more that Hollywood when rousted hard enough will drop its boxoffice "musts" now and then and emerge with something more beautiful than two young or middle-aged people schmooing each other till the Johnston office yells quits.

One of the best features of "Fatima" is in the matter of story construction. Essentially it had little, and that little couldn't be hopped up or played down. Three little children in a poor mountain town see a vision of the Blessed Virgin. The Lady tells them to return on a certain day every month for six months. They learn that this earth will be plagued with a war more horrible than the one going on in 1917 if people don't mend their ways. If that one doesn't teach them anything, a third world war, far worse than the other two, will be the fate of this unbelieving world. Two of the children will not live to see it, but a third will, and she is not to reveal a part of the prophecy till after her death. But the revealed part of the prophecy is simple enough: pray for the salvation of Russia, and save yourselves.

Four 'Heavies' Split the Billing

That the children will be persecuted for believing they saw what they saw is foretold, but the human way the role of heavy is shifted from person to person makes this a believable picture. First their mothers don't believe them. Then the parish priest takes on the role of heavy. Then the bishop. And over them all, the cloud of a hostile government.

That a million persons now make the pilgrimage to Fatima each summer, many making the last miles on their knees to the shrine of Our Lady of Fatima, is proof that faith, which is the healthy tissue of mankind, as well as fear, which is the cancerous side of Communism as well as Christianity, can grow amazingly fast in a short time.

For a finish Brahm jumps from the childhood era of those most involved in the mystery to today. The agnostic, played superbly by Gilbert Roland, and little Lucia, now a nun, meet in the chapel of the huge church which has been built at Fatima. Susan Whitney plays Lucia both as a child and as Sister Maria das Dores. Sister Dores is presently a nun in a cloistered order, but has been allowed to visit Fatima on occasion. So this meeting could have happened.

She is constantly being questioned about the apparitions. Several years ago her bishop allowed her to give her testimony in support of the beatification of Jacinta and Francisco, the two children who witnessed the visions with her and died not long afterward.

She Knew All the Answers

Her story has not changed in the smallest details in 35 years. A transcript of one of her earlier trials after she had been arrested reveals that the investigators were smart operators but they were stumped by a child who doesn't know how to lie. The transcript reads:

"The Lady commanded you to learn to read?"

"Yes, the second time she appeared."

"But if she said she would take you to heaven in the month of the coming October, what good would it be for you to learn to read?"

"That is not true. The Lady never said that she would take me to heaven in October, and I have never said she told me such a thing."

"Why did you lower your eyes sometimes and stop looking at the Lady?"

"Because at times she blinded me."

"Did she teach you some prayer?"

"Yes, she wanted us to recite it after each mystery of the rosary."

"Do you know this prayer by heart?"

"I do."

"Say it."

"O my Jesus, pardon us, and save us from the fire of hell; and draw all souls to heaven, especially those in most need."

That ended her first interrogation and after endless batterings since 1917 nothing has changed her story. Today millions repeat that prayer several times daily and churches throughout the world devote an hour on Saturday to Fatima services.

That John Brahm should be picked to direct such a picture might be surprising to those who viewed the blood and thunder of his "Thief of Venice" but not to those who knew that his uncle, Otto Brahm, discovered Max Reinhardt, producer of "The Miracle." John's father was Ludwig Brahm, the actor.

John Brahm's Body

John would have been an actor, too, I suspect, if the first World War hadn't heaved him among the dog-faced infantry, where he served for four years. In 1919 he picked up the threads of a theatrical career in Vienna, miles from his native city of Hamburg, and staged productions at Burgtheatre for six years.

Then he went to Berlin where he directed plays by Shakespeare, Molnar, Strindberg, Ibsen, Shaw and Schnitzler, as well as Rostand and Verneuil at the Kunstler and Lessing Theatres.

He tried directing his first picture in Paris in 1934 and then wrote his first picture script. It was in England, for Sir Seymour Hicks, an adaptation of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

It was in England that he got the job assisting D. W. Griffith in a remake of "Broken Blossoms." In fact, he finished the picture when Griffith walked. This was the picture that created so much heat that it set the studio on fire. But the negative was saved, and it helped Brahm's career a lot.

In fact, it got him to Hollywood. That was in 1937. He has done a variety of pictures since, both here and abroad, notably "The Lodger," "Hangover Square," "Passage West," "Escape to Glory," "The Thief of Venice," and now his topper, "The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima."

He represents the last of a great line of German directors, and that his talents have survived the bias of two world wars is proof that a divinity has shaped his career.

Stock shots provide the most interest in this mild programmer, apparently one of the last Monogram will turn out. Firm has announced it is dropping the familiar tag to be known henceforth as Allied Artists, with a resultant emphasis on bigger-budget pix. "Army Bound," a mild 60-minute filler, typifies the category being washed out in the switch.

Dull story and screenplay by Al Martin revolves around a midget-car driver who meets a new girl just as he's about to be drafted. He draws as his commanding officer a former racer with whom he's tangled and goes through formula situations to win the girl at the fadeout after saving the officer's life in an arsenal fire.

Paul Landres' direction isn't able to infuse any life into the film, and even the fire scene is lacking in the expected suspense. Stanley Clements and Karen Sharpe are pleasant in the leads, and the performance of Steve Brodie, as an army pal; John Fontaine, the officer, and Harry Hayden and Lela Bliss, as her parents, are okay. Technical credits are average, and Ben Schwalb's production makes good use of stock shots and local backgrounds to help gloss over the script's weaknesses. Kap.

The Gentle Gunman
(BRITISH)

Michael Balcon meller too leisurely for big U.S. biz.

London, Oct. 21.

GFD release of Michael Balcon production. Stars John Mills, Dirk Bogarde, Robert Beatty and Elizabeth Sellars. Directed by Basil Dearden. Screenplay, Roger Macdougall; camera, Gordon Dines; editor, Peter Tanner; music, John Greenwood. At Odeon, Marble Arch, London, Oct. 21, '52. Running time, 86 MINS.

When Roger Macdougall wrote "The Gentle Gunman" as a straight play, he obviously had his eye on its screen potentialities, and his screenplay from the original broadens the canvass and heightens the action. In this Ealing production, his story of the IRA is treated too leisurely and it robs the film of much of its suspense potential. It has, however, marquee strength for local theatres and the name John Mills may have enough appeal in America to get some bookings.

The story is set in the early days of the last war when proud and intense Irish nationalists were adding to the confusion and chaos with time bombs in telephone booths and subway stations. Two brothers have become involved in this terrorist activity and the elder, played by John Mills, realizes that their plotting will not help to achieve their purpose. When he tries to influence his younger brother he's accused of being a traitor and it is not until after there have been several needless killings that the logic of his viewpoint is appreciated.

Action of the film switches from London to Eire and Belfast. It is in the latter setting that the action highspot is concentrated, when IRA gunmen attempt to free two prisoners who are being transferred from London to serve a 10-year sentence in an Irish gaol. But their release had already been effected by Mills, not entirely out of loyalty to the cause, but primarily to save his brother from the foolhardy rescue plan that had been evolved.

Strong point of the production is the fine all-round acting standard. The Irish accents may not always convince but the performers play their parts with an assured touch. John Mills and Dirk Bogarde give down-to-earth portrayals as the two brothers, playing with sincerity and conviction. Elizabeth Sellars is the girl who is loved by them in turn and is left behind when they both renounce their IRA loyalty. She turns in an impressive, calculated preformance. Robert Beatty does a solid job as the gang leader while Gilbert Harding, radio and TV commentator, makes an excellent screen debut. Barbara Mullen, Joseph Tomelty and Liam Redmond are at the top of a first-rate supporting cast.

Gordon Dines has done an okay job on lensing. Myro.

"The Golden Hawk" is a seafaring swashbuckler that gives exhibs little more to exploit than the lush color and tasteful mounting. Routine thesping and hokey plot line make its b.o. chances slim.

Screenplay, adapted by Robert E. Kent from Frank Yerby's novel, has the stock ingredients of most adventure mellers but it doesn't jell in this try. There's a beautiful and rather buxom femme pirate and a stalwart hero, also a pirate, who are enmeshed in the 17th century battles between France and Spain in the Caribbean. The farfetched plotting has the privateer (Sterling Hayden) rescue the gal pirate (Rhonda Fleming) from the ship of his arch enemy (John Sutton), who is the governor of a Spanish stronghold in the Caribbean. Feud between Hayden and Sutton is outcome of former's belief that the Spanish governor was responsible for his mother's death. Interspersed between some good battle scenes, the plot plods on to reveal that Miss Fleming is really a British lady engaged in pirating only to recover her fortune which she lost to the French and that Sutton is Hayden's father. It's all implausible.

Hayden is out of his element as the gallant French privateer while Miss Fleming helps with sock eye appeal. Helena Carter is okay as Sutton's wife, who has a slight crush on Hayden. Sutton is believable, and the rest of the supporting players essay their stock roles of soldiers and pirates adequately.

Sidney Salkow's direction is stilted. William V. Skall's camera catches some good effects. Gros.

Trip to America
(Le Voyage en Amerique)
(FRENCH)

Martin J. Lewis release of Fred Orain production. Stars Yvonne Printemps, Pierre Fresnay. Directed by Henri Lavorel. Screenplay, Lavorel and Roland Laudenbach; music, Francis Poulenc; camera, Henri Alekan. At 55th Street Playhouse, N. Y., Oct. 18, '52. Running time, 82 MINS.

|---|---|
| Clotilde Fournier | Yvonne Printemps |
| Gaston Fournier | Pierre Fresnay |
| Soalhat | Oliver Hussenot |
| Marie | Jane Morlet |
| Marguerite | Lisette Le Bon |
| Francois | Claude Laydu |

(In French; English Titles)

"Trip to America," a well-made, simple French story, looms as a nice boxoffice entry at foreign-language theatres and arty spots. Pic boasts the starring team of Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay, an added draw.

Film is one of those refreshing vehicles with just the proper amount of Gallic charm to hold interest. Very little that's exciting happens but the small-town incidents in the lives of a middle-aged French couple suffice. Plot has the 50-year-old banker and his comely wife (Fresnay and Miss Printemps) suddenly deciding to make a plane trip to America. Their lives in the typically old French village are so methodical that such a junket seems a necessary change from their daily habits. Even the promise to buy an orchard for his wife fails to dissuade her insistence on the U. S. trip. Their efforts to get passage, a closeup of an Air France airliner (terrific plug for this line) and a few sketchy episodes on the plane constitute the bulk of the trip. Footage is devoted to their reactions on departure, aboard the plane and their arrival back home. Included is a slight love story between an auto mechanic, son of the couple's gardner, and a young orphan girl.

Aside from the expected smooth performances of the Printemps-Fresnay team, which keep the film together, Henri Lavorel's direction has much to do with making such a routine yarn interesting. He also has had a hand in the scripting, with Roland Laudenbach, and this has helped, too. Francis Poulenc has supplied the fine music. Lensing of Henri Alekan is excellent while Fred Orain has given the pic good production values.

Oliver Hussenot, as the gardner, and Jane Morlet, the housekeeper, furnish strong support. The young romantic couple are Lisette Le Bon and Claude Laydu, who do okay. Wear.

Venetian Bird
(BRITISH)

Richard Todd in implausible, tedious sleuth meller; mild chances in U. S.

London, Oct. 14.

GFD release of Betty Box production. Stars Richard Todd, Eva Bartok and John Gregson; features George Coulouris, Margot Grahame. Directed by Ralph Thomas. Screenplay, Victor Canning; camera, Ernest Steward; editor, Gerald Thomas; music, Nino Rota. At Odeon, Leicester Square, London.

|---|---|
| Edward Mercer | Richard Todd |
| Adriana | Eva Bartok |
| Sassana | John Gregson |
| Spadoni | George Coulouris |
| Rosa Melitus | Margot Grahame |
| Count Borian | Walter Rilla |
| Lieut. Longo | John Bailey |
| Bernado | Sidney James |
| Gufo | Martin Boddey |
| Moretto | Michael Balfour |
| Boldesca | Sidney Tafler |
| Crespi | Miles Malleson |
| Gostini | Eric Pohlmann |
| Minelli | David Hurst |
| Luigi | Raymond Young |
| Tio | Ferdy Mayne |
| Renata | Jill Clifford |
| Nerva | Tony Lucarda |
| Ninetta | Janice Kane |
| Woman Detective | Eileen Way |

The Venice locations are one of the better features of this British film. In most other respects it is a pedestrian meller, with an implausible plot which does not take positive shape until the last couple of reels. The quota ticket alone is enough to sell it at home but it won't command much attention in overseas markets.

The script was written by Victor Canning from his own novel of the same name. Story is focused on a private detective sent to Venice to locate a missing person. The first informant is dragged out of a canal before he has had time to talk and subsequently the sleuth is assured that the man he's looking for was killed in a wartime air raid. He refuses to be fooled by this story and eventually is implicated in a plot to kill a political leader before he get his man.

Although the story has the seeds of an action film, the pace is often slow. There are odd moments of suspense but the whole thing is too contrived to be convincing.

The talent lineup for this picture could have been used to greater advantage. Richard Todd struggles manfully with his role as the English detective but Eva Bartok, in the role of wife of the wanted man, is completely wasted. She has a negative part with little opportunity. John Gregson, George Coulouris, Margot Grahame and the others in the cast are restricted by the subject. Ralph Thomas has done a so-so job as director. Best technical credit goes to Ernest Steward for his camera work. Myro.

Die Foersterchristl
(The Forester's Daughter)
(GERMAN-MUSICAL)

Vienna, Oct. 7.

International Films release of Guenther-Stapenhorst production. Stars Hannerl Matz and Will Quadflieg. Directed by Arthur M. Rabenalt. Screenplay adapted from operetta by George Jarno and M. Buchbinder by Fritz Boettger and Joachim Wedekind; camera, Friedl Behn-Grund; musical arrangements, Bruno Uher. At Forum, Vienna. Running time, 95 MINS.

|---|---|
| Christl | Hannerl Matz |
| Ilona | Angelika Hauff |
| Kaiser Franz Joseph | Karl Schoenboeck |
| Joseph Foeldessy | Will Quadflieg |
| Leisinger | Oskar Sima |

Operatic romance, punched with a full measure of suspense, makes the "Foersterchristl" a good picture. It may do for foreign-language and some arty houses in the U. S.

It is the familiar story of a girl who falls in love with the emperor without knowing his identity. Later she persuades him to intervene on behalf of her first lover, who had been a rebel. Before the last war, this operetta scored heavily. Film scripters did not attempt to alter the original much.

Hannerl Matz handles her role with amusing bewilderment, and her singing is not quite up to par. Will Quadflieg, as the Hungarian officer, overdoes his part. Karl Schoenboeck makes the emperor a realistic one. The comedy of Oskar Sima and Iwan Petrovitsch is excellent.

Arthur M. Rabenalt's directing concentrates on action. The one great hit waltz, "Mister Emperor" and a few other songs were carefully orchestrated by Bruno Uher. Production values are plushy and technical assists okay, including Friedl Behn-Grunds lensing. Maas.

Abenteuer in Wien
(Adventures in Vienna)
(GERMAN)

Vienna, Oct. 14.

Sascha Film release of Schoenbrunn-Ernst Mueller-Kreidl K.G.-Transglobe production. Features Gustav Froehlich, Cornell Borchers, Franz Lederer. Directed by E. E. Reinert. Screenplay, M. Kehlmann and Franz Tassie; camera, Helmuth Fischer-Ashley; music, Richard Hageman with orchestra score by Hans Hagen. At Loewen Kino, Vienna. Running time, 85 MINS.

|---|---|
| Toni Sponer | Gustav Froehlich |
| Karin Manelli | Cornell Borchers |
| Claude Manelli | Franz Lederer |
| Krueger | Eggon von Jordan |
| Marie | Inga Konradi |

No less than four companies, including the American Transglobe, since folded, are credited as producers of this. Although well-equipped productionwise, this thriller lacks sharpness and pace. Its cast names carry weight in German-speaking countries, but reception likely will be mild. It offers little for the U. S. market. Original story by L. Holenia "I Was Jack Mortimer" was not so well adapted by scripters.

Story involves a chauffeur (Gustave Froelich), who is a D.P. without identification papers. His passenger is murdered and he keeps the dead man's papers for his own use. A chase through Vienna, a sorry imitation of the "Third Man" ends with the arrest of the jealous murderer (Franz Lederer). Story fails to hold the audience.

The actors have little to work with. Camera job by Helmuth Fischer-Ashley is good but the editing is sad. E. E. Reiner directed, but not well. American composer Richard Hageman wrote the score; it was arranged for orchestration by Hans Hagen. It is no better than the music written recently by Austrian composers for Austrian pix. And that is not exiting. Maas.

Brelan D'As
(Full House)
(FRENCH)

Paris, Oct. 21.

Pathe Consortium release of Calamy-Terra Films production. Stars Michel Simon, Raymond Rouleau. Directed by Henri Verneuil. Screenplay, Jacques Campaneez from stories by Peter Cheney, Simenon, S. A., Steeman; camera, Andre German; editor, Georges Rongier. At Paramount, Paris. Running time, 118 MINS.

|---|---|
| Maigret | Michel Simon |
| Wens | Raymond Rouleau |
| Lemmy Caution | Van Dreelen |
| Florence | Arlette Merry |
| Micheline | Natalie Nattier |
| Christian | Christian Fourcade |

The full house in this comprises three sketches based on the expoits of three fictional whodunit characters. But it is not much of a thriller in action or suspense. The names of Michel Simon and Raymond Rouleau will give this an impetus here but for the U. S. the film's appeal in most spots is negligible.

The first story "The Alibi of Mr. Wens" concerns the suave Belgian private eye who operates with a sharp tongue, fine insight and a vague blond fiancee. The next one, "I Am An Easy Guy," is a Peter Cheyney hard-boiled story of an American G-Man. Story is a bit vague and try at imitation of American movement and violence is strictly below par. The last story, "Choir Boy's Testimony," is the best of the trio because of the fine thesping of Michel Simon as Inspector Migret and Christian Fourcade as the moppet who saw a crime commited.

Direction is ordinary with a few standout bits attributable to the thesps. Raymond Rouleau plays Wens with charm, and is abetted by the snide acting of Maurice Teynac as the too-shewd murderer. Van Dreelen, a Dutchman, is adequate as the dynamic, brutal but sentimental G-man. Simon brings depth to the Maigret character in the short running time. Christian Fourcade, as the terrified choir boy, turns in an excellent, restrained acting job. Mosk.

Il Brigante Di Tacca Del Lupo
(The Bandit of Tacca Del Lupo)
(ITALIAN)

Venice, Oct. 7.

Lux Film release of a Cines-Lux-Rovere production. Stars Amedeo Nazzari, Cosetta Greco, Saro Urzi, Fausto Tozzi, Aldo Bufi Landi. Directed by Pietro Germi. Screenplay, Federico Fellini, Pietro Germi, Tullio Pinelli, Fausto Tozzi, from novel by Ricardo Bacchelli; camera, Leonida Barboni; music, Carlo Rustichelli; editor, Rolando Benedetti. Running time, 103 MINS.

|---|---|
| Capt. Giordani | Amedeo Nazzari |
| Zitamaria | Cosetta Greco |
| Sicelli | Saro Urzi |
| Magistrelli | Fausto Tozzi |
| Lieut. Righi | Aldo Buffi Landi |

Film's value is in being an actioner plus its patriotic motifs and local marquee names. This will get it across for fair grosses in Italy. Abroad, it is dubious for art houses although lingualers may give it a spin.

Pic recounts the tracking down of a bandit and his gang by a group of soldiers in the politically confused 1860's when Italy had just become united via annexation of the southern states. Woven through this but never fully enough exploited are several subsidiary themes, including the need for brotherhood between the north and south and the results of the South's ironbound code of honor. Somewhat patterned along lines of U. S. westerns laid in Civil War days, this has many shortcomings even as an actioner. Script gives actors little to work with, and there are many stretches of tedium before pic comes to life for the final assualt on bandit's lair.

All action is location-shot in the rugged south Italian hills, being splendidly lensed by Leonida Barboni. Direction is vigorous enough. Pic falls down mainly because of an empty, tedious script. Actors perform creditably, including Amedeo Nazzari as the leader of the soldiers and Saro Urzi as a local police officer. Cosetta Greco has little to do as the lone girl involved. Carlo Rustichelli's music backdrops appropriately. Hawk.

Sensualita
(ITALIAN)

Genoa, Oct. 21.

Paramount release of a Ponti-De Laurentiis production. Stars Eleonora Rossi-Drago, Amedeo Nazzari, Marcello Mastroianni. Directed by Clemente Fracassi. Screenplay, Alberto Moravia, Ennio De Concini, Fracassi, from story by DeConcini and Fracassi; camera, Aldo Tonti. At Olimpia, Genoa. Running time, 93 MINS.

|---|---|
| Franca | Eleonora Rossi Drago |
| Riccardo | Amedeo Nazzari |
| Carlo | Marcello Mastroianni |

This film is highly exploitable item, being co-produced by the maker of "Bitter Rice." Likewise backgrounded by the summer-heated Po Valley, "Sensuality" does not measure up to "Rice," with which it has obvious similarities. Should do well locally. Elsewhere, its chances look good if given proper bally and dependent, of course, on censor's okay to its more commerciable assets.

Story follows familiar triangle pattern of "Rice," "Furia" and other pix which inspired its authors. Franca (Eleonora Rossi Drago) is a Slav refugee and temporary laborer in a Po Valley farm owned by two brothers. Rejected by one brother, when she attempts to seduce him, she turns to the other, who eventually agrees to marry her. Back on the farm, after a honeymoon, the triangle takes shape as the unmarried brother also falls for her. After trying to fight it off, he decides to leave. When she runs after him into the fields, her husband catches on and chases them.

In the implausible finale, she shoots her lover, is in turn shot by her husband. Tagged-on Bible quote salves the local censor.

Three principals give clean-cut performances, with Miss Drago standing out as the key figure. Her sex appeal is more studied than instinctive, but she works over her material competently. Script, weakest link of the film, works over tried-and-true situations in an obvious manner, and almost falls to pieces at the end. Direction by newcomer, Clemente Fracassi, is competent. Aldo Tonti's camera is fine, but the uncredited musical score overdoes those "Lost Weekend" chords at every appearance by the woman. Hawk.

Austrian GI Cinemas Up Scale

Vienna, Oct. 14.

Army authorities in Austria have announced upped ticket prices for all GI houses in the American command.

As of October 19, a soldier ticket will cost 25c (now 20c). Civilians also get a nickel raise to 35c. U.S. Forces in Austria operate film houses in Vienna, Salzburg, Linz, St. Johann. Zell am See and within several Army camps.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Novel exploitation stunt, in which Burt Lancaster kicks off the publicity campaign, is being employed on Hal Wallis' upcoming Paramount release, "Come Back, Little Sheba." Lancaster, who appears in the film with Shirley Booth, makes his contribution in a form letter mailed to the press from the Fiji Islands, where he's locationing for his Warner venture, "His Majesty O'Keefe."

In going in for what Lancaster calls the "delicate art of press agentry," he writes that his latest venture is strictly temporary and "inspired by the tremendous impact of a new star in pictures—Miss Booth—with whom I have the privilege to work in Hal Wallis' 'Come Back, Little Sheba,' a fine picture that will be coming your way just after the first of the year." He adds that "I've selected a kit of art and stories that came out of the picture . . . it'll be along in the next few weeks for use at your discretion."

To call attention to the revival of the Nostradamus shorts, which the studio hasn't made for eight years, Metro is sending out an announcement on parchment paper in the form of a letter from the seer, countersigned by Carey Wilson, Metro producer. Written in verse, the letter says in part:

"Silent for eight years, the seer speaks again
From the silver screen shall shadows come to life
Spinning wondrous tales and events
Prophecied by Nostradamus whose spirit yet moves.
The maker of long stories shall add to his field
Short ones of equal scope and design
Four times in twelvemonth shall he do this
Hoping always the multitude to please.

There was a time when audience reaction in newsreel theatres gave a pretty good indication of popular trends in pre-election days, but this year the straws are bending against the wind.

In past elections, the Embassy circuit's Guild Theatre in Rockefeller Plaza always seemed to attract more Republicans while the chain's house on Broadway and 46th was a stronghold for the Democrats. This year it's exactly the reverse, according to Embassy prexy, Norman Elson.

The Guild audience seems to favor Stevenson while the Broadway theatre has 'em clamoring for Ike. Conclusion? "None," says Elson, "except that we live in cockeyed times."

Exhibs in some areas are demanding wider recognition of their showmanship activities. Wire to tradepress editors from Trueman Rembusch, prexy of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, an Allied affiliate, seeks to draw the spotlight from Texas COMPO, which has been copping wide attention via its p.r. work.

In his telegram, Rembusch, in effect, says that the Hoosier exhibs are outshining the Texans and should be credited for doing so. Much of the ado centers on the Indiana group's recent film exhibit at the Indiana State Fair, which drew 200,000. Hoosiers are mighty proud of this.

Columbia Pictures' commercial film subsidiary, Screen Gems, continues to perk. Company's just completed "The Studebaker Story," a Technicolor short depicting the 100-year history of the auto firm. Produced by Jules Bricken, the film is one of a series in Studebaker's pix program. Cast is topped by Russell Hicks and Donald Woods while Seymour Friedman directed. Screen Gems also did a 27-minute short for the Oil Industry Information Council to point up the advantages of free enterprise and competition. Film went into distribution this month.

Acting on the advice of Gordon White of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, 20th-Fox has snipped some footage from its art short, "Birth of Venus," which covers the masters of the Renaissance. Seems that one of the Botticelli nudes looked too nude to the MPAA. Reasoning was that an untimely whistle from one adolescent might spoil the effect of the entire subject. Series of seven art shorts is due for 20th release to theatres, schools and colleges.

George Jessel will personal twice at the Roxy and once at Radio City Music Hall when his last three pictures for 20th-Fox open on Broadway. All are holiday bookings: "Bloodhounds on Broadway" is the Thanksgiving attraction; and "I Don't Care" (Eva Tanguay biopic) Xmas, both at the Roxy. The Sol Hurok biopic, "Tonight We Sing," opens Lincoln's Birthday at the Music Hall. In all of Jessel's 10 years at 20th, this is his first MH booking.

See Drive-Ins In TV Future

ozoners to the theatre TV net could boost the purchasing power of theatres by a good margin. Estimate of current installations is 90 theatres in 52 cities. There are in excess of 3,000 drive-ins, many near TV cities and in the south and west, where the climate permits all-year operation.

Mull Local Circuits

Exhibs are mulling the eventual possibility of creating their own local circuits and bidding for exclusive rights to events which they consider of specific interest to their crowd. In the east, the Walter Reade circuit, among others, is giving serious thought to drive-in theatre TV.

Other exhibs, like S. H. Fabian, for instance, think highly of the possibility but lean to the belief that the time isn't ripe for the move. "We'll wait for the equipment to improve," Fabian said.

National Theatre Supply, which handles direct-projection and intermediate film types of large-screen TV put out by General Precision Labs, has been experimenting with various ways of bringing large-screen TV to drive-ins. The company ran a test, using its 16m intermediate system, at a Ledgewood, N. J., installation a year ago and is planning another sometime next month. Latter will use direct projection. John Currie, NTS v.p., says his company is convinced that drive-ins eventually may turn out a better theatre TV market than indoor theatres.

Feeling is that the big ozoners with a capacity of 800 and more will lead the field. Mobile installations, such as the one used at the S3, have various advantages in that they facilitate adjustment of picture brightness in relation to light conditions and make possible the service of several situations provided the latter can get the necessary AT&T lines.

Theory is that an outfit could mount several projectors on trucks and rent them out to ozoners. Advantage would be that, where an area might be "blacked out" by fight promoters, units could be installed in drive-ins that can take the bout.

Also upcoming are "The Desert Song" and "The Jazz Singer," both of which will retain the original tags.

Among other recent remakes are 20th-Fox's "What Price Glory?" and Metro's "The Merry Widow" and "The Prisoner of Zenda." In addition, there are many other yarns emanating from the studios which, although overhauls, are not immediately apparent.

Miami Motel Assn. Balks Brandt Ozoner

Miami Beach, Oct. 28.

Construction on $250,000 drive-in theatre in center of motel sector here was halted this week when Miami Beach Motel Assn. obtained a Circuit Court injunction against any further work. Brandt (N.Y.) Theatres, the builders is fighting the action.

It was claimed by the motel group that property values would be affected adversely if the 800-car capacity project on a 30-acre tract were allowed to be completed. Brandt had obtained a permit from Dade County Commission prior to the injunction proceedings.

Snare Brit. Pix Rights

Couple of British productions were acquired for release by U.S. outfits within the past week.

Arthur Mayer-Edward Kingsley, Inc., took over the U. S. rights to "The Brave Don't Cry," which John Grierson produced for the British organization known as Group 3. Molton Films' "Gift Horse" was acquired for Western Hemisphere handling by Souvaine Selective Pictures. Trevor Howard, Sonny Tufts and Joan Rice have the leads.

Par's 'Cleo' Spread

Paramount is going ahead with a full national reissue of "Cleopatra," Cecil B. DeMille production of 1934 vintage. Decision was prompted by the big b.o. values in epic pix as shown in the current market.

Film is set with 18 dates during November and general release in December.

Present Italo Paintings to Prez

Washington, Oct. 28.

Presentation was made by Nicola De Pirro, director of the entertainment industries bureau of the Italian Government.

RKO Incentive

the New York visit last week by Thomas Slack, attorney for Howard Hughes, resulted in a crop of new rumors, all false. Grant said all that happened was Slack called him and asked whom he could work with in arranging papers for Hughes' $8,000,000 loan. Grant relayed he merely told Slack that treasurer William Clark and chief homeoffice counsel William Zimmerman had been assigned to this work.

On the dais with Grant, and cited as the "exec team" that he feels, will bring RKO out of the red, were Clark, Zimmerman, sales heads Charles Boasberg and Walter Branson, assistant board chairman Harry Pimstein, foreign chief Al Crown, administrative foreign chief Robert Hawkinson, controller Garrett Van Wagner and RKO Pathe chief Jay Bonafield. Absentees he named as part of the team were studio counsel Gordon Youngman, corporation counsel Thomas Halloran and exec v.p. Arnold Picker. Latter returned from Europe yesterday.

Incidentally, Crown's deal as head of the RKO foreign department provides him with a weekly payoff of over $750 per week, instead of $450 as erratumed.

Special 'Andersen' Preem at Saranac For Rogers San; Mull Annual Event

World preem of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion Theatre, N. Y., Nov. 24, for the benefit of the Variety Clubs' Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, would launch a series of such annual events, according to the hospital trustees. They emphasize that a yearly affair would not only raise money for the institution but also create a "traditional hallmark" for the film industry.

Unveiling of "Andersen" was announced in New York last week by Abe Montague, the Columbia Pictures veepee and prez of the Rogers Memorial Hospital. At the same time he disclosed that G. S. Eyssell, president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., had accepted chairmanship of the inaugural event, which reportedly will be scaled up to $25 per seat.

Complete facilities of the Criterion are being donated by Charles B. Moss, the theatre's executive director. Hospital's trustees, incidentally, revealed that "Andersen" was selected because "it is an American motion picture of special merit which carries with it a great deal of international significance."

Now in its 27th year, the Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., is dedicated to the relief of those suffering from tuberculosis and is free to anyone in the entertainment industry. Institution is also building a modern research laboratory.

Eyssell named the following to the executive committee for the "Andersen" preem benefit: Ned Depinet, former RKO prez; Joseph Vogel, Loew's theatres chief; Harry Kalmine, head of the Warner circuit; Leonard Goldenson, United Paramount Theatres prez; Sol Schwartz, RKO Theatres prez; Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox veepee; Fred Schwartz, Century Theatres' chief; Si Fabian, of Fabian Theatres.

Also, Richard Walsh, IATSE prexy; composer Arthur Schwartz; Walter Vincent, head of the Actors Fund; Herman Robbins, prez of National Screen Service, and Maurice Bergman, Universal Pictures ad-pub exec, who'll additionally serve as publicity chairman.

Organize Salute

Final step in organizing the salute for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital has been completed with formation of the National Exhibitors Committee. This body is composed of reps in every exchange city.

Launch PCC Drive

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

More than 800 workers started soliciting members of the film industry yesterday (Mon.) as the Permanent Charities Committee officially opened its 1953 fund drive with a ogal of $1,225,000.

Unofficially the campaign started several weeks ago with pledges in the upper income brackets.

terping and Charles Chaplin's walkon. Hefty mitts also were accorded clips from two silent classics, including a Chaplin oldie and a Keystone comedy.

Produced by John Varley, the stage fare opened with a re-creation of a turn-of-the-century film preem, at which Jack Hawkins introed distinguished guests. Marie Lloyd was portrayed by Petula Clark; Rudyard Kipling by Terence Morgan; Lord Randolph Churchill by Harold Warrender; Winston Churchill as a boy by Jeremy Spenser; Nellie Melba by Patrice Munsel (who's playing the same role in Sam Spiegel's current film); Buffalo Bill by George Coulouris; Ellen Terry by Helen Cherry; Annie Oakley by Barbara Murray; Lloyd George by Mervyn Johns and the first cinema manager by Jack Warner.

After the oldtime pix were run off, a silent tableau followed. Yvonne de Carlo, who just completed "Sea Devils" here for David Rose, showed along with Celia Johnson and Trevor Howard, latter duo in a scene from "Brief Encounter"; Rock Hudson (costar of "Sea Devils") introed "Snow White" and the title song was sung by Miss Munsel. Tamara Toumanova contribbed a short ballet routine, then Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., bowed in Sir Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh.

Stage layout followed the regular format with an abundance of talent crowded into a limited schedule and indicative of inadequate scripting. "Because You're Mine" (Mario Lanza), the Command film selection, was enthusiastically received by the capacity house but hardly measures up to the Command standard. Critics panned the pic.

It's the second occasion, incidentally, on which a Metro picture had been named. In 1949 "The Forsyte Saga" won the honor.

Via a studio scene setting, Kirk Douglas introduced Googie Withers, Joan Greenwood, Evelyn Keyes and Gene Kelly, among others. An address by John Mills wound up the session.

Besides the estimated $70,000 gross, sale of advertising in a souvenir program netted an additional $23,000. After allowing for expenses it's anticipated that the London gala plus the two replica shows at Leeds tomorrow (Wed.) and Liverpool Thurs. (30) will yield a total of around $85,000 for the Cinematograph Fund.

make of the World War I classic, "What Price Glory," 20th-Fox has five service-connected films on tap. "Stars and Stripes Forever," film biog of John Philip Sousa, although not an Army picture per se, has a military angle. Also set are "Baptism of Fire," story of a Greek battalion in Korea; "Sailor of the King," C. S. Forester yarn about the British Navy in the Pacific; "The Desert Rats," story of the British troops in the battle for Africa and apparently 20th's answer to the controversial "The Desert Fox," which depicted the Nazi general Erwin Rommel, and "Gobi Outpost," story of a Navy weather group in the Mongolian desert.

Six Paramount pictures include "Thunder in the East," yarn dealing with the situation in India after the British troops pulled out; "Pleasure Island," a comedy-romance of Marines and Seabees who landed on a British island in the Pacific; "Off Limits," a service comedy with Bob Hope and Mickey Rooney; "War of the Worlds," a science fiction piece dealing with a Martian invasion of the earth; "Stalag 17," film version of the stage play dealing with American GIs in a German prisoner-of-war camp, and "Little Boy Lost," Bing Crosby starrer with a German-occupation-of-France background.

Upcoming at Columbia are seven military-angled pix. Completed and set for release is Stanley Kramer's "8 Iron Men," based on Harry Brown's play, "A Sound of Hunting." In various stages of preparation are "Red Beret," story of English paratroopers, currently being shot in England; El Alamein," "Mission Over Korea," and "Tarawa." Two other important service pix at Col are the filmizations of recent best-selling novels, James Jones' "From Here to Eternity," and Herman Wouk's "The Caine Mutiny."

In addition to the forthcoming military-slanted items, Warner Bros. has set for release "Operation Secret," story of the O.S.S. during World War II, while RKO is currently releasing "One Minute to Zero" and Universal "Willie and Joe Back at the Front."

Arbitration

their claims for damages to a period of four years prior to the filing of their complaints. In states where statutes of limitations are shorter than four years, these state statutes will be observed.

Theatremen, in their discussions of arbitration, repeatedly emphasize that the draft now in circulation is tentative and no part of it is final until the entire plan is final and formally adopted.

Alfred Starr, Theatre Owners of America prexy, was in New York for several days last week on TOA biz. He stressed the importance of the arbitration plan, adding that "with the exception of a few matters which we feel will need change, the basic mechanics of operation and the substance have remained almost intact."

Meanwhile, three TOA units—Albany, N. Y., Florida and St. Louis—have okayed the plan. Herman M. Levy, general counsel, has been presenting the plan to the TOA units at various regional confabs. He'll discuss it next at the convention of the Theatre Owners of North & South Carolina, set for next month. Starr returned to his Nashville headquarters Friday (24).

Industry Payoff

Frank Lee, Permanent Under-Secretary of the Treasury, for the signing of the Anglo-U. S. monetary pact in Washington. Before that, the MPAA brought over several French reps.

Policy of sponsoring U. S. trips by foreign toppers is costing the State Dept. and the MPAA heavy coin, but the distribs are confident they are saving money in the long run. Visitors in the main are in positions where they help shape the course of their industry, and personal contact has helped avert measures which might have hurt the circulation of U. S. pix in a particular country.

Most important point put across by the MPAA execs and emphasized by conversations between the travelers and individual U. S. exhibs and distribs is that the market here is free and open to foreign pix which can do sock biz if they've got what it takes. This counteracts widespread impression abroad that the U. S. holds unlimited potential for all pix and that only a conspiracy between exhibitors and distributors is keeping foreign films from getting wider circulation.

Errol Flynn

legedly decided that the release of "God" would be detrimental to him. Meanwhile, Marshall had finished the film and showed it to a group that included Vincent Price, Robert Stillman, Charles Gross and Charles Casanova of MPSC. Casanova offered Marshall $300,000 as producer's share for the film. Flynn would not consent to this. Marshall was already prepping another film, "Adventures of Captain Fabian," to star Flynn and Micheline Presle.

While this picture was in production in France, Gross, a friend of Flynn, allegedly picked up the negative of "God" at Consolidated Labs in Los Angeles in spite of Marshall's orders that film was not to be touched by anyone but himself. Since then, Marshall has reconstructed the film, using other takes here, and now has it ready despite a few important shots that are missing. He will release it in Europe before Christmas, with opening at Anzio, Italy, where the story of the film is laid.

Josephine Baker

press conference in Buenos Aires a fortnight ago, to make known the supposed aims of what she dubs her "Crusade on Behalf of the Spiritual Freedom of Humanity." At this confab she took exception to pointed questions put to her by U. S. correspondent Herbert Clark (New York Daily News), and by Ernesto Doglioli, an independent Argentine journalist. Later she published letters to them in the Peron-controlled press, charging that true freedom of the press was non-existent in the United States; that Clark was trying to "gang up" against her, just as the U. S. press did, and made other highly colored anti-Yank statements. According to Miss Baker, "true democracy is non-existent" in the States, while racial prejudice is so rampant that "colored women are attacked and beaten up by whites who go unpunished."

As the general attitude of the Peron press in Argentina is virulently anti-U. S., the Baker statements were pounced on with joy and given wide publicity there.

Eyebrow-Raiser

It is a pity that before praising the Peron regime so unreservedly, dubbing it a true democracy and other things which cause patriotic Argentines to raise their eyebrows, Miss Baker did not take the trouble to hear the views of the many Argentines, entertainers or of other professions, who have been exiled from all possibility of working in their professions in their own country, only because they voted against Peron. It is as though Eisenhower or Stevenson, after the elections, refused passports to Eddie Cantor or Bing Crosby if these had happened to vote against them.

No Help to the B.O.

Her incursion into politics has done nothing to bolster her boxoffice at the Opera Theatre, in Buenos Aires, where Miss Baker is doing two-a-day stands (three on Saturdays and Sundays). The gross declined noticeably throughout the past week, and on Wednesday (Oct. 22) she cancelled a performance and a scheduled broadcast on Radio Mundo, alleging throat trouble.

The broadcast, at an asking fee of $7,500, was to have been sponsored by Cinematografica Interamericana, as part of the windowdressing surrounding the forthcoming release of the first Argentine Technicolor picture, "El Gaucho y el Diablo" (The Gaucho and the Devil), which will be exhibited at the Opera following the Baker engagement. Since no sponsor could be found to bankroll the Baker broadcast, the Interamericana tieup is merely academic, and the Lococo Film Circuit, which signed her for this tour earlier this year, had to pick up the check for itself.

The contract for $7,500 a week includes legit, broadcast or screen work for a 95-day engagement, including Argentina, Uruguay and Chile.

Following the preliminary personal appearances at the Opera (cinema) in B.A., which follow exhibition of the Columbia picture, "Louisa," Miss Baker will appear at the Maipo theatre there, in a musical revue, for a 30-day stand.

It is doubtful if there will be any Uruguayan sequel to the Argentine engagement, as Uruguayans will not be apt to welcome someone who has made the anti-U.S. statements made by Miss Baker, nor is Peron popular in Uruguay.

At the present time there is such a hassle going on between Argentina and Uruguay, that it is becoming practically impossible for Argentines to travel to Uruguay—if they wish to return to their own country after.

See IFE Chairmanship To Italo Publisher

Board chairmanship of Italian Film Export's new setup may go to Angelo Rizzoli, Italian producer and publisher of fan magazines. Dr. Renato Gualino, director general of IFE, now back in Italy following his visit to New York for "Italian Films Week," has offered Rizzoli the top post of the five-man board. This will consist of two Italians—Gualino and Rizzoli, if he accepts—and three Americans, yet to be chosen.

Rizzoli did not come to New York for the film week, but was represented by two of his recent pix, "Little World of Don Camillo" and "Umberto D."

Berman, Thorpe Back From 'Knights' Scouting

Metro producer Pandro S. Berman, accompanied by director Richard Thorpe, returned from England this week following two weeks of research on "Knights of the Round Table," which will be made there on location and at Metro's studio. Pair will return to England next March 15, when actual production is set to start. Robert Taylor is the only one cast so far, as Lancelot.

Thorpe headed back to the Coast Monday (27) and Berman left New York yesterday (Tues.). Before undertaking "Knights," Berman and Thorpe will team for "All the Brothers Were Valiant" at M-G in January. It's a Technicolor actioner about a New England whaling town. Robert Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor and Stewart Granger head the cast.

FOUR STAR PLAYHOUSE
(The Lost Silk Hat)
With Ronald Colman, Richard Whorf
Director: Robert Florey
Writers: Colman, Milton Merlin
SINGER SEWING MACHINE
CBS-TV, from New York
(Young & Rubicam)

The Lord Dunsany play, "The Lost Silk Hat," was given a delightful, whimsical production on "Four Star Playhouse" Thursday (23). It starred Ronald Colman, who also collaborated with Milton Merlin in the adaptation. Vehicle is a tongue-in-cheek piece about a proper Englishman emerging from a lush London house after midnight and discovering that he has left his topper inside. He allays the bobby's suspicions regarding his loitering and tries to inveigle a passing workman and then a henpecked clerk to go in and retrieve his chapeau. Each in turn is wary of entering the house and finds an excuse not to, despite the 10-pound tip offered. Next comes Richard Whorf, as a Bohemian poet, who finally elicits the reason for Colman's reluctance to fetch his own lid—he had a spat with his fiancee and has vowed to join the Foreign Legion. The poet waxes lyrical about this romantic tale, with visions of Colman dying forlornly on desert sands, but he too refuses to go in. The natural denouement finds Colman going in himself, and a piano duet from within tips the reconciliation.

Actually the plot is no more than an anecdote, but it serves as the basis for some sly, quiet comedy—the verbal play between Colman and the hesitant passers-by, spoofing the British gentleman, the Byronic rhymster, the frau-beaten white-collarite and the suspicious workingman. It was shot all in one setting—in front of the woman's house—and she was never seen. Direction and acting were topflight, with careful understatement. The Merlin-Colman script was similarly on a high level. Production involved sock lensing, the camera's mobility making up for the single set. Plugs demonstrating Singer sewing machines were highly effective. "Hat," incidentally, marked Colman's TV debut. Bril.

FORD THEATRE
(Birth of a Hero)
With Mark Stevens, Ellen Drew, Gordon Oliver, others
Producer: Jules Bricken (Screen Gems)
Director: Robert Stevenson
Writer: Lillie Hayward (from story by Alice Duer Miller)
30 Mins.; Thurs., 9:30 p.m.
FORD DEALERS
NBC-TV, from Hollywood
(J. Walter Thompson)

"Ford Theatre" is still in the so-so groove in this, its fourth negotiation of the telefilm route. Mark Stevens and Ellen Drew accent the marquee, but competent acting is worthy of a better script. Lillie Hayward has supplied a lightweight, escapist-rigged screenplay, from story by Alice Duer Miller, that is almost pure cliche and succeeds mostly in telegraphing its punches.

Miss Drew is cast as a prim bank exec in a tank town where Stevens invades her home to force her into breaking open the bank's vaults the following morning. Before that can eventuate, she sets fire to the bedroom in which she is imprisoned and Stevens, saving her life, is nursed back to health by his would-be victim. The unknowing townsmen reward him with a small boodle which he uses to buy a burglar alarm system for the bank. The now here, now there romantic slant is supplied by Gordon Oliver, as the doctor who's mad about Miss Drew and is aware of the plot by Stevens following the accident. End indicates Doc and the girl will be in a clinch ere long. Too bad a good cast is all but wasted on this sub-par fare. Trau.

FOREIGN INTRIGUE
With Bernard Farrel, others
Producer-director: Sheldon Reynolds
30 Mins.; Thurs., 10:30 p.m.
BALLANTINE
WNBT, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

"Foreign Intrigue," the half-hour mystery show, filmed abroad, came up with some new faces on Thursday's (23) installment on WNBT, N. Y. Lead role in a "cloak-and-dagger" excursion was handled by Bernard Farrel, who is the son of actress Francoise Rosay. Tall, dark and handsome in the Gallic tradition, Farrel was well cast as an undercover agent assigned to seize the chief of an espionage ring.

But, although thesping was good, the script was decidedly complicated. Opening scene in the American embassy in Paris in which top diplomats discussed the problem of trapping a spy ring was vague and confusing. There was plenty of action after Farrel moved to carry out his mission. However, the average viewer no doubt had difficulty in following the proceedings since neither the identity of the spy ring nor its objective was disclosed. Gilb.

New York—Coronet mag will launch a series of three week-long saturation campaigns on WNBT, N. Y., using eight-and 20-second spots and one-minute plugs. First drive will be week of Nov. 21 for the December issue, with similar pitches set for December and January. Agency is Grey.

INSPECTOR MARK SABER
(Case of the Star Tattoo)
With Tom Conway, James Burke, others
Producer: J. Donald Wilson
Director: Howard Bretherton
Writer: William Wolff
30 Mins.; 9 p.m., Fri.
STERLING DRUG
KECA-TV, Hollywood

Fast-moving cops-n-robbers story benefits chiefly from a polished performance by Tom Conway as the deductive Inspector Mark Saber, who saves a juve framed for murder. "Saber" series was formerly tagged "Mystery Theatre," and initialer of season augurs well for the future.

Scotty Beckett is the youngster framed, while Raymond Hatton as owner of a poolroom—tattoo shop and leader of a mob of junior hoods emerges as the heavy. Seems Beckett was framed so the gang would be in the clear when they pulled the job. Inspector Saber solves the case a bit too easily, but conveniently for a half-hour vidpix.

Distinguishing feature of the program is Conway's fine performance, while James Burke is very good as his sidekick, and Beckett, Hatton and Shirley Pegge are able in support. J. Donald Wilson production's technical credits are okay. Daku.

CHEVRON THEATRE
(The Vicar's Vacation)
With Onslow Stevens, Murray Matherson, George Wallace, others
Distributor: MCA-TV Ltd.
Producer: Revue Productions
Director: Francis D. Lyon
Writer: Howard J. Green
30 Mins.; 9 p.m. Fri.
CHEVRON STATIONS
KTLA, Hollywood
(BBD&O)

A sluggish entry in the "Chevron Theatre" series, "The Vicar's Vacation" fails to generate much interest, and leaves one with a much-ado-about-nothing feeling, wondering why it was ever made unless it was strictly for filler purposes. There's scarcely enough meat in Morley Roberts' original to warrant a half-hour, and necessary padding makes it rather limpid entertainment.

Story concerns an eccentric vicar who's been chastened by his bishop for his idiosyncracies, particularly his penchant for fighting. Lolling in London on a brief vacation, the vicar is arrested by police who think he's a thief. (The good man took off his vicar's accoutrements in a fight just previously, and won't identify himself as a clergyman.) Adapter Howard J. Green whimsically has all this happening in Pickled Herring Street, this being the gayest touch in the thing. Vicar whips cop to prove in a complex way he's not the thief, and goes free.

Onslow Stevens is competent in the lead, George Wallace is okay as the constable, and Murray Matherson good as the inspector. All this is directed by Francis D. Lyon, and he does a fairly good job, but both he and the cast have too anemic a story to work with.

Technical features are okay, except for too heavy interlarding of stock footage of dear ol' Lunnon, where all this takes place. Ellsworth Fredericks' camera work is excellent. Daku.

COURT UPHOLDS TEI ON 'FURY' RIGHTS

Distribution rights to the film, "Jungle Fury," are owned by Television Exploitation, Inc., as of June 1, N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Denis O'Leary Cohalan ruled last week. Court's decision ended a legal wrangle between TEI and Regent Pictures, Inc., as to who holds title to the feature.

TEI based its claim to "Fury" to a license received last June from the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., N. Y. Financial institution came into possession of the film through foreclosure of a chattel mortgage against Sig Neufeld Pictures, Inc., and the defunct Film Classics.

After it discovered that Regent had sold "Fury" for $2,000 to WGN-TV, Chicago, TEI brought suit against the outfit. An injunction restraining further distribution of the film was sought as well as damages.

THEATRES MAY LOVE 'LUCY' TOO

H'wood to Sponsor: 'Lay Off'

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

A new type of "character" has invaded the Hollywood pix precincts. It's a brand new type of species so far as the film industry is concerned, with his arrival on the scene corresponding with the emergence of vidpix on the Hollywood firmament. He goes by the name of "sponsor." He's the guy who's plunking down the coin for the TV films now getting a spread on the video channels and he's moved right into the director's chair, masterminding the productions much in the manner that his ilk in New York-berthed radio was not averse to taking over the control booth.

It's something new to the Hollywood boys, however, and they don't like the way some sponsors are getting in their hair. In most cases Mr. Moneybags is using his vidpix as an excuse to "get away from it all" and visit the Coast. There's nothing the production boys can do about it except to try to keep the filming dates a secret. They've been telling Mr. Client that his fiddling around is costing him a lot of money, but apparently the extra cost is no deterrent. He's entranced by the whole ramifications of making vidpix—and just try to keep him away!

TV Film Syndicators in Quandary On Price Structure in New Markets

With new television station operators currently groping for the right formula on which to base their rate cards, vidfilm distributors looking to the new markets for an eventual landrush of biz are finding the price structuring even more difficult. Distribs have been pricing their films in established markets primarily on set circulation but such a system is obviously unusable in the areas which have never before had TV, which has left the syndicators in a quandary.

Some of the distribs have been trying to base their prices on the new stations' card rates but, since the rates might be out of line in relation to circulation, that has proved unsatisfactory. Others have been trying to evolve a system of pricing in relation to set penetration, while still others have set up deals with the new station operators for a run and re-run basis, whereby the stations get the product first-run for virtually nothing so that they can make their profit six months to a year from now on second runs, when the markets will be more established.

One system getting considerable attention tradewise at this time is that developed by United Television Programs sales chief Aaron Beckwith. On the assumption that set circulation in the new markets is still too much of an uncertainty, since particularly in the UHF areas some have been flooded with sets and others cannot get them; Beckwith is basing his prices on total populations in each market, as listed by Consumers Markets. Such a system, he said, takes into account the percentage of penetration in each market since, even though the prices may be below what they should be at this time, it stands to reason that within a year the penetration in the new markets will be comparable to that in the more established areas.

Under Beckwith's system, the

Snader Sale In Confused State

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Possible sale of Snader Telescriptions to Studio Films of Cleveland remained up in the air here today (Tues.), as prexy Louis D. Snader claimed his partners could not sell without his okay and the partners claiming they could sell if they obtained approval of a majority of stockholders. According to Alexander Bisno, one of the partners in the firm, he expects to have a sufficient number of okays by tomorrow, and Studio Films has already plunked down $100,000 payment on the $500,000 asking price to tie up the deal.

Studio, of which Cleveland pal owner, has produced on its own show biz exec Ben Frye is princisome 200 of the musical briefies, which puts it in direct competition with Snader's 750 Telescriptions. Studio product is distributed by

Goodwins Reins 'Hero'

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Another of Hollywood's front line comedy directors has jumped the fence to TV. He's Les Goodwins, who signed to direct Robert Cummings in four vidpix in "My Hero" series.

He's not altogether new to teevee, having directed the early "Life of Riley" televersion that starred Jackie Gleason.

Vidpix Distribs In Swing Toward Home-Grown Reps

With television film distribution steadily acquiring all the status of a big business operation, distributors are swinging more and more into the pattern of selling established by the feature film industry. Latest swing in that direction is the trend towards having salesmen live in the areas which they service, rather than depending on two or three men to cover the country periodically from headquarters in three or four key cities.

Hollywood at one time sold its product via the states rights system, whereby individuals would buy distrib rights to a producers'

Quentin Reynolds Vidfilm 'Thrill' Series Prepped; 'Parents' on UTP List

Quentin Reynolds makes his television film debut as moderator of a new quarter-hour series titled "Thrill of a Liftetime," which is being produced in N. Y. by Lifetime Productions, new indie outfit. Show is one of two new ones acquired for distribution this week by United TV Programs, the other being "Bringing up Parents," also a 15-minute series which is produced by the Henry J. Kaufman agency of Washington, D. C.

"Lifetime" will have Reynolds conducting interviews with various personalities and then screening newsreel clips dealing with the story. On the initialer, for example, he interviews a survivor of the Hindenburg airship disaster, which leads into clips of the tragedy and other zeppelin mishaps. He also interviews Florence Chadwick, which sets up clips of femme channel swimmers dating back to Gertrude Ederle.

"Parents," dealing with child care, is being produced in conjunction with the Assn. for Childhood Education, Inc., and features Jean Alexander as moderator.

3 TOP SHOWS AS FEATURE PIC

The television and vidfilm industries, not to mention the major film studio impresarios, are eyeing closely the plans now being crystallized for a theatrical film presentation based on the three best "I Love Lucy" TV shows. Since it's the first of the vidpix crop to be expanded for theatrical distribution, it obviously has deep implications for the TV industry as a whole.

In view of the "Lucy" rating payoff, giving it the No. 1 audience in America among the whole crop of commercial entries, Desilu Productions, owners of the Philip Morris-sponsored show, feel they've got a pre-guaranteed audience of millions that's a cinch to insure its b.o. success.

A couple years back NBC-TV's video chieftain, Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, had similar ambitions in connection with the web's "All Star Revue" and "Colgate Comedy Hour," idea being to parlay the best of the Jimmy Durante-Eddie Cantor-Martin & Lewis, etc., sequences into a major theatrical film release. Project hit some snags, however, with CBS-TV and Desilu, meanwhile, getting under the wire with the first venture of its kind.

Cost production on the "Lucy" TV films will stop for three months while Lucille Ball, the show's star, has her baby. It's planned to reprise many of the previous installments during that period. It brings up the question of repayments, particularly in the case of Marc Daniels, who was the show's director during the months that it initially clicked into the bigtime. Daniels is no longer with the show. He and Dezi Arnaz could never hit it and if, as reported, there are no repayments earmarked for Daniels, it may precipitate some beefs and possible litigation.

Daniels is now directing the Joan Davis vidpix series on NBC-TV, at double the coin that Desilu paid him.

CHEVVY DEALERS BUY A&C VIDPIX FOR N.Y.

The Abbott & Costello vidpix series bows into the local N. Y. market Dec. 7, under a deal set this week for the Chevrolet Dealers Assn. to bankroll the film Friday nights on WCBS-TV, the CBS video web's N. Y. flagship. Series was produced by the comedy team on the Coast for syndication across the country. Comics continue on a live basis as rotating stars of NBC's Sunday night "Comedy Hour."

In buying the A&C vidpix, the Chevvy dealers dropped three nights a week from their schedule of sponsorship of the Allan Jackson late evening news show on WCBS-TV, cutting back from six nights weekly to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays only. Station, however, has already sold the Monday, Wednesday and Friday stanzas opening up to Piel's Beer, which moves into the show starting Nov. 17.

Shupert Exits Peerless; 'No Feature Pix to Sell'

Persistent demand for more feature film product by television stations around the country was pointed up this week by the resignation of George T. Shupert as veepee of Peerless TV Productions, outfit which has been distributing Edward Small's package of 26 features. Shupert reportedly bowed out of the company on the assumption that there was virtually no more work for him to do, since Small has turned over no more features for TV distribution since the original package.

Shupert has had bids from several firms, including a couple of TV networks, but has wrapped up no new association yet. He bows out of Peerless Nov. 15 and will [illegible] a short [illegible]

Official Films, Prockter's PSI May Merge; Combined $10,000,000 Biz Would Give It Topdog Status

Deal is now in the talking stage which may crystallize in a merger of Official Films and Bernard Prockter's PSI vidpix operation. If deal goes through, it would parlay the two New York-berthed TV film adjuncts into the major distribution operation of its kind, with total annual gross billings in excess of $10,000,000.

Huddles were held over the past weekend between Isaac D. Levy, official's major stockholder, and Prockter with an eye toward a mating of the two organizations, both of which in recent weeks have been involved in expanded activity. Deal reportedly would not only include the PSI adjunct, with its already-existing billings of $2,500,000 a year, but also Bernard Prockter Productions (with such properties as "Big Story" and "Treasury Men In Action") which accounts for another $2,500,000 in business.

On the other hand, Official, after a couple of years of "getting its TV feet wet" has come up with some of the prize vidpix properties to date, its distrib setup including the Singer Sewing Machine-sponsored "Four Star Playhouse," the Canada Dry-bankrolled "Terry and the Pirates" with its enviable 30-market spread and the upcoming Dunhill-sponsored Robert Cummings series, "My Hero." In addition Levy literally has vaults full of old film which would be poured into the amalgamated setup.

How the executive alignment would shape up is something that would have to be resolved. Levy is chairman of the board of Official. Prockter is chairman of the board of Prockter Production and PSI, with Paul White as prexy of the vidpix facet of the latter operation.

Don Sharpe's Status

Also figuring in the merger would be Don Sharpe, whose vidpix production activities on the Coast have played a dominent role in the Official Films setup.

Nothing definite is expected to materialize until White returns from Europe (he leaves tomorrow (Wed.) to push some important PSI vidpix activity in Paris, Rome and Berlin).

Major item on White's immediate agenda is a Gayelord Hauser

Cornel Wilde Asks 20th Okay on Gratis Vidpic

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Cornel Wilde, who's been nixing tele bids for three years, is asking 20th-Fox for permission to make a gratis telepic for the March of Dimes. Mrs. Jane Lait, who's organizing the MOD vidpix, also is pitching to 20th for Wilde. She's already lined up Andy and Della Russell, Rhonda Fleming and Alan Young for the pix, which will be shot at Paramount, which is loaning all facilities.

Wilde, who has a one pic annually deal at 20th, has been opposed to teevee because of possible exhibitor opposition, particularly now with five pix in release and two in backlog. He even turned down a $10,000 one-shot bid from Milton Berle

TWA Slams SWG On 'Scriptlegging' In ATFP Strike

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Bootlegging of telescripts to the Alliance of Television Film Producers by Screen Writers Guild members in violation of the Guild's strike against ATFP, was charged by Shelby Gordon, secretary-treasurer of Television Writers of America at a weekend meeting.

TWA's support of strike was affirmed by Gordon, who commented bitterly, "I find myself in the position of supporting the strike, yet SWG members are scabbing." Gordon, hitting "poor management" of the strike, said two Alliance producers had informed him they're getting as many scripts as before the strike started Aug. 11, and from the same people. None are from TWA members, it's claimed, but from SWG and Radio Writers Guild members. Some don't even bother with pseudonyms, it's charged. Gordon blamed the lack of picketing.

Negotiations Stall

Last week, for the first time SWG indicated to the ATFP its willingness to yield on the most controversial point in the three-month old negotiations—royalties. But even that failed to bring nego-

Barry-Enright 'Oh Baby!' Capsule Vidpix's 3-City Test Runs for Mennen

Mennen baby products are using a test spot campaign in three cities for its new "Oh, Baby!" five-minute Jack Barry-Dan Enright vidpic show. In N. Y., each of the 13 pix will be screened five times during the week on a total of four stations. Other cities are Dayton and Omaha, with three screenings in each market on two different stations.

In N. Y. Grey agency is using Thursday at 1:55 p.m. and Saturday at 11:15 p.m. on WNBT; 7:30 p.m. Friday on WABD; Tuesday at 3:55 p.m. on WJZ-TV and Wednesday at 5 p.m. on WOR-TV. Idea is that each beaming will reach a different audience. Evening time is included because research indicates that men buy a considerable proportion of baby products. Dayton stations are WLW-D and WHIO and Omaha outlets are WOW and KMTV. If the test proves successful, agency will sked the series around the country on a spot basis.

Laine's 13 Vidpix Wind at 300G Nut

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Thirteen musical vidpix, costing an estimated $300,000, have been made in London by Frankie Laine with dubbing to be done here. Tagged the "Frankie Laine Show," the second series is slated to begin shooting in April at an undetermined European location.

Stars of World, Inc., angeled the vidpix, first series of which will be ready for release in March, according to veepee Max Fink. Herman Webber is prexy-producer of the company.

'MADE IN USA' ONLY FOR SCHLITZ'S VIDPIXERS

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Hollywood AFL Film Council's protests against "runaway" film production abroad has gained the support of Schlitz's "Playhouse of Stars." The Milwaukee brewery through the Lennen & Mitchell agency, informed the Council that all its TV films will be made in this country.

Council's stand is that the production of films in other countries, sponsored by American advertisers, is cutting down employment for American film technicians.

'Operations Politico' a Chi Windfall; 100G for Ike's Spot 'Blitz' Alone

Chicago, Oct. 28.

The radio-TV spot "blitz" for Republican presidential candidate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower hit the Windy City last week spreading heavy coin among the four tele stations and practically all the AM stations.

It's been learned that Toni Productions, booking the time for the Republican Citizens Finance Committee of Illinois, had a minimum budget of $100,000 to spend in the Chi area with more in the offing if sufficient spots could be found. A check of the quartet of TV stations and half a dozen of the top radio stations indicates that the $100,000 kitty has been used up by the orders placed the past few days.

Concentrated during the last two weeks of the election campaign, the 20-second and minute spot schedule represents one of the biggest short-term bonanzas ever racked up by the industry here. With the "blitz" coin added to that being spent by the GOP for its city and state ticket and the Democrats for their respective slates, this year's political harvest for broadcasters and telecasters far exceeds any other campaign, according to vet industrites.

Not that the special revenue is being earned without plenty of headaches. First off, there's the matter of non-partisan balance which the station execs are trying to maintain between the two parties. That problem has been increased by the last-minute appearance of the GOP "blitz" fund. Orders have been placed on a "we want all you've got" basis and have run as high as $20,000 on a single TV station.

In all cases, however, the stations—and this matter has been getting top level treatment—figure they have been able to keep a fairly even keel between the competing parties, especially when the campaign as a whole is considered. It's pointed out that backers of Democratic candidate Gov. Adlai Stevenson and the other Demo office-seekers started earlier with their radio-TV spreads and have been using, in the main, outright program buys.

It's also pointed that the stations are protected against charges

Adlai Wants It Hot

Since ABC took over the Elysee Theatre on West 58 St., N. Y., three years ago, the house has had no running hot water. But yesterday (Tues.) plumbers put the water heater into operation, as part of the engineering-production assignments.

Reason: Democratic Presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson cut a kinescope (with Tallulah Bankhead introducing him) for airing on the web later that night, and web felt the governor might want to wash here.

Union Fight Cuts NBC's UN Video To Single Camera

NBC-TV's coverage of the United Nations sessions is continuing, although on a restricted basis due to a union jurisdictional wrangle. Web has some hopes of improving the situation, although it faces a problem when UN committees meet in other rooms where it doesn't now have cameras. Last Wednesday (22) the network found itself cut off the air because of the dispute.

Background of the hassle is a collision between the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL) and National Assn. of Broadcast Engineers & Technicians (CIO). The UN produces its own programs, via a private contractor whose men are in IBEW. NABET technicians of NBC refused to take the IBEW-handled UN feed. Their claim is that they are to take feeds from IBEW engineers only when it is a pool and that the UN series is not a pool because another web does not take the pickup at the same time. CBS has an afternoon pickup, and has had no trouble since its engineers are in IBEW.

NABET agreed to take the UN feed from IBEW if its own crews were also given work in the building. Accordingly, last week NBC installed one camera in the assembly and another in conference room 4. IBEW-ites, presumably objecting the presence of NABET men, on Wednesday pulled the plugs on the NBC hookup, cutting web off the air.

Although its position had originally been against any NABET men, IBEW apparently has now backed down to allowing the presence of one NABET-NBC camera, provided that the web doesn't also take the IBEW-UN video. It hasn't been objecting to picking up of UN audio.

Actually, the situation is fluid and changes may occur. NBC, it's understood, will continue under the present arrangement, improving it if possible. Main problem is that with a solitary camera not all parts of the rooms lensed can be shown. Further, it may not be able to install its camera in the other rooms when interest shifts from the assembly to other conference rooms.

There's TV On Bing's GE Agenda

Upon his return from abroad last week, Bing Crosby indicated that he may be pretty much in evidence on TV this season under auspices of his new sponsor, General Electric.

With GE holding down the Sunday at 9 period on CBS-TV with the Fred Waring musical show, it's anticipated that Crosby will use this segment for his occasional GE showcase. He'll either work as part of the Waring show (which is considered the most likely) or take over the half-hour for his own program, in the same manner that Lucky Strike preempts the Sunday evening "This Is Show Business" whenever Jack Benny does a TV show.

Crosby thus far has limited himself to one TV airing—last season's allnight charity telethon. At that time he teamed with Bob Hope and the general verdict was that "The Bing's a natural for TV."

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL IN KEYES' TV BREAST

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Freeman Keyes, left holding a $250,000 bag as a result of the demise of "Doc Corkle," has put up some additional coin to make a pilot film of a new series. This would star Arthur Treacher and, from the "Corkle" series, Arnold Stang and Billie Burke.

Keyes reportedly will pitch the pilot to Reynolds Metals, which cancelled "Corkle" after three editions and inserted "Mr. Peepers" in its place, in the hope that the new show can replace "Peepers" at the end of its cycle.

Ford's 'Recording Session' Gets WNEW Expansion

"Recording Session," show in which artists-and-repertory toppers of the diskeries and record stars tell the story of their hit disks, is getting an expanded coverage on WNEW, N. Y. Airer, which features Art Ford, is heard regularly at 12:35-1 p.m. on Sundays and is now getting an additional airing at 1 a.m. on Saturdays (post-midnight Friday) in Ford's "Milkman's Matinee" stanza.

Reason was the gripes from Ford's fans, who wrote that many of them don't get up that early.

Series is getting heavy promotion from the record companies, which recognize the plugs the program gives the disk biz. Posters and streamers are being displayed in record stores.

Folsom Sees European RCA Markets Hobbled By Local Labor Conditions

Frank M. Folsom, RCA president, cut his trip short almost a week, eliminating Spain, because of the arduousness of his month's "hedge-hopping" (as he calls his flying itinerary), and because of RCA board chairman Gen. David Sarnoff being called back into Government service as head of a Dept. of Defense citizen's advisory commission on military manpower.

Folsom is correlating his findings in reopening up Europe more as an export market for RCA products. If done on a local level, and competing with local wage standards, which means manufacturing at the source, it's something else again. But 40-hour U.S. work weeks versus 48-hour European labor standards, not to mention the comparatively much lower man-hour wages, forfends RCA production following into a vast European sales market. It must be limited to the luxury consumers in certain territories.

This is particularly true of Germany, where Folsom was impressed by "their building with a vengeance, extracting every brick and stone and scrap of wood from the bombed-out rubble, and building, and more building 'like crazy.' On top of that we, through the Marshall Plan, are building up their industries and factories, and looking at it strictly from the economic viewpoint—sidestepping the long-range viewpoint of power politics—you just can't deny that they, the Germans, can outproduce like anything. If RCA or any other big business were to go into production on a local level, that's so complicated, too, that you go nuts figuring whether it's all going to be worthwhile."

In Italy, it's something else again and RCA looks to go forward producing locally, as soon as machinery and production savvy can be geared for action. Spain is next. RCA is already operating in Greece.

'Now or Never' On Autry KMPC Buy

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Deal for Gene Autry and Robert O. Reynolds to take over KMPC for an estimated cost of $850,000 is in its closing phases and according to Reynolds, general manager of the 50-kilowatt station, "we'll either close it or drop it within the next two weeks." Estate of George A. Richards wants to unload but many minor details are still to be worked out.

In the event of a washout of the Autry-Reynolds negotiations Edwin Pauley, oilman-politico, will enter a bid. He is said to be interested only if the present deal collapses and won't compete with Autry-Reynolds.

Reports continue to persist that Earle C. Anthony will sell KFI to NBC for $1,250,000 but station spokesmen are equally insistent that he won't.

City of Hope Telethon Nets 250G on Coast

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

City of Hope telethon, on four Los Angeles stations and one each in Frisco and San Diego, brought in nearly $250,000 in a 13-hour star-studded program.

Show originated at Earl Carroll's Hollywood. Coin goes to Free Cancer and Tuberculosis Hospital. Mayor Fletcher Bowron and Lt. Gov. Goodwin Knight were on in closing minutes to express their thanks to contributors. Abbott and Costello opened the show with their emceeing, followed by stars of AM, TV, stage and screen.

Massey to Manage KIXL

Dallas, Oct. 28.

Thomas W. Massey has been upped to general manager of KIXL. He was formerly assistant manager and national sales manager.

Charles F. Payne, commercial manager and program director, replaces Massey as assistant manager.

GM's 200G for Inauguration

Before even the "cast" has been established, NBC has moved early into the picture to sell both the radio and television rights to the D. C. inauguration ceremonies in January. Buyer is General Motors, which is paying an approximate $200,000 for the historic one-shot. It involves four hours of TV time (which, of course, necessitates costly daytime preemptions of regular commercial entries) and two hours of AM time.

GM splurge accents anew how the automotives are flocking into both radio and television. GM has been spending about $3,000,000 for sponsorship of the NCAA-controlled Saturday TV football pickups via NBC. Willys-Overland has bought into the ambitious "Omnibus" series on CBS-TV and is sponsoring the N. Y. Philharmonic Sunday concerts on CBS Radio as only the two most recent auto thrusts toward embracing the medium.

Cleve's Eight AM'ers Claim Halt To TV's Boom Via Own Hypoed Sales Bids

By SANFORD MARKEY

Cleveland, Oct. 28.

With sponsors showing an avid interest in time purchases, Cleveland's eight AM'ers confidently feel they have put a sales blinker on television's boom in Northeastern Ohio despite video's 85% saturation pitch.

The heavy sales upbeat began to show traces last year, and, according to radio brass, it has mushroomed into a fall and winter time-sales purchase program that has revitalized the radio industry here.

At the same time, stations have promoted new sales gimmicks; revaluated rate cards; redesigned programming to meet conditions, asd hypoed salesmen to help beat down the video bogeyman.

Biggest and most aggressive program changeover is WTAM's "Johnny Andrews' Morning Bandwagon," a two-hour, Monday-thru-Friday 7:05 a.m. stanza featuring the former "Easy Does It" star as emcee; a 17-piece house band selected by Norman Cloutier, program director, and spotlighting two vocalists, Audrey Norris, cafe chirper, and Jay Miltner, announcer-turned-crooner. Except for a 10-minute news pitch by Bill Tompkins, SOHIO reporter, and a five-minute Carl Bates "Wheatena" news, the entire 120 minutes is spot sold.

This break from the overstuffed morning diet of diskers, along with the WTAM sports program based on a 45-station pickup of the Ken Coleman broadcast of the Cleveland Browns' football games, constitute the main props in this NBC o.&o. report of a 20% business pickup as against a year ago. WTAM-WNBK general manager Hamilton Shea described the station's boffo sales as both a realization by national advertisers that radio is still a great buy, and by local merchants who see radio as more available to their needs.

Upbeat in national spot sales and

Does Macy . . . ?

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

To Harry Maizlish radio stations other than his own KFWB are contemporaries rather than competitors so he feels the public is entitled to know what's on their stations as well as his. Taking a step unprecedented in broadcasting, he has ordered his announcers to give a rundown on other station shows two minutes before every broadcast hour. It also goes for the seven TV sites.

Sez station prexy Maizlish: "people have diversified tastes in entertainment and if they can't find what they want on our station we should brief them on the others."

Review Board On Blacklists Sought In AFTRA Talks

N. Y. membership of American Federation of TV & Radio Artists on Monday (27) passed a resolution injecting the "blacklist" question into the negotiations with the industry. It proposed that there shall be agreement by the webs, agencies and packagers to discuss formation of an impartial fact-finding board which would review cases of persons charged with "subversive" links.

A move that the pacts include a clause barring "blacklisting" was defeated. Instead, discussions with the employers on setting up a review board of prominent citizens—as embodied in an AFTRA national board resolution—were favored.

In Hollywood a similar debate took place. A resolution was proposed Monday (27) making it a pact violation if a member is deprived of work because of political views. However, prez Frank Nelson declared the amendment conflicted with an AFTRA constitutional provision barring membership to members of the Communist Party or groups labeled subversive by the Government. Amendment was beaten and replaced by a resolution asking producers for mutual cooperation regarding employment without discrimination because of race, creed, color, sex or national origin.

CROSLEY STATIONS IN MUSICIAN CUTBACK

Cincinnati, Oct. 28.

Crosley Broadcasting Corp. staff of musicians will be reduced from 34 to 14 within two weeks. K. T. Murphy, vice president and comptroller, in serving notice on card men said the temporary cutback is within contract with musicians' union which calls for a $300,000 expediture during a 12-month period that runs to April 6. Crosley music staff for WLW-TV also includes 14 additional members engaged as copyists, librarians and arrangers.

Ernie Lee and Lee Jones, hillbilly entertainers, are taking departure from the Crosley stations. Ernie Lee jumps to WHIO-TV, Dayton, O., which is building up its hillbilly staff. Miss Jones is joining a Chicago station.

WNYC Nixed On Election Stay-Up

Washington, Oct. 28.

New York's municipal station, WNYC, will have to sign off as usual at 10 p.m. on election day, Nov. 4, despite its willingness to stay on the air to broadcast returns.

The station asked the FCC recently to waive the rules regarding limited time outlets in order to provide special election coverage, particularly on local contests. However, the Commission held firm to its policy of "no exceptions" and turned down the request.

The agency advised WNYC that "if any exception were made to the requirements of the rules prohibiting issuance of special temporary authorizations to broadcasting stations there would be no reason for refusing to grant waivers in any number of other cases and thus the very purpose for which the amendment to this rule was adopted would be defeated.

Tight policy on special authorizations was invoked two years ago, when WNYC was refused a similar request, because of growth in number of daytime and limited time stations with resulting interference which overtime operations would cause to fulltime stations using the same frequencies.

WNYC's 830 kc spot is used fulltime by WCCO in Minneapolis with 50 kw power.

RADIO EDITORS IGNORE RADIO

A&A: A Show Biz Milestone

"Amos 'n' Andy" racks up its 10,000th radio broadcast on Nov. 16, after 25 years of riding the bigtime commercial kilocycles. If it has a "nobody-else-can-make-this-statement" overtone it's because Freeman (Amos) Gosden and Charles (Andy) Correll have had an impact on a quarter-century phase of America that's incalculable. Their contribution to American folkways has been tremendous, dating even prior to the days when Mr. and Mrs. America set their watches to the A & A 7 p.m. NBC strip back in a more halcyon era of AM broadcasting.

Radio formats and personalities have come and gone since the initial comedy show was launched by Gosden and Correll back in 1926 on WGN, Chicago (it was then called "Sam 'n' Henry"). But the intervening years on NBC and later on CBS (when Bill Paley established a broadcasting precedent by parlaying the A & A property into the first and most successful capital gains maneuver), has demonstrated a durability comparable to Lou Gehrig in baseball, Joe Louis in the ring, Ethel Barrymore on the stage and FDR in politics.

And CBS today is reaping the fruits and benefits of the show's emergence on TV, with the Blatz-sponsored counterpart one of the most successful in video's commercial sweepstakes.

Daytime Shows Equal Ratings of AM Night Stanzas; 5 of Top 11 Nielsens

With pressure increasing from various sources for closing the gap between daytime and nighttime AM network rates, it's significant that five daytime shows would break into Nielsen's Top 10 if all stanzas were lumped together.

Nielsen lists the once-weekly evening shows and the weekday strips separately, a division which is tending to lose some of the significance it had, when the big powerhouse of radio was the after-dark program. For example, on the Sept. 7-13 report, No. 10 in the evening chart is "Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts" with a 5.6, but all of the Top 10 daytime shows better that figure (including Godfrey's morning stanza).

What is attracting the attention of agency execs is the cost differential between day and night shows with identical ratings. They cite the fact that one "Philip Morris Playhouse" broadcast costs about the same, in time and talent, as "Helen Trent's" five episodes, each getting a 6.6 rating and reaching 2,894,000 homes per average broadcast. However, "Trent" gets into twice as many homes in a week (on the five-day cumulative basis), and hits many homes more than once.

Additionally, "Playhouse" gets three minutes of commercial, while the soaper gets five times as much for the same coin. These factors may explain why Procter & Gamble, General Foods and other big daytime spenders have held their weekday lineups practically intact. In the combined Top 10, Lever Bros. has the top show ("Lux"), but P&G has four out of the first nine.

Network researchers stress, however, that the Nielsen figures un-

Lotsa CBS For Elliott & Cathy

As a result of Coast huddles between Lester Gottlieb, CBS Radio programming veepee, and his Hollywood program veepee, Guy della Cioppa, two new West Coast-originating stanzas are currently on the AM griddle for early showcasting involving the talents of Elliott and Cathy Lewis, two of the longtime vets in radio.

"Elliott and Cathy Lewis on Stage" is designed as a new Mr. and Mrs. airer, the web feeling it has a major potential in the teamup. It'll have a flexible format permitting for dramatic inserts, situation comedy, etc.

Other half-hour show, tabbed "Classic Crimes," will have Elliott Lewis as host, culling from famous criminal cases of the past. Lewis continues as producer of the CBS "Suspense" series (he's also on the Phil Harris program), while Cathy Lewis is prominently identified with the CBS-TV "My Friend Irma" series.

Kellogg Buys 'Pet Shop'

DuMont web, which has been perking along steadily saleswise during the last few months, wrapped up another sale this week when Kellogg decided to pick up the tab on its Saturday night "Pet Shop," starting in early January. Show is aired in the 7:30 to 8 p.m. slot Saturdays.

Deal marks another change-of-pace for Kellogg since the account switched recently from Kenyon & Eckhardt to the Leo Burnett agency. Cereal firm only last week notified NBC-TV that it is checking off that web's high-priced "All Star Revue" at the end of the current cycle.

Lamb Not Meek, Dumps McCarthy To Avoid Libel

Edward Lamb, owner of WTVN, the Columbus, O., video outlet which refused to carry Sen. Joseph McCarthy's nationwide political talk Monday night (27), declared yesterday (Tues.) that the speech was cancelled because the ABC network "refused to guarantee that the station would be held free from libel if any libelous statements were made." In a telephone interview from his Toledo headquarters, Lamb told VARIETY that the WTVN management had requested an advance text of McCarthy's speech from ABC but that the net did not furnish one.

Lamb, who is also publisher of the Erie (Pa.) Dispatch and owner of WICU-TV in that city, said the WTVN action did not represent discrimination, since the station has carried all Republican paid political addresses until now. He pointed out, however, that FCC

Westinghouse Station Managements Shuffled

Washington, Oct. 28.

In a management reshuffle at the Westinghouse stations, L. R. Rawlins, for past three years head of KYW, Philly, moves to Pittsburgh as general manager of KDKA. Franklin A. Tooke, for past two years manager of WOWO, Ft. Wayne, transfers to Philly as KYW topper. Appointments become effective Nov. 10.

Carl A. Vandagrift, WOWO program chief, is upped to manager of the Ft. Wayne outlet. R. G. Duffield, KDKA manager for past 18 months, has resigned and will remain with Westinghouse as a consultant until the end of the year.

TEEVEE GETTING ALL THE PLAY

The radio editors throughout the country add up to a "court of missing persons" so far as the radio station flack gentry are concerned. Today it's all TV, practically coast-to-coast among all the nation's dailies, with the nearly 100% video accent likened to an infatuation for a big beautiful doll, while the old toy is relegated to the ash heap.

The publicity boys among the radio station-network fraternity are far from happy over the brush-off treatment given AM by the daily press. Once in a great while, they complain, a fugitive piece about radio will make its way into a Jack Gould-John Crosby-Harriet Van Horne, et al., critique, with the situation the same in practically all key television cities throughout the country. And even in the more isolated TV fringe areas, where the populationtions are largely dependent on radio for their entertainment, the dailies and the weeklies are giving priority to TV copy, rather than radio, the flacks claim.

If it weren't for the trade press, the press boys maintain, the job that radio is trying to do, either network-wise or on a local station level, as a still vastly potent entertainment medium, would remain a deep dark secret.

Even in the case of program logs, it's averred, the radio listings are for the most part relegated to secondary importance with the major accent on the TV log. On some dailies around the country, it's charged, the radio ed is told bluntly by the managing editor or the city editor to "lay off the radio stuff, give them TV." While it's recognized that the video matter obviously has far greater readership appeal as the No. 1 glamour medium today, nonetheless it's felt that radio is undeserving of the almost total brush-off it's getting so far as critically analyzing programming is concerned.

Extend Luckies Option On Buttons; Comic Recovers

With comic Red Buttons having completely recovered from the attack which he suffered just before airtime on his CBS-TV show last Tuesday night (22), the web has granted American Tobacco extension of its option on the package. Bankroller is expected to decide this week, with the determination of where best to slot the show in relation to "This Is Show Business," which it also sponsors on CBS, apparently being the chief stalling factor.

Buttons collapsed on the set just a few minutes before the second show in his series was slated to take the air. Medicos attributed the collapse to exhaustion and prescribed a good day's rest. With Buttons recovered, the show was scheduled for broadcast again last night (Tues.) in the 8:30 to 9 period.

WW 13.3; Murrow 8.2

Walter Winchell drew a 13.3 rating for his first show on the ABC-TV web Oct. 4, according to American Research Bureau figures released this week. Winchell topped the 8.2 drawn by Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" on CBS-TV, but was shaded by NBC-TV's Roy Rogers show, which drew a 13.6.

ABC-TV's Ozzie and Harriet, also for its first time out, drew a fair 17.0. Show was topped by both the Dennis Day program on NBC, with a 22.3, and CBS-TV's "Mama," which drew a solid 36.4.

'Operation de la Ossa' Projects NBC Into New Employer-Employee Status

Something new in employer-employee relations is being evolved at NBC. So vast is its scope that it involves a complete and exhaustive reevaluation and appraisal of 5,000 jobs—from top executive to page boy. The project is scheduled for completion about Jan. 1.

It began seven months ago, just at the time that NBC prexy Joseph H. McConnell, having determined just where the dust had settled in carrying out the Booz, Allen & Hamilton administrative blueprint, finally decided the time had come for a complete unification and integration of the radio and television networks.

But in the intervening years things had happened at NBC. In contrast to the 2,500 employees on the payroll five years ago, today there are 5,000. There are nearly 2,000 employees alone (almost equalling the total manpower of five years ago) whose primary assignment is television (although the figure is not a pure one, since due to the reorganization it is difficult to identify employees who now perform exclusively TV functions or exclusively radio functions.)

With double the number of employees, with multiple new problems confronting the company in the wake of TV's emergence, and with the need to strengthen the organization through a program of executive development so that the new leadership can come from within, McConnell embarked on a new project designed to achieve new employee relations objectives.

New Year's Deadline

He turned the whole operation over to Ernest de la Ossa, NBC's director of personnel. In seven months, operating with a limited staff and without fanfare, it has become one of the most important areas in the entire company. By Jan. 1 de la Osso will deliver his blueprint for the future: of establishing the exact niche which best fits the requirements of all NBC employees and without going outside the organization (as in the case of the web's most recent executive reshuffle, which found only one outsider—Frank White — brought in, while other executive posts were filled through a process of NBC employees moving up.)

Meanwhile it's de la Ossa's function to play wetnurse to NBC's 5,000 employees in achieving the following objectives: 1) to make each employee aware of the web's importance as a service to the

Dobberteen's F-C-B Post

H. H. Dobberteen, veepee-media director of Benton & Bowles for past 14 years, has moved over to Foote, Cone & Belding as media v.p. He'll direct a newly-organized media department for all types of media and clients.

Sherwood Dodge, v.p. formerly in charge of media and research, will concentrate on his work as plans board members, spearheading marketing strategy on all accounts.

Del Monte Holding Key to Future Of NBC-TV 'All Star'

Despite the fact that it's one of the more successfully established shows on NBC-TV, and consistently grooved to the top-rated Nielsens, apparently not all's well on the "All Star Revue" sponsorship front. Kellogg is cancelling off around the first of the year after a cycle of 17 weeks. Now the status of Del Monte is in doubt, with the client having until Nov. 1 to make up its mind about continuing after 17 weeks. Pet Milk, the show's third client, also signed for a similar run, but its continuance for the balance of the season is a certainty.

Last year NBC-TV stuck to a policy of insisting on a firm full-season sponsorship. This season it relaxed the rule to permit for an initial 17-week ride. Del Monte went on because, in addition to a $500,000 appropriation, it managed to siphon off an additional $250,000 from its magazine account to defray the $750,000 tab required for a 17-week pickup. Now there's considerable doubt that Del Monte can continue to channel the mag coin into TV.

There's an order in the house for a 15-week pickup of the show by Johnson & Johnson as successor to Kellogg. But NBC hasn't accepted it as yet, contingent on what Del Monte does. The latter, in turn, may cue the future fate of the show itself.

P&G TO CONTINUE 'BEULAH' PLAYBACKS

CBS Radio, together with Procter & Gamble, have decided to continue the "Beulah" show on the air, despite the death on the Coast Sunday (26) of Hattie McDaniel, its star. CBS has been running recorded repeats of some of the best "Beulah" shows since Miss McDaniel became seriously ill some time ago and will continue on that basis until at least the first of the year.

Louise Beavers, who played "Beulah" in the ABC vidfilm series, was originally slated to replace Miss McDaniel, but the repeat airings were decided on following the latter actress' death. Special announcements are being cut in this week to apprise listeners of the plan. P&G and the web will decide after Jan. 1 whether to recast the role, or preem a new show. "Beulah" is aired in the 7 to 7:15 p.m. slot cross-the-board.

Aubrey Heads KNXT

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

KNXT, key western station on the CBS-TV network, has a new manager, James T. Aubrey, who had headed up sales at the station. He succeeds Wilbur Edwards, transferred east by the net to top telepix sales.

New sales head is Edmund Bunker, with CBS network sales for the past three years.

Skelton to N.Y., Program 'Worries'

Red Skelton is currently in New York for huddles with NBC-TV brass. His visit is coincident with the appearance on the Gotham scene of Freeman Keyes, top man in the Russel Seeds agency, which is responsible for the Skelton Sunday night TV show on NBC.

Skelton is reported unhappy with the program, which switched from live to film this season. Behind the huddles with the NBC brass (although show is a Seeds agency and not an NBC package) is a reported attempt to "try and do something about it."

The ratings on the show have held up, major factors being the cream Sunday at 7 slot, the impressive station lineup and the fact that Gene Autry on CBS-TV is the only formidable opposition. However, there has been criticism about the show, particularly in regards to the film quality and lack of last season's "live" spontaneity. Whether show will revert back to a live status, however, is undetermined.

2 D. C. FM Indies Air Music in Depth Testing 'Binaural' Sound Technique

Washington, Oct. 28.

A new technique for reproducing sound, particularly as applied to longhair music, with top fidelity, was unveiled here this past week for a group of local radio and Government reps. Dubbed a "binaural broadcast," experiment involved joint use of two separate FM stations, WGMS and WASH, in transmitting a moppet concert of National Symphony.

In N. Y. WQXR is conducting demonstrations along the same lines, but using its AM and FM transmitters to get the "stereoscopic" effect.

WGMS, indie station which has done much to make town "good music" conscious, originated technique three years ago with a demonstration which involved two signals, AM and FM, fed to two individual mikes and picked up by a pair of receivers placed in a room in relation to position of the instruments being reproduced. After a number of tests in other parts of the country, it was found that the difference in quality of the AM and FM signals resulted in less than perfect sound reproduction.

Thursday's demonstration, involving two FM signals transmitted by the cooperating stations and picked up by a pair of loud speakers strategically placed in a studio of U. S. Recording Co., was generally impressive, giving auditors the illusion of physical presence in the concert room, with each instrument and its location clearly discernible. Termed "three dimensional radio," its pick up and reproduction technique is aimed to parallel the dimensional and directional effects of listening with two ears.

No House Application

Except for listeners who own two FM receivers which they can place in different parts of the room, technique has no actual practical home application at present. Robert Rogers, WGMS prexy, however, envisions its practical application on a broad scale for such events as broadcasting a concert of top importance for a large auditorium audience. Pointing out that top sound realism cannot be achieved in the home, he stated that binaural equipment could be set up in an auxiliary auditorium, or even a series of concert halls on a national basis, to carry a musical event limited to capacity of a single theatre.

Rogers also speculated on possible use of the technique in theatre TV, with two coaxial signals going over a single telephone wire to bring top sound effects for musical, or even drama, events. This, incidentally, was technique used in first run of Disney's "Fantasia," when theatres carried dual sound equipment.

Last week's demonstration was under technical supervision of H. P. Leisinger, U. S. Recording Co., Nicholas Chaconas, WGMS engineer, and Robert Martin, who organized the original '49 experiment.

ABC Sets 'Lecture Bureau' To Inform Lay Groups On Behind-the-Scenes Radio

Feeling that the general public is still interested in the behind-the-scenes production story of radio, ABC has set up its own "lecture bureau" to provide a speaker or team of speakers for conventions, college groups, women's clubs and industry gatherings such as the Broadcast Music, Inc., program clinics.

Web feels that there's much to be told the dialers about the new developments in radio. Further, it feels that through talks to industry and bankrolling groups the story of its own showmanship can be put across.

Comprising the unit of gabbers are men at the shirtssleeve level who know the problems first-hand. These include three senior directors, Martin Andrews, who specializes in dramatic shows, George Weist, in the popular variety field, and Bill Marshall, on the longhair side; Peter Martin, assistant script editor, and announcers Don Gardner and Milton Cross.

Eddie Waitkus to WPTR

Albany, Oct. 28.

Eddie Waitkus, first baseman for the Philadelphia National League Club in recent seasons and previously a member of the Chicago Cubs, has joined WPTR to serve in the program department and to do sports shows.

Waitkus began (27) a five-minute program at 7:55 a.m., Monday through Saturday, and a team job with George Miller on the latter's early evening sports shows.

ABC Hypoing Thursday Sked

With ABC-AM's Friday night lineup further strengthened by the insertion of "Crime Letter from Daniel D. Dodge" at 8 p.m., the web is now devoting efforts to hypo the Thursday sked.

Starting tomorrow (Thurs.), program chief Ray Diaz is putting "Top Guy," previously beamed Fridays, into the 8 p.m. slot and is bringing over "Michael Shayne," also deemed one of its heftiest whodunit properties, from Tuesday into the 9:30 p.m. Thursday period. Mercedes McCambridge starrer, "Defense Attorney," will take the Tuesday at 8 niche vacated by "Shayne."

In the five-minute strip at 7:55 p.m., resulting from General Mills' five-minute cutback of "Lone Ranger" and "Silver Eagle," Diaz has installed "Police Blotter," starring Roger De Koven. This is a house package featuring dramatic crime vignets.

Web auditioned another strip "Baron Munchausen," with Jack Pearl and Cliff Hall, for the 7:55 p.m. spot. Show is considered a good sponsorship bet and is being pitched to some prospective clients for that berth or another.

With the program switches, the skein's "Pyramid" participation plan will now embrace "Cafe Istanbul," with Marlene Dietrich, Sundays at 8:30 p.m., "Defense Attorney" on Tuesdays, "Life Begins at 80" on Wednesdays at 8:30 and "Top Guy" Thursdays.

RED PROBERS BUY CBS' HEARING TAPES

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Tape recordings of House un-American Activities Committee hearings in L. A. early this month were sold to the government by CBS for cost of the raw stock, $1.50. Committee wants the tape, 25 hours of it, to use in possible contempt proceedings against certain witnesses. Commy investigating body preferred the tape to a transcript as more advantageous for its purposes.

CBS first offered a loan of the magnetic ribbon so that committee could have a copy made but government insisted on outright purchase. It was the net's intention of "wiping off" the tape and using it over again.

Honolulu Hopes to Bow Tele Before Year's End

Honolulu, Oct. 28.

KGMB, Honolulu's CBS affiliate, hopes to debut TV before the end of the year," according to J. Howard Worrall, president of the Hawaiian Broadcasting System.

Worrall said equipment is en route and operation of an interim station is planned in December, subject to FCC approval.

Interim station would use KGMB's existing tower.

Later a 10,000-watt transmitter is to be installed on a peak behind the city. Station's chief stockholder is Consolidated Amusement Co., operator of Hawaii's biggest chain of theatres.

ABC Palsy Telethon

ABC-TV will stage a telethon for Cerebral Palsy for 16 hours on Dec. 6-7, starting at 8 p.m. Saturday night and running through Sunday noon. Web beamed a marathon for the charity last year.

Dennis James will be one of the emcees. Show will originate from the skein's TV-1 studio on West 66 St., N. Y., with relay teams of directors assigned.

New Policy for Screen Credits Is Evolved At ABC-TV; No Sluffoff

ABC-TV has evolved a new policy on screen credits, feeling that listing the many people connected with production of a stanza has become unwieldy and a bother to viewers.

Under the new setup, credits on sustainers and smaller commercial shows have been cut down to merely a frame crediting the ABC-TV staff. On the 15-minute Billy Daniels airer for Vitamin Corp. of America, for instance, screen credit is not given to director Alex Segal and producer Fred Heider.

On the other hand, on the bigger layouts a more extensive listing of credits will be used — rather than the rapid unfolding of the names which can hardly be read by viewers. Credits will be given to the creative engineers and technicians, e.g., audio men and lighting men, where previously they may have been sloughed off. Final say on which credits will be given on each show will rest with production topper Charles Holden.

In many crafts, the handing out of credits is covered by union contract. New Authors League of America pact (not yet in effect) calls for writers to get credits equal to those given producer and director. Pact with the graphic artists calls for them to get credit on one show an evening. Contracts with costume and makeup artists places handing out of credits at the discretion of the web.

New policy will affect the chain's o&o stations as well as programs fed to the network.

FCC HANDS OUT 12 NEW RADIO PERMITS

Washington, Oct. 28.

Television may be great stuff in the big cities but radio is still good enough for the small towns, as evidenced by the issuance last week by the FCC of 12 permits for new AM stations. And still the applications pour in.

Although the AM band is badly congested, applicants manage to find frequencies which can be used daytime without causing interference with other stations on the same channels provided certain engineering precautions are taken. As a result, authorizations are made with "conditions."

Of the dozen grants last week, 10 were for daytimers. They were for stations in Geneva and Homewood in Alabama; Benton, Ark.; Fort Walton, Fla.; Prestonburg, Ky.; Oakdale, La.; Leonardtown, Md.; Punxutawney, Pa.; Narrows, Va.; and Lubbock, Tex.

The fulltime authorizations went to Rumford, Me., and Idabel, Okla.

Towers Inks Vivien Leigh, Cotten for Radio Dickers

London, Oct. 28.

Joseph Cotten is scheduled to arrive in London around Nov. 10 to begin a series of commercial radio programs sponsored by Towers of London. Contract calls for 52 half-hour features, which will be based on Eric Ambler stories under overall title of "Journey Into Fear.

According to present commitments, Cotten will tape only 10 or 12 programs in a fortnight, then return to the U. S., coming back later to finish the series. There is, however, a possibility of a British film deal, in which case he would tape the remainder of the programs after he had finished in the studios.

Harry Alan Towers, who returns to the States next weekend, has also signed Vivien Leigh for a series of 26 half-hour recordings which will be entitled "Theatre Royal." They will comprise romantic properties.

TV NEEDS SOME 'SHOW GAMBLERS'

NBC's 'How To-' For Advertisers

On Nov. 17 NBC-TV will lift the curtain on one of its major projects of the year. It is a brand new presentation, the fruits of a full year's study and research undertaken on NBC's behalf by Horace Schwerin, and it will tour the country, with stopovers at all the web's key agencies and advertisers.

The study, introducing new techniques pioneered by NBC and Schwerin on "the care and feeding of commercials," marks the first time that a network has actually set up a primer designed to advance the cause of the advertising commercial.

NBC, in effect, will not be telling the advertiser what to sell and say, but, more to the point, how to do it. The web promises no exciting revelations, rather a better understanding of the basic principles of TV commercials.

The Schwerin studies actually show that sponsors are pouring vast sums down the drain annually because of ineffective use of commercials and where others, despite lower ratings, are enjoying the major benefits of extra consumers because of a more savvy use of commercial techniques.

NBC also plans to put all its facilities at the disposal of its advertisers in "packaging" pre-tested commercials to enable them to explore new techniques off the air and at low cost.

Markle to Rein TV 'Studio One' As Davis, Wife Exit in CBS Hassle

Donald Davis and his wife, Dorothy Mathews, co-producers of CBS-TV's "Studio One" since last April, are ankling the web within the next month as the result of what one top network spokesman said was an "argument over editorial policy" on the show. Fletcher Markle, who produced-directed "Studio One" when it was a CBS radio property, and producer of the old "Ford Theatre," is coming in from the Coast to replace them.

Prior to last April, Davis had been exec producer for all CBS-TV dramatic shows. When Worthington (Tony) Miner left CBS and "Studio One" to join NBC-TV, he and Miss Mathews took over the show, with William Dozier replacing him in the exec producer berth. Show has been grabbing off respectable ratings but recently slipped behind NBC's Robert Montgomery show, which airs directly opposite. CBS board chairman William S. Paley. and the sponsor, Westinghouse, were reportedly unhappy.

Markle had been a Metro director on the Coast most recently. He's due in N. Y. within the next three or four weeks, depending on how soon he winds up his personal affairs on the Coast.

In another CBS-TV production change, meanwhile, Robert Stevens, who has produced "Suspense" for the web for the last four years, requested and was granted a change of duties. Martin Manulis and Doug Cayton are now alternating each week on "Suspense," with Stevens assigned to round into shape two new dramatic properties which CBS-TV program veepee Hubbell Robinson, Jr., has in the works.

Westinghouse In CBS Tele Splurge

Westinghouse has placed an order with CBS-TV for two daytime half-hours starting next March. At that time the sponsor will take over the Tuesday and Thursday 2 to 2:30 period for a new audience participation package titled "Freedom Rings," which is to tie in directly with its "Freedom Fair" campaign running currently in national magazines.

Show is to be packaged by Fuller, Smith & Ross, the agency which beat out both McCann-Erickson and Ketchum, McLeod & Grove, Westinghouse's present two agencies, for the billings. As a followup to the mag campaign, the plugs on "Freedom" will have a direct merchandise tiein with Westinghouse dealers across the country.

The Tuesday and Thursday period is presently occupied on CBS by a sustainer, "Everywhere I Go." What will happen to that when the Westinghouse deal starts has not been determined.

Gleason Tops 'All Star'

CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason show topped the rival "All Star Revue" on the NBC video web for the first time last Saturday night (25), according to a Trendex 10-city report.

Gleason drew a 24.7 against a 20.8 for "All Star," with George Jessel headlining the NBC program.

WGN Layoffs In Chi Stir AFTRA 'Unfair' Squawks

Chicago, Oct. 28.

In the wake of a series of economy firings at WGN, AFTRA is set to file unfair labor practices charges with the National Labor Relations Board against the station. Brief is to be presented later this week.

Union claims the Chi Tribune station's layoff of five staff announcers and a sound effects staffer violates the clause in the current contract that discharges for economic reasons shall be based on seniority and ability. Also, the union holds that with negotiations currently underway on a new staff announcer pact, the discharges are "coercive."

Gabbers and sound man were let out as part of a general overhauling of the WGN operation which includes the pruning of 35 staffers from the payroll.

Meanwhile, at a Sunday night (26) caucus announcers from the web stations and indies WGN and WLS voted continued support for the AFTRA negotiators on the issue of the elimination of the so-called point system. Union's proposal that this formula be done away with has been one of the chief stumbling blocks in the stalemated talks on the new announcer pacts.

AFTRA is asking that gabbers' base pay be boosted from $135 to $150 weekly and that commercial fees be paid for all sponsored airers. Under the point system prevailing presently, staffers work 12-quarter hour shows weekly before they are eligible for the commercial extras.

'Eddy Backyard' for TV

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Jerry Horwin, former film story editor and recently story editor of CBS-TV, is working on a projected series, "Nelson Eddy's Backyard." Pilot was kinescoped here tonight (Tues.), using NBC's El Capitan Theatre and facilities.

Series will also feature Jan Clayton and Chick Chandler. Alan Dinehart is directing.

TOO MANY GET HEAVE TOO SOON

The emergence of two summer-incubated TV shows to the permanent commercial program rosters—"Mr. Peepers" and "My Little Margie"—is offered as evidence that, like radio before it, TV too often loses patience with properties before giving them time to ripen.

In both the case of "Peepers" and "Margie," which were originally installed as summer replacements for CBS-TV's "I Love Lucy" and the Ford Thursday night showcase on NBC-TV, respectively, the initial presentations were greeted with something less than enthusiasm. In each instance it took practically the entire 13-week cycle to get the show off the ground and establish its character.

The payoff has now come through. "Peepers" got the Reynolds Metals nod as the Sunday night 7:30 replacement for the Eddie Mayehoff show on NBC-TV, while "Margie," flying the Philip Morris colors, moves into the CBS-TV roster of high-rated situation comedies as a permanent entry.

Radio Hangover

These, however, are but isolated instances, involving as they do shows that have already proven themselves clicks before the client agreed to sign on for a permanent ride. It doesn't bypass the complaints (strictly a hangover from the old radio days) that too few sponsors are around today willing to gamble on continuation of a show until it has earned its Nielsen stripes.

Few are the shows today that are given an opportunity to establish a "track record," either on the basis of a network sustaining it until it has proven its worth and saleability, or a client willing to play along with the potentially promising property until it crashes into the rating payoff column.

TV clients argue that the gamble in TV is too great; that it's no longer a case of playing around with a few thousand dollars as in radio, but with figures hovering in the stratosphere. Reynolds Metals decided to yank the Mayehoff situation comedy after only three NBC-TV exposures. While it's argued in some quarters that the Mayehoff "Doc Corkle" property, given time and patience, could have solidified itself as a qualitative entry, others concede that, if faced with the same problem as Reynolds on whether to gamble on a show to the tune of $1,000,000 a year, they would be obliged to throw in their lot with the Reynolds decision.

Tarry With 'Larry'

Despite the almost unanimous critical panning drawn by CBS-TV's new "Leave It to Larry" show, which preemed Oct. 7, the web plans to string along with the Eddie Albert starrer, convinced that the show has in it the correct ingredients to be an eventual success. Web spokesmen this week emphasized also that they are keeping the show in the Tuesday night at 8 slot, where it is now bucking the Milton Berle show on NBC-TV and will soon face added competition via the return of Bishop Fulton J. Sheen to the DuMont web.

CBS program toppers pointed out that "I Love Margie," the Philip Morris-sponsored vidpix package, likewise got panned at the start, but paid off for the client. CBS exec pointed to the current Broadway legit click, "Wish You Were Here," as another example of the producers gambling with a show which was roundly panned by the critics and eventually coming up with a hit.

20% Hike in TV Pay Scales Sought By AFTRA in New Pact With Webs

Demands by the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists in the current negotiations with the webs call for a 20% hike in tele pay scales and a 15% boost in minimums for AM and transcription actors and announcers. No increase is being sought for AM and transcription singers.

A key demand in the video field is for reduction in the number of hours of cuffo rehearsal allowed the various categories of shows. When the first TV code was negotiated two years ago, it was decided to set up a package arrangement whereby payment of the minimum fee gave the producer the right to a certain number of hours of free rehearsal. That system differs from the format in radio, where each half-hour of rehearsal is paid for.

According to AFTRA, the reduction included TV rehearsal time would benefit producers as well as talent. It would make the setup more flexible, with those producers using less rehearsal time having to pay less than those using more. At present, bit players who have less than five lines are covered by the same amount of included rehearsal time as those with big parts. Singers, who for the most part are pre-rehearsed, often have to sit around. Idea of AFTRA is not to go to the AM basis of all rehearsal time paid, but to have a "happy medium" in which a smaller amount of rehearsal time is gratis.

For variety artists AFTRA is

ARB's Top TV 10

CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" bounced into the Top 10 rating lineup during the first week in October as a direct result of NBC-TV's "Comedy Hour" being forced off the air in most markets due to a NABET strike against the web on the Coast. According to American Research Bureau figures for the first week in October, "Toast" wound up in seventh place with a 48.8. CBS-TV's "I Love Lucy" the same week drew an all-time high rating of 65.9.

Following is the ARB Top 10:

|---|---|
| I Love Lucy (CBS) | 65.9 |
| Talent Scouts (CBS) | 60.6 |
| Buick Hour (NBC) | 54.6 |
| Gangbusters (NBC) | 54.1 |
| Groucho Marx (NBC) | 53.0 |
| Godfrey & Friends (CBS) | 52.5 |
| Toast of Town (CBS) | 48.8 |
| Jack Benny (CBS) | 47.0 |
| Show of Shows (NBC) | 45.1 |
| What's My Line (CBS) | 38.5 |

Weaver Peeks Into TV Future, Sees 'Wonders'

NBC exec veepee Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, Jr., taking a glimpse into a "wonderful future," last week predicted that within five years, RCA's new pint-sized television cameras will be on hand to record anything and everything of interest throughout most of the world for the benefit of TV viewers. He described the cameras—the vidicon, now used for dangerous industrial observation—as the focal point in the web's projected Communications Centre, which he said has been on the planning boards for the last two years. Speaking at the 100th anni of Manhattan College, N. Y., Weaver said:

"Imagine in five years 1,000 of these cameras giving us 1,000 eye-views of our planet and people—quick weather pictures from the tallest buildings; the instantaneous pickup from every public agency by pushing a button; the calling in from any railroad station or airport by our reporters to cover stories or present people; the presence in the homes of the leadership of the world so that forums of the greatest thinkers can be presented, or interviews for statements made on any of the spot news development of the moment. Every man of stature, every place of interest, every function of importance available instantaneously to an increasingly alert and interested citizenry."

And that isn't all, according to Weaver. He said that special video monitors all through the day and night back at NBC's Communications Centre would be picking up

BARTLETT 'TRAVELERS' ADDS ANOTHER BACKER

Chicago, Oct. 28.

Ekco Products has latched onto the first quarter-hour on the Monday segment of NBC-TV's "Welcome Travelers," hosted by Tommy Bartlett. Starting date is dependent on the web clearing the necessary stations.

When Ekco joins the Chi-originated show, it'll leave only three quarters-hours open on the afternoon half-hour cross-the-boarder. Procter & Gamble has the last 15 minutes four days a week and the Friday show is shared by Helen Curtis and Samsonite luggage.

Dancer - Fitzgerald - Sample is agency for Ekco.

'Amateur Hour's' One-Niter Trek

The Ted Mack-emceed "Original Amateur Hour," in its between-sponsorship hiatus on TV (deal is currently cooking for a new client cycle) takes to the road in the next couple of weeks for a coast-to-coast series of one-nighters. Tour opens in Johnstown, Pa., and works its way to Seattle, then returns to N. Y. via Texas.

Touring aspect of "Amateur Hour" has been one of the institutional-merchandising values of the program, with its charity-slanted broadcasts from auditoriums and theatres playing to SRO biz in years past. Show may go into the CBS Saturday night 9 to 10 period as a full-hour TV showcase when sponsorship deal is worked out.

CBS' 'Say It Ain't So' On A&A's Retirement

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, radio's "Amos 'n' Andy," won't be permitted to retire at the end of this season, if CBS has anything to do with it. Despite Gosden and Correll's announced intention yesterday (Mon.) of bowing out of show biz, CBS coast veepee Harry Ackerman declared that "I don't personally take it for granted —they may change their minds and continue."

Ackerman recalled that the comedy team, who celebrate their 25th anni of "A 'n' A" next month, had talked about retiring last year but then stayed on the air. "I hope they will continue," he said. "I think as the season goes on and their ratings remain near the top, it will be a strong inducement for them to stay." Ackerman conceded their contract gives them the right to retire after this season.

Asked whether CBS will continue "A 'n' A" if Gosden and Correll bow out, Ackerman said the team would not be easily replaced. "We will try to carry on," he said, "but I'm hopeful they will stay." Gosden and Correll said they wanted to quit last year but stuck for another season "to make it an even quarter of a century." They added: "We don't have greasepaint in our blood."

GARFIELD GOOSE & FRIEND

With Frazier Thomas, Roy Brown, Lee Weimer
Producer: Thomas
Director: Bill Taylor
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 4:30 p.m.
SARA LEE FOODS
WBKB, Chicago
(Hill)

Here's a neat little bundle for the kiddie trade. Most importantly, off the sample viewed (22), it's the kind of a show that entraps the moppets without exciting any consternation for conscientious parents.

Show is hosted by Frazier Thomas, who seems completely at home in his "uncle" role and who chats with the youngsters is a friendly, yet not patronizing, fashion that should be as pleasant to the mothers as it is to the little fans. He's assisted by Garfield Goose, a mute yet active puppet character worked by Lee Weimer.

Bulk of the session, after Thomas and Mr. Goose set the stage, is given over to kiddie records and film shorts. Disk yarns are given a visual treatment by Roy Brown's back-of-the-paper sketches as the story unfolds. Not a new idea, but successfully used this time to capture the kids' eyes as well as their ears. Final half is a celluloid segment, either an educational film out of the Encyclopedia Britannica files or a vintage Hollywood comedy.

Elements add up to a well-tailored half-hour for the small set. Live plugs for the client's baked goods are given a pleasant "sell" by Thomas. Dave.

POOCH PARADE

With Bob Dale, Freda Champion, Jake; Bob Doerr, announcer
Directors: Jim Breslin, Earl Keyes
15 Mins.; Monday 6:45 p.m.
CASCO
WEWS, Cleveland
(Clark & Richerd)

For animal lovers this 15-minute stanza should be a "must." With Freda Champion and Bob Dale as hosts, the program brings to viewers a number of dogs and cats from the city kennels. There's a cute production gimmick employed in the bringing of the animals through a "Lost and Found" department, and an "Adoption Center" both resembling kennels.

What gives this stanza its delightful flavor is the ability of the hosts to project a friendly, homelife atmosphere. That they have a vast fondness for animals is also highly evident by their treatment of both the animals from the "pound," and Jake in their handling of their pet Collie.

The 15-minute program also features a guest, and in the stanza caught it was Marilyn Hook, seven, who brought "Nickie the Chickie," a tame chick that was tucked in its cot, covered with a blanket, and then awakened. It made a delightful, entertaining feature.

Animal Protective League officials say the program is so effective that at least 400 animals are put into homes each month, and that no animal picked up by the dog catcher or turned into the "pound" need be destroyed if the animal is a healthy one.

Casco commercials, handled by both Miss Champion and Dale, along with Bob Doerr, announcer, are in good taste. Mark.

TODAY'S TOP STORY

With Ted Malone
Producer: Charles Ranallo
5 Mins.; 11:10 p.m. Mon.-thru-Fri.
NATIONAL CITY BANK
WXEL, Cleveland
(McCann-Erickson)

"Today's Top Story" is a five-minute information pitch following a 10-minute newscast. Theoretically, such a combo should make for a smooth package of audience viewing, regardless of "editorial" view in the five-minute segment. With Ted Malone at the mike, the stanza should provide for ease and comfort for Malone does have camera presence, and does project an authorative approach. In the latter point, he is added by a background set that provides a "den-like" atmosphere, and the camera work and selection of shots that are good.

Unfortunately, Mr. Malone's selection of stories are all-to-frequent not "top" in either a straight news or a feature sense. Furthermore, his spiels are so loaded with heavy one-side political overtones that they could almost bear a station disclaimer clause. As a result, the current series by Mr. Malone is a far cry from the effective, and objective "Top Story" series as conducted by the former program proprietor, Shepherd L. Witman, of the Council of World Affairs.

Handcuffing Mr. Malone with the commercial blurb instead of, as in past performances, permitting an announcer to do the sales gimmick doesn't help either, even though the commercial is short, well written and effective. Mark.

Tele Followup Comment

George Jessel's second show on NBC-TV Saturday night "All Star Revue" indicates that the Toastmaster General is worthy of a permanent niche in video. Although this session didn't have the impact of his first (there was a paucity of top sketch material and the banquet setting didn't hide the fact that a few strong scenes would have buttressed the proceedings considerably), Jessel nonetheless made a high individual score while his major guests, Leo Durocher and Laraine Day, reaffirmed earlier beliefs that these are no minor league talents on the guest shot circuit.

Jessel did the major part of the show by himself. There was the Prof. Ganzermacher sketch, which used to be Prof. Labermacher in the vaudeville and cafe days, and there was his delineation of an old roue. These were two good bits that set off as many different moods. The professor bit had a touch of oldtime vaude, while the latter piece had gentle humor.

The manager of the N. Y. Giants is no stranger to show business. His longest siege at this game was during World War II when he toured the Orient with Danny Kaye under USO-Camp Shows auspices. He has an excellent sense of timing and comedy. Mrs. D of course, used to be in films, and presumably knows something of acting. Their joint efforts on an embattled couple was okay. This twosome, with proper writing, could sustain a regular video niche.

The song spot was essayed by Kay Starr, the Capitol disclick, who reprised two top sellers, "Worry, Worry, Worry" and "Three Letters." Went over strongly.

As a final fillip, Channel swimmer Florence Chadwick demonstrated a series of strokes in a tank and Jessel, in evening clothes, took a dip. It was a good workable show in its entirety despite the lack of any imaginative material. Jose.

UNIVAC, the electronic "brain" which will be used in the CBS-DuMont coverage of the election returns, was subject of DuMont's "Johns Hopkins Science Review" on Monday (27). Program was addressed to the question, "Can Machines Think?"—and the answer seems to be that they can't, although they can come awfully close to it.

On hand to explain UNIVAC (Remington Rand's Universal Automatic Computer) was the inventor, Dr. John Mauchly, who pointed out that such devices can do mathematical problems faster than men and without error. He described some of their uses, in science and in business. He gave first a survey of how the huge numbers machine works—how the information is typed up, fed into the computer, processed and then how the answer tape is "played back" on a printer. So far so good. However, his explanation of the principles of the machine were, despite his efforts for simplicity, overly technical and sketchy for lay viewers. He demonstrated some gadgets to illustrate the steps, but these weren't used as effectively as they might have been.

Nevertheless, the show (of which about half was on film) got across the wonderful achievement which such scientific robots represent. It also underlined the importance of the human factor—the machine can do only what men direct it to do. And, as regards its use in deciphering voting trends on Election Night, the value of UNIVAC will depend on the interpretations the newsmen make on what factors UNIVAC is to measure. Unless the significant polling places are watched, one shrewd politico and a man with an abacus could scoop the electronic marvel. Bril.

Always on the alert for something new in the way of television dramatics, NBC-TV's "Kraft Theatre" came up with an off-the-beaten-track yarn last Wednesday night (22) localled in a Klondike goldmining camp. Original story, penned by Carey Wilber, was replete with allegories, personifications, etc., most of which emerged true-to-form and, while the show never managed to generate the full amount of suspense for which it was obviously aiming, it was interesting right up to the denouement. Kraft show, which is well into its sixth year of weekly dramas, with no time off for summer vacations, obviously is finding it increasingly difficult to locate stories and its producers are to be commended for the way they consistently break away from the trite and overdone stuff.

Wilber's story told of the regeneration of a gambler, a dance hall hostess, a young thief, a drunken medico and almost everyone in the camp through the happenings of "A Long Night in Forty Mile"—the show's title, "Forty Mile" being the name of the camp. Wilber built his plot nicely as the young thief, who had lost all his dough to the gambler, desperately stole a cache of gold from two of the miners, in order to show his wife that he had made good in the Klondike. The wife arrived on the scene, pregnant, and as she went through her labor pains in a room above the saloon, the veterinarian who turned to drink to forget his failure at becoming a real medico, became a man and saved her life; the gambler fell in love with the hostess, the robber miners forgave the kid and he, in turn, also became a man. Story would have had more impact had not the gambler spelled out the motif for the benefit of viewers, since Wilber's morals were inherent in the action.

Cast worked well under the direction of Stan Quinn, J. Walter Thompson staffer who produces and directs. John Baragrey etched a neat characterization of the hard-hearted gambler and Hildy Parks was good as the hostess. It was Fred Stewart, though, as the drunken vet who walked off with the thesping honors in a nicely-sustained job. Allan Shayne, as the young thief; Carol Wheeler, as his wife; Joe Maross and Dan Morgan, as the two miners, and Curtis Cooksey, as the saloon-keeper, topped a good supporting cast.

Show had the usual top-drawer "Kraft" production mountings, with the sets especially helping to background the mood. Use of a theramin to denote the young wife's labor pains was overdone, though. Ed Herlihy, as usual, registered solidly with his off-camera hosting and delivery of the Kraft plugs, which comprised recipes utilizing the sponsor's products. Stal.

NBC-TV's "Gulf Playhouse," successor to the late "We, the People," is of particular interest tradewise since the sponsor is giving the Young & Rubicam production staff on the show a chance to do 13 programs to prove that live TV in this case is better than film. If at the end of that first 13-week cycle the quality is not up to par, Gulf will take the show out to the Coast for filming. Judging from last Friday night's (24) production, such a move would definitely be a mistake, since the show was one of the better half-hour dramas seen on video this year.

An original by Carey Wilber titled "Necktie Party," the story was localled in a small western cowtown in the days when the cattlemen were feuding with the "nesters"—farmers who were attempting to displace the cattle. It was far and away better than most Hollywood-type oaters, however, in limning sharp characterizations of a group of men indulging in the lynching sport, showing what made them tick and their reactions when they discovered the intended victim was innocent. As produced and directed by Y&R staffer Frank K. Telford, the show captured much of the flavor not only of the situation but of the time and place in which it happened.

Jack Palance topped the cast as the viciously stupid leader of the mob, turning in a fine job even though he was thrown for a slight loss midway through the script when he fluffed a line and couldn't quite recover. John Howard was good as the man who tried to stop the lynching, and James Westerfield scored as the victim. Biff McGuire and Bernard Cates, as two young cowhands on whom the situation made its biggest mark, registered equally well, and Don Briggs impressed in a short role as the man who arrived in the nick to save Westerfield.

Sets looked like any small western town in films, with even live horses paraded on camera. Camera work and other production credits were good. Gulf plugs were okay for the sponsor but that middle one was too much a mood-breaker for the show. Stal.

Second outing last Wednesday (22) of "Scott Music Hall," alternating in the 8:30 to 9 p.m. slot with "Cavalcade of America" on NBC-TV, added up to a pleasant session without individual or overall impact. Intime revue format has a three-way potential in singer Patti Page, comic Frank Fontaine and ballerina Mary Ellen Terry. By spreading the talent over the course in orthodox production style, a centre of interest was missing. These were basically "numbers" immediately identifiable as belonging largely in the "guest act" class. What did come out ranged from good to better, but the one spark was lacking to ignite the flavorsome ingredients.

Some hard work and currency have gone into framing this Scott Tissue show. The trappings were there, also the music (Carl Hoff), but the talent seemed pressed into a series of one-shotters with minimum regard for integration. Miss Page's songs were upped visually by snazzy gowning: first a strapless flare for her "Back in Your Own Back Yard," then in chaste black for her low-key, whispery edition of "You Belong to me;" and finally in a chichi bouffant for the end-up songs and sketch with Fontaine.

Fontaine displayed a corking gait in his Three Little Pigs, assuming all the roles in a narrative accenting his mobile facialistics. The sharp, sustained closeup for this stint was standout, adding values to his goon-like mugging.

For the terping portions, show has a prime asset in Miss Terry, with looks, shape, an expressive face and ditto feet. A second and interpretive number with partner Peter Conlow was fine etching, the sultry innings being punctuated deftly by the Hoff orch. Fontaine's gags with an ailing pal were strictly filler. Finale skit, with Fontaine as an overdressed pilot and Miss Page as "Supersonic Queen of Mars," was lightweight farce helped by their takeoff dueting on "Si Si" and the group's wiggle dance. Trau.

CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" had a mixed quality talent lineup Sunday night (26), with the result that the stanza was only sporadically good. Singer Connie Russell, comic Joe E. Lewis and the Smith and Dale team sparked the proceedings when they were on camera, but the balance of the lineup, including comic Lew Parker, failed to perk.

Co-producers Ed Sullivan and Marlo Lewis tied in with Columbia Pictures on the show to present some six minutes of clips from Col's unreleased "Happy Time," marking what was probably the first instance of a major Hollywood distrib permitting so much of a new film to be preemed via TV. Idea, designed to help bally the picture, went wrong through an unwise choice of clips. Sullivan had Linda Christian in the studio audience so the footage used revolved around her entry into the Bonnard household. While those who had seen the legit version of "Time" or knew the story could appreciate the goings-on, other viewers could get no idea of the "birds and bees" motif which Col is plugging in its ads.

Lewis, doubling from the Copacabana, N. Y. nitery, in his second appearance on "Toast" in four weeks, scored solidly with a cleaned-up version of some of his nitery routines. That impish grin and disarming personality took all the sting out of his pinpointing his preference for hard liquor for probably all but dyed-in-the-wool WCTU'ers and his little parody on college drinking songs was socko. Austin Mack, per usual, accomped him ably. Smith and Dale reprised their "Dr. Kronkheit" skit, updating it with some new gags. Even though it's been seen numerous times on TV, it was still good. Miss Russell, who won her TV spurs on the old "Garroway at Large" show and then made a new dent as featured vocalist on WNBT's daytime Morey Amsterdam program, debuted her new nitery act, which looked good, and then registered as the lead in the program's only big production number, with the producers giving her some solid visual backing via the show's line.

Parker, who's basically a good comic, again fell prey to poor material, with his skit on the new crop of animal actors in pix being especially unfunny. Vera McNary and her femme marimba group impressed with their "Body and Soul" rendition. Reason for Sullivan's presenting a quartet from Western Kentucky State College, doing a Four Aces carbon on a new tune written by one of them, is probably known only to Sullivan. Stal.

An interesting tale in the setting of an international film festival on the Riviera, "Better Than Walking," was offered by "Goodyear TV Playhouse" on NBC-TV Sunday (26). Thomas W. Phipps' script re-

HAVE A HEART

With Bill Anson, Tommy Crosson, guests
Producer: Anson
Director: Rob Hiestand
30 Mins: Thurs., 7 p.m.
TOMMY CROSSON (PLATT TV STORES)
KTTV, Hollywood
(Howard Tullis)

The noble purpose behind this new teleshow produced and starred in by erstwhile deejay Bill Anson needs better presentation to provide maximum results. The raggedness of the opener mitigated against peak appeal to the tales of the needy, interviewed by Anson, whom the show desires to help.

Format is extremely simple. Anson's friendly interviewing of people in desperate straits brings out their immediate needs and viewers are invited to telephone in offers of assistance. The phones were busy on the debut but quite obviously not as busy as had been expected.

Anson has an easy manner and sponsor Tommy Crosson, who believes in adding the personal touch to his programming, is on hand to add a contribution and help marshal the guests. What's needed, however, appears to be rehearsal, since the guests obviously need help in presenting their cases.

Anson also handles the commercials for Crosson's chain of Platt TV stores. Kap.

HI LADIES

With Tom Moore, Pat Rogers, Dolph Nelson, Jack Payne, The Starnoters
Producer: Nelson
Writer: Payne
45 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 12 Noon
HOME ART GUILD
WGN-TV, Chicago

One of the longest-running daytime housewife baits, "Hi Ladies" has undergone a format revision with Tom Moore installed as the host. Switching from a straight audience participationer, it's now broadened out with musical assists from The Starnoters (instrumental quartet), "name" interviews and the other standard gadgets. With the emcee now pretty much the whole show, the Moore imprint will decide which way that dial is turned. As evidenced on session viewed (14), he's a facile ad libber and an expert at slightly dressed up cornball humor that apparently clicks with the older gals. His forced enthusiasm won't ring true for a lot of dialers, however.

On this go, Moore gassed with Miss Tokyo, making the rounds promoting a motion pic; an 80-year-old grandmother, and a youngster from the studio audience. None was very productive and the lad was actually badly mishandled for the sake of some laughs. Emcee had the kid stuff his mouth with lemon drops and then had him sing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Entire bit was ill-conceived, to say the least.

Starnoters were given little chance to display their talents. Their major contributions was a hoked up medley of German tunes done in the manner of a German band.

Participating plugs were given a firm sell by Moore, with the assistance of Pat Rogers. Dolph Nelson and Jack Payne earned their on-camera fees by waving hello and goodbye and laughing at the right places. Dave.

BEE BAXTER SHOW

With Miss Baxter, Bernhard Ravca, Dr. Mildred Templin, Heith Headley, Dale Harris
Producer-director: Tracy Lounsberry
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 1:30 p.m.
Participating
KSTP-TV, Minneapolis

This is one of the more popular and successful locally-produced TV afternoon shows aimed at feminine tuners-in. A half-hour gabbing session five days a week, it's designed to cover the entire field of women's interests and activities, and finds the capable, personable KSTP staffer, Bee Baxter, interviewing visiting and local personalities as well as conducting panels on such subjects as child training. Working without a script, she does it all very well.

On afternoon caught, the glib Miss Baxter first had as her guest a top doll designer, Bernhard Ravca, who brought with him a collection of dolls he was exhibiting at a downtown department store. The doll's remarkable resemblance to human beings gave the display a high degree of TV value.

Latter part of show was given over to a panel discussion of modern Hallowe'en celebrating by Dr. Mildred Templin, Heath Headley and Dale Harris from the U. of Minnesota Child Welfare Institute. With Miss Baxter as moderator, it was explained how Hallowe'en deviltry has been replaced by constructive behavior. Rees.

TV TOWN TOPICS

With John Wingate, Whittemore & Lowe, guests
Director: Lewis Freedman
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 3:30 p.m.
WOR-TV, from New York

"TV Town Topics," new daily series which'll kick off WOR-TV's televising day, got off to a neat start its first time out Monday 27). It's a pleasant potpourri of news, interviews and music and should be able to pick up some matinee viewers. Big attraction on this show is that it doesn't play down to the hausfrau. It gives the gals-at-home credit for some grey matter and will probably make steady fans of them because of it.

Newscaster John Wingate gave a brief rundown of what the series expects to do and then handled the news stories, headline reports and theatre-book reviews in familiar slick style. Wingate also hosted guest Toni Terry Hatfield, femme correspondent who recently returned from Yugoslavia. Miss Hatfield showed a little camera fright as she gave her account of Tito and his people but Wingate's sharp and pointed queries kept the segment in line.

Duo piano team (Arthur) Whittemore & (Jack) Lowe filled in the musical portion with a standout workover of Richard Rodgers' "Falling In Love With Love." Number was preceded by the two gabbing intelligently on the performing artists relationship to his audience. It was an interesting discussion expertly handled. Team is skedded to alternate on the series with women's commentator Barbara Welles, who will hold down the spot on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Direction by Lewis Freedman kept the pace fluid and the camerawork was topdrawer. Gros.

COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

With Janet Sills, Dr. Karl Schmidt, Others
30 Mins.; Tues. & Thurs., 11 a.m.
Sustaining
WRGB, Schenectady

Second year of high-level educational program sponsored by the Adult Division of the Schenectady public school system started on a sounder telecast basis with the addition of Dr. Karl Schmidt, of political science department at Union College, to the moderating staff. He joined with Mrs. Janet Sills, last year's moderator, and guests in a discussion of issues in the presidential campaign. This series has been concluded. On last block viewed, Mrs. Sills interviewed an Albany man and a Schenectady woman about the United Nations.

Dr. Schmidt, through material, presentation and voice, gave the program a lift. He had charts and other data clearly organized and talked authoritatively but not dogmatically. Series proved timely and informative. United Nations segment did not possess as broad an appeal, although the local angle—a weekend visit to Schenectady homes by UN secretariat members—had a certain pull.

Mrs. Sills, of the Adult Division, teamed well with Dr. Schmidt. She does not register as strongly, solo. Intelligence and knowledge are obvious, but voice is rather small, high and tight. Feature becomes quite talky when all participants are women. Jaco.

BREAKFAST PARTY

With Ernie Simon, Jackie Van, Bill Snary, Bob Trendler and Starnoters
Director: Sheldon Cooper
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 10 a.m.
Participating
WGN-TV, Chicago

Latest addition to the local morning diet is this free-wheeling melange of no-holds-barred comedy unspun by host Ernie Simon, with better than average musical assists provided by warblers Jackie Van and Bill Snary, supported by The Starnoters and pianist Bob Trendler. Highly informal antics of Simon & Co. may be a little hard to take for some so early in the morning, but the laugh content is ther to lure lots of a.m. setsiders, especially those fortified by their second cup of java.

As spilled out on stanza viewed (22), there's still plenty of corn in the Simon jokebag, but it's dispensed with infectious good humor that's won the comic a big local following. His Hawaiian bit with Jackie Van ran a chuckle-charged course that included takeoffs on Arthur Godfrey and Ronald Colman. Less funny was the song and dance parody with Bob Trendler.

Miss Van, besides scoring well in the vocal department, shows a fine flair as a comedienne. Snary's baritoning adds a good plus touch for the femme dialers. Starnoters back the proceedings ably.

MEET MILLIE

With Elena Verdugo, Florence Halop, Earl Ross, Ross Ford, Marvin Kaplin, others
Producers: Jack Donohue, Frank Galen
Director: Donohue
Writers: Galen, Howard Leeds, Arthur Julian
30 Mins.; Sat., 9:30 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from Hollywood

CBS-TV has another potential situation comedy winner in the video version of the long-standing radio fave, "Meet Millie," which bowed in last Saturday night (26). With most of the radio cast doubling into TV (with the exception of the title role), the initialer impressed as having much of the funmaking aspects and sparkle of the AM program. It may not be another "I Love Lucy" but, since it depends basically on situations and bright dialog and steers clear of broad slapstick, there's plenty of room for it on the CBS video lanes.

Elena Verdugo has taken over the title role, which is still portrayed AM-wise by Audrey Totter. She's a nice looker and handled her lines with finesse, playing down the Brooklynese aspects of the husband-aspiring secretary to a point where it never overshadowed the story. Florence Halop duplicated the socko work she does in the radio show as Millie's mother, with Marvin Kaplan, as Alfred; Earl Ross, as Millie's boss, and Ross Ford, as the boss' son, also showing well.

As with most good situation comedies, the basic appeal lies in the way the writers exaggerate familiar persons and story lines to the point of farce. Familiarity is what gives the show its appeal and that's what writers Frank Galen (creator of the package), Howard Leeds and Arthur Julian have concentrated on. Preem edition had Millie bringing her boss and his son to her home to work, only to run into the confusion of a telephone-answering service initiated that same day by her mother and Alfred as a way to make a quick buck.

Show, originating live on the Coast, evidenced a top budget, with sets and other production mountings backing the action neatly. Jack Donohue's proluction and direction were both tops. CBS is currently airing "Millie" Saturday nights at 9:30, where it bucks NBC's top-rated "Show of Shows." On the basis of the initial stanza, "Millie" looked as though she might put a dent in the Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca audience. Stal.

GOAL TO GO

With Pee Wee King and Golden West Cowboys, Mart-Tuck Duo, Pat Griffin, Foster Brooks, Ed Kallay, George Barnes, Bob Kay, Ryan Halloran, Dotty Lee; Bill Gladden, emcee
Producer-director: Burt Blackwell
30 Mins.; Mon., 10 p.m.
Sustaining
WAVE-TV, Louisville

Lending use of its facilities, and several standard entertainers of its staff, WAVE came through for an excellent half-hour in behalf of the local Community Chest Red Feather campaign. Plugs were delivered in easy-to-take doses by Bill Gladden, and variety sesh was preponderantly good solid TV fare.

Opening turn, Pee Wee King's Golden West Cowboys, had the Western caparisoned lads giving out with "Slow Poke," "Very Pretty Waltz," "Tennessee Waltz" and other tunes usually heard in the King repertoire. Cousin Albert, rustic character, was in for a few mild titters. Followed by Mart-Tuck duo, couple sepia nitery performers on piano and bass fiddle, guys have a smooth playing duo, and went over in nice style with "You Belong to Me" and a jump tune.

Guesting from nearby Fort Knox, where her husband is an army official, Pat Griffin, petite blonde vocalist, gave out with "Body and Soul" and "Lover," providing her own ample piano accomp. She registered.

As a switch from the vaude format, Foster Brooks, staff announcer, gave a serious version of "Face on the Barroom Floor." Oldie reading is one of Brooks' best specialties, and he gave a restrained reading, without getting too sloppily sentimental. Worked in a practical barroom set, with various barroom characters lending atmosphere.

Satire on the "What's My Line?" TV show closed, with staff announcers and femme panelist Dotty Lee milking the script for a few laughs. Closed with a telling plug for the Chest. While actual appeal for the local Community Chest Drive was in few words, total affect was all to the good. At least, it must have made viewers Community Chest conscious and aware that the drive is under way. Wied.

MR. PEEPERS

With Wally Cox, Gage Clark, Patricia Benoit, Tony Randall, Marion Lorne, Joseph Foley; music, Bernard Green
Producer: Fred Coe
Director: Hal Keith
Writers: David Swift, Jim Fritzell
30 Mins.; Sun., 7:30 p.m.
REYNOLDS METALS CO.
NBC-TV, from New York
(Russel M. Seeds)

It ain't cricket to hit after the man is down. The "Doc Corkle" series starring Eddie Mayehoff has been kayoed after three rounds and that's that. "Mister Peepers" is pushed in to fill out the time—which is a large chunk of the season—for the same bankroller, Reynolds Metals. That in itself is rare.

More of a rarity is fact that "Peepers" was originally fashioned as a summer replacement for Ford's "James Melton Show," which has been axed. So "Peepers," title-roled by Wally Cox, hasn't had much of a rest from the hot weather pinchhitting chores since it thought it was getting through as of the Sept. 25 beaming (having teed off July 3 as only a bird in a not too gilded cage, summer viewing being what it is). It could represent a trend in the direction of putting together warm weather stuff with more than mere hope. The hope must be fortified by the kind of thinking which will consider replacements as full-blown productions. That means opening the budget, casting with vigor, and forgetting all about the hiatus as worthy only of filler material.

With a long shakedown behind it, advantaged by the fact it was on public view, "Peepers" moves out on its second maiden cruise with the ease that comes natur'lly. For the "new life" entry last Sunday (26), Cox dittoed his wry and sympatico stance, this time as a corporal honorably discharged and returning to the faculty as science teacher in a smalltown Jr. highschool. The situations expand on his discovery, with attendant pathos and confusion, that he'd been replaced by an older man whom Cox, as per his character, would not challenge for the post.

That everything was straightened out in the finale came as no particular surprise—but surprise is not exactly a strategic weapon in this series. The big weapon is Cox himself, and the fate of the program must revolve around his personality, assuming that the scripts will at least try to mesh with the droll Cox-swain of the show. (Since the character was created by David Swift, who scripts with Jim Fritzell, this is an assurance of fidelity; but whether Cox is directed beyond the hard and fast rules laid down on the typewriter is at least open to speculation.)

The surrounding cast seems to belong in the atmosphere created, each one pitching in tune with a design that is frequently bucolic in treatment. Gage Clark, as the school superintendent, Patricia Benoit as the nurse (a quiet charmer who looks a good deal like Luise Rainer), Tony Randall as history teacher, Joseph Foley as Mr. Gurney, the principal, and Marion Lorne as his wife carry out their assignments well. The Bernard Green music is firstrate in helping the mood. Kudos to Otis Riggs for sets that add up to what they're supposed to depict. Cox's end pitch to an unseen classroom to "tell your parents to vote" was a boffo cutie. Trau.

SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

With Jack Drees
Director: Dick Locke
10 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 6:10 p.m.
Participating
WENR-TV, Chicago

Jack Drees, a glib gabber well grounded in sports facts, is the current host of WENR-TV's early evening muscle roundup. Spieler does a top job whenever he's visible on this blurb-choked 10 minutes. Besides the opener and the closing trailer recapping the participants, there were three full-length spots on the show viewed (24).

In the time alloted him, Drees could only skim the top of the spots news. He did find time to unburden himself with some comments on the Ezzard Charles-Cesar Brion fight slated that night. He didn't think much of the match. Quickie look at the Saturday college football schedule with a handful of "picks" wound the session.

It all added up to little more than a teaser. Dave.

Salomon's Wisdom, Rodgers' Music Spark NBC-TV's 'Victory at Sea'

By GEORGE ROSEN

Here is one of the most distinguished television entries since the medium initially demonstrate that, from a standpoint of artistry and maturity it can hold its own with the best of them. It's the long-awaited 26-part film-and music dramatic history of naval operations of the 10 crucial years during and after World War II, called "Victory At Sea," and presented as a joint public service by the NBC-TV network and the United States Navy.

Coming as it did a week after NBC-TV inaugurated its '52-53 operatic season with a memorable performance of Benjamin Britten's "Billy Budd," presentation of the initial installment of "Victory At Sea" clinched any doubts as to television's impact on the American scene as a creative medium for public enlightenment as well as entertainment.

"Victory" might well be labelled the Naval counterpart of the brilliant Frank Capra series of World War II indoctrination films for the Army, which at the time projected the film industry into a new sphere of wartime importance on the Army public relations-information-morale front. With "Victory," TV similarly attains a new stature in mirroring contemporary history. And for this the major credit goes to the program's producer and co-writer, Henry Salomon, who, as a standout Navy historian, conceived and executed the series and enlisted the U. S. Navy for a collaborative assist, with Capt. Walter Karig, special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, working closely with Salomon as technical advisor.

VICTORY AT SEA

With Leonard Graves, announcer; NBC Symphony orchestra directed by Robert Russell Bennett
Producer: Henry Salomon
Director: M. Clay Adams
Writers: Salomon, Richard Hanser
Music: Richard Rodgers (Arranged by Robert Russell Bennett)
Film Editor: Isaac Kleinerman
30 Mins., Sun., 3 p.m.
NBC-TV, from New York

Out of the 60,000,000 feet of film sifted by Salomon and his staff from the files of 10 different governments, and brilliantly edited by Isaac Kleinerman, has come a series at once so gripping in emotional content, aside from its documentary value, as to emerge as a forceful paean for peace

No small measure of credit for the series' impact and success goes to composer Richard Rodgers, who has written an original score for "Victory" totalling 13 hours of music—the longest symphonic score ever composed. On its own, independent of this filmed documentation of the Navy, it's a cinch to win critical kudos as Rodgers' most serious effort todate and perhaps his most outstanding music contribution, with at least half a dozen recurring melodies, including the already-heralded "Guadalcanal March," as potential clicks in the pop tune field. As the background score for "Victory," it has been so brilliantly synchonized to the footage and arranged by Robert Russell Bennett, and so magnificently performed by the NBC Symphony Orchestra under Bennett's direction, as to give the visual documentation a heightened tension and tempo.

For weeks prior to Sunday's (26) preem with the initial "Design for War" installment, "Victory" got a reputation as being the "most previewed" TV show extant. There were frequent showings of the first few episodes (including Pearl Harbor, Midway, Guadalcanal) for the Navy brass, other distinguished D. C. biggies, potential sponsors, and the press. As such this writer previewed the first four chapters and collectively they add up to one of the most exciting experiences borne of TV. As with the opening episode's dramatic depicting of a U-boat "wolf pack" attack on an allied convoy and the successful execution of the mission—with actual periscope shots taken by the Nazis aboard a German sub—a consider- portion of the 26-part series represents footage captured from the enemy and shown for the first time on any screen. The tragedy of Pearl Harbor, marking the second installment, is unquestionably one of the most powerfully dramatic half-hours ever unveiled for TV. Leonard Graves' commentary is excellent, never too intrusive.

While planned jointly by NBC and the U. S. Navy as a public service, "Victory" is on the market for sponsorship, with the client restricted to a brief institutional ride. Since the series represents an approximate $700,000 outlay by the network, its commercial availability is understandable. "Victory," in fact, not only merits client support, but deserves a continuing cycle of re-runs under such commercial auspices.

KNOW NEW YORK

With Prof. Dan O'Connell, others
Producer: ABC Public Affairs
30 Mins.; Sun., 4 p.m.
WJZ-TV—ABC, N. Y.

Here's an interesting public service idea gone wrong through almost a complete lack of imagination and know-how in production. Show is designed to utilize classroom techniques to inform New Yorkers on the operation of their city but on the preem last Sunday (26), the end result was pure boredom. Any relationship between the format and an actual classroom discussion or seminar was not even unintentional.

ABC-TV's public affairs department has tied in with Manhattan College, New York U and Fordham U to alternate on the weekly programs. On the initialer, Prof. Dan O'Connell, associate civil engineering prof at Manhattan, led a discussion with four of his students on the city's suspension bridges. Usually, engineering talks are specially interesting to the uninitiated if the material can be brought down to their level, but that wasn't done on the show. With neither the prof nor his students displaying any type of TV personality, the only note of interest was a question on how the bridges would fare under an A-bomb attack.

Studes were seated at a long table with the prof at one end, a la most of TV's panel and discussion shows. Prof utilized still photos and blackboard drawings to point up his talk but, with the basic info so uninteresting, these added aids couldn't help matters much. WJZ-TV and its parent web have delved deeply into public interest shows recently with their Columbia U seminar, "All Star News," etc., for which they rate a nod. But this one needs a little more imagination. Stal.

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE

With Laurie Sisters, Dick Merrick, Joan Karter, James Cosenza; Paul Mills, announcer
Producer-writer: J. Franklin Viola
Director: Gene Renza
30 Mins.; Sun., 4 p.m.
PARAMOUNT MAC., PASTENE
WOR-TV, New York
(J. Franklin Viola)

New stanza is backed by Paramount Macaroni and Pastene Products, two firms concentrating on the Italo-American market, but the entry has only a touch of Italian flavor. That's probably a wise strategy, since New Yorkers of Italian ancestry have broad interests, and non-Italo viewers are also consumers of the macaroni, olive oil and similar products plugged.

"East Side" is a simply produced variety, sans emcee. In lieu of an on-camera announcer, a slide intros the talent. Performers are young and show need of polish, but considering budgets and the local character of the show it's not a disappointment. Laurie Sisters trio harmonize well, but are stilted and stiff in their gestures, a shortcoming that's pointed up by their moving in unison. Dick Merrick warbles the pop ballads, joining the Lauries on some items; he hasn't much of a voice, but registers okay. James Cosenza is a tenor who handled the more formal tunes, such as "Marta" and "Donkey Serenade" on the preem Sunday (26), in acceptable manner. Possibly the most potent draw on the initialer was Joan Karter, a tapster who put s.a. into her turns. Selection of numbers was in the popular groove, including "Zing a Little Zong," "Feet Up," "You Belong to Me," "Kiss of Fire," "Lover," etc., getting a full bill into the half-hour.

Production was unpretentious and intimate, with a few minor slipups. Commercials were pleasantly handled by Paul Mills. Bril.

volved around the selection of an International Lady, with Veronica Lake playing the protegee of a French promoter (Marcel Hillaire). Actually, she was an American, a tempestuous lass who had walked off with $930 from her onetime acrobatic partner, a professional Texan, played by Darren McGavin. Latter, in order to get his coin back, threatened to expose the girl, and in a series of doublecrosses and triple crosses Miss Lake found herself dropped by the promoter but back in love with Tex.

It was an amusing story, with some good comic segments, but without thematic point or real characters. This was one of those stock romances where the boy and girl are continually tossing insults at each other when they aren't throwing vases and chairs. It included a flashy knockdown set-to between McGavin and Miss Lake, ending with him giving her a seatwarming, a rather juvenile bit of cuteness. McGavin's frequent derisive laughter and smirking were also objectionable. Portrayal of the French was narrow and terming them "Frogs," in one instance, revealed a condescending attitude.

Despite the script weaknesses, cast did a good job. Miss Lake was topflight as the vixen and McGavin pleased, for the most part, as Tex. Marcel Hillaire did well as the Gallic promoter, although his previous "Playhouse" roles, which had greater substance, were better. Dorothee Long, who played Tex's other babe and who wound up as the beauty queen, was appealing as the sweet ingenue, although a little hesitant with the accent. Others in the cast were Jack Creley, Jonathan Harris and John Silver as assorted Frenchmen—a stooge, a maitre d', and a circus performer.

Production, up to this airer's usual standard, was handled by Fred Coe and Gordon Duff, with Delbert Mann directing. Commercials for Goodyear tires were timely (get ready for winter) and effective demonstrations. Bril.

Fred Waring came up with a better-than-par show on CBS-TV Sunday night (26) in his offering of a tasteful and well-rounded musical session. Highlights of the show were a number by Helyne McLain and a sophisticated folk-song takeoff with pantomime harp-playing by concert comedienne Anna Russell. Miss McLain's tricky vocal of a Latin number, with rhythm accompaniment, was a fast getaway for the show which slowed down somewhat for a long adaptation of the "Little Red Riding Hood" nursery tale.

Latter sequence had two good numbers, "Wishing Cloud" and "Beauty Is In the Heart," by Frank Warren and Alex Miller, but the adaptation was torn between being a straight juvenile treatment or outright adult spoof. Bob Wright, however, had a good bit as the mother, and Leonard Kranendonk, as the woodsman, handled their vocals excellently. In the juve part, Natalie Trundy was adequate.

Rest of the half-hour session featured Joe Marine's solo on "Outside of Heaven" and Gordon Goodman's vocal of "Long Ago And Far Away" with standard rich backing by Waring's organization. Herm.

Bestselling Jo

For her, music is strictly business, her voice a valuable property. She is one of the greatest record-sellers of all time (about 22 million); and her voice has earned her some $1,700,000. Now she is better liked than ever: her You Belong to Me has been at the top of bestseller lists for half a dozen weeks, her Jambalaya is almost as popular, and her latest, Tonight We're Setting the Woods on Fire (with Frankie Laine), is coming along fast.

*Businesswoman Jo Stafford sings anything, from ballads to bop, from hillbilly tunes to hymns. "I don't want to be typed," she says. "Once you get typed, you lose value."

Stafford Tops Femme Vocalist Contingent With 4 Current Clicks

With four platter releases racking up big sales around the country, Jo Stafford on Columbia Records is the top femme vocalist on wax.

Miss Stafford has topped the disk field for more than six weeks with her waxing of "You Belong to Me." Combined sales of "Belong to Me" and previous release, "Jambalaya," have passed the 1,000,000 mark. Her etching of "Early Autumn" has been building steadily while latest release, "Settin' the Woods on Fire," in which she's teamed with Frankie Laine, racked up 200,000 sales in three weeks on the market.

Col estimates that Miss Stafford's waxings sell on an average of 2,000,000 annually. The disk royalties and personal appearances give her a yearly gross of $300,000.

A CRIME LETTER FROM DAN DODGE

With Myron McCormick, Shirley Eggleston, others
Writer: Howard Swanton
Directors: Charles Irving, Donald Painter
30 Mins.; Fri., 8 p.m.
TONI CO.
ABC, from New York
(Foote, Cone & Belding)

"A Crime Letter from Dan Dodge," which bowed on the ABC net Friday (24), is in the same general vein as the dozens of other mystery thrillers cluttering up the kilocycles. Only change in format lies in the half-hour meller's method of presentation. For the adventure stuff is unfolded via flashback as private eye Dodge dictates a "Crime letter" that deals with a recent case.

Inaugural concerned an attempt by a real estate operator and a burlesque queen, who dabbled in realty, to pull off a big transaction. Unfortunately, a sausage factory on the site blocked assembly of the parcel. Whereupon the factory-owner's wife is spirited away and her spouse is charged with her murder. When this proves ineffective, the burley cutie kills him. For, with the owner out of the way, she controls the site through the widow.

Lest the script be too unconventional, the yarn is permeated with the traditional rivalry between the private eye and the police as to who cracks the crime first. Performances are fairly good although cliches are stressed. Myron McCormick, as detective Dodge, tersely reads his lines while Shirley Eggleston, as his gal Friday, has a nonchalant air and a sugary voice.

Supporting cast is adequate. Mystery fans may get a few moments of suspense out of "Crime Letter" but the show is far from a standout. Liberal plugs for Prom home permanent and White Rain shampoo are even woven into the script via a telephone call to Miss Eggleston. Gilb.

TAYLOR GRANT—NEWS

Producer: Coe
Director: Robert Noble
15 Min., Sun., 9:15 p.m.
LORILLARD CO.
ABC, from N. Y.
(Lennen & Mitchell)

The P. Lorillard Co. has signed up these two news programs over a 328-station hookup to plug two of its cigarets, the Sunday at 6:15 show pushing Embassy and the 9:15 airer plugging Old Golds. Both cigs get boosts via these programs.

"Monday Morning Headlines" is exactly what the title suggests—the headlines a reader will be seeing in next morning's newspaper, here read the night before clearly, factually and effectively, for a good capsule survey of up-to-minute news. Coverage is full; it's surprising how many headlines can be packed into a 15-minute airer.

Don Gardiner read them well, in lucid, unexcited tones. Sunday's (26) airer covered the political campaign, Korea, Iran, Germany, Poland, equally divided between foreign and domestic issues. Gardiner also read the two middle commercials, which were brief and inoffensive.

The Taylor Grant airer, at 9:15 was more of the same. Taylor had the same reassurance in his manner, as he read off the news in even-tempoed, deep voice. There was some repetition, which was to be expected. Grant's items were slightly more detailed, while occasionally he roamed away into trivia. But the last-minute news was there for the busy hearer, unadulterated, not hypoed, but straight. Grant also handled the commercials, which were a little shorter than Gardiner's. Bron.

ELECTION PREVIEW

With Leo W. O'Brien, Irving Lewis, Charles Day, Leslie Claypole, George Lord, Howard Maschmeier
Writer: Roger Stevens
30 Mins.; Sun., 1:30 p.m.
WPTR, Albany

An interesting five-week preview of the election picture in five "critical" states, New York, Illinois, California and Pennsylvania, is presented on a recorded half-hour produced at WPTR in cooperation with WLS, WGAR, KFWB and WCAU. Leo W. O'Brien covers the situation in this state; Irving Lewis, Illinois; Leslie Claypole, California; Charles Day, Ohio and George Lord, Pennsylvania. Howard Maschmeier, of WPTR, ties together the program, written by Roger Stevens, also of the Albany station.

The third installment unfolded smoothly, clearly, impartially. Emphasis, technique and voice of the five analysts vary. O'Brien, who is also Congressman from the 32nd District and a former newspaperman, thought the presidential race in the Empire State close and doubtful, with Stevenson possible winner by 100,000 plurality, and the senatorial contest likely to go to Republican Irving M. Ives. Claypole, also political editor of Los Angeles Daily News, talked of "money and influence" in the closing weeks of the contest in that state; Lewis (quiet and scholarly), of the too great punching on "secondary issues" via press and radio; Day, WGAR news editor, of the battle for governor between Incumbent Frank Lausche and Charles P. Taft and its overtones; Lord, of conflicting predictions by Democratic and Republican leaders on the outcome in Pennsylvania.

Maschmeier displayed an authoritative voice in the bridging. Program is competently written and produced. Jaco.

GRANDSTAND QUARTERBACK

With Dick Enroth, Sid Hartman, Tom Briere, Dick Fisher, Lyle Clark
Producer-director: Enroth
30 Mins.; Sun., 12 p.m.
STEWART-WARNER
WTCN, Minneapolis

This transcribed show brings an analysis and discussion of the previous day's University of Minnesota football game, its upcoming contest and other Big 10 clashes, along with a review of Twin Cities high school, suburban, state conference and other gridiron activities. With such experts as Dick Fisher and Lyle Clark, Minnesota backfield and line coach, respectively, giving their opinions and observations while being quizzed by WTCN sportscaster Dick Enroth and Minneapolis Tribune sportswriter Sid Hartman, and Tom Briere, also a newspaper sportswriter, going over the high school, etc., situations, the gabbing holds much interest for football fans and especially Gopher followers. It also affords Enroth the chance to get in occasional good commercial licks for the sponsor.

Fisher, Clark, Hartman and Briere prove adept word slingers, expressing themselves concisely, clearly and swiftly. Exercising language restraint by foregoing a resort to cliches, triteness, proloxity and misuse of big words, which mars his otherwise topdrawer play-by-play broadcasts of various sports events, Enroth also is an asset. Rees.

VOICE OF THE TEEN

With Marcia Anderson, Others
60 Mins.; Sat., 10 a. m.
TOLLGATE RESTAURANT
WABY, Albany

"Voice of the Teen," with Marcia Anderson leading, speaks in music, interviews and chatter for the 13-18 age group. First half of program is sponsored by the Tollgate, restaurant-sweet shop in suburban Slingerlands. Taped interviews on favorite type of selections, singers, motion pictures, sports, etc., are made on the premises the previous night for playback. The queries, put directly and answered briefly, reveal clearly what the girls and boys think. They have significance for entertainment promoters, sociologists, parents and other adults.

Miss Anderson, who writes a weekly "Teen Age" column for The Knickerbocker News, also spins a wide selection of records, makes "dedications," reads teenager announcements. Jaco.

FORD THEATRE HOUR

(Nothing but the Truth)
With William Needles, Howard Milson, Alice Hill, Eric House, Douglas Master, Peggy Loder, Araby Lockhart, John Atkinson, Barbara Field, Burna Raine
Producer-Director: Alan Savage
Writer: James Montgomery
60 Mins.; Fri., 9 p.m.
FORD OF CANADA LTD.
CBC, from Toronto
(Cockfield, Brown)

For fourth season, Ford of Canada is back for a 32-week frame to be carried on 46 stations across Canada, with budget around $150,000. Alan Savage returns as producer-director for fourth consecutive term. Previous series have, heretofore, enjoyed highest listener-rated Canadian commercial returns in the drama classification. Ford's sprightly "Nothing but the Truth" shows customary top direction and casting, with Joseph Schull expertly bringing the rewrite to topicality.

As known, theme deals with the seeming impossibility of the hero's telling the complete truth for 24 hours, this on a bet, but leading to deterrent complications affecting Bob Bennett and his fiancee, plus integrity challenges devolving on his partners in their brokerage business and extra-marital involvements, these pointed up by wifely cross-examinations toward that 24-hour deadline.

Writing is witty and delivery swiftly-paced, for top laugh returns (it's an audience show), only defect being stuffy enunciation of one male member of the cast who, even in a stuffed shirt role, should have underplayed for more efficient listener-clarity.

Whole production, however, with Lucio Agostini orch in for brisk and lilting breaks for scene connections, augurs well for series. All members of the cast, but for that one defective, presented sparkling performances that warranted the continuous audience guffaws.

Unobtrusive commercials separating the three acts were brief and in good taste. McStay.

AIRCRAFT FLASH

With Douglas Edwards, Arthur Godfrey, General Hoyt Vandenberg
Producer: Dallas Townsend
25 Mins.; Sat., 12:05 a.m.
CBS, from New York

CBS Radio News and Public Affairs Department has whipped up a worthy series dedicated to the civilian volunteers of the Ground Observer Corps. The post-midnight segment is pegged mainly at the GOC staffers who are on duty at that time but the net hopes it'll also have appeal for the average dialer as well as help GOC recruiting. Whether the average listener will take to "Aircraft Flash," however, is a moot point. Program has too many gabbers and disk jockeys to buck at that hour to score with any impact.

Format blends some okay musical fare via the Air Force Band with recruiting pitches from celebs and on-the-spot tapings of GOC groups at work. The educational and entertainment values are smoothly integrated and the program holds the listener's ear all the way.

On the preem show Saturday (25) GOC pitchmen were Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg and Arthur Godfrey. Their sincere spiels were effective. High point of the program was the taping of the Hartley, Del., branch of the GOC. Its operation was neatly portrayed via a standout editing job. Air Force Band gave the session pace with rousing renditions of "I Got Rhythm," "Blue Skies" and "Blow, Gabriel, Blow." Douglas Edwards capably knit the 25-minuter together in the emcee-narrator's post. Gros.

CLEVELAND BROWNS

With Ken Coleman, Bob Bouwsma, John Wellman
120 Mins: Sunday 2 p.m.
CARLINGS
WTAM, Cleveland (to 45 stations)
(Lang, Fisher & Stashower)

Ken Coleman has moved into the local sports field with an auspicious and challenging boom that may well project him as one of the top play-by-play personalities in Greater Cleveland. With only a short career behind him, the former Boston announcer has grasped complete knowledge of the players and coaching tactics employed by the Cleveland Browns. This understanding, a requisite for any would-be, play-by-play sportscaster, is utilized as an adjunct to supplement a rapidfire accounting of the game.

Coleman's ability to stay on top of each play and his apparent extensive football lingo go far to eliminate deadly repetition of words and cliches.

Credit, too, to John Wellman who supplies the statistics and to Bob Bouwsma for clear, easy-to-take commercials and color highlights. Mark.

KANSAS CITY PHILHARMONIC

With Hans Schwieger, Conductor; Tony Chapp, commentator
2 hours, 8:30 p.m. (alternate Sat.)
M. K. GOETZ BREWING CO.
WDAF, Kansas City, Mo.
(Compton)

Precedents were set in several categories with this series broadcasting the regular Saturday night concerts of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra from the Music Hall. It's a first for the orchestra concerts on WDAF, the Kansas City Star's AM outlet, a first for the orchestra with a brewery as a sponsor and first time a brewing company has been permitted to buy commercial time on WDAF.

Station policy had to undergo a bit of revision to handle this setup, but management annuonced it was doing so in the public interest as well as the bundle of lettuce involved (estimated at $25,000 total costs to the brewery for the 10 concerts). Broadcasts are an important adjunct of current campaign to instill new interest in the 20-year-old Philharmonic, which this year shifted to Thursday and Saturday nights (from the Tuesdays and Wednesdays of recent years) on alternate weeks for its regular concerts. The Saturday concerts are admittedly in a lighter vein, leaving the stiffer Thursday offerings for the confirmed longhairs and offering the Saturday menu for the more leisurely following. Thus Goetz and the Philharmonic obviously picked the Saturday works for the most popular appeal.

Opening concert in kicking off a 20th anniversary season brought in Hilde Gueden from the Met as guest soprano, and offered the Tschaikowsky Fifth from the inaugural program 20 years ago. As picked up by the mike the concert was highly listenable, particularly for the Philharmonic followers, and for the general run of listeners as well. Full concert included "The Escapades of Scapin," the Tschaikowsky, "O, Mio Babbino Caro" and "Caro Nome" for Miss Gueden, "The Birds" as an orchestral suite, and "Die tote Stadt" and "Czardas" from "Die Fledermaus" again for Miss Gueden. "The Escapades" by Otmar Nussio and "The Birds" by Ottorino Respighi were given their American premieres with this performance, and Maestro Schwieger gets credit for choosing well and for a fine performance throughout.

The entire series and broadcasts are on a firm basis, judging by the turnout for the first two concerts, and it should prove a memorable season for the local longhairs. Quin.

MIDNIGHT MATINEE

With Al Henry
45 Mins., Mon.-thru-Sat., 11:15 p.m.
WONS, Hartford

This show rates mention because it is a skillfully wrapped package of recorded tunes. Al Henry, who handles the chores here, is a smart deejay because of his showmanly manner of presentation and the effective but short commercials. He has a warm, informal manner of introing his numbers and selling his products. Keeps his chatter down to bare necessity, he manages to infuse the necessary sales points without becoming boring to the ear.

His format boiled down is more music, less talk. He intersperses the platter numbers with musical bridges to background his commercial commentary, either for the tune or the product. Doesn't expound on each tune. Oftentimes he allows three and four tunes to ether before he intrudes on the aud. That is another strong reason for his popularity here. Each of his musical bridges is different from the preceding one. Selection of tunes is excellent. Eck.

New TV Station Grants Hit 82; Nine Educationals

Washington, Oct. 28.

Television stations authorized since the lifting of the freeze reached 82 last week as the FCC issued four more commercial permits. Total authorizations include nine for non-commercial educational stations.

Agency still has more than 800 TV applications to be processed. Of these, approximately 260 have been designated or scheduled for hearing.

Two of the permits granted last week were for VHF stations. They went to Radio Honolulu, Ltd., in Honolulu, Hawaii, and KEPO in El Paso, Tex. The other authorizations, for UHF outlets, went to WFMD in Frederick, Md., and Great Plains Television Properties, Inc., in Duluth, Minn.

Great Plains is owned by Transcontinental Properties, Inc., of which Herbert Scheftel and Alfred G. Burger, theatre operators, jointly own 50%.

The Commission also scheduled hearings, beginning Nov. 17 in Washington, on 18 TV applications in cities without stations. Contests are for channels 12 and 16 in Flint, Mich.; channel 6 in Beaumont, Tex.; channels 3 and 6 in Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis.; channels 3 and 10 in Sacramento, Calif.; and channel 33 in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Agency advised applicants for channel 40 in Sacramento and channel 7 in Waterloo, Iowa, that hearings are necessary on their applications because of competitive applications. The procedure of advising the applicant before scheduling hearings is required under legislation passed by th last session of Congress.

'VOICES OF EUROPE' 2D FOR FORD NAEB SERIES

Second radio series produced by the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters under its $300,000 grant from the Ford Foundation's Fund for Adult Education is "Voices of Europe." In addition to being beamed by NAEB stations, it will be made available to commercial stations for broadcast on a sustaining basis.

Project director and interviewer on the series is Prof. Milton Mayer, of the U. of Frankfort (West Germany). Prof taped interviews with people in Germany (including the eastern section of Berlin), Italy, Switzerland, Austria, France, England, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Norway and Luxembourg. He also talked with nationals of other countries.

Seymour N. Siegel, NAEB prez, said that "Voice," which follows the "Jeffersonian Heritage" transcriber, will also be offered to United Nations Radio, Voice of America, and the British, Canadian, Australian and India networks. Committee working on "Voices" includes George Probst, of U. of Chicago; Parker Wheatley, Lowell Institute broadcasting council; Richard B. Hull, Iowa State College; Harold B. McCarty, U. of Wisconsin and Siegel.

WAVE-TV 50% Boost

Louisville, Oct. 28.

WAVE-TV broke ground last week for a new tower and transmitter on Bald Knob, seven miles northwest of New Albany, Indiana, which is a town of about 30,000 population across the Ohio River from Louisville. The work is expected to be completed about Feb. 1, 1953. When operation begins from the new site, WAVE-TV will move from Channel 5 to Channel 3.

George W. Norton, prex of the TV station, reports that when the new tower is ready for operation, power will be increased from 24,000 to 100,000 watts, and the number of homes that can be reached will be increased 50%.

Drake's New Sponsor

Galen Drake, who's nudging Arthur Godfrey as the man most heard on CBS Radio, picked up a new sponsor this week. Acousticon Hearing Aid pacted to bankroll Drake Sundays from 1:30 to 1:45 p.m. for a four-week trial period. Buchanan agency handles the account.

Drake's show is now aired on CBS seven days a week, including a double spread, mornings and afternoons, Mondays through Fridays.

Miami WTVJ's Bid As Origination Point For Winter-Berthed Stars

Miami, Oct. 28.

Miami's Capitol theatre will go from vaude to video on Nov. 8, when formal ceremonies will mark completion of complete remodeling to house studios for Wometco theatre chain's WTVJ, areas only television station.

According to Mitchell Wolfson, co-owner with Sidney Meyer of the station (and the theatre chain) the reconversion will provide one of largest indie studio setups in the country, with main theatre allowing for 68-by-100 foot stage built flush with former balcony which will seat over 200. Overall setup is contained in three stories designed by architect Herbert Mathes.

Latest equipment will be utilized, with old studio in adjoining building to be held for auxiliary purposes. Entire layout was planned to allow for northbound cable (ready in January) programs, with pitch being made for Arthur Godfrey show—he's a winter season weekender—and Walter Winchell, who in former years, spent four to five months here but is remaining in New York this season for his telecasts. Station execs feel that area, during cold months, is haven for top talent, making for a good-sized roster from which vaudeo shows can draw.

General manager of WTVJ is Lee Ruwitch, with Lee Phillips program director. Plans call for extensive experimenting with locally produced shows.

Cleveland: AM & TV

more local merchants moving into the AM market are also reflected in reports from WGAR, WHK, WJMO, WJW, WSRS, WDOK and WERE.

Carl George, WGAR, declared "our business looks brighter than at any time in more than two years, and we are in a better position now to sell and service advertisers than ever before."

The station's "MerCHAINdising" plan, tying in local grocers, is spearheading a sales promotion program responsible for "an estimated 15% hike" in local business, according to John Garfield, sales manager.

This CBS outlet has also revised its late music programming to feature concert selections, with Hal Morgan, disker, moving out of the Alpine Village. The station has also added to its musical offerings with such groups as the Starlight Trio, with Norm Knuth, accordionist, Ron Bohne, pianist, and George DiPaolo, bass, and the We Three group including Jettie Lee and Tom McCormick, pianosong, and Tom Armstrong, announcer.

Great Fall Sales

WHK's sales manager W. K. Brusman called the current fall sales "the greatest yet for this time of the year." Highlighting Bill Gordon's disk stanza, news and nationality programming, this Mutual outlet reports its daylight hours are heavily sold and that "old local sponsors have renewed" for nighttime listening.

Indie WERE is on the upbeat, too, according to Ed Stevens, program manager. By adding such talent as Lee Sullivan of "Brigadoon," and such commercials as the "Ohio Story," along with standby Bill Randle, WERE has been enjoying a fall sales stimulant. At the same time, WERE is beaming certain stanzas to segments of the population and drawing new accounts on this procedure. Broadcast of the Cleveland Indians baseball games continues to be a heavy WERE drawing factor.

The direct pitch at population segments at certain hours of the listening day is a heavy factor for three other indies, WJMO, WDOK and WSRS.

Walberg Brown, general manager of WDOK, reported sales "are up 20% over last year, mostly through spot sales." Smaller merchants are returning to advertising in an effort to hit class audiences, said Brown, who added that stations must "specialize to establish their identity and character." A return to "serious music" has been featured at WDOK along with an up-play in news and a curtailment in sports, now that the station no longer has the Liberty web.

WJMO's general manager Robert S. DeTchon noted "sales are up this year and are continuing to move up" under the new management of Richard Eaton. Clothing and automotive time buyers are back in this daylight station's financial picture.

Sam Sague, WSRS president, reported strong morning sales segments with the station using that period for program flexibility. Spot sales, heavy news coverage and a heavy play for community public service programming has given this indie a position in audience ratings.

WJW's general manager Bill Lemmon reports a 14% business hike over a year ago, thanks to new "sales method and drive. The business is there; we in radio simply have to go out and get it," Lemmon maintained the great splurge for television has levelled off now that video is four years old. He added that some adjustment, rate-wise "was made, but there has been no under-the-table dealings," and in order to better the station's afternoon music-news programming, most of the ABC stanzas have been dropped.

TV Networks in Straitjacket

despite the solid sponsorship lineup. Whatever the reasons which find the networks in an economic straitjacket (and both NBC and CBS attribute it to a variety of factors), TV today is in the throes of some glaring financial incongruities:

Locals Top Nets

1). A single station operation, such as the NBC affiliated WTMJ in Milwaukee, owned by the Milwaukee Journal and operated by Walter J. Damm, will probably close the fiscal year with a profit equalling if not surpassing that of the whole NBC television network operation.

2). The Paramount-owned WBKB television station in Chicago (for which CBS is plunking down $7,000,000 to bring it into the Columbia-owned family) similarly is expected to show a profit for the year matching that of the entire CBS-TV operation.

3). Without their owned-and-operated stations, both CBS and NBC, as in radio before TV, would find the going plenty rough. As an illustration, the Ted Cott-managed New York flagship station, WNBT, has geared its operation to the tune of a '52 gross biz far exceeding last year's $10,000,000 volume, with expectations that something between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 profit may revert to the parent NBC company's coffers. In this respect, NBC is the more fortunate of the two networks on its possession of lush o. & o. television properties.

4). With the stations, rather than the networks, grabbing off the major share of the profits, the web execs are now asking themselves whether they're saddled with the job of priming the pump that's pouring the gold into the affiliate stations, for while the real margin of profits accrues to the stations the networks are burdened with the topheavy administrative - program - operational expenses.

Web-less Stations?

5). While it's recognized that the networks couldn't exist, as such, without their skein of affiliates, by the same token the question is being asked: Would the stations (including the web owned-and-operated outlets) enjoy the same coin bonanza if the networks weren't feeding them shows and they were dependent purely on local programming and film? The networks say no; some station operators believe they would.

6). Even assuming that the day is not far off when the major TV networks achieve their potential of 100 to 150 affiliates, instead of the present 30-40-50-station lineup, how many sponsors are around who can indulge in such lavish expenditures, and how much higher can the webs go beyond the present $29,000 per half-hour tab?

Just how much the networks themselves are responsible is a debatable point. It's felt by some that the webs contributed toward the state of affairs through overindulging in overlapping administrative brass (with accompanying top salaries); by inflicting on themselves the "d.t.'s" (displaced talent) in negotiating deals which the webs themselves have subsequently chalked up as errors.

The webs, in turn, say the unions, with their continuing escalated scales, are largely to blame, plus the need to furnish (at network expense) the sponsors with a multitude of services—all this, plus the constantly rising programming and technical costs.

If there's a way out, into greener pastures and some lush profits, the networks are still groping for the solution.

Official, Prockter

series for both radio and TV. It'll be on film for TV and transcriptions for radio. Contract was closed last Friday by White and Jack Schwartz and Paul Porter, Hauser's business manager and counsel respectively. White will produce.

In Europe White will look at the first rough cuts of "Orient Express," a TV film series being produced on location in Berlin, Paris, London, Rome and Istanbul by John Nasht, PSI-TV European rep. He will also confer with Victor Pahlen, now producing "Great Loves," with Hedy Lamarr, for PSI-TV. In London White will arrange for theatrical distribution of six features produced by PSI, and for theatrical, non-theatrical and TV distribution of TV films being financed by the company.

Meanwhile, a second group of 13 films for the "China Smith" series goes into production shortly. White's production assistant, Robert J. Kingsley, left over the weekend to conclude details with Oscar Dancigers, in charge of the company's Mex production, for filming of seven "China Smith" shows in Mexico. Films are now being shown in 16 TV markets.

Since Mannie Reiner, veepee in charge of sales and distribution, joined the organization, PSI has established sales quarters in Boston, Chicago and on the Coast with considerable new expansion on the upcoming agenda.

Operations Politico

by the Dems that they are being squeezed out by the Ike spot bombardment. The fine print in the political contracts give the stations the right to bump time sold to one party if necessary to assure equal treatment to the other.

As far as can be learned, none of the stations or local agencies have gone along with the "suggestion" that regular clients be preempted to make room for the GOP spots.

Trying to avoid alienating either side and staying within the FCC groundrules has been the main order of business for the Chi radio-TV brass the past several weeks. Despite the torrent of "extra" money showering down on them, they are unanimous in their anticipation of when "Operation Politico" ends and business as usual resumes.

Actually, regular sales activity has practically ground to a standstill, pending the move-out of the pols.

Lamb

regulations make a station liable for talks it broadcasts if they originate from another state and if the speaker is not a candidate in the station's home state. McCarthy spoke from Chicago's Palmer House.

Lamb said he did not know of the WTVN action until yesterday morning but declared that he backed to the full the decision of the station management not to accept the speech. His Erie Dispatch, he said, is supporting the candidacy of Democratic nominee Adlai Stevenson, but he noted that radio or TV stations are not permitted to take an editorial stand as do newspapers. Lamb declared that he has been an attorney handling civil liberties and has always upheld the right of free speech.

His Erie station also did not carry the McCarthy talk, since it had previous commercial commitments.

Daytime Shows

derstate the true value of evening shows. The reason is that Nielsen states his data in terms of homes rather than viewers. During the daytime hours, only one person (the housewife) may be listening, while evening dialers would include the husband and perhaps the kids—about 2½ persons in the average nighttime family audience.

Thus, though the daytime ratings may equal those of a nighttime show, the actual audience to the latter would be greater.

A further point is that in the period covered, not all the big-league nighttime shows had returned. It's expected that addition of the more expensive nighttime shows would raise the level in the evening Top 10 list.

The Nielsen data (covering 11 shows, due to ties) follows:

| Show | | Homes (%) |
|---|---|---|
| Lux Theatre | (eve) | 8.8 |
| Dragnet | (eve) | 7.6 |
| Right to Happiness | (day) | 7.0 |
| Dr. Christian | (eve) | 7.0 |
| Backstage Wife | (day) | 6.6 |
| Helen Trent | (day) | 6.6 |
| Philip M'rris Pl'yh'se | (eve) | 6.6 |
| Guiding Light | (day) | 6.5 |
| Pepper Young | (day) | 6.5 |
| People Are Funny | (eve) | 6.4 |
| Bet Your Life | (eve) | 6.4 |

Price Structure

new markets are broken down into five population groups, with each UTP property carrying a price based on that group via a sliding scale arrangement. He is making no deals yet for re-runs in each market, hoping that by the time reruns are possible, they can be priced as high as the original runs. That would be possible, since it's expected that the films will play to almost an entirely new audience from six months to a year after their original showings, based on the anticipated increase in set circulation.

---

Salt Lake City—Mike Cassidy, for the past 12 years on the sales staff of KUTA, local ABC outlet, is hooking up with KLX, Oakland indie, starting Nov. 3. He'll stay with sales . . Dick Montgomery, formerly with KLO, Ogden, has taken over as traffic head at KALL. Job was formerly held by Mel Standage, who combined it with production chief. Standage continues to top production staff.

Inside Stuff—Television

While returns from newsstands in the metropolitan N. Y. areas are not yet in, Quick magazine estimates that its N. Y. circulation increased some 40% with the Oct. 20 issue in which it preemed its special section on local TV program listings and television news. Execs of the magazine said they have already received queries from potential advertisers on getting into the new section but expect to stall any such deals until the first of the year, the date originally set for determination of how successful the venture would be.

Since Quick's metropolitan N. Y. sales also cover the New Haven territory, program listings of that city's WNHC-TV will also be included henceforth. Starting this week also, the mag will carry listings from each Friday through the following Thursday, rather than from Thursday through the following Wednesday, on the assumption that readers picking up the mag on Thursdays will already have seen listings for that day in their newspapers. Quick hopes to exand the system nationwide, with Chicago and Los Angeles next on the agenda.

Television audience for the World Series fell considerably below original estimates, according to American Research Bureau studies of the number of viewers tuned into the games. ARB found the Series was tuned in at least once by 13,840,000 homes. Figuring an average number of viewers per set at 3.5, ARB says the total cumulative audience for the seven games was 48,440,000. Original estimate put the total audience at well over 70,000,000.

Rating-wise, the Series drew a cumulative figure of 72.2 for the seven days, with the highest individual half-hour being the 3:30 to 4 o'clock period on Sunday, which saw a 44.5 rating turned in. ARB points out, incidentally, that Gillette, which bankrolled the Series via NBC-TV, had a considerable bonus audience via sets in public places, which must have played to a tremendous audience during the weekdays when most fans were at work. Size of this bonus audience is impossible to estimate.

Members of Long Island U's television writing and production class have been invited to attend in person two live shows staged by WCBS-TV, the CBS video web's key N. Y. outlet. Students will trek to CBS' Liederkranz Hall studios in midtown Manhattan Nov. 1 to watch "It's Worth Knowing" and Nov. 9 to watch "Story for Americans." Producers of the two shows will be on hand to answer questions afterwards.

"The claims made for television as the cure for all that is wrong in our politics are obviously too sweeping to be true," says Bruce Bliven, editorial board chairman of the New Republic, in an article on politics and TV in the November Harper's. "We shall know better before long whether television has reformed politics as much as predicted, or at all. The answer will come when we learn what proportion of the eligible voters went to the polls this year. Conceding that television has brought politics closer to most of the set-owners, it is still possible that they may regard it as purely a spectator sport, or may feel that merely by viewing the candidates and their friends they have accomplished something. Not unless it can pry televiewers in large numbers out of their easy chairs and down to the polling place on the corner can television get credit for any sort of effective political miracle."

Expansion of the "I Love Lucy" property into the subsidiary rights field was heralded Sunday (26) in a two-page ad spread by McCreery's, N. Y. department store. Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz are going after the "young marrieds" market with Lucy blouses, dresses, aprons and sweaters, a Desi conga drum, Desi TV lounging jackets, matching Mr.-and-Mrs. pajamas and a "Lucy" doll. Sponsor Philip Morris' living trademark, Johnny appeared at the store in a promotion Monday (27) night.

Values inherent in the TV showmanship-merchandising tieups is cueing expansion of the subsidiary rights field, with telepersonalities such as Howdy Doody, Arlene Francis, Dorothy Collins, the Space Cadets, etc., cashing in.

Emerson Radio & TV prexy Benjamin Abrams, who is spearheading a drive for more educational TV channels, has called on 30,000 video dealers across the country to take the lead in their local communities in support of such non-commercial stations. In his message pointing up the new market for TV sets via educational outlets, Abrams points up the fact that the dealers are "afforded an unusual once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to further their own interests while at the same time performing an inestimable public service."

Emerson recently announced a $100,000 grant for educational TV, which is to be made in the form of 10 $10,000 gifts to the first 10 licensees to begin educational telecasting on a non-commercial basis.

Toni's new whodunit on ABC radio, "Crime Letter from Dan Dodge," will use some plots taken from old "Sam Spade," "Charlie Wild," "Clock" and "Fat Man" shows. According to Weiss & Geller, agency on the airer, about 25% of the scripts will be taken from those sources and 75% will be originals. Reason is said to be the dearth of good new detective material.

Manny Rosenberg and Larry White, packagers on "Dan Dodge," also packaged "Spade," "Wild" and other shows. Format of "Dodge" differs from the other airers and the older scripts, which are bought from the original writers, are given a rewrite.

National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters convention at the U. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Nov. 6-8, will include talks by G. H. Griffiths, of the Fund for Adult Education, FCC Chairman Paul A. Walker and Sen. H. H. Humphrey. Other speakers will be Morris Novik, AM-TV consultant; Dr. Sydney Roslow, of The Pulse, Inc.; I. Keith Tyler, director of the Institute for Education by Radio & TV. Tele will be discussed on Friday and radio on Saturday.

BALTO'S WITH-FM IN 'GOOD MUSIC' NET

Washington, Oct. 28.

Affiliation of WITH-FM in Baltimore with WGMS in Baltimore, extending the "Good Music" network from Portland, Me., down almost to Richmond, Va., was announced jointly here yesterday (Mon.) by Tom Tinsley, prexy of WITH, and M. Robert Rogers, head of WGMS.

Formal dedication of the FM hookup takes place Wednesday night (29) with broadcast of a complete symphony concert from Constitution Hall in Washington. Program will be forwarded to WITH-FM by direct relay. The good music programs will be sponsored in Baltimore by local firms and commercials heard on WGMS blocked out for local insertions in Baltimore.

ABC Dickers Protestant Religioso Radio Series

With Bishop Sheen having inked Admiral as a sponsor on DuMont tele network, ABC radio is dickering with Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, prominent Protestant leader, for an AM religious series. The web has strong interest from a big advertiser who wishes to back the program.

Client Trims Budget On 'Zoo Parade' Sponsorship

"Zoo Parade," one of the few remaining Chicago-originated shows on the NBC-TV roster, will soon be scouting an alternate week sponsor. Quaker Oats, which has been bankrolling on a weekly basis, has notified the web that it's cutting back to a skip-a-week schedule starting Nov. 30.

"Parade," which is done via remote pickups from the Chi zoo, is aired Sunday afternoons from 5 to 5:30.

Deejay's Nabe House Show

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.

Looking to cash in on deejay's popularity with teen-agers, Liberty Theatre, Harris circuit nabe house in East Liberty, has booked WCAE platter-spinner Jay Michael to do his record show and chatter from its stage for one hour every Friday afternoon from 5 to 6.

Michael's one of the top disk jockeys in town, and is on WCAE for nearly four hours every day in addition to another hour Sunday afternoons.

Charlotte, N. C.—William H. Struble has been appointed promotion supervisor for WBT and WBTV. He's former promotion topper of WLW-TV, Cincinnati.

FCC Opens Up 540 KC Band to Com'l Radio, But Canada Still Has Priority

Washington, Oct. 28.

First addition to the standard (AM) radio band in nearly 10 years was made last week when the FCC finalized proceedings providing for the use of the 540kc frequency. It's expected that a flood of applications will result from the action in view of the desirability of the channel which provides a strong signal.

Because of priority accorded Canada no use of 540kc under the North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement (NARBA), it is likely that the channel will be used in the U. S. mostly for daytime stations. Use of the channel within 650 miles of a Canadian station operating on 540kc would cause interference at night, thus limiting the possibilities of fulltime stations in this country.

How many stations will be licensed to use 540kc will depend on the locality of applications, power permitted, and showing made for need of nighttime use. The 740kc channel, on which Canada has priority, is used by 20 stations in the U. S., two of which are 50kw fulltime and 14 of which are daytime.

Although the dials on existing radio receivers begins at 550kc, set owners will be able to tune in 540kc stations on most sets by turning to the extreme low end of the band. Even with 250 watts power, stations on 540kc will give clear reception to listeners within a good distance of the transmitter.

Schwimmer, Brodax Into WM's Film-Syndication

Alden Schwimmer and Al Brodax have been moved into the syndicated film department of the William Morris Agency. They'll work under Jerry Stagg, who is doubling between video programming and syndication.

Schwimmer was formerly kinescope librarian at the agency, while Brodax serviced various shows at the office.

CIRCLING THE KILOCYCLES

Kansas City—Helm of the Russell C. Comer Co., ad agency here, is being taken over by Mrs. Eloise Comer, following the death of her husband last week. Mrs. Comer has been an active partner in the firm since 1945. Comer was the originator of the "Air Adventures of Jimmie Allen" e.t. series.

Columbus — Jim Chapman, WTAM farm chief, will take over as farm service director of WRFD, Worthington, effective Nov. 1, when Bob Miller, the rural radio station's agricultural director, leaves to take a similar position with WLW, Cincinnati.

Dallas — Lee Segall, prez of KIXL, has announced the appointment of Thomas W. Massey as manager. Charles F. Payne has been assistant station manager. Payne has been commercial manager and program director. Massey has been assistant manager and national sales manager.

Kansas City—Anne Hayes, director of women's activities for KCMO, was honored by the American Women's Business Assn. at its national convention in Omaha last week. She was named the first national honorary member of the association and gifted with a plaque.

Greensboro, N. C.—B. George Barber, Jr., commercial manager of WCOG for the past two years, has been made station manager, succeeding Henry Sullivan. Sullivan, manager since July, 1949, resigned to become manager of WGTM in Wilson, his hometown.

Minneapolis—When all the TV stations now authorized will have been built there'll be 16 within a 60-mile radius from Minneapolis, one dealer in sets is pointing out in his advertising . . . University of Minnesota radio station KUOM broadcast a special program of recorded music representing nine different countries to commemorate United Nations Day . . . Stopping over en route back east after a concert at Grand Forks, N. D., James Melton appeared on a University of Minnesota panel discussing liberal education values . . . KSTP-TV's newly acquired ace radio personality George Grim, who left WCCO to join the Stan Hubbard station, takes over the five-minute cut-ins on Dave Garroday's "To-day" here starting Nov. 3.

Dallas—"Dollar Derby," with Bob and Agnes Stanford, formerly telecast on WFAA-TV, here, and WBAP-TV, Fort Worth, during the afternoon, moves into nighttime, to be telecast on WFAA on Tuesdays and WBAP-TV on Saturdays for an hour. Series is sponsored by the 7-Eleven Food Stores.

West Memphis, Ark. — Carlton Garner, W.K. staffer of KWEM, has resigned his post as conductor of the pop "Jack the Bell Boy" program, to return to Arkansas College, Batesville. Tom Roane, Memphis announcer, is now handling "the Bell Boy" stint and other Garner shows.

Grand Rapids—John E. Fetzer, prez of Fetzer Broadcasting Co., announces promotion of several execs: Donald W. DeSmit, Jr., becomes WKZO-TV (Kalamazoo) sales director and Martin Giaimo is upped to WJEF (Grand Rapids) station manager. John W. O'Harrow adds special assignments in the national sales field and Otis T. Gaston, account exec, will also cover administrative duties in the national sales department.

Toni Joins Carter On DuMont 'Down You Go'

Chicago, Oct. 28.

Deal was set here last week for Toni to join Carter Products as alternate week bankroller on DuMont's "Down You Go." Toni, for its Prom waveset, climbs aboard the Louis G. Cowan Chi-originated show this Friday night (31).

Carter, which has been backing half the panel show on a weekly basis, takes over the full half-hour every other week.

Weiss & Geller handle the Prom billings for Toni.

Swift & Co. and the Philco Corporation continue to sponsor the Breakfast Club across the board. Swift has the second and third segments, while Philco has the fourth quarter-hour. O-Cedar Corp'n sponsors the first segment on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays over the ABC radio network.

Radio-TV Political Coverage

tensive ever assembled, involving thousands and thousands of miles of coaxial cable, phone lines, telegraph wires, short wave relays and other communications channels. With all the networks, AM and TV, both, cancelling all regular non-news programs on the big evening and skedding through-the-night coverage, the voters will not only be spectators in the ballot counting but also see and/or hear the candidates' statements on the trends.

Exemplifying the scientific wizardry is the setup which CBS-TV will use as a result of the shared cable-relay facilities to the Coast. Starting at 9 p.m., each of the three webs will get a 20-minute period on the hookup to the Coast, on a rotating basis, and will have to feed its western stations from out of L. A. during the other 40 minutes.

The CBS-TV plan is for its western affiliates to take the same audio as the rest of the skein. Even though the sight portion cannot be picked up from N. Y., CBS will attempt to provide an exact duplicate of the N. Y.-originating picture in L. A. To achieve this, a duplicate of its N. Y. election board has been constructed in L. A. and the N. Y. director, Don Hewitt, will have a phone hookup to the L. A. studios to call his shots over the 3,000-mile span.

No 'Hoked Up' Coverage

Sig Mickelson, CBS-TV news chief, said that the skein's concept is not to "put on a show for the viewer" or "hoke up the coverage," but to set up the studio for the "fastest, most convenient, most natural method of tabulating the returns," with the audience invited to take a look. CBS Radio and TV are using Univac and NBC is using Monrobot; both are automatic electric "brains" which will spot trends in returns as compared to the 1948 patterns.

In their efforts to provide visual means of tabbing the trends, the tele webs are using graphic charts and boards. ABC-TV, for instance, has a "Robot Reporter" and a "Trend Meter," with carbon copies in N. Y., Chi and L. A.

Candidates will be picked up on Election Night. Gov. Stevenson will be at the Leland Hotel, Springfield, Ill., where the Ming Room has been set aside for TV-AM-newsreels. Gen. Eisenhower will be at the Commodore Hotel, N. Y., with the cameras and mikes in the main ballroom. Sen. Nixon, while not yet set, is expected at the Ambassador Hotel, L. A. Sen. Sparkman is due in Huntsville, Ala., which would be outside of TV pickup range although available for a voice pickup. President Truman's itinerary isn't certain, although he may return to D. C. on Election Night after voting in Missouri.

The politicos have credited AM and TV with a highly effective job in upping registration and in campaigning to get out the vote. They all are using the broadcast media not only for paid political advertising but as wireless soapboxes for their views in the various forums and newscasts. Electioneering appeals will be nixed on Nov. 4 and the webs will be careful to avoid any possibility of influencing voting by the early returns they air while polls are still open.

An important fact of the coverage is the great attention being paid to the local scene. All the chains are providing five-minute periods for locally-sponsored cut-ins, two per hour. Aside from satisfying audience interest in local races, it means considerable coin for the affiliates. WJZ-TV, for instance, is originating its cut-ins from the N. Y. World-Telegram. WNBT has made a tieup with WNYC, municipal station, and is using editors of local suburban sheets (such as Newark Ledger, Brooklyn Eagle, Amsterdam News, etc.) to cover developments in those communities.

Snader

United TV Programs, which would also get the Snader product if the deal goes through. That would give UTP and Frye virtually a monopoly on the vidpix utilized mainly for video disk jockey shows around the country.

Snader, in denying the sale, said that it's impossible for any of the firm's partners to sell without giving the other partners first refusal rights. He claims to own 52% of the company and said that he's been negotiating himself to buy out the interests of Bisno and Samuel Markovitch, his other partner, and expects a decision within 10 days.

TWA Slams SWG

tiations closer toward settlement, as the producers refused to lay down specific terms for repayment to scribblers on additional runs.

Consequently SWG is doing a burn over entire situation, since it feels it has made a real move toward a compromise settlement, while the Alliance steadfastly refuses to talk dollars-and-cents. Writers opine there is room for compromise on all phases, but until Alliance counters with actual figures situation will remain dormant.

Meantime, Alliance and Screen Extras Guild agreed motion picture wage scales and working conditions shall apply to vidpix pact, with date retroactive to last Sept. 17. Still being negotiated are repayment for re-use of telepix, and upped scales for multiple pix.

SWG exec board challenged the bootlegging claim, demanding that Gordon submit proof. In denying any such actions, SWG prexy Mary McCall, Jr. stated that the disciplinary committee had been asked to investigate 12 such rumors and to-date had found no violations.

She contended the committee is in a better position to report on the facts than Gordon and charged this is only a new maneuver on part of TWA to seek to make headlines at the expense of the best interests of writers everywhere.

20% Hike in TV

seeking what amounts to a 25% hike. Present scale is $200 for a variety turn, $275 for a duo and $150 additional for each extra performer in an act. New demand is $250 for a variety single and $150 for each additional performer in the act, with a duo thus costing $400.

In the radio field, AFTRA is seeking parity between commercial and sustaining scales. The gap between the two scales has been narrowed over the years and now the union hopes to get the same pay for sponsored and unsponsored shows. It's a proposal expected to meet heavy network opposition, since the increases would come out of the webs' own pockets.

Another demand which has aroused beefs from the chains is the bid for commercial fees for announcers doing plugs during station breaks. Some network sources have indicated that the chains will ask for a five-minute rate in AM. Currently, a five-minute show entails the same fees as 15-minute airers, and due to the growth of the capsule shows the skeins desire the new category.

In the staff radio web announcer bracket, AFTRA is bargaining for a hike from a $115 weekly minimum to $150.

In both AM and TV the recently merged union is bidding for a welfare fund which would be supported entirely by the chains.

Radio pact expires Oct. 31 and TV pact runs through Nov. 30.

special events, as well as normal coverage, kinescoping this material for re-use, for editing, for storing on microfilm. "It will not be long," he said, "before it will be impossible for anyone to say anything of significance without that statement in words and pictures in its true setting being placed on file for instantaneous re-use on TV when relevant."

Weaver also predicted the TV set of the future as being able to record shows while the family was out, so that the "future fan need never miss his favorite shows or events." TV screen, in addition, he said, will be usable for showing material recorded from transmission during the night, so that news, music, weather, time and features will be available by push-button on arising. Noting that more people probably saw NBC-TV's single performance of "Billy Budd" Oct. 19 than attended all operas staged in the U. S. during last year, Weaver added:

"In years to come, youngsters will have heard every great musical performer, in person, will have witnessed the operas, the ballet, the symphonies, been exposed to the personalities of the men who influence their times, will have seen the people and the customs of every land, and of every ethnic and social group. As they grow, they will have a sureness of mind and heart not easily won, for they will feel their indentity with a gloriously pictured march of mankind toward the good society that has been the objective of western thought from its beginnings."

Vidpix Distribs

pix in each territory. As the industry expanded, however, the majors began setting up their own distrib centres, headed chiefly by men who lived in each city so that they could form a better entente with the exhibitors in their area. Vidfilm distribs, by the same token, feel now they can do a better job of selling their product on the grassroots level by hiring men who live in each area to handle their markets.

Question of economy, of course, is also a potent factor in the new shift to localized selling—a system, incidentally, which the Frederic W. Ziv outfit has followed since its inception. Under the old system, it's pointed out, if a salesman headquartered in N. Y. took a swing around the country and failed to come up with much new business, the expenses he incurred on such a trip would prove a serious loss to the distrib. If, however, the salesman operated out of his own home territory, his expenses would be far less.

Most such distribs setting up the home-localled system have their salesmen working on a straight commission basis, under which they pay their own expenses. If the distrib has enough quality product for him to handle, though, he can make up to $20,000 annually.

DISKERS YEN NEW CANARIES

ASCAP Needs Top Writers for Pops To Duel BMI, Opines Mitch Miller

"There's nothing wrong with the veteran songwriters that hard work can't cure," opines Columbia Records' artists and repertoire chief, Mitch Miller, in his reflections on the current ASCAP vs. BMI cleffer-publisher rhubarb.

Miller contends that if top writers such as the Irving Berlins, Cole Porters, Harold Arlens, et al, were to apply themselves to the job of turning out pop songs, besides the writing the more specialized show-tune or filmusical scores, they would once again be on top of the bestseller lists.

All writers, however, have to understand, Miller says, that the modern era of the cheap phonograph and the cheap radio has brought the level of the popular song down to the masses. That's the prime cause why so many hillbilly tunes have been crossing over into the pop field. "These tunes," Miller adds, "deal with basic human experiences and are expressed in a way that the man-in-the-street can understand." There's no doubt, according to the Col exec, that the top ASCAP writers have the talent and craftsmanship to produce such songs if they so wished.

Miller categorically dismisses allegations by some ASCAP writers that the disk companies were discriminating in favor of BMI songs. "It never occurs to me when I look over a song," Miller says. "My only job is to deliver hit records, so I can't afford to worry about any song's BMI or ASCAP affiliation."

'Gimmicks Alone Won't Sell'

One of the most successful "new sound" experimenters in the disk business, Miller stresses that "gimmicks alone don't sell records." The gimmick has to be integrated with the rest of the production, and if it jells, then you have a potential hit." Miller avers that the gimmicks of yesterday are the conventional techniques of today, pointing out that the introduction of mikes and public address systems, replacing megaphones or straight lung power, was considered a gimmick in its day.

"The song," Miller tells, "is still the main ingredient along with the artist and the interpretation. If the younger writers are hitting more often today than the veterans, then it's because they have mastered the

Louis Bernstein Raps ASCAP's Deejay Critic As Disappointed Songwriter

Editor, VARIETY:

Every man has a right to an opinion. John Wrisley is apparently sore because he went to a publisher with some songs he wrote and the publisher didn't take them. The publisher took 15 minutes to say "no" and then didn't listen to the songs. Maybe this is so, but it sounds ridiculous to me. Any publisher who would take 15 minutes to say "no" would certainly take three minutes to hear a song.

I don't know what Mr. Wrisley's beef is against ASCAP, and his article tells nothing about BMI other than that they are considerate and courteous. There are lots of disk jockeys from all over the United States who come to see us when they visit New York. I assure you they get every consideration humanly possible to give anyone.

ASCAP has no arrangements of a social character because it is strictly a business organization, simply collecting money for its members. In other words, it is just a collection agency—and it is unnecessary for me to make any comment on what BMI is. You know and we all know they can spend their money wildly on entertaining and no one can criticize. Were ASCAP to do that, its members would have a just right to criticize as every penny it collects, less actual necessary expenses, is paid out to the writer and publisher.

Ruth Brown Gets 100G, 5-Yr. Pact From Atlantic

Ruth Brown, Negro warbler, has been inked to a new five-year pact by Atlantic Records, indie label, for which she's a best-selling blues and rhythm artist.

New pact gives Miss Brown a $100,000 royalty guarantee over the five-year period.

Starr Sees ASCAP Standard Catalog As AM-TV Spine

A publisher like Max Dreyfus, who just came back from Boston where he got a reassuring okay following a physical checkup at the Lahey Clinic there, says he's "content to let all these matters be solved by the brain trusters around the Brill Bldg. and in Lindy's." But Herman Starr, head of the Warner Bros. music publishing interests, while equally insouciant about the "ASCAP'S (so-called) 'BMI Blues'", is realistic on two scores.

"For one thing," says the prez of the Music Publishers Holding Corp. (Harms, Remick, Witmark, etc.), "there's nothing wrong with competition. It's a good thing. If it's illegal, you know that the courts of the land eventually get around to those things, and that's not for us to decide. Certainly if anything operates illegally I don't want to express any opinion on that. Now for the second thing: the creation of a popular song is really only a small part of our business. The major function of American music publishing is quality. Quality is what lasts and what pays off.

"In the last 20 years no publisher could stay in business on just the casual popular song. BMI could have seven out of seven of the "Hit Parade," but the fact remains that with all the BMI pops the ASCAP catalog still is the backbone of American radio and television. I daresay 90% of radio music is ASCAP's and probably more on TV. In jukeboxes the ratios are different; there the current pops prevail but even there the flash-in-the-pan jukebox hit is more than eclipsed by the wealth of ASCAP tunes.

"At the moment BMI is hot. You

ALEC WILDER SHIFTS FROM ASCAP TO BMI

Alec Wilder, jazz instrumental composer, has switched from the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers to Broadcast Music, Inc. BMI has given him a three-year pact with coin guarantees against performances. Under the ASCAP setup, any writer can resign from the Society if he gives notice during the three-month period before the close of the calendar year.

Wilder said he made the BMI deal because it offered him a bigger immediate financial return than he has been getting from ASCAP. He pointed out, moreover, that most of his compositions written before 1943, when he joined ASCAP, were already in BMI's catalog.

Col Repacts Tucker

Richard Tucker, Metopera tenor, has been repacted by Columbia Records for 10 years.

Tucker has been in Col's longhair fold since 1946.

GAL VOCALISTS IN SHORT SUPPLY

Although femme disk artists have been out in front in the wax sweepstakes for more than a year, the record companies' artists & repertoire toppers have been signing fewer canaries than male vocalists. According to the a&r execs, the companies' pop rosters are flooded with male tyro talent while the new femmes are few and far between.

Since such femmes as Patti Page, Jo Stafford, Rosemary Clooney, Kay Starr, Ella Mae Morse and Doris Day have been steadily topping the disclick lists, it was figured that there'd be plenty of gals around who'd want a crack at breaking through into that femme waxing contingent. The pacting of new hairpins, however, has been pretty slim as compared with the young fellows who are being added to the stables.

The a&r men are on a persistent prowl for thrushes and are picking them up from all show biz media. RCA Victor's Sunny Gale, for example was nabbed after she broke through on the indie Derby label with "Wheel of Fortune," and Coral's recent pactee Eydie Gorme, was picked up after she ankled the vocalist spot with the Tex Beneke orch. Such new disk artists as Jilla Webb (M-G-M) and Joyce Bryant (Okeh) came from the nitery circuit. June Valli, Victor artist, joined their pop stable after her replacement shots for

Burton Upped In BMI Reshuffle

In a reshuffle of the Broadcast Music, Inc., echelon at the board of directors meeting last week, Robert J. Burton, vice-prexy over publisher relations, was named chief of writer relations as well. Burton was also elected secretary of BMI, a post previously held by M. E. Tompkins, who reaches the retirement age Nov. 1.

Robert Sour, director of publisher relations, was elected veepee, and Charles E. Lawrence, assistant treasurer, was given the added appointment of assistant secretary. Charles A. Wall was elected president of Associated Music Publishers, a wholly-owned subsidiary of BMI specializing in longhair music. Wall will also continue in his present post as v.p. over finances. Wall replaced Tompkins in the AMP spot with the latter being retained on a consultation basis for both BMI and AMP.

The board also elected Glenn Dolberg to the post of vice-prexy over station relations. He has been director of this department for the past year.

'Lost in the Shuffle'

What makes a hit record? If you listen to the WNEW N. Y., regular Sunday midday series, which is sagely captioned "Lost in the Shuffle," it's enough to throw away all the rule books.

Airer, with a different WNEW disk jockey each week, features the hit side and then the flip side, or other good stylizations of current hitmakers, and it must be admitted that most of them have enough quality and distinction, gimmicks and drive, and all that goes with it, to qualify as much for pop acceptance as others which were not rejected. It's a unique novelty half-hour and a good variation of the orthodox disk jockeying. It may even be productive in time of "surprise" hits because most of them sound even better now, in retrospect, than when they first hit the market.

'BMI Blues' Revive Talk of ASCAP Gen'l Manager Post; Mention Ruml

By ABEL GREEN

The current "ASCAP's 'BMI Blues'" situation has revived talk of getting a paid general manager for the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, a post which has not been actually filled since the era of the late Silvio Hein and J. C. Rosenthal, Edwin Claude Mills (now with Earle C. Anthony's radio-TV on the Coast) and the late John G. Paine. In fact, a personality like Beardsley Ruml is being bruited about again.

Ruml's name came up once before as the ideal choice. He is an administrator, a good public speaker, a statistician—and he knows music. That's an unusual parlay for the ex-R. H. Macy board member, who created for our Government the pay-as-you-earn income tax system; one who is well regarded with both parties, knows the advantages of women's clubs and kindred civic groups, and the like.

With a Ruml today, of course, it would have to be a part-time job, but full—or part-time there are many within ASCAP who can't understand "why a multimillion-dollar business hasn't commensurate highpowered and well-paid manpower." As is, it runs via committees and lawyers, albeit apparently with great efficiency, as witness the $14,000,000 peak annual royalty melon just achieved.

It may be also that ASCAP may have to amend its charter to cope with the encroachments of Broadcast Music, Inc., which is not only the performing rights society that is ASCAP's function, but also administers as a music publisher. ASCAP leaves the publishing phases strictly to its songsmith and publisher members.

But, argue those ASCAPites who are alarmed at BMI's inroads with the diskeries, deejays, et al., perhaps the Society should also do something about encouraging more plattering and other more direct trade relations.

Meantime, the chicken-or-the-egg discussion continues apace within ASCAP and BMI folds—is it the song or the affiliation that has so markedly given BMI the edge of late, particularly in the popular field? This has been largely explored in recent weeks and will be given further space as new values warrant.

Coyotes Now Rustling Top Country Monickers

Nashville, Oct. 28.

Recently two men visited Max Meeks during his daily country record show on WMFR in High Point, N. C., posing as members of Hank Thompson's Capitol Records recording band. During the interview it was apparent that both were imposters and they were evicted from the station.

A similar case took place in the Norfolk-Portsmouth, Va., area recently with a lone impersonator posing as WSM's country artist, Faron Young. In this case the red carpet was presented by the area's jockeys, with the fake leaving town two days later after making credit purchases and cashing bogus checks which were guaranteed by the local radio personnel. To date this man has not been apprehended by police.

Fox Clamps Down On Remington In Royalty Hassle

In what looms as a key battle in the publishers' war against unlicensed recordings, Harry Fox, publishers' agent and trustee, is preparing to throw the book at Remington Records, top low-priced disk label, for alleged failure to pay royalties on copyrighted tunes. Showdown is shaping up as a result of Remington's refusal to pay $4,000 which auditors from the Fox office claim is due to the pubs.

Over 100 tunes owned by all the major publishers are involved in the hassle. According to the Fox office, many of the tunes were recorded by Remington without a prior license. In such cases, where royalties are not paid strictly on time, Fox has been trying to establish in court that the publishers are entitled to treble damages.

Fox won his initial test of this contention in his action against Dante Bolletino and Paradox Industries early this year. Currently, the major publishers are involved in a similar suit in Chicago against Chess Records and the James H. Martin Co. Remington, however, is the largest company to date to be involved in such a royalty hassle.

BUDDY MORRIS BUYS E. S. WILLIAMS CATALOG

In a move to bolster its educational department, E. H. Morris Music last week acquired the Ernest S. Williams School of Music catalog. Catalog contains music for brass instruments, band and orchestra and includes the established method for cornet and trumpet developed by Williams.

Purchase was made by Phil Lang, who heads Morris' educational department. Mrs. Gladys E. Williams repped her late husband's estate. Lang currently is recataloging the material and prepping a brochure for the trade.

Eckstine's 9G in Mpls.

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

Billy Eckstine-George Shearing-Count Basie unit at $3.75 top in the 5,700-seat Auditorium Concert Hall grossed a big $8,800 last night (Mon.). One-nighter concert was under management of Norman Granz whose "Jazz at the Philharmonic" pulled slightly under $10,000 in the same hall two weeks ago.

Hampton, Cugat Rank Among Top Boxoffice Draws in Band Business

Further pointing up the big business aspects of the band biz is the boff annual gross being racked up by representative name leaders in the Latino and Negro field. Top coin grossing leader in the south-of-the-border idiom for many years has been Xavier Cugat who's been averaging more than $1,000,000 annually while Lionel Hampton heads the Negro contingent with a steady $500,000 gross.

Although the Latino orch fad has been confined, for the most part, to the New York-Miami circuit, Cugat has been one of the few chile-rhythm orchsters to pull 'em in on his one-niter and location stands around the country. The Cugat disks (he's recording for Mercury after switching from Columbia about a year ago) also contribute to his yearly take. Although his Merc etchings haven't broken into the hit bracket, the Cugat devotees keep them moving in the market.

Hampton, on the other hand, relies mainly for his sock gross on one-niters and location dates rather than disk royalties and/or radio-tele work. Hampton generally goes into percentages at Negro, white or mixed dance dates and pulls in top b.o. in his theatre assignments. He sticks to the road continually and hits his biggest figures in bookings at ball parks, coliseums and state fairs.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Damita Jo: "I Don't Care"-"I'd Do It Again" (Victor). "I Don't Care" has immediate and unmistakable click impact and could be a smash for Victor. Tune has a freeswinging folk quality and gets a superlative open-voiced workover by Damita Joe with a happy handclapping background. It's an expert wax production for the contemporary market. "I'd Do It Again" makes potent backing for a possible double-sided hit. Flip is a Latin-tailored number with an easy-fitting lyric, a good beat and another selling vocal by Damita Jo.

Jo Stafford: "Keep It a Secret"-"Once to Every Heart" (Columbia). Jo Stafford demonstrates again on "Keep It a Secret" why she's the top-selling femme vocalist in the business currently. She gives a natural, warm projection to a simple tune in the "Tennessee other hefty side for Miss Stafford. Dinah Shore's etching of "Secret" for Victor also gets the message across and will give the Jesse Mae Robinson number additional impetus. On the Columbia flip, Miss Stafford delivers a good pop ballad in her best style. It also rates plenty of spins.

Vaughn Monroe-Sunny Gale: "So-So"-"Jump Back Honey" (Victor). The new Victor tandem of Vaughn Monroe and Sunny Gale gets off to a strong start iwth "So-So," a fine tune with a smart lyric. The blending of Monroe's baritone with Miss Gale's metallic pipes is carried off in an overall neat wax production. Reverse is a fast rhythm number featuring a driving Monroe-Gale duet with steel guitar and orch accompaniment. A good juke bet although this side seems imitative of some recent Frankie Laine-Jo Stafford sides.

Buddy Morrow Orch: "Greyhound"-"Stairway to the Stars" (Victor). Since straight pop orch slicings have been finding tough sledding in the disk market, the bands have been indulging in offbeat sounds to draw attention. In "Greyhound," Buddy Morrow's orch has come up with an unusual side with plenty of impact. It's a fast blues feelingly projected by Frankie Lester. The pounding instrument background gives it the punch which could put it over both as a pop hit and a blues and rhythm market entry. It's Morrow's most interesting side by far. On the flip, Lester and vocal chorus give a firstrate rendition of the standard.

Eddy Howard: "It's Worth Any Price You Pay"-"Kentucky Babe" (Mercury). Eddy Howard continues to grind out excellent sides for Mercury. "Price" is a fine lilting ballad by Sylvia Dee and Sid Lippman, the "Too Young" cleffing team. Howard vocals it with an attractively light beat that stands up under repeated spins. This could grow into a big one. "Kentucky Babe" is a pleasant magnolia-scented ballad which Howard also gives a highly listenable ride.

Billy Eckstine: "Be Fair"-"Come to the Mardi Gras" (M-G-M). Billy Eckstine has a big ballad in "Be Fair" and he belts it with his trademarked stylistic attack. This side, however, is too much in the same groove as Eskstine's previous sides to rate more than mid-hit possibilities. Eckstine could stand a change of pace to catapult him once again into the bestseller lists. "Mardi Gras" is a Latune adaptation with a good best as an okay lyric.

Woody Herman: "I Cried for You"-"Livin' On Love" (M-G-M). Woody Herman, playing with another orch, the Leon Kelner band, is standout both on the alto sax and on vocal. Herman's piping of the standard, "I Cried for You," is lyrical to a surprising degree and could launch this standard on a revival. "Livin' on Love" is a fair rhythm tune also vocalized by, Waltz" groove. This will be an-Herman with a Latin background supplied by Kelner's crew.

Molly Bee: "Tennessee Tango"-"The Kids Who Pay" (Capitol). "Tennessee Tango" is another tune out of the hillbilly field which which has important potential in the pop market. It's a catching tango item which gets a firstrate projection via Molly Bee's driving pipes and a rich Latin orchestral background. It's a juke natural. Flip is a good country-styled item.

Ziggy Lane: "Mad About 'Cha"-"I'm Crying for You" (Jubilee), Ziggy Lane, one of the co-cleffers on "Mad About 'Cha," gives this Yiddish-based tune a colorful vocal with an elaborate orch and choral accompaniment. It isn't as wild as Billy Williams' cut for Mercury, but Lane sells it with a vivid etching nonetheless. Flip is a routine sentimental item on which Lane is a little too schmaltzy.

Longhair Disk Review

Brahms: Symphony No. 4, in E Minor. (RCA Victor, LP, $5.45). Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra in an impressive performance of a thrice-familiar work, an honest, inspired reading free of emotionalism, ham and schmaltz. Especially fine are renditions of the elegiac slow movement and the majestic finale, although entire opus shows love and care in its interpretation.

Shostakovich: Symphony No. 5. (Vox, LP, $5.95). A stirring recording of an imposing opus, dramatically rendered by the Vienna Symphony Orchestra under Jascha Horenstein. Perhaps the finest of the contemporary Russian's orchestral works, the symphony has a wealth of musical coloring and a profundity of power and mood, which Horenstein and the Viennese effectively re-create. The reading isn't frenzied or driving, as with some other maestros, but is incisive and lucid. Result is a fine waxing, with all the contrasted gaiety and soul-searching of the work brought out. Bron.

Ford Fetes Ellington

Art Ford, disk jockey on WNEW, N. Y. indie, feted Duke Ellington on his 25th anni as an orch leader with a special midnight program Monday (27).

Ellington currently is appearing on the Paramount Theatre, N. Y., stage.

Danny Kessler, chief of Columbia Records' blues and rhythm subsid, Okeh Records, returned to N. Y. this week after a 10-day midwest promotion trek.

Swing Hot on Wax

One of the most striking phenomena of the disk business has been the selling power of the old jazz and swing sides of the 1920s and 1930s despite the current stress on "newness" for tunes, personalities and sounds. The vet jazz names are standing the test of time and, under the impetus of reissues or "discoveries" on the new speeds, have become highly valuable properties in the major companies' catalogs.

Perhaps the strongest name in this category is Benny Goodman. His "1938 Concert at Carnegie Hall" long-play album for Columbia Records was a smash hit, going above the 90,000 marker at an $11 retail tab, and it's still going strong. Now Columbia has packaged another brilliant collection of Goodman sides, with full orchestra, trio and quartet, culled from the bandleader's broadcasts of the 1937-38 period, when his organization was loaded with such sidemen as Gene Krupa, Lionel Hampton, Harry James, Ziggy Elman, Jess Stacy, Vido Musso and Hymie Shertzer. Titled "Jazz Concert No. 2," this set encompasses and epitomizes the spirit of the "swing era" with virtually the same zest and excitement as the "Carnegie Hall" album. George Avakian, Col's pop album chief, who also assembled the Louis Armstrong, Bessie Smith and Bix Beiderbecke sets, edited this album for maximum variety, also supplied hep notes on the three-dozen tunes included in this collection.

As part of its "Treasury of Immortal Performances" series, RCA Victor has also just issued a half-dozen albums stemming from the same tradition. In the Victor releases, Tommy Dorsey's band from 1937 to 1946 is showcased on eight standards, typifying the Dorsey organization at its best. Another Dorsey album spotlights such of the band's vocalists as Frank Sinatra, Jo Stafford and Connie Haines for powerful nostalgic impact. Goodman also shares in the Victor reissues with a collection of his quartet recordings while Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five combo is revived via another set. The kind of slick jazz which Duke Ellington produced in 1940 is featured in another album. One of the most interesting is framed around Ray Noble's orch of the 1930s with its tasteful music and the simple but deeply touching vocals of the late Al Bowlly. Herm.

Diskers, Radio-TV Mfrs. Plan Bally Campaign

Plans for an industry-wide campaign to promote sales of phonograph records and recording devices will be laid at a joint meeting tomorrow (Thurs.) at the Roosevelt Hotel, N. Y., of the Record Industry Assn., the Phonograph Manufacturers Assn., and the Radio-TV Manufactures Assn.

Objective of the campaign is to increase use of music of all types in the home, particularly through recording and playback instruments in radio and TV sets.

The Keys of Harmony, spiritual quartet which worked with Mahalia Jackson on her concert tour, have been inked by Tuxedo Records, a blues and rhythm diskery.

S-B Plugs 75 Standards In 'TV Song Production Book'; Big 3 to Categorize 500

Shapiro-Bernstein's "TV Song Production Book" goes the Chappell volume 25 songs stronger by incorporating an alltime galaxy of 75 famed pop songs, and outfitting each with a script idea to match the song. In this case Dick Rogers did the sketches, edited by Elliott Shapiro and Robert C. Haring.

S-B's book, like the Max Dreyfus firm's, is an impressive volume and differs from BMI's series of "TV Sketch Books" in that it is a more permanent reference.

Abe Olman, g.m. of Robbins, Feist and Miller Music, is readying a "Big Three TV Book" which will embrace 500 alltime songs, categorically broken down into several cross-reference types. This means that one song could show up eight different ways, such as "Atcheson, Topeka and the Santa Fe," for instance, which could be under RR, travel, boy-girl, mauve decade, or in contrast to "The Trolley Song" and "Come Josephine In My Flying Machine," jet propulsion, etc.

This is certainly atomic era songplugging with a vengeance and a far cry from the "ill. slides" of the yesteryear silent film theatres with the pluggers chirping to illustrated colored slides.

BMI kicked off this new plugging technique for the special sight requirements of the video medium with its "TV Sketchbook" last year and its subsequent monthly supplements. BMI's original volume covered 44 songs from 13 different publishing affiliates and, like the Chappell book, gives two alternate production ideas for each number. But where Chappell's book gives only the setting and action description, BMI's volume sketches the dialog as well on some songs. The BMI monthly supplements have been video-framing from 10 to 14 additional songs each, tipping off the company's far-reaching and longrange planning in this field.

There are captious critics, both in TV and music circles, who argue that these "TV song production books" are academic in their utilitarian purpose. If it's a small station, they contend, they rely on kinescope, allegedly, or "just haven't the money" for anything else. If it's a big station, it offends the bigtime TV producer. There is merit and contradiction to all arguments. These TV song book production ideas are not intended to be the complete answer. It's a good skeleton for ready reference; a sort of iconoscope crutch when the well of ideas perhaps runs dry. Above all it is the basic spark or platform from which may and should spring fresher ideas or evolutions of the theme, as set up by the enterprising music publishers who, seemingly, are not permitting themselves to be caught asleep at the Zoomar switch. Abel.

Chi Ballroom Ops, Via Radio & TV Promotion, Build Solid Band Biz

Satchmo to Africa

Louis Armstrong, now touring Europe with his All Stars, has been pacted for stands in Casablanca and Algiers, following his Continental trip.

Possibility is that after the North African trek, he'll return to Germany for three farewell concerts.

Eddie Fisher's Ready-Made Aud After GI Hitch

Pfc. Eddie Fisher will get a terrific ready-made audience during his first year as a civilian following his discharge from the Army next April. Fisher, still regarded as one of the hotter male singers despite his two-year service hitch, will start off with a nest egg of approximately $330,000, representing a two-year royalty stretch on RCA Victor diskings.

In addition, his bookers, General Artists Corp., have started lining up dates for him.

Another factor that will strongly increase the Fisher exchequer are the numerous television guest shots available to him. Fisher, as a soldier, has appeared on many video shows cuffo with the proviso that he make a recruiting pitch.

Currently, Fisher is slated to go to Germany on a tour of duty. Last week he had a recording session, and releases will be sufficient to take him into January. He'll be back by that time, it's believed. He returned recently from Korea.

Fisher is situated more advantageously than any other singer in the service. In fact, his position is equivalent to that of Harvey Stone during his Army stretch in World War II. Stone was located around New York and made many appearances which gave him name status by the time he was discharged. However, Fisher's impact is regarded as greater. His video dates and record hits have kept his name hot during service. His current hit, "Wish You Were Here," is one of the top sellers.

MARY SMALL ANKLES KING FOR MERCURY

Thrush Mary Small ankled the King Record label last week for a term pact with Mercury Records. Deal was set by Merc's Chicago office.

Miss Small will cut her initial sides for Merc after she completes her engagement at El Rancho, Las Vegas, where she opens today (29).

Cole-Vaughan-Kenton Mop Up 22½G in Pitt

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.

Nat (King) Cole-Sarah Vaughan-Stan Kenton package did a blazing $22,500 in its one-nighter here at The Gardens, Friday (24). Show gave two performances at 6,200-seater, and the first one at 8:30 p.m. sold out while the second at midnight played to crowd of more than 3,000.

Gardens management was a little worried early in the week when advance was rather slim, but last-minute action with a boxoffice crush at curtain time turned the booking into a smash.

Charlie Spivak Settles 42G Tax Claim for 10G

Bandleader Charlie Spivak revealed to the Internal Revenue Bureau last week that his booking price now ranges from $500 to $1,200 a night as compared with a previous asking price which ranged between $1,750 and $2,500 a night. The Bureau, which regards Spivak's future as "dubious," settled a $42,400 back income tax claim against him for $10,000.

Bureau stated that Spivak is currently hard pressed financially and there is some [illegible] liability and as to the collectability of taxes.

Chicago, Oct. 28.

Despite the varied and long lamentations of ballroom operators here in the midwest, business in Chicago has been reaching some record hights, due mainly to more aggressive promotions and the use of television and radio. While most of the danceries reported good business for the summer, this fall has also been going exceptionally strong. More and more spots are going in for name bands, in addition to the units with local or regional reputations. Outfits such as Ralph Flanagan, Ray Anthony and Xavier Cugat have been picking up new locations and there is a big jump in one-nighters both from armed forces' installations and private ops. Of course, most of the upped business is due to more general spending throughout the country, but there is also a renewed interest in dancing.

In Chicago, hypoed activity is taking place. The newest location is the Chevy Chase Country Club Ballroom, in nearby Wheeling, Ill. Spot used a small orchestra this summer for the first time in years, but the room has been rebuilt and will open Nov. 8 using names and semi-names. It will be under the management of Bill Vidas, formerly with General Artists Corp., and will accommodate 1,500 terpers now and at least double that number during the warmer months when outdoor platform can be used. Decision to build in this northwest suburb follows the pattern of population movement from the city.

In relation to this, both Oh Henry and Melody Mill suburban halls have been enjoying their best season in years. Oh Henry has been using semi-names, as has Melody Mill, but the Mill has also been buying names. Both locations use top draws for one-night stands. Oh Henry uses large chunks of air time.

TV Helps

Melody Mill, under Ben Zejcar, has upped business tremendously with a weekly television remote. Attendance soared over 25% this summer, when a dip is usually expected, and a further rise has been noted this fall. Program uses the current bands, which put on a half-hour show each Wednesday over WGN-TV. Cross-check of the dancers has revealed that many hadn't danced in years but were drawn to the ballroom through seeing that many couples, not in their teens, were enjoying the proceedings.

The Trianon, one of the Karzas chain, which was put up for sale, was withdrawn from the market after patrons registered strong protests, and with attendance jumping markedly for the past few weeks. Bill Alexander of the organization has been active in promoting new ideas such as bringing in Stan Kenton—a far cry from the sweet styles which usually predominate the Karzas terperies. Also, singing stars have been used, in more or less concert fashion, throughout the chain, drawing many non-dancers. Polka nights and festivals have been picker-uppers in admissions too, especially in the early part of the week. Karzas is going in more heavily for names, not only as one nighters, but also for engagements of a week or longer. He has difficulty in Chi bookings because of competition from the Edgewater Beach Hotel, which relies on names during the summer, paying as high as $5,000 per week for draws such as Xavier Cugat, Tommy Dorsey, Ralph Flanagan and Eddy Howard. Other hotel rooms don't depend too much on names for their orchestras.

The Martinique on the far southside is another outlet, using Griff Williams, Ted Weems, and Clyde McCoy for four to eight weeks.

One peculiar aspect of the healthy situation is the fact that many fringe operators have been hiring halls for dates and paying bands from $750 to $1,500. They do not use bands on a regularly scheduled basis but just pick up names when they have a break in the territory. Actually, both bands and ops don't come out too well in the deal. Bands take a cut below usual figures and the promoter loses on the tickets. However, the gigs are held in heavy drinking neighborhoods and the local man [illegible] up in liquor sales what he doesn't take in on admissions.

Nashville Notes

New disk name, Jimmy Lee, signed and recorded by Ken Nelson for Capitol recently.

Jimmy Dickens doing Nov. 3 show in Kilgore, Tex. .. Ernest Tubb set for Atlanta Nov. 2 with successive stands at Columbia, Ga.; Daytona Beach and Orlando, Fla. ...Hank Snow tours Canton, O., Nov. 8; Windsor, Ont. (10); London, Ont. (11); Sault St. Marie (12); South Bend (14)... Webb Pierce showing in Akron, Nov. 9... Carl Smith and George Morgan sharing Memphis billing Nov. 2.

Murray Nash on a two weeks' swing through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota for Acuff-Rose pubbery.

George Morgan guesting with Red Foley on Nov. 2 "Grand Ole Opry" NBC netter. Jimmy Dickens, Martha Carson and Ray Price up for three succeeding Saturdays. Foley, incidentally, was given a Kentucky Colonel title Saturday (25).

Jane Turzy did the guest spot on WSM's "Sunday Down South" Oct. 26. Locals Lonzo & Oscar scheduled for Nov. 2 with Kay Armen coming in Nov. 9. Show is a regular Sunday evening feature over WSM's 27 station Lion Oil Network.

Jimmie Davis in Nashville last week transcribing "Fill-Up With Billip" platters for network airing by service station sponsor. Cutting being done in Nashville in order to use WSM's musicians as sidemen.

Country Chatter

Capitol's new duo, Jim & Jesse (The McReynolds Bros.), now set at WCYB in Bristol, Va., for two live shows daily and area personals through Bill Shell, WCYB's farm program head.

Shel Horton (songwriter Vaughn's brother) has increased his WHUN, Huntington, Pa., country record spinning from half-hour two months ago to one-and-a-half hours daily. All shows are remote from Horton's home studios in Saxton, Pa., where he also has business interests.

Smiley Burnette came out of Canada last week with an excellent $5,000 gross from week's appearances.

Jimmy Logsdon (WINN-Louisville country d. j.) has new Decca sides out which were cut in Nashville recently under Paul Cohen's direction. Cutting affiliation and song publication were handled by Vic McAlpin of Howie Richmond's new Nashville Melody Trails office.

Carolina Cotton, M-G-M's country canary, doing a new show, "Carolina Cotton Calling," which is beamed overseas via Armed Forces Radio Service. Origination is from the Coast.

Three indie diskings showing top sectional attention past week: Milt Dickey's (Kansas City KCMO talent) Sho-Me cutting of original "Neon Love"; "Four Alarm Boogie" by Jimmy Collett on Arcade and Milwaukee's Demo waxing of "Going Around in Circles" by local Jack Teter.

WHBS in Huntsville, Ala., jumped to 5,000 watts from 250 last week which gives Ross Smitherman's record spinning top coverage of that area.

Jesse Rogers recently cut M-G-M country sides in New York. His first release will contain Christmas sides written by Rogers and set for November release and promotion. This is artist's first recording affiliation since his release by RCA Victor from the Bluebird pact whereby Rogers did followup versions of current hits.

20th's Sousa Pic Cues Flock of Band Albums

Marches composed by John Philip Sousa are being primed for a big shellac push via album releases from three record companies. The Sousa scramble is being sparked by the forthcoming 20th-Fox pic, "Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa's biopic.

Already skedded for release are the sountrack album via M-G-M; a Columbia album of Edwin Franko Goldman heading his band in eight Sousa marches; and Decca's Fred Waring's "Stars and Stripes Forever" album as well as a two-colume series of Sousa marches conducted by Joe Colling.

Albums are due to hit the market in mid-November while the pic, which stars Clifton Webb, is pegged for Xmas release.

Louis Bernstein

BMI doesn't have to do that. They can give anything they want to anybody, whether he earns it or doesn't earn it. ASCAP cannot do this.

If Mr. Wrisley had presented a song to this office he would have received very courteous and considerate attention, and he would have received the same attention if he had no song. So would any other disk jockey in the United States. I am sorry to say that Mr. Wrisley, in my opinion, has placed too much importance upon himself and I don't think he has the right to talk for the disk jockeys of America, many of whom are our very good friends.

Tommy Valando Sees Key To Music Biz in Copy Sales

Editor, VARIETY

I have been thinking about the current ASCAP-BMI hassle and it seems to me that the publishers and writers have become so involved in this struggle that they have completely forgotten about the music business itself.

I, for one, have accepted the fact that there is a BMI and that they are in business to stay and the sooner the entire industry would come to this conclusion, the better off we would be, both writers and publishers.

The real problem today, I think, is the sheet music business which has become worse and worse week after week. I just recently returned from a trip throughout the Midwest and made it a point to stop in most of the music shops along the way and found to my bitter dismay that the sheet music business has become practically extinct. One can go into almost any music shop, ask for one of the country's latest hits, whether it be ASCAP or BMI, and be told that it is not in stock, they will order it, and that takes five or six days. I firmly believe that the music industry as a whole and that goes for all the publishers, whether they be ASCAP or BMI, should get together and figure out some way to promote the sheet music field.

Actually, what we have been doing in the past couple of years is concentrating on the type of music that the record companies want for special recordings, such as gags, sounds, or exciting arrangements, and by doing this we have completely sacrificed our sheet music business.

Another very bad feature of this industry as it stands today, is the amount of people in the music business who are so involved in things they really know so little about, such as the country style, hillbilly, race, rhythm and blues etc. Somehow we publishers have gotten out of our own sphere. This goes for the writers who are trying to write only this style of music. It is a completely different business than the pop business that I know and so I have stayed away from it completely. True, of course, it sure is tougher today to come up with something, but we did do it with one of the biggest songs of the country, "Wheel Of Fortune," and it was neither country, nor hillbilly.

Josef Marais' Veldt Tunes

Editor, VARIETY:

As an ASCAP member of some ten years standing, the inclusion of the words "African Veldt" in the paragraph linking "freak" sounds to BMI is a mistake.

I suppose I can speak with some authority as I am writer of the so-called Veld songs—a name I used to identify my first Decca album, made 12 years ago. I was born and brought up on the Veld or "prairie" of Africa, and my songs are original compositions, based on melodies and Dutch-Afrikaans ditties which I heard as a kid. G. Schirmer published my first collection (ASCAP) and when "A-round the Corner" entered the pop field, I gave it to Frank Music Corp. (ASCAP) to publish. "Brandy Leave Me Alone" (used by Howard Hawks in the "Big Sky" as "Whisky Leave Me Alone") is also a Frank Music item. "Johnnie Goggabee" and "Zulu Warrior" (which my wife, Miranda, and I, with Mitch Miller have put on wax) are published respectively by Fideree Music Corp. (my own ASCAP firm) and Dartmouth Music (ASCAP). "Johnny With the Bandy Legs" (just recorded by Vic Damone) is an Alamo publication (ASCAP). And, of course, "Sugarbush" is in the ASCAP fold, through G. Schirmer. There are many others, like "Umbira," which will all be legitimate children of ASCAP.

And may I please emphasize that my music has been around a long time and is no sudden "freak" vogue. Miranda and I have been singing them in concert for five years. The advent of Mitch Miller has zoomed them into the "mass" pop field, for which we are truly delighted.

Sheet Sales Soar; Boffo Ballad Biz

With disk biz hitting a good clip since the beginning of September, sheet music sales have now begun to perk at the healthiest pace of the past couple of years. Turnover on the top hits is now running from two to three times ahead of sales two months ago, indicating that hit tunes will once again reach the 500,000 copy level. During the summer, the top tunes were lucky to sell over 200,000 copies.

Sharp pickup in biz is attributed partially to normal seasonal activity, but mostly to the predominance of ballads on the bestseller lists. Unlike the novelty and freak tunes, which enjoy heavy disk activity solely, the ballads stimulate copy sales and last long enough to be milked for maximum returns.

Current leaders include such ballads as "Auf Wiederseh'n," "You Belong To Me," "Because You're Mine," "Somewhere Along the Way," "Wish You Were Here," "High Noon" and "Half As Much."

Army to Select 5 Songs By Nov. 15 in Kickoff Of 'Official' Tune Search

Washington, Oct. 28.

By Nov. 15, the Army expects to select the five songs which it will plug via all media in the hope of winding up with at least one solid number to become the official Army marching song.

This will be the climax of the Army Song Project launched last August. Army has never had a representative all-Army song in its 177-year history, but it is hoping Tin Pan Alley will be able to fill the gap.

Steering committee, headed by Otto Harbach and Carl Haverlin, was named last summer by the Army Adjutant General. They appointed an Army Song Board, which included the two and reps of six leading recording companies. They solicited songs and have been screening them ever since. Final screening session will probably be early in November. At that meeting the Song Board will choose the five finalists which will be recommended to the Army.

Army plans to promote these numbers via The Army Hit Kit for Soldier Shows, U.S. Army Band, U.S. Army Field Band, and Army radio and TV programs. The one song which appears to emerge as the best will get a special concentrated promotional campaign, from the recording companies.

If this, or any of the other four, should show signs of "unmistakable acceptance by the Army and the general public alike, it will be in line for adoption as the official Army song," reports the Adjutant General's office.

Wisner Named New B.M. Of K.C. Philharmonic

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

Kansas City Philharmonic Assn. has hired Arthur Wisner, Chicago concert agent, to become business manager of the Philharmonic Orchestra beginning Nov. 1.

Wisner succeeds Richard H. Wangerin, who resigned recently after four years with the orchestra association to accept a similar position at Louisville, Ky.

Dana Label Into Pops

Dana Records, indie label which heretofore had been pegging its product at the rhythm and blues market, is prepping a pitch into the pop field by lining up new artists for the pop stable. Initial pactee, Ricky Hale, joined the Dana roster several weeks ago.

Dayton Jammed With Jazz With 5 Shows In Month; B.O. Impact NSG

Dayton, Oct. 28.

Dayton can take so much jazz. Consequently when five entertainments of this type arrive within one month's time, not only one, but all suffer at the boxoffice. Either prices are too high to attend all of them, or the public has been over-milked in this respect.

First to tee off was Harry James (Oct. 16) the first name band engaged by Carrousel, only downtown dance hall of any size. Though he played to more than 1,500 at Lakeside Park last summer, a sparse 350 attended his second engagement.

Norman Granz, who hasn't had a full house since the very first appearance of his "Jazz at the Philharmonic," was back Oct. 17 with more of the same. The outfit drew about 1,200 in Memorial Hall, seating more than twice that many.

On the heels of this came "The Biggest Show of '52," playing the University of Dayton stadium and sponsored by a local Recreation club. The outfit played to about 3,000 but that was not enough to cover expenses.

James played to a top of $2.25 per, while admission to the two jazz shows was $3.50 top.

Next to come in will be Billy Eckstine, George Shearing and Count Basie, Oct. 31, in Memorial Hall; then the Mills Bros., Woody Herman and Dinah Washington, also in Memorial Hall, Nov. 3, with two performances.

Honolulu Symph Plans 'Ballots & Bach' Concert

Honolulu, Oct. 28.

Music and politics will mingle on election night, Nov. 4, when Honolulu Symphony Orchestra presents Hawaii's first "ballot box concert." Election returns will be announced between each number.

Orchestra exec are gloating over record-breaking crowds drawn by first concerts of 1952-53 season. Tuesday (14) opener drew 1,600 persons, house scaled from $1.20 to $3.60. Repeat program following Sunday (19) drew 1,100 more, house scaled from 60c. to $1.80. George Barati conducts.

Joseph Dworken, prexy of Dynavox Corp., was named president of the Phonograph Manufacturers' Assn., replacing Roland Kalb, at a board meeting in N. Y. last week.

Hot Club of France Scores With U.S. Jazz Crew; Many Tooters Settling in Paris

Paris, Oct. 21.

The Hot Club of France, pitching to the frantic jazz following here, scored a financial success with a jazz concert given by Bill Coleman and his newly formed Swing Stars at the Salle Pleyel here Saturday (18). The large hall was packed with stomping, screeching youngsters and a good smattering of elders. Crowd was energetic and free with praise or derision, which is characteristic of the jazz crowd here.

Bill Coleman, American Negro trumpet player, has played here for some time now, and composed his new outfit for a tour around Europe. The Swing Stars (7) include besides Coleman, who also vocals; Dicky Wells on the trombone, Randy Downes at piano, Zutty Singleton on drums, Buddy Banks on bass, Miriam Burton as vocalist, and the sole French participant, Guy Lafitte, doubling on alto sax and clarinet.

Band still has some kinks to iron out but in general fused well opening night and gave them what they wanted with good round of jumping jazz, blues and standards. Coleman did well on his earthy vocals and each individual scored in his soloing. Lafitte did fine with a definite jazz background to his clear French tonality on reeds. Singleton was the definite fave with his drumania.

Last year's jazz festival here with Dizzy Gillespie was a resounding hit and Louis Armstrong, to concert here for one day, Nov. 9, at the Champs-Elysees Theatre, is already a sellout. French jazzophiles are in the fanatic category and are hep to jazz history with top collections of jazz disks.

Many American artists have played here with success and many have stayed on to bask in the adulatory atmosphere. Sidney Bechet and Mezz Mezzrow have long stapled the Vieux Colombier here. Inez Cavanaugh has her own boite here, Chez Inez. Jimmy Davis, composer-singer, is now stinting at the College Inn in Montparnasse. Aaron Bridgers and Art Simmons are on the piano at Jean's Intrigue, with Quentin Foster chirping to their accomp. "Fats" Edwards doubles at Chez Inez and The Intrigue, and Muriel Gaines chirps at Spivy's East Side.

"Hot Lips" Page and Roy Eldridge spent a lot of time here and Don Byas is still here saxophoning at the Harlequin. Gordon Heath still chants his folk songs at his own club, the Abbaye, and Byron Cutler and Othella Stozier are giving with their hot primitive terping at La Canne Au Sucre. Charlie Beal is back at The Calvados for his pianoing and chanting. Enid Mozier offers her song takeoffs at Carrolls. All of the above Negro entertainers have Gallic following since the French like their delivery.

Buffalo Symph Preps For Its Biggest Sked

Buffalo, Oct. 28.

Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra is offering the most pretentious schedule in its history for the 1952-53 season. There will be 10 pairs of concerts, each pair being identical Sunday afternoons and Tuesday nights.

Milton Katims will conduct three pairs, with Benny Goodman, Yehudi Menuhin and Eugene Istomin as soloists. Joseph Rosenstock batons two pairs, featuring a concertized "Marriage of Figaro" (with N. Y. City Center Opera Co. cast) and William Kappell. Joseph Krips will conduct two pairs, with Rise Stevens and Budapest String Quartet featured.

Leopold Stokowski and Izler Solomon, conductor in residence, will each preside over one pair, the latter starring Oscar Levant as in March is as yet unprogrammed. William Steinberg, former Buffalo conductor and now heading the Pittsburgh Symphony, will conduct one performance of Verdi's "Requiem" on March 26.

BMI record report
AND FORECAST OF TOMORROW'S SONG HITS

BILLBOARD "PICK" ★ YOURS (Quiereme Mucho) (Marks) — Vera Lynn (Lon.) rides with another success. Billboard nominates it a "PICK" and reports, "a performance that is superlative in its beauty."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"BREAKING BIG" ★ IT'S IN THE BOOK (Magnolia) — Both sides of this satirical opus (Part 1 and Part 2) rate reviewers' accolades. Disc by Johnny Standley, with Horace Heidt's ork (Cap.) is already number seven among best sellers. Al Bernie's (Mer.) version, says Billboard, is "a camp meeting parody . . . breaking big." Cash Box claims Standley "has the audience in the palm of his hand."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

CASH BOX "BEST BET" ★ (Up the) LAZY RIVER (Peer) — Art Mooney (MGM), with Kathi Ryan vocalizing, earns a Cash Box "BEST BET" for a "spicy and exciting" platter. Billboard reports, "a really sock vocal of the lively evergreen; a la Kay Starr. The gal sells it with excitement . . . potent platter . . . could easily break out."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"VERY GOOD" ★ YOU ARE HAPPINESS (Tenor) — Bill Kenny and the Ink Spots (Dec.), with Sy Oliver backing, deliver a strong ballad rated "very good" by Cash Box. Kenny, says Billboard, "projects it with warmth and sincerity."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

PICTURE TUNE ★ HOUND DOG (Montclare) — An attractive tune from Vaughn Monroe's new picture, with the bandleader-vocalist (Vic.) at his best. Billboard recommends it as a "melancholy item which Monroe warbles wistfully."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"HAUNTING ITEM" ★ LONESOME TRAIN (Benton) — Billboard finds this new Stan Kenton (Cap.) vehicle "a haunting item that is given an imaginative arrangement . . . fans will go for it."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

GAINS PRAISE ★ SING HER A LOVE SONG (Peer) — Carl Smith (Col.) gains high praise from Billboard for a disc that "could be another big one for the artist. His warm delivery should earn it plenty of action."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

FULL OF BOUNCE ★ THERE'S A SHIP COMIN' IN (Amusement) (non-exclusive BMI) — Cash Box labels the new Bell Sisters' (Vic.) release "full of fine harmony and bounce." Billboard calls it "their best effort in some months . . . could bring them back to the top."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

VARIETY "BEST BET" ★ MAD ABOUT'CHA (Republic) — Billy Williams Quartet (Mer.) wins a Variety "BEST BET" for "one of those off-beat wax attempts . . . bound to create some noise."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"GRAND RESULT" ★ TRUE LOVE (Folkways)
★ CLEMENTINE (Folkways) — Both sides by The Weavers (Dec.) are creating unusual interest. Variety believes it "could catch on big in the pop field." Cash Box reports, "the result is grand."

La Vie en Rose, N. Y.

Mel Torme with Mello Larks (4); Jay Marshall, Van Smith and Al Pellegrini trios; $5 minimum.

Monte Proser has an interim show with Mel Torme as the new ingredient. Torme, played this Wienstube for a week last summer before management decided to close. He is now back to fill out his contract.

Regularly, the highlight of the show is Amalia, the Portuguese fado singer. However, on Torme's opening night, the fadista was out with laryngitis and Jay Marshall took over the other portion of the show.

Marshall is always an engaging comic. Although he didn't give one of his better shows when caught, it was evident that he would hit it stronger once he got the feel of the room. He drew a good quota of laughs during his comedy and pseudo-magic turn. He got off with his ventriloquy bit, which is virtually surefire in any situation.

Torme is still in the process of separating himself from the "velvet fog" which helped him to prominence. He's doing a vastly more effective act, helped by having the Mello Larks work with him. His singing seems more forthright. He still goes a bit overboard on cute bits, but not enough to detract from the overall click of his turn.

On Torme's initial show here, when he was not yet set on lighting and routining, he followed a trio of numbers by the Larks, a nice-looking and well-routined group comprising three boys and a girl. Quartet are personable, well schooled in the rhythm department and can handle most any situation on their own. They essay three numbers before Torme fronts them. By this time, the pattern of the act is too well integrated for a change. The Mellos could cut one tune before introducing Torme, inasmuch as the latter is the focal point.

Torme is working harder than ever. He's utilizing a thin voice to the utmost, showing vocal and musical tricks worthy of top showmen. He has a good comedy selection as evidenced in the agent bit with the Mellos. This setting gives him an opportunity for some vocal impressions. Another good tune is "Ball Game" in which a projector is utilized to show some playing scenes.

In all, Torme can do a satisfactory turn that is a sharp relief from the "fog" that has characterized him in the past.

The Al Pellegrini and Van Smith trios do the showbacking and dance music. Jose.

Gatineau, Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 25.

Kirby Stone Quintet (5), The Kings & Their Ladies (6), Bobby Martin, Harry Pozy Orch (8); 75c admission, $1 Sat.

Joe Saxe clicks this week with three boffo acts on his Gatineau Country Club bill, Kirby Stone Quintet, working hard through intricate routine of comedy and music, handles both in top form and begs off virtually every show. Ability of each member gets chance to show, with Stone steering, drummer Eddie Hall carrying laugh load, bassist Doc Mandel in for character quipping and Michael Gardner, on piano and accordion, providing basic music chores. Crew hampered by loss, through injuries in a highway accident, of featured comic, Art (Cow Eyes) Engler, but does okay dubbing of femme warbler Bobby Martin who adds plenty to act.

Miss Martin's strenuously effervescent canarying fits the Gatineau's quality bill. In her solo bit she whams across items like "Good Day Coming," "Them There Eyes," "Poor Papa" and "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," last-named dedicated intermittently to N. Y. Yankees and local ball team.

Sensation here is the dancing of the Kings & Their Ladies, five socko gals and equally click Buddy King. This is definitely not a chorus line but a trained and able terp act using, when caught, a Siamese-type number for opener and impressive Africuban routine for closer. Handsomely costumed, King and girls have the crowd with them all the way.

Strong backing is provided by Harry Pozy band, with leader handling emcee chores as well. Gorm.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Oct. 21.

"Ken Murray Revue" with Ken Murray, Laurie Anders, Anita Gordon, Musical Minors (5), Park & Clifford, Ray Burwick, Schaller Bros. (2), Glamour Lovelies (5), Reviewers (3), Earl Brent, Sa-Harem Dancers (12), Cee Davidson Orch (12); no cover or minimum.

Sahara comes through with another sock show, right on the heels of the Bolger opus which opened the new resort hotel Oct. 7. With Ken Murray's first nitery appearance, and his solid "Blackouts" format, the hour-plus circus is drawing capacity biz.

Murray's great way with "casual" comedics, his kibbitzing sallies into several acts, have long been a show biz standard in other media. Bringing the formula to a nitery, and particularly to this one with its theatre stage, is a good booking coup by producer Stan Irwin. Show is fast with every facet represented. Since opening night, running order has undergone some changes to achieve better continuity.

Murray eases on after Sa-Harem Dancers' bright swing to pilot his charges through the various segments. Duets with cute chirp Anita Gordon, "Baby, What Do You Do?," slices Ray Burwick's lariat tossing escapade with some fancy rope twirls, heckles the five Glamour Lovelies from a ringside table, gets tangled up in the acro work of Park & Clifford, and makes with some clarineting in midst of his teenage Musical Minors. Every break-in is a howl.

Laurie Anders, the blue-eyed blonde, spouts her "I Like the Wide Open Spaces," within other nonsensical doggerel of the Glamour Lovelies, receiving large amounts of laughs. Anita Gordon casts a nice spell with pop lieder, "Singing in the Rain" and "Wish You Were Here,"

Musical Minors run off with the show in closing slot of Dixieland tootling. Youngsters whip up fires in combo blowing of "12th St. Rag," "Darktown Strutters Ball," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Wabash Blues," "Sugar Blues," a la Clyde McCoy, 'Whispering,' and final bit with Murray on "Three O'Clock in the Morning." Nothing but salvos for every tune.

Park & Clifford stun house with almost impossible to believe control work, before Murray comes on in abbreviated costume to attempt some tricks. He is finally carried off to good yocks. Schaller Bros. bounce around on the trampoline, putting in some comedy as well as difficult twists. This is the only act Murray doesn't muscle in on, but perhaps before the fortnight is over, he'll be attempting some tricks with the pair.

Reviewers threesome are seen and heard to good advantage this stanza by a solid "Blues in the Night" vocal and terp fling in opening line routine. Sa-Harem Dancers exhibit one of the best Latin stomps viewed along the Strip in a long time. The George Moro beauties are knockouts in brilliant wardrobe.

Cee Davidson orch continues to justify his terrif rep in the showback department. Earl Brent spells the Davidson 88'er during Miss Gordon's spot for good accomping.

Greatest drawback to hotel's Congo Room as a showplace for all acts has been removed. This was, first of all, an experimented speaker system installed ostensibly to lay down a "curtain" of sound. Result for first three weeks of operation was spotty audio and garbled effect from mikes. New system, now in use, cuts down amount of overhead speakers from 20 or more to only a couple placed in each corner of the vast room flanking the stage. Within a matter of weeks, full theatre sound will be installed. Currently operating with simplified amplification, room is covered to all corners and presents no terrors to performers.

The other problem, involving hard walls and echo-chamber quality, has also been solved by acoustical engineers who specified insulation for certain spots in the area. The Sahara nitery following some big headaches, is now operating smoothly. Will.

Ringside, Paris

Paris, Oct. 20.

Stephan Golmann, Bill Tamper, Michel Devillier, Andre Persiany; $1.25 minimum.

Dick Edwards has had two previous spots for his Ringside in Paris and both times landlord troubles drove him out. Now, installed in an ex-bar off the Champs Elysees, he intends to stay by buying the property outright with partner George Gainford, manager of middleweight champ Sugar Ray Robinson.

Bar is a bit cramped for nitery needs but they're packing in a big following of the young French set who come for the swing music of the three instrumentalists and the folk balladeering of Stephan Gollman. Small floor is well utilized by stepping youth and the drinks are reasonable.

Music is agreeably played by combo of Michel Devillier on tenor sax, Andre Persiany on piano and Bill Tamper on trombone. They also participate in a small show which is primarily some hep instrumentalizing by trio and then the Gollmann ballading. Latter has poise and joviality and his presence quiets spirited crowd as he goes into his folk-a-log. He features his own songs with sly lyrics. Well done are such saucy pieces as "Conscience," "St. Germain-Des-Pres" and "The Marie Joseph." He has a good voice, and a slight accent underlines his English chanting. Mitting is heavy. Biz was rather high when caught. Mosk.

Sky Club, Dallas

Dallas, Oct. 24.

Samia Gamal, Dale Belmont, Patricia King, Betty Lee, Johnny Cola Orch (5); $2.50 cover.

Owner Joe Bonds has a hit bill on tap for nine nights, despite the show biz bogey of spotting two thrushes back-to-back in an all-girl, four act show. Op had no out, however, except to add more acts. With Samia Gamal starring, Bonds induced her sister-in-law, Patricia King, to debut here as a pro canary. Spot also has the able services of Dale Belmont, permanent femcee-vocalist.

Miss Gamal, Egyptian dancer, on the plus side with red hair, classy chassis and green harem costume, is on display five minutes with two terp turns and a curtain speech. She rates a big mitting from the start with her contortions and muscle manipulations in an artistic execution that easily sells. Talented femme's short closing bit, with fluid drive in high gear from knees to shoulders and bare midriff accenting pelvic pulsations, gets palm praise for an expert although too short session.

Bowoff spiel, "I've been waiting for this first night in Texas for a long time, and you make me feel at home," grabs plenty of palms for Miss Gamal, who'll do three nights, Nov. 2-4, at the Plantation, Houston, home of husband Shepherd (Sonny) King.

In the trey spot, Miss Belmont, a looker, follows the pro debut of vocalist Patricia King (reviewed under New Acts). Her boff session is impaired by poor spotting. Aside from her top femcee stint, she tells a risque yarn and warbles "Maharajah of Magador" for a nice mitt. Then she quiets the house with "Here In My Heart," song selling with Miss Belmont at her best.

Opener is a flash bit by baton twirler, Betty Lee, cute blonde acrodancer who never misses. Her splits, twin baton bits and gimmick with a one stick aflame get the payees off their hands.

Zealous Life mag bulbers spent more time on the floor than each act, distracting auditors' efforts to see the Texas debuts of Misses Gamal and King. Entire 35-minute show was blinded by flash bulbs.

Kudos go to pianist Johnny Cola. His five-man orch capably backs the acts, including harem airs for Miss Gamal. Cola crew also dispenses terp session tunes that can be heard in the huge, high-roofed room. Barker.

Fairmount, Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 15.

Claude Valois, Linda & Constant, Fred Wolthing, Nivo Valli, Jimmy Lytle Orch (6); 75c admission.

Gilles Trahan's Fairmount Country Club stages a circus on its floor this week with all acts straight from sawdust. Spot's sturdy floor took a beating under the hoofs of Claude Valois' magnificent horse, Yellow Bird, with the trim, plushy-costumed Mme. Valois luring more eyes than her steed. Equestrienne puts her handsome mount through graceful, intricate pacings to okay returns, although the act is confined by the area. This is one act where ringsiders weren't so sure they had the pick of table positions.

Other acts are so-so. Nivo Valli emcees, warbles and does impressions. Fred Wolthing rides a unicycle and juggles balls, rings and clubs. The Linda & Constant perch is too high for all but flooredgers as Linda disappears into a ceiling well. Jimmy Lytle band is adequate. Gorm.

Hotel Statler, L. A.
(TERRACE ROOM)

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Xavier Cugat Orch (18) with Abbe Lane; Eddy Garson, Los Barrancos (2), Jose Wong, Juan Guerrero; $2 cover.

Ignoring the expected opening night problems, the Terrace Room of the new Hotel Statler looms as a potent entertainment centre in the after-dark circuit. It has a decor that lends itself to gaiety and the physical construction of the 310-seater manages to give the illusion of intimacy without crowding. These factors, its location, and the Statler's known policy of booking name acts should build the Terrace to a comfortable level of year-round business.

From the performers' standpoint, new room in town's newest hotel has some flaws. Lighting and sound systems were awry opening night, but these can be corrected. Stage construction, however, is such that entrances and exits are a trifle awkward.

Statler's selection of Xavier Cugat as the opening attraction was pegged, at least in part, on the fact that he successfully inaugurated the room in chain's Washington hostelry a few years ago. His stay will be pleasant enough, but it's a cinch that succeeding turns will better it.

Cugat's current layout is almost an exact carbon of the show he offered at the L.A. Paramount three months ago. While the Statler doesn't figure to draw much of the vaude trade, some changes should have been made.

Maestro, beset by preem difficulties, wasn't able to keep the show moving at the usual peppery Latin-American pace.. Still the highspot is the dancing of Los Barrancos, a fast and footloose team that specializes in everything from mambo to jitterbug. Their routines are a trifle on the crude side, but effective. For vocals, Cugat intros a newcomer, Juan Guerrero, who fits in smoothly, but the bulk of the song chores are handled by Abbe Lane, whose voice is not her greatest asset. She's using exactly the same medley given at

Miami Cafe Ops, Hotelmen Unite To Fight Latest Curfew Attempt

Miami, Oct. 28.

Greater Miami hotel, cafe and bar operators were banding together this week to fight latest attempt by reform elements and some politicos to institute a countywide, uniform liquor sales curfew, with a midnight and 2 a.m. weekday limit and all-day Sunday shutdown. Aligned with the ops will be toppers from labor unions connected with the trade.

Move by the reformers stemmed from series of incidents in Goulds, a small town in the county involved in bar brawls and serving of whiskey to minors. Preliminary meeting called by county commissioners to discuss proposals was a stormy one, with postponement following to allow for representation from all concerned. There were no members of either the nitery industry or the larger hotels at the meeting.

Most affected by the proposed law would be the niteries, now operating until 5 a.m. under licenses issued by various cities and towns which make up the greater Miami area. Oddly enough, the idea for the uniform closing hour comes from outside this most heavily populated sector of the county, which includes Miami and Miami Beach as well as Treasure Island, the rapidly building strip of land along the 79th St. causeway connecting the twin cities.

Majority of hotels now must close at 2 a.m. but will still join the fight in the interest of their guests who might like to visit a cafe or lounge during post-midnight hours. There is also the chance that their own hours of operation may eventually be extended.

Also pointed out is fact that main source of income for most residents here comes from tourist spending. With gambling shut down, it is felt newest move will prove a devastating blow to the area economy, with the Miamis tabbed a "closed" town and resultant loss of vacationers to other resorts.

Law, if passed, would have to be approved by the State Legislature. This is tantamount to automatic passage, the custom being to allow each county to run its own affairs.

Jerry Lewis Returns To the Scene of His Soda-Jerking Success

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 28.

Jerry Lewis, in playing the RPI Field House tomorrow (Wed.) with Dean Martin at $4.80 top, returns to the area where he worked as a soda fountaineer for pesos 10 years ago. Publicity stories have spotlighted the fact that the comedian functioned behind the counter at the Averill Park Pharmacy, where "his wisecracks kept the customers in stitches and coming back for more."

Ben Silberg, operator of the suburban drug store, revealed that he had received a letter from Lewis enclosing ducats and expressing a wish to see his ex-boss.

A heavy advance sale for the show is reported. The college arena will have to gross $13,000 to $14,000 for a break-even.

AGVA Conks %ers On Premium Coin

The American Guild of Variety Artists, in a crackdown on club-date agents who fail to pay premiums on insurance, has made a settlement with firm of Kirk & Fay. Latter were put on the union's unfair list because of failure to give an accounting of dates booked by them. AGVA's action was processed through the Entertainment Managers Assn. in New York, which had expelled them at the union's behest.

Following expulsion, K&F brought their books to the union and it was found that agency was in $500 arrears on the premiums. They agreed to pay and have been reinstated.

In another claim, union will process against Johnny Pransky for a sum in excess of $400 representing dates booked by that firm on which no insurance premiums were paid.

The Pransky claim will clear through Artists Representatives Assn. Club-date code between ARA and AGVA is still in effect. Although its code with the union has expired, it has been extended on a week-to-week basis.

The agencies are liable for the $1 per-person-per-engagement accident insurance premium now demanded by AGVA.

Court Rules Chi Cafes Must Repay Sales Tax Refunded Them on Appeal

Chicago, Oct. 28.

Judge Harry Fisher, Cook County circuit court, last week ordered six niteries and lounges to repay $70,952 in sales tax receipts previously refunded to them by the State of Illinois, and the operator of one also to pay back an additional $20,958. Jurist's action carried out an Illinois Supreme Court decision which reversed his 1951 ruling permitting the spots to keep the rebate.

From 1941 to 1948, the various firms paid their taxes into a special protest fund, claiming that they were in the entertainment business rather than the restaurant field, and therefore, in their judgment, exempt from the sales levy.

Former Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett in December, 1948, decreed that they were entitled to a refund. In November, 1949, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled that the cafes were liable for sales tax, but made no decision as to the whether the state had the right to the withheld monies. Judge Fisher then ruled that the clubs were entitled to the funds, but in an appeal to the highest tribunal he was reversed.

Spots and the amount owed are: Blackhawk Restaurant, $61,223; Rhumba Casino (no longer in operation), $5,016; Brass Rail, $1,632; Yankee Doodle Inn, $751; Capitol Lounge, $1,538; Frank Harmon as the Hollywood Show Lounge, $793, and Frand Harmon, $20,958. Similar claims totaling $239,683 are pending against 17 other niteries and hotels.

Slater Trying to Stay In London to Clear His Rep; Commons Holds Debate

London, Oct. 28.

Ralph Slater, who was ordered by the Home Office to quit Britain by last Thursday (23), is still in London. His claim to remain here and vindicate his name following a legal action earlier in the year was raised this week in the House of Commons.

The Home Secretary today (Tues.) refused in the House to extend Slater's story, but further Parliamentary questions are expected tomorrow.

Slater was given an entry permit eight months ago to contest a claim for damages for assault by a girl who was hypnotised by him on the stage four years previously. She blamed Slater for fits of depression and in the original hearing was awarded damages exceeding $3,000. This award was subsequently struck out on appeal and the girl was given leave to apply for a new trial.

In the eight months that Slater has been in Britain he has only been allowed to work eight weeks. In the meantime, the two legal actions have involved him in a claimed personal expenditure of approximately $14,000.

Hotel Statler, L. A.

the Paramount, and ventriloquist Eddy Garson hasn't changed his patter with the south-of-the border dummy, Chico Chico.

It's on the dance side that Cugat more than justifies his choice as the room's opener. The well-stocked library is ideally suited to dancing and the maestro knows how to mix the beats to please all shufflers. Kap.

Steuben's, Boston

Boston, Oct. 26.

Maurice McDermott, Don Dennis, Sinclair & Alda, Stoner & Dennis, Dolly Barr, Tony Bruno Orch (6), Harry Fink Trio; $2.50 minimum.

While there's a world of difference between a pitcher's mound and a featured spot in a nitery show, Red Sox hurler, Maury McDermott, madé the transition with ease, turning in a nifty one-hitter at Steuben's Vienna Room in his first outing. Portside hurler, whose pleasing voice is pegged somewhere between that of a tenor and a baritone, saunters onstage obviously more ill at ease than when facing the Detroit Tigers, but after a few warmup pitches captured his control.

Quipping "I'm certainly happy to be here after my disappointing season" (10-9), guy went on to strike out the side with "Anytime," "Have a Good Time" and "Old Man River." Teaming with emcee Don Dennis, the hurler coasts through the final innings giving out a series of carbons of Johnnie Ray, Ink Spots, etc., that are surprisingly slick. In general, he acquits himself nicely and with a few shows in his record book should find the going easy.

A nifty gesture took place at McDermott's windup when Blossom Seeley and Benny Fields, here for personals with pic, "Somebody Loves Me," walked onstage to offer congrats and welcome him to show biz.

Balance of lineup is up to par, getting off to fast start with sesh of fancy roller skating by cute Dolly Barr. Stoner & Dennis fare okay with a sesh of nonsense, best reaction being from zany impresh of a borscht-flavored square dance. Sinclair & Alda close bill with neat terp sesh enhanced by graceful lifts and twirls. Show is capably emceed by Dennis, who grabs solo spot to warble "Wish You Were Here," "You Were Meant for Me" and an "Oklahoma" medley. Backgrounding is by Tony Bruno who splits customer terping chores with Harry Fink Trio's latino rhythms. Elie.

Hotel Radisson, Mpls.
(FLAME ROOM)

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.

George Gobel, Don McGrane Orch (8); no cover or minimum.

Back for a third time here, comedian George Gobel again exhibits the same friendly, intimate and informal approach and quietly relaxed gabfest style which seem to set neatly in this genteel atmosphere. While his gags and story-studded patter appear to be no great shakes as far as material is concerned and is patterned along familiar lines, he nevertheless succeeds in stirring a steady stream of audience laughter. This is due largely to the rapport he establishes with the customers, the seriousness of the delivery and the timing.

This particular occasion finds Gobel devoting more than three-fourths of his time to a fun-loaded description of his postwar efforts to find employment, etc. He cashed in nicely on these amusing domestic and financial tribulations. He is effective in resurrecting the moss-covered story about the gravedigger who falls in the hole and the drunk who pushes the dirt over him to keep him warm.

Gobel, who also strums a banjo and sings, once more shows his adeptness at hilbilly vocalizing and yodeling. At show caught, however, he did only two such numbers. More exercise of the pipes and less monolog might be in order.

Don McGrane is a smooth emcee and he and his orch fill the bill for Gobel and customer stepping. Rees.

(PEACOCK COURT)

San Francisco, Oct. 22.

Beatrice Kay, Del Courtney Orch (12); $2 cover.

Beatrice Kay, pitching the mauve era, has a slice of the local following that is convinced she can do no wrong. They like everything she does and the way she does it. And that includes her mugging, her hoke and the gravel voice curves she throws as part of her songfest. They also like her assortment of tunes, mostly of the '90s vintage, and old time stagecraft to match.

Miss Kay had it all her own way at the opener with her special segment of fans turning out to laud her. It's all very okay for her to boast "nobody sleeps when Kay sings," but there are enough vivants around who appreciate her basic thrushing talents, when she sends songs down the middle, to warrant her soft-pedaling some of calliope pressure if for no other reason than variety in pacing.

When she settles down momentarily from her steam-pressure delivery to such items as "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "I Don't Care," there is nothing to top her. "Won't You Come Home" and "Oceana Roll" are almost equally solid. She has great warmth, a deep sense of the nostalgic and puts over a song with feeling and sincerity. And she's show-wise to the hilt. But her stunting of Johnnie Ray's crying towel routine, in which she all but mops the floor with herself, may leave the boys from the stockyards in stitches but it misses with the check-payers who can get the idea without being bopped in the head with a sledgehammer. "Man in the Little White Coat" is another example of her penchant, plus some excessive kittenishness, for a girl who's been around, of laying it on the line with a vengeance.

Miss Kay rides the range with a few specials such as "Mention My Name" and a shortie "This Is It," which has punch and point, but mostly she scores with such oldies as "You Made Me What I Am Today," "Rastus Brown," "Only a Girl in a Guilded Cage," et al. In her 50-minute opener stand she also tossed in two versions of "Wild About Harry," which called up measured applause and some community singing.

Opening-nighters had a choice of either throwing away their hearing aids or putting on their earmuffs, depending on the ages of the ringsiders. There's no doubt that Miss Kay means to be heard. She is. She is also a vibrant, talented performer notwithstanding.

Music by Del Courtney's troupe, both for showback and terping, is its usual superior standard. Ted.

Bellevue Casino, Mont'l

Montreal, Oct. 21.

Maurice Colleano & Co. (4), Carla & Fernando Dancers (6), Rosales Sisters (2), Will & Gladys Ahearn, Gloria Ware, Charles Danford, Jeanne Jones & Ernest Richman, Casino Lovelies (10), Bix Belair Orch (11), Buddy Clayton Quartet with Ann Somers; $1 admission.

Sparked by the best Madame Kamarova productions to date, the current showcase at Harry Holmok's Bellevue Casino is socko throughout.

Layout gets off to a fast and colorful start with a free interpretation of the "Frankie & Johnny" classic which features the singing of attractive Gloria Ware and the hoofing of Jeanne Jones & Ernest Richman (New Acts). Routining is sharp and the pony line never looked better.

A switch to the visual side shows off the Rosales Sisters, two stocky Mexican pole balancers in a series of nimble acrobatics to nice reception. Will & Gladys Ahearn and their lariat spinning, gab and dance stanzas are a novelty, but a dubious commodity in this big room. Ahearn twirls a mean rope but his patter, sometimes near and sometimes away from the mike, is only good for ringsiders. When he drops the chatter and goes into a modified ballroom routine with partner while handling the lariat, attention is solid and plaudits heavy.

The Carla & Fernando Dancers (New Acts) give show a lift at halfway mark with their Spanish dancing in the "Night in Seville" production, which fronts baritone Charles Danford in "Granada," and later they have a spot of their own.

Headliner, or course, is Maurice Colleano, making his second appearance in this oversized saloon. Guy could be a permanent fixture judging from the plaudits he picks up every night. As foils for his wild, unexpected humor, Colleano has added a pert little girl dancer and two males. Comedy is broad in the best music-hall manner; act includes a teeterboard session; straight burley gimmicks with femme part of act, and winds up with a crowd-pleasing ballet sequence with Colleano in a wig, short skirt and falsies.

Bix Belair batons a steady background for all offerings and the Clayton quartet with chirper Ann Somers take interlude stanzas. Newt.

Montmartre, N. Y.

Hamish Menzies, Armando Romeo, Joan Bishop; $2.50, $3 minimums.

Eleanore Moore, who presided over an eastside intimer, Eleanore's, until a few months ago, got back on the nitery scene with takeover of a spot previously known as the Nightcap. Prior to that, it was a straight eatery, Maxim's. Until a short time ago, it was known by the phonetic title of Momarte, but recently was given the correct appellation, Montmartre.

No matter what name it operates under, it's a restful and entertaining cafe. Current bill is expertly designed to provide variety.

Of necessity, the fare has to be along vocal and instrumental lines. Consequently, a variety is obtained with Hamish Menizes, who has a sophisticated song mien; Armando Romeo, who holds forth on a romantic note, and Joan Bishop, a pleasant pianist.

Menzies has been circuiting various intimeries and continues as a capable entertainer. He bats out a wide variety of tunes that merit attention. Menzies purveys many of his own piano accomps, including "Bluebird." He also does a batch of songs from his native Scotland and gets off to a good mitt.

Miss Bishop provides a pleasant piano interlude. There are no fancy variations to her ivorying; it's just a nice background for conversation, and if there's a lull in the ya-ta-ta, she can hold the ear nicely. Romeo is under New Acts. Jose.

Colony & Astor, London

London, Oct. 21.

The Deep River Boys (5), Felix King, Don Carlos and Sid Philips orchs.; Colony: $5.50; Astor: $3 minimum until 11, $3 cover thereafter.

Opening of the Deep River Boys at these adjacent Berkeley Square cafes coincided with the official announcement of their selection for the Royal Command variety performance. The news will undoubtedly hypo biz. Not that there was much scope for extra trade on their first night at the Colony, which was doing almost capacity.

Deep River Boys have played cafe dates in London before, but their performance has rarely been so immaculate. Each number is given the hallmark of a special production. Fancy arrangements and their polished harmony style supply an extra zing to the entire act. Routine is adroitly balanced with planned contrasts in material and style. Standards like "Shadrack," "Old Man River" and "Water Boy" are blended with "Kiss of Fire" and "Walkin' My Baby Back Home." A new British tune, "Only Fascination," which they've just recorded, is given a strong plug in the program.

While four of the boys concentrate on the vocals, the fifth is at the keyboard. Myro.

Bon Soir, N. Y.

Mae Barnes, Ross & West, Tony & Eddie, Jimmie Daniels, Norene Tate, 3 Flames $3.50; minimum.

Although the Bon Soir, Greenwich Village cellar spot, is about 40 blocks south of New York's nitery belt, it's been picking up a hefty uptown mob via its socko intimery packages. Spot concentrates on money's-worth entertainment in informal surroundings, and it's paying off. This layout is one of its best.

Bon Soir perennials Mae Barnes, Jimmie Daniels, Norene Tate and the Three Flames are pleasers despite their longevity. Miss Barnes is the big wheel here and she deserves the appelation. She wraps up tablers with her energy-packed songalog. She sells such items as "Marie," "What's the Use of Getting Sober," "Nobody's Sweetheart," "Laziest Gal in Town," "Old Man Mose," "What Will the Neighbors Say" and "Summertime," in a style that pleases the ear and tickles the risibilities.

Jimmie Daniels, who warbles and emcees, is a pleasant crooner who works best on the rhythm numbers. Standouts are "This Can't Be Love" and "Down With Love." Slower items such as "I Can't Get Started" and "September Song" miss. Miss Tate, another singer, clicks with "All of a Sudden My Heart Sings," "Always True to You in My Fashion," "I Cried for You" and "Tenderly." It's a smash set.

Interspersed between the songalogs are the click comedics of (Mickey) Ross & (Bernie) West and the zany panto-disk turn of Tony (Benson) & Eddie (Hodges). Ross & West are slick satirists who build big yocks from material which is always clever and fresh. Parodies of stock screen situations, in sketch form, are sharply etched and win strong appreciation. Also good for top reception is characterization of femme shopper and department store floorwalker. All sketches are well constructed and work into sock blackout.

Tony & Eddie also are winners

Powerhouse Pacts

Paverhouse Pacts

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.

Latin Casino, flagship of the town's niteries, is booked solid to Christmas. Spot kicked off its second full season under management of Dave Dushoff and Dallas Gerson with Frank Sinatra, who played to 10 days of the heaviest sustained business the spot has ever enjoyed. Payoff bookings and heavy convention trade in town has gotton L. C. through September and October, to face its best season in recent years.

Frank Fontaine and DeCastro Sisters are current headliners. Joe E. Lewis opens Thursday (30), to be followed by Georgia Gibbs and Al Bernie, Nov. 6.

Other bookings include Robert Q. Lewis and the Billy Williams Quartet, Nov. 13; Rose Marie and Blackburn Twins, Nov. 20; Will Mastin Trio with Sammy Davis, Jr., two weeks starting Nov. 27; Frank Stevens, Hal LeRoy, and Noonan & Marshall, Dec. 11, and Duke Mitchell & Sam Petrillo, Dec. 18. Frankie Laine has been set for the week of Jan. 29.

Kirby Stone's Engler In Ottawa Hospital

Ottawa, Oct. 28.

Art Engler, musicomic featured as "Cow Eyes" with the Kirby Stone Quintet, is in Civic Hospital here for long stretch with serious injuries sustained in car collision. His injuries, acquired early in a Gatineau Country Club booking with the Stone crew, include a broken nose and leg and serious internal damage.

Quintet completed date with hurried acquisition of femme canary Bobby Martin, also on Gatineau bill.

Addison (Jack) Fowler, ex-Fowler & Tamara, ballroomologists, recovering from a heart attack which had him hospitalized for a spell. With his recent bride, Jane Fowler, they operate the Arthur Murray dance studio in Providence.

Exotic Dancer, Mex Hit, Began as Calif. Skater

Mexico City, Oct. 21.

Top current nitery hit is Tongolele (Yolando Harrington) of Oakland, Calif. This girl came here as a chorine with "Holiday on Ice" in 1948, then turned exotic dancer and became a name in vaude and revue at the Rumba Casino.

Nicholas Bros., clicko at the spot last spring, are doing well as co-topliners with Tongolele.

SRO 25G IN DETROIT FOR NAT-SARAH-STAN

Detroit, Oct. 28.

The 5,045-seat Fox Theatre here grossed a sizzling $25,000 after taxes in two shows Sunday (26) with the Nat (King) Cole-Sarah Vaughan-Stan Kenton orch package. House, scaled at $1.80 to $3.60, had legal limit of standees at each show. No films were shown that day.

Unit generated so much heat locally that an estimated 15,000 were turned away, according to Dave Idzal, house manager. Tickets were scalped for as much as $6 each. Police were called in to break up fights. Some also attempted to steal tickets. Many with ducats couldn't get into the theatre for the 9 p.m. show, which finally started after 10 p.m. Police worked for an hour untangling the resulting traffic jam on Detroit's main stem.

Miami's 1st Major Pact Puts Johnnie in Clover

First major Florida booking has been completed. Johnnie Ray has been signed for the Clover Club, Miami. Weeper has been pacted for two weeks and three days starting Jan. 16. He'll play this date following a stand at the Capitol Theatre, N. Y. Ray will come back to New York later to play the Copacabana, and may follow that with a stand at the Palladium, London.

The Clover Club deal has been in the works for some time, but was consummated only last week.

Probe Origin of Fires At Atlantic City's Torch

Atlantic City, Oct. 28.

Torch club, midtown hot spot which did most of its business via summer trade, was gutted by a series of fires here Friday (24). Final blaze, which started late in the afternoon, did most damage. Origin of fire is undetermined and is being probed by police.

Building is owned by Mrs. Regina Kanter of nearby Ventnor and is operated by Robert Raymond. Spot had used combos and small units. No estimate was made of the loss.

U.S. FILES 952G LIENS VS. TOLEDO AMUS. OPS

Toledo, Oct. 28.

Tax liens of $951,902 were filed last week (24) in U. S. District Court here against Louis W. Greiner, Toledo; his wife, Mary E. Greiner, transferee; and the Indian Lake Amusement Co., Russels Point, O. The liens charged Greiner with owing income tax, interest and penalties totaling $478,437 for 1942 through 1947. The lien against his wife totaled $221,427 in allegedly unpaid taxes, interest and penalties for 1943 through 1946, and that against the amusement company, $252,038, in allegedly unpaid taxes and interest.

During Prohibition days, Greiner operated the Green Mill nitery in downtown Toledo, as well as other spots, including the Chateau La France and the Trianon Ballroom. He was managing director of Toledo's first Aquarama in 1947.

Camp Shows' Press Dip

USO-Camp Shows' publicity department has been pared down with the resignation of Jim McGuinn who headed the press staff, last week. He won't be replaced at this time.

New departmental format calls for the remainder of the staff to concentrate on press books. James Sauter, CS prexy, and Lawrence Phillips, exec veepee, will supervise individual publicity undertakings.

'Talent, Talent, Where Can We Get Some Talent?'—K.C.'s Down-Bleat

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

"Talent, talent, where can we get some talent?" That's the cry of the band and vaude-booker today. Offices in the area are stymied by lack of performers and musicians, according to a survey here.

Several factors are behind the shortage. One consideration is that some performers don't want to move around. They seem to be preferring the more "normal" pattern of settling down. This works out fairly well for the big cities, where talent is often barely sufficient to satisfy current demands. But it's tough on the small towns and way stations where the acts don't care to go unless they get what the bookers call "exorbitant money." And bookers say the money that it requires to get an act to move around just isn't generally available. A spot here and there perhaps, but too few and far between.

The situation was described as "the worst I've ever seen" by John Sandusky, head of Midland Attractions here, who's been around a considerable time in the biz. The shortage extends pretty much up and down the talent roster, including singles, trios, small musical units, as well as name bands, Sandusky points out.

As a case in point, seeking a list of name orchs from one of the bigger offices to submit for a one-nighter nearby early in December, Sandusky got one band offered. It was a price where the name and coin didn't match up too well, he commented.

It's not that there are a lot of bands working steadily. Rather it's that there are just a few orchs available, scarcely enough to supply the demand.

Situation veers into other lines of talent. Shortage helps account for trend of hotel rooms, lounges and fancier saloons to hold onto their musical units or acts for longer periods. Engagements of six months and longer are not unusual nowadays, and due to shortage of good replacements trend appears to be for longer and longer dates with the trios, quartets and small combos. This is okay for those who are already working, but it leaves nothing for developing new clients and taking care of more or less normal expansion.

Conversely, the field is wide open to any newcomers who want to work and have something to offer. A new duo here recently came right out of college and already is working steadily in niteries. But the incident is not typical for there are not many new acts showing up. At least not around these parts.

MAP INT'L EXPO. FOR LAS VEGAS

Las Vegas, Oct. 28.

This town will be the scene of a giant international exposition if the William Morris Agency has its way. Abe Lastfogel, agency topper; Morris Stoller, comptroller of the Coast branch, and George Wood and Sol Shapiro, of the home office, have been holding conferences with Las Vegas hotel operators to pave the way for the big project, with exhibs invited from all over the world.

In case there is an agreement, the exposition would be sponsored by the hotels, with Lastfogel supervising the operation.

Hotels are wondering if it is feasible to launch a worldwide exposition at this time. Alternative is to make it a regional or a national affair and let it grow over a period of years.

here. Their panto on disking of "Baby It's Cold Outside," "Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie" (Bing Crosby and Mary Martin etching) and an offbeat waxing of a burlesque stripper belting out a torrid number are surefire laugh-getters. Follow with panto of Mary Martin-Ezio Pinza working through "Some Enchanted Evening." Although well conceived, it doesn't lend itself to their ribbing technique. Close with a boffo interpretation of a French version of "Jezebel." It's done with strange-sounding disks and tricky lighting and sends them off to ovation.

Three Flames work the gaps and back the acts with class. Gros.

Hotel Nicollet, Mpls.

(MINN. TERRACE)

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.

Mary McCarty (2), Cecil Golly Orch (10) with Mildred Stanley; no cover or minimum.

This is singing comedienne Mary McCarty's third Minneapolis cafe appearance, but first in this smart bistro, her others having been in the equally tony Hotel Radisson Flame Room. It finds her in fine fun fettle. Stimulating the usual enthusiasm, her engagement seems certain to score.

As per previous visits, material and performance merit equal bows. It's a laughter-filled song session that's surefire. Her original numbers from her legit roles prove clicko via her brisk, zestful approach and top-drawer delivery. Amusing, satirically tinged lyrics get a smart workout.

Paradoxically, there's exuberance and near-boisterousness on the one hand and restraint on the other in her additional presentations. These include the "sex sponsored" radio "Lonesome Girl," the singer with the over-arranged song scores, the hillbilly young lady and the recital of "the little things" which mean so much to her. They bear repetition.

Miss McCarty's accompanist, Bob Reynolds, does yeoman service, and the Cecil Golly orch with vocalist Mildred Stanley, fixtures here, come through for her and customer dancing flawlessly. Rees.

Embassy Club, London

London, Oct. 15.

"Angel's Aces," produced by Don Angel, with Stella Courtney, Bryan Blackburn, Margaret Tabersham, Eileen Hennessey, Don Carlos Samba Band, Billy Sproud Orch.; lyrics, Bryan Blackburn; accompanist, Ernest Wampola; $4.25 minimum.

"Angel's Aces" is a British package show which for the last three years has been touring Army camps in the U. S. zone of Germany. This was their first performance in London and the production was pulled after opening night to undergo a complete rewrite. It may be given another chance when this chore has been finished.

The small company of artists has a measure of talent and versatility and the sole male performer has potentialities above the average; but they are all bogged down by outmoded patter and by gags that were far from uproarious when they were first used. Many of the jokes just deteriorated through age and were greeted by a stony response from the customers.

Little attempt had apparently been made to intro new tunes and almost complete reliance is placed on parodies from some of the current hit shows. The lyrics are only pale reflections of the originals.

One or two of the production numbers have merit but the entire show lacks pace and is overlong. Almost an hour of indifferent material is tough for nitery customers to swallow. Myro.

Sans Souci, Miami B'ch

Miami Beach, Oct. 28.

Arthur Blake, Ann Herman Dancers, Sacasas Orch; $2 minimum weekends.

The Blue Sails Room is probably the most popular among the hotel cafes. Credit a shrewd booking policy which concentrates on varying types of acts from week to week. In most cases, talent booked do more than satisfactory business and in some, pack them in nightly with holdover resulting. Typical is Arthur Blake, current.

Blake has been setting records for the room with turnaway biz usually the rule. This is a return engagement for him and he limns his biting carbons of the toppers in show biz and other fields with a devastatingly satirical approach that holds the aud throughout. Added impact is obtained via smart lines utilized.

Currently there's his sock Cyrano as done by Jose Ferrer; the howler on Orson Welles casting a new pic, "Ponce de Leon and the Nine Virgins"; the Gloria Swanson, startling in the makeup and voice impresh; Bette Davis, Jimmy Stewart, and for the topper, Tallulah. Encores with Eleanor Roosevelt for a wrapup. Guy is on for 50 minutes and could easily stay longer.

Ann Herman's dancers essay Latino ideas to good effect in warmup spot. Sacasas and his orch are highly adept at showbacking and dansapation. Lary.

El Rancho, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Oct. 22.

Lili St. Cyr, Russell Nype, Joel Grey, Jerry Pedersen, El Rancho Girls (8), Ted Fio Rito Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Unusual top trio here offers plenty of reach for revelers wishing entertainment to ease the losing of their loot. Implication of Lili St. Cyr's name is enough to fill rooms every night for the next couple of weeks.

The St. Cyr return to Las Vegas was fanfared before her opening last Wednesday (15) by announcement via the press that she had paid her $250 fine to the District Attorney. This was imposed one year ago, when the amply curved stripteuse divested herself of one too many rosebuds while the head minion of local county law was in the house. Deferred on the court calendar until the return of the all too prodigal, case of St. Cyr vs. County of Clark fed fuel to publicity fires.

District Attorney Foley will not have to peer at all close this trip. The femme has gone chichi, with special setting and staging by interior designer Tom Douglas. Special table folders describe the St. Cyr gowns as creations by Simonetti Visconti of Rome, hats by Jose Fernandez of Madrid, and her "famous" collection of jewels in new settings by Boucheron of Paris.

Thus, in a somewhat international aura, she dresses, undresses, postulates before a portrait of a handsome guy. She hardly divests herself of one gorgeous gown, with different furpiece, before her colored maid brings in another to exhibit. For a brief spell, she climbs into her plastic tub, complete with mechanically blown bubbles, and makes like some splashing. But gone are the days, alas, when the St. Cyr strip was bouncy and gay. Paralleling perhaps the career of Gypola, she now puts it on instead of taking it off. Specially constructed set by Douglas is a knockout.

Russell Nype is pretty far out of his element in this gamblers' haven. He looks a trifle ill at ease while pouring out some showtunes and special lyrics. Tall, crewcut, bespectacled warbler from Broadway's "Call Me Madam" tenorizes "Lovely Day Today" and "I Have Dreamed," before winning enthusiasm. With "Zip Doo Da," and different set of verbiage in follow-up song, he quickens interest noticeably. Casually dragging a bar stool onstage, Nype proceeds to frame "I Wonder Why," "World is Mine," and the ballad which clinched "Madam" producers at his Imperial Theatre audition, "Over the Rainbow." Quickie "Ain't We Got Fun" sends him into the wings followed by appreciative mitting!

Joel Grey is a holdover from prior casement, and a definite adjunct to current cycle. Young comic goes like lightning in shortened term, socking over his top special, "Do You Remember." Inserts new biz in "Birth of the Blues," and alongside of life-size photo blowup of Betty Grable, serenades "Dear Miss Grable" for big windup. Grey takes over emcee chores throughout and fills that role neatly. Will.

No Cafe Crix, But Pub-Ad Push SRO's Hildy in Ill.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 28.

Despite the fact that there are no regular cafe reviewers on local dailies, Hildegarde's appearance at the Lake Club here got sufficient coverage to compensate for that void. A huge ad campaign together with an integrated publicity drive paid off in SRO at the spot.

Unusual was the signed column by V. Y. Dallman, editor of the Illinois State Register, which wound up with a specially written poem for the chantoosey. Singer shifts to the Claridge Hotel, Memphis, tomorrow (Wed.) night.

Ankara, Pitt, Renews Geo. Arnold for Icers

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.

Click of George Arnold-produced ice shows at Ankara, highway nitery about 12 miles from downtown, has prompted management to renew its option on Arnold until Jan. 3. His skating revues opened in mid-April and have done consistently well at big cafe on the outskirts. Arnold also stars in them and puts on a new edition, with frequent cast changes, every month.

Ankara plans to go in for regulation floor entertainment briefly after first of year, before shutting down to complete remodeling job that will include installation of its own rink, with Arnold already inked to return next spring.

Nirska Waves Pay Writ At Sally Rand in Tex.

Dallas, Oct. 28.

Some $830 of Sally Rand's gate receipts from her State Fair of Texas show has been tied up by a writ of attachment. Miss Rand got the writ quashed but the plaintiff's lawyer promptly filed a garnishment suit on the coin, which is being held by local constables.

Plaintiff is M. Nirska ("Butterfly Dance"), who says that Miss Rand had lured her to Texas under false pretenses and then refused to pay all her contracted wages.

Nirska, as she prefers to be called, stated that Miss Rand implied that her dance was to be a theatre-in-the-round production but instead was "a striptease show."

After eight days, she said Miss Rand's partner, Ray Marsh Brydon, paid her $971 and fired her. Nirska sued for $797.70 which she said represented the balance of the $1,700 contract price, plus incidental expenses.

Ralph Slater

Office advised Slater that the girl who brought the original action was not claiming her right to a new trial. The hypnotist, however, wants to institute an action himself in order that his professional integrity and reputation may be cleared. The Home Office refused an extension for this purpose.

Artist himself has received no explanation of the official attitude nor has there been any objection to his working here by the artist unions. The normal procedure with foreign artists is that they are allowed to work 26 weeks in any one year subject to labor permits being approved. Slater is pressing for an explanation why this custom has not been exercised in his case.

In behind-the-scenes moves currently taking place, the Home Office is being urged to relax its bar and to pave the way for Slater to be permitted to work here to earn sufficient money to meet the costs of his new lawsuit.

MCA Guest Shots Set by Act Dept.

Music Corp. of America's placements of guest talent in radio and television have been put under supervision of the act and band department. No changes of personnel are involved except that the sector now will be coordinated by veepee Larry Barnett instead of being under supervision of radio and tele division heads.

Theory behind this move is that the act men are more familiar with a performer's work than are the percenters in the mechanical medium. It's also felt that with act operatives controlling guest shots, a performer's time can be more readily filled in since by the new method, all avenues of work can be more completely explored.

Omaha Manager's Vaude Lament: Novelty Units

Omaha, Oct. 28.

Bill Miskell, district manager of Tristates, planed into New York Saturday (18) to huddle with bookers in hopes of hatching new vaude shows.

Miskell yearns for the days of the old Marcus show and novelty units. He believes a swim troupe, built around channel crosser Florence Chadwick and possibly Johnny Weissmuller, would be a winner. And he claims a small ice show, similar to those playing hotel dates, would cash in on a 80-60-25 scale to the customer who can't cough up the $1.50 minimum that "Hollywood Ice Revue" and "Ice Capades" demand at Ak-Sar-Ben here.

Miskell's Orpheum, once the midwest's No. 1 vaude showcase, has practically blacked out on the stage. Only two orch units, Pee-Wee King and Tiny Hill, were booked the entire season last year. King had poor biz and Hill was "just a little better than fair," according to Miskell.

"I'm interested in any stage show and Omaha is ripe for one," Miskell said before leaving.

Omaha's Statewide Plugs For 'H'wood Ice Revue'

Omaha, Oct. 28.

Ak-Sar-Ben rink manager Harry Fowler is starting heavy out-of-town promotion for "Hollywood Ice Revue," set here for Nov. 5-12.

Fowler, who figures outstaters account for better than 60% of audiences, has planted paid ads, mats and pix in 200 state papers and has bought heavy radio time.

The icer's owner, Arthur M. Wirtz, planed in last week to confer with Fowler and publicity chief Bernie Kelley .

ST. PAUL SEZ 'ME TOO' TO MPLS.' NAME SKEDS

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

A St. Paul nitery is adopting, for the first time, a policy of booking top acts "as frequently as possible." It's the Colony, which has comedian Billy Devroe currently after playing Jerry Murad's Harmonicats. Latter are booked for an early return. Also pencilled in are pianist Jan August and singer Bill Lawrence.

With both the Hotel Nicollet and Hotel Radisson using name acts of varying strength currently too, despite the former's previous announcement that it only would go for the bigger luminaries and the latter's earlier indecision, the after-dark entertainment outlook in the Twin Cities is improving.

Foster to U.S. to Seek Names for Brit. Vaude

Glasgow, Oct. 21.

Harry Foster, London vaude agent, here for opening of Betty Hutton at Empire vaudery, planes to the U. S. next week to start negotiations for the 1953 crop of American variety stars in Britain. It's his 77th trip to the States.

Names mentioned here as likely U. S. visitors are Carmen Miranda, Billy Daniels and Kay Starr. Expected at least two of these would play a Glasgow date.

Spitalny K. C. Date

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

First pic house stageshow here in many months will open at the Missouri Theatre Nov. 7 for a week. Phil Spitalny brings his all-girl orch in for the session, their first stop in town in a film house in years. The one-week shot is likely to be the only vaude here this fall.

In the past, the house has had occasional stage units, and for a time had them frequently when circuits were operating. Dearth of attractions has kept the stage dark for over a year, however.

Lawrence Lehman, manager, said the unit will play with "Golden Hawk" as screen fare. The combo probably will go at advance prices, but exact scale hasn't been set as yet. Regular top for the house's usual dual bill policy is 75c. Other vaude bills have played at 85c.

Carman, Philly, Sets Up Permanent Revue Format In Return to Stage Fare

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.

Carman Theatre, big North Philly vaudfilmer formerly owned by Sam Stiefel and now operated by the Greenfield chain, returned to live show fare (24) with presentation bill headed by Duke Mitchell & Sammy Petrillo, comedy duo who are also featured in house's pic, "Bela Lugosi Meets a Brooklyn Gorilla."

Carman is adopting a revue format, with a line of eight, and several cast fixtures—singer, comedian, straightman, etc. to be held over for each show. Headliners and lead supporting acts change weekly.

Opening bill offers in addition to Mitchell & Petrillo, the dance team of Bobby Joyce & Ginger, Harry Savoy and Charles Stewart, comedy; John Craford, vocalist, and Meptine of the Sea, dance specialty performed in a water tank. Tony Bavaar is the headliner for the second show, Oct. 31, and Billy Gilbert is set for Nov. 7.

Jon Lake heads pit crew of eight. Harry Biben office, Philly, is booking.

Betty Hutton Scores On Preem in Glasgow

Glasgow, Oct. 21.

Betty Hutton received a great reception when she topped a vaude bill at Empire Theatre here last night (20). Star entertained for 55 minutes, being backed by the Skylarks and 15-piece orch under baton of Woolf Phillips. At preem show opening night, she had microphone trouble, battling successfully against a whirring electrical noise from the theatre's amplifying system.

Prices were upped for visit, top being doubled to $1.60. Despite this, biz is capacity, with many turned away and maximum number of standees.

Comedienne has vaude dates at Manchester, Birmingham, Liverpool and Dublin after her run here. She plans an eight-week vaude tour of the U. S. after Xmas before starting her new pic.

Planing in from London, she received big street reception from teenagers, who stood in rain and darkness outside her hotel chanting, "We want Betty."

MIMI BENZELL RESUMES WITH TV, OTHER DATES

Songstress Mimi Benzell, in retirement the past few months, resumes her career this week with a private-party date, then returns to New York for Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" (CBS-TV) Nov. 9.

Following the Nov. 9 date, Miss Benzell goes to Los Angeles for NBC radio appearances with Gordon MacRae on "The Railroad Hour," Nov. 24 and Dec. 8. December and January dates are still being filled in, with a one-night show in Pittsburgh's Syria Mosque auditorium set for Dec. 14. A concert with Met opera tenor Richard Tucker in Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 17 will be followed by another trip west, with a headline two-week stint set for the Thunderbird, Las Vegas, commencing Jan. 22. Miss Benzell took time over the summer to await her first child, which she lost at birth.

St. Paul Mayor Hot On Trail of Flame

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

St. Paul Mayor John E. Daubney has moved to close the St. Paul Flame, a leading Twin Cities nitery which plays occasional names, by supplying the city council with additional documents relating to the spot's conviction last February for selling liquor to minors. He requested a new recommendation in the matter.

After the Flame's owner and a bartender had been convicted of making the sales, the council revoked its license, but the shuttering was avoided, temporarily at least, when an appeal was taken to the State Supreme Court, where it is pending.

The Flame was one of five niteries charged at the time with sales to minors following a roundup of juvenile gangsters, but only in its case was there a conviction.

In defeating the incumbent at the election this year, Mayor Daubney made the matter of liquor sales to minors one of his campaign issues.

Gayety, Toledo, Auction For Govt. Tax Liens

Toledo, Oct. 28.

Gayety Theatre, here, will be sold at public auction Nov. 3, to satisfy internal revenue bureau liens against the owner, Jack H. Rubens. Sale will include land, building and fixtures.

The bureau also announced a public auction of a 1951 auto owned by Rubens, who with his partners, Edward, a son, and Mrs. Pearl Irons, were named defendants in a lien filed Aug. 27. They were accused of owing the Government $21,883 in admission and other taxes, penalties and interest during the period March, 1951, to June, 1952. A separate lien charges Rubens and his wife, Tillie, with owing $1,772 in 1952 income tax, penalty and interest.

October 9, 1952

Dear Miss Dare:

Upon completion of your engagement in my show "Silk and Spice" at the Holiday Theater, Broadway and 47th Street, New York City, it is indeed a pleasure to inform you that your work is outstanding. It elicited favorable comment and caused a decided increase in patronage. An interesting note is the fact the World Series was being played at that time, which usually is detrimental to New York theater attendance.

I am looking forward with pleasure to your return engagement on November 4th, 1952, as the feature attraction of my show. In anticipation of a mutually successful association, I remain

House Reviews

Paramount, N. Y.

Duke Ellington Orch (14) with Betty Roche; The Ravens (4), Howell & Bowser, Bunny Briggs. "Springfield Rifle" (WB), reviewed in VARIETY Oct. 1, '52.

Paramount Theatre, which books all-Negro bills from time to time, again has such a layout for its current session. Headed by Duke Ellington, the one-hour show adds up to tasty entertainment seasoned with ample song, comedy and hoofing.

Ellington's combo, comprising three rhythm, six brass and five reed, gets things away to a lively start with a hot instrumental. Songstress Betty Roche follows with a plaintive "All of Me." But the vet batoner-composer, who's observing his 25th year in show biz, really moves into the groove with a sock medley of his hits of yesteryear.

Group of Ellington standards includes such numbers as "Mood Indigo," "Sophisticated Lady," "Caravan" and "Solitude." Arrangements are sharp and serve to blend the medley into a pleasant and melodic theme. Various sidemen are also worked in for individual solos. Perhaps as a change of pace, drummer Louis Bellson later contribs a noisy though expert bit on his gear tagged "Skin Deep."

The Ravens, a male harmony quartet who record for Mercury, do five tunes to score handily with an enthusiastic audience. On such numbers as "Begin the Beguine," "You Belong to Me" and "Whiffenpoof Song," the lads display a wealth of trick vocal effects. Foursome has shown steady improvement in recent months and is one of the top vocal outfits in the rhythm & blues field.

Howell & Bowser hold up well in the comedy slot despite reliance on old material. Opener in which Howell tenors "Red Sails in the Sunset" self-accompanied on a fiddle has been their standard teeoff for years. Portly team, however, has a fine line of patter which achieves a warm reception from stubholders.

Bill is rounded out by hoofer Bunny Briggs. He's been around the vaude scene for several years with a neat repertoire of varying steps. Following a fair vocal of "It's a Good Day," he dishes out slick footwork composed of fresh and original routines. An extra fillip is the piano accomp by Ellington himself. Gilb.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, Oct. 21.

Betty Hutton with the Skylarks (5), Woolf Phillips Orch, Saveen, Louise & Dogs, Laurie Watson, El Granadas & Peter (3), Newman Twins, Bobby Dowds Orch.

Betty Hutton, making her first appearance in Scotland, is a wow. With vast exuberance, she captivates stubholders in a 50-minute act, giving out with all she's got. Her zany antics go down big, establishing her as the best U.S. performer to play this date since Danny Kaye.

Star compensates in herself for a very average support bill. At preem show caught, she ran into microphone trouble, one loudspeaker at front stalls section setting up opposition in continuous fashion throughout her act. Like the good trouper she is, singer-comedienne carried valiantly on with her act, though obviously annoyed by unnecessary interference.

In songs and comedy, she is supported in slick style by the harmonizing vocalists from America, the Skylarks. They are to her what the Dunhills are to Kaye.

After number from "Annie Get Your Gun," Miss Hutton gives preview of songs from her latest pic, "Somebody Loves Me," scoring socko in "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans" and "Dixie Dreams." Latter she warbles in black wig which most becomes her as contrast to her own fair appearance. As per her act at the Palace, N.Y., she tells the story of Blossom Seeley and asks pewholders to imagine they're back in 1924, watching Miss Seeley at opening night of "Ziegfeld Follies." Then she does the Charleston, rousing solid yocks. She's accompanied in this zany routine by the Skylarks.

Many quick changes of costume are demanded, mainly at side of stage. This variety of wardrobe is a most attractive feature of her act. She's ably backed by Woolf Phillips (from the London Palladium) and a special 16-piece orch.

Rest of bill is below average, obviously accounted for by big coin paid Miss Hutton for her lengthy stint. Skylarks (three men, two gals), do their own polished act, using gestures and groupings to smash effect in their vocals. Quintet reflects much intensive rehearsing. They receive warm mitting for sensitive interpretation of "Danny Boy," and also give out with "St. Louis Blues" and "Walkin' My Baby Back Home."

Saveen, British vent, and a firm fave in vaude here, gives much-needed entertainment value to the first segment, using bright selection of dolls and a live pooch as balance to a dummy canine (see New Acts).

Laurie Watson, using his head alone atop puppet-style body in a Punch & Judy frame, garners hardly a titter with his difficult-to-hear North of England accent and n.s.g. patter. Newman Twins in a strongman balancing, El Granadas & Peter in gaucho specialty with ropes, whips and unicycle, and Louise with her dogs and pony round off the bill.

Bobby Dowds directs the Empire house orch in forepart, vacating the pit stand with his boys in second half to make way for ace batoner Woolf Phillips and his crew. Gord.

Holiday, N. Y.

Mara Gaye, Christian & LaMarr, Wallace & Gail, Larry Weeks, Sarita, Jack Diamond, Mandy Kaye, Mlle. Francois, Jimmy Smith, Line (12); "Captain Blackjack" (Indie) reviewed in VARIETY Jan. 31, '51.

The Holiday Theatre is still inching into burlesque. Right now it's at the stage wherein the shows can be termed burley with inhibitions, a sort of modified minsky. And even if the girls are frustrated by fear of what City Hall may do, the peasantry is giving this house a fairly good ride. Business seems on the prosperous side. At least the theatre seems to be paying off at this point by promising a lot and giving as much as the law allows.

Producer Michael Rose has apparently hit on a formula that can successfully compete with Union City's Hudson Theatre, N. J., the only full-fledged burlesque available in this area. Rose is after name strippers and is holding onto Mandy Kaye and Jack Diamond for the comedy, throws in several vaude turns and makes with an abundant display of epidermis. It adds up to a lusty bit of entertainment that attracts predominantly male audiences.

The Kaye-Diamond efforts are in the old burlesque tradition. They're vets at this type of sketch, and perform expertly. They utilize girls from the house line for assists and they hit a healthy quota of laughs. Some of the lines are deeply indigo, but the audience seems to have a good time.

The femme contingent is headed by Mara Gaye, who makes with the skin stuff at the outset of her act and winds up wearing a complete wardrobe. Her gyrations are okay. Mlle. Francoise sings, but apparently that isn't her forte. She didn't indicate what it might be. Other singer is Sarita who warbles effectively.

Carlyle staged the proceedings and he does fairly well with a limited budget. He fills the stage gracefully and gloves a semblance of artistry to the show. There are several problems. The primary one is to teach some of the paraders how to walk, and the other is more effective use of the runway. In its present state, the runway, built in the form of a circular stairway, is responsible for a formless crowd when several girls stand there.

The vaude end starts with Larry Weeks, who shows some okay juggling in the standard vein. His efforts are appreciated here. Christian & Lamarr do a fair adagio. It's the usual version of the standard boy-tosses-girl terps that excite audiences at any time. Wallace & Gail are excellent acros with a good admixture of hoofing. They need the smoothness that comes with experience in the better spots, but they impress as comers. They are a nice-looking duo and show expertness in their field.

Jimmy Smith, a regular at the Apollo, taps atop a marimba. He's more of a musician than a dancer. He turns out some fancy riffing and even shows some unusual takeoffs on a melody. Smith keeps moving gracefully on the instrument and comes out well ahead in audience sentiment. Jose.

Oldtimers Don't Faw Down; They Go Boom in Toronto

With its stage stars of yesteryear, nostalgia is the keynote of this 65-minutes stage package. It's a lively layout embellished by a line of beautifully-costumed lovelies, plus the youthful terping of Nicki & Noel and the engaging m.c. and singing chores of Gene Griffin. Among the oldtimers, there is still present that ageless and indomitable spirit of the traditional trouper, even if the pipes may now be reaching for the top notes of effortless days gone by or, on rare occasion, the pins begin to sag.

Heart-warming, however, is the still existent vigor of these performers, stars of three or four decades ago; and they can still teach the youngsters plenty, as some on the bill have throughout later years, as known to the trade.

Casino, Toronto

Will Oakland, Harlan Dixon, Jeanette Dupree, Jimmie Quinn, Bessie Clifford, Jean Bedini, Bill McCullough, Nicki & Noel, Jeanne Johnston, Gene Griffin, Lindsay Lovelies (10), Archie Stone House Orch; "My Six Convicts" (Col).

Though currently capitalizing on the memory lane formula for the more adult vaude customer draw, there is little on appearance that could not be corrected by a toupee or paint job. These former headliners brazenly brag about their ages. On this bill, the elderly gals have kept their figures; their gams are as shapely as those of the line girls.

Whole is set in a full-stage bistro scene, complete with principals at tables. Line springs the brisk proceedings with a gayly-costumed can-can to "La Parisienne," and then Will Oakland in tails takes over for a brief intro as to the patrons' memories of old times in vaude and the challenge that his colleagues' "performance quality is always in style." From there in, it's Jimmie Quinn for his tap styles and stick dance; Bessie Clifford for her English music-hall songs, notably a sly "When I Get You Alone Tonight" and a lusty "Meet Me in St. Louis" that could teach today's youngsters something; Jean Bedini for his neatly sold magic; Jeanette Dupree in patter and oldtime pops; Jeanne Johnston for her xylophone numbers, especially a swift "Poet and Peasant" finish; Bill McCullough on the bells.

Toppers, however, are Oakland and Harlan Dixon. Oakland still displays plenty of power and clean enunciation, without necessity of mike, and Dixon makes with plenty of agile dancing, particularly his standard chair specialty in a dentist's waiting room with that aching molar driving him to tap desperation, a stint that rates him a rousing begoff.

Girl line closes, with further neat ballet terp and leaps by Nicki & Noel, and company roundup for brisk song finale. On warranted biz, troupe is doing five-a-day. McStay.

Palace, N. Y.

Marian & Vic Miller, Danny Drayson, Sheila Barrett, Norton & Patricia, Al Gordon's Dogs, Melissa Smith, Wally Brown, Annell & Brask, Jo Lombardi House Orch; "Assignment—Paris" (Col), reviewed in VARIETY Sept. 10, '52.

With real pros like Wally Brown, Sheila Barrett, Al Gordon and Danny Drayson on the bill, how can the Palace miss? Each one of the four shows the sure touch upon entry, and wins all the way. It's significant that all dish up comedy, though in contrasting veins.

Brown's next-to-closing is a virtual begoff stint. Big guy is in there with his standup hanging-phrase patter-narrative, mixed with some spicy ditties squared by an engaging manner. His stuff is calculated to wake up this house's catnappers.

Miss Barrett, for years a top caricaturist and character etcher, is slick-looking in a black sequinned gown that points up her trademarked enactment of "Victoria Station," her biggest weapon. She precedes that incisive mood piece with a series of exaggerations embracing Tallulah, Lahr and Garbo (good), being offish only on the W. C. Fields impression. Her middle boffo is gradual deterioration of a southern belle getting drunker and drunker at a nitery. Fine mitt reaction.

Drayson, deucing, admixtures with comedy, dippy hoofing and quickie impressions. His eccentric taps and slides and general tomfoolery send him off in high gear.

New Acts

DICK ESTES
Songs
15 Mins.
Sherry-Netherland, N.Y.

Serge Obolensky, major domo at the Sherry-Netherland's Carnaval Room, is currently showcasing a promising singer in Dick Estes. Latter has a vocal range that encompasses both baritone and tenor registers, and he has smooth, easy-flowing pipes that hit the ears pleasantly.

Vocally, his style is one that could be utilized in musicals with extreme effectiveness. His pipes are equipped to handle a wide variety of tunes. However, he has to overcome orthodoxy. There's little inventiveness about his delivery. His is a usual projection that causes all tunes to get a similar treatment.

Estes starts off with a few tunes from musicals which sell themselves immediately. He then accompanies himself on the guitar on a series of Latinairs and a hillbilly item, and thence off to a sizable palming.

Col. Obolensky is apparently making a specialty of booking relatives of well-knowns. Estes is from the clan of Tennessee's crime-busting Sen. Estes Kefauver. Last season, James Symington, son of the former RFC head, was a topliner, and Helene Francois, sister of Denise Darcel, moves in Nov. 5.

Hugo Pedell's band backs Estes on this show and provides a good brand of society dansapation, while Jan Brunesco does the relief. Jose.

SAVEEN
With Daisy May
Ventriloquy
16 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

Polished English ventriloquist has strong act that's good for both vaude and video. He offers novelty lineup of dolls, which include a cheeky chap named Andy, a typically English army officer known as "The Colonel," a little-gal type called Daisy May, and a white-faced Continental clown, Noddy. Vent also manipulates a dog doll to which he gives aristocratic English accent.

Garb and face of dolls are detailed and lifelike, and vent's voice-throwing is clever. His climax has novelty, a real pooch being brought from below his dolls' box to join in conversation with the dummy dog. This brings forth hearty yocks. Gord.

MURIEL GAINES
Songs
20 Mins.
Spivy's East Side, Paris

Dusky American songstress, Muriel Gaines has made the circuit here. Gal is well-proportioned and personable, singing her sophisticated blues and calypso songs with assurance and a pleasing, gliding voice that makes an impression on the Franco-American younger set that has become the predominant clientele in the boite.

Her comic ballads about woman and man trouble are well registered and mitted. She gives glibly on "I Wonder Who's Keeping Him Now," "Nothing To Sing The Blues About Blues" and "Man Smart-Woman Smarter" for good results. She patters with the aud and duos with her pianist for an overall pleasing act. Mosk.

LES MARIONNETTES DE GEORGES LAFAYE (4)
Puppetry
20 Mins.
Quatres Saisons, Paris

This is an extremely hep, offbeat puppet routine slated for intimeries on its subtleties, and could be of interest for video on its intriguing visual variations.

The troupe, consisting of three young men and a girl, use their hands in various ingenious puppet rigs from an imposing ogre to disembodied hats and boas. They start with the story of an ogre who was in love with a fairy. The ogre visits his love and, when left alone with the fairy's child, caresses it and then calmly eats it with a great munching of his whiskers. The fairy is taken aback and the moral is not to eat the children of people you wish to impress. All this to a poem by Victor Hugo.

Then a ribtickling intermezzo by a floppyhaired artist whose cello does not agree with him. This leads to a hilarious battle. A more abstract bit of puppetry is of visual interest. Ending of this is a takeoff of the disk, banned stateside on radio, "John-Marsha," which interprets a love session by the participant's variations of their greetings as the passion mounts. The two lovers are symbolized by a cavorting tophat and a boa for hilarious results as the affair reaches a crescendo. This is strictly for intimeries. Mosk.

PATRICIA KING
Songs
12 Mins.
Sky Club, Dallas

Lass, in a pro vocalist debut here, is a sister-in-law of Samia Gamal, Egyptian dancer, also on the bill in a Texas bow. Houston millionairess is a tall, well-stacked blonde in a slick low-cut pink tulle strapless gown. Her vocal efforts are so-so.

A small voice compels her to crowd the mike in the opening "Don't Take Your Love From Me." Poised and trying all the way, thrush goes into a rhythm beat with a neat rendition of "Blue Moon" lyrics. Closer is an original, "Love Lives On," written for her show biz bow. Lyrics were almost unheard due to noise by 1,200 payees. Barker.

MAGIC LANTERN BY SINE
Comic Slides, Commentary
8 Mins.
Quatres Saisons, Paris

This opener of a small existentialist boite here uses a horizontal film strip that projects continuously its painted images on a screen to a running commentary, music and sound effects. Smart cartooning is reminiscent of Steinberg and Thurber in style but is strictly Gallic in humor. It traces a blase group of Frenchmen on a weekend at a carnival and clever cartoon inventions and counterpoint commentary make this a fine offbeat bit for an intime cafe.

A tremendous snake that is shown as the image pans down its length is finally pegged as having the last keeper in his insides. People entering a showing of mythical tableaux come out looking like centaurs; people posing behind cardboard facades for pix make for a comic denouement; a man posing as a convict turns out to be a cop, one as a giant, a midget, and two people posing happily in a cutout bed come out with their sad expressions back. Invention never lets down and hep commentary and sound effects makes this effective. Mosk.

ARMANDO ROMEO
Songs
Montmartre, N.Y.

Armando Romeo, an Italian import, is a pleasing tenor who accompanies himself at the guitar. He has highly lyrical pipes that he uses effectively in a romantic idiom. He sings in English, French, Italian and Spanish.

Romeo's guitar background is good. The instrument accents his rhythms to weave some intricate patterns. He's okay for the intimery circuit. Jose.

CARLA & FERNANDO (6)
Dance
15 Mins.
Bellevue Casino, Montreal

Since their last appearance here in Montreal as a Spanish terp team. Carla & Fernando have added four other hoofers (two guys and two gals). Present combo does much for Bellevue Casino layout.

Headed by the deft stepping and showmanship of Fernando, the group offers a collection of flamenco, Gypsy and Spanish dances in both classical and modern manner. Femmes are all lookers, particularly Carla, who desides sporting several revealing costumes during session shows much improvement over first tries in this town.

As seems to be the case with this type act, the male half of team is always the best and this outfit makes no exception to rule. The gals show plenty of savvy in general terping but it is the male element that creates the atmosphere and carries most of the spark for all routines.

Group looks best during the lavish Kamarova production, "A Night in Seville," which they highlight and later add a solo session that draws plaudits.

Appearance, choreography plus overall speed and animation make ensemble a cinch for any visual medium. Newt.

LES GARCONS DE LA RUE (3)
Song-Mime
25 Mins.
Quatres Saisons, Paris

This trio, garbed in the tough-guy street attire of turn-of-the-century Paris, are equipped with a fine repertoire and hep panto antics to their songs, which are mostly in a humorous vein. Timing and group work is immaculate and their voices are geared to the songs of the Paris streets, being full of spontaneity, gusto and the sad wistfullness of the big city.

Their monicker means "Boys of the Street" and they employ props and hep lighting for good results in playing up their numbers, with stateside niteries and shows being interested in foreign acts, they

Palace, N. Y.

Time limit for the slot obliges him to give a "thank you" encore.

Gordon, working with several mongrels, brings the tall laffs as the mutts nix working despite his incessant cues. This is a better pooch act than if they were "performing." Turntable finish is a socko and suitably palmed.

Norton & Patricia make a fine appearance in their ballroomology turn. The tossing, lifts and shoulder revolves merit a good score for this standard-type terping. Closing the layout are Annell & Brask, a big-league straight and acro bike pair from Denmark set apart by deft doses of showmanship. Aside from their multitude of tricks, they have three rapid changes of costume (mostly vintage) to heighten visual impact in their "story" pedalling. Some of the intricate carrying stunts are among the best in the bike groove, and there are comedy elements besides. Finishing trick, with shapely femme atop a bar for acro and loop-the-loops as he pedals away with his burden, is a walloper. Great all-around click.

Openers, Marian & Vic Miller, acros, and Melissa Smith, singer, are reviewed under New Acts.

Jo Lombardi puts his pit outfit through a busy chore with his usual capability. Trau.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Oct. 26.

Al Bernie, Adeline Neice, Harris & Shore, Montes De Oca (2); "Because You're Mine" (M-G) (2d wk).

This is a pleasant show, nicely paced, with few high spots. Payees like throughout but, like acts themselves, seldom rise above routine approval.

Headliner Al Bernie lives up to his billing with an easy, relaxed style and a hep line of patter. His gags roll naturally to steady returns, with an occasional belly, particularly for such special bits as his takeoff on Johnie Ray's "Cry." Material has a fresh approach, even when not actually new, and comic's smoothness and experience carry him through to sock sendoff.

Chantoosey Adeline Neice shows a surefire comedy flair in a series of pop tunes handled in novel fashion. Gal works hard, and seems slightly awkward at times. Best bet is her "Man Around the House," with special patter effects and high comedy touches. One novelty, strictly for laughs, "Mom, Where Is the Rest of Me," doesn't quite make the grade. It has a personal touch, based on singer's pint size, but impresses as forced and formless. At that, gal garners pleasant response for this and other three tunes.

Harris & Shore play it strictly for yocks with their slapstick terpery. Unlike other comic dance teams, they make it clear from the start that this is all clowning, with technique secondary. Sense of comedy is good, and they get plenty laughs. It's a lively, bright act, with no standout gimmicks, and galleries like.

Montes De Oca, assisted by a male partner, does a combination trampoline-stunt act that gains appreciation for its skill and daring. Gal has fine acro style and makes a dashing curtain-raiser. Lowe.

Unit Review

Farfel Follies

(BILTMORE THEATRE, L. A.)

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Hal Zeiger and Mickey Katz production of a Yiddish-American revue in two acts staged by Katz and Ted Adair. Stars Myron Cohen; features Bas Sheva, Lenny Kent, Ziggy Elman, Irving Grossman, Dinah Goldberg, Suzanne Narahara, The Farfelettes (6). At Biltmore Theatre, Los Angeles, Oct. 20, 1952; $3.60 top.

When Hal Zeiger and Mickey Katz put together a Yiddish-American vaude layout on the Coast four years ago, they didn't anticipate anything beyond some local dates. The show mushroomed, however, and eventually trouped the country with Katz as the stellar personality.

Now they've come up with a new edition tagged "Farfel Follies," but Katz' contribution, save for the current local stand, will be purely as co-producer. Weight of the show falls on the shoulders of Myron Cohen and though he's more than up to the job, "Farfel" needs quite a bit of work before it can hope to emulate its predecessor.

Chief difficulty at the moment is that the show is badly in need of pacing. The first half is slow and unwieldly, with all concerned overstaying their spots. And Lenny Kent, a good nitery comic in his own right, is out of place. His cafe material is designed for the more intimate atmosphere and it doesn't register as it should. Similarly, the Catskill humor of Irving Grossman and Dinah Goldberg, while skillfully handled, is stretched too thin. In their case, a spot in each of the two acts might be more advantageous. The first-act appearance of Suzanne Narahara fails to pay off as expected, the novelty of a Japanese girl singing Yiddish lyrics wearing off after a few bars.

Second half reveals the show's potential with the droll humor of Cohen and the remarkable singing of Bas Sheva to carry it along. Miss Sheva stops the show with a trio of numbers, two being cantorial pieces to which she brings her training as a cantor's daughter. This training, incidentally, forces her into some ungraceful facial contortions. Third offering is the poignant "Where Can I Go?"

Cohen, a deft storyteller, has complete control of his audience throughout a half-hour stint. Genuinely funny material, a sharp sense of timing and a mastery of the gestures and intonations that make his stories real, combine to provide a turn that never lets down.

Katz, who's appearing locally to help the show get started, reprises some of his disclicks and makes way for a quick spotlighting of Ziggy Elman who repeats his "Angels Sing" platter smash for peak results.

Most performers work in front of the band with simple drapes for a backdrop. There's a rather idealized Israel "kibbutz" backdrop used occasionally, notably in an okay Chassidic dance number done by the line, but the shimmering sheet used on Cohen's turn should be changed; it's too hard on the eyes. Kap.

New Acts

shape up as a natural for the Gallic spots in N.Y. or, due to their visual appeal, for TV.

"The Heritage" is about goods left by a miserly relative who has willed them to various people who keep flitting in and demanding the goods. Low-key lighting and hand-passing of the goods make this a good opener. "St. Antoine" is a pleasing nostalgic tune about the street urchins who trade broken bikes for riddled tailors' dummies. They sègue into a fine rendition of "Bal Musette," the nabe dance-halls where romance flourishes, and then the ribtickling takeoffs on "The orphan," about a ruined gal who changes sex; "The Return of the Fisherman," about the wailing tactics of wives waiting for their fishy hubbies, and "The Gal on the Flying Trapeze," who makes them seasick. It is a begoff number. Mosk.

MELISSA SMITH
Songs
6 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Tall Texas gal plays on her Lone Star identification, judging from her opener on that theme ("If You're Ever Down in Texas, Look Me Up"). Second tune, "Stormy Weather," is a nice try but apparently not presently mated to her natural orbit, which seems to be largely in the bounce groove. "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" is her exit and best, and received accordingly.

Femme has okay projection, bears herself well and is tastefully groomed. More experience is indicated before she can essay the major spots. Trau.

---

MARIAN & VIC MILLER
Balancing
8 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

This is a polished duo specializing in slow acro and postures, indicating careful preparation. Some of the designs, particularly the male's lifts of shapely partner, from various prone positions, bear considerable impact. There's a sock one-hand lift and maneuvering while femme is doubled up. Top and finishing trick has him strapped to a weighted chair and hoisting her from the floor.

On looks and ability, this act can fill general novelty assignments with better than average results. Trau.

JEANNE JONES & ERNEST RICHMAN
Dance
6 Mins.
Bellevue Casino, Montreal

Although appearance is only brief in the first production number, "Frankie and Johnny," the team of Jones & Richman exhibits okay terp values. Newcomers to Montreal, duo are doing their first stint in the Bellevue Casino and their interpretation in this freely-adapted classic is standout.

Both are of medium height; have more than the average terp ability and femme has the looks and figure that keeps interest at all times. Newt.

4 Rodgers Shows

"King and I" is playing to sellout business in its second year at the St. James and is obviously due to remain there indefinitely, and his and the late Lorenz Hart's "Pal Joey" is in ditto status at the Broadhurst Rodgers' three current smashes in the same block is already believed to be a record.

In case the Shubert isn't available for "South Pacific," or if its capacity is figured too small at the show's $6 top, only the Century or perhaps the Broadway might get the musical. Neither house is considered too desirable, but probably the latter would be preferable if it is not still housing Cinerama at that time. Only other Shubert theatre big enough for a musical is the Imperial, which is apparently due to continue indefinitely with "Wish You Were Here."

Although R&H have not thus far booked a non-Shubert house in New York, the Mark Hellinger owned by Anthony B. Farrell, and the Ziegfeld, owned by Billy Rose, would presumably be available. However, the 46th Street, owned by City Playhouses, Inc., is solidly set for many more months with "Guys and Dolls."

Met Opera '51-'52 Deficit Above 400G, Despite Gain from 20% Tax, Fund Drive

The Metropolitan Opera Assn., although its 1951-52 financial statement hasn't been released yet, is reliably reported to have gone in the red for over $400,000 last season.

Whopping deficit was sustained despite the fact that the Met had two financial windfalls last year, (1) the repeal of the 20% U. S. admission tax, which brought the Met an extra $550,000, and (2) an extra $750,000 raised in a special public drive. Last named was to help pay off old debts as well as help the current seaaon.

The $400,000-plus deficit is about 200G more than Met execs figured on at start of last season, with the two above windfalls taken into consideration, and comes in the face of improved N. Y. biz last year over the season before, and a sock spring tour. With the 550G tax saving and 750G special fund taken into account, the Met's '51-'52 red stacks up sharply against the '50-'51 season loss of $462,491, which was then the greatest operating deficit in Met history.

What is also of interest is the fact that the Met had five upped-fees nights last season, when it raised the top sharply (from $7.50 to as much as $30) for these events. Opening-night "Aida" took in $53,112; New Year's Eve "Fledermaus," $23,000; Kirsten Flagstad's "Alceste" premiere, $26,265; the first "Carmen," $28,960, and a "Parsifal," almost that much.

Increased cost of operations; outlay for four newly-staged productions ("Aida," "Rigoletto," "Carmen" and "Cosi fan Tutte"), estimated at over $200,000; loss from a touring "Fledermaus" production, which cost the Met over $70,000—these are considered main reasons for the whopping deficit.

With three new productions planned this season, and no likelihood of another public drive for extra funds, Met's financial outlook seems serious, despite fact that the organization looks to a boff season, with subscriptions well up over last year and b.o. interest generally heightened.

Talk of need of a U. S. subsidy has been heard again, akin to practice in European and other houses. Opera houses in Rome, Milan and London (Covent Garden), for instance, get annual government subsidies of $500,000 each; Zurich Opera, $350,000 annually; two houses in Vienna, $750,000 between them; two Paris establishments, as well as the Buenos Aires house, receive over $1,000,000 yearly.

Midwest Opera Assn. Set To Launch Six-Program Season in St. Louis

St. Louis, Oct. 28.

With a cast of 120 singers and a ballet corps of 20 dancers, all midwesterners and most of them recruited from the St. Louis area, the Midwest Opera Assn., a non-profit organization with headquarters here, will launch a six opera program (in English) in the Henry W. Kiel (municipal) Auditorium Nov. 17.

With rehearsals already under way, a campaign to raise about $10,000 in sustaining membership has been started, and sponsors of the enterprise are trying to achieve the success and operating methods of the Municipal Theatre Assn., which presents al fresco entertainment in the Forest Park Playhouse each summer.

The preliminary fund is expected to defray expenses for scenery, costumes and other expenses until the association is firmly established financially. Nandor F. Domokos, who came to the U.S. four years ago after serving for 20 years as director of the Hungarian Opera House in Budapest, will direct the presentations.

The teeoff, a twin bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci," will be presented with a matinee for school children, who will be charged 65c, of which 5c will be returned to the music department of each school. After a performance Nov. 18 for the general public, at a scale from $1 to $2.50, the same twin bill will be presented to labor groups Nov. 21.

Move Made to Ease British Equity Ban on Landis Pic

London, Oct. 28.

A last-minute move is being made to beat the British Equity ban on Jessie Royce Landis, who had been inked to play the lead in a British film version of Jean Cocteau's "Intimate Relations," which is due to start rolling at Walton-on-Thames studios Nov. 10. British thesp union nixed her request for a work permit and it's reported that in consequence she was given two weeks' notice to leave the country.

New application was submitted last weekend to the Ministry of Labor, containing an assurance from Miss Landis that she would freeze all her earnings on this film and none of it would be converted into dollars.

'Carmen' Fails to Show In Mass. Despite 2G in Till; Full Fiasco in Buffalo

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 28.

A theatre manager's nightmare, the show that doesn't show, came to haunt Paramount's Ed Smith last week (20) when the London Opera Co.'s "Carmen," inked in for that night, failed to put in an appearance.

The Springfield-Boston-New York lines were kept humming all afternoon, with New England Theatres, Inc., of Boston, which owns the local filmhouse, being promised a performance as late as 5:30 p.m.

Stagehands were kept twiddling their thumbs all day; local chorines were lined up and ready, as requested by the opera troupe, but when the boxoffice opened, all the 1,500 or so patrons got was their money back.

House had a $2,000 advance sale, despite fact that "Carmen" had competition from the Court Square, which was opening with "Paris '90" same night.

Best explanation that could be extracted by phone from New York offices of London was that there was "some difficulty within the company."

Added gloom for local management came from the fact that the usual film show had been omitted all day to make way for "Carmen." London Opera cancelled out an appearance at nearby Holyoke earlier in the month, but with plenty of advance notice.

Buffalo's 'Double-Murder'

Buffalo, Oct. 28.

Performance of "Carmen" on stage of Shea's Buffalo (Loew's) Wednesday night by the London Opera Co. proved the biggest fiasco here in many years. Troupe arrived in Buffalo, following cancellation of an Albany engagement, minus its advertised "cast of 100," 35-man "full symphony orchestra" and "large chorus." In addition, two of its singing leads and its orchestra director failed to show. Chorus, recruited in New York day before, and about 20 Buffalo musicians tried to present the opera without rehearsal and under a substitute conductor. Both fluffed their cues and left many dead waits. An overflow crowd (3,000 capacity) at $4 top was, in the words of the music critic of the Evening News, "puzzled, amused and dismayed."

Both the News and the (morning) Courier-Express gave the presentation a critical drubbing observing, in almost identical language, that the performance constituted "double-murder"—that of the heroine and that of the opera.

Following the Buffalo fiasco, Loew's Rochester immediately cancelled the engagement there and refunded admissions, though the house was sold out in advance.

Wilmington Opera Bow

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 28.

The Delaware Philharmonic Opera Society will open its first season Nov. 16 with presentation of Verdi's "La Traviata" at the Playhouse, Wilmington.

Title role will be sung by Lucia Evangelists, soprano; Alfredo will be Kayton Nesbitt, tenor; Germont will be Frank Guerrera, baritone.

Menuhin's 25th Anni

Violinist Yehudi Menuhin, appearing this weekend with the N. Y. Philharmonic-Symphony at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., will be celebrating the 25th anni of his debut with orch in Manhattan. He first appeared in 1927 with the N. Y. Symphony (which the Philharmonic subsequently absorbed), playing the Beethoven Concerto.

Menuhin will appear this Saturday and Sunday (1-2), performing the Mendelssohn Concerto.

Summer Operetta As N.Y. 'Natural'

Plans to start preliminaries for erection of a $40,000,000 Coliseum at Columbus Circle, N. Y., as announced last week (with the Met Opera Assn. no longer a partner in the venture), have revived trade talk about the need of an indoor hall, or outdoor tent or shed, for presentation of summer operettas in N. Y.

Success of such operettas elsewhere, as at St. Louis, or Kansas City, has keyed interest for similar productions in N. Y. Proof of such draw in Manhattan is seen in the growing number of popular nights at Lewisohn Stadium, where pop programs, mainly comprised of operetta selections, outdraw the longhair events. Growing interest in Rodgers & Hammerstein or Jerome Kern nights; the draw of the late Sigmund Romberg appearances; sellout of a "Fledermaus" night, despite absence of costumes and sets; an annual Viennese (operetta) night, are given as examples.

There's room in N. Y. for summer operettas, it's claimed, but no place to do it. Open stadia, like Lewisohn, are too risky or costly, due to weather threats. A tent or shed, a la Tanglewood, or Dallas auditorium setup, is seen needed.

For several seasons, the N. Y City Center of Music & Drama has been mulling an operetta setup at City Center, to begin in the spring and run into summer. Activities in opera, ballet and straight legit have absorbed the attention of Center management, however, and nothing tangible has as yet come of the idea.

Ethel Colt's N.Y. Recital In 'Songs of the Theatre'

Ethel Colt, daughter of Ethel Barrymore (she's dropped the "Barrymore" as middle name, which she used formerly), will give her first Town Hall, N. Y., solo recital Nov. 8, with "Songs of the Theatre."

Soprano divides her show into five parts: early songs of the theatre, from 13th to 16th century; variations on themes from Shakespeare; European theatre music from Johann to Richard Strauss; contemporary American musical theatre (Gershwin, Rodgers, Blitzstein, etc.), and Menotti "Consul" excerpts.

Miss Colt, in her second season with National Concert & Artists Corp., in its special attractions division headed by Selma Warlick, will do about 20 concerts this season for NCAC, planning to increase the number next year.

Atterbury to Bow Albany Season With 'Affairs'

Albany, Oct. 28.

Malcolm Atterbury will open his sixth season of stock in Albany, and his first at the Colonial Playhouse, Nov. 19, with "Affairs of State." Melaine Work will play the femme lead.

Atterbury had originally planned to open the season at the downtown Playhouse Nov. 5, but theatre was sold for conversion into a parking lot.

Atterbury's Colonial lease with Dr. Henry Brown, owner and head of a New York television company, includes an option to purchase.

"Home by Seven," by R. C. Sheriff, will be the second production by Atterbury and his wife, Ellen Hardies. Edward G. Harkness continues as manager.

Pianist Jacques Abram returned to N.Y. Sunday (26) after a seven-month European concert tour. Less than six hours later, he was off on first lap of a season's U.S. cross-country tour.

Better Plays, Lower Costs Seen Legit's Only Chance to Recover Lost Ground

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Robert Sherwood recently told VARIETY readers that angels are suckers. He certainly has arithmetic to back him up. The last Broadway season was one of the worst in a generation. Of the $5,500,000 that was invested in shows last season, $3,500,000 went down the drain. Situation interests me, a certified public accountant who is also a backer who's been playing the theatrical ponies for over 15 years at over 50 races.

What is wrong? I think two things are equally out of gear. One is that the plays are bad; the other is that the economics are bad. In other words, the theatre is suffering from nothing that better plays under better economics wouldn't cure.

The commercial theatre, like the commercial anything else, stands or falls in the market place on the basis of product, cost and profit. Any one of these factors alone is not enough to do the trick. They must satisfactorily exist in combination, to make the wheels go around. Translated into terms of theatre, this means there must be plays that an audience will pay to see, and pay enough to get the backers out whole—and then some. Short of this, there's no dice.

Sure, when a "South Pacific" or "Guys and Dolls" comes along, there is no trouble packing them in. That doesn't mean all is right in the economics of the theatrical world. It can just as easily mean that plays of unusual quality will succeed in spite of, not because of, bad economics. To put it another way, such plays could enjoy a greater success if the economics were better. To illustrate this by extremes, even a "South Pacific" or "Guys and Dolls" could price itself out of the market, if today's costs in the theatre were such that $25 had to be charged for a seat.

On the other hand, there are some shows that have so little appeal that you couldn't get an audience in, no matter how low the

Louis Lurie Buys Frisco Curran Theatre for 800G

San Francisco, Oct. 28.

Louis Lurie yesterday (Mon.) purchased the Curran Theatre, Frisco's leading legit house, for $800,000 from the Wobber Bros. and the Homar Curran estate. Latter owned 60% of the theatre, the Wobbers 40%.

Bill Zwissig, longtime general manager of the house, will remain in the post. It's expected a close working arrangement will be effected between the Curran and the next-door Geary Theatre, owned by the Wobbers. The two theatres play virtually all of Frisco's legit.

N.Y. City Ballet Preps 1st Six-Week Home Season; Test of Audience Draw

The N. Y. City Ballet opens a six-week fall season at City Center, N. Y., next Tuesday (4), for its first appearance at its home base since last March. Troupe, returned recently from a five-month tour of Europe, is also skedding a winter season of six weeks, starting in February.

Thus a new pattern seems to be shaping up, with the company planning two six-week seasons a year, instead of three or four short ones as formerly, augmenting these 12 weeks with a foreign trek. Whether there is enough biz to support a six-week N. Y. season is still to be proved, although troupe did a special five-week season last winter, for an okay $200,000 take. Current six-week season is longest the troupe has ever skedded at home.

Troupe played seven weeks in London last summer, on guarantee, at Covent Garden Opera House. Opera House broke even on the first five weeks, losing on the last two. Troupe did very well elsewhere financially, while garnering fine notices everywhere. Hailed as one of the major terp sensations, it was also called one of the great troupes of our time. In Paris, Le Monde declared that the Paris Opera Ballet, "lately with eyes glued on Sadler's Wells, must now gaze up towards the new heights occupied by the New York boys and girls."

Sadler's Competition

Sadler's reference is pertinent, as the noted British troupe will be making its third U.S. visit next fall, appearing in N.Y. at the Met Opera House in September. Already there is speculation as to its effect on the N. Y. City Ballet. There's question whether the N.Y. troupe can put on a fall season (November), after Sadler's has taken out its expected large chunk of ballet audience coin, or whether it might have to wait until winter (February). Other point of view is that there is enough Gotham ballet coin for both troupes, with added feeling that Sadler's would draw a different type trade, more theatre, society and general audiences, than the N. Y. City Ballet.

N.Y. troupe will bow next Tuesday with practically the same company as last season. Nora Kaye and Jerome Robbins, busy in the legiter, "Two's Company," won't join the troupe till later, and Miss Kaye only for Sundays. Troupe will also get some hypo from the fact that two of its stars, Melissa Hayden and Andre Eglevsky, are prominent in the new Charlie Chaplin picture, "Limelight," which opened on Broadway last Thursday (23).

Troupe will offer two new works during its fall season, both choreographed by George Balanchine, in "Scotch Symphony," to Mendelssohn music, and "Metamorphoses," to a Hindemith score.

Fading 'Fledermaus'

Strauss' "Fledermaus," in the new Howard Dietz-Garson Kanin English version, was the Met Opera biggest hit two years ago, and the most frequently performed opus in any season in the Met's 68-year history. Opera was given 32 times that season, 19 in N. Y. and 13 on tour.

This season, "Fledermaus" is skedded for only three performances.

St. Paul Dailies Relent To Carry Mpls. Show Ads; Big Legit Season Seen

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.

Despite a record number of legitimate roadshow attractions passing up St. Paul entirely and playing their Twin Cities engagements exclusively at the Lyceum here, St. Paul newspapers finally have relented and are now accepting the paid advertising for these shows. They previously refused such advertising and would not permit mention in their news columns of the attractions' Minneapolis presence, the failure to appear in St. Paul being considered an affront to that city.

Thus far this season four attractions—"Bell, Book and Candle," "The Fourposter," The Black Hills "Passion Play" and Elsa Lanchester's "Private Music Hall"—have played only Minneapolis, and "Oklahoma" is currently here. "The Country Girl," "Guys and Dolls" (second time here after 10 days last season), "Mister Roberts" (fourth time here) and "John Brown's Body"—are booked only into Minneapolis.

St. Paul has had but one attraction, "Call Me Madam." After the latter, a Theatre Guild subscription season show in both towns, had racked up a gross of just under $47,000 here for the week, turning many away the final performances, it pulled only a little over $31,000 for a similar period in St. Paul, although the latter's engagement was advertised in Minneapolis newspapers.

Under the subscription season plan, the Theatre Guild is obligated to send three more attractions to St. Paul. Minneapolis is to have a total of seven.

Indications up to this time are that this may be the biggest of all recent Minneapolis legit seasons from a boxoffice standpoint. In addition to the $47,000 garnered by "Call Me Madam," six days of "Bell, Book and Candle" in August heat netted $22,300, and four days of "The Fourposter" were good for $28,000 (six performances).

Road Mgrs. Group Helps as 'Shrike' Backers; Get Two-Thirds Profit

Kermit Bloomgarden's touring production of "The Shrike," starring Van Heflin, has been financed by a group of road theatre managers and Marcus Heiman, president of the United Booking Office. Backers will get two-thirds of the prospective profits, instead of the usual 50%.

Reason for the liberal profit split to the investors is that Bloomgarden, as a leading member of the League of N. Y. Theatres, the Committee of Theatrical Producers and Council of the Living Theatre, is anxious to encourage road manager participation in the legit production setup. Alo, since Heiman volunteered to raise the coin for the venture, the producer would be spared that task and could therefore take a smaller slice of the net.

Listed backers of the show include Cyril H. Grody, of the UBO staff. $7,500, representing Heiman, his uncle; John G. Cella, of the American Theatre, St. Louis, $1,500; the Alexandra Co. operator of the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, $1,500; Dan R. Hanna, of the Hanna, Cleveland, $1,500; Gabriel G. Rubin, of the Nixon, Pittsburgh, $1,500; Robert F. Boda of the Hartman, Columbus, $750, and R. F. Kemper, of the Erlanger, Buffalo, $750. Venture is capitalized at $30,000, with no provision for overcall. Each $225 entitles the holder to 1% of the profits.

Bloomgarden's scheduled production of the new Arthur Miller play, budgeted at $75,000, is already oversubscribed by $50,000, so there will be a mild scuffle to return the proffered coin. The drama, formerly called "Those Avenging Spirits" but due to be retitled, is skedded for production in January.

Ahead of it on the producer's schedule is the revival of Lillian Hellman's "Children's Hour," to be staged by the authoress with a cast including Patricia Neal, Kim Hunter and Iris Mann. It will open Dec. 17 at the Coronet, N. Y., without a preliminary tryout tour, but after a week of previews. The show is already financed at $50,000.

Bloomgarden will start soon to raise the money for his fourth venture of the season, a production of "Where Late the Sweet Birds Sang," by Irving Ravetch. It will be budgeted at about $70,000.

'Moulin' Legit Musical To Make Bow in Small Coast Central Stager

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

"Moulin Rouge," legit musical version of Pierre La Mure's bestseller, will get its world premiere early in December at the Circle Theatre, intimate central-staging playhouse in Hollywood. Film version of the book already has been completed by John Huston, with Jose Ferrer starring, and will be released next year.

George Boroff, president of Circle Theatre, Inc., will produce in conjunction with J. N. Alkow, Coast TV producer. Understood negotiations now are under way with Rouben Mamoulian to stage and Richard Basehart to star in the musical.

La Mure wrote the adaptation and collaborated with Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson on the score. Olga Lunick has been signed for the choreography.

Coast reception will determine whether the musical will be taken to Broadway. If an eastern trek is decided upon, the show will be restaged for presentation as a conventional proscenium-stage offering.

'Blintzes' for B'klyn

"Blintzes and Screams," revue backgrounded by typical Yiddish humor, is being produced by Jacob Jacobs, who will present it for an indefinite run at the Parkway Theatre, Brooklyn, beginning Nov. 7.

The musical, by Murray Rumshinsky, will have an English-speaking cast including Billy Hodes, the Radio Aces and Thelma Lee. It will succeed "Man Without a Home," current Yiddish play.

Price Gets Pix Clearance To Take 'Don Juan' Chore

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Vincent Price secured an eight-week clearance from his multiple picture actor-director pact at RKO to replace Charles Laughton in the First Drama Quartet's "Don Juan in Hell" production for balance of the year. He planed to Cedar Rapids yesterday (Mon.) to join the troupe there. Price played the role of the devil in Frisco earlier this month, and replaced the ailing Laughton at two matinees at the Los Angeles Philharmonic Auditorium last week.

This mark's Price fourth stage tour of this year, others being in "Cocktail Party," "Goodbye Again" and "Lady's Not For Burning."

Road 'SP,' 'Dolls' To Try Early Curtain

Adoption of an early curtain on the road, as a move to win back lost legit patronage, will probably be tried on a test basis in a few weeks by the touring companies of "South Pacific" and "Guys and Dolls." It's figured the experimental schedules may be used at different starting hours and under varying conditions in different towns during the latter part of November and through December and January.

Meanwhile, Monty Shaff and Karl Bernstein, respective general manager and pressagent for Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin, producers of "Guys and Dolls," will send out a questionnaire this week to several hundred local theatre managers, drama critics and editors in a survey of general opinion on the desirability of early curtains every night of the week and the choice of starting time in various cities and towns. Shaff, a member of the Early Curtain Committee of the League of N. Y. Theatres, was the original proponent of the early curtain plan on the road.

Whether the experimental early curtains will be tried before the replies from the questionnaire are received and tabulated isn't decided. Perhaps the results of the test early-curtain dates will be taken into consideration with the general reaction to the idea as expressed in replies to the questionnaire.

Although the Early Curtain Committee of the League is determined to go ahead with the extension of setup to the road, no attempt will be made to force any managements or local theatres to conform. Everyone will be urged to go along and it's expected that most if not all will do so, just as practically all producers have adopted the 7 o'clock curtain Monday nights for their shows on Broadway.

10-Week Music Circus Season Set for Miami

Miami, Oct. 28.

Music Circus, which played here on Treasure Island during seasons of '50 and '51 under aegis of St. John Terrell and the late Laurence Schwab, will return to this area in January, for a 10-week season, now that the rate schedule with Miami Federation of Musicians, AFM, has been settled.

It was a dispute with the musicians over amount of men to be used in the pit that was one of the major factors in the decision not to run last year.

Location of the tent to house the Circus has not been settled for the '53 run, Treasure Island being in the midst of a building boom. Skedded for production are "Kiss Me Kate," "Where's Charley," "High Button Shoes," "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time." Same type of company, using musicomedy vets in lead roles, as obtains at Lambertville, N.J., during the summer, will be utilized.

Terrell plans sending the company through Florida on a spring tour.

Ex-Carnegie Hall B.O. Man Gets Prison in Tax Fraud

Walter C. Heck, former operator of the Carnegie Hall, N. Y., boxoffice concession, was sentenced last week by Federal Judge John F. X. McGohey to an 18-month prison term for defrauding the Government of $147,503 in admission taxes.

Heck pleaded guilty to charges that he filed fraudulent tax returns each month from February, 1947, to February, 1951. Over this period he paid $409,261 instead of $556,764.

Nabe Tie-Ins, Phone Lines, Public Lectures as Hypos For Hartford Legit Setup

Hartford, Oct. 28.

New Parsons here has coralled some 1,500 subscribers for its current play series. This is equal to the number signed by the house last year, when it opened for its first legit season.

House last season averaged $10,200 for each of the 15 plays it presented, with a total gross of $153,000 for the season. The 10G average represented shows of four days and five performances length. This semester house is operating on a three-day, four-performance run.

To attract more patrons and get a bite out of the strictly film crowd, house is using one-minute trailers in four nabes, the first-run houses being unavailable to them. Test on the season's opener, "Mr. Roberts," has convinced the New Parsons management to continue in this direction. Currently, short trailers on the new N. Richard Nash legiter, "See The Jaguar," are being flashed in the nabes. Planned also as a tie-in with the nabes is the personal appearance of stars appearing at New Parsons.

Another gimmick utilized by the house are direct telephone lines to important centers where calls can be made to the boxoffice for ticket reservations. First such, in the Hotel Bond lobby, was set up this week. Scheduled for such direct lines are a couple of downtown department stores, the Hartford Club, Boys and Girls Clubs of the Travelers Insurance Co., etc. These will be set up in the next week or so. In addition, Charles Bowden, one of the house operators, each week addresses at least two civic groups on legit background.

Scheduled soon is a children's theatre for Saturday mornings. Queenie Smith has been set to take over that end. Main purpose here is an educational one, so that kids and teeners may become familiar with legit and become customers of the future.

JACK PEARL AT BOOTH IN NEW B.O. MEN SWITCH

Jack Pearl, whom Lee Shubert fired as treasurer of the Majestic, N. Y., two years ago for refusing to answer questions in the theatre ticket probe of the then N. Y. Commissioner of Investigations John M. Murtagh, is now boxoffice man of the Shubert-owned Booth, N. Y. That is one of the b.o. assingments recently made under the League of N. Y. Theatres contract with the Treasurers & Ticket Sellers Union, Local 751.

Other b.o. placements made to meet the Oct. 15 deadline of the contract included:

Booth: Margaret Hildreth, assistant treasurer.

Century: Al Hildreth, treasurer; Anna Yurdin, assistant.

Cort: Genevieve Stewart, treasurer; Georgia Fursman (wife of John Bowman, assistant treasurer at the Henry Miller, N. Y.) assistant.

Lyceum: Lillian Peabody, treasurer; Mildred Anker, assistant.

Carnegie Hall: Ribington Bisland, treasurer; Charles Greene and Nat Posnick, assistants.

Most b.o. assignments for Broadway houses were made some weeks previously and were reported in the Sept. 18 issue of VARIETY.

Dazian's Dallas Branch

Dazian's, largest and oldest theatrical fabric house, has opened its latest branch in Dallas, to service accounts in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

George Feinberg, president of the company, has named Kermit Cohen manager of the new branch.

Barn Mgr. Claims Abuses by Equity; Will Go to Court to Protect Rights

Herbert L. Kneeter, managing director of the Norwich (Conn.) Summer Theatre, whom Actors Equity officials accuse of being a disruptive influence in relations between the union and the strawhat managers, says that on the contrary he hasn't been disruptive enough. He threatens court action to protect his rights against the thespers' organization.

While admitting Equity's claim that he attended meetings of the union and stock managers last spring without being invited, Kneeter points out that he was present as a member of the Stock Managers Assn. negotiating committee, which Equity has refused to recognize. If he had been more disruptive, he says, he might have helped rectify some of the abuses of the union's administrative staff.

According to the Norwich barn operator, it was he who called attention to the fact that the weekly fee demanded by Equity for hospitalization for its members employed in stock was in excess of the cost of hospitalization. Moreover, although most actors work in stock only a couple of weeks a year and would therefore be ineligible for hospitalization, he asserts he offered to waive his objection to the payments if the union would guarantee to keep the hospitalization in effect when the actors were unemployed. The union thereupon dropped the proposal, he says.

Kneeter also takes credit for defeating Equity's attempt last year to eliminate matinees in tent theatres, on the ground they are detrimental to health. In reply to his question, an Equity official stated that in case a manager insisted on

Paxinou Score to Be Used During N.Y. 'Oedipus' Run

Katina Paxinou who, with Alexis Minotis, will star with the Greek National Theatre when latter presents "Electra" and "Oedipus" at the Mark Hellinger, N. Y., starting Nov. 19, is not only a legit and film actress, but a composer of music as well. Mme. Paxinou, who studied music in her youth in Berlin, wrote the incidental music for "Oedipus," which will be performed during the show's run.

"Electra" will have incidental music composed by Dimitri Mitropoulos, better known as pianist and conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic. Mitropoulos composed the score when a young man in Athens. Conflicts with his Philharmonic schedule will prevent the maestro from conducting his work during the "Electra" run, as he'd originally hoped.

Bette's 'Company' Getting Revamp

Detroit, Oct. 27.

With Bette Davis apparently fully recovered from laryngitis and a minor throat operation, "Two's Company" is undergoing continued revisions here. The revue has been held over a third week at the Shubert, taking it through Nov. 8, to make up for the three performances cancelled last week because of the star's illness.

The James Russo-Mike Ellis production has been cut about 35 minutes to the proper running time, but will probably be expanded this week with the insertion of two new sketches by Charles Sherman. When they are in and the overlength show is in fairly smooth order, the two weakest skits will be cut out. Two songs have been eliminated.

As of last Saturday (25), Miss Davis was doing six numbers (one had been dropped, but will be revised slightly and replaced), and stopped the show with two of them. The film star, making her first stage appearance in 22 years and her debut in a musical, is said to have gained considerable poise and is quickly adjusting herself to performing song and dance numbers before a live audience.

Following the local run, "Company" goes to the Nixon, Pittsburgh, for the week of Nov. 10, then to the Shubert, Boston, for a fortnight starting Nov. 17, and is due to open Dec. 4 at the Alvin, N. Y.

Early Road Curtain Seen Boon to Lonely Traveler

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

There is a point in favor of an early road curtain that has not been indicated. In the larger communities, hundreds of travelers are affected by the 3 p.m. deadline on occupancy of hotel rooms. Many of these await late evening trains. In the interim their only places to kill time are films, bars, etc.

In Chicago a man should give himself an hour to make a train from a loop theatre. Waiting for a cab, standing in line to retrieve his satchel from the checkroom, checking in at the gate, all take time. In very few instances are departures late enough to dovetail with 11:15 curtains.

If the early curtain became customary, a large segment of this potential might be cajoled into buying tickets.

On one-nighters, it should help to bring in more trade from surrounding territory. It would ease transportation. Shows that take two hours to strike and load could make midnight schedules.

The early curtain might help some. Giving customers entertainment instead of "messages" and "social significance" might not hurt either.

Ned Alvord.

Third Matunuck Season Mapped as R.I. Strawhat Shows Small '52 Profit

Matunuck, R.I. Oct. 28.

On the basis of last summer's operation, which netted a small profit, producers Donald Wolin and Harold L. Schiff plan to reopen their Theatre-by-the-Sea again here next season. The previous year, their first with the spot, they just about broke even.

Although a final accounting hasn't been completed, it's figured that the most profitable week last summer was with Imogene Coca in "Happy Birthday," with a gross of about $12,400 and a net of around $4,100. Other remunerative weeks were played by Mae West in "Come On Up—Ring Twice," Claude Rains in a tryout of "Jezebel's Husband," and Josephine Hull in a tryout of "Mistress Liggins," which drew moderate business but involved a guarantee from Broadway producer-theatre owner Anthony B. Farrell.

Wolin and Schiff plan an 11-week season next year, the same as in 1952. That will mean opening the last week in June and playing through the week after Labor Day. They discovered that even with an inferior new play, such as "Liggins," they had fair attendance the post-Labor Day week, so they believe they can make a profit next year by booking a strong show for that stanza.

The partners' contract for the Theatre-by-the-Sea gives them the option to renew the lease annually for the next six years, with the right to match any purchase offers from other sources. They have thus far invested about $20,000 in improvements on the property, and plan to spend additional coin next season. Besides the playhouse, the layout includes an inn housing resident players and guests, plus restaurant, nitery and bar. The whole setup employs an average of about 60, including actors, production and business staff, waiters, chefs, maids, bartenders, etc.

Musical 'Quixote' Set

Jack Farren and Edgar Rosenberg, members of the NBC television production staff, have formed a partnership for the Broadway production a year hence of a musical version of "Don Quixote." No one has been set to write the adaptation or supply the music and lyrics.

Attorney A. L. Berman will be general manager of the operation.

What Oscar Hammerstein 2d succeeded in doing with "Carmen," Charles Friedman hasn't quite brought off with "Aida." Where the Bizet opera's swirling action, flamboyant color and passionate melodies provided a natural base for the driving pace, humor and excitement of the Negro "Carmen Jones," Verdi's sombre tragedy, despite its exotic background and gaudy ceremonials, tends to weigh down the luxurious but slow "My Darlin' Aida."

Under the circumstances, "My Darlin' Aida," billed as a musical play, remains essentially opera. Unlike "Carmen Jones," which was virtually musical comedy, except that it had a superlative score, this Robert L. Joseph production, while one of the most lavish and visually impressive shows in legit history, seems lacking in the entertainment quality essential for Broadway. It may have a moderate run on impetus of its theatre parties and a rather special audience, but it's a dubious bet to get back much of its huge investment. It must cost a small mint to operate.

The smouldering original story of a racially-divided romantic triangle, transferred from ancient Egypt to the Civil War south, is still dramatically powerful. But it seems heavy and lacking in tempo or saving humor. Moreover, the casting of a white girl in the title part of the mulatto slave girl tends to negate the forbidden aspect and therefore some of the hopelessness and even the conflict of the Confederate officer's love for her. Elaine Malbin, who sang the role opening night and will have it at all evening performances, wears a slightly dark makeup, but she is unmistakably a white girl in the consciousness of the audience, so the situation tends to be synthetic.

This is particularly unfortunate since the theme of racial bigotry, which is present but not especially stressed in the Verdi opera, is underlined in this Friedman adaptation. Thus, the Egyptian priests, turned into vengeful Ku Kluxers in this version, lose some of their point and the corroding hatred of the local Klan head is imperfectly motivated.

Friedman's lyrics, frequently unintelligible as the singers concentrate on the tonal opportunities of the score, seem somewhat prosaic for the melodramatic violence of the story. The spoken lines, generally more understandable, also have more theatrical lift. Within the limits of the story and lines, the show is directed with emphasis on movement.

The performances are generally admirable. Dorothy Sarnoff sings superbly and gives a convincing dramatic portrayal in the expansive role of the scorned southern heiress. Miss Malbin is excellent, if a trifle light vocally, as the doomed slave girl; Howard Jarratt sings acceptably as the Confederate captain torn between tradition and forbidden love, and there are effective performances by William Dillard as the heroine's incendiary father, William Wilderman as the Klan leader and lovers' nemesis, and Kenneth Schon as a mild plantation-owner southern general.

Lemuel Ayers, who designed the stunning looking theatreful of scenery and costumes, rates major billing for one of the most opulent shows within memory. Hanya Holm's choreography includes at least one striking dance routine in the slave quarters and Robert Shaw's choral direction has achieved some pleasant tonal effects, though the lyrics are not always clear.

But for all its visual splendor and inherent quality of the Verdi score, "My Darlin' Aida" seems too ponderous for popular acceptance on Broadway.

Under the schedule for rotating leads, Miss Sarnoff and Miss Malbin will play all evening performances, with Bette Dubro and Eileen Schauler singing the respective roles at matinees. Also, Jarratt and William Olvis will sing alternate performances as Capt. Demarest, the hero. Hobe.

Pirates of Penzance

S. M. Chartok presentation of Gilbert & Sullivan Co. in operetta revival in two acts, with book and lyrics by W. S. Gilbert, music by Arthur Sullivan. Staged by Chartok. Features Martyn Green, Robert Rounseville, Ella Halman, Joseph Macaulay. Musical director, Lehman Engel; sets, Ralph Alswang; costumes, Peggy Morrison; production consultant, Martyn Green. At Mark Hellinger, N. Y., Oct. 27, '52.

GENERAL STANLEY'S WARDS

Mary Louise Beatie, Dolores DePuglia, Helen Dodge, Grace Lang, Sheila Matthews, Eileen Moran, Shirley Pringle, Rita Schoen, Catherine Currie, Bonnie Grevatt, Glynn Hill, Jan Newby, Athena Pappas, Gloria Sacks, Jeanne Schlegel, Helen Whitfield.

PIRATES AND POLICEMEN

Anthony Cerami, Vincent Henry, Don Kaplan, Don La Mon, Ray Morrisey, Michael Rich, Ken Smith, Feodore Tedick, John Dorrin, Herbert Estrow, Radley Flynn, Roger Franklin, Irl Mowry, Bill Nuss, Stanley Propper, Chase Willard.

S. M. Chartok's capable Gilbert & Sullivan troupe, on piracy bent this week, are putting on a gay, spirited "Pirates of Penzance" at the Mark Hellinger, N. Y., as second in its repertory series. Staging is lively, voices of principals and chorus are first-rate, the amusing lyrics come over clearly, and the music (as always) captivates or intrigues. It's a good show.

Under Lehman Engel's gifted musical direction, the troupe is alert as well as accomplished. (Orchestral accompaniment would sound even better if the pit group had a few more strings.) As it is, Engel blends soloists and groups skillfully, and singers and orchestra carefully, for quite musical returns.

Performers are most attractive. Dorothy MacNeil makes a fetching Mabel physically, while vocally she's topnotch, her coloratura soprano shining particularly in her "Poor Wandering One" solo, the evening's highspot. Robert Rounseville makes a manly-appearing pirate apprentice, with a sterling tenor superior to most G&S male romantic leads.

Ella Halman is a jewel as the maid-of-all-work, Ruth; Joseph Macaulay is properly blustery as the pirate king; Mary Roche is pert and lovely as Kate, and Frank Rogier musically robust as Samuel. Martyn Green makes a delightful caricature of Major General Stanley, the very model of a modern major general. Robert Eckles is an amusing police sergeant.

Piracy, in the G&S version, sure has its points. Bron.

Frank Rogier, featured played with S. M. Chartok's Gilbert & Sullivan troupe, did several solo and group parts in Columbia Records' "Merry Widow" album,, though unbilled for same . . . Minnie B. Rutkoff, chairman of department of voice and speech for the Dramatic Workshop, opened own dramatic studio in N.Y.

$150-$250 Greenwich Village Subscription Group's Tepid-Teeoff

Greenwich Village's off-Broadway theatre is moving out of the blue jeans stage. In recent months the uptown crowd has been flocking to the Village sector for such pro attractions as "Summer and Smoke" (Circle-in-the-Square Theatre), "Widowers Houses" (Greenwich Mews Playhouse) and the recently shuttered American Lyric Theatre (Provincetown Playhouse). Latest entry in the Village buildup is Theatre de Lys, which preemed its nine-play season Monday (27) with one of screenwriter-director John Huston's youthful efforts, "Frankie and Johnny."

Theatre de Lys is an offbeat try at subscription legit. In addition to the play series, theatre will include jazz, concert, opera and an art centre series, which will feature the "readings" vogue. It's an ambitious project, but its initial effort bodes ill for things to come.

Frankie and Johnny

William de Lys (assisted by James Morske and Stanley S. Kostner) presentation of musical play in two acts by John Huston with incidental music by Irwin A. Bazelon, songs by Hilda Taylor & Ed Safranski. Features Val Dufour, Pat Larson, Hilda Taylor, Beverly Churchill. Directed by Don M. Dickinson; choreography, Vonn Hamilton; settings and lighting, Paul M. Heller; costumes, Jan Holm. At Theatre de Lys, N. Y., Oct. 27, '52.

|---|---|
| Sheriff | Fred Downs |
| Frankie | Pat Larson |
| Lila | Beverly Churchill |
| The Madam | Doris Jones |
| Prizefighter | Norman Feld |
| Bartender | David Leland |
| Johnny | Val Dufour |
| Nelly Bly | Hilda Taylor |
| Piano Player | Robert Ball |
| Girls in Red | Pat Jennings, Jacquetta Keith, Lavina Nielsen, Rosemary Zinner, Ann Hilton, Nancy Farnsworth |
| Six Macks | Allan Craine, Gregg Owen, Tom Panko, David Wood, Bill Anderson, David Shustak |

It looms as a too-too special and overly chic project with limited appeal. The subscription angle and clubby atmosphere (it's housed in the old Hudson Theatre, a nabe grind house, revamped to the tune of $100,000 with a comfortable seating plan, new paint job and cuffo hat checking and intermission refreshments) have plenty of snob appeal, but chances of drawing an orthodox legit audience are slim.

Subscription tab is $250 annually for a pair of ducats to all the attractions and a $150 for a single membership. Theatre also has a "special" $2 annual membership tab which entitles holder to buy tix for any attraction at a cut rate. Theatre has not yet released its membership figures.

Opening show is a motley of drama, ballet and musicomedy. The Frankie and Johnny legend, adapted into a three-act meller by John M. Kirkland in the 1930-31 season, can't seem to make up its mind what it is in this guise. There's not too much dialog, a number of badly-spotted ballet sequences and an uninspired score. It's all done in a highly stylized form that could be trimmed down to an okay 15-minute sequence in a revue, but only lulls in its present two-act setup.

Show, directed by Don M. Dickinson, plods along with little pace change, and the few high spots are quickly dissipated by the unimaginative libretto. There's some inspiration evident in the ballet sequences, conceived by Vonn Hamilton, but there's a lack of exuberance on the part of the players and hoofers which hurts. The comedy attempts are weak and wearying.

Cast displays little uptown potential except for Val Dufour, who essays Johnny. Costuming and sets are in the colorful 1890 period and Irwin A. Bazelon has contributed an unusual musical backing. Frankie and Johnny will remain part of the American folk legend, but Theatre de Lys has done 'em wrong. Gros.

Zimbalist Back to Stage In Menotti Concerto Bow

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.

Violinist Efrem Zimbalist, who retired some years ago to head the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, will take up his bow again Dec. 5, when he appears with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy in the world premiere of a violin concerto by Gian-Carlo Menotti.

Menotti's first composition in this form so impressed Zimbalist, that he agreed to come out of retirement for its performance. Following the premiere Dec. 5-6, the concerto will be played with the Philadelphia Orchestra in New York, Dec. 9, and in Washington, March 31.

Inside Stuff—Legit

There's an involved story in the program listing of the dog in the cast of "Bernardine," which opened recently at the Playhouse, N. Y. In the play, the pup is given by the doting mama to her son, whose sole interest is girls. The kid thinks this mother's present is just about the end, so authoress Mary Chase has listed the dog's name in the program as Last Straw and the part as being played by Harmon Von Doren. Latter was the name of a character played many years ago by H. C. Van Duser, father of Jane Van Duser, one of the principals in "Bernardine." Miss Van Duser owns the dog, a dachshund whose real name is High Pockets. It was also in the cast of Miss Chase's previous hit, "Harvey," with her.

Not generally known is the show biz background of Clarence J. Bulliet, art critic who died in Chicago last week (20). Although retired from the Daily News there in 1948, he contributed to the sheet. He joined the News in 1932, upon its absorption of the Evening Post, and served as drama and art critic for eight years. Earlier, he had been pressagent (for seven years) for Robert Mantell, the Shakespearean actor, and for the first roadshow of "The Birth of a Nation."

"It has been reported that the members of the company supplied a large part of the money necessary to open 'Buttrio Square' in New York when one of the original backers prudently withdrew," says Wolcott Gibbs in the New Yorker. "They all have my profound sympathy, but I can't help observing that their plight proves an old theory of mine that actors conceivably know even less about the theatre than the critics."

New Intime Theatre Making Bow in Frisco

San Francisco, Oct. 28.

A new intimate theatre will bow on the local theatre scene Nov. 12, with Mara Alexander Gilbert in the lead role of "Twentieth Century." Housed in the former wax museum facing the Pacific Ocean and a stone's throw from the famed Cliff House, the 129-seater will be known as Theatre At The Beach.

Group backing the enterprise consists of local businessmen, and is expected to hook up with a Los Angeles enterprise for exchange of plays with that city.

In addition to Miss Gilbert, who also functions as exec director, Leslie Abbott, N. Y. director, has been signed to stage productions. Shows will run year-round, Wednesdays through Sundays, with opener set on profit-sharing basis and following productions under Equity.

Cast of 27 for "Twentieth Century" includes Jack Clark, Anthony LoCicero, Larry Berger and John Miller. House will sell at $1.80 throughout.

Theatre on Wings, Inc., has been chartered to conduct a business in stage properties and dressings, with offices in New York. Gilinsky Schur-Mishkin were filing attorneys.

Chi Legit Sails Along Smoothly; 'Dolls' $47,525; 'Fourposter' $27,600

Chicago, Oct. 28.

The usual pre-election slump doesn't seem to have hit its full effect as yet, with most of the shows off only a few thousand. In contrast, Ballet Theatre opened with a resounding bang from all the critics and almost went capacity over the weekend, the only thing hampering the gross, being the $4 top and the $1 admission for the gallery. Show had a $50,000 advance before it opened Thursday (23).

There are a raft of new attractions coming in the next two months. First "Gigi," Nov. 5 at the Harris; second, "Tree Grows in Brooklyn," at the Shubert Nov. 11, and third, "Top Banana," at the Great Northern Nov. 17. In addition, the New York City Opera Co. comes in Nov. 12-30. "Country Girl" comes in Dec. 1 to the Selwyn to fill the roster.

Estimates for Last Week

Ballet Theatre, Opera House ($4; 3,600). First six performances a huge $39,500.

"Fourposter," Blackstone (5th wk) ($4.20; 1,534). Staying near the SRO figure with sock $27,600.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (36th wk) ($6; 2,100). Excellent $47,525 for next to closing frame.

"I Am A Camera," Harris (6th wk) ($4.40; 1,000). Winding up well, with next to last week neat $14,900.

"Stalag 17," Erlanger (9th wk) ($4.40; 1,334). Staying up very brightly with $16,560.

'ROBERTS' FAIR $14,300, ON MIDWEST SPLITTER

Youngstown, Oct. 28.

"Mister Roberts" earned another modest chunk of profit last week in an eight-performance split for a total of $14,300, including three guaranteed showings. The Tod Andrews starrer got away to a $1,500 take for a one-nighter Monday (20) at Shea's, Jamestown, Pa.; added $1,500 for a one-nighter Tuesday (21) at Shea's, Ashtabula; picked up $4.800 more in three shows Wednesday-Thursday (22-23) at the Colonial, Akron, and took $6,500 as its share for a three-performance guaranteed stand Friday-Saturday at the Palace here.

Leland Hayward production is playing the Cox, Cincinnati, all this week and will be at the Cass, Detroit, next week.

'Banana' Smooth $43,200 In Cleveland Stanza

Cleveland, Oct. 28.

"Top Banana" climbed right up the tree to collect a resounding $43,200 and close to capacity crowds in eight performances at the Hanna last week.

Kaye Ballard, Cleveland singing comedienne in the Phil Silvers musical, copped kudos not only from critics but also hometown audiences. Katharine Cornell in "Constant Wife," current on Hanna boards, will be followed by "Paint Your Wagon" Nov. 3 and "Bagels and Yox" for a four-day date Nov. 13.

'Girl' Nearly $18,000 For Three Coast Stops

Portland, Ore., Oct. 28.

Robert Young, Dane Clark and Nancy Kelly in "The Country Girl" grossed a neat $10,000 in three evening performances and one matinee at the 1,500-seat Mayfair Theatre last Thursday-Saturday (23-25) at $4.20 top. One-nighters Monday (20) at the Community, Berkeley, Cal., and Tuesday (21) at the Alhambra, Sacramento, brought the week's gross to nearly $18,000.

Danny Kaye opens a four-day engagement at the Paramount here Saturday (1).

'Murder' $27,000, D. C.

Washington, Oct. 28.

Second and final week of "Dial 'M' for Murder" at the Shubert grossed a fine $27,000, about $3,000 better than the initial stanza for the meller. "Tree Grows in Brooklyn" moved into the Shubert last night for a fortnight stand. Looks like a prosperous run, with the musical playing to a $4.80 top and backstopped by the Theatre Guild subscription list.

National Theatre, dark last week, reopened last night with Margaret Sullavan in "Deep Blue Sea" for a single week. Thanks to the marquee name, advance sale was very strong.

'Blondes' Fair $21,900 In Full New Haven Week

New Haven, Oct. 28.

Full-week stand of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" at the Shubert last week (20-25) shaped up as a weak first half and a substantial last half building to sellout. Overall take, at $4.80 top, hit just under a fair $21,900. Biz was clipped somewhat by an earlier stopover at nearby Hartford. Show is closing this Saturday (1) in Philadelphia, cutting a fortnight's stay to a week.

"Jane" is doing three days this week (30-1), and next week gets preem of "Rise By Sin" (6-8), followed by another breakin, "I've Got Sixpence" (Nov. 12-15). Other November bookings are "Don Juan in Hell" (Nov. 20-22) and premiere of "The Grey-Eyed People" (27-29).

'JUAN' SMASH $56,600; 'STATE' OK $14,400, L.A.

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

Paul Gregory's production of "Don Juan in Hell," headed for the road over the weekend after racking up a tremendous record gross of $106,500 for two weeks at the 2,670-seat Philharmonic Auditorium. Final week's tally of $56,600 was the best the house has had since the first visit of "South Pacific" more than two years ago.

Under the terms of the Gregory deal with Edwin Lester, who presented here, "Don Juan" exits with $65,750 for the two weeks. Contract called for a $50,000 guarantee plus an even split of everything over $75,000 for the fortnight.

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Carthay Circle (4th wk) (1,518; $2.40). Still hovering around the same okay figure, $14,400.

"Don Juan In Hell," Philharmonic Aud (2d wk) (2,670; $4.80). Smashing $56,600 for the second and final week. Vincent Price subbed for the ailing Charles Laughton at two matinee performances.

"Farfel Follies," Biltmore (1st wk) (1,636, $3.60). Yiddish-American vaude revue got off to a pleasant start with $20,000 for the initial frame, around $6,000 over operating cost.

"The Web and the Rock," Las Palmas (1st wk) (400; $2.40). Eugenie Leontovich production got off to a slow start with mixed notices. Around $850 for the first four days (opened Tuesday) which is below costs.

'Bell' Ringing $24,800 In 3 Western Stands

Denver, Oct. 28.

"Bell, Book and Candle," starring Joan Bennett and Zachary Scott, rolled up a fine $24,800 gross last week in a seven-performance spread over three stands. The John van Druten comedy started with $8,500 for three performances Monday-Tuesday (20-21) at the Capitol, Salt Lake City; added $3,100 for a one-nighter Thursday (23) at the Chief, Colorado Springs, and rang up $13,200 in three showings Friday-Saturday (24-25) at the Auditorium here.

Shepard Traube production is spitting this week between Wichita, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth and Dallas, and next week does another split between San Antonio, Austin, Houston and New Orleans.

'Nina' 10½G, Frisco

San Francisco, Oct. 28.

Jose Greco and his Spanish dance company opened Sunday night (26) at the 1,758-seat Curran, with house scaled to $4.80. Greco is set for a two-week stand.

In spite of an expected booking into the Geary Theatre, which is dark, "John Brown's Body," a Paul Gregory production under aegis of Dr. A. Rappaport, Town Hall mentor, will play the 1,842-seat High School of Commerce Nov. 8-9. Rappaport only recently leased the Curran for the highly-successful engagement of "Don Juan In Hell."

Estimate For Last Week

"Nina," Alcazar (3d wk) (C-$3.60; 1,157) (Edward Everett Horton, Martha Linden, Christopher Plummer). Slipped to a colorless $10,500.

'Madam' Good $36,600; 'Family' $12,500, St. Louis

St. Louis, Oct. 28.

"Call Me Madam" wound up a two-week stand at the American Theatre Saturday (24) with another profit-taking session, show at $5.50 top grabbing an estimated good $36,600 that followed $33,300 for the first stanza. House is dark until Nov. 10, when "I Am A Camera," with Julie Harris, tees off a week's session.

One-week frame of "The Royal Family," with Ruth Hussey as visiting lead, wound up Sunday (26) with an average boxscore at the Ansell Bros. midtown Empress Theatre. Piece grabbed approximately $12,500 for eight performances, with a $2.50 top prevailing.

'Shrike' $19,500, 'Sea' 19G, Hub

Boston, Oct. 28.

Lone newcomer this week is "The Suspects," in for a week at the Plymouth. Continuing is "The Shrike," in finale at the Colonial, and "Good Night Ladies," at the Majestic. Latter production requested no crix coverage, preferring to stand or fall on word of mouth.

Estimates for Last Week

"Deep Blue Sea," Plymouth (2d wk) ($4.20; 1,200). Same as first week, $19,000.

"Goodnight Ladies," Majestic (1st wk) ($3.60; 1,100). Near $16,000.

"The Shrike," Colonial (1st wk) ($3.60; 1,500). Slick $19,500. Final week current.

"Tree Grows in Brooklyn, Opera House (2nd wk) ($4.20-$4.80); 3,000). Dipped to about $27,000 for final stanza. House currently dark.

'PACIFIC' SETS SEATTLE RECORD WITH $100,063

Seattle, Oct. 28.

Record smashing appearance last week of "South Pacific," with the special appearance of Martha Wright, a local girl, at the Civic Auditorium, hit an all-time legit high for Seattle, with $100,063 for six nights and two matinees.

The star and the production were exceptionally well received by patrons and press, and the duo hit the front page with art and stories. In fact, the town made a lot of it. Seattle showgoers demonstrated appreciation of the appearance of Miss Wright on a temporary lend-lease to the touring company while the regular femme lead, Janet Blair, was on vacation.

House was tailored to seat 4,500, scaled to $4.50.

Prior local record, as far as recalled, was the recent "Call Me Madam," with $40,000, also at the Civic. However, "South Pacific" grossed $112,368 for an eight-performance week at a $4.80 top at the 4,301-seat State Fair Auditorium, Dallas, in the fall of 1950, piling up a total take of $320,000 for the 25-performance stand. The all-time legit gross is believed to be the $119,811 drawn by "Oklahoma" (also a Rodgers-Hammerstein show) at a $4.20 top for a regular eight-performance week at the 6,000-seat Municipal Auditorium, Oklahoma City, in November, 1946.

'Jane' Fairish $13,200 In Stay at Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 28.

"Jane," in as second of a subscription series of bookings under Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society auspices, drew a fairish $13,200 at Ford's here last week. Considerably under Katharine Cornell's previous week's take of over $30,000 for "Constant Wife," the Edna Best-John Loder starrer held up very well as a followup of more Maugham for legit loyalists.

Strong advance activity is being evidenced for Van Heflin in "The Shrike," due Nov. 3, and also on subscription.

'Okla.' $18,900, Milw'kee

Milwaukee, Oct. 28.

The perennial "Oklahoma" had one of its lean sessions last week, getting a losing $18,900 in eight performances at the Davidson here.

Theatre Guild meal-ticket reportedly has a promising advance for this week's stand at the Lyceum, Minneapolis.

B'way B.O. Sizzling With 8 Sellouts; Katie SRO $38,800, Shirley $24,600, Hayes $24,200, 'Bernardine' $17,100

The autumn boom on Broadway continued last week. Some shows eased off slightly, but at least two went to new highs for the runs and there were three new sellouts, including two recent openings and an established hit. That brought the list of SRO entries to eight, highest number in many months.

Shows that went clean at all times included the newly-arrived "Millionairess" and "Time of the Cuckoo," the long-run "Mrs. McThing," plus such established clicks as "Guys and Dolls," "King and I," "Pal Joey," "New Faces," "Wish You Were Here" and "Evening With Beatrice Lillie."

Last week's sole opening, S. M. Chartock's Gilbert & Sullivan Co., did surprisingly well in the face of a mild press. This week's "My Darlin' Aida" drew a generally tepid set of notices, while the Chartock troupe got a slightly better break from the second-stringers. "Dial 'M' for Murder," arriving tonight (Wed.) completes this week's entry list.

Bernardine," Playhouse (2d wk) (C-$4.80; 999; $21,500). First full week, nearly $17,100 (previous week), $13,100 on four regular performances and two previews).

"Evening with Beatrice Lillie," Booth (4th wk) (R-$6; 900; $24,500) (Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner). About $24,500 again.

"Fourposter," Barrymore (53d wk) (C-$4.80; 1,060; $24,996) (Betty Field, Burgess Meredith). About $19,600 (previous week, $20,800).

Gilbert & Sullivan, Hellinger (1st wk) (C-$4.80; 1,507; $40,113). Opening bill, "The Mikado," drew over $24,000; "Pirates of Penzance" opened Monday night (27), with a dual-bill of "Pinafore" and "Trial by Jury" set for next week.

"Guys and Dolls," 46th Street (101st wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,319; $43,904). Just $44,000 again.

"Gambler," Lyceum (2d wk) (D-$4.80; 995; $22,845) (Alfred Drake). Nearly $5,300; (previous week, $8,600); closing Saturday night (1).

"In Any Language," Cort (3d wk) (C-$4.80; 1,056; $27,700) Uta Hagen). Almost $16,400 (previous week $19,000).

"King and I," St. James (83d wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717) (Yul Brynner). Clean again at $51,700.

"Male Animal," Music Box (26th wk), (C-$4.80; 1,012; $25,903) (Elliot Nugent, Martha Scott, Robert Preston). Almost $20,900 (previous week, $21,000).

"Millionairess," Shubert (2d wk) (C-$6-$4.80; 1,361; $39,000) (Katharine Hepburn). First full week, nearly $38,000 on Theatre Guild subscription (previous week, three regular performances and two previews drew $24,500).

"Moon Is Blue," Miller (86th wk) (C-$4.80; 920; $21,586) (Donald Cook), Barry Nelson, Janet Riley). About $15,200 (previous week, $15,500).

"Mr. Pickwick," Plymouth (6th wk) (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019). About $10,200 (previous week, $12,200 (previous week, $12,800); moved Monday night (27) to the Golden.

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (29th wk) (C-$4.80; 912; $24,100 (Helen Hayes). Climbed to sellout attendance for first time in the run, with standees at all performances, for $24,200 (previous week, $24,000).

"New Faces," Royale (24th wk) (R-$6; 1,035; $30,600). Another new high for the run, with standees at all performances, for $24,200 (previous week, $24,000).

New Faces," Royale (24th wk) (R-$6; 1,035; $30,600). Another new high for the run, with standees at all times, $31,190 (previous week, $30,900).

"Pal Joey," Broadhurst (43d wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,160; $39,602) (Vivienne Segal, Harold Lang). Just short of $40,000 again.

"Point of No Return," Alvin (41st wk) (D-$4.80-$6; 1,331; $37,924) (Henry Fonda). Almost $26,700 (previous week, $27,800); closing Nov. 22, to tour.

"Sacred Flame," President (3d wk) (D-$3.60; 300; $7,000). About $2,000 again; closed Saturday night (25) after 23 performances.

"South Pacific," Majestic (184th wk) (MC-$6; 1,659; $50,186) (Martha Wright, George Britton). Reached $49,000 (previous week, $49,400); Cloris Leachman subbing as femme lead during Miss Wright's "loan-out" to the touring company.

"Time of the Cuckoo," Empire (2d wk) (D-$6-$4.80; 1,082; $25,056) Shirley Booth). First full week had standees at all performances, with party commissions holding the gross just under $24,600 (previous week, first five performances and two previews drew capacity $20,300).

"Wish You Were Here," Imperial (18th wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,400; $52,080). Nearly $52,300 (previous week, $52,300).

OPENING THIS WEEK

"Dial 'M' for Murder," Plymouth (D-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019) (Maurice Evans). James P. Sherwood production of Frederick Knott's London melodrama; opens tonight (Wed.).

"My Darlin' Aida," Winter Garden (O-$7.20-$6.60; 1,519; $51,881). Robert L. Joseph, in association with Paul Vroom, production of Charles Friedman's adaptation of the Verdi opera; opened Monday night (27).

'Suspects' $6,000, 'Eden' 10G, Philly

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.

Show business continued at ebb here, with neither of two straight plays on display exhibiting any strength at the till. "Climate of Eden," which relighted the Forrest, drew two unfavorable notices out of three and public reaction was off.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" returned to the Shubert last evening (27) for a one-week stand. In immediate prospect is only "Maid of the Ozarks," slated for Erlinger, Nov. 3.

Estimates for Last Week

"Climate of Eden," Forrest (1st wk) ($4.55: 1,760). Climate of Moss Hart's "Eden" too variable for boxoffice lure. Cool $10,000.

"The Suspects," Locust (2d wk) ($3.90; 1,580). Whodunit was dubious from start, despite London sanction. Second sesh dropped to meager $6,000.

BETTE DAVIS $27,500 FOR FIVE IN DETROIT

Detroit, Oct. 28.

"Two's Company," starring Bette Davis, grossed $27,500 in five performances at the Shubert last week. Show, which was scheduled for two weeks, will stay for a third stanza before moving on to Pittsburgh and Boston, ending its Detroit engagement Nov. 8.

After collapsing at the preem Sunday (19), Miss Davis finished out the show. She was unable to appear the next evening, but show went on minus scenes in which she figures. About 25% of audience took refunds. Those who stayed were given tickets for a special performance by Miss Davis which originally was set for Monday (27) midnight but was held at a special Sunday (26) matinee instead. Show was cancelled Tuesday (21) and Wednesday (22) because of Miss Davis' laryngitis.

At the Cass, "Bagels and Yox" grossed $19,000. Current production is "Gigi," starring Audrey Hepburn, in for a week.

Cornell-'Wife' $26,600 In Pittsburgh Visit

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.

Katharine Cornell's "Constant Wife," launching a series of eight ATS-Theatre Guild subscription plays here, gave the Nixon its best week of the young season so far. Take was just short of $26,600, around $9,000 of that coming in season ticket sales.

Nixon currently has "Top Banana," and advance indicates pretty close to a sellout for the Phil Silvers musical. House will be dark next week, due to cancellation of first half of a scheduled fortnight engagement of Bette Davis in "Two's Company," which won't come in now until Nov. 10.

Dinner For Three

Montreal, Oct. 25.

KoolVent Theatre production of comedy in three acts by Herbert Kramer. Direction and music by Kramer; set by Arthur Voronka. At Gesu Theatre, Montreal, Oct. 24, '52; $3.15 top.

|---|---|
| Philip | Herbert Kramer |
| Doris | Elfi Koenig |
| Pierre | Barry Morse |
| Austin | Robert Goodier |
| Maid | Joan Blackman |

Seldom has there been a more contrived theatrical offering than the KoolVent Theatre's production of Herbert Kramer's "Dinner for Three," currently at the Gesu Theatre here.

Louis Levin, backer of this new company (a company which derives it's name from Levin's KoolVent awning business) has spared no expense in promoting this venture; has met all salary demands to assemble a cast; has done most everything, but one matter—he didn't get a play.

"Dinner for Three," in one form or another, has been knocking around theatres for more than 20 years, and age has done little to enhance its theatrical value. Present adaptation by Henry Kramer has been updated in a dialog sense and twisted into a vehicle that reduces it to little more than a showcase for Kramer's Vienna-type music and Elfi Koenig's operetta style of chirping.

The story, such as it is, revolves around a triangle consisting of Miss Koenig and Barry Morse, the man and wife, with Kramer as the old friend and bachelor who is suspected by the husband of being in love with his wife. Into this obvious and not exactly original situation is a Shakespeare-spouting butler, played by Robert Goodier, and the usual French maid, Joan Blackman.

Miss Koenig, who hails from Vienna and is wife of backer Levin, manages to maintain a certain fluttery attitude throughout. Of the Kramer songs she tackles, an item called "Walking on Air" is most reasonable and tuneful. Morse, who has established a fair rep in the past two years for his strawhat and little theatre ventures, is adequately confused and suspicious and is certainly the most assured performer on stage at any time. Kramer, despite a heavy accent and a certain ponderous attitude, portrays the playboy to the hilt in between a series of piano and song interludes.

The single set, used as both a studio and living room, is effective and the limited lighting facilities are used to advantage.

Following a two-week engagement at the Gesu (providing advance sales hold), the previously planned tour of "Dinner" will be dropped and KoolVent will substitute "The Happy Time" with Roger Dann, some of the members of the present cast and other localities, and open at Her Majesty's Dec. 1.

The Web and the Rock

Hollywood, Oct. 22.

Eugenie Leontovich-George St. George production of drama in two acts (eight scenes) by Lester Cohen, adapted from novel by Thomas Wolfe. Staged by Miss Leontovich, who also stars. At Las Palmas Theatre, Hollywood, Oct. 22, '52; $2.40 top.

|---|---|
| Mrs. Esther Jack | Eugenie Leontovich |
| George "Monk" Weber | Earl Colbert |
| Jim Piemmons | Al Sargent |
| Sylvia Messerman | Geraldine McDonald |
| Girl in saloon | Catherine Cronin |
| Bum in saloon | Harvey Kaufman |
| Jimmy Wright | Patrick Brown |
| Mr. Rawng | Kay Kuter |
| Fae Mae Kelso | Mimi Borrel |
| Rosalind Bailey | Cristal Ortoni |
| Max Commiskey | Michael O'Brien |
| Mrs. Van Elstrom | Vicki Bakken |
| Foxhall Edwards | Justin McCarthy |
| Young Writer | Marlin Van Dover |

Pretentious posturing is the keynote of this Coast tryout of the adaptation of Thomas Wolfe's obviously autobiographical novel. As result, any merit the Lester Cohen script might have is completely obscured in one of the most infuriating professional productions ever shown on the Coast.

Eight scenes offered here (a ninth was cut shortly before the premiere) trace the story of the struggling young writer and his fierce love affair with an older woman whose devotion and faith, despite continuous bickering, eventually lead to the publication of the author's novel. It is, apparently, little changed since its original unsuccessful tryout at an upstate New York strawhatter two years ago.

Eugenie Leontovich, who co-produced and directed in addition to essaying the femme lead, must bear the brunt of the blame for this fiasco. Her staging has an almost maniacal frenzy and her own performance is incredibly theatrical throughout. Her hand-picked leading man, Earl Colbert, a member of her Leontovich Players group, parrots the lines in a meaningless one-dimensional characterization, and joins her in some of the most nauseating love scenes ever put on stage. Remainder of the cast is equally unable to rise above the direction, and the purposeless narration of Walter Coy is on the same level.

Sets by Valentina Raab overflow the stage and give the characters an opportunity to indulge in long hikes when not prancing about center-stage, leaping from tables or slobbering at each other.

Maid and the Martian

Hollywood, Otc. 22.

Gallery Stage production of romantic comedy in three acts (five scenes) by Joseph Barbera. Directed by Gordon Hunt. At Gallery Stage, Hollywood, Oct. 15, '52; $2.40 top.

|---|---|
| Kay Morley | Pat Richard |
| Sam Morley | Allan Lurie |
| Mitchie Chase | Kay Barkley |
| Prof. John Borden | Stanley Malotte |
| Jessica Bailey | Pat Prest |
| Capt. Derro | Maury Hill |
| 1st Guard | Hank Loomis |
| 2nd Guard | Joseph Karbo |

Radio comedy dialog mars this initial offering in what may turn out to be a rash of scripts based on interplanetary relations, but with keen revision "The Maid and the Martian" might have a chance at bigger things. Plot-wise, it's amusing and as credible as a farce needs to be.

Joseph Barbera script is about a Martian who crash-lands near the mountain-top hideaway of some amiable drunks and proceeds to hold them captive while he tries to signal Mars to pave the way for invasion. The "secret weapon" of a virginal young farm gal proves his undoing and although the end is predictable, the proceedings engender considerable chuckles.

For local consumption, "The Maid" is attractive, enough even though the local cast vitiates some of the humor by mugging and overacting. It's a long way from the bigtime, though, unless Barbera can sharpen the dialog in his rewrite.

Gordon Hunt's direction is frenzied, perhaps as result of the fact that the production was thrown in on short notice. Pat Prest, as the farm gal, makes the best impression in the cast.

Equity Show

Getting Married
(LENOX HILL, N. Y.)

In its first production of the season at the Lenox Hill Playhouse, N. Y., Equity Library Theatre emerges with a new decor, a remodeled stage, and an old weakness for regarding the play as a second-hand case solely to display the actors' shining talents. Naturally, classics suffer the most under such treatment, and Shaw's forum on the marital state is this week's sacrifice.

Director Lawrence Carra seems to be responsible for the slackness of pace, the failure to project what Shavian wit is here, the bizzare grouping and the variety of different acting styles.

Louis Edmonds' snobbish Hitchkiss is handsome, well-timed and neatly styled; Lloyd Bochner brings appeal and humor to the role of Sykes, the reluctant bridegroom, and Kay Parker, as Mrs. Bridgenorth, is the only woman in the cast who achieves the spirit and emphasis her part calls for. All three of these actors heighten their portrayals to exactly the right point, below which the character is lost and above which it is unbearable.

Guilty of overdoing is Helene Miller, in perpetual emotion as Leo, the skittish young wife, while William Paterson, as Reginald, her former husband, so weakens the character by underplaying that it can hardly get across the footlights. Dana Hardwick's genial greengrocer Collins, and John Stephen's amiable bishop are credit contributions, while Arthur Seelen's gruff general and Lisa Ayers' strong-minded Lesbia are liabilities.

Michaele Myers, as the rebellous bride Edith, and Anne Francine, as the magnetic Mrs. George, seem miscast, epecially since Miss Francine uses hiprolling and Wild West inflections as a Victorian, if devastating, English woman.

News Ed's Medieval Play To Get U. of Kansas Preem

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

New play by Henry C. Haskell will be premiered in a four-night run at the University Theatre of the U. of Kansas, Lawrence, Oct. 29-Nov. 1. Opus is "The Morning Star," based on the romance of Heloise and Abelard.

Direction is by Dr. John Newfield, in his first year as playhouse director at K.U.

Barrault French Troupe Gives Gallic Garnish To Gide's 'Hamlet' Version

Montreal, Oct. 28.

In its second week of repertory at Her Majesty's here, following its smash success with Marivaux's "Les Fausses Confidences" and Moliere's "Les Fourberies de Scapin," the Madeleine Renaud, Jean-Louis Barrault Co. of Paris added "Hamlet," in Andre Gide's translation, as one of several other offerings. This "Hamlet" was first performed in 1946 by the two when they broke with the Comedie Francaise and formed their own company.

In comparison to the accepted Anglo-American idea of "Hamlet," this version is still lacking in a sense of greatness, drama and interpretation. Some of this is no doubt due to Gide's translation which, faithful to the original, on the whole misses some of Shakespeare's more subtle inferences and shaded meanings.

Barrault, in the name role, does a complete and at times remarkable switch from the light, frothy Moliere and Marivaux offerings with which he opened this tour. He plays Hamlet with great restraint throughout, occasionally showing flashes of his more exhibitionist nature in the play-within-a-play sequence and with Horatio.

There are many moments during the three acts when things slow up to the point of tedium.

Jacques Dacqmine, as the rascally king, Claudius, is convincing, although he is inclined to go overboard, particularly in his closet scene. Marie-Helene Daste, as Hamlet's mother, only comes into her own during the bedroom stanza, when Hamlet stabs Polonius. Here she develops a more distraught character which she seemed to have missed in earlier moments.

As in all other parts assigned to her, Simone Valere as Ophelia is standout. From a quiet, confused young girl, she goes mad with a realism almost frightening to watch. Jean-Claude Michel, as Ophelia's brother Laertes, is adequate; Pierre Bertin offers a rather detached Polonius, missing the impact of his big speech to Laertes.

Jean Juillard, in the dual role of Ghost and later as leading player to entertain the King and Queen, is excellent. Charles Mahieu, as the first gravedigger, registers solidly, and Jean Desailly, as Horatio, is consistent but never memorable.

The sets by Andre Masson are spotty. At times, such as the opening and closing scenes, they tend to overshadow the actors; at other times they seem like last-minute improvisations. Olive-grey drapes are used almost throughout and there is a tendency to crowd the stage and destroy the value Barrault is trying to establish; a value of space and loneliness.

Incidental music by Arthur Honegger maintains the proper atmosphere at all times, and regardless of what shortcomings there are bound to be in translation, Barrault and his very able company offer a sincere, forthright interpretation.

'Wagon' Laggard $17,000 In Buff.-Rochester Split

Rochester, Oct. 28.

"Paint Your Wagon," starring Burl Ives, grossed a sad $17,000 last week in a split between Buffalo and here. The Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical drew about $10,000 in five performances Monday-Thursday (20-23) at the Erlanger, Buffalo, and added approximately $7,000 in three shows Friday-Saturday (24-25) at the Auditorium here.

Wolfe Kaufman-John Yorke show is playing the Royal Alexandria, Toronto, this week, goes to the Hanna, Cleveland, next week and the Cox, Cincinnati, the following stanza.

'Gigi' 13G, Cincy

Cincinnati, Oct. 28.

Road show season here got off to a light start last week. Audrey Hepburn in "Gigi" grossed a disappointing $13,000 for eight performances in the 1,300-seat Cox Theatre at a $4.31 top.

Bookings are greater than last year. Cox has "Mister Roberts" currently and "I Am a Camera" next week, both at $3.69 top, with "Paint Your Wagon" week of Nov. 17 in the 2,500-seat Taft at $4.92 top.

Earl Paul, composer of musical TV shorts for commercials, has finished a symphonic poem, in three movements, titled "The Cycle." Publication is due shortly.

U. of N. Hampshire Thesps Set 5 Plays in 30th Season

Durham, N. H., Oct. 28.

The 30th season of Mask & Dagger, dramatic organization at the U. of New Hampshire here, will be marked by presentation of five dramas, beginning with "Kind Lady," Nov. 19-22.

Founded in 1922, the student thespian group has staged one or more plays in each of the past 30 years. Present director and faculty advisor is Prof. Joseph Batcheller.

In Hanover, the Dartmouth Players of Dartmouth College will open their 1952-53 season by presenting George Kelly's "The Show-off," under direction of Henry B. Williams.

Better Plays

boxoffice price. There the problem obviously is not arithmetic but product. The most favorable economics in the world wouldn't help.

The analysis then boils down to this: A bad show can't be saved by good economics. But a good show can be killed by bad economics. A super-duper show can live, and even thrive up to a point, in spite of bad economics. That is why we have been witnessing in the theatre a boom or bust situation. A smash hit will survive and pay off. It's the in-between area where there is cause for real concern.

The 'Good' Play

There is the "good" play as distinguished from the "great" play or "flop" play. Under present-day economics, with costs what they are, a play that is just a good play has a tough struggle for existence and is likely to fold in the red. Lower boxoffice prices would undoubtedly attract a larger audience to plays in this category. The trouble is that costs would likewise have to be lower to pay off. That is where the arbitrary part of some of the rules as to minimum number of people, minimum scales, and minimum everything else but costs, begins to show its influence on survival.

The influence is more deeply rooted than survival. With such a setup, many plays never even get underway because of the gloomy arithmetic. Twenty years ago about 200 shows would be launched during a theatrical season. Today it has dwindled to about one-third of that. There were over 70 theatres in 1929. Today there are fewer than 30. That is plain retrogression, contraction, obsolescence or whatever else you want to call it.

What's the answer? A page of history from the automobile industry is better than a volume of debate. That industry has gotten more and more of the consumer dollar by making better automobiles at lower cost (with due allowance for our recent inflation headaches). The theatre can likewise hold its own, or go forward, if there are better plays at lower cost. True, in industry, technological advance has made possible reductions in cost and improvements in product. The theatre does not present as much of a field day for technology as does the regular run of industry. Nevertheless, the requisite formula is still the same—improved product and lower cost.

There may be some squeamishness about the comparison of the theatre with industry. We must, however, face up to the fact that we are talking of the commercial theatre, not subsidized theatre. The market place knows no sentiment. It wants the "mostest for the leastest." Unless the theatre is in there pitching in that sort of a ball park, it must move over to make way for a competing product that does keep consumer, producer and investor happy.

Skinner-'Paris' $14,500, In 7-Performance Split

Richmond, Oct. 28.

Cornelia Otis Skinner put together a sock $14,500 gross last week in seven performances split between three stands in her one-woman musical show, "Paris '90." Star got $6,200 in three shows Monday-Wednesday (20-22) at the Court Square, Springfield, Mass., added $2,000 on a one-nighter Thursday (23) at the McCarter, Princeton, and finaled with $6,300 for three performances Friday Saturday (24-25) at the WRVA Theatre here.

Actress is continuing her one-nighters this week.

Legit Follow-Ups

The King and I
(ST. JAMES, N. Y.)

Constance Carpenter, who after understudying Gertrude Lawrence for more than a year took over the femme lead in "The King and I" recently on the star's death, is giving a credible, graceful and attractive performance in the part. Her appearance and characterization are suitable and her singing is, if not outstanding, at least pleasant.

Since no one could hope to duplicate the unique magic of Miss Lawrence's personality and style, comparisons would be unfair. It's enough that Miss Carpenter has a quality of her own and that she is warm, persuasive and likeable as the firm-minded British schoolteacher at the Siamese court, notably so in the affectionate scenes with the royal children. She is top-featured in the musical.

Yul Brynner, formerly top-featured but recently upped to star billing, remains about as before. In the absence of Miss Lawrence's dominant authority and personality, the part of the King seems to have expanded and become more important. Otherwise, Brynner is still exceptionally well suited physically for the role, with an appearance and a sort of savagery that femme audiences obviously dote on. His playing still seems harsh and lacking in charm, but his diction has apparently improved a trifle.

In general, the Richard Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein 2d musical holds up remarkably well, despite the fact that Brynner is the only one of the original leads still in the cast. The show obviously lacks the universal appeal of the unmatchable "South Pacific" and there is a fairly sizeable minority that doesn't like it. But its unconventional story, beautiful score, exotic locale and sumptuous visual appeal make it knockout musical theatre for most audiences.

South Pacific
(CIVIC AUD., PORTLAND)

Portland, Ore., Oct. 20.

William Duggan opened the Civic Auditorium boxoffice for "South Pacific" nearly a month before the musical arrived, and two weeks later every ducat for the night performances was sold. Hundreds were turned away. When the b.o. opened, the four ticket-sellers were greeted by lines two blocks long all day long.

Pasteboard holders for "SP" were pleasantly surprised at the announcement that Martha Wright, lead of the Broadway company, would appear with the musical for three weeks during the tour of Miss Wright's native Northwest country. She joined the troupe here in Portland last Tuesday (14) and will continue to appear in Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane before heading back to her Gotham spot.

Seattle gal fits into the outfit as if she was made to order. Customers in the jampacked Auditorium were carried away by her performance and completely enjoyed every second of the three-hour song-filled show.

Webb Clifton and Dorothy Franklin get plenty of palm-wacking for their roles as Emile De Becque and Bloody Mary. Benny Baker as Billis carries the comedy role in good shape. Stanley Grover as Lt. Cable and Norma Calderon as Liat also come through with some nifty acting, dancing and singing.

It has been a long time since a show created as much comment and interest in this area. "SP" could have played to SRO for another week.

Janet Blair returns to her role as Ensign Nellie Forbush at the end of the three-week period. She is currently on vacation.

Miami Opera Guild Sets Drive for 12th Season

Miami, Oct. 28.

Miami Opera Guild, under direction of founder Dr. Arturo deFilippi, launched a subscription campaign for additional members for its 12th season, which will feature three popular works with Metropolitan Opera stars heading up a local chorus and orchestra of 70 at Dade County and Miami Beach auditoriums.

Productions of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" (in English) and "Cavalleria Rusticana" is scheduled for Jan. 17-18 and "La Traviata" for Feb. 28 and March 2. Metopera members participating include Salvatore Baccaloni, Eleanor Steber, Regina Resnik, Robert Weede and Charles Kullman. Estimated production costs run well over $75,000.

Wonderful Time

London, Oct. 22.

Val Parnell production of revue in two acts (12 scenes), with Billy Cotton band; George and Bert Bernard; Joy Nichols; Max Bygraves; Eliane & Rodolph; Vadja del Oro; Jo, Jac & Joni; The Three Ghezzi Bros.; the Tiller Girls (20); Jack Ansell and Skyrockets orch. Script by Eric Sykes, Carol Levens and Elizabeth Berryhill. Produced by Val Parnell and Charles Henry; music, Johnnie Johnston; choreography, George Carden and Barbara Aitken; sets, Charles Reading. At Palladium, London, Oct. 21, '52. $2 top.

The Palladium's fall revue which bridges the gap between the end of vaudeville and the pantomime season, follows the stock formula of bright, breezy and boisterous entertainment. It is essentially good humored, unsophisticated entertainment and is an elaboration of regular variety programs although using many of the familiar names.

Productionwise, Val Parnell has fashioned a lavish show. Sets are expensive, and costuming is colorful and tasteful. Individual artists are generously treated with full production qualities in most of their scenes. Show was inclined to run overtime opening night but can easily be trimmed to make a clicko twice-nightly offering.

In contrast to vaude lineups, British personalities dominate this revue. Bill Cotton's band, firm favorites with British patrons, tops the bill with its freely boisterous band show in which the personnel play a major part with vocals and general slapstick. The whole routine is frankly unsophisticated, and it gets a hefty patron response. Numbers of the calibre of "I'm Going To A Wedding" and "Galloping Major," both of which feature vocalist Alan Breeze, never fail to click. Femme singer Doreen Stephens does okay with a couple of songs and pianist Clem Bernard rates plenty of laughs for his comedy antics.

Almost qualifying for the resident tag, George and Bert Bernard chalk up another boffo success with their immaculately timed miming to disks played off stage. This time they've evolved a new routine and among artists who come under their cynical gaze are Jo Stafford, Frankie Laine and Johnnie Ray. They also have a riotous interpretation of the "Call Me Madam" hit, "You're In Love." An outstanding piece of miming winds the act to a begoff.

Joy Nichols, who in recent weeks has been touring in vaude, also has prominent billing and fills a solo spot with distinction revealing a versatility which made an immediate impact. She's a stylish performer and did a hep job with two or three contrasting numbers and then displayed a surprise flair for takeoffs, vocalizing like Vera Lynn, Sophie Tucker and Judy Garland.

Max Bygraves, also a familiar fave, who recently played on the Judy Garland program in America, returns with a lot of new material which garners solid reaction. His patter is high on quality and his gags have laughter-making qualities. He scored the most success with his "Cowpuncher's Cantata," a current disk click.

The Ghezzi Bros., a trio of tumblers have a fast comedy knockabout routine which builds to a punchy finish. Jo, Jack & Joni are bright pantomimists who have created several novelty angles for their act. They get the laughs but reaction would be heightened if the tempo was improved. Terping spots are capably filled by Eliane & Rodolph with some intricate routines and by a solo contribution from Vadja del Oro with castanets. The 20 Tiller Girls make an attractive dancing line. Myro.

Caro William

London, Oct. 23.

Renee R. Soskin (for Hampstead Theatre, Ltd.) presentation of drama in three acts by William Douglas Home. Directed by John Wyse. At Embassy, London, Oct. 22, '52; $1 top.

|---|---|
| Lady Cowper | Pamela Alan |
| Mrs. George Lamb | Rachel Gurney |
| Hopgood | Oliver Johnston |
| George Lamb | Robert Shaw |
| Lady Melbourne | Freda Gaye |
| Lady Caroline Lamb | Daphne Arthur |
| William Lamb | Robert Harris |
| Lord Melbourne | Evelyn Roberts |
| Edward Bulwer | David Oxley |

New management at this intimate neighborhood theatre makes an inauspicious beginning with this entry by William Douglas Home. "Caro William" is a tedious historical drama with few redeeming qualities, and a major rewrite is necessary before a move to the West End could be considered.

According to a program footnote, the play was inspired by Lord David Cecil's book, "The Young Melbourne." Home's version, however, lacks the piquancy and fascination normally associated with historical dramas and the characters are carelessly drawn. In the first act, particularly, there is considerable confusion while the players are being established.

Caro William is the family name given to Lady Caroline, wife of William Lamb. She is a hysterical, neurotic creature with an infatuation for Lord Byron which brings discredit on the family and ruins her husband's career in politics. Through three ponderous acts the theme is stretched to tedium.

Poverty of the writing gives little opportunity to the cast. Daphne Arthur tries vainly to infuse sympathy and understanding in the title role, while Robert Harris, as the husband, is overdrawn as a long-suffering, meek individual. Rachel Gurney has a better part as Mrs. George Lamb, but her husband, portrayed by Robert Shaw, indulges in a perpetual sulk. John Wyse's direction fails to come to grips with the subject, although settings by Stephen Doncaster are admirable. Myro.

Barn Mgr.

playing a matinee, the cast should receive one-seventh extra salary, Kneeter declares. He adds that when he observed that the extra pay would make the matinee less detrimental to health, that move was also abandoned.

'Inept Leadership'

Although Equity has over a period of years used collective bargaining to obtain a good contract from the League of N. Y. Theatres, they now refuse to recognize the SMA as a bargaining agent for the barn producers, Kneeter says. "Through inept leadership they impose conditions on a take it or leave it basis. If you leave it you are out of business. Incidentally, my business last summer employed 107 Equity members for a total of 205 work weeks at a gross payroll of $34,305.

"Equity's contract with the stock managers is one -sided. No contract can be equitable unless it works both ways. When a manager breaks a contract with an actor, the contract provides for payment of full salary to the actor. The union official will immediately deduct the amount involved from the manager's bond. That is fair.

"However, if the actor walks out on his contract with the manager, although the contract provides for payment to the manager for the terms of the contract, no one at Equity will authorize it, but invariably the manager is told to take the case to arbitration. That is unfair. In the case of claims against managers or actors, the decisions are made by the union council without the manager being present. That is also unfair.

"I am putting Equity on warning. Since the union officials have stated that I am not to be invited to negotiations relating to the operation of my theatre, and if in my opinion their decisions are imposed on me to the detriment of my business and violation of my rights, I will take the case to court for my protection.

"However, if Equity recognizes and bargains collectively with the SMA, of which I'm a member, I will recognize and accept whatever decisions result from the meetings, whether I agree with them or not. All I demand is equal rights with the actors I employ.

"Is that disruptive? If more managers came into the open and made public their abuse by Equity instead of quietly letting themselves be imposed upon, stock would be in a healthier condition."

Ratcliffe SMA Prexy; Whiting, Langner Named

Thomas G. Ratcliffe, of the Sea Cliff (L. I.) Summer Theatre, has been elected president of the Stock Managers Assn., succeeding John Huntington, of the Spa Theatre, Saratoga. The election was held last week at the annual membership meeting of the organization.

Others named at the same time were William Whiting, of the American Lyric Theatre, vice-president; Philip Langner, of the Westport (Conn.) Country Playhouse, secretary; Jack Ragotsky, of the Kalamazoo Summer Theatre, assistant secretary, and Isobel Jones, Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y., treasurer.

Theron Bamberger, of the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa.; Philip Barry, John Drew Theatre, East Hampton, L. I., and retiring president Huntington were elected to the three vacancies in the nine-member board of governors.

Three B'way Plays Get Censor Nix For Ottawa Stock Group Showings

Ottawa, Oct. 28.

Censorship has knocked out three of the Canadian Repertory Theatre's first six choices for its pre-Christmas 10-week stretch, which opened Oct. 7.

Ever since complaints met "Separate Rooms" last year, CRT, whose playhouse is a Roman Catholic school auditorium, has had to submit all scripts to its head. Though usually allowing latitude, he thumbs-downed its planned opener, Noel Coward's "Private Lives," despite its having been produced there two years before, as well as done by Tallulah Bankhead at the Capitol film house the year before that. (On that occasion an Ottawa dowager was heard to remark after the floor-rolling scene, "You know, I really don't mind how far they go, as long as they do it nicely").

Forbidden also were F. Hugh Herbert's "For Love or Money," also on morality grounds, and "Portrait in Black," because of a last-act suicide. "Private Lives" had to be hastily replaced with "Captain Carvallo," by Dennis Cannan, a weak little English farce with some good moments, which drew fair houses. Some third-act cuts had to be made in it.

CRT's season-ticket campaign, following previous $20,000 red-ink dive, brought in $5,000 in three weeks through volunteer salesmen. Five-dollar membership buys five $1.25 seats (672-capacity house scales down to 60c, with no tax, CRT being a registered non-profit enterprise) and vote at annual meeting.

CRT has added a third actor-director (Amelia Hall and Sam Payne remain for their third season, with all-new company otherwise), in Max Helpmann, brother of ballet star-legiter Robert Helpmann. He's an Old Vic performer, returning there after Christmas, and appeared in the Olivier-Leigh "Caesars" in London and New York. His wife, Barbara Chilcott, plays leads here, with Margaret Griffin, local actress, as ingenue.

Kaycee Resident Troupe Kicks Off 20th Season

Kansas City, Oct. 28.

Resident Theatre kicks off its 20th anniversary season here this week, with "The Happy Time" as first of four productions. "Time" opened Monday night (27) to capacity biz in the 500-seat house, and advance sale indicates SRO for the week's run. Principals include Nancy McIntyre, Jim Lantz, Kermit Echols, Micky Oshry and Gilbert Milton.

Gene Frankel, director, has set "Another Part of the Forest" as second production, to be staged in January. Others skedded for later production are "Volpone" and "Boy Meets Girl."

in an exec studio post. In remaining with W-K he will look after the business aspects of the four pix W-K made for RKO.

Wald, who's 40 years old, has been in the business for 20 years, having started as a writer at Warners. He's a winner of the Irving Thalberg Memorial Award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences "for the most consistent high quality of motion picture entertainment."

Deal has been ready for signing for some weeks, its consummation having awaited Wald's formal bowout from RKO, with which the W-K unit teamed in August, 1950, Krasna broke away some time ago. As part of the severance agreement, Wald will continue with RKO to the extent of advising on the production of "High Heels" and "Size 12," which Harriet Parsons will produce. Originally they had been skedded as Wald properties.

OTTO SIMANEK

THE VILLIAN . . . THE FANATICAL, BRUTAL AND SINISTER GERMAN CAPTAIN OF "STALAG 17"

N. Y. and National Companies — Currently: Erlanger, Chicago

"Otto Simanek as the brutish German Captain gives an admirable performance that never strays from the main point."

—Brooks Atkinson, N. Y. Times (May 9, 1951)

"The performance of Otto Simanek as the curt and sinister German Captain is on of the best in the show."

"Take a look at Stalag 17 and you'll be fascinated by the work of Otto Simanek as a despicable Nazi."

"An outstanding performance played with unerring skill."

Never a Dull Moment

Walter Winchell made news three ways over the weekend as (1) his ABC-(TV and AM) gabcast screening of affidavits alleging President Truman once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan brought White House denials; (2) his feud with WMCA (N.Y.) gabber Barry Gray nearly erupted into a fistic embroglio; and (3) the N. Y. Post and its editor, James A. Wechsler, formally instituted libel proceedings against WW.

On his telecast Winchell exhibited seven photostatic copies of affidavits charging the President with KKK links. These were categorically denied by a Presidential secretary.

The Gray-Winchell near-encounter, which was divergently reported by the columnist on his ABC broadcasts and in his N. Y. Daily Mirror piece Monday (27) and by Gray on his WMCA show, involved Jack O'Brian, N. Y. Journal-American (Hearst) AM-TV columnist. Winchell said that Gray ran away from an encounter with O'Brian. Gray's version is that as he was leaving a friend, Peppy Weiner, at 4:15 a.m. Saturday on East 55th St., he heard shouts but didn't know they were directed at him.

The Post-Wechsler suits vs. Winchell also are directed against ABC, his Gruen Watch sponsors, Hearst Corp. and King Features. Plaintiffs are repped by former U. S. District Judge Simon H. Rifkind.

Gache-Morse Adlai Ads

N. Y. Times on Friday (24) ran a seven-column ad signed by Mac Gache and Joseph L. Morse, headed "Why doesn't the Times switch its support to Governor Stevenson?" Ad asked the Times editors, "When have you ever before sacrificed principle to political expediency—and in so large a degree?" It also called on Times readers to "besiege our favorite newspaper" with cards, letters and wires urging a reversal of the Times' support for Gen. Eisenhower. On Sunday the paper reported in its news columns that 2,120 letters and wires had been received, 1,978 favoring the ad's views.

Signers of the ad are toppers of the Unicorn Press, although the firm wasn't mentioned. Address given in ad was that of the firm.

Ad followed by one day a Times edit on "A Choice Reaffirmed." Edit chided Gov. Stevenson on not taking a clear position on Formosa; following day, Times printed a correction, citing a Sept. 8 interview in which the Dem candidate had stated his view on Formosa.

The ad battle spread yesterday (Tues.) when Gache-Morse ran a half-pager again urging a Times switch. A full page ad reprinting the Times' edit was signed by Milton Lacks, of the Normandie Hat Shop. Times reported it got 200 protests following Sen. McCarthy's broadcast Monday night.

Harper's and 'Tallulah'

Harper & Bros., which caused some raised eyebrows in the publishing fraternity over its fancy deal for the rights to the Tallulah Bankhead autobiog, is proving that it didn't get on a financial hook. Some other firms felt that Harper's, by contracting to pay $30,000 (over a five-year span) for "Tallulah," without getting first serial or film rights, was taking a longshot gamble.

However, with sales of the tome passing 70,000 and the book firmly established in the best-seller charts (it's No. 1 this week), Harper's is in the clear.

Int'l Theatre Mags

Theatre Arts Books is taking over U. S. distribution of two international mags on the theatre. One is World Theatre; other is Opera, Ballet, Music Hall in the World. Both are published in Paris under aegis of International Theatre Institute, which is part of the UN Economic Social and Cultural Organization. Both are quarterlies, the former in its second year and the latter just launched. (Incidentally, the journals are not connected with International Theatre, a private venture announced for publication in N. Y.)

Mags are printed in two languages, English and French, and edited by the Belgian actor-editor, Rene Hainaux, with aid of an international committee, with ITI centres now established in 26 countries forming an advisory board and submitting much of the material. ANTA is the U. S. centre and Rosamond Gilder, consultant to TAB, is a member of the editorial committee of ITI. Mags are full size, on coated stock and include a large number of photos.

No Like Fanny Brice Biog?

Coast reports are that Mrs. Ray Stark (Frances Brice) and Billy Brice, children of the late Fanny Brice, are not too pleased with Norman Katkov's biography which Alfred Knopf will publish shortly.

The first of four parts is currently serializing in Ladies Home Journal, and it's this kickoff chapter which vexed the heirs. It makes out the comedienne as having a wild, unbridled childhood in Brooklyn.

Doubleday's 'L. L. Day'

Doubleday is inserting a fortnightly ad in Saturday Review in the form of a column on the firm's titles and other informal comment on reading, writing and publishing in general. Author is Pyke Johnson, Jr., publicity manager.

It's signed by "L. L. Day," punning on Doubleday.

Crouse Cops Medal

Russel Crouse, co-author of "Life With Father" and "Call Me Madam," along with illustrator Stevan Dohanos, were awarded Ohioana Career Medals for outstanding work in their respective fields Friday (24) in Columbus. Awards, the tops in a list of citations to Ohioans in the literary and art fields were given out by the Martha Kinney Cooper Ohioana Library Assn.

Crouse, a native of Findlay, and Dohanos, who was born in Lorain, were present for the awards session.

Busy Shulman

Max Shulman leaves Nov. 12 from Westport, Conn., for Hollywood on his third 1952 Metro screen-writing assignment, company having exercised an option on his screen treatment of an original yarn and commissioned him to do the scripting.

Shulman, who has been pacted by Doubleday to deliver his fifth novel next year, also co-authored an original story which U-I purchased during his last Hollywood visit several months ago.

Strauss' Jap O. O.

Alfred A. Knopf editor in chief Harold Strauss arrived in Tokyo recently for a six-week stay, in which he's o.o.'ing contemporary Japanese writing with possibility of translation and reprint in the U. S.

Strauss, who was there in 1945 as chief of the books and magazine analysis branch of SCAP's Civil Information and Education Section, will also gather material for articles for the Atlantic Monthly and New Yorker.

Doubleday Fetes Adams

With Walter I. Bradbury, the publisher's managing editor, on hand, Doubleday tossed a reception (cocktail party) in Minneapolis for Cedric Adams, newspaper columnist and radio personality, on occasion of publication date of his first book, "Poor Cedric's Almanac."

Book started out with a 7,500 advance sale in the Twin Cities alone.

Mag Photog Code

American Society of Magazine Photographers, an unaffiliated union composed mainly of freelance photogs (although a few mag staffers are among them), is presently engaged in negotiating a code of minimum standards on assignments with various mags. Code embraces such provisions as minimum rates, all expenses paid (for models, processing prints, etc.), retention of copyright, credits, arbitration, re-use problem, color rates as against black-and-white, etc.

One of the basic clauses sought is that a photog on assignment get either $100 a day and expenses, or the page photog rate, whichever is higher. Resale rights is also prominent, with price still left open. Already in effect is an agreement on a freelancer's stock picture file, with minimum pay for print set at $25.

Code will have some interesting effects. Mags that now permit other publication to reproduce pix used without fee to the photogs, will have to let the latter do the dickering, presumably for some payment. Long-range effect is seen, too, in that freelancers at present not members of the society may have to join the union, to avoid non-union hassles.

Guardian Switchover

Recent decision of the Manchester Guardian, Britain's most famous liberal daily, to put news on its front page for the first time in its 130 years' history, has met with mixed readership reaction. In the north of England, where the Guardian is published, there is an adverse reaction in the proportion of two to one. In London and the south there's a nine to one vote in favor.

Manchester Guardian, with a sale of 130,000 daily, circulates largely in the London region and the changeover was introduced in a bid to extend its readership throughout the country. The London Times is now the only major British daily without news on its front page.

'GWTW' Jap Bestseller

"Gone With the Wind," texts on television, and "now it can be told" accounts of wartime and occupied Japan head the list of bestsellers in current Japanese publishing concerns.

A new edition of the Margaret Mitchell classic has just hit the stands with 15,000 copies. Current release of the Metro film has hypoed sales to about 2,000,000 copies, making it the all-time No. 1 bestseller here. More Japanese apparently have read the novel in translation than Americans have in the original. About 1,000,000 copies were sold here in 1937-1940, but practically none in 1941-45 when it was suppressed.

Television technical tracts lead in books imported from abroad. Mostly shipped by air, these texts cost three times the normal price and still sell three times as fast as other imported books. Runnersup in technological books, which make up 70% of the imported volumes, are radio, telecommunications and oil. Last year, Japan purchased from overseas nearly $3,000,000 worth of books, a triple increase over the year before.

Most successful of the "now it can be told" accounts is translation of Mark Gayn's "Japan Diary," published in the U. S. in 1948. A two volume edition, containing Gayn's critical views of the U. S. occupation of Japan, has sold several hundred thousand copies.

Other volumes undressing the occupation are "The Constitution Was Made in Two Weeks," making it clear that the Japanese Constitution, now under heavy attack, was drafted by General MacArthur and forced on the Japanese; "The Most Secret History of Japan Under the Occupation" and "A Secret Inside Story of the Tokyo Trials," neither of which contains anything which American correspondents here have not already reported or known.

Glamorized accounts of wartime defeats are popular. Ex-Col. Masanobu Tsuji has written two books in a series about his adventures as chief of staff in Manchuria, Guadalcanal, Burma and Singapore. One of these, "Underground Escape," has been translated into English and published here. Other entries in this field are by former Kamikaze pilots, submarine skippers and high naval officers.

Iwanami Publishing House has the largest stable of western writers which it translates and publishes. Its leading fiction stars are Pearl Buck, John Dos Passos, William Faulkner and Vicki Baum. In drama, Eugene O'Neill and William Saroyan lead the playwrights. American non-fiction pace setter is John Hersey's "Hiroshima," closely followed by reports on nuclear progress by David E. Lilienthal.

Bestselling European writers are non-fiction outputters like Italy's Ignazio Silone, England's economist H. J. Laski and German historian Max Weber.

CHATTER

Dwight Taylor finished his first novel, "The Pink Cloud."

James Boyle, one-time RKO flack, now doing freelance publicity.

Pat Flynn Kollings resigned from BHG staff to join Household as decorating editor.

Presidential Songs

part of Bryan's "Cross of Gold" effort and promises that when the orator becomes President, express wagons will deliver loads of free silver to every home.

The Spanish-American War resulted in the near-deification of Admiral George Dewey and the recording of such songs as "What Did Dewey Do to Them?" and "When Dewey Comes' Sailing Home." There was sentiment in favor of the Admiral running for President, but 1900 doesn't seem to have been a year of recorded campaign songs.

McKinley

We come next to 1901, the year in which McKinley was assassinated. And now a digression. An article in the Oct. 1 issue, telling of recordings of "McKinley's Last Speech" being made by phono artists, notably Len Spencer and not by the President himself, has brought a letter of protest from a reader who says he paid $25 for a Columbia record of "Address By the Late President McKinley at the Pan-American Exposition" and wants to believe he got his money's worth. He demands further proof that the disk wasn't made by McKinley. Here it is:

The first recording of the so-called McKinley speech, called "President McKinley's Last Speech (Delivered at Buffalo, Sept. 5, 1901)," was included in the November, 1901, record list of the Edison company, which was really on the ball to get it out so soon. This was a wax cylinder and, although the artist's name is not given on the record, it is contained in the catalog as Frank C. Stanley. Some time later Len Spencer remade it. (Cylinders were made over frequently in those days.)

Columbia wasn't as quick. Its first McKinley offering was "Funeral Service Over President McKinley," which many collectors probably have picked up in the belief it is an on-the-scene waxing of the actual service—a foolish idea, of course, since the record runs only 2½ minutes. It is a studio job, with the Columbia Male Quartet singing McKinley's favorite hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and Len Spencer repeating a bit of the prayer which had been offered by the minister.

The Funeral Service was No. 451. Next came 639, "McKinley Memorial," which introduced a snatch of that famous "Last Speech" and a brass quartet playing "Lead, Kindly Light."

Having gradually paved the way for a full-dress performance of the speech (not of course the full speech as delivered by McKinley, but excerpts from it), Columbia finally came through with No. 833, the Address which is prized by so many collectors. This was not recorded by Spencer until after McKinley had been dead several months. On record is the written statement by a former Columbia official that the record was by Spencer and no one else. An Edison official has written to the same effect, saying McKinley's voice was never recorded by that company. As for Victor, its disk of the speech bore the artist's name as Leonard G. Spencer.

But the clincher in the argument over the Columbia record is this: McKinley died in September, 1901, but Columbia didn't even go into the disk record business until well into 1902. Its record No. 833 wasn't made until late that year or early in 1903.

Oddly enough, McKinley's phonograph career wasn't yet ended. In the southern hills there sprang up a typically mournful ballad about the president's assassination, and this was recorded by the late Riley Puckett, a one-time top favorite among hillbilly recorders for Columbia back in 1929. It was called simply "McKinley."

Moving up to 1904, there were at least two recorded campaign songs—"We Want You, Teddy, for Four Years More," and its Democratic opposition, "Goodbye, Teddy, You Must March, March, March," both of which Billy Murray, playing no favorites sang for Columbia.

Teddy Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt, who had become president, succeeding McKinley, defeated Alton B. Parker. Within the next few months, Cal Stewart, the "Punkin Center" specialist, made records of "Uncle Josh at the White House" for the various companies. In July, 1905, the unfailingly versatile and ingenious Spencer was in the Columbia list with "Roosevelt's Inaugural Parade." To quote the description:

"'Roosevelt's Inaugural Parade' will long be remembered as one of the best descriptive records ever made. The material for this thrilling historical record was obtained by Mr. Len Spencer, who visited Washington for the inauguration, for this special purpose, at the request of the Columbia Phonograph Co. The Rough Riders, who were the President's escort, lead the procession, followed by the gallant 'Teddy,' who, in passing, acknowledges the cheers and greetings of the thousands assembled to do honor to the nation's Chief Executive. In quick succession follow the governors of the states with military escorts, the bands playing airs appropriate to each section represented. The tunes of 'Maryland, My Maryland,' 'Swanee River' and 'Dixie' invoke the plaudits of the onlookers. The aged Indian chieftain Geronimo is recognized, attended by a band of his swarthy warriors. The 'Black Ninth' Cavalry, the West Point Cadets and the Harvard College boys are also prominent features, and are loudly cheered as they pass, marching to the strains of their bands. The record is a masterpiece, and every owner of a talking machine should have it in his collection."

Around this same time, Vincent Bryan and Gus Edwards wrote "Tammany," which was widely recorded and became an unofficial anthem of the N. Y. City Democratic organization. A couple of years later they proved they could work both sides of the street by coming through with "G. O. P.," a comic ditty that praised the Republicans but also touched them up with bits of satire. The Panama Canal was a controversial subject, and one line kidded Roosevelt's big teeth by saying, "Let our Teddy dig the Isthmus—he can bite it through by Christmas."

Campaign songs seem lacking in 1908, although the Republican candidate, William Howard Taft, and the Democrats' William Jennings Bryan, made a series of spoken records outlining their policies—the first time such records had been made. Shortly after the election, Junie McCree and Al Von Tilzer wrote "Did He Run?," which satirically described the recent campaign and predicted, wrongly, that in another four years Bryan would run again. Nat M. Wills, "The Happy Tramp," recorded a parody on "Are You Sincere?", in which he remarked that the only thing Bryan was running for was "the end book."

Wilson, T. R. and Taft

In 1912 there were recorded talks by Woodrow Wilson, Roosevelt and Taft, running as Democrat, Progressive and Republican, respectively, but the big campaign song was one that didn't directly mention politics. It was "The Missouri Houn' Dawg Song," whose correct title was "They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'," and it was sung by partisans of the speaker of the House, Champ Clark, who felt that their man had been given a raw deal in the Democratic convention. Since Byron G. Harlan was the foremost exponent of vocal "rube" comedy, he made the records.

Neither Wilson nor his GOP opponent, Charles Evans Hughes, appears to have recorded in 1916, but there were a few political songs. Wilson appears to have struck the tunesmiths' fancy more than Hughes, for they turned out "We Take Our Hats Off to You, Mr. Wilson" and "I Think We've Got Another Washington (Wilson is His Name.") These were written on the assumption that Wilson would keep the country out of war. There was also a vote for women plea, "She's Good Enough to be Your Baby's Mother." This contained the assertion that if a woman was good enough to be the mother of Woodrow Wilson, then women were good enough to cast the ballot.

No campaign songs were recorded in 1920, but Columbia issued a Nation's Forum series of speeches by the leading statesmen and politicians of the day. It was announced that President Wilson would make one, but his grave illness must have prevented. Republican speakers included Senator Warren G. Harding (who was nominated and elected president), Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Major General Leonard Wood, Governor Calvin Coolidge, Nicholas Murray Butler, Will Hays and Corinne Roosevelt Robinson — "Teddy's" sister. He had died the year before.

The Democrats were represented by William Gibbs McAdoo, A. Mitchell Palmer, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Bainbridge Colby, James W. Gerard, Champ Clark, Homer Cummings, Senator Robert Owen, James M. Cox (the party's presidential nominee) and Franklin D. Roosevelt, who ran unsuccessfully for vice president but was heard from again a few years later.

Coolidge-Davis, Hoover-Smith

About the only recorded souvenir of the 1924 campaign between Coolidge and John W. Davis is "The Teapot Dome Blues," referring to the oil lease scandals which were a campaign issue. There was more action in 1928 when Herbert Hoover, Republican, defeated Alfred E. Smith, Democrat. Lew Brown and Al Von Tilzer came through with a strictly partisan "He's Our Al," recorded by such names of the time as Jack Kaufman and Billy Jones & Ernest Hare. Jones & Hare also made the rounds of the record companies, waxing a clever number on the "Gallagher & Shean" order, "Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith." The writers, Herb Magidson and Robert King (Kaiser) (also known as "Mary Earle") must have had a hunch Hoover would win because Hoover invariably topped Smith's wisecracks in the song. Amos 'n' Andy also got into the act. They recorded a "Presidential Campaign" skit for Victor. The boys, too, must have had a pretty good idea of who was going to win because the platter ended with one saying he dreamed he saw Al Smith going into the White House. Then he explained: "Herbert Hoover sent for him."

Aside from Roosevelt's campaign song, "Happy Days Are Here Again," which had been written about three years before, 1932 was not a musical political year. Some campaign songs were written but were not popular enough to be recorded. The story was similar in 1936. Four years later, however, Roosevelt supporters came through with "Vote for Roosevelt," recorded by "Music City Recording" in Hollywood. The song was written by Celia Sattinger and Alfred P. Chamie. Sprague-Coleman, of New York, turned out a "G.O.P. Willkie Song" titled "Thank God We've Found the Man!" It was written and sung by Robert Crawford.

Since then, there has been virtually no political propagandizing by means of recorded popular songs. This year has seen a number of "Ike" tunes turned out, and a smaller number espousing the Democratic side, but they have got nowhere with the platter purveyors. In fact, the topical song which delighted our forebears seems virtually extinct.

In many ways that's a pity. And it's late to be pointing it out, but the Republicans probably have missed a bet by not reviving and revising a 1919 ditty called "All Those in Favor Say 'Aye!'" The number, written by Sam Downing and Tom Kennedy, provides an ideal framework for joshing the opposition. And with the title altered to "All Those in Favor Say 'Ike!'"—well, it has possibilities!

Mitch Miller

formula of simplicity plus sincerity, and because they are ready to accept constructive criticism from the recording director."

Songwriter-publisher Irving Caesar, on the other hand, blames the plight of the ASCAP writer on the BMI-broadcasters hookup. "It is depressing and somewhat discouraging," Caesar says, "that a group of songwriters should in the past few days be discussing and, as a matter of fact, put into operation a committee to raise funds in order to bring a monopoly suit against BMI. It is depressing and discouraging because I should have thought that the Department of Justice would long before this on its own initiative taken the proper steps to remedy the situation."

'Preferential Treatment'

Pointing out that "BMI is owned by most of the radio stations and networks with whom we have to traffic and on whom we are dependent for the popularization of our music," Caesar asks: "Does it seem unreasonable to suppose that they would not be giving themselves preferential treatment in popularizing their (BMI) catalog?"

On the other hand, feeling among some indie publishers and younger writers in behalf of BMI is expressed by one Tin Pan Alleyite, Joe Davis, as follows: "BMI encourages and helps new writers and publishers. ASCAP never did. BMI makes it possible for a writer to enjoy the fruits of his work while he is living and not when he is dead. ASCAP has not progressed with the times.

"In the old days ASCAP publishers signed up (as a writer with a tremendous advance and drawing) every leader or singer who was on the air or who made records. If a publisher didn't have that big money bag he was out of luck. Today it's a singer's world. The hits are being made by vocalists and the big hits are being recorded by artists that write and record. This time BMI controls most of them. BMI publishers are looking for new songs all the time and encourage new writers. Nine out of 10 ASCAP publishers won't even give a new writer a chance to take his song out of the envelope to show."

say that these hot pops create the traffic into the music stores, and thus maybe also ASCAP standards, albums, etc., benefit. But the whole picture of the music business has changed. I'm not saying that a hillbilly or a country or western tune can't be quality, because 'Don't Fence Me In' and 'The Last Roundup' are in that idiom, and they are now classics. But the music business is everything, and dominantly it's ASCAP income. This is the prime source of revenue, and not the by-product as when Nathan Burkan helped found the Society. Then we had million-copy sheet sales, and records were secondary. An 11-15c net profit per sheet on 1,000,000 copies is much different than the penny, or less, the publisher gets today from 1,000,000 records.

"And where there were 165 publishers we now have 800, of which 450-500 are in ASCAP, so the thinner spread is also obvious there as everybody's in there scratching and pitching for that hit."

Starr, of course is reiterating that "without ASCAP income we'd have to close our doors," but this doesn't satisfy the average music publisher who wants that current pop hit to replenish his catalog for the future.

New Canaries

Kay Armen on tele's "Stop the Music" show.

Paucity of femmes available is attributed to the high cost of prepping a canary. While a young male vocalist can rough it while waiting for the bigtime break and play his minor league singing engagements with a one-suit wardrobe, the gals need a hefty garbing outlay and plenty of chaperoning while breaking in on the smalltime circuit. Angels interested in backing singers, therefore, have been brushing the gals in favor of a promising crooner.

Latest femme vocalist to be signed by a major company is California thrush Felicia Sanders. Miss Sanders, who has been singing in Hollywood clubs but has never recorded before, was inked by Mitch Miller, Col's artists and repertoire chief, during his recent trip to the Coast. Diskery is prepping early release on her initial two sides.

production has been facilitated by the expansion of processing facilities in this country.

There has been disappointment at the decision to bar TV cameras from telecasting the crowning ceremony but the British Broadcasting Corp. will be given access to the films of the event which will be lensed in the Abbey. Although no official reason has been given, it is believed that the decision was made by palace authorities to protect the Queen from the public gaze during the most intimate moments of the ceremony, particularly during the time when she is anointed with holy oil.

Although all aspects of the ceremony will be filmed by newsreel cameras, it is likely there may be some official palace guidance in the editing.

Associated British-Pathe also has come up with plans for a color film of the Coronation which is also slated for world-wide release within a few days of the event. It will be produced by Howard Thomas, chief of production at Pathe. Company will also have a newsreel flash of the coronation on the night of the event which will be followed by a double-length reel.

OBITUARIES

HATTIE McDANIEL

Hattie McDaniel, 57, screen, radio and tele actress, Oct. 26 in Hollywood. Miss McDaniel created the title role in "Beulah" in the three fields. She retired from the show more than a year ago.

Miss McDaniel, who appeared in more than 300 films, won an Academy Award in 1940 for her portrayal of "Mammy" in "Gone With the Wind." It marked the first time a Negro performer had been so cited by the Academy.

She began her career as a singer appearing in tent shows in small towns. After a hitch as vocalist with George Morrison's arch, she became a headline singer on the Pantages and Orpheum circuits. She went to the Coast in 1931 and was featured on a variety show on KNX, Los Angeles. She began her pic career soon after. Among her credits are "The Great Lie," "Maryland," "The Shopworn Angel," "In This Our Life," "George Washington Slept Here," "Since You Went Away," "The Little Colonel," "Song of the South," "Judge Priest," "Saratoga" and "Nothing Sacred."

William Morris

IN FOND REMEMBERANCE
JOE BURNS
NOV. 3, 1946
VERA and MACK GOLDMAN

As a young concert impresario, Spencer sponsored Mary Louise Clary, a contralto, and later arranged concert tours in the Canadian provinces for operatic names. He married Helen Craigie, a St. John concert and choir vocalist, when he was 20.

Early in his career as an exhib he established the Unique Theatre in the heart of St. John which became the nucleus for a chain which at one time had 20 links, with representation in the three Atlantic provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. In 1945, he sold out a half interest in his chain to Famous Players.

EARLE L. McGILL

His death occurred the day after he had delegated his son, F. Gordon Spencer, to represent him at a dinner tendered to six pioneers of films in Canada, at Toronto Mrs. Spencer died four years ago.

Surviving are two sons, F. Gordon, general manager of the company, and Gerald R., also a partner in the theatre business, and a sister, Mrs. S. L. Kerr, widow of Sydney Kerr, a pioneer film exhib and business school operator.

WE NEVER FORGET YOU

BLUCH LANDOLF

Bluch Landolf, (ne Adolph Pelikan) 72, veteran circus clown, died Oct. 23 in Springfield, Mass. He had been featured with Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus for many years as an aerialist and later as a clown. He was noted for his plank-walk and turnaround, among other creations.

Landolf, whose parents were acrobats, began his career at age 8 with a troupe of gymnasts. He appeared with circus troupes in England until 1904 when he came to the U. S. He developed an acrobatic bicycle act for vaude and worked the circuits as well as carnivals. He joined Ringling Bros. in 1908 in a troupe of acrobats billed as the Eight Cornelias. He turned to comedy in 1912 when Charles Dillingham was running the old N. Y. Hippodrome. He was featured there in a show with the late De Wolf Hopper and also in an act tagged "Everything," which was staged by R. H. Burnside, who died recently.

Landolf joined Barnum & Bailey in 1916 and remained with the outfit when it merged with Ringling Bros. He also was noted as an artist and paper carver. He was the uncle of Lillian Lietzel, the aerialist, who was killed in a fall at Copenhagen in 1931.

SUSAN PETERS

the Stock Managers Assn. limit of three players per package.

As outlined, each theatre in the circuit would do one production and the 10 shows would tour on a rotating schedule, playing every barn during the 10-week season. Since the whole setup would be relatively loose, individual managements would not be forced to take every show on the list, but could produce their own plays for certain weeks or book independently.

It's emphasized that because of the informal nature of the arrangement, the participating managements would have to be established, reputable spots whose agreements would be reliable and who could be depended on to pay their share of the production and booking costs, as well as produce acceptable shows. That is said to have been the key to last summer's successful operation.

Those mentioned as prospective members of the Big Ten are Richard Aldrich (Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass., and Falmouth Playhouse), John Lane (Ogunquit Playhouse), Rowena Stevens (Pocono Playhouse, Mountainhome, Pa.), Kenneth Banghart and Evelyn Freyman (Olney), Sara Stamm (Casino Theatre, Newport), Lee Falk (Boston Summer Theatre and Framingham, Mass.), Milton Stiefel (Ivoryton, Conn., Playhouse), Herbert Kenwith (Princeton Summer Theatre), John Huntington (Spa Theatre, Saratoga) and Charles Bowden and Philip Langner (Westport, Conn., Country Playhouse).

tions, $4,970,836; license fees from other sources, $244,971; royalties, $106,458; sales of sheet music, etc., $285,576. The net profit for BMI for the fiscal year, after taxes, were $74,657.

In his statement to stockholders, BMI prexy Carl Haverlin pointed out that BMI tunes had 51% of all the first places and 66% of the total positions on the Lucky Strike "Hit Parade" show, music biz index for bestsellers. As of Sept. 30, Haverlin announced that BMI has a total of 3,002 broadcasting licensees, AM, FM and TV, in the U. S. and Canada. The number of licenses in the non-radio field is currently 4,050, an increase of more than 16% over last year.

Haverlin pointed up BMI's growth in the international field via agreements with performing rights societies in France, Germany, Belgium and Holland, under which BMI will license performing rights in works originating in these countries and published in the U. S. by BMI affiliates.

added that some of the reviews "said it was private humor, for a select few in on the foibles of picture-marking. Chichi stuff, for the opening night crowd. If it is, somebody should tell the audiences, particularly in the first and second balconies."

The article, in question-and-answer interview form, went on to say that the management has been asking playgoers at the Cort why they came to a show the critics had panned. "Word of mouth means just as much to a play as kind words from the critics," he revealed. The playwright concluded that he isn't bitter, but closed with the suggestion that "perhaps there's an unconscious prejudice among the reviewers against Hollywood writers."

CAFE DE PARIS Cabaret Carl Brisson

★ "Brisson's charm I understand perfectly: it combines sophistication with extreme toughness. He has a stance of boisterous virility, a sense of fun, an indestructable bonhomie."
KENNETH TYNAN, Evening Standard.

★ "Carl Brisson is a selection committee's must for the cabaret. He is, I suppose, the most accurately polished entertainer of this age."
YOUNGMAN CARTER, The Tatler.

★ "There is nobody in the world to touch him on such songs. He weaves a web of musical magic no matter how old or young you are."
EMERY PEARCE—TV Critic, Daily Herald.

★ "Last Monday night at the Cafe de Paris I watched Carl Brisson hold one of the trickiest audiences extant in the hollow of his hand."

★ "Carl Brisson, the cabaret king, can move sophisticated audiences to tears and to laughter."
THE STAR.

★ "How to be a star cabaret performer. Act like mad, be completely sincere, play on the audience like a harpist plucking his instrument, generate warmth, pick your material with loving care. Like the inimitable Carl Brisson at the Cafe de Paris."
DICK RICHARDS, Sunday Pictorial.

★ "Carl Brisson's cabaret season at the Cafe de Paris should have ended this weekend. But the handsome Dane has been such a phenomenal success that he is to remain for another four weeks."
EVENING NEWS.

★ "This breaks every record at this restaurant — even Noel Coward."
MILTON DEANE,
Hollywood Reporter.

★ "As a showman of the old school Brisson knows how to win and hold an audience . . . the applause was vociferous and he was forced to beg off."
MYRO, Variety.

★ AND THIS IS WHAT THE MANAGEMENT SAYS:
"The most outstanding success in cabaret—even in the long history of the Cafe de Paris."

★ BOOKED FOR 3 WEEKS-
and STAYED FOR 7!!

Greetings to the directors of the Café de Paris
Looking forward to my return next year!
